Thirdly; By virtue of this Union of the Human Nature with the Godhead, he is the Lord from Heaven; mark the words: Its a ſtrange Speech, that he ſhould be called, the Lord from Heaven: Was ever the Human Nature of Chriſt there? No; not till ſuch time as he did aſcend. Upon this place, many have ſaid, and been deceived with it, that Jeſus Chriſt had a Human Nature in Heaven before the World was, and that he came down from Heaven into the Virgin by an elapſe. No; that is not the meaning of the place, my Brethren, to ſhew that his Human Nature had its original from Heaven, in reſpect of the matter of it, for then he had not took the Seed of the Virgin, he had not took the Seed of Abraham, and ſo had not been that proportioned Redeemer to ſave us, which the Scripture telleth us he was. What is the meaning then of this, that He is the Lord from Heaven, ſpeaking of him as he is Man? And in John 3. 13. No Man hath aſcended up to Heaven, but he that is come down from Heaven, even the Son of Man, (he ſpeaks of himſelf as Man) who is in Heaven? He never came down from Heaven, in reſpect of taking his Body there, and ſo came into the womb of the Virgin. How is he then ſaid, as he is the Son of Man, to be the Lord from Heaven, and to come down from Heaven? My brethren, the Riddle is opened thus, That ye take what was his due, when that Son of God ſhould take a Human Nature, his right, it was to be in Heaven the very firſt moment: And therefore if he take Human Nature, with the frailties of it, this is to condeſcend from what is due to that Human Nature thus aſſumed; ſo as indeed, my Brethren, all the glory that he hath now in Heaven is connatural to him. It was ſuſpended indeed for our redemption; he was ordained to take the likeneſs of ſinful Fleſh, as the Apoſtle ſaith, that he might redeem us, and till ſuch time as that was finiſhed he did ſuſpend himſelf and his right; for he ſhould never have ſet his foot upon this Earth, according to what is his due, if he would aſſume Human Nature; and therefore becauſe he did condeſcend from this due of his, he is ſaid to be the Lord from Heaven, and to come down from Heaven. Now hence it cometh to paſs, that it being his due as he is the Son of God for to be in Heaven, the Human Nature that he aſſumed muſt one day be made heavenly, though it be ſuſpended a while for Mans Redemption, and when he hath done that work it muſt be made heavenly by virtue of this very Union of the Son of God; his Body muſt up to Heaven and be made like to the Heavens; Fleſh and Blood it cannot inherit the Kingdom of God, it will not bear it; Adam therefore becauſe he was not in himſelf ordained to go to Heaven, he had but an earthly Body, that is, his reaſonable Soul dwelt in a Body, ſuitable to this Earth, but this Man, Chriſt Jeſus, ſaith he, is an Heavenly Man: And however, for our ſakes he took the frailties of Fleſh and Blood, yet his due is to be in Heaven; hence therefore (here lies the Apoſtles argument) he muſt have an Heavenly Body: Why? becauſe that every Nature hath a Body ſuited to the place it liveth in; There is one kind of Fleſh of Beaſts, and another of Fiſhes, and another of birds: Why? Becauſe they live in ſeveral Elements: Fiſhes, they live in the water, therefore they have Bodies ſuited to that watery Element they live in: Beaſts and Birds, they living here in the Earth, and in the Air, they have Bodies ſuited likewiſe to thoſe Elements they live in: Hence, ſaith he, if Jeſus Chriſt be to be the heavenly Man, if he be the Lord from Heaven when he goeth up to Heaven, his Body muſt be made like the Heavens, therefore he muſt have a Spiritual Body. And ſo now you have the three Reaſons couched in the Text, why that Jeſus Chriſt being, a quickning Spirit, that is a God that quickneth the Human Nature, that Human Nature muſt needs be made Spiritual, and raiſed up (even his very Body) to a heavenly State and condition.

Now I will give you but one Inſtance, becauſe if I ſhould lay open all that concerneth the Body of Jeſus Chriſt, and the glory of it, it would ask a long time; I will therefore ſingle out but one Inſtance which he himſelf did give, to ſhew how glorious his Body ſhould be one day, and I will but argue from that to the glory he hath now in Heaven.

The Inſtance I ſhall give you, is, that of the Transfiguration of his Body upon the Mount, that you read of in Matth. 17. 1. and ſo on; and in Mark 9. 2. &c. and in Luke 9. 48. which yet was but a meer tranſient, fluſhing, of the glory of the Godhead appearing in him. You ſhall read there, that he was transfigured before thoſe three great Apoſtles, Peter, James, and John, and that his face did ſhine as the Sun, and his rayment was white as the light, and there did converſe with him in their Bodies, Moſes and Elias, appearing in glory with him. And what was this, but to bring down Heaven a little to Earth, to make a mask, a ſhew of it? It was to ſhew what glory the Body of Jeſus Chriſt ſhould have in his Kingdom. That that is his ſcope in this Transfiguration, is moſt clear and evident; For if you read the Preface to this ſtory in all the three Evangeliſts, you ſhall find it in them all to be this, The Son of Man ſhall come in the glory of his Father, and then he ſhall reward every one according to his works: Verily I ſay unto you, there be ſome ſtanding here which ſhall not ſee death till they ſee the Son of Man coming in his Kingdom: When he had told them what a great glory he ſhall come in at latter Day, ſaith he, there be ſome of you here ſhall ſee a glimpſe of it: And hence, in relation to this Promiſe, after ſix days, ſaith Matthew and Mark, about an eight days after, ſaith Luke (namely after the mention of that Promiſe) he taketh Peter, and James, and John, and bringeth them up into an high Mountain apart, and there he fulfilled his Promiſe, giving them a glimpſe of the glory of that Kingdom of his, which he had ſpoken of: And hence now, both Moſes and Elias, they do accompany him, and they do accompany him in that glory which they ſhall have at latter Day; for Luke telleth us, They appeared with him in glory. And that this is the meaning too, is plain by what Peter ſaith of it, in 2 Pet. 1. 16. We have not followed cunningly deviſed Fables, when we made known to you the power and coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, but were eye-witneſſes of his Majeſty, for he received from God the Father honour and glory, when there came ſuch a voice to him, from the excellent glory, This is my welbeloved Son, in whom I am well pleaſed. It's clear he ſpeaks of this Transfiguration of Chriſt; and he makes it an Inſtance of that glory which he ſhould have to come: And that he doth ſo, obſerve the words, ſaith he, We have not followed cunningly deviſed Fables, when we made known to you the power and coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, for we ſaw him coming in his Kingdom, according as his Promiſe was. And that Peter, when he ſaith, We made known to you the power and coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, meaneth his ſecond coming, it is evident by this, becauſe his ſcope was (as appears by Chapt. 3.) to confirm men in the faith of his ſecond coming: And he ſaith, there ſhould come in the laſt days Scoffers, that ſhould walk after their own luſts, ſaying, Where is the promiſe of his coming? But, ſaith he, We have not told you Fables in this, for we had an inſtance of it, and we ſaw, and were eye-witneſſes of his Majeſty: They ſaw no more but the Transfiguration of his Body: And therefore the word in 1 Pet. 1. 16. which is uſed for the coming of Chriſt, is the ſame that is uſed for that coming of his in Chapt. 3. verſe 4. and is no where applyed to his firſt coming. I I ſpeak this to take away the Interpretation of ſome Popiſh Writers that apply it to his firſt coming; but the Apoſtle's ſcope is clearly this, to give an inſtance of that glory he ſhall have, by that glory which he had then; the word which is uſed for his firſt coming is always another word. Peter, you ſee, makes a great matter of it, and ſo likewiſe doth John, John 1. 14. We ſaw his glory as of the only begotten Son of God; that is, ſuch a glory as none could have but he that was the only begotten Son of God; we ſaw it, ſaith he: John you know, was one of them that was in the Mount, and Peter was anothor, and both theſe give teſtimony of it in their Writings: There was a third, James, not he that wrote the Epiſtle, but he that was put to death by Herod, and he dying ſo ſoon after, could give no Teſtimony of it, but the two Apoſtles that ſurvived, both of them did. Now to confirm further, that this Transfiguration of Chriſt in the Mount, was on purpoſe to ſhew how glorious he ſhould be in the latter day, and glorious in his Body; hence therefore did Elias and Moſes, both of them, come and appear in their Bodies: God was pleaſed to raiſe up the Body of Moſes, together with his Soul; and he appeared with Elias, and that in Body too; for Elias, you know, went to Heaven in his Body, and he was changed as thoſe at latter Day ſhall be; and they were to teſtifie to him his Reſurrection, by their having their Bodies there, and that he alſo ſhould come unto glory after he had ſuffered. Moſes, he was in his Body too, not only becauſe he was called Moſes, which was argument enough, but they are ſaid to be two men, Luke 9. 29. If Elias had his Body, certainly Moſes had; and the ſcope was to ſhew the glory of the body of Chriſt, and therefore both were in their bodies. The Lord had made two Promiſes to Moſes, the one, that he ſhould ſee his face; the other, that he would ſpeak with him mouth to mouth: And here he hath made a ſecond fulfilling of it; for the Son of God, whom he had propheſied of, ſpeaks with him mouth to mouth, and he beholds his face in his glory. Now to ſpeak a little of this glory that was thus appearing in the body of Chriſt. Chap. 10.

It was an internal glory; it was not a glory that did ſhine about Chriſt, as if the Sun ſhould ſhine upon a Glaſs, or upon a thing making it to ſhine, it was not extrinſical, it came from within, it was the Godhead quickning him; and therefore he is ſaid to be transfigured, and his face to ſhine as the Sun: It was not that the Sun did ſhine upon his face, and made it to ſhine. And hence it was that his very Garments did ſhine; ſo ſaith Mark, Chap. 9. verſ. 3. And his Raiment became ſhining, exceeding white as Snow: ſo as no Fuller on Earth can white them. Therefore the glory of his Garments was from the glory appeared in his Body, and his Garments did ſhine by a redundancy, by an overplus; for if it had been by an external light, it would have faln firſt upon his garments, and then upon his body; but here it falleth upon his body firſt, and that is made the reaſon why his garments did thus ſhine. The glory that Moſes had, who was Chriſt's Type, it was but an external glory put upon the face of Moſes, by reaſon of his talking with God, but the glory that Chriſt's body had was from the breakings forth of the Godhead within it. And that is the difference (by the way) between worldly glory and heavenly glory; heavenly glory ſpringeth from within, and ſo diffuſeth it ſelf to the body, from the Spirit's dwelling in the Saints, and from the Godhead dwelling in the Human Nature of Chriſt; but worldly glory is a meer external thing put upon men, it is but an outward ſplendour that invironeth men. And his whole body was thus transfigured; and therefore Mark ſaith plainly, he was transfigured, Mark 9. 2. (not his face only) and his rayment became ſhining; implying that his whole body was transformed into a glory, which did ſhine through his very garments. My Brethren, if vile garments (for ſo I may call the garments of Chriſt, they were but mean garments) if they did ſhine ſo, what ſhall theſe bodies of ours do when they are transformed into the likeneſs of his glorious body?

Conſider further the greatneſs of this glory that did ſhine in his body; for we do not read of any thing elſe. Peter calleth it Majeſty, 2 Pet. 1. 16. We were eye-witneſſes of his Majeſty; the ſame word that is uſed for that great glory in Heaven, in Hebr. 1. 3. He is ſet down at the right hand of the Majeſty on high. The Evangeliſts do compare it to the glory of the Sun; it is ſaid, His face did ſhine as the Sun, Matth. 17. 1. If you ſay it did but ſhine like the Sun; I anſwer, the reaſon of that expreſſion is this, Not that it was a light of the ſame kind with the Sun, but becauſe there was nothing elſe to convey the glory, and the beauty, and excellency of it to Human apprehenſion, but the Sun. My Brethren, now that Chriſt is in Heaven, it is more glorious than the Sun. Paul, you know, he ſaw him from Heaven, ſaith he in Acts 26. 12, 13. I ſaw from Heaven a light above the brightneſs of the Sun (mark his expreſſion, he riſeth higher, above the brightneſs of the Sun) ſhining round about me; yet it was not the body of Chriſt in the Air, but the body of Christ in Heaven, and this brightness he saw, was but a Light that came from it, which yet was far above the brightness of the Sun it self, though it was confined to that Company, and did not shine to all the World.

Consider the greatness of it likewise in this, that it made his garments to shine; so you shall find it in all three Evangelists; Matthew saith, Chap. 17. 2. His rayment was white as the Light; Mark, Chap. 9. 3. That his rayment became shining exceeding white as snow, so as no Fuller on earth can white them; Luke, Chap. 9. 29. That his rayment was white and glistering. They compare the Light of the face and Body of Christ to that of the Body of the Sun, and the Light of his rayment to the Light of the Sun, or of the Moon in the Air, which makes it white, or to the Sun shining upon Snow or the like.

Lastly, How infinitely did it affect the Apostles, though they themselves were not transformed into the same glory with him? What saith the Apostle Peter, poor Man? Master, saith he, it is good for us to be here; and upon what occasion doth he say this? when he saw Moses and Elias going away. So Luke, Chap. 9 Vers. 33. And it came to pass, as they departed from him; Peter said unto Jesus, Master, it is good for us to be here: and let us make three tabernacles, one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias: not knowing what he said. He had but a little glimps of it, and yet notwithstanding, his Heart was infinitely affected with it: And yet he had a mixture of great fear and astonishment too, which must needs allay it: One that is afraid, you know, (and the Text saith, They were all afraid) would rather have the thing removed that he feareth; yet notwithstanding though he was full of fear, full of astonishment rather, his desire breaks out, Oh, saith he, that we might be ever here; and let us make three Tabernacles, saith he: The Text saith, he spake he knew not what: And why spake he he knew not what? Because he would stay there, and because he would have earthly Tabernacles, made of boughs, and booths, such as the Jews had, for to be a covering to glorified Bodies, that have Tabernacles made without hands, as the Apostle speaks, 2 Cor. 5. 1. For we know, that if our earthly house of this Tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hand, eternal in the Heavens. Our Saviour Christ had other work to do; for they had been talking of Christs death, which he should accomplish at Hierusalem: And herein lay the folly of his Speech; yet so, as it shewed how mightily his heart was taken: Oh, saith he, let us be ever here, let us never go down to the World again: And yet poor Men, they were half asleep, they awaked on the suddain, and they heard Moses and Elias talking with Christ, and they heard them talking of his sufferings, an unpleasing Subject, yet, say they, let us go down no more; and yet they themselves were not made glorious, nay they were astonished, and that allaied their joy. How much then shall we be affected when we shall see Jesus Christ, as he is, and be made like to him, and have our Bodies transformed, able to bear all the glory, and to view him with open face, as the Apostle saith, with an allusion to it. 2 Cor. 3. 18. But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same Image, from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord.

Here you see now, my Brethren, what a great glory it was; yet let me tell you this too, that this glory which Christ had at his Transfiguration, falleth short of that glory he hath now in Heaven; and that is as clear many ways; it was but a meer resemblance of it, a meer symbolical representation of it, in comparison of what that is. For,

1. He did not let the glory of his Body shine out to the full, for if he had, these poor disciples had not been able to have born it; Paul, you know, his eyes were put out with seeing it, Acts 26. 13. therefore he kept it in from what now shineth forth, and breaketh forth in Heaven. And,

2. It

2. It was but a tranſient glory; whereas that glory which is in his glorified body in Heaven, it is a permanent quality, that hath unchangeableneſs and unalterableneſs for ever, whereas this was but a bluſh of it. What ſaith the Apoſtle in 2 Cor. 3. 7, 8. But if the miniſtration of death written, and ingraven in ſtones, was glorious, ſo that the Children of Iſrael could not ſtedfaſtly behold the face of Moſes, for the glory of his countenance, which glory was to be done away: How ſhall not the miniſtration of the Spirit, be rather glorious? He argueth that therefore Moſes his glory, was no glory in compariſon of the glory of Chriſt: By what? Becauſe, ſaith he, the glory of Moſes his Countenance was to be done away; and therefore it was no glory in compariſon of the glory of Chriſt which continueth: So do I argue, the glory which appeared here upon the Mount in Chriſt's Tranſfiguration, is no glory in compariſon of that he hath in Heaven: Why? becauſe it was to be done away; for when the Cloud had taken up Moſes and Elias, Chriſt was the ſame Man he was afore: Therefore now, the glory which Chriſt had in the Mount, which Peter magnified ſo, in compariſon of what he hath in Heaven, it is but like the joy of the Holy Ghoſt, which in compariſon of what the Soul ſhall have in Heaven, is but a little fluſhing of it: Yet you ſee how mightily it did affect, and what a glory it was. Conſider, Chap. 10. 11

3. His body was ſtill ſubject to Infirmities, and therefore was not glorified; for Moſes and Elias did talk of his dying while he was in this glory, and therefore now it was by a Miracle; it was not in that connatural way it ſhall be in the World to come, when his body ſhall be ſteel'd, nay it is ſteel'd with glory: For, my Brethren, the glory that is now in Heaven put upon him, it hath changed his body, ſo that it is impoſſible, he cannot ſuffer from any thing, and death hath no more dominion over him, nor any thing tending to death, not the leaſt alteration; but here he was to come down off the Mount, and to be crucified when he had done. And then,

4. Theſe Diſciples here could tell what they ſaw, and they could tell what the ſpeech was between Moſes and Elias, and him: But go, take Paul rapt up into the third Heavens, and he telleth us that he heard words that were unlawful, and impoſſible to utter; and ſo he ſaw ſights, he ſaw the Human Nature of Chriſt in his glory certainly; but when he came down again, that viſion which he had, he could tell no news of it: But theſe here, they could tell what they ſaw, and who they were, and what they ſaid, They heard a voice from Heaven ſaying, This is my wel-beloved Son in whom I am well pleaſed.

5. Chriſt in this Tranſfiguration of his, did but give an inſtance of one property of glory, namely, ſhining, brightneſs, ſuch as is in the body of the Sun; but there is likewiſe other as glorious properties of a ſpiritual body, that it can move up and down, as he did when he aſcended up into Heaven; he was not long a going certainly, though it is a mighty vaſt ſpace from Earth to Heaven; and he moved up and down after his Reſurrection; and then he was impaſſible. But I will not ſtand upon that.

Thus I have ſhewn you what a great glory muſt needs be in the Human Nature of Chriſt, in his body: The grounds are in the Text, the inſtance is this which I have given you out of the ſtory of his Tranſfiguration; and ſo I have diſpatched the ſecond thing. Before I come to the third and laſt, I will make a Uſe or two of this, and then proceed.

In the firſt place, my brethren, will you ſee and value the infinite love of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. As I ſaid before, the glory of his Human Nature is founded upon the Union of that Nature with the Son of God; it was his due as ſoon as ever he ſhould aſſume a Human Nature, and therefore he is called, The Man from Heaven, for it was his due to be there; it was a condeſcending for him to take upon him our frailties, our infirmities, and to have a paſſible body as he had: And therefore now for him that was thus in God's Decree in the very form of God, and was the Image of the inviſible God, for ſo in his very Human Nature he is; he could have challenged all this glory as his due the very firſt moment; that he ſhould firſt ſubject himſelf, and that Human Nature of his, to all thoſe ſufferings and debaſements that he ſubjected it unto;

Part II. dy of Christ in Heaven, and this brightness he saw, was but a Light that came from it, which yet was far above the brightness of the Sun it self, though it was confined to that Company, and did not shine to all the World.

Consider the greatness of it likewise in this, that it made his garments to shine; so you shall find it in all three Evangelists; Matthew saith, Chap. 17. 2. His rayment was white as the Light; Mark, Chap. 9. 3. That his rayment became shining exceeding white as snow, so as no Fuller on earth can white them; Luke, Chap. 9. 29. That his rayment was white and glistering. They compare the Light of the face and Body of Christ to that of the Body of the Sun, and the Light of his rayment to the Light of the Sun, or of the Moon in the Air, which makes it white, or to the Sun shining upon Snow or the like.

Lastly, How infinitely did it affect the Apostles, though they themselves were not transformed into the same glory with him? What saith the Apostle Peter, poor Man? Master, saith he, it is good for us to be here; and upon what occasion doth he say this? when he saw Moses and Elias going away. So Luke, Chap. 9 Vers. 33. And it came to pass, as they departed from him; Peter said unto Jesus, Master, it is good for us to be here: and let us make three tabernacles, one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias: not knowing what he said. He had but a little glimps of it, and yet notwithstanding, his Heart was infinitely affected with it: And yet he had a mixture of great fear and astonishment too, which must needs allay it: One that is afraid, you know, (and the Text saith, They were all afraid) would rather have the thing removed that he feareth; yet notwithstanding though he was full of fear, full of astonishment rather, his desire breaks out, Oh, saith he, that we might be ever here; and let us make three Tabernacles, saith he: The Text saith, he spake he knew not what: And why spake he he knew not what? Because he would stay there, and because he would have earthly Tabernacles, made of boughs, and booths, such as the Jews had, for to be a covering to glorified Bodies, that have Tabernacles made without hands, as the Apostle speaks, 2 Cor. 5. 1. For we know, that if our earthly house of this Tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hand, eternal in the Heavens. Our Saviour Christ had other work to do; for they had been talking of Christs death, which he should accomplish at Hierusalem: And herein lay the folly of his Speech; yet so, as it shewed how mightily his heart was taken: Oh, saith he, let us be ever here, let us never go down to the World again: And yet poor Men, they were half asleep, they awaked on the suddain, and they heard Moses and Elias talking with Christ, and they heard them talking of his sufferings, an unpleasing Subject, yet, say they, let us go down no more; and yet they themselves were not made glorious, nay they were astonished, and that allaied their joy. How much then shall we be affected when we shall see Jesus Christ, as he is, and be made like to him, and have our Bodies transformed, able to bear all the glory, and to view him with open face, as the Apostle saith, with an allusion to it. 2 Cor. 3. 18. But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same Image, from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord.

Have you see now, my Brethren, what a great glory it was; yet let me tell you this too, that this glory which Christ had at his Transfiguration, falleth short of that glory he hath now in Heaven; and that is as clear many ways; it was but a meer resemblance of it, a meer symbolical representation of it, in comparison of what that is. For,

1. He did not let the glory of his Body shine out to the full, for if he had, these poor disciples had not been able to have born it; Paul, you know, his eyes were put out with seeing it, Acts 26. 13. therefore he kept it in from what now shineth forth, and breaketh forth in Heaven. And,

2. It

2. It was but a transient glory; whereas that glory which is in his glorified body in Heaven, it is a permanent quality, that hath unchangeableness and unalterableness for ever, whereas this was but a blush of it. What saith the Apostle in 2 Cor. 3. 7, 8. But if the ministration of death written, and ingraven in stones, was glorious, so that the Children of Israel could not stedfastly behold the face of Moses, for the glory of his countenance, which glory was to be done away: How shall not the ministration of the Spirit, be rather glorious? He argueth that therefore Moses his glory, was no glory in comparison of the glory of Christ: By what? Because, saith he, the glory of Moses his Countenance was to be done away; and therefore it was no glory in comparison of the glory of Christ which continueth: So do I argue, the glory which appeared here upon the Mount in Christ's Transfiguration, is no glory in comparison of that he hath in Heaven: Why? because it was to be done away; for when the Cloud had taken up Moses and Elias, Christ was the same Man he was afore: Therefore now, the glory which Christ had in the Mount, which Peter magnified so, in comparison of what he hath in Heaven, it is but like the joy of the Holy Ghost, which in comparison of what the Soul shall have in Heaven, is but a little flushing of it: Yet you see how mightily it did affect, and what a glory it was. Consider, Chap. 10.

3. His body was still subject to Infirmities, and therefore was not glorified; for Moses and Elias did talk of his dying while he was in this glory, and therefore now it was by a Miracle; it was not in that connatural way it shall be in the World to come, when his body shall be steel'd, nay it is steel'd with glory: For, my Brethren, the glory that is now in Heaven put upon him, it hath changed his body, so that it is impossible, he cannot suffer from any thing, and death hath no more dominion over him, nor any thing tending to death, not the least alteration; but here he was to come down off the Mount, and to be crucified when he had done. And then,

4. These Disciples here could tell what they saw, and they could tell what the speech was between Moses and Elias, and him: But go, take Paul rapt up into the third Heavens, and he telleth us that he heard words that were unlawful, and impossible to utter; and so he saw sights, he saw the Human Nature of Christ in his glory certainly; but when he came down again, that vision which he had, he could tell no news of it: But these here, they could tell what they saw, and who they were, and what they said, They heard a voice from Heaven saying, This is my wel-beloved Son in whom I am well pleased.

5. Christ in this Transfiguration of his, did but give an instance of one property of glory, namely, shining, brightness, such as is in the body of the Sun; but there is likewise other as glorious properties of a spiritual body, that it can move up and down, as he did when he ascended up into Heaven; he was not long a going certainly, though it is a mighty vast space from Earth to Heaven; and he moved up and down after his Resurrection; and then he was impassible. But I will not stand upon that.

Thus I have shewn you what a great glory must needs be in the Human Nature of Christ, in his body: The grounds are in the Text, the instance is this which I have given you out of the story of his Transfiguration; and so I have dispatched the second thing. Before I come to the third and last, I will make a Use or two of this, and then proceed.

In the first place, my brethren, will you see and value the infinite love of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. As I said before, the glory of his Human Nature is founded upon the Union of that Nature with the Son of God; it was his due as soon as ever he should assume a Human Nature, and therefore he is called, The Man from Heaven, for it was his due to be there; it was a condescending for him to take upon him our frailties, our infirmities, and to have a passible body as he had: And therefore now for him that was thus in God's Decree in the very form of God, and was the Image of the invisible God, for so in his very Human Nature he is; he could have challenged all this glory as his due the very first moment; that he should first subject himself, and that Human Nature of his, to all those sufferings and debasements that he subjected it unto;

Book II. unto; how infinitely should this raise up our hearts to see the love of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ! I shall but make this a little clear to you out of the very story of his Transfiguration. You shall find that when he was transfigured, the Evangelists tell us, that Moses and Elias did talk to him of his death and of his sufferings; They spake of his decease (saith Luke) which he should accomplish at Hierusalem. Our Saviour Christ, to shew what was his due in stead of this suffering, he transfigureth himself; and whereas Moses and Elias went up to Heaven in their bodies again to that glory which they had before, he is left behind here below, and all his glory is gone, and to Hierusalem he must go, and there he must suffer. Why? He should have been in Heaven first if he had had his due. This glory of his, I say, and his death were both represented at once; Moses and Elias spake to him about his death at the same time when his transfiguration was, on purpose to set a value upon it, to take the hearts of the Sons of Men. This Christ, that was so glorious upon the mount, he might then have gone to Heaven as well as descended, and then where had been our Salvation? But he letteth Moses and Elias go to Heaven, Go you, saith he, and possess your glory; but as for his own glory, he sheweth what was his due, but layeth it aside for a while that he might suffer.

Again secondly, See whence the valuation of the Bodily sufferings of Christ before God doth arise. There were the sufferings of his Soul, and there were the sufferings of his Body. The sufferings of his Soul, the Scripture speaks least of, though they were the greatest sufferings of all the rest: As the Scripture speaks but little of the glory of the Soul, but speaks much of the glory of the Body, and would have us argue from that to the greatness of the glory of the Soul in the World to come. Learn I say, to value the sufferings of Christ at a due rate, consider whose Body it was that suffer'd; it was the Body of him in whom the Godhead dwelt Bodily and fully; of him that was life it self, was a quickning Spirit, (he was so in assuming Human Nature) his Body was ordained to another World; and the valuation of the Person was it that put a valuation upon every thing he suffered. Therefore, my Brethren, whenever you would put a value upon the bodily sufferings of Christ, I'le tell you what you shall do; First, look upon him as he is now crowned with glory and honour in Heaven, and then think with your selves, that all this was due to him when he was here below, when he was in the Mount, yea when in the Womb, to have taken that Body up and made it so glorious; And when you have brought him down from all the glory he hath in Heaven, do but think what a Man he was when he hung upon the Cross. This should make us put a valuation upon all his sufferings; This makes us see what it is that God doth value his Bodily sufferings for, they were the sufferings of his Body, whose due it was to be thus glorified, and never to have suffered; but God so ordered it that he must first suffer, and then rise and enter into, and possess his glory.

CHAP.

CHAP. XI.

What a more glorious Condition then was Adam's in Innocence, Christ will raise us up unto, proved in the lowest Instance of it, viz. the glory our Bodies shall have at the Resurrection. Wherein that glory shall consist. A Comparison between that glory our Bodies shall then possess, and what Adam's had in Paradise: And in what respect ours shall far excel his.

THE third thing that I am to handle is this, to shew you that our bodies shall be conformed to Jesus Christ's body, that as we have born the Image of the earthly, (which we all do in the bodies which now have) so we shall bear the Image of the heavenly: for so the Apostle reasoneth, verse 49. For the Apostles scope in these words is to argue that there is a spiritual body which the Saints shall have in the other World after the Resurrection; and he argueth it from this, because that Christ, who is our Head, he shall have a spiritual body; and he argueth that Christ shall have a spiritual body, by comparing Adam's body and Christ's together. Adam, he saith, was Christ's Type and Shadow, and therefore by way of eminency, if Adam was a living soul, that is, had a reasonable soul that dwelt in a body of Clay, which advanced it to such a dignity as all this World was made for it; then, saith he, Christ he shall be a quickning Spirit; that is, he shall have the Godhead to dwell in him, and quicken the Human Nature, and raise it up in a proportion to a higher degree of glory, than the reasonable soul of Adam raised up his body unto. And having proved this, he argueth from thence, that our bodies shall be like unto Christ's: Why? because those two were two common Persons and Roots of Mankind, and they were to propagate the like condition, the like state and qualification that should be in either of them, to those that should come of them: As is the earthy (saith he) (namely Adam) such are those that are earthy; and as is the heavenly (namely Christ, the Lord from Heaven) such are they also that are heavenly; and as we have born the image of the earthly, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly. This, I say, is the Apostle's scope; his scope is not so much to hold forth the state of Adam's soul, taking it as having the Image of God upon it, having communion with God (for that is held forth sufficiently and abundantly in other Scriptures) but rather to compare that Animal condition, that is, that state that this soul had in this body, as it was suited to earthly things, as it was a living soul, quickning and giving life to an earthly body, partaking of all the comforts of things here below; to compare, I say, the state of this body, and this soul living in it, with the state of that glorified body which Jesus Christ hath in Heaven, and which he will raise up our bodies unto at latter Day. That I may distinctly express my self to all your apprehensions, let me say this in a word: Adam, you see, here is made a Type of Christ; his Condition wherein he was created, it is a Type or a Shadow of that glorious Condition that Christ will raise up his Members to. Now the glory of Heaven lies in two things, and the happiness of Adam lay in two things, whereof the one answereth the other. The glory of Heaven doth lye first in that immediate communion with, and vision of the Godhead which the soul hath, and whether it hath the body about it, or no, it would have; for, saith Paul, when he was wrapt up into the third Heavens, in 1 Cor. 12. Whether ther I was in the body, or out of the body, I cannot tell; nor was it any matter. But in the second place, because that this soul that thus seeth God immediately without the help of the body, hath a body that must be carried up thither to it; hence, besides the happiness that the soul hath by immediate communion with God, the body hath a happiness and glory, as the soul dwelleth in it, and the holy Ghost in both, that is proper and peculiar to it self. Just so it was with Adam, he had an immortal soul that was created with the image of God in it, the Image of holiness, by virtue of which he had communion with God, and his soul thus having communion with God, answereth to that vision of God which the soul hath in Heaven, although joyned with the body after the Resurrection. But then secondly, as this soul dwelling in this body, beside the communion it had with God, it had an Animal state, a Natural, an outward state of life, taking in the comforts of things here below, in and through the senses, both inward and outward, which here the Apostle calleth the Natural body, and interpreteth it by that in Genesis, a living soul, that is, a soul living or dwelling in an earthly body, having all the Creatures in the World suited to this body to comfort it, and the soul by it. Answerably there is in the World to come something that answereth to this spiritual body, and the spiritual state and condition of it. Now then, the scope of the Apostle, I say, it is not to compare the state of Adam's soul, as he had the image of God upon it, having immediate communion with God, to make him a Type of Christ therein, or of his Elect in Heaven; but to shew, even from that Animal, Natural, Earthy estate that his soul had in his body, what glorious spiritual estate the very bodies of the Saints shall have hereafter.

My Brethren, the design I had is this, to compare the state of Adam's body in innocency, with the glorious estate that the body of Christ hath, and that the bodies of the Saints shall have after the Resurrection: And I have endeavoured to shew how the state and condition of Adam's body, in which he was first created, it was a Type and a Shadow of the state and condition both of Christ's body and ours. To demonstrate this, I have,

First, Shewed what condition Adam's body was advanced unto by his being made a living soul, what an high estate that piece of Earth, that lump of Clay which God made Adam's body of, was advanced unto by being united to that reasonable soul which God put into him at first. I have,

Secondly, Shewn what a glorious condition the Human Nature of Christ, by being united to the Godhead (which is here in the Text called a quickning Spirit) this Godhead raiseth up this Human Nature unto. And now I am, Thirdly, To shew that the State and condition of the Bodies of the Saints hereafter, at the Resurrection, shall be made conformable unto Jesus Christ's Body; and there I must also make up a Comparison between the State of Adam's Body at his first Creation, and our Bodies when they are thus raised up at latter day; and shew how the one was but a Type and an imperfect Shadow of the other.

That our Bodies at latter Day shall be conformed to the Image of Jesus Christs Body, the Scripture is clear for it. I will give you but a place or two instead of many others: In 1 John 3. 1, 2, 3. Behold what manner of Love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the Sons of God; Beloved, now are we the Sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know, that when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. Now, how is it that we shall see Christ? Not only with our Souls, but we shall see him with these eyes, so saith Job, Chap. 9. 26, 27. And seeing of him with these eyes; we shall be made like unto him; As we shall see him with the sense of our Bodies, our Bodies shall be made also like unto him. Another place you have, is in Phil. 3. 21. We look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ: As what to do? Who shall change our vile Bodies, (or our Body that in Comparison of that Body is contemptible (so I have opened it afore,) it is not a vileness in it self, but it is spoken comparatively) that it may be fashioned according to his glorious Body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself.

Our

Our bodies, they have two patterns propounded in Scripture that they shall be conformed unto; The one is, they shall be like the Angels; The Sons of the Resurrection (saith Christ in the Evangelist Matthew) they shall be like the Angels. And there is a second pattern, we shall be conformed unto Christ's glorious body. (How glorious that was, you have heard). We shall be like him; It is not in equality, but it is only in respect of the same qualities that his body had. I would clear one mistake that some run into: When it is said, We shall bear the Image of the body and Human Nature of Christ in Heaven, and that Christ is a quickning Spirit, some have run into this conceit, That as the Godhead is united in a Personal manner to the Human Nature of Christ, so it shall also be united to our bodies. But that is not the meaning, my Brethren: And my Reason is this, because if we come to Heaven by virtue of Christ, it is impossible we should ever be raised up to the same Union with the Godhead he hath; the Hypostatical Union is a thing of so high a Nature, as it can never be merited; but all that can be done is this, that we shall be made like unto him: He by virtue of being God, his body is made so and so glorious, as I have described it unto you; that as I said, Suppose the Sun should dwell in a Chrystal Glass, how glorious would that Glass be? So the Godhead dwelling in the Human Nature, He is the Lord from Heaven, raised up above Angels, therefore his body is glorious: Now we shall not be raised up to the same height and degree of glory he is: No; let Christ for ever enjoy that to himself; but all our happiness lieth in this, we shall be conformed to him, even in our bodies we shall be made like unto him. Chap. 11.

Now the reason why I insist first upon this of the body, is this, because the Scripture speaks little of the glory of the soul, neither can it be conveyed to our Senses; but it would have us raise up our thoughts, how glorious the Soul shall be, by laying open how glorious our Bodies shall be. And so now I come to open to you the glory of that Spiritual Body we shall have after the Resurrection.

In laying open this, I shall do these four things by way of Premise.

1. To shew you that it shall be the same Body which we now have, that our Souls shall then dwell in.

2. That this Body shall have all its Parts and Members that now it hath.

3. That all these Parts and Members shall have some use or other in Heaven. And then,

4. That this Body shall be a Spiritual Body, and open and interpret what is meant by a Spiritual Body; and so I shall come to make out the Comparison between the State of Adam's Body at his first Creation, and our Bodies when they are thus raised up at latter day.

In the first place, It is the same Body for substance: For, my Brethren, when Adam's Body, the natural Body we now have, is said to be a Type of our Bodies in Heaven, the meaning is not that it is a Type of another kind of Body for substance. He calleth both the one, and the other, a Body; only, he saith, the one is a natural Body, and the other is a Spiritual Body. He doth not say our Bodies shall be turned into Spirits, as some have thought, but they shall be made Spiritual. As for example: Go take a piece of Iron, and put it in the Fire, it is one thing to have this Iron to be turned into Fire, and another thing to have it to be filled with Fire, and to be fiery, that if you look upon it, you shall not see Iron, but see Fire; yet Iron it is still: So is it here, it is the same Body, it is not changed into Spirit; it is only made Spiritual, it hath new properties, new qualities put upon it, as Iron hath when it is mightily heated with Fire, is is maliable when it is heated with Fire, you may bow it, or bend it, or work it, which way you will, though it is stiff naturally; and it is hot, if you touch it, you shall not feel cold Iron but Fire, though it is cold naturally. Therefore, in Scripture, it is not said we are made Angels, our Bodies are not made Spirits, but they are made as the Angels. I speak thus much; the rather because it is a great Heresie that is risen up in these latter times, that we shall not have the same Bodies in Heaven for sub-

Book II. ſtance, that we have here below. The Apoſtle plainly ſaith the contrary; he ſaith, not that our Bodies ſhall be made Spirits, but Spiritual; and that the very ſame Body that we have now, and bear about with us, even that very Body ſhall be glorified. How is that proved? Out of this very Chapter, in verſ. 53. and 54. This ſame corruptible (ſaith he, mark the Phraſe, in the Greek it is moſt emphatical) muſt put on incorruption; it ſhall not be another Body: Now he muſt needs mean the ſame Body for ſubſtance; for to ſay a corruptible thing, Quà corruptible, ſhall be incorruptible, is a contradiction: And he addeth alſo, and this ſame mortal muſt put on immortality; and he is not content with that, but he ſaith further; When this ſame mortal ſhall put on immortality, and this ſame corruptible have put on incorruption: There are four the ſames: The ſame mortal, the ſame corruptible is that that ſhall be glorified hereafter.

And, my Brethren, elſe we were not conformed unto Chriſt; For what body hath Chriſt in Heaven? The very ſame body he roſe in; we muſt riſe as he roſe; for He is the firſt fruits of them that ſleep. Now it is clear and evident, that Chriſt roſe in the ſame body he died; for he ſaith, His body ſhould not ſee corruption; it was kept in the grave, it roſe again; Feel, ſaith he. It is certain that he did aſcend with the ſame body he roſe in; Acts 1. 11. ſay the Angels there to the Apoſtles that beheld him aſcend, This ſame Jeſus (it is a very emphatical place) the very ſame whom you ſee taken up into Heaven, ſhall ſo come in like manner; he expreſſeth it every way, the ſameneſs of the one and the other. I will not ſtand to mention, or open that place, which is commonly known, Job. 19. 25. with theſe eyes I ſhall ſee him; I my ſelf, (ſaith he) and not another. That's the firſt thing, The ſame body riſeth.

Secondly, The ſame body ſhall have all its Parts and Members that now it hath; and that is plain and evident from our conformity to Chriſt, for ſtill you ſee here, our bodies are to be conformed unto his, we ſhall bear his Image at the Reſurrection. Now it is clear, that Jeſus Chriſt roſe with every part of his body that he had when he died; there was not a Member that ſaw Corruption. And in Hebr. 11. 35. compared with verſe 37. it is ſaid of them that were ſawen aſunder, one piece of their bodies broken from another, they ſhall riſe a whole body: Why? becauſe, ſaith he, they ſhall obtain a better Reſurrection: Now it was not a better Reſurrection, if that all the Parts did not riſe again, and if that all theſe Parts were not mended, or if they had any imperfection in them. And if you mark it, he ſpeaks it of the Reſurrection of the body, for he ſpeaks of their being tortured, limb pull'd from limb, ſawen aſunder; well, ſaith he, they ſhall not only have a reſurrection, but a better reſurrection one day.

Thirdly, It is as evident too, That all theſe Parts ſhall have an uſe in Heaven, ſome or other, in a ſpiritual way, and have Objects ſuited to them. I ſhall make this plain unto you:

1. By inſtancing in ſome Particulars. It is evident that ſome Parts of the body have an uſe in Heaven. It is evident in ſeeing; With theſe eyes, (ſaith Job) ſhall I ſee him. It is evident in ſpeaking; in that Transfiguration which I have ſpoken of before, it is ſaid that Moſes, and Elias, and Chriſt did talk together: And at latter day, it is certain that Chriſt will ſpeak ſo, as all the World ſhall hear him; he ſhall ſo judge all men, as that every man ſhall be able for to judge, therefore he ſhall do it audibly; for in 1 Cor. 4. 5. ſaith the Apoſtle, Judge no man before the time until the Lord come, (and he cometh as a man to judge) who will bring to light the hidden things of darkneſs, and make manifeſt the counſels of the heart; implying, Judge no mans heart afore hand, for one day you ſhall judge: And how ſhall you come to judge? Becauſe the Lord will bring them all to light, and he will do it as a Man; for he hath appointed the Man Chriſt Jeſus to judge the World. And when I ſay he ſhall pronounce the Sentence with a voice that all the World ſhall hear, it is not to be conceived that he ſhall ſpeak ſo as to Thunder, but he ſhall have a ſpiritual voice, and they ſhall have ſpiritual ears; and how, we know not, as I ſhall ſhew you by and by. Steven's eye, his bodily eye, could

ſee up into Heaven, And he ſaw the Heavens opened, and the Son of God ſtanding on the right hand of his Father; to ſee a Man of Chriſt's ſtature ſo far off, he muſt have the eye ſpiritualized, and ſo Steven's was. And ſo for all the World to hear the voice of Chriſt at latter Day, it is becauſe they ſhall have ears ſpiritualized. Now, I ſay, if all theſe parts of the body remain, why ſhould thoſe have a priviledge and a prerogative more than all the reſt of the parts of the body, which certainly ſhall ſerve for ſome uſe or other? Chap. 11.

2. I ſhall give you the reaſon which ſome Divines give for it, viz. That elſe it is not a Reſurrection unto Life. The Reſurrection is called a waking, for Death, you know, is a ſleep. Now if there were not an imployment for all the Parts of the body in a ſpiritual way (what we know not) there were a Reſurrection of ſome of them to ſleep, rather than to waking, rather than to life; When I awake (ſaith he) I ſhall ſee thy face, Pſal. 17. 15.

3. I ſhall propound you this Reaſon likewiſe for it, That the principal aim of God in decreeing men to Salvation, it did fall upon their bodies as well as their ſouls. He choſe not the ſoul only to Heaven, and the body to come thither accidentally, but he pitched upon this ſoul as dwelling in this body, and therefore makes the ſoul ſtay for its full glory till the body is joyned unto it: And therefore he hath as well ordained that which ſhall be for the happineſs and glory even of the body, objects ſuitable to it, being made ſpiritual; as he hath done for the ſoul it ſelf.

Thus having explained, 1. That for the ſubſtance, it is the ſame body; and 2. That it is the ſame body with all the parts of it: And, 3. That all theſe Parts have their uſe: I muſt, 4. Explain what is meant by a ſpiritual body, and ſo make out the Compariſon between the ſtate of Adam's body in his firſt Creation, and our bodies when they ſhall be raiſed up at latter Day. There are three Interpretations, which being put altogether, make up the full ſcope and intent of what is here meant by a ſpiritual body.

1. Some ſay it is therefore called Spiritual, becauſe that all earthly, animal, uſes of it ſhall ceaſe, ſuch as the body hath now. The eye ſhall not be ſuited to colours or beauty; nor the ear to ſounds, ſuch ſounds as now; nor the mouth and Stomack to meats and drinks. There is a very plain place for this, in 1 Cor. 6. 13. Meats for the belly and the belly for meats; but God ſhall deſtroy both it and them; that is, that ſuitableneſs that is between the body and meats, the eye and colours or beauty, the fancy and the things here in this World fancied, all this ſuitableneſs wherein God hath made the one for the other, as faculties for objects, belly for meats, and meats for the belly, God will diſſolve, he will deſtroy, he will evacuate, he will make void all this ſuitableneſs, that the mouth nor the ſtomack ſhall not deſire meats or drinks, &c. Why? Becauſe God will deſtroy this ſuitableneſs, he will deſtroy both the belly and meats in the World to come. As the Angels, they are not taken with bodily pleaſures, with beauty, nor any ſuch thing, no more ſhall our bodily Senſes, otherwiſe than as to that uſe they ſhall be then put unto. If you could ſuppoſe a Man to be taken out of Heaven in the body, he would find no pleaſure in any thing here, he would not be taken with meats, or beauty or pleaſures, or any ſuch thing, he would be as an Angel. Here in this World God hath ſuited one to the other; There this ſuitableneſs ſhall be diſſolved. Therefore you know our Saviour Chriſt ſaith, Matth. 22. 30. That they are as the Angels of God in Heaven, they neither marry nor give in marriage; and the pleaſures that depend thereupon they ſhall not have, nor any ſuch carnal thing, for their bodies are Spiritual: Though they have all the ſame Parts and Senſes they had before, yet they are turned unto other objects, and put unto other uſes. And hence therefore it is ſaid, that Fleſh and Blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of Heaven; that is, take theſe poor earthly bodies of ours, we are ſo unſuited to that glory that it would ſink us, ſo that if a Man could be put into Heaven with this body as it is now, that glory would kill him, he were not able to bear it, he were not able to inherit. It is then a truth that they are called Spiritual bodies in this reſpect, that look, as Spirits

Book II. cannot find a ſuitableneſs between worldly things and them: What do the Angels care for all the beauty in the World, or for all the pleaſures of meats and drinks, &c. Nothing at all: No more ſhall theſe bodies of ours, when they ſhall be raiſed up at the latter day; God will deſtroy both it and them; that is, the ſuitableneſs between the one and the other.

2. Others interpret a ſpiritual body to be a body able to paſs, pierce, or move as Spirits up and down; That our Bodies ſhall be able to move from Earth to Heaven preſently. Popiſh Interpreters ſay, That Chriſt's body did move even through the Grave-ſtone, while the Stone lay upon the mouth of the Sepulchre. But whether that be true or no I will not ſtand to diſpute; our Proteſtant Divines are againſt it. Yet this is certain that that is not the whole meaning of the Apoſtle here, when he ſaith our Bodies ſhall be Spiritual, and that for this Reaſon clearly, becauſe he doth oppoſe ſpiritual to the whole animal Life, the natural life that Adams Soul had in his Body in all the operations of it whatſoever; therefore to reſtrain a ſpiritual Body only to nimbleneſs and agility, it is too narrow an Interpretation; it is but to take in one property in ſtead of all the reſt. But then,

3. That which I eſpecially pitch upon (though I take in all theſe in their degree) is this, It is called a ſpiritual body, becauſe that the whole body, it ſhall be in a ſpiritual way ſuited to ſpiritual Objects made for it: And ſo, now I ſhall come to make out the Compariſon between the ſtate of Adam's body in innocency, and our bodies as they ſhall be after the Reſurrection; and ſhew you how the one was a Type of the other.

The firſt Excellency of Adam's body, which is called a natural body, I told you was this; It had a whole world made for it, meats for his belly, colours for his eyes, ſounds for his ears, &c. and as he had an animal body, ſo he had a world ſuited to it. So now likewiſe, there is a ſpiritual body we ſhall have, which ſhall be ſo changed, and have new qualities put upon all theſe Senſes of ours, that there ſhall be ſpiritual Objects ſuited thereunto: That as the ſuitableneſs between earthly objects and it ſhall be taken away, meats for the belly, and the belly for meats, ſhall both be deſtroyed; ſo there will be ſpiritual objects which the body will be ſuited to. Thus you ſhall find in Nature, and you ſhall find it to hold in Grace too, that God hath always ſuited objects and faculties one to another: If he hath made an eye, he hath made colours for it; If he hath made an ear, he hath made ſounds for it: And ſuch as the faculty is, ſuch are the objects; if the faculty be ſpiritual, the object ſhall be ſpiritual alſo: If he makes belly, he makes meat; and if he makes meat, he makes belly; and if the meat be earthly things, the belly ſhall be earthly too: If you could ſuppoſe a ſpiritual belly (but we cannot tell how to ſpeak in ſuch a language) you ſhould have ſomething ſpiritual ſuitable unto it. The Apoſtle, in 1 Cor. 2. 13. he ſaith of the Holy Ghoſt (he ſpeaks it indeed of teaching men how to preach the Word) that as he hath made ſpiritual things to be taught, ſo he teacheth men to expreſs thoſe ſpiritual things in ſpiritual language, he ſuiteth (ſo the word ſignifies) he fitteth ſpiritual things to ſpiritual. So in Heaven, if God have made a ſpiritual body, which takes up all the parts of it, he hath ſuited ſpiritual objects to it. There are two inſtances in Scripture of the glory of the body; the one is of Chriſt's, when he was transfigured; the other is of Steven, when his face ſhined, as it had been the face of an Angel, and he looked up to Heaven, and he ſaw two things, he ſaw Chriſt, and he ſaw the glory of God; there was a ſpiritual glory which he ſaw with his bodily eyes made ſpiritual.

Now, I know you will ask me this Queſtion, If that a Mans body, and all the parts of it, ſhall be carried up to Heaven, and ſhall have objects ſuited thereunto, what manner of objects ſhall theſe be? And what manner of Senſes ſhall theſe be? And to what uſes ſhall all theſe be turned? What Senſes we have here we know, what we ſhall have there can you tell us?

The

The truth is, my Brethren, I cannot tell you, I profeſs it; I can no more tell you, than I can tell you if God ſhould ſay from Heaven that he would add a ſixth Senſe to your bodies, and Create an object ſuitable to it, what this Senſe, nor what the Object of it ſhould be; neither could all Angels and Men, if they laid their heads together, tell you what Senſe and Object thereof, that ſhould be. Paul, you know, ſaith, that he heard words (when he was wrapt up into the third Heavens) that were unutterable, 1 Cor. 12. When he came down from Heaven, they were things of another kind, of ſuch a nature, that he was not able to ſpeak them, or make any impreſſion what they were upon any Mans underſtanding in the World. Therefore, in 1 Cor. 2. (though it is meant principally of the things of the Goſpel, yet as evidently too of the things of Heaven) The ear hath not heard, nor the eye ſeen, nor hath it entred into the Heart of Man, the things that God hath prepared for them that love him. I may as well tell you, how it is poſſible that our bodies ſhould be Spiritual; the truth is, it is in nature a contradiction; for to ſay a Spiritual body, it is as if you ſhould ſay a wooden ſtone: Were not this an abſurdity? You would all think ſo. And therefore now to tell you what ſhall be the Spiritualneſs of this body, and yet a body ſtill, and what ſhall be the objects ſuited to this Spiritual body, for my part I cannot; but out of the clear word of God, and this very Text, it is plain that as there was an animal body that Adam had, ſuited to animal things, ſo here ſhall be a Spiritual body, ſuited to Spiritual things, and ſo much we may ſafely ſay in the general. Luther when he took into conſideration this Phraſe, A Spiritual Body, ſaith he, Hic ſermo eſt plane inauditus, here is a Speech never heard of; What a, Spiriutal body! Yet ſo it is. It is a glory ſhall be revealed, that's the Phraſe, Rom. 8. 16. I bring it for this purpoſe, to ſhew, that we know not what glory it ſhall be, for it ſhall be revealed. And that he ſpeaks of the glory of the body, is clear by verſ. 11. If the Spirit of him that raiſed up Jeſus from the dead dwell in you, he that raiſed up Chriſt from the dead ſhall alſo quicken your mortal Bodies. And likewiſe, at verſ. 23. he ſaith, We wait for the redemption of our bodies: It is a glory therefore to be revealed, and for my part I cannot tell you what it is; only we argue one thing out of another, and ſo raiſe up our thoughts to think what it may be. My Brethren, ſuppoſe the Angels had ſtood by (as it is likely ſome of them did, for the morning Stars ſang, as I ſhewed out of Job) and beheld when God was making Adams body, they ſaw him take a piece of Earth, and mould it to a head, to eyes, to noſe, to mouth, & all thoſe parts; what this body, while it was thus a making ſhould be made for, (ſuppoſe the body was firſt made, as it ſeems it was, for God did then breathe the breath of Life into it) what thoſe eyes, and that noſe and mouth ſhould ſerve for, all the Angels in Heaven could not tell. Ay, but when once God breathed a ſoul into it, then they ſaw that the eyes could diſcern colours, and the mouth could taſte meat, and the ears could hear ſounds. So will God do at latter Day; he will take up our bodies, and make them ſpiritual; put new Senſes upon them, as I may ſay, or rather ſpiritualize theſe Senſes we have, and then what theſe ſhall ſerve for in the other world, we no more know, than indeed and in truth, in this Suppoſition, the Angels could have known: But when the Holy Ghoſt ſhall come as a ſoul into theſe bodies (as he will do, for we are all the Temples of the Holy Ghoſt) and ſhall act all theſe, then thoſe things that are in Heaven, they will know and ſee, and we ſhall find and feel them ſuited as truly to theſe ſpiritual bodies of ours, that we ſhall have there, as our animal bodies are to the things of this world. Let a poor plain man come into an Artificer's Shop, and there ſee a great many Tools, it may be two or three hundred ſeveral Tools, as ſome curious Artificers have, what this Tool ſerveth for he knoweth not, and what that Tool ſerveth for, he knoweth not; the Artificer, he hath a uſe for them all. So when we come to Heaven, what all the parts of theſe bodies of ours ſhall then ſerve for, we know not now, but he that made them, and made them principally not for this world (mark what I ſay) your bodies were not made for this world chiefly, that's clear in all the Scripture, this Text holds it forth, That which was natural (ſaith he) is firſt; firſt indeed in execution;

Book II. and afterward that which is ſpiritual; God's eye was upon the ſpiritual. Now he that did order our very bodies for Heaven, as well as our ſouls, and doth not bring the body to Heaven by accident, only becauſe the ſoul is there, and will not part Company; but he pitched upon the one as well as the other; He knows what to do with all theſe Tools, though we do not. Our own experience will tell us, that there may be a great change in the uſe of things; we eat, and drink, and take in nouriſhment every meal; Is it not a ſtrange thing that all this meat we eat, ſhould within four or five hours after, hear, and ſee, and feel, that it ſhould beget Spirits that ſhall do all this by the Inſtruments of it? Is not here a ſtrange ſpiritualizing of theſe poor Creatures? Thus will God ſpiritualize eyes, ears, and all, and advance them to more noble objects ten thouſand times there than here. So that, my Brethren, as God will make a ſpiritual body at the Reſurrection, ſo he hath ſuited ſpiritual things in the other world for this ſpiritual body, as he made and ſuited this world to Adam's animal body in the firſt Creation: And there is nothing in the other world that is corporeal or bodily (and there muſt needs be many things corporeal there, for the place is a body) but it ſhall be ſuited to the body of man when it is thus made ſpiritual.

If you ask me more particularly, What one object there is that ſhall be ſuited to our bodies, for us to have happineſs in our bodies by it?

I Anſwer, The Human Nature of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, it is a Notion that the Schoolmen had of old, That the body of Chriſt is the happineſs of Heaven, and is ſuited to our bodies in Heaven, to be the happineſs of them; as ſeeing of the body of Chriſt ſhall be the happineſs of that Senſe; and how he is otherwiſe ſuited to all our other Senſes, we know not. I ſhall give you a place or two for it: 1 Cor. 6. 13, 14. Meats for the belly, and the belly for meats, but God ſhall deſtroy both it and them. The body is not for fornication, but for the Lord, and the Lord for the body; and God hath both raiſed up the Lord, and will alſo raiſe us up by his own power. The Apoſtle here ſpeaks againſt unlawful pleaſures and ſenſual luſts: And his Argument lies upon a twofold ground: Firſt, It is taken from a common Argument, Why ſhould you give up your ſelves to theſe Luſts, ſaith he, ſeeing your bodies were made for other things? Suppoſe inordinate eating and drinking were lawful, it is but for the belly, ſaith he, it is but for this world, God will deſtroy both belly and meats. Then there is a ſpecial Argument, The body is not for fornication, but for the Lord, and the Lord for the body. Now then, look as the belly is for meats, and meats for the belly here in this world, ſo in a ſpiritual way (which we know not of) is the Lord for the body, and the body for the Lord in the other world. There are other Interpretations given of this, I will but name them, and give you Reaſons againſt them.

Firſt, ſay ſome, the meaning is this; That the body is made to ſerve the Lord, and therefore becauſe you are to ſerve the Lord with your bodies, give not your ſelves up to ſuch luſts. That that is not the only meaning, is clear by this, becauſe he doth not ſay only that our body is for the Lord, but he addeth, and the Lord is for the Body. Now Jeſus Chriſt is not ordained to ſerve the body, that's certain. And then again, ſecondly, he ſpeaks of our bodies what they ſhall be at the Reſurrection. How do you prove that? By two reaſons; For firſt, he ſaith, The body is for the Lord, and the Lord for the body; when the belly and meats ſhall be deſtroyed. Meats for the belly (ſaith he) and the belly for meats, but God ſhall deſtroy both it, and them: and then afterward, he ſaith, The body is for the Lord and the Lord for the body. Secondly, it is evident, that he meaneth what correſpondency and ſuitableneſs ſhall be between the Body of Chriſt, and our bodies, in the World to come, it appears by this, which he ſaith, And God hath both raiſed up the Lord, and will alſo raiſe us up by his own power; Implying, that as God did make the belly for meats, and meats for the belly, in a corporeal way, in an animal way here, ſo he hath ſuited, in a Spiritual way, our bodies for Chriſt, and Christ for our bodies, in the other World; And therefore that God that made this ordination, he that hath raised up Christ already, and given him a Spiritual body, he will raise us up too, that so we being ordained one for another, our bodies may be for him, and his body for us. Chap. 11.

Secondly, Others give this interpretation, That the Apostles argument against these lusts, is grounded upon the Resurrection; because your bodies shall be one day raised up again, therefore do not thus abuse them. But it is clear, that the reason here given why God doth raise up our bodies, as he hath raised up Christs body, is because he had first ordained in his decree, the body for the Lord, and the Lord for the body. Hence therefore, my Brethren, Christs Human Nature being Spiritualized, and the same Spirit that dwelleth in him, dwelling in us, raising up our bodies and Human Natures, and so Spiritualizing them, there will be some way whereby the body will be refreshed in and by the Lord Jesus Christ: The body is made for Christ, saith he, and Christ for the body; even as here in this life, the World is made for our bodies, and our bodies for the World; to take in Comforts from it. If you ask me how this shall be? Truly I say only, we shall be conformed to the glorious body of Christ thus, and Spiritualized, by that power that hath subdued all things. It is Calvins saying upon the Text, God hath fitted and suited his Son for us; The body is for the Lord, and the Lord for the body.

Now do but think with your selves, how happy we, in Heaven, shall be, when as our bodies, having new Spiritualized qualities put upon all the parts of them, (which we know not what they will be suited to, nor how) and when as all things in Heaven, the Human Nature of Christ in an eminent manner, the Angels and all things here (being all Spiritual) shall be suited to these Spiritual bodies, for us to have comfort and happines from them some way or other.

I will give you but one other place of Scripture for this, it is in Psal. 17. ult. When I awake, I shall be satisfied with thine Image. He speaks there of the Resurrection; he calls it an awaking, for you know death is called a sleep; Those that are asleep in the Lord, shall rise first. He had spoken before of those that had put their happiness in the Comforts of this life, suitable to their bodies, to the animal State of their bodies; that's clear by the 14th verse, Deliver me from the Men that are thine hand, O Lord; who have their Portion in this life, whose belly thou fillest with thy Treasure; they are full of Children and leave to them outward things, bodily things: But as for me (saith he,) I will behold thy face in the righteousness (there is the Vision of God, which is his happiness in his Soul) and I shall be satisfied when I awake (when I arise again) with thine Image. It is not the Image of God only upon himself that he means here; Why? Because that doth not satisfie a holy heart; but it is that Image of the invisible God which the Human Nature of Jesus Christ is, who in opposition to all these outward pleasures, will be all in all to us, he is a Spiritual Creature, his Human Nature is Spiritualized, made glorious, and our bodies shall be made Spiritual likewise; The body is made for the Lord, and the Lord for the body, and this when they are both raised up: Christ is raised up already, and because he hath ordained the one to be serviceable to the other, he will also raise up our bodies: And when he doth raise me up, saith David, though other Men have their bellies full here, and have animal pleasures they delight in; yet when I shall awake at latter day, and shall see this Image of thine, shall see thy Son, I shall be satisfied. When I awake, I shall be satisfied with thine Image.

Thus you see what a glorious state God would raise up our bodies unto at the Resurrection. All this hath been said to this purpose, to compare Adam's body, that had a world made for the animal state of it, and our bodies as they shall be at latter day, when they shall be made spiritual bodies, and have have likewise provision for them in the world to come. Now to make up the Comparison, in respect of this first Excellency that Adam's body was advanced unto, yet more full, I shall only add one thing more, in a word, and that is this, That as our God did make this visible world, made it compleat, before ever he brought Adam into it, for whom it was made, and to whom it was suited, so hath God prepared a glory in Heaven, and he hath prepared it from the beginning of the World for his Elect, for whom it is appointed. In Gen. 1. 1. it is said, that on the first day God created the Heaven and the Earth; by Earth is meant the confused Chaos, the matter of Sun, and Moon, and Stars, and Men, and Beasts, and Fire, and Water, and Earth, and all; The Earth, saith he, was without form, and void; so that the matter of all those Creatures we see with our eyes, they are called Earth. And by Heaven here, in this first verse, is meant that Heaven above, where the Saints shall be for ever. And that it is so to be understood, is clear in the Text; for if you read the work of the fourth day, at the 14th verse, you shall find that God created the Sun, and the Moon, and the Stars, which are the visible Heavens, after he had created Heaven and Earth in the first day: And therefore, by Heaven in the first day, is meant the glorious Heaven which God will bring the souls and bodies of all his Elect unto, when they are raised up at latter day. Now, as he made a world for Adam, afore he brought him into it; so he made Heaven, that glorious Heaven, the first day, and all the things in it; (and what is in it we do not know) he made all these from the foundation of the World for his Elect; you have a plain place for it, Matth. 25. 34. Come ye blessed, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the beginning of the world. And if you observe the words, he tells us that this Kingdom in Heaven was prepared for us: Now read verse 41. when he speaks of wicked men, whom he meaneth to throw to Hell, that stood on his left hand, saith he, Depart from me ye cursed into everlasting fire, prepared for the Devil and his Angels. Mark the difference: Hell, my Brethren, was not made primarily for Men, but for the Devil, for he sinned, and his Angels. Now if Christ would have kept the proportion, he would have said, Inherit the Kingdom prepared for the holy Angels; he doth not say so; but he saith, Inherit the Kingdom prepared for you, suited to you; the things in Heaven being made as primarily, if not more primarily, for Christ and the Elect of Mankind, than for the Holy Angels, though Hell was made primarily for the Devil and his Angels; we do but go into what was prepared for them: But when we are carried into Heaven, bodies and souls, (for he speaks of the Resurrection) we are carried to that place which was prepared immediately and primarily for us; Inherit the Kingdom prepared for you; as much for you, and as primarily for you in God's intentions, as for the holy Angels that were made in it the first day. That which I quote and alledge it for is this (for it is pertinent to my scope) that as God did first make this visible world, and then brought Adam into it six days after, and when he came into it, he found all things in it suitable to him, to that body and soul that God had made: So God, to whom all his works are known from the beginning, he made this glorious Heaven the first day; he then prepared it; (they are called the things prepared from the beginning of the world, Matth. 25. 34.) This Heaven hath stood empty of the bodies of men, and doth to this day; there is Christ's body indeed now, and some few bodies else, Elias and Moses and Enoch, who perhaps are there now in their bodies; but the shoal and the flush of Mankind, whom all the things there are prepared for, and prepared from the beginning of the world, they shall not come into it till after the Resurrection; not bodies and souls they shall not till then; and they shall find then, that all things in that world are prepared for them as truly, as all things in this world were made for Adam. And so now I have dispatched that first thing, the Excellency of Adam's body; it lay in this, that he had a world prepared for him, into which he was brought at last; so hath God prepared another world, Heaven, even from the foundation of the world, which the godly, the Elect shall, when they they ariſe again, be brought into, and find all things prepared for them: What theſe are I do not know, for as he ſaith in 1 Cor. 2, 9. Eye hath not ſeen, nor ear heard, what he hath prepared for them that love him. And add to it that place (with which I will end this) 1 Pet. 1. 4. he ſaith, We have an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, reſerved in Heaven for us, ready to be revealed (mark the Phraſe, verſe 5.) in the laſt times, when we ſhall be raiſed up at latter day; but prepared it is already, and God brings us into it at laſt, even as he did Adam at the laſt, when he had made the world, and all Creatures elſe in it. Chap. 11.

The ſecond thing wherein the Excellency of Adam's animal ſtate of body conſiſted, I told you, was beauty. He had a native beauty, as I may ſo call it, an inbred beauty; he needed no clothes, nor no ſuch thing to ſet it out; and in that reſpect you find, that though they were naked, and had nothing to adorn them, yet they were in a glory; for when they had ſinned, then they fell to ſhame by reaſon of their nakedneſs. Adam had a beautiful body, and ſo had Eve: It is ſaid, he built the Woman, that expreſſion is uſed. But yet all that beauty that Adam's body had, it is but a ſhadow to that beauty and that glory which Chriſt will put upon the bodies of his Saints at latter day, upon theſe ſpiritual bodies here in the Text. We no where read that the beauty of Adam is called glory; but here we read it is called glory; mark the expreſſion in verſe 43. of this 15th Chapter of the firſt to the Corinthians, It is ſowen in diſhonour (the body namely) it is raiſed in glory. The word glory here hath a ſpecial relation to that beauty, that exceſs of beauty, which God will put upon the bodies of the Saints in Heaven. You muſt know this, that in Scripture the exceſs of any excellency is called glory. We ſay that Fire hath a light in it, but we do not call Fire glorious; but becauſe that the Sun hath an exceſs of light in it, we call the Sun glorious. We rejoyce in outward things, but if this joy doth grow to an exceſs, it is called a glorious joy, as in 1 Pet. 1. 8. We rejoyce with joy unſpeakable and full of glory. Thus whatſoever is ſuch an excellency as ſuperexcelleth, is in Scripture called glory: Now anſwerably the beauty of the body in Heaven, becauſe it ſhall ſuperexcel, it is called glory. When Chriſt ſaith of Solomon, That in all his Royalty he was not like to a Lilly; the word we Tranſlate Royalty, is in all his glory, that is, take all the outward pomp and ſplendour of Solomon, that his body was adorned with when he ſate upon his Throne, it was not like the beauty and the glory that is put upon a Lilly; I quote it for this, that glory it is taken for excellency of beauty. So likewiſe when he ſaith, 1 Pet. 1. 24. For all fleſh is graſs, and all the glory of man as the flower of graſs: the graſs withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away: He calleth beauty there, glory; ſo doth he here, 1 Cor. 15. 43. It is raiſed, ſaith he, in glory. If you would know how much the glory of the bodies of the Saints in Heaven, ſhall exceed the glory of what they have now, read verſ. 40, 41. of this 15th Chapter; There are Celeſtial Bodies, ſaith he, and Bodies Terreſtrial, but the glory, or the beauty, or the excellency of the Celeſtial is one, and the glory, or the beauty of the Terreſtrial is another; and even amongſt the Celeſtials themſelves, there is a differing glory, There is one glory of the Sun, another of the Moon, another of the Stars, ſo alſo, ſaith he, is the reſurrection of the dead. His meaning is this, That look how a clod of Earth doth differ in glory from the Sun or the Moon, how the glory of a Terreſtrial body differeth from a Celeſtial; ſo doth the glory of the bodies of the Saints in Heaven differ from that glory that was put upon the body of Adam, he being in all his glory but an earthly man, as the Text hath it. Take the beautifulleſt man or woman that ever was in the world, they have but the glory of a clod of Earth, but of a Terreſtrial body, in compariſon of that Celeſtial glory that ſhall be put upon the bodies of the Saints at latter day: And to ſhew the degrees of glory that ſhall be in Heaven amongſt the Saints, comparing one Book II. Celeſtial body with another, he ſaith, there is one glory of the Sun, another of the Moon, &c. Now when I opened the Transfiguration of Chriſt, I did ſhew you then, That Chriſt's face did ſhine as the Sun: Now in Matth. 13. 34. he ſaith the ſame thing of all the Saints, Then ſhall the righteous ſhine forth as the Sun in the Kingdom of the Father; who hath ears to hear let him hear. Then ſaith he, namely after the Reſurrection, for of that, and of the Day of Judgment, he had diſcourſed in the former words; and they ſhall ſhine as the Sun, ſaith he; although among themſelves there ſhall be degrees of glory, as in that place in the Corinthians even now quoted, one may ſhine as the Sun, another as the Moon, another as the Stars, one in compariſon of another: Jeſus Chriſt will be as the Sun, Paul and thoſe eminent Saints, will be as bigger Stars; yet if you will compare the glory of the leaſt of the Saints in Heaven with this Sun, they ſhall all ſhine, ſaith he, as this Sun; and becauſe Chriſt ſpeaks a very high word, therefore he addeth (as uſually he doth ſo) who hath ears to hear, let him hear; for ſaith he, it is a thing people will not believe, but it is true.

Yea, my Brethren, it is moſt certain, that the bodies of the Saints ſhall ſo ſhine, as to put down or eclipſe the glory of the Sun; that look, as a Candle waxeth pale in the preſence of the Sun, or as the Fire is put out by the Sun ſhining upon it in the Summer, ſo ſhall the bodies of the Saints do, In Iſai. 24. 23. Then the Moon ſhall be confounded, and the Sun ſhall be aſhamed (juſt as you ſee a Candle looks pale, or as the Fire draws in its own beams of Light before the Sun) when the Lord of Hoſts ſhall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jeruſalem; and before his Ancients glorioufly; Now, although this place may not be meant of the compleat fulfilling of the glory of the Saints at latter day, yet it is an alluſion to it: This Sun and Moon ſhall be all aſhamed and confounded, and as a Candle now appears before this Sun, ſo ſhall this Sun appear before that glory that ſhall be put upon the body of Chriſt, and upon the bodies of the Saints.

I ſhall only add this to it, that this glory and beauty (for indeed glory is but an exceſs of beauty) which ſhall be thus put upon the bodies of the Saints, it ſhall not be of the ſame kind with that of the Light of the Sun; I may very well and truly ſay, that the Light of the Sun is but Terreſtrial, but that is Celeſtial, for it is the Light of another Heaven than what the Sun is plac'd in; therefore the Scripture doth not ſay, that we ſhall have the Light of the Sun, but we ſhall be as the Sun, having no higher thing to compare it to. And the reaſon is plain; for the Light of the Sun, it is indeed the Light of Fire, for upon the fourth day God Created Light, that is, the Element of Fire (for you ſhall find Earth, Fire, Air, and Water, Created then) and he took that Light, that Fire, and cruſht it, as I may ſay, together, into one body, into one Globe, put it into the body of the Sun, and therefore it is but indeed the Element of Fire in the exceſs of it, in the ſtrength of it, therefore the Light of the Sun heateth, fireth bodies; but this glory of the bodies of the Saints ſhall not do ſo, it is not of the ſame kind. The Light of the Sun, it is but an Elementary Light, it is but Fire conglobated and made condenſe and thickned together, it is but a natural Light, and terreſtrial Light, whereas this is ſupernatural and Heavenly, and therefore it is of a higher kind. And therefore, now in Phil. 3. 21. the Text telleth us, that we ſhall be conformed not to the glory of the Sun, but to the glory of the glorious body of Chriſt; that look as the Sun is the fountain of all that glory which the Stars have, ſo ſhall our Lord and Saviour Chriſt's glory be of all the glory we have. It is, I ſay, a glory of a higher kind than that of the Sun; in Rev. 21. 11. the new Hieruſalem is ſaid to have the glory of God upon it, not the glory of the Sun: And at verse 23. It hath no need of the Sun, neither of the Moon, to shine in it, for the glory of God doth Lighten it, and the Lamb is the Light thereof. That, I quote it for, is this, That the glory that is put upon the bodies of the Saints, though it is likened to that of the Sun, because we know nothing more glorious than it, yet it is a glory of another kind, of an higher degree, it is indeed the glory of God that is upon them: That as it is said of Christ, in Matth. 16. 27. That he shall come in the glory of his Father; therefore his glory will be an higher glory, a glory of another kind than that of the Sun: So we shall have the glory of God upon us, and therefore a glory of an higher kind than what is in the Sun, which we no more know now, than (as I have said afore) we know what the sixth Sense would be, if God should say he would Create one, or an object suitable to it. I have the larger insisted upon this second Property, because I find that in Christ's Transfiguration, the only excellency that he held forth before his Disciples, when they saw his Majesty, was the glory that did shine forth in his body; his face, the Text saith, did shine as the Sun. Chap. 11.

A third Excellency in Adam's body, which I have mentioned, is the healthful constitution that was in that animal body of his, and his being free from all injuries of weather or what ever else; and therefore though he was naked, yet he felt no hurt; but yet this I told you withal, which might lone his Condition, that he stood in need of Creatures, he depended upon sleep, and upon meats. But now the Bodies that God will put upon us at latter day, they shall depend upon none of all these; and not only not depend upon sleep and meat, and drink, and the like, but they shall be free from any possibility of being injured by any thing. Adam, he might have been injured (though as I have said, God had promised to keep him) if he had faln off from an high place, his body would have been bruised, as well as ours, for he was Flesh and Blood: But these Spiritual Bodies we shall have hereafter, they shall be wholly impassible and incorruptible. Adam's Body, though it was healthful, and should not finally have decayed, if he had stood in Innocency, yet it was subject to alterations; the meat that he eat one day, it did evaporate in Spirits, he was subject to wearines, to expense of Spirits, though he should not die; but the Bodies that God shall give us at latter day, they shall be Bodies incorruptible, Bodies raised up in strength. I will give you but those two places for it, the one is 1 Cor. 15. 43. It is sown in weakness, & it is raised in power, or in strength. And the other is verse 53. This corruptible must put on incorruptible, and this mortal must put on immortality; and when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, &c. Here seems to be two different things between Corruption and Immortality. I shall express to you the difference thus; That thing is said to be Immortal which shall not dye; but that thing is said to be Corruptible, which though it shall not dye, yet may be subject to alteration: As for example, It is said that the body of Christ in the Grave saw no Corruption; the meaning is, there was not the least alteration in it at all, nothing tending to Putrefaction, not the least dissolution of the humours in it. Now Adam's body, though it was immortal, yet it was not incorruptible, it was subject to alteration, there was an expense in it, it was subject to a corruption; my meaning is this, It was not that to day it was yesterday, and the meat he eat went out in the draugh, and the like: Hence therefore, that he might live for ever, he had the Tree of Life to eat of, for to repair his spirits when they were worn. He was but flesh and blood, though he was immortal, and he was not able to have inherited the Kingdom of Heaven, for flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of Heaven, 1 Cor. 15, 50. And the Apostle, by flesh and blood, doth not mean Original Corruption; but, take Man's body as it is meer flesh and blood, such as Adam had, it would not have born it, to have the glory of Heaven put upon it, that glory would have ſunk him, it would have kill'd him. Now, the Saints, at latter day, ſhall not only have bodies immortal, but incorruptible; that is, they ſhall have bodies which ſhall be ſubject to no alteration; they ſhall have no expenſe of ſpirits, though they ſhall be imployed about the higheſt Objects. The Angels, they are not only immortal, but they are incorruptible, and they are able unweariedly active day and night, without any expenſe of ſpirits, for to ſerve God; ſo ſhall the Saints likewiſe be in Heaven. Moſes was in the Mount (and he was a Type of Chriſt, and of us therein) forty days, and in all that time he neither did eat nor drink, he had no repair, he had a glory upon him, and he had for that time an incorruptibleneſs upon him, for his eye was not weary with ſeeing, nor his ear of hearing: His eye waxed not dim, no not when he was old, much leſs when upon the Mount. Incorruptibleneſs therefore is this, a continual vigour, ſuch as is ſubject to no alteration whatſoever. In Revel. 7. 15. he ſaith, That they ſhall ſerve God day and night, (as the Angels do) and they ſhall hunger no more, neither thirſt any more, neither ſhall the Sun light on them, nor any heat. The meaning is, they ſhall ſuffer from nothing. There is, 1. No wearineſs, for they reſt not day or night: 2. There is no miſery, for all tears ſhall be wiped from their eyes, verſe 17. There is, 3. No need of repairing of ſpirits, for they ſhall hunger no more, neither thirſt any more, 4. There is no injury from any thing without, for the Sun ſhall not light on them to hurt them, nor any heat. And although this place is meant (as our beſt Interpreters have ſhewn) of the ſtate of the world to come, I mean of the Kingdom of Chriſt, and ſo may fall ſhort of the glory of Heaven, yet it ſpeaks in the language of Heaven, and is an alluſion to it, and Heaven muſt needs be a higher and more glorious Condition. My Brethren, I take it there is this difference between the bodies of wicked men in Hell, and the bodies of the Saints in Heaven: It's true, they are both immortal; but yet the bodies of wicked men, they are corruptible, they do not put on incorruption, that is, they are ſubject to all ſorts of paſſions and of miſeries, and fire can burn them; and therefore let us take heed of Hell; they are as ſenſible of all ſorts of miſeries as now, only the power of God upholds them that they are immortal. But now the Saints, their bodies ſhall not only put on immortality, but incorruption too. Adam's body, it was ſubject to Corruption in this Senſe, it was ſubject to expenſe of ſpirits, to wearineſs, to ſenſe from outward things, though he might be protected by the Providence of God from ſuch injuries as might any way hinder his happineſs; but our bodies ſhall wholly put on incorruption. And ſo now that's a third thing, wherein I compare the ſtate of Adam's body at beſt, with that ſtate and condition the bodies of the Saints ſhall have after the Reſurrection.

I ſhall give you a fourth, which, I confeſs, might be implied in the other, and that is, Immortality. I ſhewed you, when I opened the perfections and State of Adam's Body, that indeed his Body was immortal, that's clear; for death came in only by ſin, as appears in Rom. 5. 12. and Rom. 8. 10, 11. Wherefore, as by one Man ſin entred into the World, and death by ſin: and ſo death paſſed upon all Men, for that all have ſinned. And if Chriſt be in you, the Body is dead, becauſe of ſin: But the Spirit is life, becauſe of Righteouſneſs. But if the Spirit of him that raiſed up Jeſus from the dead, dwell in you: He that raiſed up Chriſt from the dead, ſhall alſo quicken your mortal Bodies, by his Spirit that dwelleth in you. But yet, let me tell you this, That though Adam's body was Immortal yet it could have died, it had a principle in it that tended unto death. Now, in oppoſition to this, to ſhew you that his Immortality is but a ſhadow of that that the Saints ſhall have at latter day, do but look Luke 20. 35. They which ſhall be accounted worthy to obtain obtain that World, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage; neither can they die any more, for they are equal unto the Angels, and are the Children of God, being the Children of the Resurrection. Our Saviour Christ here, you see, speaks expresly, and in a way of clear difference from that State of Adam. The words which are translated, neither can they die any more, in the Original they are, for they cannot dye any more, and so indeed they are to be read; and they are a Reason of the former words, that therefore they neither marry nor are given in marriage; for (saith he) they cannot dye any more; The meaning is this, They are put into an higher State of Immortality than Adam had; for though he was Immortal, that is, he should never have died, yet he did marry, and should have procreated Children; but, saith he, these are put into such an Estate of immortality, as they shall not dye, therefore (he bringeth it in as a Reason) they shall no more marry, neither be given in marriage; they are not capable of such an Estate, for they are Immortal. And how Immortal? It is not only that they may live, or may dye, and God will keep them for ever, but they cannot dye, there is impotentia moriendi, plainly. And as their not marrying is brought in as a Reason of the former Assertion, so Christ giveth two Reasons why they have such an Estate of Immortality, as Adam (take him at best) had not, for he applies it to that. First, saith he, They are equal to the Angels; and secondly, They are the Sons of God, being the Sons of the Resurrection. First, They are equal to the Angels; now it is certain, my Brethren, that the Angels being created immediately out of nothing, though indeed God may annihilate them, he may bring them unto nothing again, yet they cannot dye, they have not principles to be dissolved, they have not a form and a matter, a soul and a body that may be separated. All things created immediately out of nothing, they cannot dye; as now, take the soul of a man, because it is created of nothing, it is therefore immortal, as the Angels are; and therefore our earthly Parents are said to be the Fathers of our bodies, and God the Father of our Spirits, Hebr. 12. 9. Now saith Christ, the bodies and souls of those that shall be counted worthy to obtain that world, they shall both of them be put into that state the Angels are in, and in the same sense that the Angels are said that they cannot dye, in the same sense shall it be true of them, they cannot dye neither. And secondly, They are the Children of God, being the Children of the Resurrection; that is, we have bodies of flesh and blood, and these bodies, we have them from our Parents, we are the Children of Adam: So the Saints, as their Souls are born again, so their bodies are, as it were, born again by the Resurrection; they have new kind of bodies, and therefore they are called the Children of the Resurrection; and being Children of the Resurrection, having bodies now framed immediately by the power of God, which subdueth all things to himself by as great a work as he created at first: Hence it comes to pass that they are Sons of God in a more transcendent manner than Adam was. And as the Angels are said in a transcendent manner to be the Sons of God, as immediately made by him, so these Children of the Resurrection may be said to be. Now then, being Sons of God in this transcendent sense, in opposition to Adam, and in opposition to all Mankind that are Sons of Men, being thus the Children of the Resurrection, their bodies being born again by a new Creation at the Resurrection: Hence, saith he, as God liveth of himself, and dieth no more, these are in this respect transformed into his Image, that as he is immutable and unchangeable, so shall they; he puts it as a reason why they cannot dye; for, saith he, they are the Sons of God, and they bear the Image of God in that very thing, that as he hath immortality, so they have immortality suitable thereunto: So that, I say, it is clear from this Text, which is an evident Text, and I confess I have wondred at many of our Divines, who have handled this Argument of the Immortality of our Bodies at latter day, have not

Book II. not pitched upon this Scripture, for there is nothing more clear. He saith plainly they shall not dye.

I might add other Properties which are usually mentioned in comparing the State of Adam's Body and ours, but then I should be too tedious: I will only conclude with this. Our Lord and Saviour Christ in his Human Nature, the Godhead personally united thereto, quickned it; he is therefore said to be a quickning Spirit: What is it shall quicken our mortal Bodies at latter day? It shall not be the Godhead personally united to us; but it shall be the Spirit of Christ, making our Bodies his Temple in a more peculiar manner: 1 Cor. 6. 19. your Bodies, saith he, are the Temples of the Holy Ghost, who is now in you: But then when he hath raised you up again, your Bodies are to be his Temple in a more immediate manner, Vers. 14. In Rom. 8. 11. For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the Sons of God. If the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus Christ from the dead, do dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead, shall also quicken your mortal Bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you. He saith of Jesus Christ, that he is a quickning Spirit, the Godhead being personally united to him, quickned his Human Nature; but so it shall not be with us: That's his prerogative alone; but he hath put his Spirit, the third Person of the Trinity, into us, who doth dwell in us; and that blessed Spirit he shall quicken our mortal Bodies, and shall not only raise them up again at latter day; but look what Adam's Soul was to his Body, that shall the Holy Ghost be to our Bodies in a transcendent manner; though not by a Personal Union, yet by such an Union as is between the Human Nature of Christ and the Holy Ghost: For, my Brethren, though the Godhead of the second Person doth dwell in a personal manner in the Human Nature of Christ, yet the Holy Ghost doth not dwell personally in him; he is united unto the Human Nature but as he is unto us, and that Spirit thus dwelling in us, he shall quicken and advance and raise up our Bodies to that State and height as becometh the Holy Ghost, (if he will take a Temple up unto himself) to raise our Bodies up unto. He saith, the Holy Ghost shall quicken your mortal Bodies; he doth not only speak of the first act of raising them, but in respect of spiritualizing and glorifying their Bodies, the Holy Ghost shall dwell in them, and shall make, that God shall be all in all unto them. And so now I have finished this Text which only holds forth a comparison between the animal, the Natural State of Adam's Body, and the State our Bodies shall have at latter day.

I will but name an Use or two, being loath to dismiss you without one. All this that hath been said, hath been but to this purpose, to compare Adam's Body, that had a World made for it, for the animal State of it, with the State our Bodies shall have hereafter, which shall be made Spiritual, and have objects suited to them in the World to come. You have seen what a State God will raise up our Bodies to, let us therefore abstain from fleshly lusts, let us get our Souls to spiritualize our Bodies all we can, while we are here, for it is that life we shall certainly live hereafter. My Brethren, our Bodies can never be made Spiritual here, we are here in an animal State, we are in Adam's World, and we have Adam's Image upon us, and we need meat, and drink, and sleep, &c. and must live upon those things which are necessary to this life; but yet we may look upon our selves as Pilgrims and Strangers, and we may go and Spiritualize all these, because all these shall one day be Spiritualized; let us live the life of Heaven here as much as we can, even in the use of all these outward things, because our Bodies are ordained to such a Spiritual condition one day.

Secondly

Secondly, Let thoſe that do groan under weak Bodies be comforted with the Aſſurance of their being reſtored to a full vigour, health, and ſtrength. The truth is, our Bodies here, they do hinder us from a great deal of that very Holineſs we might have; for Holineſs cannot be had without taking pains; and there is no pains doth ſpend the Spirits, and lick them up more, than intention upon God and Spiritual things. And beſides all hinderances we have here, the very hinderances of theſe poor Animal Careaſes of ours, which we have from Adam, hinder us as much or more than any thing elſe. And there is Fleſh and corruption that dwels in them, that inordinately carries them out to earthly things: Therefore let us groan as the Apoſtle ſaith, for the redemption of our Bodies, when as there will be no wearineſs, when as all the ſuitableneſs that is now between earthly things and us, will be done away; we ſhall have new Objects fitted for theſe Bodies, when made Spiritual, that will no way hinder us from the Viſion of God, but rather further us in it. Weakneſs and imperfections of our Bodies now hinder us very much from holineſs, and to build holineſs upon our weak and frail Bodies, it is as the building of an Houſe upon a Quagmire: Let us therefore groan after that time, and in the mean ſeaſon, let us ſanctifie God in our Hearts to the uttermoſt indeavour, waiting for that Redemption, when we ſhall have Bodies that ſhall need neither meat, nor drink, nor ſleep, nor refreſhing of Spirits, all which are now Temptations and Interruptions to us. THE CONTENTS.

BOOK I.

Wherein is proved the neceſſity of an Election Grace, if any of the Rational Creatures be certainly ſaved: And that God hath made an Election of ſome out of pure Grace, prov'd by the event, out of the Stories of all Times, throughout the Old and New Teſtament. 1

Chap. 1. The neceſſity of an Election, or Super-creation Grace, if either Angels or Men, (whether faln or or unfaln) be certainly or ſecurely ſaved. ibid.

Chap. 2. That there is an Election of Grace, with a Non-election or paſſing by others. That difference to be out of the pure grace and good pleaſure of God. Which purpoſe of Election, is the cauſe of their effectual Calling and Salvation, 12

Chap. 3. That De facto, God hath made an Election of ſome out of pure grace, with a Non-election of others; proved by the Story of all Ages of the World, through the Old and New Teſtament. 23

Chap. 4. The Inſtance of Noah, and his being ſaved in an Ark, and God's Covenant made with him prov'd more largely and fully to be a great Examplar and Typical Repreſentation of Election, and the Covenant of Grace. 37

Sect. 1. Of Election, and the Covenant of Grace; and the Church of the New Teſtament; the Subject of both; as typified forth in Noah's Story. That Noah in his own perſon was intended as an example of Election, the Covenants made with him before the Flood, and with him and his Sons after, were Types of the Covenant of Grace: Proved in a Diſcourſe on Iſai. 54. 7,8,9,10, 11. 38

Sect. 3. A more particular explication, both of the Phraſeology, Manner of Speech, and Matter in the 9th Verſe, confirming the foregoing Interpretation. 61

Sect. 4. Some ſpecial particular Parallels between what is found in Noah's Covenant, and the Covenant of Grace. 64

Sect. 5. How the Story of Noah was a Type of the Mediator of the Covenant of Grace, Chriſt which was the Ark 74

BOOK II.

OF the order of God's Decrees about Man's Election and Reprobation. Of the end to which we are ordained; A supernatural Union with God, and Communication of himself. The Infinity of Grace discovered therein. 79

Chap. 1. That God had a respect unto Man (considered) as unfaln in his election of him unto the End, and also unto Man as faln into sin in his Decrees to the Means. ibid.

Chap. 2. A brief draught of the Order of Christ's Election and ours; as it lies represented in the Scripture. 89

Chap. 3. That the supream, and utmost end, or termination of Election (as it respects us) is Gods choosing us to himself, and to a supernatural Union with himself, and Communication of himself. Proved from 1 Cor. 8. 6. 95

Chap. 4. That our Union with God the Father, and Christ, is the utmost end of our Election, further proved, in an Interpretation of several Passages of Christ's Prayer, in the seventeenth Chapter of John. 102

Chap. 5. The Infinity of Grace and Condescention in God; The High and Lofty One, to ordain such an Union and Communion with himself, of Us his Creatures, who are at such a distance from him as we Creatures; and more then doubly infinite Grace, in that we are also Sinners. 111

Chap. 6. The primordial or foundation motives in the Heart of God, that moved him to affect, design, and decree so high an Union of Creatures with himself, as they are expressed in Christ's Prayer, John 17. The first Motive was to manifest and declare God's Name, and to illustrate his grace and mercy to the sons of men. 121

Chap. 7. The Oneness and Intimacy of Communion which the Father, & Son, and Holy Ghost, had and have amongst themselves, was an Original and Primordial Motive of God's ordaining us unto Union and Communion with himself. 126

Sect. 1. The second Motive in God's Heart, drawn from the Union and Communion of Three Persons in the Trinity, branched into Two Particulars: The first is, That their Union in Essence or their common enjoyment of one and the same Godhead, did move them to make Creatures Partakers of such an enjoyment, as far as they could possibly be capable of it. 130

Sect. 2. The second sort or Branch of the Motive in the Three Persons. The mutual intercourse and society which as Persons they have, and had one with another; and the sweetness of that Converse, was an inducement to them to ordain Creatures to be taken up into the like Communion with themselves. This I found upon John 17. 21. 140

BOOK

BOOK III.

THE Infinity of Grace is Gods choosing us, proved from the Nature of Election both simply considered in its self, and also compared with that other Act of Reprobation. 121

Chap. 1. The Grace of electing us simply considered, and the greatness of it prov'd from the greatness of the Benefit. ibid.

Chap. 2. The Infinity of Grace in God's electing us, discovered by a Comparison of it with the other Act of Reprobation. The vast disparity between Election and the grounds and issue thereof, and the Act of Rejection of others, and the grounds and issue thereof. 124

Chap. 3. The Infinity of Grace in electing us, further evinced by a Comparative made in respect unto the Persons refused and elected, as considered in the common Condition of both, and the Circumstances which both stand in. Of their first Condition in the possibility before the Creation, as then viewed by God, represented in his Infinite Mind, the Elect were separated from the others rejected. 134

Chap. 4. Of the common Condition of the Elect, and rejected in the faln estate of Mankind. The Infinity of Grace toward the Grace magnified by the consideration of their being segregated out of that general corrupt Mass, wherein they lay equally with others: Gods Infinite Grace in choosing us also discovered by the vast disproportion of Number between the Elect and the Rest. 139

Chap. 5. The Infinite Grace of God in Election, in a view of the particular Condition of Elect and Others compared. 143

Chap. 6. The Grace of Election illustrated in one Particular; the most eminent demonstration of it: viz. Discriminating Grace; as by God's design it appears in God's dispensations towards, and the difference put between Temporaries highly enlighned by the Gospel, and his Elect whom he invincibly saves. 156

Chap. 7. A brief Exposition of the Epistle of Jude, by way of confirmation of the precedent Doctrine, That God's discriminating Grace appears in the vast difference he puts between enlightned Temporaries, and his Elect, that persevere; with Uses and Directions proper to the Doctrine, out of that Epistle. 167

Sect. 1. The first part of the Exposition of Jude's Epistle, wherein is demonstrated God's discriminating Grace, as it appears in the vast difference God doth put between enlightned Temporaries that fall away, and his Elect he doth in Christ preserve. 171

Sect. 2. The discriminating Grace of Election, as it appears in the difference God puts between Temporaries, and those whom he finally Preserves, further illustrated in an Exposition of the other part of Jude's Epistle; wherein are discovered the different Fountains and Causes in God's Heart of our Salvation, both Original and Continued. 186

BOOK

BOOK IV.

THe mighty and powerful Grace which God dispenses to his Elect, in effectually calling them, in preserving them from temptations and sin, in strengthning and inabling them to persevere unto the end, and in bringing them at last securely to an eternal Glory: By all which the greatness of Election Grace is more fully cleared and proved. 199

Chap. 1. The Explication of the words. What it is for God to be a God of Grace? A threefold Grace in God. His purposing Grace. That which he dispenses to his Elect. And the Riches of Grace that are in his Nature. What the Grace of his purposes is. ibid.

Chap. 2. That God is the God of all Grace dispensatorily. He gives supplies of Grace proportionably to the needs, distresses, and temptations unto which his Elect are obnoxious in the course of their lives here on earth. He is the God of all Grace essentially; In that his Nature contains infinite Riches of Grace. 217

Chap. 3. God is the God of all Grace, with a discrimination to [us,] not to others; especially such others as have an imperfect temporary work wrought in them; or he is the God of all Grace only to his Elect, whom he effectually calls and invincibly saves; not to others, whom he leaves to fall away. 235

Chap. 4. Effectual Calling the fruit of Election-grace. It is also the Foundation of all the following Acts of Grace. The Calling of the Elect different from the common work of Calling that passes upon others, who are not finally saved. The difference between them not only in degrees, but in kind, in what that difference of kind consists. Calling according to the purpose of Election is a work of that excellence for kind above all other, that God is engaged to carry it on to perfection. This manifested from the special, and unchangeable love of God toward us, which produces in us that good and perfect work. 241

Chap. 5. The second Topick or Head of Arguments unto our Faith from God his Calling us: The God of all Grace hath Called us: Or, that in our first Calling, God hath shewn himself A God of All Grace, and therefore will carry us through all Temptations unto Perfection. 271

Chap. 6. God's calling us unto his eternal Glory, is an investing us with a right to Heaven. And therefore, though yet we do not actually enjoy it, yet we may be assured, that he will preserve us safe and secure, until he has brought us to the possession of that Glory. Our being called to an eternal Glory, imports, That a spiritual life which is eternal, is begun in our Souls; and that by being Called we are put into an eternal right of Glory. The Reason of it, because he is the God of all Grace who calls us unto this Glory. What his Glory implies: That it is a certain Engagement on God's part, that he will carry us through all temptations and difficulties unto it. 281

Chap. 7. The security that Jesus Christ gives us, as well as God the Father, to assure our Faith, that we shall be strengthened, and inabled to persevere. God is a God of all Grace to us by Jesus Christ; all his Acts of Grace towards us, are in and through him. He elected us at first, and then loved us only, as considered in him. He loved and chose him for himself, and us for his sake. God having thus laid Christ as the Medium, or rather, as the Foundation of his Grace, it is a sure ground of its continuance to us. All his purposes of Grace were made in him. All his Promises of Grace are established and performed in and through him. 297

Chap. 8. What security the consideration of Christ's Person, his Relation to us, and Office for us, affords to our Faith, that we shall be strengthned to persevere unto the End. As he is Christ our Head, we are elected in him to all those benefits of Grace which were above the dues of Creation. As those benefits had no dependence on the Fall, Christ considered as our Head, was a sufficient ground for God's bestowing them upon us in Election; viewed as we stood in that Relation to him, as he is our Head, God loves us in him, and with the same love he does him, and therefore he will love love us unchangeably, and never cease so to do. As Christ is Jesus a Saviour, our first Calling into Grace, and our continuance and perseverance in it, is the purchase of his Blood. Supplies of Grace and Strength for him to give us Ability to strengthen us against Temptations and deliverance out of them is the price of his Sufferings. 304

Sect. The second Head proposed was the Consideration of Christ's Person, Relation to us, and Office for us, [by Jesus Christ:] And see what they will afford for Consolation and Security herein. ibid.

Chap. 9. The engagements of Christ, and his interest, to preserve us, which arise from his having actually called us. In our Calling he owned us, and took charge of us, as a Trust committed to him by the Father. The thing for which we are apprehended of Christ in our Calling, is, that he might give forth unto us, our whole design'd portion of Grace and Glory, which was allotted to us in Election, and purchased by him upon the Cross. Phil. 3. 12,13,14. explained. Christ by Calling us, secures us in safe Custody, and by a strong Guard: From the time of a Man's Calling, Christ begins actually to intercede for him, and then takes him into his Prayers, as well as into his Cares. 316

Chap. 10. The engagement on Christ's part for our preservation, that ariseth from his interest in that glory we are by him called into. That it is his glory, as he is our Head, and communicated to us only, as we are his Members, and therefore he is the first and grand Proprietary of of it. This glory is above the natural dues of Creation, and therefore we must be rais'd up into it by another superiour right. The Glory of the immediate vision of God, was only the natural due and right of Christ God-man. We have our right to it, and the participation of it, only by virtue of our relation to Christ; as it is his glory, he is engaged to bring us to it, and maintain us in it. This glory is his, because he bought it with a price; and he would lose his purchase, if we did not come at last to the enjoyment of it. He hath taken possession of this glory for us, and therefore will take effectual care, that we be not defrauded of it. His glory is enlarged and greatned by the bringing us to glory, whom he hath thus called unto it; and therefore since his own Interest is so much concerned, he will sufficiently look to it, to preserve and bring us safe to Heaven. 324

Chap. 11. The engagement of God and Christ by Promise for the carrying on his truly called Ones through all Temptations unto eternal Glory. These Promises of perfecting, stablishing, strenthening, settling, as to the time of their Accomplishment, have not only respect to their gradual performance in us here in this life, but also to our being consummated in the Life Eternal to come. 330

Chap. 12. Whether these four words, perfect, stablish, strengthen, settle you, intend one and the same in a various manner of expression, or whether they have severally a peculiar import answering particularly to Temptations of a differing sort to which we are obnoxious. The meaning of the word Perfect explained: Sometimes it is understood of the compleat accomplishment of a work, when applyed to the work of Grace, as here it denotes the supplying or making up of imperfections and wants: And that it imports either the adding further degrees of perfection unto the imperfect work of Grace first begun in us; or it reaches the Case of lapsed Christians, and signifies their being recovered and restored again. That there are such Cases of Backsliding, which is not a total Apostacy. To make such faln Souls, is to repair what was torn and broken in them by their sin. Those who fall into grosser sins are made perfect again by a new Conversion. 338

Chap. 13. That this promise of perfecting extends to another case of decayed Christians, who decline from their first love, & good works: That even in them God will restore and revive the principles of spiritual life, which languishes and is dying, This proved by comparing Heb. 13, 20, 21. with Pet. 5. 10. 348

Ch. 14. What sufferings we must necessarily undergo, before that God settles and strengthens us in any eminent manner. The Reasons why we must pass

pass through such sufferings, before we are perfected. The example of our saviour. The wise appointment of God, who has so determined it to be for the trial of our grace, and to glorifie his own grace the more in strengthning, recovering, and delivering us. What encouragements we may draw even from this, necessity of our suffering. 357

Ch. 15. The actual performance of those Promises of persecting, stablishing, strengthning, setling us. The manner and means whereby God preserves us, and carries us on to persevere unto the end. His particular care over us, how expressed in Scripture, by the vigilancy of his eye in all our ways; by accompanying us with his presence; by his guarding us in safety; by his having us always in remembrance. What it is concerning us, that his care is most exercised about. His principal care is of our souls: How it is that he preserves them in Life. 368

Ch. 16. That the decrees of God in Election are of such sure efficacy, that we may be ascertain'd of their infallible performance. That nothing can hinder or frustrate their success in working, because God works all things according to the Counsel of his own Will. What assurances we have, that his good purposes concerning us shall be invincibly accomplished, both from the nature of Election decrees, and the interest which the Attributes of God have in the performance of them. 378

BOOK V.

ELection, in the ordinary course of it, runs in a Line of Succession from believing Parents to their Posterity. The Covenant of Grace is entailed on the Children of Believers. God most usually makes such his choice. What Judgment we are thereupon to have of them. 385

Ch. 1. The Children of godly Parents called the Inheritance of the Lord, because he is the owner of them, as his elect & chosen, among whom his Possessions and his peculiar People lie. The derivation of the Covenant of Grace from their Fathers unto them, proved by the Covenant made to Abraham, as it was a Family Covenant. The difference between his Priviledge herein, and ours under the Gospel. ibid.

Chap. 2. That this Covenant is derived unto the Churches of the Gentiles, in a conformity to the Jews priviledge as they were a Church. 392

Ch. 3. Acomparing 1 Cor. 7. 14. with the forecited Rom. 11. 16. 398

Ch. 4. A larger Explication of 1 Cor. 7. 14. 400

Ch. 5. Reasons drawn out of that foregoing Exposition of 1 Cor. 7. 14. That the Holiness there attributed to Believers Children is true, and real, Evangelical holiness. Other Interpretations refuted. 414

Ch. 6. That two things are intended in that Text of 1 Cor. 7. 14. What God's thoughts are of Believers Children, and the Rule by which he would have us to judge of them. What is the Judgment we are to have of the Children of godly Parents upon this Declaration of God concerning them, that they are holy. To what extent this Proposition is to be amplyfied: That it is not meant universally of all, but indefinitely of some only, though the greater number. What agreement and harmony there is between our Judgment of the holiness of Believers Children, and what in reality of the event proves true concerning them. 420

Ch. 7. That God orders his Election so, as to run in a successive Line from godly Parents to their Children, does not infringe the freedom of Election-Grace. That this his way of acting is consonant to all the Principles of right Reason, and agreeable with his other Proceedings. The admirable harmony which appears in all his dispensations towards men. How comly a proportion there is in this truth, that God should draw his Election and Series of visible Saints out of the Loins of those who are such themselves, rather than others of Mankind; made apparent by a comparison of it with other dispensations of Free Grace. 432

Ch. 8. The Uses of the preceeding Doctrine. What in general we all may be instructed from it, to understand how largely God extends his Acts of grace and favour. The Uses which the Children of godly Parents are to make of this Doctrine. What Obligation is upon them to be holy indeed. What encouragement they have to believe. The Uses which belong to the Parents of such Children. What their Duty is to God, and what their Carriage ought to be toward such their Children. 442

OF ELECTION.

BOOK I.

Wherein is proved the Necessity of an Election Grace, if any of the Rational Creatures be certainly saved: And that God hath made an Election of some out of pure Grace, prov'd by the Event, out of the Stories of all Times, throughout the Old and New Testament.

CHAP. I.

The Necessity of an Election, or Super-creation Grace, if either Angels or Men, (whether fall'n or unfall'n) be certainly and securely Saved.

BY the Necessity of an Election, I mean not, as if God had been necessitated thereunto; for Nothing with Him, is more free; and, that it is termed an Election of Grace, sufficiently testifies it: But, the Necessity lay in respect of the Eternal Salvation of either Angels, or Men. 1.

Nor Secondly, do I mean, as if it must have been an Act of Election understanding it, a Calling forth but of some Persons only: For, that way of Salvation, which is the Grace it self, God might have saved all, of either sort by; and not have made an Election of it, that is, of some, although he was pleased so to do. 'Tis true indeed, in making an Election but of some the freeness of God's Grace was the more manifested; that is, in the point of the freedom of it: And that, de facto, there was such an Election but of some, both Angels and Men, I shall after shew: But the Dint of my present Asser- 2.

Book I.

tion, whilst yet I term it Election of Grace, because de facto so it was) lies in this; That, take the Substance of that Grace it self, which Election hath chalked out as the way of Salvation thereby; and that is it I now alone affirm to have been necessary; I add [securely] to bring to Salvation both Angels and Men: And my Assertion issues in this; That not any One of his Creatures were, or had been eternally and effectually saved (that is, none of his understanding Rational Creatures) without such a Grace as Election hath pitch't upon. No; not One of either sort; neither Angels nor Men, as de facto, it appeared.

God, though he made Angels and Men in a state of perfect Holiness, able to stand with the innate pondus, or poise and byas of Holiness, joyned with that concurrence or assistance of Gods, that did accompany it: Yet that assistance being then suited to the Laws and Dues of Creation meerly; that is, look what Preservation in that state a Creature could challenge by the Covenant of Creation, as a Due from God as his Creator, so far forth there was an assistance did accompany that Holiness; and therefore was but such an assistance as was proportion'd to that present state, whereby the Will of the Creature had a power to continue, if he would use that assistance, and those Creation Powers and Principles, as he ought, so as it was every way such as the Creature could not, but at any time (till the Act of falling) say, I find my self able to stand if I will: But so as the keeping of this holiness with that assistance, was committed to the Free-will of Man, as likewise of Angels, which at the best was a mutable slippery thing, fickle and changeable. To make instance in the Angels, by and from the Example of whom it is that I make forth this necessity of Election for the Creature to be saved. In Job 4. 18. Behold, he puts no trust in his Servants, and the Angels he chargeth with folly. We have the like in Chap. 15. vers. 15. He putteth no trust in his Saints. The Angels were perfectly holy, but if he would give them no other assistance but what was their due from Creation, there was no trust to be put in them, or their standing. If they were holy to day, they might sin to morrow. If God but sent them of an Errand down into this World, they might sin before they came up again. The folly there was their mutability; and to be carried on unchangeably to Eternity, without the hazard and danger of Miscarriage, was beyond the due of Creation, which was their first Creation Covenant they all appeared afore God in, and therefore immutably to have kept them, had been Grace, which must flow from another Well-head and Original, than the pure Covenant of Works or of Creation; and that can be no other than Grace. And the indispensible Ground, why the Creature, by the Law and Covenant of Creation, should be thus dealt with as aforesaid, and so be left to a mutability, is, That it is only proper unto God, and that essentially, not to be subject to Change: And it was fit this Difference betwixt God's being, and the being of the Creature (which it had by Creation) should be thus stated by the Creation Law, as purely it came out of God's hand; and so, as that if God would impart the Image of his Immutability of Holiness to any, and fix them in it, it might appear to be of Grace. This is Grace, and Grace to the Angels themselves. In James 1. 13. you have it, That it is God only that is not tempted with evil; nor can be tempted. The Creature, by what from the Law of Creation they have upon the terms of Creatureship, may be tempted to sin, and not only so, but fall and be lost, and then never to be able to recover it self again.

This being our Creation state, God foresaw that if all of these his Creatures were left to the Conduct of their Wills, assisted but only with these Creation helps, that they were in a continual hazard of falling, and that they would all fall at one time or another, one after the other; he therefore made an Election of Grace to put all out of hazard in some, and if you will not see the truth of it through the Doctrine, you may view it by Experience, for it fell out (as to their Fall, both of Angels and of Men). Jude tells you, there was a first Estate in which the Angels were created, but they fell from it; and the rest would have done so too, at one time or another, (for they were all made of the same Metal) if they had been left to the mutability of their Wills. It proved true of Men. Take Adam and Evah their Wills, they were perfectly holy, and yet what became of those two stout Wills? If but one of them indeed had fall'n, you would have thought the other might have been immutable: But you may see they both fell; and so it was experimented they were mutable: And that all their Children they should have put forth were such, and would at one time have fall'n as these have done, who were all of Mankind that were then in the World. Well, God foresaw all would be a going, there is a happy word in the Text, Rom. 11. ἐλεῖμμα, he made a reserve of some before the World was, he laid his hand upon them; nay, said he, I will have a remnant; I'le have some. He made a reserve, when he foresaw all would, or might in the end be lost; and that Reserve was made by Election: It was Election it self; the Apostle interprets that word, vers. 5. The great God had reason (shall I say, or rather that his infinite Grace joyned with Wisdom) to have something out of All what he had made (for whom are all things) that should live with him, be happy in him, blessed of him, that might Eternally bless him again: And accordingly he kept some of the Angels, and caused them to abide with him, and ordained some of Men, though when fall'n, who should return to him again: And this was done by Election, which is that other Well-head of all Super-creation or Super-natural Grace, opposed to that of Creation-Holiness, and Assistance. Chap. 1.

You read of the Angels who stood, 1 Tim. 5. 21. that they are called the Elect Angels: You read elsewhere that they are called the holy Angels, for they never sinned; and they had as great an Holiness as any Creature could be capable of by Creation. Also they excel in strength, and so their Holiness was a strong Holiness. But was it that which kept them? No; you heard God could not trust them in the hands of their own Wills; therefore it was that they were Elect Angels, that kept them. In that new super added Title, you read the Grace of God express'd as that which kept them in that Holiness, and so fixt them.

Now further, Consider that where Election is, there is Grace; whether the Creature be fall'n or not fall'n, its called the Election of Grace, and whatsoever is above the Dues of Creation, and the Rules thereof, is Grace, and as truly such as that which is called Mercy, as shews to a Sinner or Creature actually fallen, is called Grace. Grace and Works, we read in the Words of Rom. 11. 6. are so opposed, as those which intermingle not. The Priviledges of Grace are Eternally separated by an Eternal Law. If a thing be of Grace, it is no more of Works; and if of Works, it is no more of Grace. It was not therefore their Creation Holiness fixed them, for that was Works, both in the Principle and in the Assistance of it. Indeed, without their Holiness they had not stood; but what was it fixt their Holiness but Grace? To ascribe their standing unto their own Holiness, is to found a Priviledge of Grace upon Works; Grace were no more Grace, if that took place. A perfect Holiness, and a stronger Holiness that Mans was their due by Creation; but to be kept by so strong an assistance as should effectually fix their Wills and for ever after keep them so, this was above the ordinary Creation Law, and so above the Law of works. Had the evil Angels had such a prevalent Super-creation assistance, they had not fallen: And therefore it must be Super-creation Grace kept those other. And all Grace that saves, is from Election; And Election is the Fountain of such a gracious Stream, the Chanel of which should run on to Eternity without failure or drying up, as this in them did and doth. Election and Grace are never to be served; the Angels then were saved by it, and not any one Angel, but those who were elect, were saved: For all that stood are called Elect. And on the contrary, all of them that were Elect were saved, and none miscarried. The Election obtained it amongst them. And you know what became of the Rest. Thus you see what made the difference even amongst them also. O! let us therefore adore God for his Election Grace, as without which none of his Creatures had infallibly been saved. Thus much for a Demonstration of this taken from the Angels.

Book I. For the Case of Mankind now they are fall'n, if God had not made an Election among them, What would have become of them, if it were so with Angels that never sinned? O Brethren, how much more with filthy Man! As Job. 15. 15, 16. Behold, he putteth no trust in his Saints; yea, the Heavens are not clean in his sight. How much more abominable and filthy is Man, which drinketh iniquity like Water? And we may argue in this Point, as he doth there in that other. If not the Angels, not one of them, were saved from the ruins of their Nature, but by Election, then surely not Man fallen. If Election were necessary but for their confirmation in Holiness, as our Divines say, (though I think there is a farther Priviledge joyned with it) then how much more for Man that was irreparably fall'n (as by himself) and that needed the whole of Salvation for substance and continuance therein also? What a blessed provision did God make, to make an Election! There is a Scripture that hath often affected my heart, Rom. 9. 29. As Esaias said before (saith Paul out of him,) Except the Lord of Sabbath had left us a Seed, we had been like unto Sodom and Gomorrha. 'Tis spoken of Election he had discoursed of in that Chapter: And what is that Seed there? It is plainly a reserve, a Relict or Remnant. And that Speech in Rom. 11. 5. of a remnant according to the Election of Grace, is all one with that Seed there: For many passages in the 9th Chapter, and in this, hold a correspondence. O my Brethren! If God had not taken such a Remnant, not Israel only, but all Mankind had been like unto Sodom and Gomorrha. Not a Man, Woman, or Child in Sodom or Gomorrha were saved, but whom God took out, Lot and his Family. Therefore (say I) bless God for Election, we had been undone else, to a Man. And shall not this affect? O, despise not Election! Therein lies all your hope, that there is a Remnant shall infallibly be saved.

After this Narration of the Angels, suppose that the Case of us Men were Res integra, and that we were still in that happy Estate God at first created our first Parents, and us with him, and were you now all as holy as Adam was, (I will make that supposition) yet the Case of us was but the same for changeableness, and would have been the same in the Issue with that of the fall'n Angels, who are besides, the weaker Creatures of the two, and in that respect more subject to mutability: So as suppose Adam had stood by the assistance of the Powers vouchsafed him by the Covenant of Works, so long till he had put us forth an holy Seed, yet we must all have then personally stood upon our own single bottoms, which himself at first did stand (shall I say, or fall) upon; and so been in the same continual danger to drop away from God one after another. And as for that if he had stood, that both he and we should have been immutably confirmed in Grace, as the good Angels; there was no such promise made, either to him or us, under that his Covenant and State by Creation; for if there had, it must have been by Election-Grace superadded to the Covenant of Works, which in the Case of the Angels is said to be. And if so, then Promises proper to Election must be supposed made to Works of Creation and the Covenant thereof, and so Grace be brought into Works founded upon Works, which the Apostle in Rom. 11. 6. makes incompatible. And if by Grace, then is it no more of Works: Otherwise Grace is no more Grace. But if it be of Works, then it is no more Grace, otherwise Work is no more work.

But I will make this further Supposition, That if we in that State had heard that there was an Election of Grace, such as the holy Angels stood by, & whether would you have stuck and betook your self unto? Creation-Holiness barely, with the mutability of it; or Election of Grace, for the way of your Eternal Salvation? Were I as perfect as Adam, I promise you I would for my part, betake my self to that of Election, that super-creation Priviledge, than adventure my Eternal Condition in any Free-will Holiness, were it never so perfect.

Well! But we all with his Holiness soon miscarried, we are irrecoverably (as of our selves) fall'n by it; yet there is a phancy that hath possest the minds of Men, and hath run down throughout all ages of the World, nothing can root out or dispossess Men of it, neither constant experience, nor the view of the ruines of the Generality of Mankind that have perished by it: And it is this, that if God doth set up the Will and heart of Man by furnishing it with new helps and assistances, vamp or recruit this old degenerate frame with fresh and new supplies, that then their Wills may make a Second hopeful venture to obtain, although no such Election-Grace (as our Doctrine sets forth) should be superadded nor strike in, to work the Will and Deed it self overcomingly on their hearts, or undertake for them invincibly so to werk. And the Use as to this respect which they make, is, That Christ should have been 1. Intended (as a Second Adam) for he was to purchase the pardon of Sins. 2. To purchase helps for all. 3. And to give Grace and Assistance so far as they may, if they will use those helps well, with promise that if they do, and by these come to believe and be converted, Then 4. Gods Electing Grace comes upon them, and then it is he chooseth them to Eternal life upon the intuition of this good usage of their Wills; Election only follows hereupon, and hath no influence at all afore their Wills have cast it thus, if God would but set up the will and heart of Man anew, vamp this old worn and degenerate frame, assist it and furnish it with New helps and Advantages. Chap. 1.

And thus Men will needs wilfully perish a second time by venturing to Sea again in that rotten leaking old Vessel, their own free Wills, in which and by which they Shipwrackt so miserably once afore, when they had wind and tide, and a new Vessel strong and tite, and well built with all other advantages to have preserved her: But this their Will being Pilot, so Steered as all was cast away; and yet they will adventure to Sea again therein. Adam's Will had besides the concurrence of Gods assistance (such as was sufficient) an inward principle of habitual and inherent Holiness, the Image of God as a vital principle of Motion within him, whereby not only to be able to Act holily, but which also as a weight or pondus, did sway and incline his Will to Act holily, even as sin dwelling in us, doth as a weight hung on, incline us now to evil.

But alas! There is now that vast difference and disadvantage in our Case, beyond, infinitely beyond, what was in his as to these respects——That instead of a perfect holiness possessing and inclining the will and mind, there is no such vital habitual principle in our Hearts left; Nay an utter disability unto what is Spiritual, holy and good; Yea, contrary Enmity and opposition there is unto holiness in truth, as the Apostle calls it. Men err, not knowing the Power of Original sin, nor the depth of corruption that is in their own Hearts. The Will of Man now is the Prime and proper Seat of sin, and the Throne thereof is seated therein. And as no Prince's Will in full and Actual possession of Regal Power can be brought by ordinary or any perswasions to be willing, much less to be indifferent to be Dethroned, so nor may we think that sin in our Wills, will upon easy Terms lay down its Crown. The flesh is enmity to God, and is not subject to the law of God, nor indeed can be, says the Apostle. The will and mind and whole heart of Man must first have that corruption which is in possession dethroned from its Dominion, and then the same vital Habitual Principle of inherent Holiness created in it anew. A new heart and a new spirit must be given it, and a heart of stone taken away (whereof with the affections, the will is the subject, as the Reyns are of the other stone in our bodies). The will and affections are the Seat of this Spiritual Stone, and as uncapable to act one holy Act, as the Stone in the Kidney is to act an action of life or vital motion. They must be made an Heart of flesh that hath a new life and sense, &c. given it, and thereby that which must be the Cause and Subject of any one the Least such living operation, otherwise you may as well gather Grapes of thorns, and figs of thistles, as good fruit of a corrupt tree. Mat. 7. 16, 17. The tree must therefore be made good ere the fruit can be good, as Christ (the Root) hath told us. Matt. 12. 33. Either make the tree good, and his fruit good, or else make the tree corrupt, and his fruit corrupt: For the tree is known by his fruit. And what are all those helps they talk of, either that τὸ γνωστὸν τοῦ θεοῦ that light of God from the works of Creation which God gave to Heathens, of himself, Rom. 1. Or the light of Conscience, of the Law, Rom. 2. and a Natural devotion suited to it in the will and affection whereby

Men

Book V. Men have a Reverence and Addiction to a Deity accompanied with impressions of moral honesty (which we call vertue) and let these be impregnated with the light of the Law and Gospel, delivered with all the signs with which God once did enforce the Law, and Christ the Gospel; Yet the corrupt Will will inwardly and habitually be a corrupt Will still. And though all these helps with the assistance from God they speak of, may stir and affect it, yet they will never be able to write the holy and spiritual Law in the Heart in new and living Characters and dispositions conformable and suitable unto the inward holiness of it, unless God put forth an Omnipotent Power and efficacy to change it. All the helps they speak of, they are all short and deficient; Helpers of no value, as in Job. 30. 13. A Refiner or Chymist may as soon by his common Earthly fire with the mixtures and Arts he useth sublimate a Clod of Earth or a Globe of Brass into a Star, such as are in Heaven, as these helps and the use of them all can take away the innate corruption of the Will, and make it spiritual, or endow it with a spiritual life; for nothing works above the Sphere of its Activity. Those helps elevated with the aforesaid light of the Law and Gospel, and enforced with outward signs and wonders to the utmost, and accompanied with a striving Power of the Holy Ghost, may wonderfully stir and affect and demulce this Will of Man, but if God do not over and above endow it with a new Principle of inherent holiness and workmanship created to good works, it will be still utterly unable to bring forth one Act that is pleasing to the holy God.

This truth was experimented both under the Law and Gospel. The Jews at Sinah had Gods voice uttering the Law to them. You have the manner of it both in Exodus, and in brief recapitulated by Moses, Deut. 5. from v. 22. to v. 29. These words the Lord spake unto all your assembly in the Mount out of the midst of the fire, of the Cloud, and of the thick darkness, with a great voice, and added no more; And he wrote them in two Tables of Stone and delivered them unto me. And it came to pass when ye heard the voice out of the midst of the darkness (for the Mountain did burn with fire) that ye came near unto me even all the heads of the Tribes and Elders. And ye said, Behold, the Lord our God hath shewed us his Glory and his greatness, and we have heard his voice out of the midst of the fire: We have seen this day that God doth talk with Man, and he liveth. Now therefore why should we die? for this great fire will consume us; if we hear the voice of our God any more, then we shall die. For who is there of all flesh that hath heard the voice of the living God speaking out of the midst of the fire (as we have) and lived? Go thou near and hear all that the Lord our God shall say; and speak thou unto us all that the Lord our God shall speak unto thee, and we will hear it and do it. And the Lord heard the voice of your words, when ye spake unto me; and the Lord said unto me I have heard the voice of the words of this people, which they have spoken unto thee: They have well said all that they have spoken. And yet all this did not change the Will, nor give the generality of that people an Heart Spiritually to obey, for in the next words, v. 28, 29. God himself doth thereupon make this Remark upon it; O that there were such an heart in them, that they would fear me, and keep all my commandments alwaies, that it might be well with them, and with their Children for ever.

And again, at last, Deut. 29. 2, 3, 4. And Moses called unto all Israel, and said unto them, Ye have seen all that the Lord did before your eyes in the Land of Egypt unto Pharaoh, and unto all his Servants, and unto all his Land; The great temptations which thine eyes have seen, the Signs and those great Miracles. Yet the Lord hath not given you a heart to perceive, and eyes to see, and ears to hear unto this day. Not their Wills only remained as they were, but they had not Understandings enlightned with Spiritual light, spiritually to discern and perceive the Holiness in Truth that was therein.

The Case and Condition of the whole World I gave instance in afore. They had all those helps, with the advantages of time and improvement of them, living so many years. They had also the Spirit of God striving with them, Gen. 6. 3. And the Righteousness of the Gospel preached with Power, from the Assistance and Concurrence of the Divinity of Christ, appearing in it with Power, of whom yet Peter, by the Holy Ghost, declares, 1 Pet. 3. Christ (says he) being put to death in the Flesh, but quickned by the Spirit: (namely of his Godhead) v. 19. By which also (that Spirit namely) he went and preached to the Spirits in Prison; (that is, that are now in Hell) which sometimes in the days of Noah were disobedient unto that Noah's preaching the Gospel to them, with which Christ's Spirit had gone forth and preach'd in and by Noah to them. And yet with all these helps of Free-will Grace (as we may call it) they remained flesh, or unregenerate and ungodly, as Moses in Gen. 6. and the same Peter tells us, yea, an whole world of ungodly ones, 2 Pet. 2. 5. and but one Noah with his Family were saved: And how came that to pass? But as God says of him, Noah hath found Grace in my sight: Answerable unto, By Grace you are saved, as the Apostle to the Elect Ephesians, Chap. 1, 4, 5. compared with Chap. 2, 4, 5. whilst the World round about them continued dead in trespasses and in sins (with all their helps, that could not quicken them) Ephes. 2. 1, 2, 3, 4. I might go over the Instances in Christ's and the Apostles times, wherein you would see the same Issue; but let these suffice. Chap. 1.

Only because some may perhaps enquire, That if the Wills and Affections of these Jews were really affected and stirred, then they had the power to will and to turn; and wherein were these helps defective then, and not sufficient?

The Answer is, That they still wanted a Power spiritually to will and discern, as hath been said. Their Wills remained still in their native Corruption, and had not new inherent habitual Power infused into them, without which they could not will any one Act truly good. This habitual change of heart is that new heart which God complained was wanting, even whilst, and in the midst of their being so affected. The Will of Man is, as was said, the proper Seat of Sin; and the strength of that Sin, that is therein seated, is the Predominancy of Self-love; and that Self-love remaining in its Predominancy, is that which the Scriptures do term Flesh, as well as any other Lust. And this Self in the Will remaining still in its Predominancy (as it doth untill a new Principle of Holiness towards God chiefly be infused) may be affected with many things, both in Law and Gospel: And from out of that Principle so affected and stirred, Man's Will may use those helps and assistances, and act accordingly; and so the Issue falls as it did afore; that the Heart and Will remaining a Thorn as afore, and not turned into a Fig-tree, you cannot gather Figs on it. There is a work, and 'tis the highest work, of the Word and Gospel, that is short of Saving; 'tis a work accompanying the Word and Spirit, which greatly affects the Heart, so as to suffer Persecution, and yet is short of a Saving work, or of the Heart its being made the good Ground, and an honest Heart: 'Tis the thorny Ground, as Christ in the Parable hath told us, that though the Word took root in it, yet it changed not the Thorns, but was the Thorny Ground still; and so the heart remaining inwardly such, is therefore in all it brings forth, plainly said to be unfruitful: Mark. 4. 19. And the Cares of the World, and the deceitfulness of Riches, and the Lusts of other things entring in, choak the Word, and it becometh unfruitful: Yea, Verse 7. to yield no fruit. Why? For all actings of the Heart, though about things spiritual, that are only for a Man's self, are said to be no fruit to God; Hosea 10. 1. Israel is an empty Vine, that bringeth forth fruit to it self; which whilst it doth only for and to it self, self-love then is said to continue in its Predominancy. And it is said, that Regeneration is not of the will of the Flesh, John 1. 13. that is of the Will still remaining Flesh, which yet it is, though a Man be never so much affected with what the Word delivers, if his Will and Affection be moved chiefly or only by what affects Self-love, without having an higher Principle ingenerated or begotten in it by Election-Grace: And therefore no wonder if the Apostle says, It is not of him that runs, or him that wills; for Mens Wills may be greatly moved, and incited unto a running, which is the swiftest Motion, and yet be deficient of Regeneration. So that to conclude,

One

Book I. One of the Foundation Causes of this Error, doting on this Free-will Grace, is, That whilst they imagine such helps and assistances as they define may give a Posse, a Power to Turn, &c. leaving it to the Will to exist the Act: They withall do suppose the Will to remain a Principle in it self, as it were inclinable in it self unto Spiritual good, and able to move to good, if its Shackles were once off, and that the knowledge of God and the Gospel, doth but once visit it, and come in, and that the Spirit presents the Motives thereof to it, in a way of perswasion, &c. O! But I demand who, or what shall create a new Principle of Holiness, a new Spirit in the Will, and take the Heart of Stone out of it? Until which be done, the Will is the most averse Principle, and fullest of Enmity, both to God and his Law, in the spiritualness and true holiness of them, and cannot rise or act (though never so much otherwise affected) beyond the Sphere of its own inward Activity, as no Creature else we see can do: As a Stone will not ascend upward, but whilst it is moved by force, and some outward hand that throws it out, for it hath not a natural Principle thereto, as Fire hath. But this is not all that goes unto Calling, to give a new Spirit of habitual Holiness, and then assist it in acting, but so far as Adam's Holiness was assisted by the Law of Creation (and that it is the most which the highest of Free-willers do desire of God to be out of his Grace assisted withal). Nor are these all that the Omnipotent Power of God is laid forth upon in our Calling, and afterwards in keeping us; but there is an exceeding greatness of Power concurs to every Act or Work that is good and holy all along, even the same that wrought in Christ his rising from the dead, according to that, Ephes. 1. 19, 20. And what is the exceeding greatness of his Power to us-ward who believe, according to the working of his mighty Power: Which he wrought in Christ when he raised him from the dead, and set him at his own right hand in the heavenly places, &c. 'Tis not such an Assistance only as Adam had, but as Christ had in raising from the Dead. A Principle of Holiness (though it be a Disposition and Inclination to Holiness) may and doth lye dead, and besides, is clogged and hindred in its Motion, with a weight of sin that is contrary to it in us. Read Rom. 7. 23, 24. If Electing Grace strikes not in with an Omnipotent Sweetness (as Austin's word is) or an invincible secret Power (for by that place now quoted, the Saints are not always sensible of the greatness of it) that draws this Will and its Principle of Holiness into Act. And upon the Spirits drawing forth, and carrying on the Actings of Holiness in us, it is, that Austin, and Jansenius, out of him, do set the Crown, as that which is the compleat eminency of Efficacious Grace: For since the fall, all other helps are short of causing us to Act, though Holiness be dwelling in us without effecting Power. The Promise therefore is not only to give a New Heart, as in Ezek. 36. 26. A new Heart also will I give you, and a New Spirit will I put within you, and I will take away the Stony-heart out of your Flesh, and I will give you a heart of Flesh. But it further follows, Vers. 27. And I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my Statutes, and ye shall keep my Judgments, and do them: That is, I will work in you, the Act it self also, even the Will and the Deed.

Now the giving of this New Heart, &c. (in which doth consist the mark of the true inward Power) is the Proper Fruit of Election-Grace, and of that alone, with difference from what this Free-will Grace, as it is stated by these Men, doth suppose necessary; and the Covenant of Grace (which is the Transcript of Election-Decrees indefinitely expressed) runs in those Terms, a New Heart will I give you, and a New Spirit &c. Ezek. 36. 26. And thereupon also it is, that Election-Grace doth always infallibly and invincibly, at one time or another, work this by Effectual Calling in those it hath predestinated, as many Scriptures shew; As Rom. 8. 28, 30. And we know that all things work together for good, to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose. Moreover, whom he did predestinate, them he also called: And whom he called, them he also justified: And whom he justified, them he also glorified: And in Rom. 9. in the Case of Jacob, he speaks thus, That the purpose of God according to the Election might Stand, not of works: (wrought by Free-will) but of him that calleth. Which shews that God, having from Everlasting, first Elected, doth manifest the firmness of that his purpose to save by Effectual Calling, as he did in Jacob, by Virtue of Election. The same you have also confirmed towards the conclusion of his Discourse about Election, in the same Chapter ——Having just afore said, Vers. 23. That he might make known the riches of his Glory on the Vessels of Mercy, which he had afore prepared unto Glory. He immediately subjoyns, as adequate thereto, Vers. 24. Even [us] whom he hath called, not of the Jews only, but also of the Gentiles. As if he had said, even as whom he hath thus ordained by Electing Mercy, to make known the riches of his Glory upon, are those that are Called, and likewise those that shall be. So as let no man think that when we say, The Election hath obtained it, that we should mean, That the Elect by Election only, without an effectual Work of Calling, doth obtain. No; none that are grown up to years of Knowledge but God Calleth if he hath Elected them: And by Calling, endows them with a New Heart, and a New Spirit, (as hath been spoken). Chap. 1.

Also understand between, that when the Apostle speaks of Election Grace, Rom. 11. 6. we confine it not to those purposes of Grace in God's mind from Everlasting, but take in that Operative Grace in Calling, as comprehended under it, the whole Grace in Calling us is that Election Grace in the Text; for Election set it awork, and did design it. And the same Election Grace is that which runs along, and is immediately at the head of Calling, &c. it is the same Grace. The one is the Grace of purposing, as it is abstractly considered in the Decree and Intention: The other in Calling is the Grace of Execution. My Conclusion from all this therefore is, That we the fall'n Sons of Men, would see and be convinced of the necessity of this Election Grace, so far beyond what the Draught of their Free-will Grace sets forth, as which if God had not peremptorily resolved in his purposes to put forth to work in us, to save those of Mankind whom he chose; or if less than this, not any of Mankind had obtained: But now the Election, through the Operation of this Grace, hath and doth obtain Salvation to a Man. And do you in Reason consider, that there being but those two ways to obtain Salvation by, ever started or pretended unto by the Sons of Men; And all being reducible to one of these two, as in the fore-cited Text, Rom. 11. 6. you see Works (the Head and Principle of which is Man's Will, acting in and by it self) and Election Grace, divide them into these two, and do but set them in opposition one to t'other, as the Scriptures likewise throughout: Both which the Apostle hath sum'd up in that short Sentence, It is not of him that runs, nor of him that wills, but of God who sheweth mercy. Namely, the true and right Act of willing and running by an Election Grace, (And Election Grace is his Argument there in hand.) round about, and afore, and after. For otherwise, without running and willing, no man is saved, as in Phil. 3. 12, 13. Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect: But I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus. Brethren, I count not my self to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before. Our Salvation is wrought out by God's giving the Will and the Deed. If then the first hath fail'd them that have betaken themselves unto it, and never no man was yet saved by it (as hath been already declared) not could be for the reasons aforesaid, and that the Scriptures still cry, and peremptorily, Not by Works, and then positively and conclusively, By being Called with an holy Calling, according to his purpose and Grace given us in CHRIST Jesus before the World begun. Then let us not only be convinced, but further Adore and Bless God for this Election Grace, without which also Christ had died in vain, and not saved a man, and been in Heaven alone, to lament that he had come short in this Work, by having omitted to put in one Clause into his Covenant in dying; viz. That besides his purchase of helps, whereby men might be saved if they would, he had not further purchased an invincible overcoming of their Wills for whom he died, but had left to the Will of Man it self, to use or not to use those, according to the pleasure of their Wills, and had not meritoriously also procured of God efficaciously to work the Will and the Deed, according to his good pleasure. And so Christ should be left to satisfie himself with this Relief, That he had done his part, but the Obstructions lay in man's Will, that would not put forth the Act of Willing, though he had given them sufficiency of helps to do it. Yea, God himself must have suspended, and have forborn his deerest delight and highest first Blessing, as Ephes. 1. 4, 5. viz. The exercise of his Electing Grace, according to the good pleasure of his Will towards any, until man's Will had first used those helps well, and put it self forth into willing out of its Liberty to Act, or not to Act—— And so all Electing Grace might have been for ever frustrated. All which necessarily follows, That it might thus have been, upon the Doctrine of Free-will Grace, if the way thereof had been God's way for Salvation. And if that God should have kept to the Laws thereof, which men have set for the Salvation of themselves and others: But, O! blessed and thrice blessed be he, the God of all Grace, who foreseeing all this peremptorily, struck in with an Election Grace, whereby to be sure he would save some, when he had afore by Election given to Christ, who a few hours afore his death, professeth to die for all that God gave him, John 17.

Use. Now then we may enter a just complaint against the World, that although Election Grace is thus Necessary unto Salvation, yet all the thanks God hath from the unthankfull Sons of Men, ignorant of their own interest, and the ways of God, is, for him to be quarrel'd at for this his Election, in that he took not all, as well as some; (for in so much as they quarrel with those that hold it, they quarrel with God himself therein, Even as Christ said, In that ye did it to those, ye did it unto me,) That whereas God before the fall was Free of any Obligations unto the Creature, but those by the Laws of Creation, which he exactly performed; and yet notwithstanding man fell, and whereas by the fall he was absolutely quit and discharged of all Obligations to Men by the Forfeitures of the Dues and Assistances, by all the Laws of God, due to them; Yea and on the Contrary, was by his Justice provoked to damn them, that it had been infinite Grace to save, though but one Man, yet these would impose upon him a necessity to give forth a Common Grace, and that he should propose upon Free-will Terms to save all, or else with them, it is not Grace to Mankind, nor worth the name of it: So zealous are they in pretence for their own Nature. Whereas on the Contrary according to their draught of what is their Common Grace, when all is Summed up, and it comes unto the event, it would not save a Man: Corruption in Man is so strong, and their assisting Grace which they propose, is so weak. I do not say that those that hold that way of Free-will Grace, none of them are saved; but this I say if God should deal with them, but only according to their own Model and Draught, to the Measure and Proportion of that Grace & the Works of it, which they do Judge sufficient, that Work would not save a Man of them, if God should not out of Grace work beyond the extent of their Opinions. It is as if the Angels should have said, out of Zeal to their Common Natures, that because God has let go so many of us, that is our nature, to fall, whom he did not choose, but suffered to perish Eternally, that therefore we will not accept that Grace of Election by which we stand, and which was offered us at first for Confirmation of us.

But this is not all, (viz. this unthankfulness, but) there is an higher Encroachment made upon God, in their denying him this way of Salvation by Election, and an entrenchment made upon his Freedom (I do not now say, upon his Soveraignty.) They will not allow him the ordinary Priviledge of Choice, to and for himself, of whom he will. They would restrain him in what is Ordinary by the Priviledg of King's, yea, of all Men. They allow to every Man to choose their Wives, because they choose for themselves: To choose their Friends, because 'tis for themselves. The Persians allowed it as a due and just Maxim, What shall be done to the Man whom the King will Honour. They allowed to Kings to have their Friends and bosom Favorites, as Solomon had Zabud (1 Kings 4, 5.) that is called the King's Friend: Yet they quarrel with God, if he chooses Abraham to be his Friend, unless it be with a respective Decree, that he foresees he will be so through the Creatures Free-will. They Quarrel with him, that he chooſes the ſeed of Abraham his friend, as Iſaiah 41.8. But thou Iſrael art my ſervant, Jacob whom I have choſen, the ſeed of Abraham my friend, as rather then others; Wheras, it is in his Freedom to chooſe the Perſon, ſo 'tis in his Power to make that Perſon his Friend, and work him ſo to be. Chap. 1.

Yea, and in this they Quarrel with him, that he ſhould beſtow what is properly his own, which to give and communicate as a Man pleaſes, is an allowed Principle by all the Sons of Men. Now there is nothing ſo much his own as Election Grace; yea, and is purely his own, without any pretence of a dueneſs upon Creation or any the like Condition from the Creatures, for, 'tis the beſtowing himſelf. It is to admit them to ſee his Face Immediately, which Election Grace ends in, and Creation Grace reached not unto. Now the Promiſe made to Adam, 'tis to carry the will of a Creature on invincibly to love himſelf, who hath an overcoming ſweetneſs and goodneſs in himſelf, when he ſhall but manifeſt it to the, Creature invincibly to perſwade it Omni potente ſuavitate, as Auſtin's word is. This ſupercreation Grace is moſt properly his own Riches, and called the Riches of his Grace. To give Holineſs to Adam, was a Creation due: But to give Grace and Glory, which Election doth, this was a ſupercreation Grace to Adam, as it was to the Angels. Our Saviour Chriſt enforceth that Maxim that is ſo common amongſt men, Mat. 25. 15. Shall not a Man do what he will with his own? Now this Grace was ſo his own, as no Creature could lay claim to it. As in the City freedoms, one third of a Man's Eſtate, his Wife may claim; another third his Children; but they have reſerved a Liberty, that one third part is ſo their own, as to beſtow it where they pleaſe; and in this Caſe your ſelves would think much to be deprived of this Priviledge, or that Laws muſt be ſet you, how you muſt beſtow that third part you call, appropriatively, your own. Now is not Gods Grace Gods own? Why is it called free? As the Iſralite Limited the Holy one of Iſrael, ſo theſe would do the Gracious One of Iſrael.

Well, but the iniquity of theſe ſtay not here. For the ſake of whom is it that they do this? It were well, if out of ſuch a Commiſeration to the Nature of Mankind in General, as Paul profeſſes he had for his own Fleſh, That he was in continual ſorrow of heart for them. It were well, I ſay, if out of ſuch a Commiſeration, they did the like. And yet Paul wholly ſubmits it to Gods Will. But it is to ſet up againſt Gods Free-will Grace, (which is the Fountain of this Election) that other fluid, fickle, yea, and corrupt Principle in the Heart of Man, and that is the Freedom of Mans will, and that as now ſal'n; And to preſerve the Liberty thereof (forſooth,) and that that may be no way entrenched upon, They would deprive God of the Liberty of his Will, and the Dominion thereof, and alſo of a Power invincible to work upon mans Will infallibly: As if that God had made a Creature which he could not Rule: Whereby they put God into Darius his ſtreights, that he ſhould all the days of a Mans life, ſtrive with a man to ſave him, yet ſo as mans Will may caſt it otherways, and he cannot help it, but muſt ſubmit to Man: And they frame ſuch a model and way to Salvation, as ſhall be proportion'd to that Freedom of Man's Will, and unto ſuch a kind of Freedom of a Man's Will, that he may do, or not do, when God hath done all: And that this is the Opinion they have ſet up againſt Election, and the ground of the quarrel all Ages Teſtifie.

Book I.

CHAP. II.

That there is an Election of Grace, with a Non Election or passing by others. That difference to be out of the Pure Grace and Good pleasure of God. Which purpose of Election, is the cause of their effectual calling and Salvation.

ROM. II. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7.

1. I say then, hath God cast away his people? God forbid: for I also am an Israelite of the seed of Abraham, of the Tribe of Benjamin. 2. God hath not cast away his people, which he foreknew: Wot ye not what the Scripture saith of Elias? how he maketh intercession to God against Israel, saying, 3. Lord, They have killed thy Prophets, and digged down thine Altars; and I am left alone, and they seek my life: 4. But what saith the Answer of God unto him? I have reserved to my self seven thousand men, who have not bowed the knee to the Image of Baal. 5. Even so then at this present time also there is a remnant, according to the Election of Grace. 6. And if by Grace, then it is no more of works; otherwise Grace is no more Grace: But if it be of works, then it is no more Grace; otherwise work is no more work. 7. What then? Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for, but the Election hath obtained it, and the rest were blinded.

IT was a great exercise to Paul's spirit, as appears by Chap. 9. in the beginning; and unto the carnal Jew a stumble, a shrewd Objection against Christianity it self; That after the Messiah, our Christ was come in the flesh, and was ascended to Heaven; And his Gospel had had its course among that Nation; Both by Christs own Ministry amongst them, and of his Apostles after him; That there should be so few of that Nation that Believed on him: Yea, that the generality of that Nation were cast off by God, upon their having rejected Him for their Messiah: When as yet there had been made all along the old Testament such large and abundant Promises to that Nation, of whom Christ was to come: Which might have been expected should have been fulfilled unto them, upon his coming amongst them in the flesh. The consideration of which might and did lie in the way, as a great stumbling block unto his former Doctrine of Salvation by faith on Christ. This you have insinuated from the Coherence of the fourth and fifth verses of Chap. 9. In that they were Israelites, to whom pertaineth the Adoption, and the Glory, and the giving of the Law, and the Service of God, and the Promises; whose are the Fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over All, God blessed for ever. (As the Christians professed their Christ to be). And that yet these Israelites should so few of them be professors of him, was a strong presumption, That therefore it was not He, that was the true Messiah. And

This

This Objection is again revived in the 1. of this 11. Chapter. Hath God cast away his people? (meaning the Jews:) Now unto this He there gives two Answers. Chap. 2.

That God had not cast away his people whom He foreknew: Or whom He aimed at in his Promises of the Covenant of Grace, the word of Promise. The carnal Jew understood by Gods people the whole, or at least the generality of their Nation: Unto whom yet, but as in a Type, those forecited Priviledges, and Promises were made: And under that respect it was they made up the Church of the Old Testament. He therefore carefully puts in, you see, by way of distinction: He hath not cast away his people [whom He foreknew:] As if He had said; They were his people in outward Profession, and endowment of outward Priviledges; But those really and indeed his people, whom he hath chosen to Salvation, and they were so foreknown by him only are [His] (as he emphatically indigitates;) And he hath cast off not one of them; All and every one of them He intended, and had in his Eye, when He made those promises of the Covenant of Grace; Those He hath not, nor ever will cast off. And as for the Rest, they were his people but by outward profession, rather Typically such, as in a shadow of the other hidden ones amongst them: For whose sake it was those Promises and Priviledges were continued to the Community of that Nation: These only are said to be the Children of the Promise, and the Children of God; And none other. Rom. 9. 6, 7. Not as though the word of God hath taken none effect. For they are not all Israel which are of Israel. Neither because they are the seed of Abraham, are they all children: but in Isaac shall thy seed be called. And what he understands by Children of Promise, He exemplifies by Isaac; whom He proves to have been a Child of Promise in respect of the Election of his Person, without foreseen conditions in Him; And by vertue of which Election, had been called. This he doth vers. 9. 11. as I shall shew when I come to speak unto his instance in the following story of Election: Which manifestly dissolves the strength of their Objection, that they were All Israelites; And that to them the Adoption pertained in vers. 4. 5. For that to have been but in respect of outward profession, title, and external calling; And also because they were Types, and shadows of the true Seed to come. This distinction of Typical Israelites, and Israelites indeed, and in truth, plainly appears to be in his intent to avouch, in that he flatly denies that all of Israel were Israel: That is, as Christ says of Nathaniel, an Israelite indeed: He denies also that they were Children of God, vers. 7. Or rightly the Children of Abraham according to Gods intent in his Promise to the Seed, although according to the flesh they were, as you find it express in vers. 7. And although of them He had said; That to them belonged the Adoption, or Title of Children. His first Answer.

Observe that word vers. 5. of Chap. 11. [For the present time] It is, that there are so few, but in vers. 25, 26. He would not have them ignorant of this [Mystery] That blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in, And so all Israel shall be saved. His Second Answ.

Now that which I intend in the words, is, that he clearly resolves the utmost account of that Paucity or Fewness of them, who at that present were Saved, into Election, &c. Thus in those words, vers. 2. His people whom he foreknew, and then again those who at that present time, He saies, were then saved, He calls in vers. 5. A Remnant; and a Remnant according to the Election of Grace. And in vers. 7. What then! Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for, but the Election hath obtained it, and the rest were blinded.

I shall therefore further to lay a foundation for this my Subject, open these two Verses, 2. and 5*th*. Wherein

First,

Book I.

First, That by his People whom he foreknew, Verſ. 2. is meant, His Elect out of Grace.

H I S People] And made his by Election; God caſting his eye upon them, ſaid within himſelf of them, Thoſe are mine; as John 17. Thine are mine, and thou gaveſt them me. The Elect, afore ever they are Converted, are ſtyled by God his people, Acts 18. 10. I have much People in this City. And Chriſt ſaith, Sheep [I have] not of this Fold (Gentiles) them I muſt bring. They were Sheep afore they were brought in, and they were ſo determinately, fixedly, and reſolutely God's Sheep, foreknown by him to be ſuch, as that Chriſt himſelf (to whom God hath committed the Salvation of them) ſaith, I muſt bring them in, as upon God's peremptory Command to have them ſaved. And therefore Election, or Fore-knowledge of them, is as the Cauſe joyned with their being H IS, 2 Tim. 2: 19. The Lord [knows] who are [his].

Secondly, This their Election, that makes them his, and is here ſignified by fore-knowledge [whom he foreknew] is a word appropriated to the Elect, and their Election by God; and Election is aſcribed unto it, as in Rom. 8. 29. Whom he did foreknow, he alſo did predeſtinate. And 1 Pet. 1. 1. Elect according to the fore-knowledge of God the Father; that is, out of that ſpecial fore-knowledge which God took of thoſe whom he choſe; even ſuch a fore-knowledge as is common to no other Creatures or Perſons, although known unto God, are all his works from the beginning. And as ſeveral Interpreters have obſerved on the ſame word, Rom. 8.29. He ſaith not ὃς ἔγνω, whom he knew, as but with a bare ſimple act of Knowledge, for ſo he doth all things; but ὃς προέγνω, whom he acknowledged, approved of with a Knowledge of liking and love. And ſo he notes,

1. A ſingular love joyned with the foreſight of them, or God's caſting a loving Eye with Affection upon them. Words of knowledge import affection, conjugal Communion which is tranſacted between Man and Wife, and riſeth from the entireſt Love, is ſtyled knowledge of each other: As on the contrary, I know you not, and I never knew you, doth in Chriſt's Speech expreſs our utter rejection and privation of affection to them.

2. There is πρὸ (or Before) added to this knowledge; by comparing other Scriptures to which, imports that this his Love was before the Foundation of the World; and ſo from everlaſting: And ſo that Particle is explained in the ſame Chapter of Peter, Verſ. 20. when Chriſt's Election is ſpoken of; whoſe Election is the pattern of ours: Who verily was [fore-ordained] afore the foundation of the World. And Chriſt himſelf, John 17. 25. Thou lovedſt me afore the foundation of the World.

3. It was not ſuch a fore-knowledge as that whom he foreſaw would believe, and be holy, that them, as ſuch foreſeen, he choſe, and loved; that were unworthy of God, qui ſcientiam non accipit à rebus, and had been an uncertain Foundation for God to build upon; who builds not upon Sand, the mutable Will of the Creature: But the Foundation of God is ſaid to be ſure, by this, that he knows who are his: Qui, not quâ; that is, the Individual perſons, who they are; not who, that is, ſo or ſo qualified. And in Rom. 8. 29. It is not ſaid, He predeſtinated thoſe whom he foreknew that would be conformable to the Image of his Son: No; but contrary, that thoſe whom he foreknew, and ſo loved, he predeſtinated to be conformable unto the Image of Chriſt his Son. Yea, and in this place, Rom. 11. 6. he expreſly puts it wholly upon Grace, and utterly excludes Works, foreſeen as the motive unto God. And if by Grace, then it is no more of Works: Otherwiſe Grace is no more Grace. But if it be of Works, then it is no more Grace: Otherwiſe work is no more work.

And thus the ſenſe or meaning of this foreknowledge riſeth up to this, That thoſe particular Perſons, whom out of pure Grace and Love (without any conſideration of Works of any kind that were to be in them) he caſting his Love freely upon them, did, from everlaſting, and out of that Love, chooſe to be his, and they are alone his People. And so for substance and in effect, both these words in Vers. 2. whom he foreknew, and those that after follow, [A remnant according to Election of Grace] prove both to be one and the same. Chap. 2.

The Doctrine I draw the words summarily forth into, is,

That there is an Election of some, with a Non-election, or passing by of others; which Election is out of the pure Grace of God, and is the Cause of their Effectual Calling and Salvation.

There is another General Doctrine to follow from out of the Interpretation of the Fourth and Fifth Verses; viz.

That those two Companies, or Forces of Men, the Election, and the rest, or Non-elected, have been extant in all Ages of the World, and have divided Mankind past, and will be found in the World, to the end thereof, for time to come.

The former of these two is indeed the ultimate Subject in my aim; which that latter serves to confirm: But the second shall be the Doctrine which I shall more largely insist upon; and that but so far as it is a Medium of proof to Evidence the first, That there is an Election, &c. And my handling of That (the first,) shall be only so far out of an Interpretation of the first, second, and third Verses; which when performed, I shall leave the further Evidence thereof unto the Instances and Story of the Second Doctrine: For which also I shall find a good Specimen and Ground in the Text it self, in Vers. 4. when they come to be opened.

As for the first Doctrine proposed, and the Interpretation of Vers. 1, 2, 3, 5, 6. &c. I shall go over the words thereof by Parts, as they are placed in that Doctrine.

1. That there is an Election] That's in the Letter of the Text, wherein the Elect are called the Election: And Election imports a Calling, or singling some from others; as 2 Thess. 2. 13. ὅτι εἵλετο, exemit, selegit; he exempted, excepted some; or as it is here in Vers. 4. reserved to himself. If some were not passed by, there were not an Election. On the oppposite side, the other are called the Rest, Vers. 7. that is, Non-elected. And to say, the Rest, is the mildest and softest word that could be given of it; and importeth meerly a Non-election, as it stands in this distinction here from the Election, which is its Opposite.

Again, 2. Of the one he says, God did foreknow them; [His People which he foreknew] And by his foreknowing, took them to be his; 2 Tim. 2. 19. The Lord knows who are his: He speaks it of Election. But there is another part of that distinction, (for such those words in Vers. 2. are;) there is a Rest whom he never knew: Although he foreknew them, as he foreknows All things, yet without a love, or owning of them: Thus Christ, Matth. 7. 23. I never knew you: There is the Badge of the Rest, that he says, He never knew them: That [never] reacheth up as high as Eternity; and that from thence, even unto that hour, He never knew them. And as he never did know them, so he never will to Eternity. You see here are two Companies, Elect, and the Rest: One foreknown, and the other never known.

3. There are different Issues, and events befall these two; proceeding The one, from Gods foreknowing the one; and the other, That God never knew Them: The first doth infallibly obtain, The Election have obtained it: Obtained what? And How? Effectual calling first, and Salvation at last thereby: What then does befall the Rest? They were blinded, So the Text; [And the Rest were blinded.] In like Equipage Christ speaks in the 10th of John; That he had Sheep which were yet to be called: So at Vers. 16. And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice, and there shall be one fold, and one Shepherd. And that his Father had given BOOK I. given them Him. And then oppositely, He speaks of another Company, Vers. 26. ye are not of my sheep: And the same different Events do follow upon Each, that are here said to befall these two Companies here. Even as here, of those that were his Sheep, He says, Vers. 16. They shall hear my voice, and them I must bring: And Vers. 27. My sheep hear my voice; and I give unto them Eternal Life, and they shall never perish, Vers. 28. But of the other, You believe not, because you are not of my sheep, Vers. 26. Observe, It is not that Christ says, They were not of his Sheep, because they believed not; but on the Contrary, They believed not, because they were not of his Sheep. And it was Election of the first sort that put the difference: For the first, He calls his Sheep, because the Father had given them Him; and that before their Calling, and Believing: For, says He, I have Sheep which are not of this Fold; them Also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one Fold, and one Shepherd: So it was his Fathers gift of them afore Calling, for which they are in these places called his Sheep; and given by his Father with such a Command, as I must bring them in, says Christ.

4. This Separation by Election is out of Pure Grace: That was another thing I put into the Doctrine. And so it is here said to be according to the Election of Grace; That is, Grace was the Founder and sole Author of that Decree, and that Election meerly of Grace; for it follows, Vers. 6. If it be of Grace, then it is no more of Works; otherwise Grace is no more Grace. Which plainly Excludes Works of Man, as foreseen, and therewith shuts out also the Will of Man which is the Author of Works, to be any way the Cause of such an Election as foreseen: He makes these Two utterly exclusive one of the other; that is, as to the point of Electing: As it follows, If it be of Works, it is no more of Grace, otherwise Work is no more Work. Admit but the least of Works, it is no more of Grace but of which God electeth: They are two Contradistinct opposite things

For the further Confirmation of this main Doctrine, now gathered out of the Eleventh Chapter, I might here largely shew, that the same is the very Scope of the Ninth Chapter: And withal, give the Correspondencies which these Passages in this Eleventh Chapter do hold, with the like in the Ninth Chapter. In which Ninth he had treated the Doctrine of Election and Preterition, as in the proper Seat for them: And this Eleventh Chapter that follows is a part of the Application and Praxis of that very same Doctrine, treated in Chapter 9. And it is as evident to me, that he treats in that Ninth Chapter the Doctrine of the Election of Persons, without the consideration of any worth or dignity in them foreseen, as certainly, as that the comming of Christ in the Flesh, and his being Crucified, were foretold in Psal. 22. or in the 53th Chapter of Isaiah.

He had indeed begun in a way of General Thesis, or Summary Position, to propound the Doctrine of Election in the Chapter afore; and how Effectual Calling, &c. flows from thence, and depends thereupon, as so many Links upon the first Link of that Golden Chain; that is, in Chap. 8. from Vers. 28, 29, 30. We know that all things work together for good to them that love God; to them who are the Called according to his purpose: For whom he did foreknow, he did also predestinate to be conformed to the Image of his Son, that he might be the First-born amongst many Brethren: Moreover, whom he did predestinate, them he also called; and whom he called, them he also justified; and whom he justified, them he also glorified And upon occasion of that grand Objection, I fore-specified, That God had left the Community of that Nation of the Jews, to obstinacy against Christ, and unbelief, whose yet were the Promises, &c. and that so few of that Nation had entertained the Gospel: He was necessitated thereupon to prosecute, and clear the same Doctrine more at large, as that which had put the difference between those few that were saved of that Nation; and that Generality that were left to blindness. And this he begins to do from the Instances of the Fathers of that Nation, in those eldest, primitive Times thereof; shewing, how that from the first, Election by Grace, of the Persons of Isaac and Jacob in Abraham's Family, (the Founder of that Nation;) had put that vast descrimination between them two, and the the Persons of Ishmael and Esau, whom God had rejected: And therefore no wonder if the same difference fell out upon the same Foundation, in the succeeding Children of Isaac and Jacob. These being leading Examples, and Types of what was to come: Notwithstanding the Promise made was to Abraham and his seed, for Inheriting Eternal Life; Which the Jews understood to be Universal of their whole Nation, but was indeed but indefinite: Which the Apostles Argument Vers. 7,8. doth shew they were. Chap. 2.

The occasion of his proceeding upon this Argument, in the 9th. Chapter, being thus stated; You then have the main Subject of that 9th. Chapter, Summarily proposed in Vers. 11. the later part of the Vers. Viz.

That the purpose of God, according to Election might stand; not of works, but of him that calleth.

And this Doctrine as thus stated, He fetcheth out from those two Instances of Isaac, and Jacob; As a genuine Inference, and Conclusion thence deduced; which I shall but give the sense of in brief: And this Inference or Conclusion, though drawn but from those two Instances among the Jewish Nation, He yet proposeth as a general Maxim, appliable to all other men in the World that are Elect; Whether they be Jew, or Gentile: The same reason holds of them, as it did of these two, Isaac, and Jacob.

The aforesaid words of Vers. 11. Chap. 9. briefly Interpreted.

[That, &c.] This Particle shews the final cause, or intent of God; And of Pauls alledging these two Examples according to Gods true intent in them: As if He had said, to this End or Purpose, God hath in the Scriptures put this open difference of Isaac, and Jacobs Persons from that of Ishmael, and Esau's; That He might give forth a most manifest, and general demonstration of the like, in the condition of All others.

That Gods purpose according to Election] Which First, always imports with it, a singling forth One, or Divers from others who are not Chosen: And so here doth connotate the rejection of others: Namely, Ishmael, and Esau: Or else Secondly, That Clause is put in to distinguish it to be that sort of purposes, which are Election purposes: That whereas to reject, or pass by others, is from a purpose too; But this is his purpose according to Election. Or Thirdly, That Clause may be thus understood; That Gods Purpose made according to the way, mode, or manner of Election; Which in the Eleventh Chapter, He using the same phrase, doth there intend it to express, that it is out of pure Grace: And such was this of Isaacs, and Jacobs: It was after the way, and mode Election useth to hold; Out of the Principle of pure Grace, whence Election always proceeds: This further to have been, to the end,

That it might stand:] That is, Firm;] or Sure: As being built upon the unchangeable Will, and good pleasure of Grace in God Himself: That did not stand waiting, or suspend upon Mans Will, to see how it would work, and cast the matter, and use his Grace, ere He would Decree, or Purpose their Salvation.

Not of Works:] As they are in us, and from us: And his reason insinuated in that word, [might stand;] Shews why He took that course: For if it had been of Works, that might make the Decree, or purpose wavering, and uncertain.

But of Him that Calleth:] That whereas God had also Decreed that Works of Faith, and Obedience should exist in them, He saith, yet that his purpose of Election to save them, depended not on those Works, but on his Grace, to work those Works efficaciously in them: Which when He did Elect, he withal Decreed to put forth by calling Them, which was Gods Act on Them, and gives an invincible Demonstration, That no Work, as theirs, either afore Calling, or after, was the Measure, or Condition, that in Election God went by. But his Calling immediately proceeding from Election, begins first with Them; And works All in Them: That so the whole Glory might be His that calleth, and not of Them that are called: He working that Calling, and the Works in, and of Them, thence flowing, from his own Almighty Power and Grace; And therein executing but that which his Purpose of Election had from Everlasting Determined.

BOOK I. This Doctrine, and Maxim, The Apoſtle profeſſeth to be a juſt Inference from both the Examples of Iſaac, and Jacob; (whom He accordingly wrought an effectual Calling in;) But had choſen their Perſons in his Eye and Purpoſe ſimply conſidered thus to Call, and Work upon them; and by ſo Calling them, to ſave them; And from the particular Examples of theſe two, His ſcope is to ſhew in them as Examples and Types that God doth the like, with the reſt of the Sons of Men; Eſpecially that live in the Church and Houſhold of God.

And this is no other but the Sum of the Doctrine of Election as we teach it, and ſtate it out of him, which thus in theſe inſtances at the firſt propounded; He then purſues in the reſt of the Chapter; From Verſ. 14. to Verſ 24. What ſhall we ſay then, is there unrighteouſneſs with God? God forbid: For He ſaith to Moſes, I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy; And I will have compaſſion on whom I will have compaſſion: So then, it is not of him that Willeth, nor of him that Runneth, but of God that ſheweth Mercy: For the Scripture ſaith unto Pharaoh, even for this ſame purpoſe have I raiſed thee up, that I might ſhew my Power in Thee; And that my Name might be declared throughout All the Earth: Therefore hath he mercy on whom he will have mercy: And whom he will he hardneth: Thou wilt ſay then unto me, why doth he yet find fault? For who hath reſiſted his Will? Nay, but O man! who art Thou that repliеſt againſt God? Shall the thing formed ſay to him that formed it, why haſt thou made me thus? Hath not the Potter power over the Clay, of the ſame lump, to make one Veſſel unto honour, and another unto diſhonour? What if God willing to ſhew his wrath, and to make his Power known, endured with much long ſuffering the Veſſels of wrath, fitted to deſtruction: And that he might make known the riches of his Glory on the veſſels of mercy, which he had afore prepared unto Glory: Even us whom he hath called, not of the Jews only, but alſo of the Gentiles. In which words He further proceeds by Anſwering ſome Quæries, and III. Objections; To clear the ſame Aſſertion, laid down in Verſ. 11th. Which I ſhall not now enlarge upon, they all ſo broadly ſpeaking the ſame very thing, which he had thus declared in Verſ. 11. and inferred from thoſe particular Examples of theſe Two; as Examples, as well as Types of the reſt of the Sons of Men; Who prove to be either Veſſels of Mercy or of Wrath.

And then when he had thus delivered the Doctrine of Gods Decrees about Mankind unto Verſ. 24. He then proceeds to the execution thereof upon upon thoſe Elect, which in Verſ. 11. He had ſaid was by Calling: [Of him that calleth] according to that Decree: Which Calling He in the laſt words of Verſ. 23. expreſſeth to be a preparing of them for that Glory, which was by his Decree Ordained them. And ſo he goes on Verſ. 24. Even us whom he hath called, not of the Jews only, but alſo of the Gentiles. And the difference which effectual calling proceeding from Election, puts between the Elect, and others; He handles from that Verſ. unto the end of the 10*th.* Chapter.

That which in the Third place I obſerve is, The correſpondency, or rather Identity which the forementioned paſſages in the 11*th.* Chapter. (wherein my Text is) do hold with the like, in that foregone, Chap. 9. which ſhews that his Scope as to this Point of Election is one, and the ſame in both; And which do therefore give light each to the other.

In this 11*th.* Chapter, (the Scope whereof I have laſt given); 1. He revives the Application of that Doctrine to the Jews; Upon the very ſame occaſion He had entred upon it in Verſ. 9. And there it was ſaid that theſe Jews had the Priviledge of being Iſraelites; and that to them pertained the Adoption, or Title of the Children of God; The Covenants, and the Promiſes; And that Theirs were the Fathers, meaning eſpecially Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob; Thus in Verſ. 4, 5. And yet that that Nation ſhould in the Community of it, be left to Infidelity, and but ſo few whom the Promiſes had taken effect upon. This He inſinuates in thoſe words, as containing the ſubſtance of an Objection, Not as though the word of God had been of no effect; Or had been wholly void, and fruſtrate: Which implies that ſuch an Objection did lie in mens minds; Or at leaſt might do, and ſo weaken the truth of that Doctrine of Chriſt, which he had delivered in the former part of this Epiſtle, as being utterly inconſiſtent with ſo great, and high Titles of Priviledges, enumerated in the Verſes afore. 2. They imply, that there were yet ſome, whom the Word of God had taken hold upon: And theſe enough to vindicate the truth of Gods Word, declared concerning them. And Thirdly, Thoſe words [not as though] οὐχ οἷον, ſound plainly a prevention, or preoccupation of that Objection. Fourthly, The [word] there ſpoken of, is meant, the Promiſe made to Abraham, and his Seed, to be Heirs of Eternal life, which is thus expreſt concerning Iſaac, and Jacob; (The Two Perſons here inſtanced in, in the Text) that they were Heirs of the ſame Promiſe with Him, as Heb. 11.9. Which the Jews underſtood to be Univerſal unto all his Seed, after the Fleſh: And that therefore they were All the Children of God: (As their reply to Chriſt ſhews in John 8.) which the Apoſtle his Anſwer, and Arguing in Verſ. 7, 8. Neither becauſe they are the Seed of Abraham, are they All children; But in Iſaac ſhall thy Seed be called: That is, They which are the children of the fleſh, theſe are not the children of God; but the children of the Promiſe are counted for the Seed; Shews to have been at the bottom, as the cauſe and occaſion of this his Vindiciæ, or Apologetical Diſcourſe: (As I may well call it.) Chap. 2.

Now then, look as this falſe Suppoſition, That all the People of Iſrael were the Children of God, by reaſon of their being Abraham's and Iſrael's, or Jacob's Seed. And hereupon thoſe their Titles and Priviledges aforeſaid, were the occaſion, in that Ninth Chapter, of his Treating of the Doctrine of Election there; ſo here in this Eleventh Chapter, he re-aſſumes the very ſame Occaſion, when he goes on to apply it to the Jews, beginning at the very firſt Verſe; I ſay then, hath God caſt away his People? He ſpeaks in reality the ſame thing: To which he anſwers, Verſ. 2. with that Diſtinction taken from Election; God hath not caſt away his People whom he foreknew: The Occaſion is the ſame, and the Anſwer is the ſame; and the Objection is Solved by the Doctrine of Election.

2. The Difference put between the True Iſraelite and the Outward, is reſolved into Election, and that of pure Grace, as the Foundation thereof: The Election obtained it, Verſ. 7. And the reſt were blinded. And that Election ſuch, as was out of pure Grace, by virtue of which it was that they obtained it, by obtaining through that Election, an effectual Calling; for want of which, the Reſt, or Non-elect, were left to their hardneſs. Such a Grace as was purely Grace, unintermingled with Works, foreſeen, as in the Verſes afore; when he ſaid, a Remnant, according to the Election of Grace, Verſ. 5. He then explains what that Grace was: (And indeed that word carries its own Interpretation with it;) For if by Grace (ſaith he) then it is no more of Works: Otherwiſe Grace is no more Grace, Verſ. 6. Inſomuch, as Auſtin comparing theſe Paſſages of both Chapters together, and eſpecially that of Verſ. 11. of Chap. 9. For the Children not being yet born, neither having done any good or evil, that the purpoſe of God according to Election might ſtand; Not of Works, but of him that Calleth; with theſe now mentioned in Chap. 11. Verſ. 5. and 6. obſerveth the accord and agreement of the ſame Scope in both.

Cui loco ſatis iſte locus concordat. Ep. 106. ad Sixtum.

And Thirdly, The Accord appears in that the Apoſtle termeth thoſe few of the Jews, called the Election, a Remnant, in both places alſo, in Chap. 9. Verſ. 27. Though the number of the Children of Iſrael be as the Sand of the Sea, a Remnant ſhall be ſaved: Which, as relating unto the Words, Verſ. 25. and 26. De Dieu interpreteth as ſpoken of Election; and ſo fully accords with Verſ. 5. Chap. 11. There is a Remnant according to the Election.

The Corollary brought off from theſe References and Reſpects of theſe two Chapters one to the other, as touching Election, is, That if Election to Life and Salvation out of pure Grace, be the Subject of the Eleventh Chapter, it muſt be alſo intended in the Ninth Chapter. Now the Difference that is put between the Election, and the Reſt, in that Eleventh Chapter, is purely and clearly that which is in order unto the obtaining of Eternal Life; and therefore muſt be intended in the Inſtances of Iſaac and Iſhmael; Jacob and Eſau alſo:

BOOK I. Which yet ſome have gone about to divert, by contending the Scope of both to have been ſolely in reſpect to Temporal Things; and that in their Poſterities alſo.

And ſurely, if many of the ſeveral Paſſages in either Chapter be compared together, this Election we contend for, without reſpect to the foreſeen Conditions, will appear to have been the Subject in both, if in either of them: They both ſpeak ad idem, unto the ſame thing.

This for the Interpretation of 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, and 7th Verſes of the Eleventh Chapter.

I ſhall now proceed to the Inſtance alledged by the Apoſtle of an Election, and Non election, in Eliah's days, among the People of that Nation: Or to an Interpretation of the third, fourth, and fifth Verſes of the Eleventh Chapter.

Verſ. 3. Lord, they have killed thy Prophets, and digged down thine Altars, and I am left alone; and they ſeek my life.

Verſ. 4. But what ſaith the Anſwer of God unto him? I have reſerved to my ſelf Seven thouſand Men, who have not bowed the Knee to the Image of Baal.

Verſ. 5. Even ſo then at this preſent time alſo, there is a Remnant according to the Election of Grace.

The Allegation of this ſingle Inſtance for All others, Is to confirm his Aſſertion, viz. That there was an Election: For ſo he cloſeth it at laſt, in Verſ. 5. Even ſo then at this preſent time alſo, there is a remnant according to the Election of Grace: Alſo to Confirm what he had laſt ſaid, That God had not caſt away his people whom he foreknew: But had an Election of Grace continued in that Nation of the Jews, when yet the Face of the Generality of that Nation were Apoſtates from God, and his true Worſhip: And that yet God had a people, whom He foreknowing, had reſerved to himſelf; whom the promiſes made to that Nation had taken hold of: And with an Eye, and reſpect unto whom, and for whoſe ſake, the Nation had the Promiſſes indefinitely given to Them: (Even as in Chap. 9. in the forepart thereof, He had in like manner diſcourſed:) And his Inference from thence accordingly is, Verſ. 5. And therefore it followed not, that becauſe the generality of that Nation believed not in Paul's time, but were hardened; that therefore Chriſt Jeſus, whom the Apoſtle preach'd, was not the true Chriſt; becauſe it had no greater Effect upon the multitude of that Nation, who were in Profeſſion, and in the Style of the Old Covenant, the outward People of God; whilſt yet God had a very conſiderable Number that had embraced Chriſt, and the Promiſes made in Him, and were the true People of God; that is, whom God foreknew, ſays He, ſhould be exiſtent in thoſe days: Even as there were ſeven Thouſand in Eliahs time in God's Liſt and Catalogue, which were enough then to make this good; That though the generality of that People were left to unbelief, yet God having a Number, though but of ſome, whom Election had ſaved, and preſerved from a froward Generation; That God had not caſt away his People now, when Chriſt was preached to them; not now, when ſo few believed: For God had farr fewer in Eliahs time among the Ten Tribes: For ſtill God had them, and as many of them, for a People to him, Embracing his Son; whom he foreknew, and had choſen for His: And this was ſufficient to break the force of the Objection they made. But why God foreknew ſo few among them in that Age, this the Apoſtle reſolves into Gods good pleaſure, and foreknowledge.

This is a pat and pertinent Inſtance to this purpoſe; and in many particulars Parallel to the ſtate of things in the Apoſtles days; which is likewiſe the Apoſtles Scope, beſides the former: As the Apoſtles one words in the applying of the Inſtance ſhews, Even ſo then alſo at this Time. I ſhall therefore compare them in a few things.

1. In

Chap. 1.

1. In Himself: God hath not cast off his People, for I also am an Israelite; so Elias had instanced in Himself alone, Vers. 3. I am left alone: Which shews, if there had been but one Israelite that had believed in Christ, it had solved the Cavil.

2. Elias makes Intercession against Israel: They have killed thy Prophets, and digged down thine Altars, and they seek my life: And so now might Paul have said in like manner in his times; That his Countreymen, the Jews, had stirred up Persecution every where; Their great business was to go about to throw down the Churches; and sought his Life above All others: Of which you may read in the Story of the Acts, and in the Epistles Sum'd up 1 Thess. 2. 15, 16.

3. It was Election made the difference in Mens Spirits then and now; which Election of those in Elias's time, is expressed by this, I have reserved to my self, says God, Vers. 4. [I have left] As the words of God are in the story of the Kings, Answerably Election that now was in Paul's time, he calls them λειμμα, or καταλειμμα, a remnant, a residue, or reserve; the word reserved in Vers. 4. answering to λειμμα in the Fifth.

4. They are parallel In the fewness. There were then but 7000, and now in Paul's time not many thousands in comparison: For although at first there was a great flush, and that (Acts 21. 20.) the Brethren of Jerusalem say unto Paul, Thou seest, Brother, how many thousand of the Jews which Believe; yet afterwards, there was an Ebb, both in a Cessation of any more being Converted, as also by so great an Apostacy of many that had professed Christ: As it was evident to Paul, God had cast off the generality of that Nation.

But the main thing I observe in the force of this word κατάλειμμα; It imports, first, A laying hold on some, when all were going; and they are therefore said so to be reserved, as things that are left, when others are gone. And of those that he Elected, he says, that he reserved them to himself; oppositely, the other, he left them go where they would: He let them go after Baal: He suffered them to walk in their own ways, as in Acts 14. 16. He left them to their own Counsels, Psal. 81. 12. He left them to themselves: But, says God, those I reserve for my self.

And this expresses the Grand end of Election, with difference from what becomes of others. Election is a reservation unto God; it's his own reserving Persons for himself: They have the whole of him; all the Love, all the Blessedness he hath, they have among them. It's not only he chooses them from within himself, as having no Motive out of himself, why he should do it: (Therefore it's said of Election, which he purposed in himself:) But further, it is for himself, he reserves himself for them, and reserves them for himself.

Use.

1. And therefore it is as grand an Evidence, as any other, that thou are Elected, if thou sequestrest thy self unto God, and choosest him for himself; and sayst of him, My Lot is fallen in a good Ground; the Lord is my Portion, says my Soul.

2. Let the Saints therefore not live to themselves: We live not to our selves, nor dye to our selves, but to the Lord: For we are God's, reserved by Election.

3. Let men take heed how they meddle with the Saints; they are God's, reserved for himself, says David to Saul's Courtiers and his own Enemies; know that God hath chosen the man that is Godly (David means himself) to Himself, and therefore take heed of wronging or opposing of me. Psal. 4.

4. God is engaged to carry thee on, and to carry thee through, for he hath reserved thee for himself; Therefore he will not loose what is so selfly designed and chosen for himself. The Lords Portion is his people.

5. You see what keeps men in evil Times, as these Seven thousand were kept in the times of Eliah, from the Superstitions and Idolatries of the Times; it is Election. Rev. 13. 8. And all that dwell upon the Earth shall worship

Book. I.

the Beaſt, whoſe Names are not written in the Book of Life of the Lamb ſlain from the Foundation of the World.

6. The worſt and moſt perſecuting times that are, cannot extinguiſh the Elect: Ahab and Jezabel could not; nor yet cauſe them to defile their Conſciences. Jezabel ſearch'd every Corner, and yet Eliah lives: And Three hundred Prophets were hid with him in a Cave, and lived, though with Bread and Water.

7. If you be the Elect ones of God, that God hath reſerved for himſelf, it is no matter what Times you live in: The Lord hath appointed in ſeveral Succeſſions, greater and leſſer difficulties. Some Times wherein the Churches have peace, and ſome wherein they ſtand in Jeopardy of their Lives every moment: And ſome muſt have the worſt, (for as the Day is his, ſo the Darkſom Night is his, as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks of good and evil Times:) Thus thoſe did in Ahabs time; and what matter was it, ſeeing God had reſerved them, to take them to Himſelf. If it be thy Lot to live in as bad as they did, yet whereas Heaven is reſerved for thee, and God hath reſerved thee for himſelf, thou needeſt not be Anxious: Thou ſhalt ſtand up in thy Lot, as the Angel comforted Daniel, who would fain have lived to have ſeen thoſe bleſſed days the Angels told him of. When Times in any Age are upon the Tropick of turning from bad to good, there are ſome pretious Ones ſhall dye juſt in the Vertical Point, as old Simeon did, and never enjoy the Proſperity of them.

8. Be content with little in the World, and out of the World: Thou ſeeſt that God that made the World, contents himſelf with but a few, but a Remnant: And ſo He hath them ſafe with him to Heaven, He ſatisfies himſelf with the enjoying them to Eternity. Were thy Houſes and thy Goods burnt, care not, ſeeing God hath reſerved thee wholly for himſelf.

CHAP.

CHAP. III.

That De facto, God hath made an Election of ſome out of pure Grace, with a Non-election of others; proved by the Story of all Ages of the World, through the Old and New Teſtament.

I Found upon the ſame Text of Rom. XI. 4, 5, 6, and 7th Verſes, this Second Aſſertion; That theſe two Companies, or ſorts of Men thus differenced, The ELECTION, and The REST not elected, have been in all Ages of the World, and have divided Mankind, and ſhall to the End.

All the World are, and have been either the Election, or the Reſt; yea, and therefore thoſe other are termed the Reſt (the tendereſt word that could have been uſed) as being the other whole Remainder, when the Elect are taken forth. As if you have a great Heap afore you, and you cull out ſome, and what are the Remainder are called the Reſt; there is not a third Company; and they are ſo diſtinguiſhed, as that none of the Elect do become of the Number of the Reſt; nor of the Reſt do become of the Number of the Elect: And therefore you muſt never intermingle them, by thinking that a Man may be of the Elect to day, and at their Death Reprobate: For theſe two, as contra-diſtinct Sayings, remain ſuch to eternity. If any of the Elect were finally hardened, then this other ſaying, The Reſt were blinded; were not true. Or if any of thoſe that are the Reſt did obtain it, then that firſt the Election have obtained (as they ſtand thus differenced one from the other) were not true. The Elect and the Reſt ſtand ſevered in ſuch a Contra-diſtinction, by two ſuch events appropriate to each; you muſt take Election, and Obtained it as eternally yoked, and belonging to the Company alone; and on the contrary, the Reſt were blinded, as the Iſſue of that Company alone, who are not ſaid to be the Reſt, becauſe they are blinded; but being the Reſt that is ſevered from the Election, it comes to paſs that they are blinded: As on the contrary, the Election being a Company choſen out from the Reſt, they obtain it, and are not finally blinded.

2. That this Diviſion is and hath been in all Ages, &c. I found it thus far upon the Text: You ſee the Apoſtle inſtanceth in two Ages, and parallels them together in this very reſpect. Eliah's Times in the Old, in which God had an Election, (though the worſt of Times) Seven thouſand Men, and the reſt fell all to Baal: So even in this preſent Age, ſays he, it proves to be among my Country-men the Jews. And the word ſo [then] is an Inference from the former Inſtance to prove it, as well as it is a Parallel to exemplifie it. So that although he inſtanceth but in two, theſe Ages paſt and preſent; yet it leads on, and gives a juſt occaſion to extend enquiry into all Ages; How doth he prove that there is an Election now, as well as a Parallel? Or how doth this follow, that if he had an Election before, he hath now? Becauſe Election, nunquam excidit, ſaith Pareus, Election never ceaſeth to be in the World. A Church unto God muſt then ceaſe to be extant; for whoſe ſakes the World doth ſtand, and will continue no longer, than till God hath all his Elect out of it: And then will the end be.

BOOK I. To Evidence the Demonſtration of this, that there is an Election, &c. I ſhall make uſe of no other Argument, than a Repreſentation, and Scheme of the courſe, and current, which runs down through All times, as the Scripture Stories have purpoſely, in a continuation of Inſtances of Perſons elected, drawn a Line of Election: And oppoſitely, together there is a Line of rejection throughout all Ages: Which way of proof is moſt proper, and ſutable to the courſe of the Text; which hath recourſe to an exemplary Inſtance of Election, continued in an Age, as deplorate as whatever in the Old Teſtament. This draught of the whole, ſet in one view, may prove pleaſant to you, and will be profitable for your Inſtruction.

There are thoſe in the World that ſay, God hath loved All Mankind alike as to Salvation; And to that purpoſe hath, in All ages, given them helps, and Divine Aſſiſtances in common, more or leſs, which we uſually term Common Grace: which if their Wills, being ſtirred up and moved thereby, will uſe well, then they may, and do obtain Faith, and an effectual Calling unto Salvation: And upon the right uſe of thoſe Common Adjutories it is, that God doth then Elect them, and not till then: Or upon the foreſight from All Eternity that they will do ſo. But if they do not uſe thoſe helps well, then they are reprobated, or rejected.

But from that rehearſal of Inſtances through All Ages, when put all together, it will appear, That the ſpecial Grace of Election hath put the difference: The one obtaining (as the word in the Text is,) by virtue thereof, The Election hath obtained it: whilſt the reſt of Mankind, with all their common helps, have periſhed; being left to the blindneſs and hardneſs of their own Hearts in the uſe of them; And the reſt were blinded. And the Story of the one ſort ſet oppoſitely to the other, as the Scripture in all Ages doth, will evince it.

Now my Argument from matter of Fact, or from the Examples recorded in ſuch a continued Series, to prove that this proceeded from Gods Eternal Purpoſes, and Decrees; and that one are Argumentative of the other, is founded upon this Rule, which will not deceive us: That what hath been done, and fallen out in the World; And as it hath been done, that God afore Decreed and Determined ſhould come to paſs; yea, and in that manner as it hath come to paſs; The infallibility of which Maxim, is abundantly evident in Scripture Declarations, and from undeniable Reaſon, drawn from the Perfections of God: If therefore in the Stories of All Ages, this differing Condition, and diſpoſement of Perſons be found; Then certainly the Decrees of God muſt have been the Supream Cauſe, and Determiner thereof: But above All things elſe, this general Rule will undeniably hold in the matter of Grace, and Election out of Grace: For there is nothing more Gods own to diſpoſe of to whom he pleaſeth, than Grace in us, and Glory to us, out of the freedom of the Grace in himſelf; and ſo are evidently dependent on his Soveraign Will: Shall he not (ſays Chriſt of him) do what he will with his own?

And for the confirming of this Rule, in this ſpecial caſe touching Election; that the matter of Fact, or what doth fall out in Perſons, as touching their Salvation, doth come to paſs in the Event, according to Gods everlaſting Decrees thereabout; I ſhall only mention what an Apoſtle, in an Aſſembly of Apoſtles, Acts 15. did only mention and alledg to this very purpoſe, as the Ground why the Gentiles came now, and but now to be Converted; which was newly begun to be done afore their eyes, in that Age, Verſ. 14. yea, and together therewith, the falling down, or decay of the Houſe of David, or the Church of the Jews; and the building of that Church in the Room thereof: Applying for the Iſſue, or fulfilling of both theſe, the Prophecy of Amos, Cap. 9. His words the Apoſtle rehearſeth in Acts 15. Verſ. 16, 17. After this I will return, and will build again the Tabernacle of David that is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will ſet it up: That the reſidue of Men might ſeek after the Lord, and All the Gentiles upon whom my name is called, ſaith the Lord, who doth all theſe things. And ſo cauſe this great Alteration foretold to have the more weight upon the minds minds of that Assembly, and cause the greater observation by them: He adds, Vers. 18. Known unto God are all his works, from the beginning of the World. Chap. 3.

The Coherence of which passage, with what afore, brings forth this Conclusion: That as God had foreknown, and Decreed; Even so He had foretold: And as He had both Decreed from Eternity, and foretold; Even so in the events it came to pass: And that, at that time wherein he had Foretold, and Decreed they should. Therefore in the close of the 12th. Vers. You read how the Prophet Amos doth add these words to his Prophesy of it; Saith the Lord, who doth All these things: It was not therefore his simple foreseeing what man would do; Nor what these Gentiles would do in their turning to God; And that this Conversion of them should fall out at that very Time, or Age: For the Prophet notes that circumstance also: After this, I will return says God, to do so, and so: Whereby it appears, that the Conversion of the Gentiles, and that at That time; And not for Two thousand Years time afore; Notwithstanding All those common helps that had been (as must be supposed) continued to them. This he says was the Lords doing, and wa marveilous in their eys: It was the Lord that doth All these things, that so Foretold it All; and every particular of them, who is said to work All things according to the Counsel of his Will, as Ephes. 1. And the Apostle he imputes and ascribes it thereunto, Vers. 18. Known unto God are All his works, from the beginning of the world. He brings this matter of Fact, or Event; Or that these things thus fell out, and Gods Everlasting Foreknowledge of them as his sole Work together, and shews how the Issue, or Event, and his Decree corresponded, and were Answering one to the other! He had foretold them long afore he did them, or brought them to pass, and Foretells withall that it should be his doing, and not Mans that effected them: And both his Foretelling, and the Effecting them, He tells us were from out of his Foreknowledge, and Decree so to do.

So that my Conclusion from All three stands firm, that All these Things, or these matters of Fact, and real Events, (as He terms them) as they fall out, so they were Foreknown and Decreed: And that therefore by the like Issues, and Events in point of mens having had Grace, and being saved; We may Infallibly Judge and Infer what were his Decrees. Let us hold then the contemplation of this Rule in our Eye, in All the Instances that I shall give of Persons: That look what we find fell out in the Execution, was but the Effect of Gods Foreknowledge. Even as the Conversion of the Gentiles at that time, was the same: and will hold true of the Conversion, Faith, and Salvation of every Person Recorded in the Scripture Story of their Godliness: Yea, and therefore also we find matters of Fact, or things to be done and come to pass, are said to be written in Gods Fore-Decrees, as in the Scripture of Truth. Dan. 12. 21. I will tell Thee saith the Angel, what is noted in the Scripture of Truth: And yet there was no outward Scripture as yet had spoken of it: Gods Decrees therefore are the Scriptures in which matters of Fact are first written. And therefore what our Scriptures have set down, and written, are All but Extracts and Copies taken out of the Scriptures in Gods Heart; In which they were written from Everlasting: Wherein it is equally said, The Names of All those particular Persons that are Elect Men, were first written as the Firstborn: And thus Clement, and those with Him, whose names are in the Book of Life, Phil. 4. 3. saies the Apostle: And therefore by the same Law, and Rule, we conclude that All those particular Persons whom out of the Scriptures we shall make recital of, as Just, and Holy, &c. We may safely write upon Each, and every Person of them, that they were Elect; and that they become Holy, and Righteous, it was by Election: And of the other sort of Wicked, and Ungodly, left to their natural blindness; We may say, They never were written in that Book of Life: But under the Title of the Rest, left out: Yea, and as the Apostles word is, Jude 4. Fore-written too in another Book: We may say of every one of each sort, The Scripture gives the different Catalogue of, Concordat cum originali.

Book I. And so I come to the Story I proposed: Which is the Map of Gods Decrees in the Execution of them, who doth All these things exactly, according to his Everlasting Purpose about them: Whose, his Works, are known to Him from the beginning.

I begin from the Fall, with the First Two that were put forth into the World; Next after Cain, an Election brake forth in Abel, he was of the Election, and Cain was the First-born of the Rest, or seed of the Serpent. You know that God when he Preached to Adam, and Evah, had by Prophecy divided all into two Seeds. Of the one Christ was to be the Head. The Seed of the Woman, &c. And of the other the Serpent. And the Seed of the Serpent are not all Men as by Nature? But those that prove wicked, and have an Enmity against the Saints. Now 1 John 3. 12. Cain is said to be of that Wicked One, there began the Seed, as Election of Grace and Works here in the 6th. Vers. make up the Fundamental Division. So the Covenant of Grace, and the Covenant of Works, are the Concomitants that follow thereupon. And to shew that the Covenant of Grace followed upon Election, and so the other upon Works; They accordingly did work in the hearts of these two first Men, the Sons of Adam; Cain betook himself to the Covenant of Works, as God speaking to the way of his heart shews; If thou dost well, shalt thou not be accepted? But Abel being of the Election he betook himself to Faith, he dealt with Godly Faith. Heb. 11. 4. By Faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent Sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness. That is, he was Righteous. And Faith betakes it self to the Grace of God, or Gods special Grace and Love, and is proper to the Elect. So then Abel was of the Election of Grace. Now 1 Titus 1. Its called the Faith of Gods Elect. And to manifest that Cain was a Cast-away, He was presently upon it cast out of his Father's Family, where the Presence of the Lord was, and never returned, but he and his People fell a building Cities. The Election obtained it, as the Phrase is of Abel, Hebr. 11 4. and Cain and the Rest were blinded. But then Seth, he through Election, obtained it, and Election ran in that Line among his Seed, and then men that were of him, began to call upon the Name of the Lord. They were Worshippers of God, and professed themselves to be of the Separation from Cain and his Posterity: And though few of them were Elect, (as by and by) yet among them we have some, as in those godly Persons, whose Catalogue you have in that of Seth's Children, Enoch, Mathusalah, &c. But in process of time, as the World was filled and multiplyed, even those that professed themselves the Sons of God, corrupted themselves, as you see Gen. 6. There was few of them Regenerate, they were of the company of the Rest, for you read in the Gen. 6. 3. speaking of the Sons of God. My Spirit shall not always strive with the Sons of Men, For they are all but flesh. They had the Gospel Preached, as 2 Pet. Chap. 3. By Enoch, &c. And Gods Spirit strove with them, so as to assist their Wills to Turn, but not to overcome their Wills, and so they remained but Flesh. And again at Vers. 5. of Gen. 6. And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the Earth; and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually; God had cast up the accounts of the whole World after 1600. Years, and he brings in this General, That every imagination of their thoughts was evil, and only evil, and that continually, Even in these Sons of Godly Professors, who yet notwithstanding, were thereby evidently unregenerate. For a Regenerate mans thoughts are not only evil, for he hath a world of good thoughts and affections. And again, Vers. 12. And God looked upon the Earth, and behold it was corrupt: for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the Earth. All flesh of one and th'other sort of Cains Seed, and Seths. It is worth the enquiry into the Original Cause of this. Why one there is, they were left to their Free-will-Grace, that is, those common helps of light of Nature, &c. to assist their Wills. They had the Preaching of Enoch. Noah a Preacher of Righteousness. And the Spirit of God accompanying their Ministry. For he did strive with them. And Christ was Preached to them. 1 Pet. 3. And the Spirits striving must be supposed to move and assist their Wills, and these

these Operations men call free; yet the Pondus or Weight of Flesh and Corruption prevailed, and carried them another way, and they were blinded. Chap. 3.

But you will say, Was there none of the Elect among them? Yes, Noah was, and some of his Family. Well, but still, what put the difference of Noah from the rest of the whole World? Look into the same Chapter, Gen. 6. and the 8th Verse; But Noah found Grace in the eyes of the Lord. Pray, what do you think to be the meaning of finding Grace in the eyes of the Lord? It expresseth Election in the words of my Text. As also when God says of Moses, the chosen of God, I have known thee by Name, and thou hast found Grace in my sight; and is all one with the Apostles, By Grace you are saved, Eph. 2. and so he became Heir of the Righteousness of Faith, Heb. 11. 7. for Faith follows Election inseparably. So then the Election obtained it, and the Rest, with all their Free-will helps, (yet being left to Flesh) were blinded and hardened. This is a strange thing, that among an whole World of People, there should not be found One, whose Free-will, assisted by common and general Grace, should have obtained it; (For he styles them the world of ungodly:) What not one? And that Noah by Election Grace should obtain it: Who would not venture to be Saved by the way of Election Grace? When 'tis a World to one that a Man is saved no other way.

Thus the Old World, as the Apostle calls it, both began and ended in, By Grace you are saved.

Let us now view the World that now is, as the same Apostle calls it. No sooner doth Noah, with his three Sons, come forth from the Ark, which was the Epoca from whence the New World began, but the Election and the Rest began anew to be declared, even among those three Sons that had been preserved from the Flood. And this appeared by Prophecy of Noah directed thereto by God; Blessed be the Lord God of Sem, says he, Gen. 9. 6. which imports that God was his Lord, and had chosen him and blessed him with all manner of Blessings. But what of the other: Cursed be Cam, he shall be a Servant of Servants; which is still that whereby Rejection is expressed. Japhet and his Posterity should one day be perswaded to live in the Tents of Sem; which was meant of the Calling of the Gentiles, the European Christians, Vers. 27. fulfilled more than Two thousand years after. For which, with difference from Cam, when Sem's Genealogy comes to be recorded, Gen. 11. 21. it is first prefaced, Sem the Father of the Children of Heber: that is, of the Church that was to be of the Hebrews, or Jews. And then 'tis added, The Brother of Japhet. Was not Cam the Brother of Sem also? Yes; but Japhet was to be the Father of the Gentiles, of whose Race the Church of the Gentiles was afterwards most to consist; and so they are yoked as Brethren in this Blessing, as Simeon and Levi in Evil.

From these Sons of Noah, did come the Division of the Nations, that then rose up. God divided their Languages, appointed the Bounds of their Habitations, according as the three Sons of Noah, and their Sons that came of them, did disperse themselves. The Number of which Nations, in their Division, you have recorded in the Catalogue of those Fathers of them that descended from Noah's three Children, Gen. 10. which to be the Scope of that Chapter, the last Verse shews; By these were the Nations divided in the Earth, after the Flood. And the Number of those Fathers, and so of the Nations, is found to be just Seventy.

At this Division of the Nations, which in his Counsel God appointed, Acts 17. 26. God was then to choose again, in what Nation or Nations he would have the great Current of his Elect on to run. This Division of the Nations is said to be made in Heber's time, Gen. 10. 25. who was the great Grandchild of Noah, or the third Succession descended from his Son of blessing, Sem: For until then, all the Children of Noah, and his Sons, lived together, and were of one Language. But after so long a time it was, that they were confounded in their Language, and began to scatter at Babel, (and not afore his time) and from that time to be scattered, and so did first begin to be set up Book I. those several Nations, which yet at the first must needs be supposed to have been done in some Succession of time.

But why is it with such a special notoriety said, This Division was made in Heber's time? even to signifie that upon the Division, God began to separate the Jewish Nation to himself in Heber, whom he first set out to be the Father of the Hebrew Nation, or the Church of the Jewish Nation, to begin with him. At the Division of other Nations, the Elect of Noah's Family having before that Division lain promiscuously intermingled, with those that were those Nations, but not till then divided. Therefore, Chap. 10. at the very entrance of Sem's Genealogy, Moses doth with the like Observancy begin it thus, Vers. 21. Sem the Father of all the Children of Heber. And why of Heber's Children? When Sem had other Children, whose Geneaology he also there Records, as Elam and Ashur (the Fathers of the Assyrians and Persian Nations) who were the elder Brethren to Arphaxad the Father of Heber, and Heber too was the third from Noah by this Arphaxad.

It is high time now to Demand what should this long Narrative tend to? Even unto this, to make way for, and to discover that next great and long Stage of Election in its new Race after the Flood, upon this Division of the Nations, how and what course it took and held; viz. that when God was now after the Flood to begin to choose among the Nations, when they were first Divided (which we have heard was in Heber's time) that then he chose the Hebrew Nation from among all those Nations, through whom this mighty Current of Election should run for above Two thousand years continuance. Every Tittle of this is the result of the foregoing Passages compared together, as any intelligent Reader, by putting things together, will easily discern: For in that it is said in Heber's days the Nations were divided, is imported withal, that in him, and from him, did the Hebrew Nation begin to be divided from the rest, as the other Nations were from one another. And accordingly we find his Posterity, (when even few) was called Hebrews, as their National Denomination and Distinction from those other Nations they lived amongst, Gen. 14. 13. Abraham the [Hebrew] t'is said, and Joseph the Hebrew, Gen. 39. And therefore also when they grew up into a great Body, and were multiplied, so as to deserve the name of a Nation, for their Numbers, and as then living in one of those divided Nations viz. among the Egyptians, they then reassume that Title, and are again stiled Hebrews, Exod. 15. 16. But yet more expressly in Balaams Prophecy, the whole Nation is stiled HEBER, Numb. 24. They shall afflict Ashur (meaning the Assyrian Nations, so called from their Father;) And they shall Afflict HEBER, that is, the Hebrews or Jewish Nation, named Heber from this their Fore-father, in likewise. And Then for the other part, that at the Division of the Nations God caused his Election to take its course through the heart and bowels of that Hebrew Nation, with difference from the other sixty nine Nations, as the event sufficiently evinceth; so another Scripture, added to these, doth signifie and confirm, And you have it as a Memorial set down in that highly Divine Song of Moses, which was his last to that People Deut 32. 7, 8, 9. Remember the days of old, consider the years of many Generations; Ask thy Father and he will shew thee, thy Elders and they will tell thee, when the most high Divided to the Nations their Inheritance, when he separated the Sons of Adam, he set the bounds of the People according to the Number of the Children of Israel. For the Lords portion is his People, Jacob is the lot of his Inheritance. He Bids them look back unto Ancient days, the Traditions where of their Fathers had left down to them: And among other, how his eye of Grace and favor was upon them, to single their Fathers forth then, when he divided the Nations, (relating to that Famous Division, Gen. 10.) The Number of the Children of Israel being, when first in Egypt, Seventy Souls; and just so many, even Seventy Heads, or Fathers of the Nations, is the Number they are divided into, Gen. 10. and from thence to have continued to that day the same to themselves, who were their Posterity, with this Great difference, That unto the Nations he appointed (as also Paul, Acts 17.) Bonds of Habitations as their Portions and Inheritances on the Earth, as in Vers. 8. But had that

Eye

Eye of Grace upon his Nation, as to make them a Portion and Inheritance unto himself: For (says he) as thereby expressing Gods special Love by this, Chap. 3. Vers. 9. For the Lords Portion is his People; Jacob is the Lot of his Inheritance. And by these, and the like expressions, it is, that Election is signified in many Places Parallel to this, as Deut. 7. 6. The Lord thy God hath chosen thee to be a special people unto himself, above all people that are upon the face of the Earth. Psal. 135. 4. For the Lord hath chosen Jacob unto himself; and Israel for his peculiar Treasure. And you see it is so in my Text. Which though as it is spoken of that whole Nation, was but in a Type; Yet in that Type was shewed, That in that Nation peculiarly, there were those his Chosen People, that were Ordained to Eternal Communion with himself.

Well, but you may demand what became of the other Nations, and what was the general condition of them? Truely, their Lot fell to be the [Rest] to speak in the Language of the Text. The Apostle hath given a brief Resolve; (And that being added, doth make the proof of the other part of the Doctrine, and so the whole of it compleat.) Acts 14. 15, 16. We Preach to you (saies Paul to the Lystrians) That you would turn from these vanities; (So he terms their Idols and false Gods, they generally Worshipped) to the living God. We preach unto you, that ye should turn from these vanities, unto the living God, which made Heaven and Earth, and the Sea, and all the things that are therein. Who in times past suffered all Nations to walk in their own ways. Which he adds, to shew how the Condition of all Nations was the same with that of these Lystrians, given up to the same Idolatry. The Issue then of all comes, to what is in the Text, that the Rest were blinded. God took Election out from among the Jews. For himself, And the Rest were left to the Counsells of their own Wills.

We might here leave off, and sit down and take breath; For the Two thousand Years and upwards space that follow. As having seen how, and where Election was disposed of; Together with the Preterition of the Rest. That God had alone known, and owned the Jewish Nation, and an Election proceed forth from amongst them; As by the Prophet Amos, a long while after the times (we have been now upon) God utters himself. And so we might come immediately to the Times of the New Testament; But that we find among Hebers Children both before and after it grew up into a Body as a Nation for Numbers, some eminent Observations in the Story of the Old Testament: How Election went on, to make the like difference, even amongst them——. And hath (as if the Holy Ghost delighted to do it) Recorded many apparent particular Instances of an Election. And the Rest to have run along in their Families, and Tribes: And this I am bound to do, the rather, because our Apostle in these 9*th.* 10*th.* 11*th.* Chapters to the Romans, Insists especially on those Instances, as most apparent Examples of what I Pursue.

1. Before they grew up to be a Nation (for Number) as in Ægypt, they became the Genealogy of Sem and Heber, is set down Gen. 11. from Vers. 27. to the end of the Chapter, and Centers in Abraham.

So then we are to begin anew in Him, and from Him, whom God made his Covenant with; For Him and his Seed after, saying, I will be thy God, And of thy Children, which was Indefinitely spoken, But the Apostle informs us All were not Children, but those were the Children, that were Children of Promise; That is, those whom God in giving out the Promises, did intend therein; And they were only his Elect.

The Prophet Isai. Chap. 51. 1, 2. Calls upon that People to consider Abraham their Founder and Original. Look unto the Rock whence ye are Hewen, and to the hole of the Pit whence ye are Digged. Look unto Abraham your Father, and unto Sarah, that bare you; For I called Him alone, and Blessed Him, and increased Him. And unto what should they look at in Him or Her? 1. At what his condition was afore his Calling, a Server of other Gods, until his

his calling an Idolater, from the midst of whom God did single him out; Which Joshua lays afore that people to look at, and consider, Chap. 24. 2, 3. And Joshua said unto all the people, thus saith the Lord God of Israel, your Fathers dwelt on the other side of the Flood in Old time, even Terah, the Father of Abraham, and the Father of Nathor: And they served other Gods. And I took your Father Abraham from the other side of the Flood, and led him throughout all the Land of Canaan, and multiplied his Seed, and gave him Isaac. Was it then his well using of Natural Helps, or Additional Light by Education? Surely no. But as degenerate Children of Heber, he and his Father both were servers of other Gods. Therefore look 2. That it must be Election, or Electing Love that moved God so to Call Him, and could be no other. Moses in the General, layeth afore their consideration, Gods Love and Choice of their Father; Deut. 4.37. He loved thy Fathers, of whom Abraham is counted first and chief. And Chap. 10. 14. Only he had a delight to love them, and so set his heart upon them. And that word only singly points out that his love to have been the sole Cause; 'Twas only that he loved them, &c. And so in like manner chose you after them. As it follows in Deut. 10. But more particularly, and expresly, Nehemiah in his Solemn Prayer says it of Abraham, the 9th. 7th. Thou art the Lord the God, who didst choose Abram, and brought him forth out of Ur, of the Caldees, and gave it him the Name of Abraham. For an Election of Grace was most conspicuous in his Example. Therefore Vers. 3. I called him alone, (says God by the Prophet there) consider that too. I know that that word alone, Interpreters wholly carry to import that he was called a Single, or an Alone man when God Called. As in reference, and in a way of opposition to what follows. And I increased him in so numerous a Posterity, out of that one Mans Loyns. But why not also, and perhaps rather, that God singled him out alone, in respect that he was the First that was Called——And his Father, and Lot, and Sarah, were by and upon his Calling, moved to turn with him to the true Worship of the True God. But he alone First, and so was the Restorer of Religion in that Family, and therefore in him Election did first Eminently break forth in Gods so extraordinarily taking him forth Alone as he did. Paul without being instructed by Man, but by Revelation.—— And this Stephen Observes as with difference, from those others that left their Country with him, (as Paul differenceth his Conversion from other Jews) Thus Acts 7. 2. The God of Glory appeared unto our Father Abraham, when he was in Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in Charran; The Title of the God of Glory, is thus given him, because God appeared in a Glorious manner to him, and he also is Alone there mentioned; Because he was the Hee Goat, and first leader of his Father and them into Charran, and After his Fathers death, of Lot into Canaan. And this Ainsworth hath also Observed upon the 31th. Verse of Gen. 11. Especially from those words in that Verse, That Lot, and Sarah went forth [with them] from Ur of the Chaldees, that is (saith he) with Abraham, and his Father; Whom Abraham acquainting with the Oracle of God to himself; His Father repenting of his false Worship, went out with him (as Ainsworth's words there are) and so Lot with them, that is, with Abraham, and his Father.

And that God revealed to Abraham his Electing of him, and so that his first Call proceeded therefrom; As also of all the Spiritual Seed. That one Passage cited and Interpreted by Paul, Heb. 6. Hath abundantly satisfied me (Abraham being therein made the Pattern of us in Election (the Original of Salvation) as well as he is in point of Believing, and Justifying, (the way to Salvation). Heb. 6. 13. God sware by himself, saying, surely, blessing, I will bless thee, and multiplying, I will multiply thee. That is, first, I will bless thee in thine own Person, and then in multiplying thee into a Spiritual Seed, the Heirs of Promise with thee; Of whom thou shalt have the honour to be styled the Father, because therein thou beareſt the Type of my Christ, who is the Everlasting Father, and my first Chosen, and others in him. Now the Apostle in Applying this to the comfort of all Elect Believers, (who were intended in that part of the Promise, in multiplying, I will multiply thee. As is plain in the Place he cites. Gen. 17. 22. In multiplying, I will multiply thy seed) seed. He Interprets this Promise to have proceeded from, and to declare Gods Eternal purpose of Election——by his inserting by way of Gloss, those few words, the Immutability of his Counsel, as that which his Promise Proceeded from, and expressed, Vers. 17. wherein God willing more abundantly to shew unto the Heirs of Promise the Immutability of his Counsel, confirmed it by an Oath: And what is the Immutability of his Counsel; But his unchangeable Decrees? A promise made by God to us is one thing, and Gods Counsel is another; his Counsels are his Decrees within himself, from Everlasting, as Ephes. 14. 9, 10. And what other is a Promise with an Oath, but Gods Immutable Counsel, or Election put into Promise? And who are the Heirs of Promise, but the same whom in Rom. 9. he terms the Children of Promise? (And if Children, then Heirs; such as Isaac there is said to have been,) Rom. 9. 7, 8. Neither because they are the Seed of Abraham, are they all Children; but in Isaac shall thy Seed be called: That is, they which are the Children of the Flesh, these are not the Children of God; but the Children of the Promise, are counted for the Seed. Chap. 3.

But though we have seen the Election to have obtained it in Faithfull Abraham, yet that is but one part of my Assertion; you may yet enquire concerning the other part: Are there none recorded to have been [the Rest] as those that were blinded? So to set off the Grace of Abrahams Election, and render it the more conspicuous? Yet verily; even in his Father's House his own Brother Nahor. You not only read not of his not removing with Abraham, as Converted with him to his Religion (which his Father Terah repenting did, and Lot,) of which you may read, Gen. 11.) But Nahor would not Stir, not he, a foot, though Father and Brothers and Sister went out from Ur of the Caldees, but remained still with his Idolatrous Countreymen, and continued an Idolater, and derived it down as his Religion to his Posterity.

You know, or have heard it I suppose, out of the Story of Labans (Nahors Grand-child) his Images, Gen. 31. 19. which himself calls his Gods, Vers. 30. As also how, when Jacob and he came to take an Oath, Jacob sware by the God of his Father Isaac (who was then living:) And Laban sware by the God of his Grand-father Nahor, Vers. 53. Yea, and in the plural, calleth them the Gods [אלהי] The Gods of Abraham, and the Gods of Nahor, Judge between us: Whether meaning thereby that at first Abraham himself had served the same Gods that Nahor had done, or that Laban joined Nahors Gods with Abrahams, the true God, and so that Nahor served both, so to blind himself and Jacob by Oath? I have not time now to dispute: For however, thereby 'tis plain, That Laban professed to worship those Gods, and so other Gods besides the true, which the jealous God will in no wise bear in those he calls to draw neer unto him to Worship him. Whereas Jacob sweares only by the fear of his Father Isaac, that is, whom, Isaac feared. And answerably, Laban professeth further, that these Gods he swore by, were the Gods which his Father Bethuel, and his Grand-father Nahor, Abrahams own Brother, had Worshipped as their Gods. So then you see of what Religion they of that line were of, and that they had continued Idolaters, in their successive generations, and thereby are manifestly declared to have been of the Rest that were blinded.

Abrahams Family (as a worthy Interpreter hath observed) did in his next and Immediate Succession, bear the Type or Resemblance of the future Condition of the Church: and in his Family and next Successors, there fell out of all other the most pregnant Instances of Election and Preterition: For as his Family was the first part, to the Epitome of the ensuing Whole, and accordingly the Scripture hath made the most singular observations hereof. There are two pairs of Instances in that Family 1c Of Isaac and Ismael, the Immediate Sons of Abraham. Then 2ly, Of Iacob and Esau, the Sons of Isaac, Extant whilst Abraham was alive.

See Rivetus in Genesin Exercit. 102, Cap. 21. Cum tamen certum sit Domum Abrahami per illum tempus fuisse typum Ecclesiæ, non solum analogia sumpta à parte ad totum quæ tamen in hoc Argumento negligi non debet; sed maxima à constantissima Dei natura cujus una est semper sibi constans ergaecclesiam voluntas, unaque ratio quæ ex hominibus sibi facit filios; quemadmodum igitur in familia Abrahami per Electionem suam discrevit fratres ut unus esset hæres, alter excluderetur Ismael, quamvis ipso Abraham aliter sentiret; sic enim per electionem suam arcanam discrevit filios promissionis quibus fidem dare voluit, ut in semine Abrahami censerentur; ab iis qui earum prærogativa turgentes, non sunt Israelitæ secundum spiritum.

1. That

Book I.

1. That Isaac was a Child of pure Election Grace, as the aforehand cause of his Faith and Holiness, and not the subsequent of Election without Works, and that as such he was cast into Abraham's bosom, as a pretious gift, whilst Ishmael was excluded from that Blessing, is evident enough from the story itself in Moses, although the Apostle should not have moreover expresly told us so and alledged it to that purpose: For that God, e're he was Conceived, should declare him Heir of the same Salvation with Abraham, and immutably and irreversibly Estate the Covenant of Grace upon him as an Inheritance setled on him by an entail with a professed difference from Ishmael, Gen. 17. 19, 20, 21. And God said, Sarah thy Wife shall bear thee a Son indeed, and thou shalt call his Name Isaac; and I will Establish my Covenant with him, for an Everlasting Covenant, and with his seed after him. And as for Ishmael, I have heard thee: Behold, I have blessed him, and will make him fruitfull, and I will multiply him exceedingly; Twelve Princes shall he beget, and I will make him a Great Nation. But my Covenant will I establish with Isaac, whom Sarah shall bear unto thee, at this set time in the next year; which you know how the Apostle applies unto the Covenant of Grace and works, Gal. 4. 22, 23, 24, 25, 26. For it is written, that Abraham had two Sons, the one by a Bond-maid, the other by a Free-woman. But he who was of the Bond-woman was born after the Flesh: But he of the Free-woman, was by Promise. Which things are of Allegory; for these are the two Covenants: the one from Mount Sinai, which gendreth to Bondage, which is Agar. For this Agar in Mount Sinai in Arabia, and answereth to Jerusalem, which now is, and is in bondage with her Children: But Jerusalem, which is above, is Free, which is the Mother of us all. And that afterwards, whilst Isaac was but young, and lay as a Sacrifice bound upon the Altar, God should by an Oath confirm the Promises made of blessing him, Gen. 22. 16. By my self have I Sworn; and with him his spiritual Seed, Vers. 17. In blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy Seed as the Stars of the Heaven, and as the Sand which is upon the Sea shore; and thy Seed shall possess the Gate of his Enemies. Whereof Isaac was the first included and intended, for it was as in reference to, and upon occasion of him, that God uttered it. Thou hast not witheld thy Son, thy only Son, from Vers. 13. therefore I will multiply thee in him in so numerous a Seed as are the Stars or Sands. This Oath (as we afore observed out of the Apostles Interpretation of it) was intended of the Spiritual Seed, the Heirs of Promise, such as Isaac was, the declared Son of Promise; and this Oath declared how that Promise proceeded from Gods Immutable Counsel, as the Apostle Interprets it, which is Election, that sure Foundation, the Lord knows who are his, and knew well what he then did in so swearing. And shall we think that Gods Oath and irrevocable Promise was built and founded upon the Immutability of Isaac's Free-will-Grace, and such helps (as he should by Free-will use them) which he should for the Future have in Abrahams Family, in Common with Ishmael. Isaac was yet to live a long while in the World, and might according to the Principles of Free-will-Grace have fallen away and proved unregenerate; and God could have no such sure and certain assurance of him as to venture (as I may so say) an Oath upon him, with a peremptory irreversible Blessing of him. What, and Establish his Everlasting Covenant with him upon the uncertain fickleness and mutability of Free-will, no otherwise? Nay would God have pawned by Oath his own self, by my self have I sworn, so as to cease to be God, if Isaac and Abraham both should cease to persevere in Faith to the End of their Lives (for it was Abrahams Case also according to their Position to have been assisted, but according to the Rule of Free-will-Graces assistance) as surely as God said surely, &c. The Foundation of of this Oath lay deeper in Gods own Heart, it lay in the Immutability of his own Counsel; which he purposed within himself, wherewith he invincibly resumed and undertook to carry on Isaac's and Abraham's Wills to the end: Not in the Stability of what he foresaw was within themselves. But we need spend no more time upon this of Isaac, nor would have done, had it not made for a Comfortable Issue to us all, of which by and by.

The

The Apostle therefore to confirm that distinction of his, of an Election, from the common Israelite; He instanceth to that end, in the Persons of Ishmael and Isaac; and then Esau, and Jacob: Which Instances do manifestly declare, First, that the Promises of God to Abraham, That God would be the God of his Seed, Gen. 17. were limited in their intent to the Persons of Isaac, and so to Jacob, as leading Examples unto the rest of that Seed of his that should be Children of the Promise; In affirming of these in particular, That they were in Gods Foreknowledge, the only Children of the Promise, and not those other, either Esau, and Ishmael; only with this difference from others of the Elect to follow, That Isaac, and Jacob, were definitely and by Name declared Children of the Promise, whereas the Elect Seed which were to come after, are but indefinitely spoken of in the Promise to Abraham: I will be a God [of thy seed] not naming Who, and yet not intending All of his Carnal Seed, are therefore indefinitely delivered, and uttered, and so are to be understood; Yet so, as in that Indefinite promulgation of them, God did intend within Himself (who alone knows Personally who are His) those very individual Persons, whom he had Chosen, and these only: And they only are the Children of Promise, even as Isaac, and Jacob, are said to be. Only Isaac and Jacob came by Name to be mentioned in personal Promises of them, but the other of the Seed Elect. Their Names are concealed, yet still so as the Promises are only theirs, and they only Children of the Promise, as well as Isaac and Jacob were. All the indefinite Promises of Salvation, are but the expressions of Election, and its intendments, indefinitely declared as touching the Persons; Yet those persons were fixed upon by God, and for their sakes, those Promises are given. And this is evidently the scope of the Apostles Argument there, to prove that all are not Israel, that are of Israel; Nor all Children of the Promise; Or else his proof of this from those instances had, not held. Though the Promises were, because indefinite, to be promulged to all, that none knowing but that himself might be a Person intended, as well as any other, might be moved to seek for an assured interest in the Promise, by effectual Calling, and Conversion. And because of this general promulgation, it is, that Peter Exhorts the Jews in that manner as he doth, Acts 3. 25,26. Ye are the children of the Prophets, and of the Covenant which God made with our Fathers, saying unto Abraham, and in thy Seed shall all the Kindreds of the Earth be blessed. Unto you first, God having raised up his Son Jesus, sent him to bless you, in turning away every one of you from his iniquities.

Chap. 3.

Now as the Apostle proves by these two pair of Instances of Isaac and Ishmael, &c. That this was a leading case of the like difference among the People of Israel to come; So he as plainly resolves this difference put between them, (and so in their Example among others) into Gods Election, who having pitcht his Eye and Grace on some, doth in the foresight and intuition of them, effectually designed by him, give forth and utter those Promises of Salvation, which are but the very Declaration of an Election amongst the Sons of Men, and the matters, or things that are promised therein are but what Election did design, only declareth them as to us, but indefinitely as to Persons; So that still these Elect only are the children of the promise intended, which that they are so, is in the end discovered by effectual Calling, and Conversion wrought in them, and not in others. That all this is So, (and it is a great so) is evident by the 11*th. Vers.* that follows in that 9*th.* Chapter, For the children (Namely, Esau, and Isaac) being not yet born, neither having done any Good or Evil, That the Purpose of God according to Election might stand, not of Works, but of him that calleth.

'Tis clearly resolved into Gods purpose by Election, and shews how that Election discovers its self upon the Children of Promise, by causing the Promises to take hold by working Faith in the hearts of those who are intended by God in the Promise, and are only the true Children of the promises, Sons of peace, as Christ aforehand, when he sent his Apostles to Preach the Gospel of Peace, enstiles them; And thus it was that Election manifested it self in Isaac, and Jacob. And Election manifested it self in the effectual Calling both of Isaac and of Jacob. As the last words in Vers. 11. That the purpose of God according Book I. cording to Election might ſtand, not of works, but of him that calleth. And although in the inſtance of Iſaac, he hath not mentioned a Scripture that hath the Election of Him: (And yet that in Gen. 17. 21. My Covenant will I eſtabliſh with Iſaac, is a plain declaration of the thing it ſelf,) And then the difference profeſſedly here put between him and Iſhmael, and others of Abrahams Children, doth ſufficiently evince the Grace of Election to have been the cauſe of the difference. And however the driſt and current of the Apoſtles Diſcourſe clearly inſinuates it. For in the other inſtance about Jacob, He manifeſtly declares it in thoſe words Verſ. 11. That the purpoſe according to Election might ſtand. And his Allegation of Jacobs inſtance, and of Iſaacs, are both to one and the ſame purpoſe, which is to prove an Election; Which he propoſed as his Theſis, or Aſſertion in the words afore, If Therefore the One doth ſo expreſly mention an Election of him as the cauſe of this difference of him from Iſhmael; Then certainly the ſame holds as intended in that of him, as well as that of Jacob. Now that Election was the declared cauſe in the Caſe of Jacob, he produceth two Teſtimonies out of the Old Teſtament, the one given his Mother whilſt both were in the Womb; the Elder (namely, by Birth) ſhall ſerve the Younger. The other utterd by the Prophet, Jacob have I loved, Eſau have I hated. Servitude was uſed to expreſs the Curſe of rejection, as Gen. 9. 25. Curſed be Canaan a Servant of Servants ſhall he be unto his Brethren. And in Eſau it ſignified alſo the loſs of the Inheritance which he had by Birth-right, which was the Type of Heaven; All which agrees with the caſe of Iſhmael, Gal. 4*th*. The Son of the Bond-woman ſhall not be heir with the Son of the Free-woman. And ſo thereby the Inheritance of Heaven, was declared not to be deſigned by God to him; And ſo the Promiſes not to intend him. And this was ſaid of him, when yet he had not done good or evil, that is, without the conſideration of the difference of any Works, in either to have moved God to have put the difference; And this comprehended with Eſau, firſt, the Edomites who came of him, in whom the Curſe began, and deſcended to them, as in the ſame Prophet Malachi, 1. 4. They ſhall call them the people againſt whom the Lord hath indignation: Whereas on the contrary, the Love and Bleſſing took hold firſt on Jacob, and ſo deſcended down to thoſe that were the Children of Promiſe amongſt his Seed. Thus much for what of this Argument is in the Ninth Chapter of the Epiſtle to the Romans.

Now how punctually doth the Apoſtle continue to proſecute this ſame Argument here in this 11*th* Chapter, though more amply and in plainer Terms, yet to the ſame Iſſue, and Effect, whilſt he aſſumes the ſame diſtinction of Children of Promiſe there diſtinguiſhed from the reſt of Iſrael, as Children of the Fleſh, as here He doth of His people whom he foreknew as the Original Cauſe of that difference, now in the Apoſtle his days, put between a few and the reſt of Iſrael, that were paſſed by which he doth in plain words, Verſ. 5. Even ſo then at this preſent time alſo there is a remnant according to the Election of Grace. And Verſ. 7. What then? Iſrael hath not obtained that which he ſeeketh for; but the Election hath obtained it, and the reſt were blinded. So as whoever will but conſider the reference, and reſpect thoſe and other paſſages in this 11*th*. Chapter, have with thoſe other in Chapter the 9*th*. muſt withal acknowledge, that if Election to Salvation be meant in this 11*th*. Chapter (which no man can deny) that it muſt alſo be intended in Chapter 9. which ſcope divers have gone about to fruſtrate and make Null.

Well, I come to thoſe; Now when Iſrael grew up to be a Nation, and to be a Church unto God, as they are called in the 7*th*. of the Acts. Why that God did take the whole Nation in the Type, becauſe he had an Election among them. It is put upon Election as you will ſee in Deut. 14. 2. Says he, the Lord thy God hath choſen thee to be a peculiar people to himſelf above all the Nations that are upon the Earth. That he choſe them above all the Nations; Was it becauſe they uſed their Free-will better, for which he thus choſe them? Oh No, he tells them along, that they were a ſtiff-necked people; and he tells them he did Foreknow what they would be, Deut. 31. 21. I know the imaginations which they go about, for I ſee their wickedneſs, yet have I choſen them. Their Vine was the Vine of Sodom, Deut. 32. 32. Their Vine worſe than the Vine of Sodom: If you read it as it is in the Margent, worse than the Heathen about them, Ezek. 5. 1. He Juſtified Sodom and Gomorrah in compariſon of them, Ezek. 16. 47. 48. Yet Election pitched among them, though they had changed his Statutes more then any People, Thou waſt corrupted more then they in all thy ways, look in Ezek. 5. 6. And ſhe hath changed my Judgments into wickedneſs more then the Nations, and my ſtatutes more then the Countrys that are round about her: for they have refuſed my Judgments, and my Statutes, they have not walked in them. Yet the Election took place among them. Chap. 3.

My Brethren, it is to me a great Obſervation, though he choſe them to be his People in a Type, that there were a Company among them on whom his heart was ſet; There was Moſes, as he is called the choſen of God, and Aaron: What, to office only? No; there was more in it. Exod. 33. I know thee by Name: And at the 19th Verſ. when God was to proclaim his Mercies, He ſaid, I would make all my goodneſs to paſs before thee; and I will proclaim the name of the Lord before thee; and will be Gracious to whom I will be Gracious, and will ſhew Mercy on whom I will ſhew Mercy. The Lord profeſſes this aforehand, that he intends this but to ſome ſpecial Ones among them, I will be merciful, but to whom I will be merciful. The Apoſtle quoting it in the Caſe of Election, adds; Whom he will he Hardens. It was an Election whom he knew by Name. What is Election? Why, It is I will be merciſull to ſuch and ſuch: Merciful, ſaith the Lord, that hath mercy on thee; that is, that hath choſen thee, and pitched his Mercy on thee.

Well then; when the People were come into the Land, and the Worſhip of God began to be ſetled, ſtill Election ran one way more then another. There were, you know, Ten Tribes, and there were two Tribes: Election ſhewed which way it bended. I ſhall give you a place out of the Pſalms; Pſal. 78. 67, 68. Moreover, he refuſed the Tabernacle of Joſeph: and choſe not the Tribe of Ephraim. But choſe the Tribe of Judah; the mount Sion which he loved. He ſpeaks of the times of the Judges: The rejection of the Ten Tribes began to ſhew itſelf ſoon; he ſays, he refuſed the Tabernacle of Ephraim; but he choſe Judah. After Solomon's time they fell to Worſhipping of Calves; (Let me tell you, it is the declining of Election that undoes a Nation; when Election grows low, and ceaſes in an Age) till at laſt the Ten Tribes were caſt off; and they are, at this day: But the Tribe of Judah had Election among them.

Well, come to Goſpel times: When Chriſt firſt ſent his diſciples out, he gave them a Command, and he gave them an Inſtruction, as you may read in the 10th of Matthew, and the 10th. of Luke. In Matth. 10. 5, 9. ſays he, Theſe twelve Jeſus ſent forth, and commanded them, ſaying, Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not: But go rather to the loſt ſheep of the Houſe of Iſrael. Yet afterwards, when the Regions were white unto Harveſt, then he bids them go and preach to every Creature, Mark. 16. 15. You have a Direction which he gives them, Luke 10. 6. Go ye and ſay, Peace be unto this Houſe; but be not troubled if it be not entertained: If the Son of Peace be there, your Peace ſhall reſt upon it: That is, one that is ordained to Peace and Salvation. What ſays Paul, Hath the Word taken none effect? Brother, ſays he, there be many thouſands of the Jews that do Believe: If there be a Son of Peace, it ſhall Reſt upon that Soul. Why now then, when our Saviour Chriſt was gone off the Earth, gone up to Heaven, he ſent the Apoſtle; and where the Election took place, they obtained Salvation. What is the Reaſon that the Apoſtles were forbidden to preach in ſome places amongſt the Gentiles, and bid to ſtay in other places? It was becauſe that God had much People there: Look in Acts 16. 6. Now when they had gone through Phrygia, and the Region of Galatia, and were forbidden of the Holy Ghoſt to preach the word in Aſia, after they were come to Myſia, they aſſayed to go into Bythinia; but the Spirit ſuffered them not. What is the reaſon, on the other ſide, when they were at Corinth Chap. 18. Verſ. 9. 10. Paul being at Corinth the Lord ſpake to him by a Viſion, ſpeak, be not afraid, for I am with thee, and no Man ſhall ſet on thee to hurt thee: For I have much People in this City. And when they came to a City, one expelled them, others entertained them:

Book I. What is the account that Paul gives of it, Acts 13. 48. As many as were ordained unto Eternal Life, believed. There were but a few among those Gentiles that Believed, others stirred up Persecutions, and they expelled them their Coasts.

Jesus Christ from Heaven forbids Paul to stay any longer at Jerusalem but to go to the Gentiles, Acts 22. 18. 21. I was in a trance, and saw him saying unto me, make haste and get thee quickly out of Jerusalem, for they will not receive thy Testimony concerning me; whither shall he go then? Vers. 21. And he said unto me depart, for I will send thee far hence unto the Gentiles. It was as Election ceased, or was found, so they were sent accordingly to Preach. Where there was a good company of the Elect, the Gospel ran like wild fire. 1 Thes. 1. 5. says Paul, I know your Election to be of God. Why? For our Gospel came not to you in Word, but in Power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much Assurance. You know what manner of men we were among you. God did mightily raise up my Spirit, and did a great deal of Good.——I need not tell you why the Jews were cast off, and the Gentiles called: You may read from the 9*th.* to the 11*th.* Chapter of the Romans.

Come to the Dark times of Popery, after the Apostles were gone off the Stage. He tells you, that all the World should wonder after the Beast; it is in two places, 13 Rev. 8. All that dwell on the earth, shall Worship him whose names are not written in the Lambs book of life: Look in the 17 Chapter, 8. 'And they that dwell on the Earth shall wonder, (whose Names were not 'written in the Book of Life, from the foundation of the World) when they 'behold the Beast that was, and is not, and yet is.

You are come now to our very times. There will come a time when those hardned people the Jews, that they say, spit at the Name of Christ. Continually hardned more, and more, and caked in hardness this 1600 Years. The Rom. 11*th.* tells us, that there is a time coming, wherein all Israel shall be saved, 25, 26 Vers. of Rom. 11*th.* I would not Brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this Mystery (Lest ye should be wise in your own Conceits) that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in. And so all Israel shall be saved, &c. Why? But what is the Case of these Elect.

As concerning the Gospel, they are Enemies for your sakes; But as touching the Election, they are Beloved for the Fathers sake, Vers. 29. For the Gifts and Callings of God are without Repentance. The Gentiles have had it so many hundred Years; What is the reason of difference? it is Election; Therefore he concludes, O the depth of the Riches, both of the Wisdom and Knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out.

CHAP

Chap. 4.

CHAP. IV.

The Instance of Noah, and his being Sav'd in an Ark, and God's Covenant made with him prov'd more largely and fully to be a Great Exemplar, and Typical Representation of Election, and the Covenant of Grace.

IN that draught of the Line of Election that runs thorough the whole Scriptures, I could but briefly touch upon that one Particular instance of Noah, and his Sons: But my meditations have been Since more especially inlarged about this Noah: That not only himself, in his own Person, as recorded in His Story, to have been a special Instance and Example of Electing Grace, and of the Covenant thence flowing; but farther, that Gods Covenants made with him, and his Seed, and Gods dealings with him (according to those Covenants) were Prophetique Figures of His Covenant with his Church, in the times of the New Testament; who were, by vertue of the Election of Grace, to be raised up out of his Loins: And the demonstration of this out of the Scriptures, is the Design and Subject of this Appendix; which I chose thus to sever from the former, because it would have taken up too much room in that brief Enumeration of so many other Persons that are instances of Election in that Catalogue; and yet it subserveth to the same end, and purpose: I therefore annex it thereunto, as an Appendix to that discourse.

I have a long time look't at that which both the Old Testament, and the New, Stile the Covenant of Grace, or the New Covenant, to be but Election-Purposes, and Designs put into Promises: God expressing therein the gracious intentions, and resolutions of himself towards his Elect, which had been taken up by him from Eternity: Only whereas Election in Gods Heart then, did design the individual Persons, together with the things decreed, to them he hath in the Promises; and revealed declarations of the Covenant of Grace concealed the particular Persons; And doth only indefinitely propound the Subjects, of those Promises touching the Person intended, that they are Sinners of Mankind, and that of All sorts and Conditions; to whom, and upon whom, God therein declareth that he will certainly, and infallibly make good that Covenant, and the Promises thereof: And himself hath therein undertaken to perform it in them, though not for them, as to give them new Hearts and new Spirits; to teach them to know him, and his Son Christ, the Mediator of that Covenant, and the like; And in such absolute terms of Promises on Gods part doth that Covenant run, with difference from the Covenant of Works; so as the Materials of the Covenant of Grace are All one with Election-decrees, in the things decreed, though the Persons are not named whom God will infallibly bestow them upon; but yet with greatest certainty declared that God will perform it to and amongst Mankind: and yet the Persons who, being left indefinite, that ought to set All awork to seek to come under it, in such ways as God hath commanded All men that within the hearing of it seek him in.

Noah's Story, doth, partly in the reality to his own Person, partly in the Type of things in that Story: These two Eminent parts, concerning our Salvation.

1. Gods Covenant of Grace; and Gods everlasting Kindness therein; which is the spring of that Covenant: and for that I take Isai. 54. 9. 10. for my Text.

11. The Type of the Mediator of that Covenant, Christ; which was the Ark and how that Christ as signified in our Baptism, is the sole Author of Salvation to us: And for that I refer to the 1 Peter. 3. 20, 21. Which sometime were were disobedient, when once the long suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the Ark was a preparing: Wherein few, that is eight Souls were saved by Water: THE LIKE FIGURE WHEREUNTO EVEN BAPTISM DOTH ALSO NOW SAVE US (Not the putting away the filthiness of the flesh, but the answer of a good Conscience toward God) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ.

III. The work of the Covenant in us and upon us; namely of Faith &c. which God hath as peremptorily also ordained to be the means of the application of Christ for Salvation to us; and without which we shall not be saved: And for this take Noahs instance, Hebr. 11. 7. By faith Noah being warned of God, of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an Ark to the saving of his House; by the which he condemned the World, and became heir of the Righteous which is by Faith. The Example of Noah there in the Type, set out, gives us a lively Pattern of the Work of Salvation in us, answering to his Faith about the Ark (that is) through the work of Application to us by Faith on Christ.

IV. The Difficulties, Distresses, Hazards, Temptations, thorough which we pass, (after our being in Christ,) under the Covenant of Grace, 'ere we arrive at Heaven: And for this I take those words in the forecited. Isai. 54. 11. O thou afflicted, and tossed with tempest, and not comforted! speaking to his Church, which in their coherence with the verses afore 9. and 10. have manifestly a respect to Noah's Condition in the Ark: which in those 9. and 10. verses, God hath first made mention of.

And it is the first of these, upon Isai. 9. 10. which I single forth for my present Argument; which is an Examplication of Election, and of the Covenant of Grace in Noahs Person and Story.

SECTION I.

Of Election, and the Covenant of Grace; and the Church of the new Testament; the Subject of both; as typified forth in Noahs Story. That Noah in his own person was intended as an Example of Election, the Covenants made with him before the Flood, and with him and his Sons after were Types of the Covenant of Grace: Proved in a Discourse on

ISAI. LIV. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11.

For a small Moment have I forsaken thee; but with great Mercies will I gather thee. In a little wrath I hid my face from thee for a Moment; but with everlasting kindness will I have Mercy on thee, saith the Lord thy Redeemer. For this is as the waters of Noah unto me: For as I have sworn that the waters of Noah should no more go over the Earth; so have I sworn that I will not be wroth with thee, nor rebuke thee. For the Mountains shall depart, and the Hills shall be removed; but my kindness shall not depart from thee; neither shall the Covenant of my Peace be removed, saith the Lord, that hath Mercy on thee. O, Thou afflicted, tossed with Tempest, and not comforted!

\- - -

THat these words speak in the first place, the pure Covenant of Grace; and the everlastingness and perpetuity of that Grace, and Covenant, as it flows in God's Heart in, and from Election, may be apparent in the very reading the words: And Secondly, That they refer to the Story of Noah's Noah's Covenant and Waters at the Flood, as the Figure, and Exemplification thereof; I hope, through God's Grace, to make evident, throughout this whole Diſcourſe: But at preſent, Chap. 4.

1. For the Firſt; You have not only the very word [Covenant] in expreſs terms, Verſ. 10. My Covenant, and that of my Peace; but alſo the pure Grace and Kindneſs of God, out of which he made the Covenant, and which he exerciſeth throughout in all the Diſpenſations of it: This thoſe many words that ſurround the Text do declare. As that, With everlaſting kindneſs will I have mercy on thee, Verſ. 8. My kindneſs ſhall not depart from thee, ſaith the Lord, that hath mercy on thee, Verſ. 10. And that the Grace of Election (though it be not under that term, or word mentioned; yet) in ſenſe and reality is ſpecified; that word, with [everlaſting] kindneſs, inſinuates; as graſping within it both Everlaſtings: A kindneſs everlaſting for time to come, being but the continuation of an everlaſting Mercy and Kindneſs, that hath been for ever of old, Pſal. 25. 6. Remember, O Lord! thy tender mercies, and thy loving kindneſſes; for they have been ever of old: That as God's own everlaſtingneſs comprehendeth both, Pſal. 90. 2. Even from everlaſting to everlaſting, thou art God; ſo doth, and is his loving kindneſs towards us: And thoſe other words, Says the Lord that hath mercy on thee; Miſerator tuus; which is a Periphraſis of Election, and is Tantamount, as to ſay, The Lord who hath choſen thee, as Rom. 9. (where Election is handled) the Apoſtle expreſly doth ſhew.

For the Second of theſe; That theſe things are found in, any may be fetcht out of Noah's Story and Covenant, declared to him upon occaſion of the Flood, appears from this in the Text: That God, to verifie the Truth of his Covenant to his Church, alledgeth, and referreth both himſelf and us to the Waters of Noah: This is the Waters of Noah [to me,] ſaith he.

Three General Heads of the firſt part of this Diſcourſe, drawn forth out of the words, Verſ. 9.

In which words, and thoſe that follow, God doth (for they are his words by the Prophet, as his mouth) at once, point us both to Noah's Perſon, (whom therefore he twice mentions) and his Waters, in his Salvation from them; as an Example of that Covenant and Mercy, which now he promiſeth unto his Church, and all her Children, (as Verſe 13. they are called;) to perform the ſame to them, as he had done it then to him: As likewiſe, 2. That the Story of him, and his Waters, or Flood, and God's Covenant with him, his Sons, &c. and Oath thereabouts; though in the Letter, the ſemblance they bear was but of that Temporal Salvation and Deliverance from the Flood; yet in the Myſtery thereof they were (as is here ſignified) intended as Figures of God's eternal Covenant and Mercies unto his Elect Church, which were to come out of Noah's and his Sons Loyns: Which Church, 3. that is here ſpecially pointed at concerning his Covenant; with which he ſays, This is to me the Waters of Noah; is the Church under the New Teſtament, and the Seed of Japhet eſpecially, whom this Covenant and Promiſes do more particularly concern, as in Verſ. 1, 2, 3. of this Chapter will appear.

And theſe are the Three Heads and Branches of this General part of this Diſcourſe.

The Firſt of theſe Three Heads hath two Branches in it:

The firſt, concerning Noah's particular Perſon; that he was firſt intended in it as an Example, as well as a Type of that Grace, and Election, and Covenant here declared to the Church.

The ſecond, That the Covenants made with him, afore the Flood; and with him and his Sons after; were Figures of the ſame, &c.

I. Noah

Book I.

I. Noah in his Own Person, was intended as an Example of the Covenant of Grace.

That Himself was the Principal, and First Covenant; Or declared Heir of the Covenant of Grace: And that made known to Him by God himself, upon that occasion of the Flood, is evident by this; That He is said by Faith to have entertained it, and accepted on his part, Gods declarations made then to him, as understood by Him, to be the declarations of the Covenant of Grace. And therefore it must be that God also on his part, had with that intention uttered that Covenant unto him Personally: Now that Noah did well understand, and apprehend, that under the Type of the Arke, and his Salvation thereby, that a further Salvation, than Temporal, was signified thereby to Him; and another manner of Ark than that of Gopher-wood; Even Christ the promised Seed, to save him from a more dreadful Inundation of wrath to come; And so from a greater destruction than that which the Waters only brought upon the lives of the ungodly of that present Age; That, I say, He understood by Faith these things; The Holy Ghost that knew both Noahs heart, and Gods also, in his Covenant to Him, and Transactions thereupon with Him, hath informed us, Heb. 11. 7. By faith Noah being warned of God of things not seen, prepared an Ark to the saving of his house, by the which He condemned the World, and became Heir of the Righteousness which is by faith, Which last words, He became heir of the Righteousness, which is by faith. do give us the true intent of the former words, by shewing us, that Noah had in those dealings of God with him, the very same righteousness, for the Object of his Faith, which our Gospel now proposeth to us, and which our Faith doth lay hold upon: (For why else doth He propose it as an Example of that Faith He exhorted us now to have?) Which the same Apostle in his other Epistles doth in the same Phrase, and Language, stile the Righteousness of God; And the Righteousness of Christ, which is by Faith. Phil. 3. 9. Not having mine own righteousness, which is of the Law, but that which is through the Faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by Faith: Which Righteousness for justification, He more Setly Treateth of in the Epistle to the Romans, under the same very words, Rom. 3. 21, 22. But now (that is, under the Gospel) [The righteousness of God] without the Law is manifested; being witnessed by the Law, and the Prophets: [even the righteousness of God, which is by faith of Jesus Christ:] Now Noah was a Prophet, Gen. 9. And among other Prophets, witnessed to this Righteousness: himself first believing in it, and then being a Publick Preacher of Righteousness, (as the other Apostle calls Him:) And not only of that Righteousness of an holy Life, (in which he Himself so exceeded, which follows upon Believing;) But of that Righteousness which is by faith, as it hath Christ for its Object. And certainly, if He were a Righteous Preacher,) as He was; Then that Righteousness himself had recourse to himself, and his own Salvation, that he Preached unto others, for their Salvation: Now it was that Righteousness Noah had an Eye upon, (as Typified by his Ark, and from thence had learned it;) and had recourse unto, for his Eternal Salvation: (As the Apostle to the Hebrews Testifies:) Although He were, as is testified of Him, in respect of his own inherent Righteousness, the most Righteous Man in his Generation: a perfect and just Man. And in Sign and Token, that yet He had his Eye upon this Righteousness out of himself, to save Him, it was, that through the same Faith He betook himself to that Ark, a means wholly out of himself, to save him from the waters: which otherwise, all his own Righteousness would never have done: For why else is it there said, that by preparing the Ark, He became Heir of the Righteousness which is by Faith. Which Righteousness by Faith, to be Christs Righteousness, all sound Protestants do profess: And as the Righteousness He believed on, and was made Heir of, was this Gospel-righteousness, signified to Him by the Ark; So the rest of those things there mentioned, did in their several designs much Type out to Him, things Spiritual; and of like Spiritual Mystery. As the flood Typed forth the wrath of God unseen by carnal eyes: And the condemnation of the World there spoken of, was the condemnation to Hell, and not to the waters only, as Peter informs us: Yea, and He condemned the World more by preparing that Ark, and by Preaching a Gospel-Righteousness to Men, or the Messiah to come, whom He is also said to have Preached in the Figure, 1 Pet. 3. 19, 20. than by all his holiness; As that Heb. 11. 7. doth witness. Chap. 4.

not

Let us now approach to bring together, what I premised concerning the Covenant and Grace, and Election; (Which are the Subject of the Text in Isaiah, and mine also;) And the Passages which we find in Genesis concerning Noah, together: And see how appositely they correspond, and agree to this my purpose.

1. It is greatly Observable, that in the Sacred Story, Noah, was the first of the Sons of Men, unto whom God ever spoke of a Covenant. There was Promise indeed of Christ, the Womans Seed, uttered before; Which all the Patriarchs before the Flood lived upon: But under the Title of a Covenant, never no mention; no, nor of the word Grace, till now: Noah had the first honour of both these Gospel expressions, Grace and Covenant. And therefore most properly, and meetly, hath God here in Isaiah, singled out the Instance of Noah for both: or, Primum in quolibet genere est mensura reliquorum: The first in every kind, is the measure of the rest of that kind, that do after follow: This of Covenant, you find in Gen. 6. 18. But with Thee will I establish my Covenant: There's the First, And 2ly. The expressing of Grace is to Him, and first to Him; in Vers. 8. But Noah found Grace in the Eyes of the Lord. And it's Gods own Speech unto Him, though spoken by God as in the Third Person of Himself: And it is not the addition of Moses the Pen-man; But it comes in a continued Sermon made to Him, by God Himself, and uttered privately to none but Him: And that Speech is pure New Testament Language: To find Grace and obtain Mercy, as Heb. 4. 16. And after it had been thus first uttered to Noah, this Speech came after into more frequent use; both in the Old, and New Testament, As unto Moses, Exod. 33. 12, Unto David his chosen, Acts 7. 45. And the blessed Virgin Mary, Luke 7. 70. Thou art Engratiated: gratia donata: endowed with Gods Favour, and the Sense is the same: And this Title, Noah was the first that bore it, as a new Addition to the Coat of Arms of Gods Elect; Which from that time they have worn as the highest Title of Honour.

And it was not afore now given to Noah: Yea, Grace in the Hebrew (as Ainsworth Observes) is in a manner the Anagram of Noah, his Name: though the Letters in the Name Noah, do in their direct Order signifie Rest; Yet such a Rest as is out of Grace given, and bestowed, which an inverted order of the Letters signifies; See for this Ainsworth on Gen. 6. 8.

And Thirdly, It was the Grace that is, and was in Gods Heart towards Him, that is meant, as that additional shews, [In the eyes, or mind of Jehovah:] And not that Grace which was in Noahs Heart: That was but the effect. To find Grace in ones eyes, is indeed a phrase used likewise of Mans being favourable to another, (as in those places, Gen. 34. 11.——1 Sam. 1. 18. And many other:) Which yet comes then to be used, when the kindness sought, or to be bestowed, depends meerly on the good will of the Man who is to cast it upon the other, and wherein they that seek it, when that manner of Speech is used by them, do acknowledge no merit, or worth in themselves, why that favour should be shewen them: And therefore much more it hath that import, when it is spoken of God, and of his Grace towards Man, of whom the Apostle says; Who hath first given to Him, &c. And moreover imports, that Gods Eyes, and Foresight, saw nothing in the Creature, why He should Endow Him with it; Yea, furthermore, to find Grace in Gods eyes, is when God prevents the Creature, in its very seeking of it; As Isaiah 65. 5. I am found of them that sought me not. Which was becaus they had found Grace in Gods eyes afore they sought it; And without their having done any thing to move Him to it. And the word [Found] also, which is added unto Grace; Or (as here) doth superadd to this import; The Græcians call a thing unlook'd for, not dreamt of: Or freely cast on one (by chance as it were) without his looking for it: They call it εὕρημα. A thing found: And such is Gods Grace, as that word, found grace, intimates: All which expressions suit perfectly with Grace in God Electing, or with Electing Grace. The eminentest Person to whom Grace (as Electing) is attributed, was Moses, who bears that Title, Moses his chosen, Psal. 106. 23. And the Election of Him is exprest by this very Phrase, Exod. 33. 12. I know thee by Name, and thou hast also found Grace in my sight: That is, God had chosen Him freely, to be Personally, and individually [His:] And we find Gods Foreknowledge, is put to express Election, as it is Gods Foundation: The Lord knows who are his; And Gods People whom He foreknew, in Rom. 11. 2. Are in Vers. 5 But a remnant according to the Election of Grace: And so towards Moses, Gods Grace cast on him, was the sole product of Gods Will: So Vers. 19. of Exod. 33. Interprets it, and applies it to Him, I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious. God therein giving Moses the true ground, and account, why He was gracious unto Him, when not to others: And therefore those very words are cited under the Instance, and Case of Moses, by way of discrimination from Pharaoh, as the opposite Person whom Moses had to do with, to prove Election, Rom. 9. 15. And in the same tenor, and meaning of Speech, it is, that God declares of Noah; Noah hath found grace in the eyes of Jehovah: And it may also be said of Him, that God knew Him by Name: For to testify his having Pre-Ordained Him, and separated Him from the Womb, (as Paul speaks of Himself) unto Salvation; As also that deliverance in the Flood, out of his meer Free-Grace; He inspired his Father with a Prophecy about Him, at his very Birth: Look as God inspired his great Prophet Enoch, to give his Son Methuselah, a Name that foretold the Flood, and the Year of the coming of it, being by Interpretation, He dyeth; The emission, or Dart cometh, meaning the Flood: Enoch being a Prophet, foretelleth this his Son should die, and then the Flood should be emitted: (And therefore our days, as Methuselahs were, are appointed, and set:) In like manner God inspired Noahs Father with a Name, which foretold the Restoring of the Earth from that Curse; (Even from Adam, all along due to it) from the Flood: And for the giving both the Earth, and a New World of Inhabitants, Rest in it again, by that Noah, who was then born unto Him, Thus Gen. 5. 29. And this being foretold of Him at his Birth, when He had done neither good, nor evil, (As in the case of Jacobs Election out of Grace, and Esaus rejection, the Apostle Argues;) doth plainly argue it was Gods Free Grace towards Him, which had separated Him from the Womb hereunto, and no Righteousnes at all of His, and out of the same Grace still continued towards Him: Now when He acquaints Him with his Purpose to bring the Flood, He tells Him, he would deliver Him out of it: And that it was his sole Grace born to Him from the first, that was the Cause and Designer of that his Salvation; Thou hast found Grace in my sight: And therewith utters a Covenant, Obliging Himself so to do. And though God mentions the Grace, or Righteousnes that was in Noah also, yet as that, which that Free Grace which had been in Gods Heart towards Him from his Birth, yea, from Everlasting, had wrought in Him, to make Him meet for that Mercy, and Deliverance: Yea, and further, to testifie, He knew him by Name, and had Ordained him out of pure Grace unto this, he gave Him a name, That in the Letters inverted bore the stamp, and Impress of the Grace of God, (as was before Observed:) Even as at the Baptists birth; He by a wise disposement ordered him a Name, signifying in the indirect placing of the Letters, Grace: Shewing that He was out of that Grace separated from the Womb, unto his Work, &c. As Noah here had been.

I might at large give an Interpretation of his Father Lamechs Prophecy of him, and shew how he was declared an exact Type of Christ to follow. The Founder of the new World the Church, the remover of the Curse, by being Himself made a Curse: The easer of our toyl, and all sorts of miseries we labour under, and giver of us Rest, Matt. 11. Heb. 4.

And Fourthly, This was done (as I added) with a discrimination, or difference put between Noah, and the rest of the World, out of special Grace to Him: (And Election, or Choice, (which is to single one out from others) always supposeth a leaving out of others:) And the occasion whereupon it comes in, is with a But; [But Noah found Grace,] &c. Which is spoken even whilst on the other hand God just afore had told Him, in the Verse afore; I will destroy Man whom I have Created from off the Earth, Vers. 17. And then at the 18*th*. Vers. But with Thee will I establish my Covenant. He is at his [But] again: Thereby denoting noting the same discriminating Grace of Election, as if He had said [But with Thee!] Singling Thee forth Personally, and by Name, from the rest of the World [I will establish my Covenant] that is, make this as a sure and stable Covenant with thee: (as afterwards David speaketh of Gods Covenant of grace with him 2 Sam. 23. 5.) which I do not with others. So then, do but joyn Vers. 8. But Noah found Grace, &c. together with the words of Vers. 18. But with thee will I establish my Covenant; and then you have 1. Grace declared to be the Foundation or spring of this Covenant, Vers. 18. and 2. That Covenant itself declared to be stable, and irrevocably firm from out of the same grace [I will establish &c.] and 3. All put together rising up to this, as if he had plainly Stiled it [THE COVENANT OF GRACE]. Thus it was to Noah's own person: Yea and such a Covenant as we usually describe the Covenant of Grace to be: Proceeding from Election Grace at first, and continued stable and firm out of the same: as before we have in Noah's example explained it. Chap. 4.

And, that it was the Covenant of Grace unto Noah's Person, and propoposed in him as a Pattern and Example to us, who were after to believe, there is further [Reason] for it. If the same Covenant, as it was afterwards estated upon Abraham and David, are so to be understood (as generally we acknowledge) then surely the first Covenant, that under that Title and notion, God did promulge to Mankind, and thereof Grace by name was the Foundation, established with this Man; a Man of as great holiness and acceptation with God, as any of them were: For which you may take the Judgment of God himself, who ranks him in the head of the first Three (I allude to David's) Worthies of the Old Testament: Ezek. 14. 14. A man perfect in his Generation, and singled forth of an whole World destroyed before his Face, unto which he had been the Preacher of Righteousness, the Righteousness of Faith, whereby men are to be sav'd in All Ages, and thereby condemning them for neglecting and refusing that Salvation; Heb. 11. 7. even to Hell, 1 Pet. 3. And further, the Beginner, and Founder of a new World; and in that respect a Type of a Second Adam; Yea, and the Father of him, namely Christ according to the Flesh; yea and with him of all the Elect, whether Jews or Gentiles, that after succeeded: Then surely, I say, this Covenant was to himself the Covenant of Grace, as well as unto any of them, and promulged to him, as the Father and Head, as on behalf of the Elect his Sons, to proceed out of him; as theirs also was in them to their Children.

If it be said, That this Covenant respected only the Temporal Salvation of Noah in the Ark.

Besides, That it may be answered, That so did the Covenant, declared to David (in the first delivery of it, in 2 Sam. 7. from Vers. 12. and so on) speak but of his House, and establishing of his Kingdom to his Seed; whilst yet his own Salvation (2. Sam. 23. 5. God made with me a Covenant, and this is all my Salvation) and the Salvation of the Elect thorough Christ was intended therein: So here, It may also be replied, That the word Grace as it is spoken of God, and to express his Grace, is too deep a word to be bestowed only upon a meer temporal Salvation; but only used where the Eternal Grace, and Love of God is the Fountain of it: The favour God bore even to Adam in Innocency, is no where so far ennobled as to be stiled Grace; nor are the Gifts in Temporaries tearmed Grace, though they be called Spiritual Gifts, in their kind, and freely given to the Rebellious also.

But, besides such Returns as these to this Objection, that which will make the Answer Compleat, is the Consideration of the 2. Branch afore proposed; Namely,

That Noah's Covenant, over and besides its being to his Person the Covenant of Grace, and he an Example thereof to us therein; that also both that Covenant afore the Flood for his temporal Salvation in the Ark, Gen. 6. 7. Chapters, and that other after the Flood, Gen. 9. were Figurative, or Prophetique Types in Gods Intention of Eternal Salvation, unto himself, and the Elect of his Posterity to come, especially under the New Testament.

When this is joyned and added to the former, and proved that it was the Covenant of Grace to Noah's Person, &c. makes not only the Answer to the objection sufficiently compleat, but also will prove a foundation to the main things to be built up in this following Discourse.

This Position, the Apostle Peter doth in terminis affirm, in his 1 Epist. 3. Chapt. V. 20. 21. God waited in the days of Noah, whilst the Ark was a preparing [wherein] few, that is eight Persons were saved through water: [the like figure whereunto] even Baptism doth also [now] [save us ;] It is express, that the Salvation of him and his Sons was intended as a Figure, and a Figure that did bear a likeness, or parallel in it, unto our everlasting Salvation, and the things thereof: And Further, that it was not only to Noah himself a Figure of his own Everlasting Salvation, as figuring forth to him thereby that God would save his Soul Eternally; but prefiguring that Salvation which is [now] revealed unto [us] (as his words are) and therefore prophetick of ours: For what under the Old Testament is called a Figure, or a Type of things of the Gospel, that did God, and his Spirit intend by that as a Shadow to signifie and foretell a substantial Reality of those things to come under the New, in the truth, and verity of them: For so in the like case the Apostle warrants us to understand Hebr. 9. 8, 9, 11. The holy Ghost signifying thereby (says he) Vers. 8. &c. They being a Figure for the time then present, as Vers. 9. of good things to come; so Vers. 11. namely, those good things under the Gospel, and the same must hold here in this: for the Apostle as expresly calls it a Figure here as therein those mentioned.

If that Salvation then in the Ark was a Figure of that Gospel Salvation now; Then Noah's Covenant out of special Grace (in compare to the World) for that Salvation of him, and his Sons, was in like manner intended for a Figure of that Covenant for our Salvation under the Gospel: Yea, and also of that discrimination of Grace, which was the Foundation of Noah's Covenant; And moreover, this must have been the Figure also of a far more transcending Grace, to be the foundation of our Covenant, proportionably in an excelling Glory of it, unto what the Greatness of our Salvation bears (as being the effect thereof as the cause,) in compare with that Temporal Salvation of Noah's: And that Grace of ours, is no other than that Exceeding Riches of Grace our Gospel so extols, Eph. 1. and 2. Chap. These all are of a like commensuration and Elevation, in this their kind and Proportions; As an Everlasting Covenant; an everlasting Salvation; proceeding from an everlasting Grace, and Love: And then that which was the sole outward means of Noah's Salvation (the Ark;) must have (it being a Figure in this Round) a superexcelling outward means answerably thereunto; as the sole means prefigured, and that is Christ, the Mediator of that Covenant; in whom alone we are gratiously accepted, and who is the Author of that eternal Salvation: These all hang together (as we say) on one String; are all connext, coherent, and inseparable, Covenant and Salvation: Thou hast made a Covenant with me (saith David) sure and stedfast, and this is all my Salvation, Sam. 23. and Grace and Salvation joyned; By Grace ye are saved; said twice over, Eph. 2. But you have them all joyned, Even Christ our Ark, and all use and universal suffrage of all the Prophets that have been since the World began; Luke 1. 69, 70, 71, 72, 73. And hath raised up an horn of Salvation for us, in the house of his Servant David: As he spake by the Mouth of his holy Prophets, which have been since the World began: That we should be saved from our Enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us; to perform the Mercy promised to our Fathers, and to remember his holy Covenant: The Oath which he sware to our Father Abraham: Yea, and I may say, which in the Figure he sware to Noah too: And my Argument for this is fetcht, not from the real inseparable connexing and hanging together of the things themselves; and that therefore if but One of them be set forth in the Type, the other must be, by consequence, and from the conjunction of the things themselves in the verity itself, be supposed also to Exist. This Argument, though it might hold (I say) to prove the Existence of those other things that are so connexed together, yet might prove an Argument that would fail us, if we should go about to argue from the Type it self; for then the things argued must be also found to have a lineament of Similitude in the Typing of it forth in the Type it self.

Now

Now no One Type also is in all things a compleat representation, of the whole Substance of all that are connext with, and appertain to the thing signified in the Type. And therefore it was, that God hath drawn and Painted out the things of the Gospel in so many several Pictures, that one might foreshadow more specially the resemblance of one thing, another of some other. Yet this I will affirm concerning this Type of Noah, that this one of Noah, as it is instanced in by our Apostle Peter, hath the likeness of as many; and specially of All those four we have insisted on, (which are the main Studs, and Substantials of our Salvation) as perhaps will be found in any other single Instance of any Type whatever. Our Apostle in that place terms our Gospel-Salvation not barely Figure, τύπος, but ἀντίτυπον, a like Figure, (as we translate it;) a correspondent Figure (as others:) τύπος, a Figure, imports a likeness; but ἀντίτυπον, a like likeness; that is, an exceeding likeness; as farr as a Shadow may be supposed to represent a Substance; At least, that there is a more than usual likeness, than is found ordinarily in other figures: If not a nearer, yet that a larger extensive likeness shall be found in this, if narrowly observed: The Parallel Lines of each run along further, and correspond in very many things alike. Now therefore, it being thus spoken in respect of similitude, or likeness; we might warrantably go by this Rule (which in expounding the signification of Types is a good, and sure Rule) that when and where we find a Type of the Old Testament applyed by the Holy Ghost, to some good thing that was to come under the New, which is the main Substance of that Type; yea, and although it prove to be the thing prefigured in the New, be instanced in, and pointed at, but in some one particular; yet this warrants our Application of other parts wherein a likeness or resemblance doth appear between the Figure in the Old, and the thing figured, as we find them scattered up and down; though they be not punctually, and precisely applied to each of the Particulars, between which, and the Figure the likeness proves to appear: The Holy Ghost pointing us, though but to one parallel, Sanctifies all the rest that appear parallel also: This rule holds in expounding parables; and it must needs be safe in expounding Types: So then, if Peter had only instanced but in one particular, that the Salvation in the Ark, &c. was a Type of Gospel Salvation, sealed up in Baptism, we might warrantably have made up those other we have mentioned; as that this Ark was the Figure of our Christ, as he is applied to us in Baptism; yea, and of whatever else we find to be in Baptism touching our Salvation, analogous, or bearing resemblance with those passages about Noah's Salvation in the Ark. We see that the Apostle himself makes an application of the very number of Persons that were saved in Noah's Ark, to have had a significancy in it of the paucity, or fewness of the Persons who shall find the like special Grace under the Gospel, to be effectually partakers of Salvation; although multitudes shall profess Christianity, and be outwardly partakers of Baptism: As in Noah's days there were many that professed themselves to be the Sons of God, that perished in the waters: Thus our Apostle makes use of that small circumstance of the Paucity of the Persons; and because our Lord had foretold in his hearing, that there be few that find the narrow Gate, and way that leads to Life; Matth. 7. 14. and few that shall be saved, Luke 13.23. and that for this cause that few are chosen, in comparison of the many that are called; especially of the many that go to Hell: Therefore Peter observeth the fewness, but of eight Persons, that were saved in the Ark, puts that into his Figure, there, of the Ark: Wherein few, (says he) that is, eight Souls were saved: He intends not, (though retaining the Number of eight the definite Number of Persons that is of eight only under the Gospel to be saved (the Number of his

Chap. 4.

Ἀντί in composition doth inhance the signification of that which it is compounded with; as ἀντὶ signifies a price; ἀντίλυτρον Imports a full and adequate price, every way answering; ἀντίτυπον speak equivalency; and when it is added on the likeness, that is, in a Figure to the thing Figured; or é contra, in a thing figured unto a Figure, it imports somwhat more than what is ordinary, and common, between things, of that nature; that is, than is between other usual Figures and things figured in comparison unto this. And if it be said that the word here ἀντίτυπον, is applied unto the thing figured; as denoting our Baptism, and Gospel Salvation to be the truth, the Substance figured: I Answer, That however it is for the likeness, for the near resemblance, that is, between them; whither it be attributed to the Figure, or thing figured; it shews that in respect of mutual similitude, it is given for this respect to the other: For the Figure, and things figured, are relatives, in respect of their likeness: And so it comes all to one, with which of the two ἀντὶ is compounded: For in Hebr. 9. You have ἀντίτυπα applied to the Shadow of Heavenly things.

Book. I.

his fellows the Eleven Apostles exceeding in his view that Number;) but he sets down [few] as indefinitely signified by that eight, then comparatively to the whole World.

Now then to confirm my Argument, that the Holy Ghost by Peter's Pen, having pointed us to Noahs Salvation, and his Sons with him, as that which was the figure of our like, though far supertranscending Salvation [Now] under the Gospel; God hath by that one particular instance (if there were no more) sent us to the Story of Noah, and therein unto all that concerned that of his Salvation in the Ark. And therein we finding also not a Promise, but a Covenant established with Noah for that Salvation; A Grace likewise in the heart of God to have been the foundation of that Covenant; An outward means, an Ark, the only means that could have been of that Salvation, and this wholly of Gods inventing; and therein Noah to have been preserved in midst of waters; And then viewing over the New Testament (and the Old too, so far as pure Gospel is up and down manifested therein) we there do find up and down a Covenant made, and established with, and for the said Salvation (which Salvation, Peter expresly guides us unto) of Gods Elect under the Gospel. And an exceeding abundant Grace, the Original Cause and Fountain of that Salvation, and Covenant: And Christ whom God hath set forth as the only means, or name under, and whereby men should be saved from that wrath; That, if found out of him, will fall upon all the World. These things, and all these things being so expresly set out unto our view; both on the one hand in Genesis, and in this conjunction mentioned, and those other; All of them which are the substantial points of our Christian Religion) we finding in our Gospel as Causes of our Salvation; χάριν ἀντὶ χάριτος, Grace, for Grace, Covenant, for Covenant, Salvation, for Salvation, and an Ark for Christ; How shall we otherwise but conclude, that these are Parallels? Or in Peters language ἀντίτυπα: Like figures the one of the other, for in likeness, and resemblance they correspond one to the other.

But we are not put to it for the proof of All this, to proceed by this way of consequential Inferences; for behold they are all the four of them more than impliedly specified, and yoaked together, in this one Text of the Apostle Peter; For as there is Noahs Salvation, for our Gospel Salvation, so his Ark Typifying forth our Christ, and that as expresly, for his adding as his last words in the Verse, Saved in Baptism by the Resurrection of Jesus Christ, is a manifest reference unto, and resemblance of the manner how Noah was saved in the Ark from out of the waters; and in being carried thorough the Waters safe to Land, it still rising up under them as the Storms did fall, by parts, or by whole-sale upon it, and endangered the overwhelming of it, till at last it arrived safe, and rested on Mount Ararat; An exact Figure and Semblance of Christ in passing thorough the waters of Death, Storms of that Wrath, and Curse due to us, poured forth upon Him: By and under which it was not possible for him to be holden, as Peter speaks Acts 2. and so Noah received it as Abraham did that of Isaacs delivery; As a figure of the Resurrection of his Ark Christ, and of all in Him.

And whereas, here Baptism is said to be the figure of the Ark, not Christ: I Answer, know ye not (as Rom. 6. the Apostle Paul speaks) That as many as were Baptised into Christ, were Baptised into the likeness of his Resurrection; (As also of his Death first,) that like as Christ was raised up, &c. So we being planted together in and with him; should after Baptism walk in newness of life. So then, it is Christ, in whose Name we are Baptised, and into whom we are implanted, which is the significancy of Baptism.

Again, 3ly. That the Baptism is made the thing figured; doth as evidently prompt us to the Covenant of Grace, as included in Baptism, and so to have been prefigured therewith; for what more properly doth Baptism serve? Or was Instituted for as an end containing in it, than to be the Seal of the New Covenant of Grace (even as Circumcision was of the Old Covenant Gen. 17. And Baptism also succeeding in the Place, and Office of it; as the Col. 2. tells Yea, and Circumcision was then suddainly the Seal of the Covenant of Grace, to the Elect that were then, Rom. 4. 11. compared with Gen. 17. This will per-perfectly convince us; That therefore Baptism now much more is the Seal unto us of that Covenant,) Yea, and the Broad Seal too of the whole Covenant; That is, of All things that are contained in the Covenant; and is therefore Administred but once for All; Because it at once comprehendeth all that belongs to the Covenant for our Salvation: For therein not only the Grace of Jesus Christ, the Mediatour of the Covenant, and of our implanting into Him, and into his Death, and Resurrection, are represented; But we are Baptised, In the Name of the Father, as of the Son; Yea, and also, in the Name of the Holy Ghost: And therefore the Love of God the Father, who is the Founder of the Covenant, And the Communion of God the Holy Ghost, The Applier of the Covenant, are Sealed up unto us, even all of these, and whatever the Covenant doth comprehend, and all these things at once: And therefore full well might the Apostle (as he doth) tells us, That Noahs Salvation was the figure of ours; For in the figuring our Baptism, it contained as in a figure, all these things in it: All that belong [To Us Now,] that is, under the Gospel; Both which words He with an inculcation, urgeth upon our Observation, that we might be deeply apprehensive of the abounding significancy of this (though but) one Type: How much of our Gospel truths substantial Salvation were included in it alone, to the end to engage and set our thoughts a-work, to search out the full Mystery thereof at large in all the particulars of it. Chap. 4.

There was a Covenant, (I must not call it another Covenant, But yet) a second time renewed with enlargement, and withal said to be established with Noah, and his Sons, after his and their coming out of the Ark; and promulged upon his having offered up that famous Sacrifice in Gen. 8. the last Verses: And then in Gen. 9. in the 8*th. Vers. God spake unto* Noah, and his Sons with him, (So it runs these unto them, as well as to him,) saying, And I, behold I Establish my Covenant with you, and your Seed after you: And again, Vers. 11. And I will establish my Covenant with you, neither shall all flesh be cut off any more by the waters of a flood; neither shall there any more be a flood to destroy the Earth. This, say I, was the Figure of the Covenant of Grace, to the Church of the New Testament, that were to be the Seed of Him, and his Sons, (of which hereafter;) And unto the words of this Second Covenant with Noah more especially, it is that the words of my Text in Isaiah relate, Vers. 9. For as I have sworn that the waters of Noah should no more go over the Earth; so have I sworn that I will not be wroth with thee, nor rebuke thee. That is, my Everlasting wrath shall never overwhelm Thee; (For of that wrath, that Universal Flood, that passed over the rest of Mankind Children of wrath, was the figure) which words, not to destroy the Earth, are found in, and do belong to that Covenant in Gen. 9. as you will clearly see, if you compare the even now forecited words out of Vers. 11. of Gen. 9. And this Covenant God stiles here in Isaiah, [the Covenant of his peace.] Vers. 10. For as that Covenant in Genesis, 8. 9. Chapt. was upon Noahs Offering that Sacrifice, and Peace-Offering in it, Chap. 8. 20. with which God professed Himself so well pleased, as 'tis said, he smelled a sweet savour, Vers. 21. So signifying Himself at Peace, and Attoned with Noah and his Sons; And propitious unto the New World, they were to be the Restorers of, (for that was the season God took to express this Covenant in:) Now this Sacrifice was in the figure (as the former Salvation in the Ark had been (as you heard out of Peter) a figure, &c.) of a greater Sacrifice than this of Noah's, even of Christs: With which, and for which, and in the Intuition of which God Establisheth this Covenant, which he termeth the Covenant of His Peace: Both because He pacified by Christs Sacrifice, who is our Peace, 1 Col. 20, 21. As also because he promiseth Peace; His Peace to those the Elect of Mankind, to come out of Noahs Sons Loyns: And that Christs Sacrifice was figured out by that of Noahs, the Apostle hath discoursed; Whilst in speaking of Christs, he useth the very words wherewith Gods acceptance of Noah's is expressed by Ephes. 5. 2. And walk in Love, as Christ also hath loved us, and hath given himself for us, an Offering and a Sacrifice to God for a sweet smelling savour: (Which latter Book I. are the very words in Geneſis.) And beſides, it is certain, that unleſs God had ſmelt ſo far off aforehand this Sacrifice of Chriſts that was to come; The ſmoak of Beaſts Sacrificed, had had but an unſavoury Sent in Gods noſtrils, as well as Mans: But the ſmell and ſavour thereof (though ſo long afore) perfumed this of Noah, And went up into the Noſtrils of Jehovah.

are

But not only Chriſts Sacrifice is thus in theſe ſpeeches pointed at by the Apoſtle, as ſignified in Noahs; (And a Covenant was then, and at all times uſed to be ratified by a Sacrifice, Pſal. 50. 5. Heb. 9. 18. 20. and ſo on:) But furthermore as touching our Covenant of Grace, it is evident, that when God himſelf did moſt Solemnly proclaim, and ſet forth that Covenant as to come in the days of the New Teſtament; That he hath likewiſe recourſe unto like words and paſſages, taken out, and borrowed from that latter Covenant of Noah, thereby to expreſs that New Covenant of Grace by, and confirm the ſtability of it to us: (Which is a conſideration of ſome moment to our Subject afore us:) There are Three Chapters in Jeremiah following one another, wherein this Covenant of Grace is ſet by, and profeſſedly handled, by way of Prophecy, ſo as no where elſe the like in the Old Teſtament, 1 Chap. 31. Verſ. 33, 34. But this is the Covenant that I will make with the houſe of Iſrael: Thus ſpeaking with difference from the old Covenant then more in view, and 'tis his new Goſpel Covenant, the ſame with Heb. 8. the Apoſtle citeth; As that, to write the Law in their hearts, &c. as you may read in thoſe Verſes. Now to confirm to them this Covenant, he adds in that place Verſ. 35. Thus ſaith the Lord, which giveth the Sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the Moon, and of the Stars for a light by night, which divideth the Sea, when the waves thereof roar; The Lord of Hoſts is his name: Where what our Tranſlation reads, which divideth the Sea, &c. Our Engliſh Annotation out of the Hebrew renders, which ſtilleth or maketh quiet the Sea, or ſetleth the Sea when the waves thereof roar: (That is (as they) do keep the Sea within compaſs, and make it reſt within its bounds. The tendency of this to my preſent purpoſe, you will perceive, when I have added what in the other Chapters we find to follow: Then again in the 32. Chapter, God rehearſeth more pieces that belong to the ſame Covenant of Grace, Verſ. 38, 39, 40. And they ſhall be my people, and I will be their God, and I will give them one heart, and one way, that they may fear me for ever, for the good of them, and of their Children after them: And I will make an everlaſting Covenant with them, that I will not turn away from them to do them good, but I will put my fear in their hearts, that they ſhall not depart from me. Though promiſed to begun upon his Elect people, that were to return from Babel to their own Land, as the reſt of that Chapter ſhews: For the Covenant of Grace had a ſecret efficacy to the Elect, in the Old Teſtament, as well as in the New. Then Thirdly, In the 33. Chapter, God receiveth other particulars, belonging to the ſame Covenant; and that as they were more evidently to be performed in the days of the New Teſtament; For to thoſe days do the words of the 15*th. Verſ.* refer, (which comes in amongſt the midſt of thoſe Promiſes in that Chapter:) In thoſe days, and at that time will I cauſe the branch of righteouſneſs to grow up unto David; and he ſhall execute judgment, and righteouſneſs in the Land: And Verſ. 16. In thoſe days ſhall Judah be ſaved, and Jeruſalem ſhall dwell ſafely, and this is the name wherewith ſhe ſhall be called, The Lord our Righteouſneſs: That is, when Chriſt who is the Mediatour of that Covenant ſhould come in the fleſh, in which days the Covenant of Grace ſhould appear nakedly, and openly in its pure Glory; And the outward cruſt of the Old Covenant with the Jewiſh Church (under which this of the New did then run undermoſt hidden, as Arteries under the Veins) ſhould decay as grown old, as the Apoſtle in the ſaid Heb. 8. doth Argue.

Now

Now God having thus ſo explicitly ſet forth the Subſtantial Materials of this New Covenant in theſe Three Chapters; then for a Cloſe to all he had ſaid about them, there cometh a ſpecial word to Jeremy, Verſ. 19. And the word of the Lord came unto Jeremiah, ſaying, &c. And it is to verifie the ſtability or everlaſting ſureneſs of this Covenant, (as in Iſai. 55. the next Chapter to my Text) is celebrated: He doth inſert, and (as it were) call in for Witneſſes to atteſt, and confirm the ſaid ſtability thereof, divers of thoſe Paſſages which we find in the Covenant made with Noah (which purpoſe they ſerve moſt aptly and ſuitably unto: For in making that Covenant with Noah, God had uttered himſelf in theſe words of everlaſtingneſs, I will eſtabliſh my Covenant with thee; ſo to certifie and aſſure the like ſtability of this Covenant of Grace, the Materials whereof had been in theſe Three Chapters ſo largely inſiſted on: Now moreover (as his Tranſition, Verſ. 19. is) a ſpecial Word muſt come, and is added on purpoſe, and alone, and over and above the former, to verifie the unalterableneſs of it; and that as exemplified by thoſe unalterable things promiſed to Noah in his: For what follows firſt in, Verſ. 20. Thus ſaith the Lord, if you can break my Covenant of the Day and of the Night; and that there ſhould not be Day and Night in their Seaſon; There is One paſſage in Noah's) and Verſ. 21. the reddition follows, Then may alſo my Covenant be broken with David. Then may alſo my Covenant (that is, my Goſpel Covenant) be broken with David; unto whom, as we all know, was made the Promiſe of Chriſt; who himſelf was the Spiritual David, the Mediator; and with whom the New Covenant for all the Elect was publiſhed by God, in David's Name; (which I need not inlarge upon the proof of, to be meant in this place of Jeremy:) Then again, a ſecond paſſage of Noah's is inſerted in Verſ. 25. Thus ſaith the Lord, if my Covenant be not with Day and Night; and if I have not appointed the Ordinances of Heaven and Earth. And it follows, Verſ. 26. Then will I caſt away the Seed of Jacob, and of David my Servant. As God produceth the Materials promiſed and ſpecified in Noah's Covenant; ſo he expreſly utters them under the word Covenant; yea, and calls that with day and night his Covenant: [My Covenant] twice mentioned, Verſ. 20. and 25. thereby manifeſtly calling us to look back to Noah's Covenant, made for day and night; as in the making of which he had an eye to his like ratification, and firm eſtabliſhment of his Covenant of Grace; and as hiddenly intended by him then, when he uttered this of Noah's.

Chap. 4.

And now let us but review thoſe Paſſages in Geneſis, and in Jeremiah, and compare them together: Firſt, thoſe in Jermiah, Verſ. 20. If you can break my Covenant with the Day, and my Covenant with the Night, &c. where do we find mention of a Covenant that God made with the Day, and with the Night, which God ſhould term his Covenant with them, or about them? (not a Covenant one with another:) And obſerve the Language in both, in Gen. 8. 22, Day and Night ſhall not ceaſe, ſaith God there, upon his Sacrifice; which, are in the ſenſe of them the very words uſed in Jeremiah 33. 20. If you can break my Covenant of the Day, and my Covenant of the Night; THAT THERE SHOULD NOT BE DAY AND NIGHT IN THEIR SEASON: This is all one as to have ſaid, I have made a Covenant that they ſhall not ceaſe: And even ſo we find in Geneſis, and where elſe it is to be found under the Name of a Covenant: And if you can break that my Covenant, &c. then may alſo my Covenant of Grace with David be broken. Again, In Jeremiah, the 25th Verſ. he joyns to his Covenant with Day and Night, (as his too) an alike ſetled appointment of the Ordinances of Heaven and Earth; If I have not appointed the Ordinances of Heaven and Earth: [Appointed] that is, ſetled in a certain, conſtant, and perpetual courſe; with which ſenſe the fore-cited words, Chap. 31. 35. 36. do agree; and withal explain them: Thus ſaith the Lord that giveth the Son for a light by Day, and the Ordinances of the Moon, and of the Stars, for a Light by Night, Verſ. 35. If theſe Ordinances depart from me, ſaith the Lord, Verſ. 36. And we all ſee that theſe have not fail'd, nor departed; or (as God's Word is) ceaſed from, or before him. But you will ſay, Theſe laſt mentioned in Jeremiah, are the Ordinances of Heaven only; and they are not mentioned in Book I. Geneſis. And again, Demand what are thoſe on Earth? I anſwer; Theſe two, or both, come all to one in the real intention of them: For the Ordinances for Revolutions and Courſes of the Heavens, Sun, Moon, and Stars, being the Cauſes of the Ordinances and Viciſſitudes of Seaſons on the Earth, as the effects of them; which are indeed the Ordinances of the Earth: And of theſe we read, Gen. 1. 14, 18. And God ſaid, Let there be Lights in the Firmament of the Heaven, to divide the Day from the Night; and let them be for Signs, and for Seaſons, and for Days, and Years: And to rule over the Day, and over the Night; and to divide the Light from the Darkneſs. Hence then, ſeeing both theſe Ordinances do coaleſce in one; and the ſame Iſſues; for thoſe in the Heavens, are ordained for thoſe on Earth; and that alſo you find theſe Ordinances of the Earth in Gen. 8. 22. Whilſt the Earth remaineth, Seed-time and Harveſt; and cold and heat; and Summer and Winter; and Day and Night ſhall not ceaſe: Hence therefore, all that Jeremy ſays of the Ordinances in the Heavens, of Sun, Moon, and Stars, are in effect comprehended in Gen. 8. 22. as if there they had been named. And although the Settlement of both theſe Ordinances began at the Creation, (as in Gen. 1.) yet God having curſed the Ground for man's ſake, upon Adam's Fall, which God in 21th Verſe afore of that Gen. 8. profeſſedly doth make a Recognition of to this intent, to ſhew that he now began with Noah upon a New Covenant; and that elſe there had been an end and diſſolution of both ſorts of Ordinances, whether on Earth or Heaven: But that God upon a New account and ſcore, even the Intuition of Chriſt's Sacrifice, typed forth in that of Noah's, did anew ſay in his Heart, and declared alſo to Noah, I will not again curſe the Earth for man's ſake, Verſe 21. But whilſt the Earth remains, Seed-time and Harveſt; and cold and Heat, and Summer and Winter; and Day and Night ſhall not ceaſe. So then it is not the Natural Covenant by the firſt Creation, if appointments of theſe then might be called his Covenant; for God declares that to have been void by his Curſe for Sin: And therefore the appointment for the continuance of theſe Ordinances. Now ſince Noah's time renewed by a Covenant of Mercy, its making and inſtituion, whereby the Grand Charter of theſe was de novo, begun to be verified and confirmed.

And now will you take notice of that other Piece of God's Covenant with Noah about the Waters, their not returning any more to cover the Earth; which you find in Gen. 9. which is expreſly alledged by God in terminis, in my Text in the Prophet Iſaiah; and to the ſame effect in Jeremiah; and in both ſtill aſcertaining the firmneſs of the Covenant of Grace. Now in Jeremiah the words run, Thus ſaith the Lord that ſtilleth the Sea when the Waves thereof roar: And he ſays it to the end, to confirm his Covenant of Grace. And then 'tis ſaid, He ſtilleth them; when the Waves rage moſt, roaring to recover their loſt Prey, and threaten another Deluge; but that God reſtraineth them from overflowing the Earth again: For in order to their not overflowing the Earth again, it is there ſpoken elſwhere, His ſtilling them, and ſetting bounds to them, is noticed to be with that intent, Pſal. 104. 9. Thou haſt ſet a bound that they may not paſs over, that they turn not again to cover the Earth. And Jerem. 5. 22. Who hath placed the Sand for the bound of the Sea by a perpetual Decree, that it cannot paſs it: And though the Waves thereof toſs themſelves, yet can they not prevail; though they roar, yet can they not paſs over it. And Pſal. 65. 7. Who ſtilleth the noiſe of the Seas, the noiſe of their Waves, and the tumult of the People. Now bring this to Geneſis; Is not this expreſs in Noah's Covenant, Gen. 9. 11, 15. And I will eſtabliſh my Covenant with you; neither ſhall all Fleſh be cut off any more by the Waters of a Flood; neither ſhall there be any more a Flood to deſtroy the Earth: And I will remember my Covenant which is between me and you, and every living Creature of all Fleſh: And the Waters ſhall no more become a Flood, to deſtroy all Fleſh. And ſo now you have God's Promiſe and Covenant for, and with both Earth, Heaven, and Sea, and the Waters thereof, alledged by God as Witneſſes long ago; fore-laid and ordained; ſhall I ſay ſuborned; yea, and you ſee God ga-to make good this Covenant of Grace: And that when ever we read this Covenant, he would have our Faith look back to this in Geneſis, which we ſee hath not to this day failed in performance; thereby to confirm us in the belief of this Goſpel Covenant; made, and delivered under David's name for the whole Election. We all acknowledge David's Covenant to have been an Example of, at leaſt figurative, of the Covenant of Grace. Chap. 4.

The reſt of the Paſſages in that Covenant of Noah, I ſhall have occaſion to meet with in the Application of ſeveral other particular parallels, that are found between Noah's Covenants, and this of the Covenant of Grace: If theſe alledged, and thus compared, be not ſufficient for the proof in the General.

SECTION II.

The Application made by God himſelf of Noah's Covenants, to Exemplify and Confirm his Covenant of Grace; As it is in

ISAI. LIV. 9.

For this is as the Waters of Noah unto me: For as I have Sworn that the Waters of Noah ſhall no more go over the Earth; ſo have I Sworn that I would not be wroth with thee, nor rebuke thee.

HAving hitherto been a producing other Scriptures to prove that both Noah's covenant to his own Perſon is an example, and pattern of the like Grace to the Elect; and likewiſe, that thoſe his two Covenants, afore and after the Flood, were figurative of the ſame Covenant of Grace to the Church of the New Teſtament; I return now anew with the more confidence to further Expoſition of this Text, which I choſe for the ground of this Subject: As in which I found God himſelf alledging it, and applying it to the foreſaid intents, and purpoſes: And this is the firſt Application that was made of it by the Prophet Iſaiah; and the other out of Jeremy &c. which I have run over, followed after this of Iſaiah. And this in Iſaiah is ſo ſignal, as God doth plainly point to it; This is as the waters of Noah to me.

And that the thing aimed at here is the Covenant of Grace, the coherence of the words, with what went afore, and follows after, doth in the general ſhew.

In the words juſt afore the 7th and and 8th Verſes, the Promiſes to the Church of the Gentiles, under the New Teſtament are; For a ſmall Moment have I forſaken thee; but with great Mercies will I gather thee: In a little wrath I hid my Face from thee, for a Moment; but with everlaſting kindneſs will I have Mercy on thee, ſaith the Lord thy Redeemer: After which immediately ſucceed the words of this 9th Verſe. Now theſe Promiſes, in Verſ. 7. and 8. are a Prophecy of what Mercy and Grace he would ſhew, in ſaving thoſe his Elect from firſt, to laſt: And theſe words that follow my Text come in as a Confirmation and Illuſtration thereof, by alledging a moſt lively Figure and correſpondent Type, that had long before paſſed between God and Noah; in a way of Covenant, as on Gods part, declared by God

Book I. towards him; which, upon this occasion of his Propheſying, this New Covenant to his Church, the ſons of Noah, God calling that of Noah to his freſh remembrance breaks out thereupon; This is as the waters of Noah to me: As if he ſhould ſay, this is that very thing which I intended to prefigure, and fore-ſignifie, then when I ſat at the flood (as Pſalm. 29. 11.) in and by thoſe paſſages with Noah, which were at, and about his Flood; (which God calls the Waters of Noah:) [This,] even this, which I even now have ſpoken of, my Grace and Mercy to my Church, who are his Sons, and Poſterity, in the words immediately afore: Even this was the Mind and Myſtery of thoſe my Promiſes, which I made then to him, upon occaſion of, and about thoſe waters: Which is juſt ſuch a like ſpeech, as I ſhall after in the particular Explication ſhew; as that of Chriſt to the Jews; where, pointing to the Type of himſelf, he ſays, I give you the ſign of Jonas: And this Noah's Waters were[to me;](which latter word hath alſo a great Emphaſis in it, as to this import in Hand) They were ſuch in any account, and ordination in mine own ſecret intent, which I had within my ſelf, when I uttered them: And this, I therefore now upon this occaſion, declare to have been the Miſtery of them, according to this matter: That ſo you may have your Faith confirmed in this Covenant of Grace the more, in that it was in my Heart ſo long afore, and in my Intentions, then fore-ſignified, by what I ſpake and acted toward Noah.

Then in the words after, he doth in expreſs Tearms call thoſe Promiſes of Verſ. 7, 8. The Covenant of my Peace; or my Covenant of Peace, as others: Becauſe thoſe Promiſes contain (as I ſaid) in them, the principal Subſtance of the Covenant of Grace and Peace; And by expreſſing it thus under the Title and Notion of his Covenant, he gives us to underſtand what he meant by Noah's Waters; and ſends us to the Story of the things that paſſed then about it, to know the meaning of his ſaying; This is the Waters of Noah.

About which we ſhall find, that he had eſtabliſhed Two Covenants with Noah, both before and after them Waters: Whereof, the firſt prefigured ſome eminent pieces of the Covenant of Grace: The other, ſignified other Particulars thereof; And in a ſpecial manner the ſtability of it: And therefore it was they were Two in a Figure, becauſe no one Figure is ſufficient to ſignifie the whole: And therefore God revealed it at thoſe ſundry times, by parts; But yet ſo, as in their Tendency, both ſerved to be Figures of that Covenant: For ſo the Covenant of Grace is, which is but one; and is therefore ſtiled in the ſingular, The Covenant of his Peace, but typified forth by thoſe two of Noah's, which in that reſpect do coaleſce in one.

Now, 2ly, There be two Eminent things contained in thoſe Promiſes, Verſ. 7, 8.

Firſt, That whereas God had for ſome time (which in compariſon of Eternity he calls a Moment, though it had been a ſpace of two thouſand years;) forſaken the Gentiles; as if he had rejected them from ever being a Church to him; that yet he had in his eternal purpoſes deſigned a gathering of them, (obſerve that word, Verſ. 7.) a taking of them into his Bed, as an Husband his Spouſe: (For he carries it under the Metaphor of an Husband, taking again his Wife unto him; Verſ. 5. Thy Maker is thy Husband;) ſo that his forſaking, and rejecting of them ſo long, had been but to magnifie, and greaten his own mercies towards them in the end; the more: And this firſt Piece of his Prophetick Covenant to gather them, you have in Verſ. 7. For a ſmall Moment have I forſaken thee, but with great Mercies will I gather thee: Wherein obſerve alſo, how he puts the Attribute of [great] Mercies, upon this their gathering: And Great in two reſpects therein.

1. In relation to what they ſhould be, ſo long afore this Grace breaks forth upon them, which you exactly find ſet out, even then, when accompliſhed; (as here 'tis promiſed and propheſied of) Epheſ. 2. Chap. Where the Apoſtle Impreſſeth this very Conſideration upon them; Verſ. 11. Wherefore remember (ſays he) that ye in times paſt, Gentiles in the Fleſh Verſ. 12. That at that time ye were without Chriſt; being Aliens from the Common-wealth of

Iſra-

Israel, and Strangers from the Covenants of Promise; having no hope, and without God in the World: (And in speaking this to the Ephesians, He speaks the same to all the rest of the converted Gentiles; Romans, Collossians, Philippians, &c.) And he remembers them of this, to that end they might thereby acknowledge, that infinite great love and riches of Mercy, in Electing them from everlasting: (and out of that Electing Love, and Grace, freely first set upon them; it was, that he had now called, and gathered them:) The Consideration of this he had promised, and forelaid into the apprehensions of them; in Chap. 1. Vers. 4. which he drives home in the same, Chap. 2. Vers. 4. But God, who is rich in Mercy, for his great Love wherewith he loved us: His [Great] Love, and Mercy: (That is his word; and 'ti, Gods own word in Isai. You see, upon the very same Consideration.) Chap. 4.

2. Observe, It is the Grace and Mercy of his first gathering and converting them, that God in Isaiah, puts this greatness of Mercy upon: And the same doth the Apostle there, in Ephes. 2. 5. Even when we were dead in sins, hath quickned us together with Christ; (by Grace ye are saved:) Quickning here in the Apostles language, is gathering of them, in Gods here. It was their first gathering then, and so on, of their Posterity, that God speaks of in that, 7th Vers. in Isaiah.

The Second eminent thing in Gods Prophetick Promise in Isaiah to his Gentile Church, is in the other following Vers. 8. In a little wrath I hid my face from thee for a Moment; but with everlasting kindness will I have Mercy on thee, saith the Lord thy Redeemer. In which the eminent thing to be superadded to the former, is The Everlastingness of the Kindness: After their being gathered: And otherwise the other words in both Verses come unto one. The meaning of which is, that he would continue unto the Persons of them, after he had gathered and converted them, an unchangeable kindness (with everlasting kindness will I have Mercy on thee:) to Last; and that is, which shall not only not fail to follow them, unto everlasting, and never be taken away, or removed; but further, should be so rich a Treasury, as should last the spending upon them in Ages to come; even to Eternity (as in Ephes. 2. 7. That in the Ages to come he might shew the exceeding riches of his Grace, in kindness towards us, through Christ Jesus: And never be spent.

Now Answerably, there are two more eminent distinct parts or Pieces in Gods Application of Noah's Covenants, which in their principal scope, do correspond (as in the Figure) with the eminent matters of those two aforesaid promises of Gods: The one more specially respecting the one; the other, the other of them: And (if you observe withall) there are two rational Particles of [for] which (according to what our Translation hath rendred) are distinctly placed, and set afore each.

1. [For] This the waters of Noah to me: There's the first [For:] And that serves more especially as the Reason, or Illustration, of the matter of that first Promise, in Vers. 7. And likewise in further correspondency to that 7th Vers. I take it, those words have a more special reference unto the first Covenant of Noah's, made afore his entring into the Ark; and whilst in the Ark, to save him in, and from the Waters or Flood: For that bears a resemblance with Gods Promise to gather: of which by and by.

The second [For] afore the second Sentencence that follows it; For I have sworn that the Waters should no more go over the Earth; so have I sworn I will not be wroth with thee, &c. This Passage doth evidently, and without possibility of Contradiction, refer to that second Covenant made with Noah, after he was come forth of the Ark, and had escaped the Waters: And unto that alone doth that Passage refer; as by comparing Gen. 8. 21. and Gen 9. 11. appears: And the Lord smelled a sweet savour, and the Lord said in his heart, I will not again curse the Ground any more for man's sake; for the imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth: Neither will I again smite any more every living thing as I have done: And I will establish my Covenant with you; neither shall all Flesh be cut off any more by the Waters of a Flood; neither shall there any more be a Flood to destroy the Earth. And this latter

BOOK I.

Paſſage hath a more peculiar and proper reſpect unto the Matter of the Promiſe in the 8th Verſe; namely, The everlaſting continuance of that kindneſs of Gods: The unchangeable fixedneſs of his Mercy, not to be removed, or taken off from that Gentile Church; or his Elect therein, after they are gathered. And for the confirmation and illuſtration of this Everlaſtingneſs, &c. it is, that he refers unto that latter Covenant of Noah's; whereof he ſpeaks thus: For as I have ſworn that the Waters of Noah ſhould no more go over the Earth; ſo have I ſworn that I would not be wroth with thee, nor rebuke thee. In which words he gives the greateſt evidence and demonſtration of that fixedneſs of his Mercy that could be; in that the matter of his Oath ſworn unto is, that from out of that Mercy, and the reſolved everlaſtingneſs of it, he undertakes to have ſo watchful a care to prevent what ever it be, might, and would otherwiſe provoke him unto everlaſting wrath againſt them. And that muſt be ſuppoſed to be ſuch ſinnings, as by the Rules of his Word ſhould put them into a ſtate of Wrath again: For in that he ſays, I will not be wroth with thee, &c. there muſt be ſuppoſed, yea and intended a preventing the cauſe of ſuch a wrath, in the Perſons he ſwears for: For if they in ſuch a manner ſin, as unregenerate men do, which the Apoſtle terms doing ſin in a continued courſe with full conſent of will; then according to the Rules of his Word, an eternal wrath muſt fall upon them, and they become children of wrath again after gathering: Dead in ſins and treſpaſſes, as afore. Again, this effect and fruit of his everlaſting kindneſs in the 10th Verſe, anſwers to the Figure of God's Oath to Noah, to ſee to it; and take order by his Omnipotency to ſtill the rage of the Waters, that they overflow the Earth no more in wrath. And he here ſays he hath ſworn he will do the like to the Hearts of his Elect; and thereby profeſſeth himſelf to be as able to take order, and rule mens Hearts and Luſts, as he doth the Waters: And both are alike joyned, Pſal. 65. 7. Who ſtilleth the noiſe of the Seas, the noiſe of their Waves, and the tumult of the People. Tumults are from the raging of mens Luſts, that war in their Members, James 4. 1, 2. And this everlaſting kindneſs, and the firmneſs and fixedneſs of it; and the unchangeableneſs, unalterableneſs of the Covenant that proceedeth from it, He further amplifies and inlargeth upon Verſ. 11. upon occaſion of this Oath; For the Mountains ſhall depart, and the Hills ſhall be removed; but my kindneſs ſhall not depart from thee; neither ſhall the Covenant of my Peace be removed, ſaith the Lord that hath mercy on thee.

If any be not ſatisfied in this order and diſpoſement of theſe two ſeveral Sentences in Verſ. 9. both in theſe two References to the 7th and 8th Verſes reſpectively; and then alſo concerning that other unto Noah's two Covenants reſpectively, under ſo diſtinct and different an Alluſion peculiar to each; I ſhall further add this account touching either of them.

1. As to the firſt Sentence, This is the Waters, &c. its ſpecial reference to Noah's firſt Covenant, about his Salvation in the Waters: There is this Reaſon to induce me, which ariſeth from putting theſe few Conſiderations together.

1. A freſh remembrance is had, and uttered by God, of Noah's Covenant, in this 9th Verſe, to confirm his Covenant of Grace; that appears by what hath been ſaid.

2. That in the purſuit of this Allegory from the mention made of Noah's Waters, Verſ. 9. we meet with a moſt paſſionate Exclamation proceeding from God's deepeſt Affection, uttered in Verſ. 11. O thou afflicted, and toſſed with tempeſt: But with and under ſo manifeſt an Alluſion unto the like compaſſionate bowels towards Noah, and his doleful Condition, whilſt he was a ſaving him in the Waters, and in the Ark; as no man that will look too and again upon the Aſpect which the words, Verſe 9. and of theſe Verſe 11. do caſt one upon the other, can be able rationally to deny. Now thoſe Affections towards Noah, as conſidered in that Condition, and whilſt in that Condition, were as manifeſtly ſtirred up in God's heart, upon the remembrance of that firſt Covenant made with Noah, when he was to enter into the Ark; and which in the letter of it concerned God's ſaving him in the Waters: Which punctually agrees with what we read geth and pawneth one Covenant to perform another; the Covenant of Noah read in the Story of Noah's Waters in Geneſis; where after the continual of so many days Tempeſts, by Flood-gates of Waters from Heaven, and prevailing of Waters from beneath, related Chap. 7. it is thereupon ſaid Chap. 8. 1. That God remembred Noah, and thoſe with him, &c. It was a remembrance (That) of tendereſt Compaſſions; (as we know that word Remembrance uſeth to connotate and import.) And in Alluſion unto this you have his Paſſions and Compaſſions break forth towards his Church, and uttered with a moſt pathetick outcry; O thou toſſed, &c. proceeding from the remembrance of his Covenant towards his Elect, (which had been the main Subject of the forepart of the Chapter:) And you know how frequently in Scriptures, it is ſpoken, God did this or that, Remembering his holy Covenant. And ſo 'twas here. Chap. 4.

Hence, Thirdly, There being firſt a memoir, a mention, or remembrance of Noah's waters; as notifying (by a Metonimy) God's Covenant with Noah about his waters, Verſ. 9. (whereby to ſet out this his Covenant to his Church,) and then afterwards by occaſion thereof, and in Coherence therewith, theſe ſimpathiſing Expreſſions break out in Verſ. 11. Certainly then that Covenant with Noah, the remembrance of which was it that, is ſaid to have cauſed that commiſeration in God towards him, at that time, that muſt be found ſome where in the 9th Verſ. at the bottom of thoſe words; (if we will dive unto the bottom of the ſcope of the mention of them:) Now that Covenant was (of his two) the firſt of them, touching Gods ſaving him in the waters; as by the ſtory is undeniable: And therefore that Covenant muſt neceſſarily have been alluded unto: For otherwiſe the correſpondency in the Alluſion between the Two pares of it, had fallen quite beſides, and had been diſproportioned: For Noah's ſecond Covenant was to ſecure him againſt the waters any more to return upon him, and his Poſterity. And that cannot in any reaſon be ſuppoſed that ſuch this paſſionate Exclamation, O thou toſſed &c. ſhould be referred unto; for it looks upon Noah as viewed in the height of thoſe Waters, and Tempeſts, and ſuppoſeth him in the midſt of thoſe Waters; So as between Noah's firſt Covenant, and ſuch an Exclamation as that which was occaſioned by it, there is a full congruity and proper coherence. The firſt part, giving juſt occaſion for the latter: Theſe ſuit, as Cauſe and Effect: But not ſo at all doth Noah's Second Covenant and this Condolement match, and correſpond: But that alone conſidered, gives not an occaſion for it; and cannot comprehend in it the whole ſcope of Noah's waters; which yet generally Interpreters would have it do.

So then here being theſe two Sentences or Speeches in the 9th Verſe; For this is the Waters of Noah to me; (the firſt:) For as I have ſworn, the Waters of Noah ſhall no more go over the Earth; (which is the ſecond:) And there being Two Covenants made with Noah about his Waters, (as they are called:) differing in this, That the firſt was with promiſe to ſave him in the Waters which were inevitably decreed to come upon the World for their deſtruction: The other only to ſecure him, that they ſhould not any more return to drown him and the Earth. It ſeems moſt probable (if there were no more reaſon on our ſide) That the firſt of thoſe Speeches ſhould caſt its eye of Alluſion and Aſpect upon the firſt of thoſe Covenants, as it's pretended Correſpondent; and the ſecond Sentence, upon the ſecond Covenant: The latter is apparent in the words; and was it that drew Interpreters Eyes wholly thereupon to attend that, and overlook the firſt.

But that ſo emphatical an indigitation, or pointing ſo as with the finger in the firſt; This is the waters of Noah to me; which are in the firſt uttered, ſeem to me to point rather to thoſe waters which we read de facto, did come upon the Earth, and which Noah eſcaped: Then to ſpeak of another Flood which did not come upon him (and which is yet termed the waters of Noah in the Sentence following) meaning only that not the like waters, to thoſe that did come upon Noah, ſhould any more go over, &c. Yea, that not another ſuch; whereas in this firſt ſentence, he points to the Flood it ſelf, that did come; From which the other not to come, hath its denomination of Noah's waters; waters; But Tralatitiously, or at a second derivative hand, taken from the waters that had foregone, ſuppoſeth that poſitively ſuch a flood had been: And that is it which properly, and originally bears the name of Noah's Waters, which is all one as we uſe to ſay Noah's Flood; Meaning that Flood which de facto, did come; and the latter mention of it, is but the promiſe of a Negative; A preventive Promiſe; Namely, that God would not again overflow the Earth a ſecond time, with the like: And ſuppoſeth the danger of the Flood already paſt, or at leaſt Noah ſaved in it. Is it not then more proper, and direct, (may we not think) for that firſt ſpeech, This the waters, &c. To intend rather that poſitive Salvation which Noah then was to have, and had upon the firſt Covenant, and which muſt neceſſarily be firſt ſuppoſed he ſhould have, ere the latter could be ſo much as ſpoken off; And which the promiſe of it neceſſarily implies, in that word [no more] go over the Earth; that this firſt Flood to have gone over, is afore: Yea, and that Salvation of Noahs from that Flood, being that great Salvation of which the Scripture ſpeaks; Can we think that God in making a remembrance of his Covenant about his Waters, and ſo of his Promiſe to ſave Him in them, ſhould omit, and paſs that over altogether in ſilence? Now, and if it be to be found at all in this 9*th*. Verſ. it muſt be in theſe firſt words, This is the waters of Noah to me: As pointing to thoſe then preſent waters that came upon the whole Earth, which Noah was ſaved out of, by vertue of that firſt Covenant with Him: And therefore muſt be ſuppoſed to have been intended.

If any Object and ſay; Yea, but the ſecond ſentence, and the very explication he gives, why, and for what purpoſe he had ſpoken the firſt; As firſt propoſing the mention of Noahs waters in general; This is the waters of Noah, but with a purpoſe, and no otherwiſe but to bring in, and declare this alone; That as He ſwore of thoſe Waters, they ſhould no more return, ſo nor his wrath, &c. And ſo that this is the ſole, and whole intent of his mention of them, and to this do the generality of Interpreters narrow it: And make both ſentences to be in the ſcope of them, all one, and adæquate, and only to ſerve to expreſs Gods faithfulneſs in not caſting off his People, or in not giving them up to wrath again, after he hath taken them to be his people.

I Anſwer 1. That it often falls out in alledging of a Type more generally, that but ſome one particular part, or branch of what it Typifies, proves to be inſtanced in, when yet there may be many other particulars of as great moment, that are not explicitely mentioned: As when Chriſt ſays to the Phariſees, Matt. 12. 39. 40. as his after words ſhew, in indignation for asking of him a Sign, who had given them ſo many; To teſtify invincibly that he was their Meſſiah; An evil and adulterous generation, ſeeketh after a ſign, and there ſhall no ſign be given to it, but the ſign of the Prophet Jonas; For as Jonas was three days, and three nights in the Whales belly; ſo ſhall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the Heart of the Earth. The ſign of the Prophet Jonas; That is, who was an intended ſign by way of Type, of me to come: And that in more reſpects than one. Yet our Saviour ſeems expreſly to inſtance but in that one particular of his being three dates and three nights in the Whales belly; As which ſignified (as Chriſt explains it) His own being in the Grave; or the Heart of the Earth three dates, ſo is it here: The like might be inſtanced in the caſe of many other Types in that of Noahs Salvation in the Ark, to be the figure of Baptiſm, 1 Pet. 3. 20, 21. Which yet contains as many other Parallels not mentioned.

Anſwer 2. It is true that the mention of Noahs Waters here, doth ſerve fitly to uſher in, leads on unto that one particular that follows: But yet if any will allow me but that this ſpeech, This is the waters of Noah, is a general propoſal of them firſt made, as notifying in general Gods Covenanting with Noah about thoſe waters, whereof that one that ſucceeds, is a particular comprehended in it; I ſhould not much contend, but to confine the ſcope of Gods Allegation of it unto that one Branch inſtanced in, and thereupon ſo to exclude altogether its aſpect, or any reference to the Waters, or Flood of Noah; That de facto, came upon the Earth; And in which though Noah was ſaved, yet was toſt with Tempeſts, this cannot be allowed. For that in the remembrance of Gods Covenant made with him, God did commensurate him in those Waters, as a Type of our great initial Salvation from a State of Wrath, (which those that would make the scope to concern only Gods Oath, that the Waters should return no more, do and must thereby include it;) This I do, and must contend for to be included, and intended: (Yet with profession to submit to cogent reason, that shall be made to the contrary:) Having this further to be added as a reason for it; that if this part of Noahs First Covenant, and Salvation from the Waters be excluded here, then is the great Type of our main, great, and first Salvation by Christ excluded, to be meant here also; Whilst yet His purpose is to illustrate, and set out to his Church, his Covenant of Grace for the whole of their Salvation; Which in this Chapter, yea, and in the two following Chapters he insists on, by way of Promising, and Prophesying thereof, and inviting men to come under it as offered. See Chapter 55, and 56. Chap. 4.

If any shall yet Object, that the second [for] set afore the said speech, For as I have sworn, &c. is apparently the reason why he said first; This is the waters of Noah, and therefore it is to be restrained unto that one particular.

I Answer, I do as yet rather incline to think, that there being two of these causal conjunctions of [For] The one set before the first speech; For this is the waters of Noah: Another afore the second speech; As I have sworn: And although the later For, is otherwise rendred by some Interpreters; Yet I take the version of the Word, as our Translation, and most others have turned it, [For] warranted by the same use of the word in the Hebrew so signifying, in 1 Sam. 15. 15. As Mr. Gataker hath Observed; And so I understand the two [Fors] as Partitively, to notifie Two distinct Reasons of two several matters, or things about these Waters, in the sense before explained; And not that joyntly, they fall into One, and the same thing only: I take the latter [For] not to denote a subordinate reason of the former For, or Reason; But each to be distinct, and coordinate, and to stand alone in their connexion with the matter in the former Verses. And that the first should be a reason specially of that part of the Covenant mentioned in the 7th. Vers. foregone: The latter, specially as the reason, and confirmation of that part of the Covenant in Vers. 8. And the like distinct references made by causal Particles, though immediately following one another: Yet the first to relate as a reason of some matter foregone, that is further off; and another later to somewhat that went more immediately afore, you meet so ordinarily withall in the Scriptures; Specially in Paul's Discourses, as I need not give instances of them.

Thus much for the Account of the first Branch proposed, why these first words; For this is the waters of Noah to me; Should have, and especially have respect to Noahs First Covenant to save him in the Waters: And as for the words that follow, As I have sworn; That they respect his Second Covenant, there is no Question; I must further add the second Branch proposed, and so I shall make this Head compleat, viz.

The special Analogy that is between Noahs First Covenant, and Waters; And the matter of the Promise in the 7th. Vers. And for the other, the correspondency between the matter of the 8th. Vers. (in what it differs from that in the 7th. Vers.) with Noahs Second Covenant, namely, the everlastingness and stability of the Covenant, to be the thing aimed at in both; This doth more clearly upon first sight appear; That there needs no large Discourse, more than in order to clear the first.

1. In General as touching both.

Noahs Two Covenants were both of them for his Salvation, from the Waters, but with this difference: The First was with Promise to save him from those present Waters that did drown the rest of the Earth. The Second, to preserve him, and the Earth for his sake, from any more such a flood of Waters, its coming upon the Earth, and so to secure him from all fears of destruction thence: Which considering the danger of their so doing, and sinners desert of it, might truly be called a Salvation preventive; And a securing to him

Book I. that great Salvation positive, which God had vouchsafed Him in and from the Waters past: And that second Promise for the future, made that first Salvation in the Waters to be Salvation indeed, and without which it had only been but a reservation of Him and His unto a second Destruction from another Flood: Thus you see in Noahs Case, that these two are distinct, and yet both concur to make that his Salvation perfect, and compleat.

Answerably unto the Type of these in general, the like difference may be discerned, and must be acknowledged to be in the matter, or point of our Eternal Salvation, to perfect it: And so both of which are distinctly provided in that one Covenant of his Grace, whereof those his Two Covenants were imperfect shaddows, Galat. 1. First, Our being called out of this evil World, or the rest of Mankind, and by faith put into Christ, and thereby into a state of Salvation, or the Grace wherein we stand: This is every where in Scripture termed Salvation, as in Ephes. 2. By faith ye are saved, even upon their first Believing; And by grace ye are saved: Ye are at present, both from the wrath that is inevitably coming upon all the World of Ungodly; And by having the Inheritance of Eternal Salvation (as to the jus, or right, or Title to it) setled, and established upon you: But there being an interstition, or space between this of the right, and entring into the full enjoyment, and possession; There are therefore Promises for perseverance, to keep and preserve you safe unto that Possession, which is termed also Salvation; 1 Pet. 1 Being the end and final period of your faith, the Salvation of your Souls: And unto this Possession of Salvation, we are said to be kept by the Power of God, 1 Pet. 1. 5. And to that end the Promises are for perseverance, 1 Thess. 5. 23, 24. And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly, and I pray God that your whole spirit, and soul, and body, be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ; Faithful is He that calleth you, who also will do it; As also, sin shall not have dominion over you, for you are under grace; Or in the Covenant of Grace; And both these are promised together in the Covenant of Grace, as to Give a new Heart, and a new Spirit, Jer. 31. whereby we are first wrought upon: So to put his fear within us, that we shall not depart from him; In the succeeding Chapter of the same Prophet Jer. 32. 40. I will make an Everlasting Covenant with them, that I will not turn away from them to do them good, but I will put my fear in their hearts, that they shall not depart from me. And again, You have both together as parts of his Covenant, (as 'tis here called) 1 Luke 60, 72. Whereof one main part is Vers. 74, 75. That he would grant unto us, that we being delivered out of the hands of our Enemies, might serve him without fear, in holiness and righteousness before him all our days. Now it is the first Salvation that puts us into the state thereof in the right of it, which is Noahs first Covenant, to be saved in the waters, which the Apostle Peter makes the figure of our Baptism.

Now the Promise to put us into the state of Salvation in the whole right thereof, is that which answers to Gods Promise to Noah, to save him from, and in the Waters: And it is the main, and great Promise of the Two, and which the promise afterwards to keep us, doth, and necessarily first suppose to have existed. And this Salvation we call Initial Salvation; That of our being kept to persevere, and that sin shall never have dominion over us totally, and finally, is but the continuation of us in that state of first Salvation, untill we come to the full possession, even as Providence is of Creation; in them is continuance, and we shall be saved. And Gods estating us at first therein, is the performance of his Covenant, and from out of the same Grace, out of which He after continues, and preserves us in that estate: And it is the whole Covenant for the performance of it, which God calls to remembrance with Himself, (The waters of Noah to me:) And as a witness, and attestation thereof, here produced unto us: So as we must either wholly cut off that first great performance of it in calling us, as no way here intended, or we must take it into the Figure (Noahs waters) here remembered upon occasion of it. These things in General.

As

As for the Particular Analogies between Noah's first Covenant for his Salvation in the Waters, and this of our Salvation at first. Chap. 4.

1. As that was made in order, Noah's first Covenant, &c. so this initial Salvation is also the first, and foundation for Perseverance.

2. We may be certain that our first initial Salvation was Typified out by Noah's first Covenant: For the Holy Ghost so applies it, 1 Pet. 3. 20, 21. Noah was saved in the Waters, which is a Figure of our Baptism, which now saves us. Now Baptism is first the Sacrament which Seals up initial Salvation; our being put into Christ, and born again: And Seals up the whole of Salvation, as in the right thereof unto us. And most pertinently doth the Apostle make Noah's waters the Figure: For as Ainsworth hath fully, though briefly expressed it, Noah was baptized into Christ's death and burial, (in the Ark,) but raised up again with him also. Ainsworth on the 16th Verse of Genesis 7.

And 3dly, how congruous a Correspondency and Affinity doth the first part of the Covenant, for gathering his Church at first, and calling them by Grace, and their first being put into Union with Christ; (And this to do, is certainly the performance of his Covenant, and the first part thereof also;) hold with both these, as the 7th Verse doth utter it: For a little moment have I forsaken thee; (and left thee to thy natural darkness and deadness;) But with great Mercies will I gather thee: This denotes his first making of the Gentiles his Church, and bringing of them unto, and uniting of them to his Son: For the first and second Verses tell us, That they had been barren, and had brought forth no Children for a long time. And as it denotes their being gathered out of the World, so especially unto Christ, and their Union with him: And under that word Jacob prophecied of him, Gen. 49. 10. Unto him shall the gathering be.

4. And how fitly doth Noah and his Family, their being called out from the whole World; Come thou, and all thy House, into the Ark, (saith God;) Gen. 7. 1: yea, and the Beasts, (which bear the resemblance of the foregone State of the Gentiles that were newly gathering, made a Church unto him; as I shall after shew:) gathered out of the rest, and by special instinct coming unto Noah, and into the Ark: And how great a Correspondency doth the working by God upon Noah's Spirit upon the fore-belief of the Flood, (and he fearing the wrath of God therein, prepared the Ark;) hold with the work of Conversion and gathering Souls into Christ, whereby men save themselves from the rest of a froward Generation, as Peter's word is, Acts 2. will afterwards be shewn in the Uses. And though Noah was a godly man afore, yet that high Dispensation of God's saving him in the Ark, was as new Conversion to him, and bore the lively Resemblance of a Souls first gathering to Christ.

5. And as upon his entring into the Ark, there ensued Storms and Tempests and Rains from above, and Waters from beneath; and this for some Months; so the time of Souls first Conversion and gathering into Christ, is usually accompanied with violent Temptations, Doubts, whether in the State of Grace or no; Fears at every cast that comes, lest they should be overwhelmed; split upon Rocks, and overturned by Mountains: Which occasioneth God to cry out in pity to them, O thou afflicted, and tossed with tempest: Though viewing them in a safe Condition in their Ark, Christ: This Peter gives notice of to his converted Brethren, 1 Epist. Chap. 5. Verse 10. The God of all Grace, after you have suffered a while, make you perfect; stablish, strengthen, settle you. The Suffering here is not chiefly those outward of Persecutions; for they were not freed from them all their Days; but these were such as arose from the special Malice of the Devil, who is a roaring Lion, seeking whom he may devour, Vers. 8. But these are such Afflictions as they are setled against, and yet common, more or less, unto all Converts throughout the World, Vers. 9. after their Conversion, and whilst they are weak: The Issue of which is some better strength and rest unto their Souls.

These Parallels you see between Noah and his first Covenant and Salvation, &c. and our first gathering, &c. in the 7th Verse.

Book I. As for the second part of the 9th Verse, which contains the Promise of Preservation, and a Security against the return of that Curse of these Waters any more, that this alludes unto Noah's second Covenant, after he came out of the Ark; as none can deny that reads the words; so the Parallel between them is more obvious: And that the scope thereof is to confirm us of the everlastingness of God's kindness that shall follow us all our days after Conversion, which is promised, Vers. 8. This I partly have shewed afore, and shall further more, in the Explication of the words, that follow that passage in declaring and engaging an everlasting unchangeable kindness and mercy, and that by Oath, against all such fears of sins in our hearts that threaten to overflow again: And that Sin should never have Dominion over us, because we are under Grace: This I need not largely insist upon.

But instead of an inlargement that way, it will be more behooful to answer some Objections that may be made against this latter part, to have been intended as a Type, but at all only brought in by God, as a meer Allusion and bare Similitude; by which God illustrates only (and confirms) the stability of his Covenant of Grace.

And the Objection is this,

That that Covenant with Noah, Gen. 9. was but a Covenant of Common Providence; and the Concerns thereof, as that Summer and Winter, Day and Night, should not cease; yea, and was made with every living thing, as well as with Noah; and answerably had but an outward natural sign to confirm it, The waters should no more destroy the Earth; and hath nothing to do with the Covenant of Grace, nor can be supposed to be a Figure of that Covenant under Gospel times.

For Answer, 1. As to that, That it is but a Providential Promise of continuance of the World from the Judgment of Waters any more; outwardly it was no more: But this hinders not from its being in the Mystery a Typical Promise to Noah, and those of his Seed Elect that were to succeed, to signifie the perpetuity of the Covenant of Grace to them, and that God would never suffer his loving kindness to depart: This (I say) no more hinders, than that That Promise under that other former Covenant to Noah, to preserve him and the Beasts in the Ark, should not be the Covenant of Grace (in the Figure,) as yet we have for certain heard out of Peter that it was: For both were but for outward Salvation in the Letter.

2. To that next part of the Objection, That it was made with the very Beasts.

Nor doth this rationally prejudge it from bearing this Figure,

1. No more, than that because the Beasts and Cattel came forth of Egypt with the Israelites, that therefore their Redemption Typied not forth Redemption by Christ.

2. Nor no more, than that because the Cattel drank of the Rock, as well as the Israelites; that therefore that Rock was not Christ figuratively and Sacramentally; which yet the Apostle expressly telleth us it was, 1 Cor. 10.

Nor 3dly, Was that Covenant made primarily, or in a direct and principal respect with the Beasts, but with Noah and his Sons; and with the Beasts but secondarily for his sake, and as Appurtenances to Man, and belonging to him; otherwise they are not capable of a Covenant, because no way to be made sensible of it; and therefore but as an accidental Appendix of Man's Charter, or Lease granted, it is that they are put in. And again, Look as for Man's sake the Earth, and all things in it, were accursed, Gen. 3. and then they were destroyed for Man's sake by this Flood, as God professeth, Gen. 6. 6, 7. So on the contrary God declareth, That when he saw those Creatures in the Ark, that it was for his sake; and therefore this Clause is twice added, Gen. 6. 19, 20. to keep them alive [with thee;] that is, for thy sake. And in like manner 'tis said, Gen. 9. 1, 2, 3. And God blessed Noah and his Sons; and said unto them, be fruitful and multiply, and replenish the Earth. And the fear of you, and the dread of you, shall be upon every Beast of the Earth, and upon every Fowl of the Air, upon all that moveth upon the Earth, and upon all the Fishes of the Sea; into your hands are they delivered: Every moving thing that liveth shall be meat for you; even as the green Herb, have I given you all things. So as it was to preserve mankind, that these Creatures were preserved; and that they might have Subjects to have Dominion over. Chap. 4.

4. Yet further; all the Creatures may well be said to come under this our Covenant by Christ: For we profess and believe, not only that Christ by his death, made a purchase of all, and by his Sacrifice procured the standing of the World in order to the elect for their good, and so their preservation comes to be included in the elects Covenant, and Promises: But there is by Christ a liberty one day to be conferred upon the whole Creation in their being delivered from the Bondage of corruption, into the glorious Liberty of the Sons of God: So as in their Capacity they shall have a share in the Priviledges of the new World; that World to come; Typified forth by Noahs new World; and promised upon his having offered his Sacrifice, wherein he was Christ's Type. So that this is so farr from being an Objection, that it serves on the contrary to render the Analogy more compleat.

But as to this of the Beasts, and the Rainbow, there is another Notion yet to be cast in, of a figurative representation, that these Beasts in the Ark did hold with the elect themselves to be converted under the Gospel; as will put a farther end to this or any other objection of this sort: But I reserve it to a greater Advantage, to bring it in the particular parallels; between these of Noah's Covenants, and our Covenant of Grace.

SECTION III.

A more Particular Explication, both of the Phraseology, Manner of Speech, and Matter in the 9th Verse, Confirming the foregoing Interpretation.

This is] He says it of the Promises He was a speaking of, and of his Covenant to his Church, Vers. 7, 8.

But you will Ask, how is it such Promises, and the matter of them, should be called The Waters of Noah?

The Waters of Noah] are in this first sentence metonimically used to signifie all those passages at and about the Flood, concerning Noah's Salvation, figuratively applied to promises of Gods Covenant: it being usual in all Languages by mentioning one circumstance, or eminent occurrence; as the day, or the Place whereon, or wherein such memorable things were done, or spoken, to denote the things, or Facts done, on that Day, or Place, together with that eminent Occurrence: As when it is said, The day of Provocation in the Wilderness; it serves to mind, and notifie all the singular Provocations of that Day, or time: So in like manner, As when our Saviour said, the days of Noah; He intends thereby to Notifie the things done in those Days, Matth. 24. Chap. 37, 38. Verses compared. In like manner, by the Days of Lot, Luke 17. 28. He intends to notifie the things then done: They did eat they did drink, says he; They bought, they sold; they planted, they builded; &c. In like manner, 'tis usual to mention some one eminent Occurrence in stead of all the rest, to hint all the rest, that were at the same time acted together with it, or that belong thereto: Thus here, the Waters of Noah, That is, all the Occurrances, Passages then, or things done: And the remembrance of those things being so like, yea, in many things the same, Book I. same, occasioneth him in the midst of his Declaration of these Promises of Grace, to cry out; This is the Waters of Noah to me: The very same I did then.

Now the things thus were then done; at those Waters, were an entering a Covenant by God, for Noah's Salvation in those Waters: Likewise Gods secret Purposes and Intendments, then only known to himself, by those transactions with Noah as in a Type, did forefignifie his like gracious Purposes towards his Church; which he utters, and declares: Also Noah his tossing and Tryals in the Waters, and Gods remembrance of him then, in the midst of them.

And this, in saying this is the Waters of Noah to me; It is as if God had there said, the Promises and Covenant I have but now declared towards my Church, make me call to mind what I said to Noah at the Flood, when the Waters would have destroyed him: And also to remember what my Grace, my Intentions, Purposes, my Affections, my Heart, was then, and at that time: And those my transactions with him then, I intended, and aimed to prefigure, and Pourtray out these my like Gracious Purposes, to my Church, to come out of his Loins: Which I meant in after Ages, and in due time to declare, and open the mistery of: And accordingly I now upon this occasion, do declare it in my Prophet Isai.; This is the Waters of Noah to me: I then had them all in contemplation afore; I had all my elect Church to come in my view: All my purposes of Grace, all my Promises of Salvation were afore me then: I intended them all in the Figure, and Type of Noah's Salvation, and of his Sons: And when the time of the accomplishment shall come, I shall further, and more amply declare this to have been in my Heart and Design by my Apostles.

To me.] There is a great deal of emphasis in that Adjection, and serves for confirmation of these things, which have now been spoken.

1. It imports that God so lookt at it, and intended it as such. A man useth to say of a thing that we account to be such, and such, It is so to me: To us, there is but one God, &c. Says the Apostle in the name of Christians: So we Judge, and believe; these Waters were my Covenant: So it stood in my thoughts; and so it should stand in yours.

2. It imports, that a thing is privately, and secretly, and within ones breast, so or so intended and esteemed: It is to me] Who am privy to my own Intentions; so to God, between God and himself. And this import the next sentence suggesteth, For as I have sworn, the Waters of Noah shall no more go over the Earth. Now look over all that story in Genesis, then over the whole Book of the Old Testament, and you find not the least intimation of an Oath which God had taken about this matter: And if God had kept his own Counsel, we could never have challenged him with this parallel of an Oath to both his Covenant, and ours: His intentions therein were known only to himself: But himself knowing his own mind, utters it here: For it is to me that the Waters of Noah are my Covenant of Grace.

3. Lastly, this [To me] imports Gods acknowledging himself obliged to fulfill his Covenant of Grace to the elect: For though none did know this to have been his intentions in it, yet it was enough for him, within himself to have intended it so. And it is enough to us for him to say, This is to me the Waters of Noah: And as I performed that then, so I hold my self obliged now. My own purposes had then, are my bounds between me, and my self: And I can no more alter my purposes in it, than I did recall my Covenant made to Noah then, when I made it.

This being the true intent, and meaning of these words; further, as for the form of speech it self, to say of the Promises of his Covenant of Grace, this] is the Waters of Noah; this form, or manner of Speech is usual. As,

1. When we would parallel two things that are alike, we use to say, this is such, or such a thing; namely, to which it is like. Thus Christ speaks of John Baptist, Matth. 11. 15 This is Elias: He speaks it of John in Coherence with Vers. 13. And why, but because he was such another Man, in his course course of Life, Zeal, Office, and way of Ministry, as Elias was; and living in like corrupt and depraved Times: As the Angels described him, and foretold against his Birth, Luke 1. 17. In the power and spirit of Elias, to turn the disobedient to the wisdom of the just. Thus here; God paralleling his Covenant with Noah, &c. with that to his Elect Church, and upon the remembrance of the likeness and sameness, says, This is the waters of Noah: Even as Christ calls Jonah's being in the Whales belly three days and three nights; the Sign of Jonah, that is, of being in the Grave, and rising then up again. Chap. 4.

2. But specially, this is, and may be used, when one thing is the Prophetick Figure, Type, or Sign of another; that they are mutually and indifferently named the one the other, That Rock was Christ; the Figure hath the Name of Christ that was intended, and prefigured in it, 1 Cor. 10. 2. And vice versâ, or on the other way, Christ our Passeover is sacrificed for us, 1 Cor. 5. 7. There Christ, the thing prefigured, is stiled The Figure: And in this case it is not by way of simple Metaphor, in that the things are like one the other: But there is this further special Foundation for it, That when one thing is intended for the Type of another, it is all One, and to be a forerunning Prophecy of the other; which must therefore necessarily be fulfilled, and come to pass. If Adam be the Type or Figure of Christ, then what follows, but as the Apostle argues it, That Christ is he that is to come, Rom. 5. 14. Adam, says he, was the Figure of him that was to come. And so the things prefigured by any Type, must of necessity be things to come, and to come to pass: For they are Prophecies, and Prophecies must have their Accomplishment.

And in this case, the Figure and thing figured, do both bear the same name; therefore Christ being the prefigured, in and by the first Adam, is tearmed the Last Adam, 1 Cor. 15. But you shall find the very same form of speech used; and the same indigitation made in the like case, Gal 4. when the Apostle would prove the different Conditions of two sorts of Persons; (into one of which all Mankind do fall;) namely either to be under the Covenant of works, or the Law, or of Grace, that is, the Gospel: Having for the proof of these (for Types rightly applied are Argumentative,) alledged how Abraham had Two Sons; the one, by a Bond-woman; the other, by a Free-woman; and dilated thereupon, he claps his hand down upon it, and with the like indigitation cries, for [these] are the two Covenants: Terming the intended Types, or Figures under the Old, by the name of the Substance; or things signified under the New. So in like manner, Rev. 11. 4. of the Two Witnesses under the New Testament, Typified out by Zachary's two Olive Trees under the old; these are the Olive-Trees, &c. Again Ephes. 5. when the Apostle had related the passages at Adam and Eves Marriage as they are found in Genesis; of a Mans being joined to his Wife, and they two being one Flesh; he in a like form of speech quasi digito monstrans, instantly subjoyns [this] is a great Mistery, as being intended of Christ, and his Church: God in his secret intention had that Aim in it: So here, whilst God had begun to express his Loving kindness, and was going on to do it; he as it were, suddainly struck with the remembrance of it, claps down his hands; This is the Waters of Noah to me. This: There is indeed this difference; that whereas in that of Adams Marriage, he takes (as I may say) his Finger off from his relating the thing signifying, and lays it upon the thing signified: [This is a great Mystery:] But here vice versâ, on the contrary, as Jacob his hands; he takes off his Speech from the thing signified, (namely his Covenant of Grace) and lays it upon the thing signified; this is (no other than) the Waters of Noah: But it is all one (as I observed) for the thing figured to be denominated by the name of the Figure; as è Contrà, the Figure by the Title of the thing figured. And so the Paraphrase upon the words may run thus, as if God had said; In the passages of the Waters of Noah, I was a drawing a model, a Shadow, of what I meant to form up, and make a Substance and Reality of in after Ages, in my Covenant of Grace.

This

BOOK I.

This to be the import of that weighty addition [To me.] The Paraphrase of some doth concur in, Tale quid concepi apud me; I was in my Thoughts conceiving, and forming such a like thing within my self: That is, whilst I was making those Transactions with Noah; Others thus, Videor mihi esse in diebus Noe: That is, whilst I am declaring, and speaking, talking of, and resolving to perform my Covenant of Grace; I think with my self, I am at the Flood, as in the days of Noah; And doing the same things over again, which I did then about Noahs Salvation, and with the same Heart, and out of the same gracious resolutions; And being privy to his own intentions, He tells us plainly, This [To me] was the waters of Noah. And now I utter my secret purposes therein, that were as then private to my self.

SECTION IV.

Some special particular Parallels between what is found in Noah's Covenant, and the Covenant of Grace.

I. ABsoluteness: Which, how and what, it will appear by comparing Things with Things, spoken of in that History; And the order of their being spoken of first in Chap. 6. When Gods Counsel, or Intention within Himself about saving Noah, and destroying the World is held, and there laid open: Gods Grace towards him is in the first place solely, and abstractly mentioned as the Cause thereof; Whilst no mention at all, not the least is made of Noah his Holiness as mingled therewith; As for which, and upon which, God did cast that Grace upon Him, in Vers. 8. But Noah found grace in the eyes of the Lord. But pure and unmixed Grace, which works, by being alone mentioned, is made the Total, and only Cause of that Matter, Vers. 8. But Noah found Grace in the eyes of the Lord: And then indeed in the Story of his Generation, which follows, Vers. 9. &c. there comes to be Recorded Noahs Holiness: These are the Generations of Noah; Noah was a just man, and perfect in his Generations, and Noah walked with God: So as Noah's Personal Righteousness, follows as the effect of that Grace, which God bore to his Person, and is no way connected with that Grace, as that for which God cast that Grace upon him: He was first found the Object of Gods Grace, and Favour, and not Grace first found in him: Thereby plainly to insinuate, that for no Righteousness in him it was, that God did first absolutely pitch his Grace upon him, abstractly from the consideration of his Holiness, and that was the fruit of that Grace of Gods; As was also the case of the blessed Virgin; O Thou that art Graciously accepted, or graced: That Thou of all other Women shouldest be the Mother of the Messiah, the Son of God, says the Angel 1 Luke 28. 32. To be sure this Priviledge could by no worthiness in her self, come to be bestowed upon her, so nor this of Noah: Nor is any thing of His inserted as a condition of that Grace; Again at the 18*th. Vers. But with Thee will I Stablish my Covenant.* Hence again, there is no mention of condition on Noahs part, but only of what God by Covenant would do on his? And therefore absolutely declareth Himself, that he not only makes a Covenant, but Establisheth it. And under this word undertakes to perform it, and bring it to a full perfection; So as what ever should be necessary and requisite on Noahs part; God at once undertakes to work in him, as part of his own Covenant: If you read over the whole Covenant of Grace, as it is Prophecied of by Jeremy, Chap. 31. and quoted by the Apostle, Heb. 8. You will find, that all that is requisite to Salvation on Mans part, God undertakes to work it in them, and causeth effectually their hearts to concur therein.

Hoc enim habent à gratiâ, quâ Deo fuerunt accepti, priusquam aliquid ab iis acceptaret. Rivet in locum.

But

But it may be said, (which also the Romanists Object;) That in Chap. 7. 1. when God did put Noah into the Ark, He said come Thou into the Ark, for Thee have I seen righteousness afore me in this Generation, Chap. 6.

I Answer: That the performance of Promises, when they are to come to execution, do require such, and such qualifications in the Persons, to whom they are performed; when yet the Decree, and purpose of those Promises, and the making of those Promises depend wholly and immediately upon Gods Grace, as the Spring and Fountain of them: Thus Heaven, and Glory, as they are in Gods purpose designed, are meerly of Grace: When yet God executively bestows them not, nor brings us to Salvation, by, and through Faith, and Holiness: As 2 Thess. 2. 13. God hath chosen you to Salvation, through Sanctification of the Spirit, and belief of the truth. Now observe how this was spoken of Noah, when the thing came to be done, and he was to set his foot into the Ark. And it comes in order after the declaration which Gods Grace utters of his Counsel, and purpose, which we read in the aforesaid Chap. 6. 8. and 18. God considered not Noahs being first Righteous, ere he did cast his Grace upon him, and thereupon did it. The like language unto this of Gods to Noah, will Christ use to his Saints, when they are at latter day to enter into Heaven: But shewing withal, how his Grace hath put a difference between them and others, and had made them meet for that Inheritance, Matt. 25. 34, 35. Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the World; for I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat, I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink, I was a stranger, and ye took me in: So first, and it imports God the Fathers first chusing of them, to have been the cause of all they Inherit.

For any man to Interpret the Absoluteness of the Covenant to be, That God saves men absolutely without any requisite qualifications wrought in them, is manifestly to cast a reproach upon the Grace of God it self in the Doctrine of it: Whilst it is professed that his Grace Covenanteth to work in them, and accordingly worketh both the Will, and the Deed, according to his good pleasure, where he means to save, and never saved any without they be wrought in them: Nor doth that Doctrine, (if not perverted by mens presumtuousness) incourage men to use no endeavours, because God Covenants to work All: For God, when he will save, setteth mens Will a work, to use all endeavours in a subordination to his Grace, as in that Exhortation you find it, Work out your Salvation, for it is God works the Will, and the Deed, yet still, according to his good pleasure: And this absoluteness of Electing Grace, the Apostle sets forth, Rom. 9. It is not of him that wills, nor of him that runs, that useth means, and endeavours, but of God that sheweth mercy: Yet without mens willing, and running, (such as wherewith souls trust not therein, or think to obtain by their endeavours;) God that sheweth mercy saveth no man; yea, shews his mercy in causing so to will, and to run, as to obtain. According to his abundant mercy he begetteth us, 1 Pet. 11. 3. He shews the mercy in working that; and being savingly wrought on, keeps us through the same mercy, so says my Text here in Isai. My kindness shall not depart from thee, nor the Covenant of my Peace be removed, saith the Lord that hath mercy on thee.

Nor indeed are those we call conditions of the Covenant on our part, as believing on Christ, turning from sin, other than necessary means of being made partakers of Christ, and Salvation: As if one should say to an hungry man, there is meat which shall be yours, to live by it, if you will eat it and digest it, else not; In this case who will say this is barely a Condition, for it is the very partaking of the meat it self, whereby a man makes it his own. So for a Father to say to one he bestows his Daughter upon in Marriage, Lo, she is your Wife, take her, and Marry her; This is not a condition of her being his Wife, as external to it, but it is that very intrinsical and essential Act, whereby she becomes his, and he her Husband: Take the instance in hand, Noahs preparing the Ark, and his entring into it to be saved, are not so properly to be stiled conditions which God took from him, and so thereupon to save him; But they were necessary means for Noah to save himself: Yea, his entring into the Book I. Ark, and abiding therein (whereunto the Act of our Faith on Christ answereth) was his Salvation it self: God himself says to him, Come, enter Thou, Gen. 7.1. and he was safe, and saved by so doing: Unto which that of Christs answers; Whoever sees the Son, and comes to him, John 6.35. And he that cometh I will raise up at the latter day, Vers. 37. Which is interpreted, He that believeth, Vers. 40,44,45. All Noah's holiness would not have saved him from the Waters; but his being in the Ark saved him from the Waters. And that Salvation as so considered, is that which bears the Figure of our Salvation. And when he was in the Ark all the while, although his meat and drink kept his Bodily Spirits alive as a Man; yet his Salvation, considered as it was a Salvation in the Waters, and from the Flood, was his being in the Ark; and that Salvation, precisely as such, is that which is in the Figure. This for the first absoluteness of this Grace and Covenant.

The second Parallel is the everlasting stability, sureness, fixedness, and constancy of the Grace of the Covenant; which, Vers. 8. is termed everlasting kindness: And the Covenant it self as unmoveable as are the Mountains. Then may the Covenant of my Peace be removed, Vers. 10. And this signified by the stability of Noah's Covenants, both first and second. And therefore the word, I will stablish my Covenant, is used of the first, Gen. 6.18. and of the second, Gen. 9.11. And the same word is repeated here in Isai. 54. In righteousness shall be established, Vers. 14. And to typifie forth this stability of the Covenant did Noah's second Covenant, in a special manner serve: And therefore the very words thereof are to this very purpose rehearsed in this verse of my Text. And to this very purpose I shewed how many of the words and passages thereof are referred unto, and transposed into the Grand Charter of the Covenant of Grace, to confirm the perpetuity thereof; as in Three several Chapters set together of Jeremiah, you find them, which I must remit the Reader unto. And for this purpose it is that God produceth his Oath in the Text, as that which he professeth to have intended in this Covenant with Noah, As I have sworn, &c. And the like parallel Oath, in correspondency thereunto, he affixeth to his Covenant of Grace here, So have I sworn I will not be wroth with thee: that is, with a wrath to destruction; even as he had sworn, The Waters of Noah should no more go over the Earth to destroy it. And an Oath, we know, is immutable, as Hebr. 6.18. Yea moreover, God professeth himself resolute and peremptory in it, concluding, Thus saith the Lord that hath mercy on thee: that is, that God, who is set in his heart, and purposes to exercise nothing else but mercy towards thee; even as God to express his peremptoriness in shewing Mercy to Moses, I will be merciful to whom I will be merciful. And truly there is this Considerable about God's alledging his Oath to Noah, that if God had not said that he intended an Oath, in that he intended an Oath in that his Covenant with Noah, we could never have challenged him of it, if he had kept his own Counsel: For read the whole Story there, and there's no mention of an Oath, or any words that tend that way, only that God should have said in his heart, I will not curse the Ground any more, Gen. 8.21. But God was privy to his own intention, and so upon this occasion declares it; and his manner of speaking here secretly imports it, This is the waters of Noah to me: that is, between me and my self, who knew my own intentions.

But you will say; Will not mens sins break this Covenant, though God will not?

I Answer; They would infallibly break between God and us, if God should not take order to keep us from such ways of sinning, as would bring everlasting wrath upon us. Promissis se curaturum, (saith Piscator well:) He will have a watchful eye, and powerful hand, to prevent such sinnings: As upon occasion of his like Oath to the perpetuity of his Covenant of Grace, he declares to David, in Psal. 89. 30, 31, 32. If his Children forsake my Law, and walk not in my Judgments; If they break my Statutes, and keep not my Commandements; then will I visit their Transgression with the Rod, and their Iniquity with stripes. And by those Chastisements I will reduce them again; But, (as Vers. 34.) my Covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that that is gone out of my lips. And that God had all our ſins before him, and well conſidered what they would be, when he takes this deliberate Oath; the very parallel Inſtance (afore us) of what is inſerted by God in Noah's Covenant, may inform us: The words in Gen. 8. 21. are, God ſaid in his heart, I will not curſe the Ground any more for man's ſake; for the imagination of man's heart is evil from his Youth: Neither will I again ſmite any more every living thing as I have done. Thus the Oath in the Figure ſpeaks. And that which Anſwers it in the Covenant of Grace is, That God foreſees what our ſins will be: And yet he knows what he hath to do, obliges himſelf with a Non obſtante thus everlaſtingly to ſave us: For he views them aforehand, and takes care they ſhall not be ſuch that he ſhould be everlaſtingly wroth with us, He knows our frame, as Pſal. 103. and conſiders it to be merciful to us, and nevertheleſs goes on to eſtabliſh this Covenant with us. This for the ſtability of his Covenant. Chap. 4.

A third Parallel is, That God hath made, and confirmed his Covenant of Grace ſure and ſtable, and in and through the Sacrifice of Chriſt the Mediatour. Covenants we know were wont to be made with Sacrifice, Pſal. 50. 5. Now God's Covenant on his part was to be ratified, Hebr. 9. 18, 19, 20. And when God's Covenant is in this 9th Verſe, ſtiled the Covenant of his Peace; it imports as much as not of Grace ſimply, but of Peace; as of God being pacified by an Attonement of a Mediatour. And the Aſpect this word Peace may ſeem to have here, unto what in the Chapter afore had foregone, where the Sacrifice of Chriſt being propheciedof, it is ſaid, He was bruiſed for our Iniquities, and the chaſtiſement of our Peace was upon him; through which God being pacified towards us, makes a Covenant of Peace with us. Now as Chriſt is ſtiled our Peace, Epheſ. 2. and ſo it being made by him, through the appointment of the Father, it is called by God the Covenant of his Peace, 1 Col. 20. It pleaſed the Father that Chriſt, having made Peace by the Blood of his Croſs, to reconcile to himſelf, &c. And in this reſpect the Parallels fall moſt fitly between that Covenant, Gen. 9. made with Noah, a Figure of God's with us; it is worth our comparing the one with the other: For not only de facto, it is found to have been ſo, that e're God eſtabliſhed his Covenant with Noah, when come forth of the Ark, he offered Burnt-offerings on the Altar to God, and that God was well pleaſed therewith, Gen. 8. 20, 21. The Lord ſmelled a ſweet ſavor; a Savour of reſt, as in the Hebrew: that is, of Peace. And ſaid in his heart, &c. He would curſe the Earth no more: and thereupon eſtabliſhed that Covenant that follows. And that Noah, the Father of that new World to come, was herein a Type of Chriſt; and that this Sacrifice of his was the Type of Chriſt's Sacrifice, we all acknowledge, from the warrant of that Alluſion, and ſameneſs of Language the Apoſtle uſeth of Chriſt's Sacrifice, that had been uttered of this of Noah, Epheſ. 5. 2. Chriſt gave himſelf for us an Offering, a Sacrifice to God, for a ſweet ſmelling Savour: which I inſiſted upon afore. But it may further be noticed, how that he makes the Parallel yet more conſpicuous, and as ſetly deſigned, by comparing the order and coherences of this 54th Chapter of Iſaiah, with the foregone, Chapter the 53d. That that Chapter treats of Chriſt's Sacrifice; and then this 54th Chapter, and alſo the 55th and 56th Chapters do treat of the Covenant of Grace, the Covenant following thereupon. And they ſucceed each other in the very ſame immediate coherence that Noah his Sacrifice and Covenant did one the other, in thoſe two fore-mentioned Chapters in Geneſis. For look, as in the latter part of that 8th Chapter, he relates the Story of Noah's Sacrifice, that then in the 9th Chapter, he Records that Covenant thereupon, juſt-anſwerably in Iſaiah, after he had in the fore-going 53d Chapter, foretold Chriſt's great Sacrifice of himſelf; Bearing our ſins and ſorrows, making his Soul an offering for ſin; with promiſe that many ſhould be juſtified thereby: And he ſhould ſee his Seed, &c. Immediately after this he ſubjoyns, how upon this Sacrifice God Covenants to rear up a new Chriſtian Church, (of which the next Branch is to treat,) and eſtabliſheth this Covenant therewith, under this very Figure of the Waters of Noah: And as no Prophecy ſpeaks more fully and clearly of Chriſt's Sacrifice, than that 53d Chapter

As Mr. Gataker Engliſh Annot. rather my Covenant of Peace. Ezek 34.35. & 37.26. that is, of reconcilement to thee.

Book I. of Isaiah; so, nor none more perspicuously and Evangelically of the Gospel Covenant, than the 54th Chapter, and the two other that follow. And in the 55th Chapter, the 5th Verse, this Covenant is called The sure Mercies of David: that is, of Christ: Having purchased them for us by his Death, and by rising again having applied them to us.

4. The fourth Parallel is, The tenderness of Gods Mercies to his Elect, whom he takes into his Covenant, in all these Distresses and Extremities: This is by the Parallel of Noah's Story set forth to us: For what can be supposed more sympathizing with his People, or argues a deeper sense and sounding of Bowels, than to hear God in the midst of their Afflictions and Temptations, cry out on the suddain, and with the greatest vehemency; (Oh) thou afflicted, and tossed with tempests, and not comforted: There is no speech or passage which we find our God to utter in Scripture, more pathetick or passionate than this: And yet you see, (as before I touched) it is represented under a perfect Allusion to, and compassionate Remembrance that God's Heart still had retained of Noah, whilst in the Ark, floating in those Waves and horrible Tempests; which coming in immediately with coherence with the remembrance of Noah's Waters, This is the Waters of Noah, &c. in Vers. 9. As a remembrance of his Covenant with his People, could not have been more probably carried over to any other Similitude or Allusion in Scripture whatsoever, suppose this coherence had not been: But for the pertinency of it, I shewed before what remembrance God had of Noah, whilst in the Ark, Gen. 8. 1. And if Noah's Instance had not been alluded to, I appeal to any what Exemplification they can find, to set out to the life the Sympathisings of a condoling Heart of another in Misery, like unto it; nor could the movings of God's Bowels have been more elegantly uttered. Methinks it is as if the dearest Friend, or most loving Husband, or Father, having his dearest Relations of Wife and Children, and Friends, in a Ship at Sea, and viewing them to sit within the rage of wild Waves and Winds; which he, standing himself safe on the immediate Shore, sees, and beholds with his own eyes; and at every bending of the Ship near to a suppression under those Waves, his heart beats, and he lamentably cries out at every toss and motion, and thinks with himself, how must their hearts be afflicted, and not comforted in the midst of all, that are shiftless and helpless in this Storm, and know not what to do! Like to such an one doth God express his Affection here.

5. As touching the eminent Subject of this new Covenant, and of Election of Grace; that is, the Persons to be saved, or that Church this Covenant is established withal; our comparing together what is prophecied thereof in this 54th Chapter of Isaiah, and the prefigurations thereof in Noah's Ark and Story, and his own Prophecies given out about it, will afford another (if I may not call it a Parallel, yet) concordant Harmony, yea Identity, to be the same in both.

Who, and what that Church should be, is lively set forth in Noah's Story, under a double Notion or Consideration of them.

1. Of their Persons, whom that Church should specially be made up of.

2. In respect of their Condition, viz. all sorts of Sinners.

1. For the first, This 54 Chapter of Isaiah informs us, that that Church which God applies all these Promises unto, and intends all these his Comforts to, was the Christian Church of the New Testament, which was to rise up soon after Christ's Death; (which many other Prophecies had foretold;) And in a special manner the coherence of the 53d Chapter, and this 54th Chapter, shews; this also (as it served afore for the former purpose, so now for this;) you have in Chap. 53. the most renowned of all other Records in the Old Testament, prophecying of Christ's Death, and therein a Promise as his Purchase and reward, Vers. 10. Thou shalt make his Soul an Offering for sin; He shall see his Seed, &c. And as in the Event it proved, that soon after Christ's Death, a new Christian Church began to be reared; so in order follows next in the Prophet, a Prophecy of that Church: For immediately upon it, in Chap.

54. from the first Verse, and so on, succeeds this Church, as therefrom Existing, which was to be both his Seed and Spouse; Thy Maker is thy Husband: And Children to be brought forth to him. See the first Verse; Sing O barren, bear, and cry aloud thou that didst not travel with Child; for more are the Children of the Desolate, than the Children of the married Wife: Here is a former Wife-Mother spoken of, and here is a new Wife (that formerly had been barren and desolate;) and a new Seed, or Children more numerous than those by the former Wife; and these are manifestly discriminated, the one from the other: And 'tis to this new Spouse that God applies this his Oath of Noah's Covenant and Waters: (which is no where else to any such purpose at all mentioned in all the Old Testament.) Well, but who is this barren Woman; this anew received Spouse? Let us hear the Apostles Interpretation of it, who those are whom he applies it unto, Gal. 4. 25. Jerusalem that now is: He speaks of that Judaical Church, under the Name of the Mother City, which then was Existing, and as yet not destroyed, when he wrote this Epistle. And this Church, the old Wife, would needs hold up, in opposition to that new Church and Wife: that Church the old Wife would needs hold up in opposition to that new Church and Wife; that frame and form of Worship of the Old Testament, t hough she kept thereby her self and her Children still in Bondage (as its there:) But there is (says he) another Jerusalem, which is above, and is free; the Mother of us all. Which new Jerusalem was [now] under the New Testament declared to be the Mother of us all; the Venter of a new Generation: To prove which, he citeth this very place, Isai. 54. 1. as a Prophecy thereof, Rejoyce O barren, &c. So then here is a new Church this Chapter of Isaiah concerns; and an old One which it is severed from. Chap. 4.

And it will not be a block in the way of the Application of this Scripture, which I shall drive at, (which is, that the New Church out of the Gentiles is principally aimed at) whether the Christians of the Jewish Nation, and the Churches at Jerusalem and Judea, be understood, and taken in to have made up, during those Gospel times, part of this New Church. (Although there is this against that, in that very Chapter, that the Church he now foretels he would anew assume, the Wife he had cast off, would cast off no more, after he had received her, whereas he hath cast off the Jewish Nation, from having Children by her, or out of her; for these 1400 years. She was in a manner cut off in Paul's time; whereas out of the Gentiles he hath continued a numerous Church, to this day:) It matters not I say: For the Children out of the Jewish Nation then (though the first Gospel fruits) were but a few in comparison to those the Gentiles have brought forth, to God; and soon became barren again.

But yet it will not be enough for the full compleating my drist, that this new Wife, the Church under the new, is that which is prophecied of hereby Isaiah; unless in the next place I also shew, that this was either Typified, or Prophecied of Noah's Story: That we may say of it, this is the Waters of Noah, &c.

1. In the General, the Allusion from thence will hold; that Noah and his Sons were ordained by God to be the Founders and Beginners of a New World (as we use to say,) they began the World a new. Thus in the letter they were; which Peter's phrase insinuates, whilst he calls that afore Noah's times, the World that then Was. And answerably thereunto, the times of Christ, and his Apostles, are stiled in the current language of the New Testament, stilo novo, to have begun a new World. Thus Christ speaks, the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand: And as a new Æra or account, the Gospel-times are call'd [the last days:] So the Apostles; and the World to come, saith Paul, Heb. 2. which did then begin: For, 'tis set in opposition to the time of the Law, given by the Angels, Vers. 2. And so of the Jewish State; the Analogy holds thus between them, that look as when in the old World, all flesh had corrupted their way; as Gen. 6. 11, 12. And among the Jews Religion, being afore so corrupted; and among the Gentiles, God having suffered in times past all nations to walk in their own ways Acts 17. 16. After dumb Idols as they were led, 1. Cor. 12. 1. That then God raised up this new Gospel Church, as a new World; the time of which is called, the time of the Reformation, or change

Book I. change of the Old, Hebr. 9. The Saints, and Churches you read of in the Epistles, superscribed unto them; to the Romans Corinthians, Galatians, Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, and the Hebrews. Thus in general for the Type. But,

2. Furthermore, when Noah came forth of the Ark, to begin this new World, he falls a Propheſying; and propheſies after that Second Covenant made with him, of this same New Church, Gen. 9. 27. God shall inlarge Japhet to dwell in the Tents of Shem; which was when the Gentiles were converted: And now let us return again to Isaiah, and see whither he doth now also Propheſie in a language conform to this of Noah's, as if he had renewed but Noah's old Prophecy, as intended of this new Church. Read on the next Two Verses of that Chapter, [Enlarge] the place of thy Tent, and let them stretch forth the Curtains of thy Habitations: Spare not, lengthen thy Cords, strengthen thy Stakes, for thou shalt break forth on the right hand, and on the left; and [thy seed shall inherit the Gentiles;] and make the desolate Cities to be inhabited. Which repeats but the punctual fulfilling of that Prophecy of Noah in Japhet's Seed, under the same Language of enlarging Japhet there; and enlarge thy tents, here; and of dwelling in the Tents of Shem there, through the efficacious perswasion of the Word that went out of Sion and from Jerusalem, in the Apostles Ministry. For after this, Moses the Relator of these things, setting down who were the Sons of Japhet, in Chap. 10. Vers. 2, 3, 4. In the 5th Vers. he shews what parts of the World their allotment was: By these were the Isles of the Gentiles divided in their Lands; every one after his Tongue, after their Families, in their Nations. Now we may know that those Isles of the Gentiles, are those of Europe; the Grecians, Germans, Britains, &c. And so called by a special denomination: Europe abounding with Islands, more than Asia or Africa, by farr. And we find among the Heathen Records, that they stiled themselves Japeti genus, the Seed of Japhet: You Brethren, even you, are a Portion of that Seed, Japetians all; and whose fore fathers have been perswaded to dwell in the Tents of Shem, and the Gospel is amongst you to this Day; you are, with other Nations, the Church in all these Prophecies pointed at, and Children of this Covenant, which hath taken hold of many of you. And we have heard with our Ears, and our Eyes have seen it, the fulfilling of that which follows in that 13th Vers. of this Chapter, Your Seed shall inherit the Gentiles and make the desolate Cities to be inhabited.

This as to the Persons, or what Generation of Men, simply considered.

2. For the Condition of the persons this new Church was to consist of; it had a representation made for it to prefigure that, namely they should be sinners of all sorts, that the worst of Nations in the World brought forth, according to the several kinds of their degeneratings and profanesses. I must now again retrive that Objection which I before have made, namely, that there were all sorts of Beasts and Fowls, and creeping things in the Ark, which were saved from the Waters, in a corporeal Salvation, as well as Noah, and his Sons; yea, and with whom, after Noah and they came forth of the Ark, that second Covenant was made. And the Objection is, that therefore this Covenant cannot be drawn into a Figure of the Gospel Covenant with the Church, his elect.

Besides those answers then given, I then made a reservation of one for this place; and I have now on purpose proposed the Objection anew, to usher in this new parallel, that is now to follow, from what the very Beasts prefigured. We read Act. 10, 11, 12. how in the first beginning of the Gospel, or of this new Christian Church, (as Peter speaks of it, Acts 15.) there was a Vessel let down from Heaven, in a vision to Peter, wherein were all manner of Four-footed Beasts in the Earth: Wild Beasts, and creeping things, and Fowls of the Air: And the interpretation of this to Peter, was, that the Catholick Church, under the New Testament, should consist, as of Men from out of all Nations of Noahs Seed, whether clean or unclean, Jew, or Gentile, who should now be converted to the Faith of Christ: And that this was signified unto Peter by all these sorts of Creatures: Now bring this to Noah's Ark and Covenant, 1 Gen. 7. and 9. Chapters; the Antients (as Austin) readily understood the coming in of all Nations under the Gospel into the Church, to have been prefigured thereby. And how usual it is Scripture to set out the several sorts of wicked Men under the Similitude of Beasts; as Herod, by a Fox; Nero, by a Lion; the Circumcision, by Dogs; needs not be enlarged upon: I may therefore apply what God doth in Ezekiel, touching his People, whom he had represented under the Figure of Sheep, throughout, Chap. 34. He in the last Verse, by way of Exposition of that Parable, The flock of my Pasture are Men, says he; So on the contrary I may say, these Beasts are Men, the wickedest of Men; and all kind of Sinners of them. And truly, when I consider, how much that one alone in the Acts answers to the other in Genesis; and find in comparing both places the very same enumeration as to the kinds of these in both places, to be these generals, Fowls of the Air, Beasts, and Creeping things; and how some of every sort of these, are in both places pointed at; I could not reject this as a meer Phantasm of Mans imagination; it having so far the name of a Scripture for its warrant; as by this comparing these Scriptures together, doth appear.

Chap. 4.

Sicut cuncta genera animalium in Arcâ claudantur, sic omnes Gentes Ecclesia continet. August contra Manichæum, lib. 11. c. 14.

And whereas it may again be objected, that the Covenant, Gen. 9. is made with Noah, and his Sons, and their Seed distinctly, and a part from that of the Beasts, and all living things; and so the Figure of these Beasts can not be brought into this Account.

The Answer is; that what some part of a Type doth not serve to reach, that another shall: Types are but imperfect shadows, and therefore are so formed, as one to represent one piece of the Substance, to be shadowed out under one resemblance; and another piece, or Limb under another: (Whereof multitudes of Instances might be given:) So then, although the Church of his Elect, whom God made his Covenant with, and for, were to be Men, as for their Persons, of Noah's Seed and Posterity; and in that respect the Covenant is by name made with them; yet their Condition, as Sinners, was in the several variety of their Beastialities as Sinners, set forth under the Figure of those several sorts of living things, to the taking in of the most venemous of Sinners, Serpents, and creeping things. And so by both the Representations, the Figure is made the more compleat; which under one alone would have been too imperfect. 'Tis then but putting this double Consideration respectively upon either, and the objection is salved: And the full mind of the Figure appears to the Life.

6. Lastly; That very Rainbow, which is said to have been, and then served to be but an outward Providential Remembrance to God, no more to drown the Earth by Waters, hath yet in the New Testament another Rainbow, whereof that in Genesis was but the τὸ φαινόμενον: you may behold its appearance when you will, twice in the Revelation. The first time, set and constant: The second, occasionally; and both set up for the comfort of this new Christian Church, (which we have shewn was the Subject of the Covenant) as that in Genesis had been for the Confirmation and Establishment of Noah's World.

The first appearance of this Rainbow, you may behold, Rev. 4. Vers. 3. where it is placed for a constancy to endure, and continue unto the end of the Transactions of that Book; at which Chapter beginneth the General Prophecy of the Fates of this Universal Christian Church; gathered (as was observed) out of all Nations, Tongues, and Kindreds; as where you also read, Chap. 5. 9. And in that 4th Chapter, at the first entrance to the Prophecy, and by way of Prologue to the whole, is God presented as sitting on his Throne, ordering and governing all Occurrences that should befall this Church, having a Representative of that whole Church in all Ages; even as a Parliamentary Assembly before their Prince and King, standing afore him and his Throne: And their appears a Rainbow round about that Throne of God, Vers. 3. which is in a perfect Allusion to this of Noah: For the Fate of the Church of the New Testament was all along throughout all Ages more afflicted, tost with tempests, than ever the Jewish Church had been: For Vers.

Book I. Verſ. 5. Out of the throne proceeded Lightnings and Thunderings; (which always accompany Tempeſts) of the breaking forth of which you may frequently read in that Book, now for their ſupport, and conſtant comfort, againſt thoſe dreadful diſpenſations of Gods, doth this Rainbow appear.

1. To ſignifie to us that Memorial which God himſelf hath, of his everlaſting kindneis to his Church, in the midſt of all thundering Diſpenſations whatever, as a ſign and ſimbol unto his Church, of the Light of his Countenance ſhining on them, in their thickeſt and darkeſt Clouds: for a Rainbow only appears where, and when the Sun alſo Shineth.

And this New Teſtament Rainbow excel (as the Subſtance always doth the Figure) that other; take it but as it was in the Figure.

1. In that it is conſtant and fixed for all times; Whereas that of Noahs Covenant appears but occaſionally.

2. The old was but as a half Moon Rainbow, a Semi-circle; whereas this is round about the Throne, and encompaſſeth it; 'tis a whole Circle: And his Church are encamped likewiſe in a round, and He in the midſt of them: So let God turn himſelf in various Diſpenſations, and look which way he pleaſeth, yet ſtill he doth, and muſt neceſſarily view his Church through his Rainbow, putting him in mind of mercy: Yea, and all thoſe lightnings, and thunderings, though never ſo fiery, he ſhoots, muſt paſs thorough his Rainbow, and ſo proceed out of mercy, and paſs thorough loving kindneſs unto them; ſhewing withall, that in the midſt of his fierceſt Anger, he ſtill remembers mercy; And that all his ways are mercy and truth unto them; ever fulfilling that in Pſal. 3. The Lord is Gracious and merciful, and will ever be mindful of his Covenant: To ſhew both that all his ways are mercy, and truth; for even all thoſe Thunderbolts, and lightnings do come through that Rainbow; which doth blunt the force, and draw out the venemous vapour that is in them, as they come forth, and are directed to his people: As alſo that Himſelf is ever mindful of his Covenant, Pſal. 3.

The ſecond appearance of this Rainbow, is occaſional, and for a ſpecial purpoſe: There is upon many forebodes, and ſeeming more than probabilities, out of the Revelation, one great Fate to come upon the Churches of Chriſt; The laſt killing of the Witneſſes, that hath been ſo long forewarned of by many Witneſſes: How long firſt, or how ſoon, none but God knows; it may perhaps lie at the door, which when it comes, will prove the moſt violent of all the foregone; even as that of Dioclesian, (the laſt of the Ten Perſecutions upon the Primitive Saints) was the greateſt of all forewent it: And ſo, this being to be the laſt, from Antichriſt, and his followers, may likewiſe prove to be of all Perſecutions the ſoreſt, and in which ſhall be accompliſhed, and ſo ended, the ſcattering of the power of the holy people, Dan. 12. And indeed, ſo great is it like to be, as it occaſioneth Chriſt himſelf (the ſame Angel that appeared in the 12*th.* of Daniel;) to come down from Heaven on purpoſe, in in an extraordinary appearance, to ſupport the Saints in a ſpecial manner againſt that trial: And this Angel is no other than Chriſt himſelf, as appears by one ſpeech of his in the 11*th.* Chapter, Verſ. 3. for the Narrative in the fore-part of that Chapter, is uttered by the ſame Angel, I will give Power to my two Witneſſes, ſaith he: And to call them his Witneſſes, none but Chriſt muſt be allowed to ſpeak, no meer created Angel might do it.

Now ſee what an appearance he comes down withal, when he cometh with this ſad Meſſage, which we find in Chap. 11. His appearance in Chap. 10. 1. Is, that his body was clothed with a Cloud, his face ſhining as the Sun, and a Rainbow upon his Head; and all of theſe ſignificant unto the purpoſe ſpecified.

1. There being ſo violent, and huge a Storm a coming immediately upon his Church; and that ſhould come upon his whole Church, that is, his Body; His Body is therefore ſaid to be clothed with a Cloud all over: For his Head and Feet are otherwiſe there particularly deſcribed; and therefore it is intended it was his Body was that of him, which the Cloud environed. Other ſlaughters of his members have been at various times particular, upon ſeveral parts of his Body apart; but this laſt is to be univerſal, to the whole that remain in the Streets, or Juriſdiction of the great City: Even as the Waters of Noah, was was the only Universal Flood; though particular Floods have been, before and since. Chap. 4.

2. Yet Secondly, His Face shone as the Sun, to shew that his Everlasting Grace, and kindness, was not only inwardly within himself, and in reality in this sad hour still the same that ever it had been to his people in their utmost prosperous times; And that his Heart had nothing but graciousness of intents, thoughts of peace towards them; But that outwardly his face, (which is the Index of his Heart) should shine upon their souls, in lifting up the light of his Countenance thereon: Whilst their outward man was under those sore Persecutions.

3. And the Sun-shine of his face, and favour, causeth a Rainbow to shine on the Cloud about his Head, for a Memorial, and Assurance to his Churh, that this Flood shall not destroy them: Though it may afflict, and toss them sore, even as in Gen. 9. 14. (in the figure) it is said, it shall come to pass, that when I bring a Cloud over the Earth, that the Bow shall be in the Cloud; and I will remember my Covenant: And truly I conclude, Let Christ come with what Clouds he pleaseth, and cover us his Body all over with them, so as his Face shine as the Sun, and he lift up the light of his Countenance upon us; and set up his Rainbow, the symbol of his everlasting kindness and Mercy; and we shall have sufficient to support us.

SECTION V.

How the Story of Noah, was a Type of the Mediator of the Covenant of Grace, Christ which was the Ark.

I PETER III. 19, 20, 21.

By which also he went and Preached unto the Spirits in Prison : Which sometime were disobedient, when once the long suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the Ark was a preparing: Wherein few, that is eight Souls were saved by water. The like Figure whereunto, even Baptism, doth also now save us, (not the putting away the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience towards God) by the Resurrection of Jesus Christ.

THat which Peter holds forth concerning this our Salvation, is reducible to two Heads, which drawn forth, and set out, will give us a full Exposition of the Apostles Scope therein.——

First Head.

Noah was then a Preacher of the Gospel, and of Salvation by Christ, even as we the Apostles now, that's Peter's Scope.

We read in the Second Epistle of our Peter 2. 5. That this Noah was then a Preacher of Righteousnes : What Righteousnes ? That of the Law, that is, of the Righteousnes of a rigid Repentance only ? No, it is said, Heb. 11. 7. By faith Noah being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an Ark to the saving of his house, by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of Righteousnes, which is by Faith. Noah himself was taught of God from that figure, being saved by the Ark, (which Peter here applies to the Salvation of the soul by Christ) he being thus instructed by God, to have his recourse unto the Righteousnes of the Messiah by faith, he became, says the Text, Heb. 11. 7. The heir of the righteousnes of faith : That is, of the same Righteousnes that we Christians do now Believe in : There was a new and clearer illustration then, and thereby added and revealed to Noah's faith, besides that had been afore through the Promise of that Seed to Adam : And Noahs faith being thus more fully and explicitely inlightned in that point, than any or all before him ; it is said, he thereupon became the heir of the righteousnes of faith anew ; and because he was with a fresh light and clearer discovery brought to embrace that Righteousnes of the Messiah, which had been but darkly and obscurely, in comparison before revealed, thereupon out of his own personal faith, and experience; he became a Preacher of the same righteousnes unto the world, for their Eternal Salvation also ; for as he believed so he spake. And further, he is declared to be a Free-Grace man in his Faith as to Gods acceptation of him, he wholly relying on the sole fa-favour of God for Salvation, wherefore God says, Gen. 6. 8. But Noah found grace in the eyes of the Lord, and not upon the account of Works. And so in like manner for the Messiah, he understood that his Ark, he was forewarned to prepare, was the figure of him, even as of Abraham, it is said in the same Heb. 11. Vers. 19. That he understood and received his Son Isaac, in a figure of the Resurrection; Namely, of Christ, and so of us, himself and all in Christ unto Eternal life, and still I say he Believed, so he Preached this Gospel, the same with ours, that is for the substance of it. Chap. 4.

2. The Gospel being thus Preached by Noah, 'tis further said by Peter, that Christ in his Divine Nature, was he that Preached in Noah's Ministry, as really as now he doth in the Apostles, (when gone to Heaven) he is said to do, Ephes. 2. He came and Preached Peace to you which were afar off, &c. Thus afore flesh assumed, as well as now since, for it was he who being ὁ λόγος, the word, that still spake in all those dispensations to the Fathers; And so Peter here, In which Spirit he went and Preached, &c.

3. Only there was but one Noah, that is in that latter part or Age of that World, who (some way or other) Preached to the whole world to condemn it, as Heb. 11. 17. thereby making way for their destruction, and damnation that followed thereupon, as upon disobedience to the Gospel it now also doth; but now under the Gospel, great is (and was in Peters days) the company of Preachers, as the Psalmist speaks.

4. Peter to admonish the present World of that great sin of neglecting the great Salvation tells them,

1. That as then, so now, few are saved by this Gospel Preached: Few, that is, eight Persons then, and now, take times, and means the whole world lies in wickedness, comparatively to these, few are saved.

2. That look as then the event was, that the souls of them that disobeyed went to Hell, He Preached to the souls in Prison, says Peter, and by prison, hell is there meant (as Christs speech imports) he shall be cast into prison, and pay the utmost farthing) so it will fall out inevitably now, and with a greater damnation, as the means are greater.

3. Their Sin was cleaving to their Lusts, and Pleasures in Wives, and eating and drinking, that they would not be perswaded to embrace Christ: Which is here termed disobedience, so now.

And that we may further clear this to have been Peters Scope to institute this Parallel, those correspondent allusions which Peter useth (speaking here of those of the Old World) unto what in the very Story we find in Genesis Recorded of them, doth evidence this, and are very remarkable in three Particulars. Whereas,

1. Peter says that Christ in his Spirit went and Preached to them, answerably in Gen. 6. 3. Christ thus speaks, my Spirit shall not always strive, that is, in the Ministry of my Servants, as hitherto it hath done of Enochs, and others, and particularly, in that of my Servant Noah.

2. Whereas Peter says that the long suffering of God waited for their repentance upon Noah's Preaching, in like manner Christ there in Genesis in the same Verse says. Yet Mans days shall be 120 Years, as a space to repent in, after and upon Noah's Preaching and warning so long before.

Book. I.

3. That clause inserted by Peter, that they were the Spirits of those men that were now in Prison, that is, in Hell, who were then Preached to by Noah; holds an affinity unto that known Tradition, and Language among the Jews, that of all Mankind afore or after, those men Noah Preached unto of all others, had been notified, and famed to have gone to Hell; insomuch that Hell it self (this Prison) had its name from their Company, and Inhabitation there. They were made a Proverb of all in the Old Testament, all along; to go down to the company of Gyants, was all one to go to Hell, thus in the Proverbs again, and again, as Mr. Mede hath observed. Those Gyants were the Ring-leaders of the Ungodly, & Peter speaks of the whole of that World who perished, and generally went to Hell, and so being the First-born of Hell, as it were the first Inhabitants of that place; hence Hell had that denomination, as on the contrary of Saints, to Abrahams bosom; As if we should say to Malefactors, you shall go amongst your Companions of Thieves, and Cutpurses to Newgate, so designing forth that Prison from the company there.

Second Head.

That our being saved by Christ now, was signified by Noah's being saved then in the Ark, through or in the midst of the waters.

For whereas he says, Baptism now saves us, the meanning is, Christ now signified in Baptism, saves us who was prefigured then, by the Ark in the Waters; for it is Christ that is signified, and Sealed up in this Ordinance of Baptism. And as it is said, That Rock was Christ, Corinthians 2. 10. 11. So this Baptism is Christ, and signifies him, and his saving of us.

And look as Noah Preacht this Salvation by Christ to the Old World, verbally and in Sermons: So that very action of his, in Building and entring into the Ark, and Gods Transaction with him, and his preservation therein, was the figure of Christs saving us, signified to us in our Baptism.

And though the Ordinance of Baptism it self as now Instituted, was not understood by Noah, then as prefigured, yet Christ and the Salvation it self signified thereby was.

I was long kept from the right understanding of this place, by my ordinary and cursory reading of it, by our Translation, (and so perhaps many others) they Translate it, saved by waters, so ascribing their Salvation to the waters, as the means of Noah, and their Salvation, and so I still understood the allusion here had been, that the outward Element of our Baptism being Water, and that Noah having been saved upon the Waters, that therefore the Parallel had been that they were saved by Water, as the Instrument, and as signifying and typifying forth the Blood of Christ washing us, and saving us, as those Waters had done them.

But when I came upon this occasion, narrowly to examine this matter.

1. I considered that the Salvation by Waters in the Flood, held not at all a correspondency with our Salvation, through our being washed in Christs Blood, as in Baptism is signified; whereas here the Apostle affirms, that there is a like figure answering each other, which to be sure holds not in this. For the Persons of those in the Ark, were not washed by the Water of the Flood at all, as we are washed in Baptism by Christs Blood, but it was the Ark only, which was washed with those waters.

2. I found that the Salvation of Noah, is said to have been in and by the Ark. So expresly in the Text, wherein (speaking of the Ark) eight persons were saved as the means of their Salvation; and as for the Waters saving them, that was but an accidental effect, for otherwise the Waters overflowing tended to destroy them.

3. I

3. I found that διὰ ὕδατος, translated here by the Water, is more properly, both to the sense and phrase rendred through the Water, and so the sense is; in the Ark they were saved from the Flood, being carried in it through all its Waves, and still kept safe from all danger from them, as in the Acts, Chap. 4. 22. It is through many Tribulations we enter into Glory; ('tis the same Particle;) So these were saved through these Waters, which otherwise, of themselves directly and indeed did threaten and Hazard their Salvation. Chap. 4.

Again I found διὰ ὕδατος is rendred in this very Epistle, in the Water, or the midst of the Water, by this very Apostle that kept to his own Dialect, 2 Epist 3. 5. The Earth that now stands in the Water; or, in the midst of the Water. Just thus here, they were saved in the Ark, Floating in or through the midst of the Waters. See Mr. Mede in his Paraphrase upon that Chapter.

4. So as those words [The like Figure whereunto] refer not, 1. To the word Water, but unto the word Ark, as wherein it is said, they were saved. 2. Or else, unto the Matter of that whole foregoing Sentence; and so the Coherence runs thus, that the Substance of our Salvation by Baptism, or Christian Baptism, answereth in Similitude unto that Salvation of those Eight Persons in the Ark then; and is a like Figure thereunto.

So then the Summary Result of all is; that Christ our Ark and our Salvation in him now signified in Baptism, was the thing lively forefigured in that Salvation of theirs in the Ark, bearing them up in and through the Waters.

OF ELECTION.

BOOK II.

Of the Order of God's Decrees about Man's Election and Reprobation. Of the End to which we are Ordained; A Supernatural Union with God, and Communication of himself. The Infinity of Grace discovered therein.

CHAP. I.

That God had a Respect unto Man (considered) as unfaln in his Election of him unto the End, and also unto Man as faln into Sin in his Decrees to the Means.

THIS Distinction to the End, and to the Means, in the Decrees of God, is so generally acknowledged, that I need not insist on't.

But concerning what is the End, and what are the Means, as in my Sense, I intend it needs some Explication.

1. The End is either, 1. God's Glory, and that I call the Supream End of all. Of this my Assertion proceedeth not. 2. There is that fulness of Glory God designed to bring his Elect into; and this I call the Ultimate End or Issue of all (as the other the Supream.) And this end (which the Apostle terms The End, 1 Cor. 15. 24. and Rom. 6. 22. and Christ the Perfection of his Members, John 17. 22, 23. compared,) is that I mean, when I affirm that the Decree to this End was not after, or upon the consideration of the Fall first had. But indeed, that all those Means to accomplish or bring us through unto the attaining of this End, they all suppose Man faln, as to the Obect of them.

And

BOOK II.

And then ſecondly, I diſtinguiſh again of what are termed Means to this End among ſeveral Divines. The pure Superlapſarian he takes into the Means to this End, the Creation, and the Permiſſion of the Fall, and calls them Means to bring about that Intention or Decree to that ultimate End or Glory ſpecified. But I do limit my ſelf, that thoſe only are Means, either which on Chriſt's part he, as a Redeemer, hath performed thereunto, or which on our part are wrought in us, or by us; ſuch as are Calling, Juſtifying Faith, and Repentance, which are termed Preparations unto Glory, Rom. 9. 23. Whom he hath afore prepared unto Glory. Alſo good Works, and an holy Life, Epheſ. 2. 10. which God had afore prepared, (So in the Margent and Greek) that we ſhould walk in them. He will give Grace as the Means then, Glory as the End. Theſe I am ſure are ſuch Means as do ex ſe, prepare for Glory, by way of direct and proper Influence. And all ſuch do preſuppoſe a Fall, and are a Reſtauration of us out of it. And it is of theſe I now ſpeak, and unto theſe I do limit my Diſcourſe.

Niſi tribus illis mediis, 1. Homine condendo. 2. Condito integro ſed Labili. 3. Denique (Lapſo) intervenientibus, ad iſtos finis Deus pervenire non potuit. Piſcator. Queſt. de Objecto Prædeſtinat. pag. 176

And as for that other of Creation, &c. ſure I am, That that Holineſs in Adam by Creation, whilſt he ſtood, and in which he was Created, was not a means at all of that Glory, that is of that Election Glory which we are now ſpeaking of. But therefore it muſt be caſt upon ſome other Conſideration, Notion, or Account, than of a Means which Election ſhould have prepared for that Glory. Alſo the Sin of Adam, no man muſt ſay that it was a means, but at the utmoſt of it, but an occaſion, or rather indeed but a meer out-let or paſſage through which Election wrought it ſelf into a new Enlargement or Amplification and Magnifying of the Grace of it ſelf towards the Elect, in a new way, conſidered as Sinners, and as now become miſerable, which by Creation they were not: In which new way and courſe, the Grace of Election would further expiate, and as with a fetching a compaſs about, bring us to that ultimate Glory it had deſigned: (as in Hebr. 2. 10. the Phraſe is;) Thereby the more illuſtriouſly to glorifie it ſelf, by making thereby a new Edition of Grace which ſhould give all anew after ſinning, and deſert of the contrary, foreſeen.

Whereas the former Grace conſidering us unfaln, and deſigning us unto that end, was a meer Super-creation and Supernatural Grace through Chriſt, as a Mediator of Union: But this laſt was by him, as by a Saviour purchaſing all anew, and reſtoring us unto ſuch Graces, now utterly loſt, as were requiſite for Man faln to have, e're he ſhould be brought unto Glory.

But what Aſpect or Subſerviency any way, Creation or Permiſſion of the Fall have unto the Decrees of Election or Reprobation, I have a more proper place to ſhew it in. But it is certain they ſerve but in common unto each of thoſe Decrees, and are but ſuch Matters as common Providence. That which at preſent I would ſay, is only that I rank them not among proper and direct means unto that ultimate End ſpoken, but I limit the proper Notion of Means unto ſuch as do ſuppoſe the Fall; for that Chriſt conſidered as a Redeemer: As alſo that we ſhould be called and believe theſe are all ſuch Means as have an immediate Influence into that Glory, as all do and muſt acknowledge; and they ſuppoſe the Fall firſt, and therefore I limit the Decree of the Means unto ſuch. This for the ſtating of it.

Now as touching my Aſſertion, as thus ſtated, viz. his making this Apartment, That in the Decree to the End, God had an eye unto Man conſidered as not faln: I am not alone in it; Polanus ſpeaks adequately unto this my Senſe, whom I the more willingly cite, becauſe he alſo makes Chriſt as he is Chriſt the Head and Foundation of Election, conſidered afore the Fall: As alſo ſuitable unto this my preſent Argument in hand, I profeſs my ſelf to do: He ſpeaking how Man is the Subject, or Object of Election, and how conſidered by God therein, hath theſe words: God in his Decree of Election, did behold (or look upon) his Elect, as to the End he predeſtinated them unto, ſo as men abſolutely in com- mon, without all consideration of Qualities in them. But if we consider the Means leading to the End, so he looked upon men, not as in their upright Condition (afore the Fall) but as they would be corrupt, of and in themselves, by the Fall, and faln headlong by their own default into Eternal Death. Than which, nothing is more full unto that Division or Distinction of Means and End which I have made. Chap. 1.

I know there is a Controversie among Divines, not at all whether Election be not as well to the Means as to the End, and so unto both, none that I know deny that; but the Controversie is, Whether the whole Act of God's decreeings unto both, should not have been pitched, either wholly upon Man considered in the Mass of Creability afore the Fall, or wholly upon the Mass of Mankind considered and viewed first as fallen into sin. And many do judge it incompatible that both should stand.

I profess not to enter upon the Merits of so great a Question here; but only that both Conditions were at once viewed by God, so that One was neither first nor second to the Other in time, but that God having all afore him in his immense Understanding, had in his purpose of Election to the End, a respect unto Man considered as unfaln, but in that to these Means unto Man considered as faln, and decreed both, and all in one and the same determination of his Divine Will.

That there have been some eminent Divines that have gone about to reconcile those different Opinions, Whether Men faln or unfaln were the Object of Predestination, may be well known among them that are versed in this Controversie.

That Judicious and Good Divine Keckermanus, he first states the Controversie; The whole Question (says he) about the Object of God's Decree of Election is, Whether Men were absolutely considered, (as Creatures) or under the consideration of the Fall. And then determines it by the Application of this very Distinction in the Sense I have given it; Thus. The Decree of Election falls under a double Consideration: The first, In respect of the End, namely, Life Eternal: And so the Consideration of the Fall was not necessary, because the Fall was not a Means thereof, but rather an Impediment. Secondly, This Decree may be considered, as in respect unto Man's frail Condition, which God foresaw, as also of the Means, such as in respect unto Man's (frail) Condition were to come, namely, of Redemption and Regeneration: And so the Decree of Election necessarily includes a respect and consideration of the Fall.

Tota quæstio est de objecto facti hujus decreti, utrum nimirum fuerint homines absolutè spectati, an vero sub consideratione lapsus. Ad quam quæstionem respondere dum videtur Electionis decretum dupliciter posse considerari. Primo, respectu Finis, vid. vitæ æternæ, & sic non fuisse necessariam considerationem lapsus; quia lapsus non est medium hujus Finis, sed potius impedimentum. 2. Considerari posse decretum hoc, ratione tum ipsius hominis, cujus fragilis conditio à Deo prævidebatur; tum etiam mediorum qualium respectu humanæ conditionis futura erant; vid. redemptionis & regenerationis, & ita decretum electionis includere necessario respectum & considerationem lapsus. Keckerman. System. Theolog.

And interpreting that to the Romans, Chap. 8. 29. Whom he hath foreknown, those he hath predestinated to be conformable to the Image of his Son. He further drawes out of these words the state and decision of this Controversie. The Apostle (says he) distinguisheth the Decree of God into two Acts: 1. Foreknowledge of such as are his: 2. Of Predestination: Which when I weigh (saith he) I understand by the fore-knowledge, his Decree simply considered of giving to Men Eternal Life, as Man is considered without the consideration of the Fall. But by Predestination I understand Gods Decree concerning Man faln, as he was to be raised up again, and to be brought to Eternal Life. And indeed Election, in the import of it, is very ordinarily distinguished by Divines from Predestination: The first to be unto the End simply; The second to import the Decree unto the Means; as including the End.

See Junius in his Amica Collatio cum Arminico. And Piscator Quæst. de Objecto Prædest. p. 176.

I shall here omit what Junius and Piscator have attempted to the reconciling of this Controversie.

BOOK I.

But I add this, 1. That God's Decree unto these Means specified, they must certainly presuppose the consideration of the Fall: For to believe on Christ a Redeemer, &c. necessarily presupposeth it; and although these concern the Execution of God's Decree, whereby to bring men unto that End, yet certainly God decreed them Means from everlasting, as well as the End.

2. That for God to have Decreed unto Glory without any respect or consideration of the Fall, thus far, even those that are of that other Opinion, that is, for Election after the Fall considered, do yet freely and franckly acknowledge.

That most Learned, Perspicuous, and Candid Author, Bishop Davenant doth acknowledge, That if by Predestination any do understand the Designation unto the End, viz. of Glory, as many (says he) of the Ancient School-men did. And by Reprobation only that negation of that Act (namely, a Non-election unto Glory) though I think (says he) it is not necessary to suppose Sin to have been first in the Person or Subject either elected or reprobated.——And his answer is; Because Sin (as first foreseen) is altogether impertinent unto either of these Acts: For it is not the ground or reason of Electing or not Electing, (as all confess) nor is it a qualification of the Subject, without which these Acts could not befall these Persons as appears evidently in the case of Angels. Thus he. Although for his own Opinion, he rather inclined to think that the Scripture (as Austin had done) seemed rather to place the Decrees of the End and that to the Means, both of them upon Man presupposed as faln, and yet speaks tenderly in it.

Primo si per Prædestinationem quis intelligat solam designationem ad finem gloriæ (sicut multi intelligunt ex antiquioribus Scholasticis) & per reprobationem solam negationem hujus actus vel decretum non eligendi. Puto non necessarium ut supponamus peccatum fuisse prævisum, quia Peccatum adactum Divinæ Electionis, vel non Electionis omninò impertinenter se habet. Davenant Dissert. de Elect. p. 116.

Now I readily grant, that the Decree of End, and that of Means, were both in Gods mind at once; and in it neither had a Priority or a Posteriority. But still the Question will be, whether both these Estates of Man unfaln and faln (though in execution they succeed one after the other, yet) lying alike level unto the prospect of the Divine Mind and Will of God, he might not have, yea, had not in the decree of the End, or to Glory simply, a respect unto Man, considered by him, as unfaln, as the Terminus à quo, or rise in his choosing of him, as also in his denying that Glory to other. And then again, in his decree of the Means or Way to that Glory, he had not a respect unto that faln Condition of Man. And both thus, th'one and to'ther, and all lying at once afore him, whether he did not place and pitch his Decree to the End upon their unfaln and creable Condition, and make that Estate or Condition the Terminus à quo of it, and his Decree to the Means upon his faln Condition: And this is it that I affirm.

Object. 1. The Learned Bishop urgeth, that predestination in Scripture is not only to the End, Glory, but also to the Means; as Faith &c. which Means (says he) are such as suppose Man faln, and therefore Election to the End doth also.

Answer 1. For Answer, 1. I grant that Election to Glory, as the End, doth not take up the whole of the Act of Election, as the Object of it; But takes in Election to the Means, that makes up the whole of it: Nor do I find those School-Men he speaks of, that they do not acknowledge Election to be also unto Grace, as the Means. But it no way follows, that because Election to those Means do suppose Man faln, that therefore Election unto Glory also should necessarily do the same for the Grace of God, in his Electing us unto Glory. First of Man considered as unfaln might and did design an ampletion or magnifying of it self, the more by permitting them to fall into Sin, whom he had ordained to Glory, and so redeem them and save them through such Means as are requisite to save Man faln, and through them to bring them unto Glory.

Answer

Chap. 6.

Answer 2. And 2ly we find that the Scriptures, when speaking of Election do pitch the ordination of it upon no other than Eternal Life and Glory, as the Object of it, and Faith which is that Consequent of that Ordination to Life, Acts. 13. ult. As many as were ordained to eternal Life (as the end) Believed, (as the Means through which God brought them to that End.) Yea, and through which I acknowledge they also, by an Act of Election, were Ordained to be brought; yet still the Ordination unto Life is there only and precisely mentioned. He says not, those that were ordained to believe, believed; but those that were ordained to Eternal Life, believed; as that through which they arrived at it. But as this Election to the End was one thing, and that to Faith as the Means, another; so they may respect these two several Conditions of Man chosen, mentioned: Again elsewhere, though it be true, that Faith is said to be given by an Act of Election, as well as eternal Life, and therefore is stiled the Faith of Gods Elect, 1 Tit. 1. yet Eternal Life is there also, not distinctly alone and apart spoken of in Vers. 2. but as that which being originally promised by God, who cannot lye, afore the World began, viz. 2. as that which being promised and decreed, had drawn on the believing, and the ordination thereof by Election: So as although these two are conjunct, yet still they may and are to be abstractly considered, not only as distinct Decrees, but as those that may be determinated upon the Elect under distinct Considerations or Notions of faln and unfaln.

Object. 2. And again, that it is said, 2 Thess. 2. 13. He hath from the beginning chosen you to Salvation through Sanctification of the Spirit, and belief of the truth. Where our Election to the Means, and to the End, are joyned, and that End it self is tearmed Salvation which respects the Fall: For out of that it is that we are said to be saved.

Answer 1. I Grant, 1. That that ultimate Grand Story of Gods being all in all, hath upon the Fall, the Title of Salvation anew put upon it: And Christ's purchase of it anew for us, did deserve that Title. And so I grant also; yet when we were ordained unto these Means of Faith, &c. we were with all ordained unto this End, as it is Salvation, yea, and as that which was to be purchased anew by Christ as a Redeemer, by reason of the Fall foreseen: Yet this hinders not another Gift of it by God, and Title of us thereby to it by an Act of Election in Christ as an Head, without respect unto the Fall, and as it considered primely and simply Glory, the Glory which God gave Christ himself as an Head first, and he and his Father by that title, unto us as so considered by him, John 17. 22. And the Glory which thou gavest me, I have given them: That they may be one, even as we are one. Things being faln, he was fain to purchase it anew for them. But as in that respect it is tearmed Salvation, Vers. 13. of that 2 Thes. 2. So it is also stiled the Glory of Christ in the next words, Vers. 14. To the obtaining of the Glory of the Lord Jesus Christ, that is, that which Christ had given him by an Election before the foundation of the World; John 17. 24. which as an Head to us, he says, he had given us; Vers. 22. and is therefore in 2 Thes. 2. stiled the Glory of Christ, as elsewhere the Glory and Kingdom of God, which Christ is said to receive us unto, Rom. 15. 7.

Answer 2. So as in truth the allegation of this or other Scriptures to the same purpose, is but to insist, and to urge one Truth to include another, as falls out almost in all Controversies: For as it is a Truth that there is an Election to the End, without consideration of the Fall, and these Means to that End upon the Fall, so also it is as great a Truth, that an Election to the End is specified in Scripture, when it no way relates unto the Fall, but is considered apart from it. Thus those Benefits we are chosen unto, Ephes. 1. 3. where Election is handled (tanquam in propriâ sede) are such as no way depend upon the Consideration of the Fall; but hold upon our Election unto Christ, and are given by Election upon grounds higher and distinct from that [illegible] being a Book II. Redeemer, Verſ. 5. Having predeſtinated us unto Adoption of Children, by Chriſt unto himſelf; which if relating to God the Father ſpeaks this great Truth, that God ordained us unto Immediate Communion which himſelf, as elſewhere 'tis ſaid; or if that word doth refer unto Chriſt himſelf, (as ſome;) yet farther ſtill, a Predeſtination to Adoption is all one in effect, as to ſay, Predeſtinated unto Glory: For Adoption and Son-ſhip in Election unto Chriſt, ſpeaks with all a Title unto Glory, as that place Romans 8th ſhews; If Children, then Heirs and coheirs with Chriſt, &c. And it is added, Heirs with God himſelf as Chriſt alſo is. And ſo thoſe words Epheſians 1. 5. Predeſtinating us to Adoption to himſelf, as referring to the Act of God the Father as Predeſtinating. It is all one as to ſay, we were predeſtinated to inherit God himſelf, and to immediate Communion with himſelf; and ſo it refers us to that ultimate Glory when God ſhall be all in all. Now this Title of Adoption holds clearly by another Right beſides that of Redemption: For Chriſt as the Natural Son, being by Election one Head and Husband, a Relation unto him upon that account beſtowed, doth convey Adoption and Sonſhip to us; and ſo a Right to that Inheritance which agrees with what I have elſewhere ſaid. In like manner, by our choice unto compleat and immutable holineſs in the 4th Verſe, is not meant that imperfect holineſs in this Life, which is ordained as ſuch to be means of Glory, (as our Sub-lapſarian Divines alledge it:) For it is that holineſs which is without blame before God, and ſo ſuch an holineſs which will never be ſubject to change or mutation; yea, and ſo perfect an holineſs in God's own view, for time to come as well as time preſent, as God ſhall find no defect in to blame. Whereas even the moſt perfect holineſs the Angels had by Creation, whilſt made mutable, was charged with folly and imperfection in that reſpect, Job 4. 18. But this is that unchangeable holineſs, the holineſs which is the End it ſelf, as well as Glory, and the Concomitant of it, or the ground Work of it. And this alſo might and doth flow from a relation unto Chriſt, as an Head given by Election, and an Influence from him conſidered as ſuch, and not only from him, as ſuppoſed as a Redeemer firſt, although to man when faln, he is an Head alſo; and theſe benefits are accordingly there diſtinguiſhed from thoſe that Chriſt, ſuppoſed as a Redeemer, doth convey; and ſevered from thoſe other by the Apoſtle in the ſame place, Verſ. 7. In whom we have Redemption through his blood, the forgiveneſs of ſins, according to the riches of his Grace. And ſo on in calling us by the Goſpel, Verſ. 8, 9. Wherein he hath abounded toward us in all wiſdom and prudence; Having made known unto us the myſtery of his will, according to his good pleaſure, which he had purpoſed in himſelf. Which are manifeſtly the benefits or bleſſings (as here are called, Verſ. 3.) of the Means which ſuppoſe us ſinners, and being ſinners, we are carried through them unto Glory: But thoſe former are benefits of the End, which in that their fulneſs there ſpoken of, take place in the other World, and which we were capable of, being deſigned unto without the conſideration of being ſinners, or Chriſt his being a Redeemer, as might at large be ſhown. And as Biſhop Davenant acknowledgeth, and are accordingly diſtinguiſhed from what we have by Redemption, we muſt not therefore alledge the one of either to exclude the other, but take both in their differing reſpects to either condition of the Elect ſpecified to unfaln, the one, and of faln, the other.

Object. 3. And a like unto this Objection taken from 2 Theſſ. 2. 13. are thoſe other, as that Election is ſaid to be joyned with Giving us to Chriſt, and that runs as he is a Redeemer and Saviour, to bring us to Glory; and therefore the whole of Election, both to Means and End, muſt have proceeded only upon foreſight of the Fall. But,

The Anſwer is, That Chriſt himſelf beareth (as was even now ſaid) two Relations and Reſpects to us; Firſt, ſimply of an Head, and that in the firſt place, And then ſecondly, of a Saviour, Ephes. 5. 23. Even as Chriſt is the Head of the Church; and he is the Saviour of the Body. His being an Head there, his being an Head to us: And ſo the Foundation of that Relation to God, of being his adopted Children as by Marriage with his Son. And that latter of our Saviour necessarily respecteth sin, but not the other; and accordingly Election may and doth respect those several Conditions of the Elect. And a doubled Giving to Christ in both respects will well fall in, and agrees with Christ's Pleas made to his Father on our behalf, in the 17th of John. Chap. 1.

Object. 4. Another Argument against my Assertion, urged by others, is, That Election being an immanent Act within God himself, must therefore be unicus, but one single, compleat, and perfect Act at once, and not divided into two, nor incompleat; whereas to suppose that there is an Election to the End, and then unto the Means, and one to respect man unfain, but the other man fain, seems to render it imperfect, incompleat, not at once but distracted, &c.

Answ. For Answer, I must tell those that will urge this Argument, that take all the Decrees in God (which are immanent Acts in him) both the Decrees of Election and Reprobation, and those of Common Providence, and there is but one Individual Act in all of them; and yet themselves will acknowledge, that the Scriptures do set them forth to us as distinct Acts; and that distinguished by Election to diversities of objects, they are terminated upon, and as proceeding from several Properties in God, some from Justice, some from Mercy: As likewise, in respect of their dependance in, and of one thing upon another, the reason whereof is in this, that the Series of things are set out to us ad nostrum intelligendi modum; and as the things do suit and sort and correspond each with other: And thus they were made distinct Acts, Election from Reprobation, and both from his Decrees of Common Providence, Now Bring this General Notion of all Acts thus made distinct, though all one in God, and the distinction may be accounted to have been in Election itself, and the like in reprobation it self: This matter is clear. Bishop Davenant, although he professeth to be against those instants or several Moments (take them as the School affirmeth of them) to have been in Gods Decrees, yet in the point of Reprobation himself holds not only a distinction of Acts, Negative, or a Non-election, and Positive, a preordination to Damnation, (which Two Acts all generally do confess;) But farthermore, he doth positively express himself in this manner; It is a far differing thing (says he) to will to punish one which is Reprobation Positive, and not to will or decree to give him Glory or the chiefest Good, which is the Negative Act. The first (says he) cannot be in God, but with a respect unto sin first considered as præceeding; but the other Act of Non-electing to Glory, may be considered without any respect unto the sin of the Person. His Reason I omit, because the thing is clear. And he adds; Concerning those Divines, that under that one word of Reprobation, do joyntly include both those acts of Præ-election (the Negative act) and Predamnation (the Positive) that they could never as yet, judge anything certainly about Reprobation. Nay, he goes on further; † That God did not will or decree to punish, nor put forth a positive act, in the first or same instant (as in reason we are to apprehend of God's Counsels) in which his will was not to glorifie such as he past by: But in the other instant, in which he considered them as sinners. And again, ‖ God's deputation or ordaining Men to Death is not to be conceived as that which was performed in the same signo rationis (or instant according to reason) in which Gods Non-electing them was appointed; but in an other, after which such a New-elected Person, finally persevering in a state of sin, was foreseen.

Dissertat. de Electione, Ch. 16. p. 173.

Qui sub unico vocabulo Reprobationis ambos hosce actus Divinæ voluntatis præ-electionem scilicet & prædamnandi conjunctim includunt nunquam poterunt aliquid certi de reprobatione affirmare. Ibid.

† Neque voluit eos punire in primo instanti rationis in quo voluit glorificare, sed in illo altero in quo illos consideravit ut Peccatores. Davenant ib. p. 174.

‖ Hæc ad mortem deputatio non concipienda est ut in eodem signo rationis peracta quo non-electio statuitur. Sed in alio posteriore quo non electi perseverantia finali in statu peccati prævidetur. p. 175.

Now if in the two sorts of this sort of Decrees in Reprobation, the one was and might be past without the consideration of Sin, and so of the Fall; the other but upon the foresight of it; yea, and performed (as he says) in several instants (according to reason). And the manner of our conception (according unto which the Scriptures have set forth these things to us.) Then why should ſhould it be uncouth to any that the two Acts of Election, viz. To the end, and to the means, which thoſe other two acts of Reprobation, do accompany and anſwer to, (as the dark ſhadows to light bodies) ſhould be conſidered not diſtinct only in themſelves, but diſtinguiſhed alſo by this, that the one is tranſacted in the Divine Will, and Underſtanding, without reſpect had unto Sin, or the Fall, and that the other ſhould reſpect the foreſight of the Fall.

Object. 5. An other farther Objection may be againſt the partition of Gods Decrees, as ſuited to the end, and the means, and ſo againſt that Decree of our Election in Chriſt as an Head, without conſideration of the Fall conſidered. That this is to make two Elections, that firſt to the end to be incompleat without the other to the means to compleat it. Whereas it is an error our Divines find fault with in the Arminians, to make Decrees incompleat, and then afterward compleat; yea, whereas God Decrees all Unico Actu.

Anſw. 1. The Arminians indeed are juſtly charged with incompleat Decrees of Election, their ſenſe therein being, that then only when a man firſt believes God doth Elect him in Chriſt to Salvation, and that that Act is alſo ſuſpended, and in that ſenſe 'tis an incompleat Decree; becauſe that man thus Believing, may fall away, and therefore Election with them is not compleated until a man doth die, and the man is found to believe at death: Now this kind of incompleat, and compleat Election, and in this ſenſe, we utterly deny.

Nos duos actus non nulli vocant Gradus ſatis appoſite. Alſtedius Theol. didact. p. 206. Et Decretum finis veluti initium propoſiti Dei. Ibid.

Anſw. 2. Theſe two acts of Ordaining unto the end, and the means, as I have ſtated them, are but two Gradus or degrees in this Decree, as in reſpect to the things Decreed, and that of the Decree to the end: Velut Initium propoſiti Dei, but as the beginning or entrance of Gods purpoſes, and ſo both not to be underſtood as of two Acts of Decrees, though for our underſtanding we are inforced thus to ſpeak.

Anſw. 3. That God conſidering and viewing all at once unfallen, and fallen, Unico intuitu, with one Act of his Divine Omniſcience; yet conſigned, or deſigned in two differing reſpects, of what himſelf comprehended in one Act, as unto two ſeveral Objects which he Decreed, as namely, that Decree to the end, or to glory to reſpect man ſimply conſidered; that ſtate or conſideration beſt ſuiting, and being more correſpondent unto that ſort of Decree, but that to ſhew his Grace, the more he deſigned him withal to theſe means of Redemption, &c. ſpecified upon the intuition of the Fall; for they only do ſuppoſe the Fall. Like as in the Act of Gods juſtifying of us, he firſt juſtified us when we had been afore, and until then utterly ungodly: And he withal worketh Sanctification, and Godlineſs in the heart, which is really a new condition, differing from that ſtate afore; And yet when we are thus made godly, yet ſtill his Act of juſtifying of us, is terminated upon us, conſidered by him as ungodly, ſo Rom. 4 5. But to him that worketh not, but believeth him that juſtifieth the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteouſneſs. And his proof for this is, the Inſtance of Abrahams being juſtified many years after he was Godly by Sanctification: Whereupon God when he juſtified him, muſt needs be ſuppoſed to have had afore him, and in his eye, both that Abraham was now a godly man, and yet he was, becauſe he had been once an ungodly Perſon. He terminates or pitches his juſtifying him in the act thereof upon him conſidered as ungodly. Thus in like manner, although God had mans pure Eſtate, and his corrupt Eſtate, both in his view afore him; yet he choſe to terminate his Election to glory upon the pure Eſtate, as well as upon him conſidered in his fallen Eſtate, and as to be redeemed out of it.

So

So as my Assertion no ways introduceth any pause to come in between the Decrees of the end, and the means, to make the first incompleat; no nor so much as two Acts (as in God himself) but only a termination of one and the same Act of his Will, on two several Objects he had at once in his view and understanding according to his good pleasure. Chap. 1.

Answ. 4. I find that in an other Case, Divines of Note and Worth, do acknowledge such a kind of incompleat Act in God, as thus I here propose in these Decrees.

See Walæus Tom. 2. Contra Carvinum. Cap. 26. Sed quid si nos dicemus in Deo fuisse quidem affectum miserendi certorum hominum, sed hunc affectum impeditum fuisse à justitia, quominus actu completi salutem iis destinaret, atque adeo inter hunc affectum, & peremptoriam ad salutem misericordiam: Christi Electionem, ac proinde & satisfactionem interveniisse, ac tum demum eorum salutem actu completo intendisse, ac decrevisse, cùm decretâ jam morte Christi, atque iis Christo redimendis datis, justiciæ Dei plene in decreto Dei est satisfactum.

To conclude, that this was the Opinion (the tendency at least) of those Ancient Schoolmen, thus to distinguish these two Acts in Election, with a differing respect unto these two conditions of men fallen, and unfallen, is evident enough. There is this evidence in General, That Suarez should in the Name of the rest afore him, pronounce that to have been the more common Opinion of his Schoolmen, that the Election of men was afore the permission of the Fall; and that yet themselves as generally should acknowledge another Decree, viz. To give them faith, &c. Which later doth in the nature of the thing it self necessarily respect mans fallen estate.

Particularly, First, As for Scotus his draught of Election, runs thus, that in the first instant God Decreed Glory to a certain number of Elect: Then in the Second, Decreed to give Grace: Then foresaw the Fall, &c. Yea, and in his Series of Decrees of Reprobation——Makes a respect to have been had to both Estates.

Reprobation is considered says he. 1. Negatively, wherein God Ordained not to Elect them. 2. Affirmatively, By which God Ordained after the permission of the Fall, to Damn them for Sin. The first Consideration must be as afore the Fall; the later doth suppose the Fall.

And if Reprobation did respect both those Estates, then much more Election; because Election hath of the two, the more benign and gracious aspects to manifest it self all sorts of ways to illustrate it self by Grace, cast on both states, the highest and most comprehensive.

Omnes salvandi electi futurunt ante prævisum peccatum Adami, ut absolute futurum & ante voluntatem permittendi illud. Hæc conclusio sumitur ex Thomæ Quæst. 23. art. 1. ad tertium, & ex Articulo quarto, si attente Legatur.

For Aquinas, he is alledged by those Writers, for each of the Opinions, whether of the pure, or corrupted Mass. Suarez, who had studied him as much as any of his followers, Cites him for this Opinion; If (says he) what he delivers be but attentively considered. * And Bishop Davenant himself mentions him as favouring that Opinion. And although Aquinas—— 1 Part. Quæst. 23. art. 1. ad tertium, seemeth rather to put the Term from which, or object of Predestination, on which God should pitch his Predestination to be Man considered as fallen. Yet Suarez Interpreting him, compounds it with that very Notion and distinction I have prosecuted. Aquinas || (says he) speaks of that Predestination which is unto the means, by which men are saved, but not according to Gods fore-intention, or Election unto Glory.

It is the common opinion put upon him. Now I cannot think that a man of ſo great a Judgment, was wavering in the Point, but that he had indeed both in his eye, and ſaw by the Scriptures, that there was in Gods Decrees, as laid forth therein, a reſpect had unto both.

Chap. 2.

CHAP. II.

A brief Draught of the Order of Christ's Election, and ours; as it lies represented in the Scripture.

I. GOD was pleased, and so resolved, to go forth to Creature Communion.

II. His one Glory was alone the Supream End therein: He made all things for himself. Prov. 16. 4. The Lord hath made all things for himself; yea, even the wicked for the Day of Evil. And this was his sole Supream Motive, Rom. 11. 35, 36. Who hath first given to him; and it shall be recompenced to him again? For of him, and through him, and to him are all things: To whom be Glory for ever. Amen.

III. The principal Glory he designs to himself in Election, is the Manifestation of the Glory of his Grace: Ephes. 1. 5, 6. Having prædestinated us, according to the good pleasure of his will, to the praise of the Glory of his Grace.

IV. His Son, the Second Person, who was predestinated God-man; simply considered in his Person as God-man, and absolutely first decreed: For we are chosen in Christ, Ephes. 1. 4. Therefore he is supposed chosen first, as the Soil in whom we are set and chosen: We were prædestinated to the Adoption of Sons by Jesus Christ; εἰς αὐτὸν, Vers. 5. For him and his Glory; as many understand it. So in 1 Pet. 1. 20. Who verily was fore-ordained [as CHRIST] afore the Foundation of the World; but manifested (and ordained to be manifested, as he is the Lamb slain;) in these last days for you. There are two [befores] annexed to this Predestination: [fore] ordained, and before the Foundation of the world. Compare the words in the Verse afore.

And he was first ordained for these higher ends than our Salvation is;

1. For God's own self to delight in more than in all Creatures he could make, to be the Man God's fellow: Zach. 13. 7. and Isai. 42. 1. My Elect in whom my Soul delighteth: I was daily his delight; in the continual thoughts of me: And my delights were with the Sons of Men, Prov. 8. 31. We were chosen to be Christ's delight, but Christ to be God's.

2. To behold the Image of himself in a Creature, and of all his Attributes; That life and brightness shining therein, as could never have appeared in all meer Creatures; but did in him, who being the brightness of his Fathers Glory, and the expres Image of his Person: ('tis spoken of the Person of Christ as God-man, as the next words in their current coherence shew:) of this Image: See my Sermon on 1 Colos. 15, 16, 17, 18.

3. By that Union with that Man, to communicate the God-head unto that one Creature, the Man; Thus decreed to be assumed, in such a high, superior way, as could no way have been otherwise communicated to meer Creatures: See my said Sermons on 1 Coloss. All which are Ends that stand out of his Being Mediator for us; and are far higher ends than the Glory thereof, or our Salvation accomplished thereby.

V. Upon, and together with his being predestinated God-man, there falls upon his Person as his Inheritance, to be the Soveraign End (I say not the Supreamest End; for God himself is above: And the end of him, as well as of all things else: But a Soveraign end, as in respect of us, and all things; he having having joynt Authority with God, under God, over all:) of all things else God sl ou'd make; and the End of whatever of his Intelligent Creatures he should be pleased to choose unto Glory; according to that 1 Cor. 3. 22,23. All things are yours, and you are Christs, and Christ is Gods; which is spoken in respect of Endship: That as you the Saints are the End of, and for which all things were ordained; so you, Christ is the end of you, and God of Christ; John 17. 10. All mine are thine, and thine are mine; and I am glorified in them. And so 'tis said of him, That for him, and by him, all things were created, Colos. 1. 18. As well as it is said of God the Father, Rom. 11. ult. And as it fell to him by Inheritance, God's Son, now subsisting in our Nature, being one Person therewith; so God freely gave it him, and bestowed it upon him, John 3. 35. The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand.

VI. In this Predestination of this Man, unto that Union, and constituting him through that Union to be the Sovereign End of Us, and all things; there was conferred on that Individual Man, that was thus exalted, the highest Grace or Favour, transcending all that Grace which was, or could have been cast upon all his Elect, any way considered; so that if the Election of Us be to the praise of the Glory of God's Grace, His much more: There could be no desert foreseen, no worth in that man simply considered, that would require such an Exaltation. It must be said to him, as well as to any other Creature; Who hath first given him, and it shall be recompenced to him again? Rom. 11. 35. And to be sure, he had more given him by that Election of his, than what the whole Creation had, or possibilities of being created could have had: For all his Righteousness extends not unto God; all is nothing to him, Psal. 16.2. And in that God was for ever perfectly free, as to his Will, to have decreed him, or not; to have decreed either that Man, or any other intelligent Creature, to this high Dignity; it was therefore Free-grace in him to decree it: And the greater was the Grace, by how much the Dignity was above what the Law of Creatureship unto Men or Angels, were their dues by first Creation, and enhanced also by this, that That Creature alone was exalted unto it, and none other partook with him: It was the Glory of the only begotten Son of God; peculiar to him who was that one Lord, 1 Cor. 8. 6. And therefore the Predestination of the Man Jesus, is made by Austin, the highest Example and Pattern of the Election of Grace, that is of Us.

Incarnatio summum exemplum gratiæ: nec potuisset gratia Dei gratius Commendari, quam si ipse filius Dei hominem indueret. Lib. 10. de Civitate, Dei. C. 19.

And thus God's greatest End in Predestination to manifest his Grace, (from whence Election hath its Title, to be stiled the Election of Grace,) was accomplisht in him above his Brethren: That he should be to the praise of the Glory of God's Grace, far above what we are.

VII. From the Pattern and Example of whose Election it is evident, That Grace is not to be limited, or only to be understood of the Favour towards Creatures that have sinned, and are delivered out of sin and misery: For the higest Grace, (which Divines stile Gratia Unionis, the Grace of the Personal Union in the Man Jesus;) above all other elevations or demonstrations of Grace whatsoever, was found in the instance of him, who could have no sin, nor was capable of it; the Grace of that Union was so impregnable, and far above all danger of it: Wherefore Grace, and the Election of Grace, (as all Election unto Glory is) when it is said to be of Grace, and not of Works, imports not solely an opposition to, or exclusion only of Works since the Fall; but of all sorts of Works, in what state soever; of Works in innocency in Adam, (the Reward then promised being of Works, not Grace, Rom. 4.) and also of the Angels, whom the best Divines acknowledge Elected out of Grace, and not Works of their own foreseen; and so their instance therein may be conjoyned with that of Christ's in that respect, to confirm this,

VIII. God

VIII. God having thus absolutely chosen him, and therewith endowed him with the Royalty to be the Soveraign end of all, whom God would either desire to Create, or Elect to Glory; those whom therefore he would, or did Elect of us Men, were and must be ordained, and intended in their very ordination of them in Election, to be for his Glory as the end of their Election, as well as Gods own Glory, was (as is acknowledged by all) the End of their Election.

We were not absolutely ordained, (as Christ in his singular Predestination was in the first intention of it:) but from the first of ours, the intention of God concerning us was, that they should be Christ's, and have their Glory from him, the Lord of Glory, (as 1. Cor. 28. he is stiled:) The Person of Christ, God-Man, was predestinated, for the dignity of himself; but we for God's Glory, and Christs: And though God the Father, first and alone designed who the Person should be, as he did this, and that individual of us; yet that there should be an Election of any, this was for Christ's sake, as well as for the Glory of the Father: Thine they were, and thou gavest them me: And that all Men (Elect) might honour the Son, as they honour the Father, John 5. 23. So as God in their Election had his Son in his Eye, as God-man: And in the intuition of him as their End, it was, he chose them: And for his sake, to be his Fellows, Companions, Psal. 45. 7. As he was Gods delight, so that we might be his; as in Prov. 8. 31. Rejoycing in the habitable part of his earth, and my delights were with the Sons of Men. And further, in the Act of Election God gave them to him: For this giving them to him was conjunct with the Electing of them: Yea, and our Election is expressed thereby; not as Mediator only, to save them from sin, but as Members to an Head: As a meer, and pure gift to his Person, for his Honour; To have fellows, and companions belong to him, who might in their Allotment, and Sphere, be partakers of a supernatural Glory with him, and from him, yea and in him: Which was his Glory, John 17. 22. And the Glory thou gavest me I have given them: (As concurring with thy Election of them, at thy giving them me, to be mine:) And thou thus loving them as thou hast loved me; Vers. 23. that is, both them and me with an everlasting love; yet in, and with thy loving of them, thou gavest them to me, and for my Glory, as their End; and for which chiefly thou lovedst them: As Vers. 24. Father, I will that those whom thou hast given me, be with me, where I am; that they may behold my Glory which thou hast given me: For thou lovedst me before the Foundation of the World: Now he was loved in his Election from everlasting, and they also with him, and chosen in him, and out of that love were given to him: And to what End, or out of what intention? Even to behold, and admire, and adore him, in his Person, and Glory; as being that very thing they were ordained for, more than for their own Glory: Which he mentions not, for it ariseth from their beholding his, and was ordained for his. And what Glory is it of his? The Glory of his Person, first absolutely decreed him, which is the height of his Glory in Heaven; where it is they are ordained to behold it: And therefore he says, that they may be where I am; whether he was now a going, even the highest Heavens. And what is the main Motive to God there mentioned, thus to love them; and to give them to him in Election: ——— For thou hast loved me afore the foundation of the World. He resolves his loving and electing them into this; For &c. That is, thou having chosen me absolutely for my own Glory, in thy first and primary intention; and then thou lovedst them, and gavest them me for my sake; to that End, to behold that Glory which in Predestination thou gavest me; that so all of them might redound to the Glory of me, as first, and singularly chosen.

IX. We being thus chosen for Christs Glory as our End, and for his sake; as well as to the Glory of Gods Grace towards us; God did ordain a double Relation of Christ unto us for his Glory, additional unto that absolute Glory of his Person. 1. The Relation of an Head; wherein we were given as Members to him: As Members of the Body are to the natural Head: or as a Spouse unto an Husband to be her Head. 2. The Relation of a Saviour, and Redeemer; which is a superaddition to that of Head-ship: And both these for the further Glory of Christ, and also for the demonstration of Gods Grace towards us: These two Relations we find distinct, Ephes. 5. 23. Even as Christ is the Head of the Church, and the Saviour of the Body: Both which are as distinctly related, as those which were by the good pleasure of Gods Will, Decreed him to be, Colos. 1. 18, 19, 20. And he is the Head of the Body, the Church, who is the beginning, the first-born from the Dead, that in all things he might have the preeminence: For it pleased the Father, that in him should all fullness dwell: And (having made Peace through the blood of his Cross) by him to reconcile all things unto himself, by him, I say, whether they be things in Earth, or things in Heaven. And all that is over and above the absolute Royalties of his Person; set forth in the Verses afore.

X. These Two Relations of his to us, have answerably a double and distinct Aspect and Condition upon us, and of us, in our Election; which Election was relative unto these Two of Christs, and not absolute as his was. 1. Of our Persons, without the consideration of the Fall, in massâ purâ, in the pure Lump of Creature-ship, or as to be Created: And under that Consideration God ordained us unto that ultimate Glory, under Relation to him as an Head; whether as of Members, or of a Spouse, and Church to him; or rather Both: Of either, or Both, which our Persons were fully capable; before, or without the Consideration of our Fall. 2: Of our Persons viewed to be faln; and so as objects to be saved, and redeemed from the thraldom thereof, under our Relation to him as a Saviour.

See for this the foregoing Chapter of the order of Gods decrees.

XI. And each of these were for the Glory of Gods Grace: 1. In his Designment to advance us, considered purely as Creatures, to an higher Glory by his Christ, than was attainable by the Law of Creation: But wholly supernatural: For to have Ordained us was pure Grace, no less than to Redeem us from sin or misery when faln, may be said to be, and was wholly independent of Works, or without Works of any kind: Even as Christ's Election (who is in ours our Pattern) was an Election without Works of any kind; that is, or without the Consideration of Works of any kind. And unto this Notion of pure Original Grace, may those words well be thought to extend, 2 Tim. 1. 9. Not according to Works, but his purpose of Grace; which was given us in Christ, afore the World began: As comprehending this we speak of, as the Mother of all Grace, even of Redemption Grace, and Calling. And it is a mighty Argument that it was a meer Grace in Gods Heart, that moved him to Redeem, and Call us; not according to Works, afore the fall; If that this first purpose of Grace towards us, and Ordination of us to Glory, was not founded on Works, that could any way have been supposed to have been afore the Fall performable by the Holiness of our Creation, that being but the Law of our Nature when Created, and by Creation due; And seeing there is such a Grace acknowledged, de facto, to have been towards Christ, and the Elect Angels; why may it not be supposed to have been here in our Election also?

But although this Grace was the Original Mother of Grace to us, and that therein lay the grand, and ultimate design; for it will have its full accomplishment last after all, and as the Issue, and Perfection of all; and God might have immediately, upon the first Creation of each of us, have taken us into that Glory; yet for the further Glory of Christ, and ampliation of, or ampler demonstration of his Grace, and to the End to draw it out, and extend it (as the Psalmist's word is) unto the furthest length it will reach to; God was pleased not to Ordain to bring us in an immediate manner, unto the possession of that full Glory, in beholding the Personal Glory of Christ our Head, (as was specified) as soon as we should be Created: But withall permissively ordained, that we who were thus ordained unto this Glory as our End, should by the way to it fall into sin; and therefore ordained to Create us first in a mutable Condition; (as the Law of meer Creation required:) By which falling into sin, there was way made for an Ampliation, and Illustration of the Grace of God unto us as sinners, which causeth Grace to abound, as Rom. 5. 15.

Psal. 36. 10. Draw out at length thy loving kindness: So in the Hebrew.

15. thereby to shew the riches of his Love and Grace in extending them, or rather turning them into Mercy, by letting us, the Objects of his Grace, fall into the extreamest Misery: For Mercy properly respects present Misery; and is but Love or Grace extended; or Love becoming Mercy also to them it loves, when viewed to be in Misery: God who is rich in Mercy, for the love wherewith he loved us, Eph. 2. 4. First loved, and that became the foundation of Mercy to us as sinners: And unless sin had been thus in execution first, afore we should arrive at the Glory we were ordained to, as the ultimate complement of all, additional Riches of Merciful Grace to us as sinners, had never been, without which Grace had not had its full demonstration, as towards us: Hence

XII. And upon this occasion it was, that Christ had for his great and further Glory, the Office of Redeemer and Saviour superadded in his Election, unto that of Headship; and that because our being miserable and sinful, is that which is our present and immediate Concern, which we are most sollicitous about in this World, whilst we are sinners; yea, and continues our Concern until we by that final Sentence and Judgment pass'd at latter day, have them for ever declared and published to be forgiven: (And therefore, both Mercy is said to be shewn, and forgiveness to be obtained at that Day:) Therefore it is the Scriptures do set forth Christ to us most thereby; (though they are not altogether silent in the other;) and thereby call, and draw our thoughts and intentions most fixedly thereupon. 2. Tim. 1. 18. Matth. 12. 32.

XIII. And these Two Relations of Christ, of Head and Saviour, are simultaneous with God's Election of us, considered in those prospects forementioned, and neither afore, nor after, neither in time, (for so no Decree in God is afore, or after another,) but not in order, as to our Understanding: For he could not be our Head, but there must be his Correlate, his Body; and so of the other, of being a Redeemer: Neither had Christ been ordained to either, had it not been for us, and our Salvation: But still the Election of Christ's Person remains in the primary and first intention of it, absolute, and for it self, and for higher ends than these which are specified; and that did not depend at all on us, or our Election. And although there were these other Ends in God's Heart in relation to us, which occasioned his relative Election (as I may term it) of Christ, as in relation to us; yet God said within himself, (if I may so represent it) though I have those other Ends to be accomplished by him, yet I choose his Person for himself; and unto that Person all Glory above all; and for those higher Ends forementioned, which alone were motive sufficient to choose him, if I had no other; though I take in all in the choice of him: (For in God all was but one Act:) He is at once mine Elect and delight, and withal, my Servant in redeeming; Isai. 42. 1. Behold my Servant whom I uphold; (in that work of Redeeming I have ordained him for;) mine Elect in whom my Soul delighteth.

XIV. As the Glory of the Person of God-man absolutely thus considered, was the Primo-primitive design, (as I may so speak it) which God's Heart was intent upon; and then next unto that his Ordination of him to be an Head unto us, as a Body to him; and that by our meer Union to him as an Head, and bare relation to his Person as such; He was ordained to be the Sufficient, Efficient, and Author of many sorts of Blessings; as of Sonship from his Sonship; a gracious Acceptation of our Persons in him, as the chief Beloved; Heirs of the same Glory with him; Heirs of God, Coheirs with Christ: And all these Blessings were we capable of, considered as pure Creatures, through Union with him, and needed not his Death to have purchased them for us; and are made distinct from the Blessings of Redemption, as Ephes. 1. 4, 5, 6, 7, &c. shew. According as he hath chosen us in him, before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy, and without blame before him in love: Having predestinated us unto the Adoption of Children by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will: To the praise of the glory of his his Grace, wherein he hath made us accepted in the Beloved: In whom we have Redemption through his blood, the forgiveneſs of ſins, according to the riches of his Grace. And he is the Object in whom, as a Supream Soveraign Good to us, in whom, and beholding of whoſe Perſon, and that Glory of his, we ſhall for ever be made happy: This was the firſt Deſign in God's Intention, which comprehended us, Chriſt and us in mutual Relation together; ſo it ſhall be the laſt in Execution, as being the greater of theſe Two; and in execution or performance alſo, the moſt laſting, even for evermore: It will be the Iſſue, the Concluſion, the Crown of all. For after the Work of Mediation for us as ſinners is fully over, and every way perfected, and the Day of Judgment ended; when ſins ſhall finally be forgiven, and then for ever forgotten, as the Promiſe intended, Chriſt will give up his Mediatory Kingdom and Glory to his Father: And then that Regnum Antemundanum, that Kingdom afore, and abſtracted from the Conſideration of this World, or what we were, or Chriſt as Redeemer for us therein, ſhall for ever predominantly take place; when God, in the Father, Son, and Spirit ſhall be all in all to him as God-man, as well as us: And when Chriſt the Son, having laid down only the Oeconomy of his Mediation, as a Redeemer, ſhall yet in his Perſon, as he ſhall appear with the fulneſs of the God-head dwelling Bodily in him, and the brightneſs of the Glory of God ſhining in the Human Nature, which he can never lay down, or diveſt himſelf of, ſhall be as he is, and was conſtituted, an Head, an Husband unto us; and we, choſen as Fellows and Companions with him, be the Object and Efficient of our Happineſs for ever, by our beholding that his Glory; according to that of John 17. 24. (I opened;) Father, I will that they alſo whom thou haſt given me, be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory which thou haſt given me: for thou lovedſt me before the Foundation of the World. And after the Day of Judgment ended, it is whereof the Apoſtle ſpeaks, when he ſays, We ſhall be ever with the Lord, 1 Theſſ. 4. 17.

I COR. VIII. 6.

And we in him.

WE have seen the Mutability of our first Estate by Creation; the infinite distance of the Creature from God, the High and Lofty One: the necessity of Supercreation Grace, if any either of Men, or Angels be fixed immutably unto Him, which God was pleased should be by an Election by Grace of some. The next is,

That God, (who was at this distance from us as Creatures, &c.) did by that Election also Ordain those whom he so singled forth, unto a Supercreation Union with himself, and Communication of himself, as the highest and utmost End, (as to what concerned us) He Elected them unto: So as the height and top of our Salvation is consummated, and that Union with himself, which is far above that Oneness we had by the Law, or Dues of our Creation.

To found this Assertion, on the Words,

1. Observe the difference he puts between this [Us] as a special parcel of his Creation from the [all things] We, and All other things are from Him, of Him, or by his Power, as the efficient Cause: This is common to us, and All as his Creatures. But We, he speaks of as a company or parcel, severed, and set a part to some higher Excellency and Dignity; and this special separation of us from all things, is twice said, One Lord, &c. and we by him; We are [in Him] that is, taken into Himself, out of a special love, and by a special Union with Him. The word εἰς αὐτὸν, signifies both In Him; and so denoting this Union: And so Interpreters, (being to give but some one signification) generally choose to render it. Yet withal, it signifies [to Him] as denoting our appropriation to Him peculiarly: A being of U Sin the most eminent and singular manner, a peculiar people and treasure to him, as himself often speaks. It also imports, Our being singled forth for His highest Glory: εἰς αὐτὸν, [For Him] That whereas all things are for his Glory as well as We; yet, they not so For Him as we; And therefore to be for Him, is here in the Text set over our heads, not theirs: As if we had that lot alone; Not they; because we are Ordained so to be for Him, and in such a singular way and manner, as all things are not: Nor doth all the Glory that ariseth out of them, to Him, rise up to any considerableness in comparison of what shall, and doth, out of us; and specially, out of this our Union with Him: Our being in Him, is the great foundation of our being for Him.

And

BOOK II. And for the further illuſtration and confirmation of this Interpretation, I have recourſe to a parallel Scripture to this, Epheſ. 4. 5, and 6. [One Lord] One God, and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and [IN YOU ALL.] Obſerve the difference of the Phraſes uſed about [all things] there, and of [Us] 1. Of all things, 'tis ſaid, He is above all: Whereby I underſtand the Sublimity, and Tranſcendency of his Divine Nature and Eſſence, as being of an higher differing kind, infinitely above that being, which all Creatures have by participation from Him, and is all one with that which in the Prophet Iſaiah, God ſpeaks of himſelf (when he ſpeaks of Union with his Creatures, of which by and by) He is that High and Lofty One: So in his Nature, yet ſo as, 2ly. He (though divers from the Creatures, yet) is near to, and piercing through all Creatures, and filling them. He is preſent with them all, yet holding a diſtinct different being from all. He is through all, excluded by none, as the Air is not out of our dwellings. So firſt as his being, is no part of their being, nor mingled with them; But above all, glorious Excellency and perfection. And then through all, in reſpect of Immenſity of Being. But theſe two are ſpoken in common, as in relation to all Creatures, and common alſo to Us. But 3ly. He turns his ſpeech to the Saints, and adds, IN YOU ALL: There's your difference put by Grace from them all. In you, that are Saints; Oh an infinite difference and Grace! He that is thus that High and Lofty One, far above all, and in a common way preſent to all his Creation, and cannot be otherwiſe; He is over and above all this. [in you all] and in you alone: United to you, and one with you, in a ſpecial manner, and upon a ſpecial Relation. He, the High and Lofty One, whoſe Being ſtands out from all the Works of his hands, as tranſcending the Scale of their Entity: Inhabiting Eternity, long afore there were any Creatures made, and as then dwelling in, and poſſeſſing himſelf, with an Allſufficient bleſſedneſs; and He, who now he hath made them, is ſtill above them all, as an Immenſe Supream Being can be ſuppoſed to be above what his hands made: As he ſpeaks in Iſaiah,, and withal, filling all. Heaven is my Throne, and the Earth my footſtool, ſaith God there: And is through all, as Paul expreſſeth it here.

Yet 3ly. This High and Lofty One, affected a ſpecial Union with ſome, and he mentions that Sublimity of his own Divine Being, as he doth his Omnipreſence with, and through all Creatures, here, to ſhew, and enhaunce great condeſcention of his Grace and Favour, to be that he is in you, and dwells in you, that is, to be United to you above all the Reſt. That 'tis but a Common preſence vouchſafed to all things, [He is through them all]: But an indwelling in us, with a Communication and Participation of Himſelf. Oh Infinite Grace! This is the height of our Privilede and Happineſs.

And the height of the Grace and favour of this, in both reſpects, God himſelf doth ſet out and magnifie unto us, in that Prophet Iſaiah, Chap. 57. 15. compared with Iſaiah 66. 1. 2. For thus ſaith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth Eternity, whoſe Name is Holy, I dwell in the high and holy place: with him alſo that is of a contrite and humble ſpirit, to revive the ſpirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones. Thus ſaith the Lord, the Heaven is my Throne, and the Earth is my Footſtool: where is the houſe that ye build unto me? and where is the place of my reſt? For all thoſe things hath mine hand made, and all thoſe things have been, ſaith the Lord, but to this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite ſpirit, and trembleth at my word. But I deſer th at Scripture unto an Uſe of Magniſying the Grace of God, in Ordaining ſuch an Union.

That ſuch a ſupernatural Union with God, and Communication of God, is the height of, and his ultimate deſign towards Us, in his chooſing of Us. That one comprehenſive expreſſion (we ſo often meet withal) is bigg with: [That he choſe Us for himſelf] as Pſal. 135. 4. Jah hath choſen Jacob for himſelf: And Rom. 9. 4. I have reſerved ſeven thouſand to my ſelf: Which Verſe 5th. the Apoſtle Interprets to be (in the caſe of others he ſpeaks of) an Election of Grace: Alſo Iſaiah 43*th. Verſe* 20*th. My people, My Choſen*, and Verſ. 21*th.* immediately follows, This people have

I formed for my ſelf. All which, to be meant of Election, I have at large elſewhere ſhewn. Now,

Chap. 3.

Thus to chooſe us for Himſelf, is not only to ſet us apart to be a peculiar treaſure of precious Goods, as among Men, eſpecially Kings, above all other things, what they love and delight in, they uſe to hoard up, reſerve and keep in ſtore for themſelves. As Eccleſ. 2. 8. Solomon (who had power and opportunity above all men elſe, to do it) ſays, he gathered gold and ſilver, and the peculiar treaſure of Kings, conſiſting of all ſorts of Rarities and precious things, brought from all Countries and Provinces, (as it follows there) which they accordingly value. And thus in Exod. 19 5. ſays God of us, Thou ſhalt be for a peculiar treaſure unto Me. And Pſal. 134. 4. He hath choſen Jacob for himſelf, is explained, and Iſrael for his peculiar treaſure.

Nor is it only, That God hath ſeparated them for his peculiar Worſhip, and Service, To be holy unto him, conſecrated, ſeparated for ever to glorifie him; as Jer. 2. 3. Iſrael was holineſs unto the Lord, and the firſt fruits of his increaſe.

Nor ſpeaks he it only, that he hath choſen them to ſhew forth his praiſe; as in that, Iſaiah 43. 21. we cited. It follows, They ſhall ſhew forth my praiſe. For in that ſenſe, The Lord hath made all things for himſelf, yea, even the wicked for the day of evil, Prov. 16. 4. This his End, is common unto all things; yea, even to the wicked, who are yet otherwiſe loſt unto God; and thoſe whom he remembers no more. But this of Ours, is in a contrary way peculiarly for himſelf; and ſo as his Glory on Us, is wholly in a way of Grace and kindneſs. You may therefore Obſerve it in Epheſ. 1. 5, and 6. That unto his Predeſtinating us [to himſelf] Verſ. 5. is added Verſe 6. to the praiſe of the Glory of his Grace. Now put them two together. 1. He hath choſen us to himſelf. 2. For the praiſe of the Glory of his Grace, and they ſpeak a ſpecial Communication of his very ſelf unto us in a way of Grace, in pure and meer love and kindneſs, as whence that Glory of his Grace ſhould ariſe. Now if it be thus, That it is a Communication of himſelf in a way of Grace, Then,

1. This promiſeth Firſt, That all that which Grace can do for us, in Communicating God himſelf to us, and That all that he will do for us, for his Glory, and the Magnification thereof, and is to ariſe from out of what favours he ſhall ſhew us, and no otherwiſe; He ſhall have no more Glory in us, and on us, than accrues out of what he beſtows and lays forth in Grace upon us: So that our happineſs as the effect, will extend as far as his own Glory as the End. It ſpeaks, That his Glory on us, ſhall not be ſevered in any thing, from our good. As in that other, it being ſaid, that all things, and the wicked are for himſelf, it is. But here, that his Glory, which is to be had out of us, and likewiſe our happineſs, doth both run along complicated, twiſted, interwoven together, as threads in one Woof, and are of like extent, whereof his Glory is the gloſs, and our Bleſſedneſs the Ground-work or ſtuff. And therefore, if he de ſigno to have a Glory to the utmoſt, then he will ſhew favours to the utmoſt, and Grace will be ſure of all others, to glorifie it ſelf to the utmoſt, and in the utmoſt way the Creatures are capable of, remaining meer Creatures.

2. Yea, Secondly, In that [for Himſelf] is put in, and annexed to [The Glory of his Grace] it manifeſtly ſhews, that Grace is ſo large hearted, as it gives All, even [to Himſelf] (as we ſay) It is not to ſhew Grace only in all ſorts of gracious effects, and in heaping favour upon favour, as a King doth upon his Favourite: But this is to Communicate to us Himſelf, to the utmoſt, and in the utmoſt way that meer Creatures, (for Chriſt alwaies muſt be excepted) are capacitated for.

3. Thirdly, It is the Communication of the whole of Himſelf; whether of his Divine perfections, ſo far as to Bleſs us therewith, or likewiſe of all the Three Perſons, Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt. (For theſe, (namely, Perſons, and Attributes) are all that are in himſelf, and are himſelf; or which he hath in and for himſelf, to enjoy and be happy in). And all in God, ſhall as truly ſerve to make thee Bleſſed, according to a Creatures capacity, as it ſerves to make himſelf Bleſſed, in his own immenſe Sphere of Bleſſedneſs, if thou haſt himſelf, and the whole of himſelf. Thou ſhalt be Heir of God, Rom. 8. 17. for thou ſhalt be a joynt-heir with Chriſt; and it is All in God, is Chriſt's Inheritance, Pſal. 16. 5. The Lord is the portion of mine Inheritance, and of my Cup: Thou maintaineſt my lot. And thou canſt not have more: for, as Rev. 21. 7. He that overcometh, ſhall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he ſhall be my Son. God himſelf hath but All things for himſelf; and thou ſhalt have himſelf; and what canſt thou have more?

4. Fourthly, He reſerves himſelf for thee, and all that is him, as the Text Rom. 9 4. ſpeaks of his Elect, That he hath reſerved them for himſelf: So he hath reſerved himſelf for them, and all of himſelf wholly for them. Is God your Inheritance? (as afore:) Then, none ſhall ſhare therein but the deſigned Heirs; the Reſt have Portions. Is it God that is your Inheritance? It is He, then, that is ſaid to be reſerved in Heaven for you, 1 Pet. 1. 4. There he waits (as it were) for you, and that until you ſhall come, and lets the Crowd, the great Ones in all Ages paſs, as they paſs afore him all along, reſerving himſelf (as in Election he did deſign) for you: As if a great Prince, in a Dream or Viſion, ſhould ſee the Idea of one not yet born, and ſhould fall in love ſo with the Image of her, that he reſerves himſelf till ſhe is born and grown up, and will not think nor entertain any other Loves.

5. Fifthly, When he hath brought thee through all Diſaſters to Heaven; Then, even then, to ſhew, that his firſt and ultimate and eminent deſign in Electing of thee, was for himſelf, in that ſpecial Senſe I have ſingled forth. Lo! your firſt entertainment or welcom thither, will be, A preſenting you to himſelf: (O wonderful! We have need, that an Angel tell us, as he did John, upon the Lamb's Marriage, Rev. 19. 9. That theſe are the true ſayings of God; ſo ſlow of heart, and dull, through Unbelief, are we:) But you have it expreſs and full to the ſame purpoſe, which now I have held forth; in Jude, Verſ. 24. Now unto him that is able to keep you from falling, and to preſent you faultleſs before the Preſence of his Glory, with exceeding Joy, &c. He ſpeaks this as of what God means to do; and thoſe he wrote to, being yet alive on Earth; he therefore brings it in, and preſents it to their Faith in a way of exhorting them to Praiſe, and give Glory to him aforehand, upon the account, That He is able to do it, (as his Doxology runs) yet ſo, as withal, it more ſtrongly imports, He will certainly do it. And who is it that will do this? What? Is it ſpoken of Chriſt his preſenting you to his Father? No, not here in this place: Or is it Chriſt his preſenting you to himſelf, as being your deſigned Husband? No, neither; (although you ſhall ſee that by and by, ſaid of him too.) But it is the great God, the Father himſelf; for it is the Preſence of him, the Fathers Glory, which we are preſented afore; and you ſee withal, that it is the ſame Perſon that preſents us to himſelf, whoſe Preſence it is afore which we are preſented, [afore his own Preſence of Glory.] So that 'tis he whoſe Glory it is. And again, it follows, Verſ. 25. To the only wiſe God our Saviour, be Glory and Majeſty, Dominion and Power, now and ever, Amen. All which Attributes are the Attributes of the great God the Father, in the uſual current of Doxologies; and yet you may take in both Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, conſidered unitedly in that One Act of preſenting us, as they are One God, though three in Perſon, who will thus preſent you to themſelves, or himſelf, as One God; ſo as it ſhall be one joynt Act of them all, and yet as One God: And that of [our Saviour] is no Objection; for it is ſaid of them All Three, That they ſave us.

It is added in that place, With exceeding joy: It is at our very firſt coming to Heaven this is ſpoken of. And ſpoken, that as we on our part, ſhall Rejoyce (as you will all ſay, we ſhall have reaſon) ſo God on his part too; He is pleaſed to preſent us with great Joy to himſelf, as making our Salvation his own Concern, more than it is ours: And that it is ſpoken of his Joy, doth that word ſhew, That it is a Preſenting us to himſelf afore the Preſence of his own Glory: And ſhews, that he eſteems it to be Matter of Joy to himſelf, to have us ſo with himſelf: And though expreſſed of him but after the manner of men, that are over-joyed when their Children come home to them; yet ſufficiently ſignifies that his Heart works with Joy in the doing it; as of the Father of the Prodigal) is also spoken. And the word Presenting afore [his] Glory, manifestly declares those Joy it is, what is most intended, even his own, more than ours. For, it speaks how it is his own Interest, his Self-interest, his Glory which moves him. And what he hath in his heart when he doth it, that moves him so to present us, and therefore fills him with Joy in doing it. And it is as much as to say, he doth it for his own Solace; with the highest delight and greatest pleasure to himself: He gratifies himself in it: It is matter of dearest enjoyment of those whom he hath so long loved, which he beholdeth in them, now when he sees them perfectly holy. As elsewhere God is said to Rejoyce over us, Zeph. 3. 17. The Lord thy God in the midst of thee is Mighty; he will save, he will rejoyce over thee with joy; he will rest in his love: He will rejoyce over thee with singing. If in this life, when absent from him, much more when we come home to him, and he hath us present with him, in the Presence of his Glory: And that Land (the Type of it) shall be called Beulah; that is, Thy delight is in her: For the Lord delighteth in thee, Isa. 62. 4. He loves us when sinners; but delights in us, but so far as we are holy: And now when he sees us come first afore his Presence, faultless and perfectly holy; then his delight, and his joy in us is full: And then, at that time, when we come first into his Presence, says God with himself; Lo, I loved this my Creature from everlasting, and I designed him then by choice, not only to be mine, my peculiar; but I chose him for my self to rejoyce in, and to communicate my whole self unto. And now, that after so long a time, seeing that holiness I designed, to be compleated in him, to prepare him for my enjoyment of him, and for his full enjoyment of Me, in the presence of my Glory, I thus solemnly present him with exceeding great joy unto my self: For I shall have more joy and solace in him, than he shall have in Me: For 'twas for my self that I first did choose him, as my ultimate End, which is now accomplished and perfected.

Fa-

Chap. 3.

And thus understood, Respondent ultima primis; and that Maxim so used and applied in the point of Gods Decrees, that what is last in execution, is first in Intention, and e contra is fully cleared up: Though I think, that that will not hold in all things about those Decrees, yet in this it is perfectly true: This being the ultimate End of Gods first choice and cast of his Eye upon us. And in like manner you see, it is last in execution, he chose us for himself; that was his primitive intention; and he presents to himself, as last in execution: He delighted with infinite delights to choose us, foreseeing all he meant to bring us to; and above all, his own enjoyment of us. Thus Deut. 10. 15. Only, the Lord had a delight in thy Fathers, to love them; and he chose their Seed after them: Even you above all people, as it is this day: And at the last, he presents them, (having accomplished his End, once) to himself, with exceeding great joy

And now, to tell you, how happy and blessed you will be for ever, after this so solemn a Presentation of you made by himself, to himself, None knows but himself, that knows himself, and his own blessedness: Only, in brief carry home this; that you will be as happy, as God himself can make you, as for the kind of it, of which I spake before.

I might next shew you, that we are also ordained for Jesus Christ: For unto him, and for him, you were likewise chosen as well as for the Father; as I have interpreted that in Eph. 1. 5. where 'tis said, God the Father having predestinated us by Jesus Christ (εἰς αὐτὸν) [unto him] that is, to the same Jesus Christ, as well as ἐξ αὐτοῦ, or, that God the Father did it to himself: I take in both in that εἰς αὐτὸν, both to him, that is, to Christ as well as to himself; that is, to God the Father, who himself predestinated us. And Christ himself from Heaven said of Paul, he is a CHOSEN vessel TO ME. Yea, and Christ also chose you from everlasting with the Father, and as God the Father predestinated you for him, that is, for Christ his Son, so Christ also, for himself: And that he will in like manner present you to himself also, you have it in Eph. 5. 27. That he might present it to himself a Glorious Church: And you will easily Grant, that this might in some respect more Properly be said of him, than of the Father; because as the discourse in that Chapter was, he is the Husband and the Church the Spouse. But, as Christ is an everlasting Father, Isa. 9. 26. as well as an Husband; so God the Father is our Husband, as well as Christ; Isa. 54-5. For thy Maker is thy Husband; and Multitude of other Speeches shew; (I am married to thee; and the like;) so that each of them may be said to present us each to himself.

But, besides this passage in the Ephesians, Christ himself doth more than insinuate the same with the greatest affections, and as with a delight to speak of it, in John 14. as being that thing which most intimately and ultimately pleased him, and was a Gratifying of himself, even this, that he should one day take us to himself, to his infinite personal joy and Contentment. For he having first said, I go and prepare a place for you, (as a kind Bridegroom doth for his Spouse) and then that I will come again to fetch you; he adds, [and receive you to my self.] The words are, John 14. 3. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and [RECEIVE YOU UNTO MY SELF;] that where I am, there ye may be also: You see [to himself] still comes in: And methinks, in those words he doth express his heart in such a manner, as implies, that it was his own dearest interest that fill'd and acted his very Soul in so speaking, as well as our interest: And that all was, for himself to enjoy us, and to that End to have us with himself for ever.

Thus much for the first part of my assertion for the Communication of himself. There remains a second branch intended in it, and that is Union with himself which in reality is the first of the two.

All Communication in a way of Grace is founded upon an Union with him first who communicates himself, as upon which it is he doth so Communicate: Thus all Communion between Man and Wife in such Acts as are proper to that Relation, is founded upon their being by a Marriage Union first made One flesh, by an assumed Relation first constituted between them: Their Union and Relation is not founded upon such transient Acts of Communion (for such without a previous Marriage Union of right and order, would be Fornication) but upon a Marriage Union first made. The Schoolmen do make something equivalent to this, the ground why God shews Mercy to his Children, that God makes and reckons them first, ut aliquid sui, as something of himself; the Scripture speaks the same, when it saith, they are as dear to him as what can be thought dearest to ones self; Zach. 2. 8. He that toucheth you, toucheth the Apple of his Eye; and Deut. 32. 9. God made himself the portion of his people; viz. by giving himself to them: And by vertue thereof it follows; he kept him as the Apple of his Eye, Vers. 10. thus in the Old Testament. Why persecutest thou me? Acts 9. 4. So in the new. When I heard a language I understood not, (says God) Psal. 81. 5. And he speaks it in the person of his People when in Egypt; for otherwise, there is no Language which God understands not; and it is God that utters that [I] there, as the next words shew, Vers. 6. I removed his shoulder from the burden: And Vers. 7. Thou calledst, and [I] delivered thee.

Now this Union was Elections design whereby to bring about that Communication of himself; thus the Psalmist, Psal. 65. 4. Blessed is the man whom thou choosest, and causest to approach unto thee; or (as Ainsworth) makest near to thee: (As also who shall separate us (Rom. 8. 35. doth imply) and from hence flows the Communication of himself, as it follows in that Vers. of the Psalmist, he shall be satisfied with the goodness of thy House; which House is himself in our Hearts, and so by this choice of his to that near approach unto him, we come to have all of what God in Heaven doth Communicate; whereof that Temple and House was then the Type, in the Language of which the Psalmist there speaks.

And that the Communication of himself is founded upon Union, is eminently seen in the Man Jesus, whose predestination is the pattern of ours, Rom. 8. 29. For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the first-born among many brethren. And whose Union with God is the Instrumental Original of ours. The whole foundation of that Glory, &c. the Man Jesus hath, is his Union with the Son of God, whose original right it was to say, I in my Father, and my Father in me: 'Twas that Union of him with the Son, who had this Union with the Father, gave him right to all those other Priviledges he hath: This entred him Fellow with the Trinity; the Man, God's fellow as in Zachary 13. 7. and this Union alone gave him right to have life in himself; and made all the Royalties of the Son of God naturally to flow in upon him as his due: Insomuch as our Divines have said, that there is no other Grace shewn to him, but this Gratia unionis, the Grace of Union; for that Union drew along all else with it, as of right and by inheritance: but yet, to us, all our priviledges, and Communications that follow, are as perfect Grace to us, as our Union at first. Yet still, they are all founded on the Grace of an Union, from whence Communion flows; and look, that as Union with God was the height and top Grace vouch safed Christ, and the end of his Predestination, so that of ours is of all the Grace communicated to us.

CHAP.

Book II.

CHAP. IV.

That our Union with God the Father, and Christ, is the utmost End of our Election further proved, in an Interpretation of several Passages of Christ's Prayer, in the Seventeenth Chapter of John.

JOHN XVII. from Verse 20. to the end.

Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word: That they all may be One, as thou Father art in me, and I in thee; that they also may be One in Us: That the World may believe that thou hast sent me. And the Glory which thou gavest me, I have given them, that they may be One even as we are One. I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in One, and that the World may know, that thou hast sent me; and hast loved them as thou hast loved me. Father, I will, that they also whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am, that they may behold my Glory which thou hast given me: For thou lovedst me before the foundation of the World. O Righteous Father! the World hath not known thee, but I have known thee; and these have known that thou hast sent me. And I have declared unto them thy Name, and will declare it; that the love wherewith thou hast loved me, may be in them, and I in them.

The Assertion was,

THAT God, in and at his Electing, did ordain the Body of his Elect to a Super-creation Union with himself, and Communication of himself, as the highest and utmost End, he (as to what concerns us) chose us unto, above the Law or Dues of our Creation; and so as the height and top of our Salvation is consummated in that Union, which is far above that Law or Dues which is by the Law of our Creation.

I repeat the Assertion, because now I am to prove it, and every part of it; which I shall endeavour by these four or five following Deductions out of this Prayer.

1. The Subject of his Prayer, His whole Church.

The Subject of this Prayer, or Persons prayed for, in this part of it, are his whole Church of his Elect, to the End of the World: And the aim of his Prayer, or thing prayed for by him, in Vers. 21. is, That they All (that is, all and every one of them) may be One. He had prayed for himself to Vers. 6. For his Apostles then present, from thence to this 20th Verse: But here, for his whole Church, who in the whole Body of them, muſt needs be ſuppoſed infinitely more dear to him, than thoſe Eleven Perſons, his Apoſtles, ſo ſmall a Parcel of the whole, who are a Company which cannot be numbred, as Rev. 7. 9. who now ſtood afore his view. Chap. 4.

John and Jude wrote Catholick Epiſtles; (as they are intituled:) And this part of Chriſt's Prayer, we may ſtyle, Chriſt's Catholick Prayer.

2. Let us next take in the Greatneſs of this Perſon who prays, and all the Circumſtances he then ſtood in, when and whilſt he was uttering of it; and think with your ſelves, of what an infinite weight and concernment that Prayer, for that his whole Church, muſt be of: That He, the great Son of God, that had been glorified with God's own ſelf afore the World was, the true High Prieſt, bearing now all the Tribes Names, that is, All the Perſons of his Elect, and every one of them, on his Heart; [All, Verſ. 21.] and every One: And being within a ſmall ſpace, to go forth to be taken, and then to offer up himſelf a whole Burnt-Sacrifice for them, and every of them: And now by his Prayer, pouring forth the bottom of his Heart and Soul-blood deſires, into the Boſom of his Father for them; and this, choſen out as his laſt and only ſolemn Requeſt, to be left upon Record to all Poſterity for them; and this alſo the laſt part and concluſion of that Prayer, when his heart was moſt inlarged; (as towards the end of Prayers ours uſe to be) himſelf wrapt up into Heaven, and filled with the ſenſe of his own ſooner approaching Glory; when he breathes it forth almoſt at every word; when you find him alſo deeply affected with the joyous thoughts of that Glory and Happineſs which his whole Church ſhould have, in order unto, and through this Union, effected by his Mediation; and which ſhould be the fruit and effect of that his own Glory, and thoſe his Sufferings; and how, at the latter day, his glory, and his Churches bleſſedneſs in their Conjunction with God through him, ſhould ſo glorioufly appear, and be acknowledged even by all the Reſt of the World; and that his Heart was full of all theſe Contemplations and Foreſights, you may diſcern from every Verſe, eſpecially 23 and 24.

Now then, Conſider that he being thus, through his ſhortneſs of time, to ſingle forth one Boon or Largeſs, to ask of his Father, who (he pleads) had loved him afore the Foundation of the World; and as he urgeth alſo, had loved this his whole Church, and every Member of it, as he had loved him: And that to utter this Requeſt, as his dying Requeſt too, with his laſt Breath; I ſay, If you look on him in theſe Circumſtances, you will all conclude, That it muſt be ſome grand thing his Heart was now big withal; and of all things elſe the choiceſt and moſt comprehenſive of good, yea, and of univerſal Concernment to them all. Sure you do and would expect in this caſe, That it ſhould be the utmoſt Bleſſing which he could ask: Or that he knew (who was his Fathers Counſellor) to be the beſt his Father would beſtow. And now what is't? 'Tis Union, Union, our Myſtical Union.

There are indeed ſome other things fall in, but I may aſſure you, this our Union is the grand Subject of the whole, the Ocean all the other run into. And in that 21th Verſe, he at firſt plainly propoſeth it, as the Sum of his intended Requeſt, That they all may be One: And ſpends the reſt of his Prayer either in explaining, What Union he meant, and indigitating over and over, in more particularizing Expreſſions thereabout; which are, for Subſtance, this one and the ſame thing, even this, That they may be One, as I in thee, and thou in me, &c. that they may be perfect in One. And preſſing his Father by thoſe neareſt Endearments between himſelf and him, which he knew were the moſt taking effectual Motives to grant it; as his eternal love to himſelf, and the ſame love to them, Verſ. 21, 23, 24. And he goes over and over it again, and amplifies upon it, as one that knew not how to leave it, nor to get his heart off from it: So dear and precious a Requeſt it was to him; (which is uſual with us in Petitions our hearts are in:) yea, and ceaſeth and leaves it, but becauſe he was call'd off by another as great an Occaſion; for the very time appointed by his Father for him to be taken by Judas and his Crew, was now come; read Chap. 18. And he ſo long'd to be baptized with that Baptiſm,

Book II. that he resolved to be at the place, designed aforehand to meet them, rather than come too late. And that he was mindful of the time, his words, Chap. 13. ult. Arise, let us go hence, do shew. And so he was forced to break off; and yet then he makes it his last word, That the love wherewith thou hast loved me, may be in them, and I in them.

3. But 3ly. What Union is this intended, or with whom?

Our Commentators do generally (except some few) Limit it unto that kind or species of Union, which the Catholique Church hath and shall have for ever one with another, and among themselves, as gathered out of, and separated from the World, into one Body, to Christ as the Head; and the Oneness to be that of love and affection, to be of one Mind and Judgment, and to preserve Concord; and the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace, according as it was at first exemplified in the Primitive Pattern, who were of one heart, and of one soul, Acts 4. 32. And so fast joyned, and glewed together, (as the word is) Acts 5. 13. That, as of of the rest (that were of the World) durst no man joyn himself unto them. And yet the people magnified them, and many were added to them: All which agrees (say they) with Christs speech, Verse 21. That this their being One, the rest of the World did tacitely acknowledge Christ to be the Messiah: and the sight of it brought divers to Believe, as Verse 14.

But sure this is too Narrow a Vessel to contain the big words by which Christ expresseth this Union here to this Father; But it is directly and immediately intended of that grand Union of all Unions whatever, even of our Union with God and Christ themselves; which doth indeed by way of consequence drawn on after it, this other Union of Saints one with another among themselves; as the Sun-beams being one in the Sun, the nearer they become unto the Sun, they be so much nearer unto one another, and among themselves, as being originally united unto the Sun itself: Yet still, this is not the Union primarily intended here.

And although the common Current be for that other Opinion, yet there are some Commentators of great Note, who cast their thoughts upon this last proposed Opinion.

Tollet being convinced, that those words of Vers. 21. As thou Father art in Me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us, do in the very sound of them, reach higher than that inferiour Union of the Saints one with another: Yet thus farr completh with the common Vogue, and compounds it, bidding the Reader attend, that there is a twofold Union of Believers.

1. One among themselves, from the Unity of Faith and Love; and that that is it, (says he) Christ means in the former part of Vers. 21. in those words, that they all may be one. But,

2. There is another, our Union with God and Christ, and their indwelling in us, and we in them: And of that Union (saith he) the following words are to be understood: As thou Father art in me, and I in thee; that they also may be one in us.

Super 4. Evangelia. Joannes Bence, also in his excellent (though short) Manual, falls into the same. Brugensis comes off to the same, though later, yet at last: Those other issued with it upon the 21. Verse; but Brugensis, falls in at the 22. Verse, upon those words; That they may be one, as we are one. Not only (says he) that they may be one amongst themselves, (for he had for that already) says he; But that they be one with us. For that is it which follows, I in them, and thou in me: And so they may be perfectly one. Which (though he carries to the Sacramental eating Christs Body, &c.) yet concludes, the most perfect Union that can be with God and Christ is here intended. And for this cites the interpretation of Cyril of Alexandria, that most Auncient and Grave Author. And truely I judge we might have discerned this higher up than either the 21, 22, or, 23d Verses; for I hope by the connexion of Vers. 10, 11. (in the latter part of which, Vers. 11. the matter of Union is first mentioned; that they may be one as we are) I hope, I say, afterwards to make it appear, that our Union with God and Christ, is there the eminent Subject in the Speech. Upon which Verſe, our own Judicious Cartwright, upon Verſ. 11. where this Union is firſt ſpoken of, propounds this Queſtion, What Union it is that's meant; whether that whereby they are One among themſelves, or that with Chriſt, and with God, or rather with all theſe: And anſwers, Omninò cùm Omnibus; Altogether and upon all accounts, it is our Union with all theſe. And that, that of our Union with himſelf, and his Father, is chiefly intended by Chriſt, his Reaſon ſhews, viz. That this part of Chriſt's Prayer is but herein conſonant unto that he had ſo much impreſt upon them in his Sermon to them immediately afore, in Chap. 15. Verſ. 4, 5, 10. Abide in me, and I in you: As the Branch cannot bear fruit of it ſelf, except it abide in the Vine, no more can ye except ye abide in me. Verſ. 5. I am the Vine, ye are the Branches: He that abideth in me, and I in him, the ſame bringeth forth much fruit. Verſ. 10. If ye keep my Commandments, ye ſhall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Fathers Commandments, and abide in his love. Which is all one, as to ſay, Union with himſelf; and ſo, what he had ſo much urged upon them in his Sermon to themſelves, he now puts into a Prayer to his Father for them. Chap. 4.

Speech

And even thoſe that are for that Union of the Saints amongſt themſelves, as the primary intendment; yet are forced to take in that latter Union with God and Chriſt, as that which is the fundamental Cauſe of the Saints Union amongſt themſelves; as in whom, they being one firſt, do become one with one another.

And ſo the Queſtion will reſt in this, Whether the Union of the Saints, &c. be firſt and directly intended by Chriſt; and that of our Union with God and Chriſt be but ſuppoſed, as the Cauſe thereof, though not expreſly held forth in the words: Or, that primarily and directly, our immediate Union with God and Chriſt be meant, and that other Union be ſuppoſed, but as the conſequent thereof; and ſo, but ſecondarily and implyed, as that which doth and muſt neceſſarily follow upon that Union firſt had with God and Chriſt, and ſo in the firſt place prayed for here by Chriſt.

Our Mr. Hooker of N. E. who hath wrote Sermons upon theſe Verſes, from Verſe the 20*th* to the end, (which are in print:) He doth plainly and directly caſt the Interpretation ſolely upon the Saints immediate Union with God and Chriſt, and ſays, That though the other follows thereupon, yet is not here otherwiſe than ſecondarily intended; but that that immediate Union with God and Chriſt, is alone the primary and direct intendment which Chriſt's Prayer and Petition falls upon.

He makes an Apology, why he ſo diſſents and diverts from the Common Opinion: I profeſs, upon the Conſideration of all, to make none for this Diſſent, but ſhall give my Reaſons inſtead thereof. And the Reaſons are,

1. That thoſe words, As thou Father art in me, and I in thee, that they alſo may be One in Us, are a manifeſt Explication of what manner of Union he intended, when firſt he had ſaid, That they all may be One. In which firſt words, he ſums up firſt in General, the pith of his Petition; but then explains it by this, That they may be One in Us. And again indigitates it, Verſ. 23. I in them, and thou in me, that they may be perfect in One; and ſo plainly terminates or iſſues upon the Father and the Son, and our being in them: And herein he ſpeaks what Union he meant, as plain as plain can be.

The other Interpreters divert this, by making the intent of him in his mention of the Father's Union in the Son, and the Son's in the Father, to be, To hold forth by way of Example, what the Union of the Saints amongſt themſelves ſhould be; even after that manner of nearneſs of Union, as that whereby the Father is in the Son, and è contra.

But this Interpretation ſo applyed to the Saints Union among themſelves, doth deſtroy it ſelf; and I infer from that very thing, That the Union he intended is ſuch as bears a Similitude of that Union, in reſpect of their being One in the other; and ſo form up a

BOOK II.

2. Second Reaſon both Negative and Affirmative: 1. Negatively, That the Union of the Saints among themſelves, is not ſuch as that it may be ſaid, That they are one in another: They may indeed be ſaid to be one with another: And being Members, they are ſaid to be Members of one another, Epheſ. 4. 25. But they are never ſaid to be Members one in another: Peter is not in Paul, nor Paul in John. But Affirmatively, Our Union with God the Father and the Son is ſuch, as that Multitudes of Scriptures give teſtimony, that the Father is in us, and Chriſt in us, and we in Chriſt: And do uſe theſe very Phraſes to expreſs our Union with God the Father and the Son: As when 'tis ſaid, God dwells in us, and we in God, 1 John 4. 15. And the Church that is in God the Father, 2 Theſſ. 1. 1. Unto the Church of the Theſſalonians in God our Father, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Yea, it is the Phraſe Chriſt uſeth in this very Goſpel of John, Chap. 14. 20. At that day, ye ſhall know that I am in my Father, and you in me, and I in you. And there, to be ſure, he intends not that Union the Saints have amongſt themſelves; but ſimply that which they have immediately in and with Chriſt, and that exemplified by what he hath with the Father: And here indeed in this Union, the ſimilitude of that which the Father and Son have together, Verſ. 11. or after the Example of God the Fathers being in the Son, and the Son in the Father, is found to hold: And I acknowledge it to be the Archetypal Example of this our Union with the [Us] that is, the Father and Son; And ſo, [That they may be one in us] muſt be rather meant of our immediate Union with that [Us] in that manner the Father is in the Son, and the Son in the Father: for after the Similitude thereof we are in them, and they in us.

And truly, this was a Phraſe or Word ſo ſweet in Chriſt's mouth, and ſo dear to his Heart, as he will have it the very laſt word in this prayer, and I in them: As if he had ſaid, take this in, as the very Punctum or Point which this latter part of my Prayer Centers in.

3. In Verſ. 23. I in them, and thou In me, that they may be perfect in one: That is, they being in me, and I being in them, this makes their Union [In us] perfect. Now the Union the Saints have among themſelves, is not the perfection of their Union; 'tis but a piece of it, and ſo incompleat: But on the other hand, their being one in the Father and in Chriſt, and ſo in the [us,] is that which is the perfection and top of their Union; which the other is not. And therefore, this is mainly intended.

4. Laſtly, Verſ. 22. And the Glory which thou gaveſt me, I have given them; that they may be One, even as we are One. Theſe words declare the very Glory of the Saints in Heaven, to be but a Means to conſummate and perfect (as his word is after, Verſ. 23.) that Union which was the intended and propoſed Subject of this his Prayer. And therefore that Union here intended, muſt be a greater and higher thing than all the Grace in this Life; yea, and all the Glory of the Saints in Heaven; (abſtract it from their Union) for the End is better than the Means (which is Mr. Hookers Reaſon, and was long ſince alſo mine) This all Reaſon acknowledgeth. And if ſo, then certainly, the Union of the Saints among themſelves, in being one in love, affection, concord, of one Heart, not only as in the higheſt attainment they have reached to in this Life; but not as it ſhall be in Heaven, cannot be the full meaning of this that he ſaith, the Glory I have given them, is for this end, that they may be one. This lower Union (as I may call it) is but a part and piece of that Grace the Saints in this Life have, among the many other Grace vouchſafed them: And alas, how imperfect is it! and in Heaven alſo, is but a part of their Glory. But this ſupream Union of the Saints in the [us] here, is meant of Chriſt and God: Their being in them, and they in them: As the Father is in the Son and the Son in the Father; and this in the full accompliſhment and perfection of it: This may be deſervedly ſaid to be greater than the whole of that Grace and Glory, ſimply conſidered, the Saints ſhall have here and hereafter.

For

There are two things yet remaining that were put into the main Doctrine or Assertion, not hitherto spoken unto. Chap. 4.

1. That this Union with Christ and God, was and is the very design of God's Electing of us from everlasting; and this also to be proved out of this Prayer of Christ's in John 17. (for that was it was also undertaken for, whilst I chose that Scripture forth, as a punctual proof of the whole.)

The Second is, that the Union is such as is the highest (next to that of Christ's) the Creature is capable of; A super-creation Union, or above what Adam had by Creation.

For the first of these, which in order with the former, makes the Particular: It may be easily discerned by multitudes of passages, how Christ traverseth with his Father, the Son who lay in his Fathers bosom; he recounts Transactions between himself and his Father, or Concernments that reached so high for their Original: This in a Cursory view, will appear by Vers. 5. And now, O Father, Glorifie thou me with thine own self, with the Glory which I had with thee before the World was: And by Vers. 24. Thou lovedst me before the Foundation of the World. Which he enters as his Plea for his Saints beholding his own Glory, which he had with the Father; Vers. 5.

But more particularly, it appears from his pleading God's Electing of us, whilst he seeks to obtain this Union for us, as the highest thing could be asked: And therefore this Union was included in that Election, as the Design of it.

Now, that he pleads Election in order to that Union, is evident from his Pleas, Vers. 6. (where it is, he first enters upon our Concernment) I have manifested thy name unto the Men which thou gavest out of the World: Thine they were, and thou gavest them me, and they have kept thy word: Thine, How? By Election, for thereby it is, we first became his; 2 Tim. 2. 19. The Lord knoweth them that are his: When he calls his people: When he foreknew, that is, Chose, Rom. 11. 2. (as I opened it) [his] that is, his Elect, my chosen, as his own words often are, of them in the Old Testament. And in that he had manifested his Name unto them, whilst yet ye had preached to others, indifferently, he shews what it was that put the difference, even that these belonged to God; Thine they were, and thou gavest them me.

That Clause also; and thou gavest them me, repeated so oft, both Vers. 6. Vers. 9. Vers. 11. Vers. 12. Vers. 24. I confess, it is to be understood of God's giving them at Effectual Calling them, and in that sense was true of these Apostles: But that's not all, there is a double giving; one at our Calling; and another at and with Election. And that giving to him was a distinct act from that of meer Election, though done at Election. They were first the Fathers by Election, who singled forth the persons, and then gave them unto Christ, upon his Electing of them, and so these two are here joyned; thou gavest them me, for they are thine: First, thine by Election, then given to me, in the same sense, that Grace is said to be given in Christ afore the World began, 2 Tim. 1. 9. In the same sense were these given to Christ afore the World began also; which is the import of that Phrase, John 6. 37. 39. All that the Father giveth me, shall come to me; where the Father's giving is not their effectual calling, for that is besides noted out by coming to Christ. But it is an act of the Fathers preceding conversion, or their calling; for it is the cause of their coming; so the words manifestly shew: All that the Father giveth me, shall come to me. And when was it, that act of giving was put forth afore calling? Not at the instant of calling, but in some time before; for in, Vers. 39. he says; of all that thou [hast] given me, as in the time past; and that was afore he came down from Heaven, as his words shew, Vers. 38, 39. For, I came down from Heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me: And this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing: That is, 'twas the Instruction given him afore he came down, and he came down with that Errand, he brought it with Book II. him, that of all the Father had given him afore he came from Heaven, he ſhould be ſure not to caſt off, nor loſe any he had thus before given him; and if afore came down, then from whence muſt that act commence, but from everlaſting? when it was, that that Grace was given in Chriſt; as, 2 Tim. 1. 9.

And truly, in Verſ. 24. that Clauſe, Thoſe whom thou haſt given me, cannot well otherwiſe be underſtood. Father, I will, that they alſo whom thou haſt given me, be with me where I am, that they may behold my Glory which thou haſt given me: For thou lovedſt me before the foundation of the World. For the Glory given to Chriſt [haſt given me] is apparently ſaid to be from everlaſting, as the Reaſon and Explication given of it ſhews, For thou lovedſt me afore, &c. And therefore, if the giving me thoſe thou haſt given, be ſuitably underſtood, then it is, That thou haſt given me thoſe from everlaſting alſo; which is ſo to be interpreted, becauſe he had ſaid in the words juſt afore, Thou haſt loved them as thou haſt loved me; and ſo, amongſt other likeneſſes from everlaſting, as thou haſt loved me.

Beſides, there he prays for his whole Church to come; and how is it that they had been given him? And that was not at Calling; for many of them were yet uncalled; and therefore given it muſt be in God's everlaſting Decree. This Argument the words of Verſ. 2. do manifeſt; As thou haſt given him power over all fleſh, that he ſhould give eternal life. To as many as thou haſt given: This [as many] are as many as he had amongſt all fleſh of Mankind in all Ages, and of all and every one of them many, he ſays they had been given him by his Father, which was before they were many of them, yea moſt of them, born, in all Ages to come: For they are all that many whom he died for and prayed for accordingly. Which is ſtrengthned by Verſe 20. Neither pray I for theſe alone, but for them alſo which ſhall believe on me through their word: which is a doing to the end of the World. Yet of all theſe he ſpeaks in that 2d, That they had been given him: Then when he prayed for this prayer, yea, and long afore.

The Second, (or, in order, the fifth and laſt) additional in the Aſſertion was, That this Union was the higheſt the Creature was capable of, next unto Chriſt's, and a Super-creation Union, above the Dues or Rewards by Creation. This, though I mention, yet I need not much inſiſt upon the proof. I might ſay no more, but that this our Union is brought in wholly by Chriſt, as the Head of his Church, and there pleaded for us upon his tranſcending Intereſt, on the higheſt accounts that that Intereſt will afford, (which is wholly Supernatural) And how high that will reach, our thoughts cannot riſe up to apprehend. Sure I am, that look how far, Chriſt the Lord from Heaven, exceeds the firſt Adam, a Man on Earth, earthy; or that the Elevation of a Man, who is a quickning Spirit, ſuper-excels the low and inferiour ſtate of a living Soul; and the Unions with God, which each of theſe were the Subjects of, and Conveyors of the like with them proportionate to us, (being compared together) will be found more or leſs excelling; ſo far will that Union conveyed by Chriſt, alſo excel; and the one be but Natural, by Creation dues, and the other Supernatural, as the Compariſon of the two Adams, inſtituted by the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 15. teacheth us to make the eſtimate. But, becauſe I confine my ſelf to this Prayer, that one Paſſage in Verſ. 22. is over-abundantly ſufficient to prove this; And the glory which thou haſt given me, I have given them; that they may be One, even as we are One. This is Chriſt's Glory in himſelf, by perſonal Union, communicated to us by a participation from him, even as Chriſt's Glory was from his Fathers Glory immediately, as his Son by Eternal Generation, and to the Man Jeſus, or God-man, by perſonal Union: This is a Genealogy or Deſcent from an higher Fountain or Riſe than Adam's Union was, and more fixed. But this Branch will, and may appear and riſe up afore us, out of almoſt every thing I can ſpeak about this Union: And when I come to ſpeak of the height of this Union it ſelf, it will every way be juſtified to the Children of Union; and unto that I ſhall refer it.

That

That it was a top Union, Super-creation, &c.

1. See Hooker of Comparison with Adam: See Cartwright on either, Verſ. 11. of John 17. or Verſ. 21. and 22. Chap. 4.

2. 'Tis Chriſt's Glory given over Adam's head, as Verſ. 22. John 17. Adam never had the honour to have given that; 'tis proper to Chriſt, and had it given afore the World.

3. 'Tis the utmoſt he prayed for, and ſo a Corolary from that Head, [that 'tis the great thing Chriſt prays for,] 'tis argued, 'twas the greateſt could be prayed for. See Cartwright's Harmony, third part, on John 17. p. 321, 322.

Uſe. Learn then from Chriſt, what thing of all other to pray for, and to make the moſt endeared Object of our Deſires. There was an one thing of Davids deſires, Pſal. 24. 7. One thing have I deſired of the Lord, that will I ſeek after. And what was that? He ſpeaks according to his elevation under the Old Teſtament, that I may dwell in the Houſe of the Lord all the days of my Life, to behold the beauty of the Lord. And this indeed is near unto what Chriſt here under the New, (and David's is ſpoken in the Type of his:) And this of Chriſts is, that God the Father may dwell in you, and that Chriſt, God the Son, may be in you, as the Father is in him, and make your hearts his Temple, wherein he ſhews and utters all his Glory: That you may be one with the us here: That Chriſt may dwell in you., and you in him; and thereby you will come to behold the beauty of the Lord indeed; that they may behold my Glory, ſaith Chriſt, Verſ. 24. It is to have fellowſhip with the Father, and with the Son, as the Apoſtle John ſpeaks: Paul that was a man that came neareſt to Chriſt of any other (Follow me as I follow Chriſt) what was the great and firſt purſuit of his Soul? in Philip. 3. where in ſome half a dozen Verſes he ſets out the ſpiritual Exerciſes and purſuances of his Soul: (I uſe to call them Paul's Aſcertions: And there the firſt and main great one is this, Verſ. 9. That I may win Chriſt, and be found in him; that is, united to him: That is the grand point of his Deſires. You pray for redemption and forgiveneſs of ſins, &c. and you do well, for ye have need on't: And to ſinners, when they are heavy laden and burdned with their ſins, it is that which is firſt objected and laid before them by the Spirit in the Word: But yet let me tell you, there is a thing behind that is more remote and further off, and hidden to our thoughts at firſt, and that is Union with Chriſt and God, which in the utmoſt enjoyment of it will take place in the other World, when ſin ſhall be forgotten, and remembred no more; yea, and which is a bleſſing of bleſſings, that we might have been made perfect in, though we had never ſinned; yea, which is beyond Heaven and Glory it ſelf, abſtractly conſidered as it is ours, which is beyond our beholding, the Glory of Chriſt in Heaven; for it is that which is accompliſhed in us by that beholding. And my Brethren, a true genuine Spiritual Deſire carrying out the heart unto a Union with God the Father and the Son, this proceeds from pure love; from a love to the things and perſons themſelves the Soul would be united to: Love is always joyned with a deſire of Union: And ſo much the more purely that Love is carried to deſire an Union with things lovely, ſo much greater is that love.

I add this, what though your hearts have not been ſo intenſly and directly carried out to ſeek this for your ſelves, as the top and crown Object of your Deſires, yet be not diſcouraged, the Apoſtles themſelves had it not thus in their thoughts, when Chriſt prayed for this for them: Their Faith and their Spirits had been little carried forth to, and exerciſed about this Union: Have I been ſo long time with you, and believeſt thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? John 14. 9, 10. But in that day they ſhould know; namely, when the Holy Ghoſt came upon them, that I am in my Father, and you in me, and I in you, Verſ. 20. of that 14th Chapter: And here in this his Prayer I obſerve, that he mentions them but ſo far as they had then gone; and alas! it was but a little ſtep: As they have known that thou haſt ſent me; and they believed in me, Verſ. 8. And again, at laſt, Verſ. 25. Theſe have known that thou haſt ſent me: But they yet knew not their Book II. their Spiritual Union with Christ, which therefore he prays for. And again, at the 26th Verse, he saith, I have declared unto them thy Name, (and that by an inward manifestation of many things I have taught them outwardly, concerning thy Name, and Love, and the way of Salvation by me: But yet they were defective in great and many things) therein still, and needed new declarations of new and further things unto them: And therefore he adds those words, and I will declare it: Ye know how short they were in knowledge. Ye believe in God, believe also in me: Hitherto ye have asked nothing in my Name. And therefore it may much rather be supposed that they needed God's revealing to them inwardly and sensibly, their Union with him; and therefore he prays for it again in the very next words, and concludes therewith: They little dream't at this time of his praying of this so high a Mystery, the sense thereof was reserved till after his being glorified: Our Union is hid with God in Christ, as our Life also is: And our growth in Grace lyeth in higher Advances of Spiritual Knowledge; and Impressions of Heart affecting us, running along with accordingly upon what is still more and more Spiritual.

Chap. 5.

CHAP. V.

The Infinity of Grace and Condescention in God, The High and Lofty One, to ordain such an Union and Communion with himself, of Us his Creatures, who are at such a Distance from him as we Creatures; and more then doubly Infinite Grace, in that we are also Sinners.

USE.

YOU have then great Reason to adore our Holy, and Great, and Blessed God, for this his Original and Foundation Grace of Ordaining this High and Super-Creation Union of, and Communication with himself, and of your selves thereunto. My Exhortation is, That under the Contemplation of God's Height and Greatness, you would especially adore his Grace, according to the Tenor of the Angels Song, Glory be to God on high, good will to Men, &c. Luke 2.14. My intent is not upon this occasion, to magnifie this Benefit it self, and shew how great this Union in it self is: But to magnifie the Grace of God's heart himself, in ordaining it and us thereunto.

Only touching the Union it self, I shall say but two things at the present, that shew the greatness of this our Union.

First, That bate but two things, which you that are meer Creatures are eternally uncapable of. 1. Never think to become God himself: I will not again say not only Bate, but abhor that thought. First, you must so be united to him, as God and you may still remain distinct Beings for ever: And indeed, this were not Union, but Sameness and Identity; but yet so near will this Oneness be, as God will be All in All to you, and all the fulness of God shall fill you, as Eph. 3. 19. and so fill you, as the fire of an hot Furnace doth a small piece of Iron cast into it; (when yet not dissolving it, or converting it into fire it self) that you see not, or discern not the Iron, but it appears to be altogether fire: It so fills, penetrates, and throughout possesseth it so in glory, your selves will not mind or think of your own selves, or of your glory as yours, through your being swallowed up into the thoughts and enjoyments of his Glory shining in and through you. 2. Bate you also, that Union which the Man Jesus hath with God, (God's first Fellow) which is to be one Person with him that is God, and so by Inheritance to have the Name, and be styled, Son of God, yea God, &c. though his Creature Frame remains distinct from God eternally, in Col. 2. 2. The fulness of the God-head dwells bodily, that is, personally, in him; (as bodily notes, (which I cannot stand to shew) in our and other Languages) when you would signifie and denote a Person, you use the denomination of a Body: Such a Body did this (you use to say,) and some Body; yea, and no Body; that is, no Person. As Body signifies Person; so bodily, personally: And thus the Godhead dwells bodily in Christ by his Union with the Person of the Son of God. But this is his transcendent Priviledge alone. Would you be all Christs? I pray content your selves: There is but one Lord Jesus Christ, and we by him, 1 Cor. 8. 6.

But, excepting those two, call all the Angels and Spirits of Men made perfect, and let them imagine for you the sublimest, highest, neerest Union with God else; and Communication of God himself accordingly, and you shall have them, and be perfect in One, as Christ says, As we are One; John 17. 11.

The

BOOK II. The second thing I say of this Union, It is Indissoluble. Who shall separate us from the love of God, Rom. 8. 35. And if not from his love, then not from himself; for his love made the union, and will never suffer a separation: Neither his Height, who is the high and lofty One, shall work in his heart, the looseness of his heart towards you: Nor any, nor all, of that depth of sin and misery; for his Love hath an height, and depth, and breadth, and length in it, passeth yours. And in this, our Union (as in other things) transcends that of Adam's by the Law of his Creation; the least sin dissolved it; it was but a running Knot; and how slight and slender an Union and Friendship must that be founded upon, Quamdiu bene se gesserit; and which the least wry unwary thought may unknit? And so the Creature could look at the love of God with it, but as might be turn'd away. And to love, or apprehend one's love to me, as one that may perhaps, one day, hate me: This is Venenum amicitiæ, the poyson of Friendship.

This for the Union it self: Now for the greatning of the Grace thereof (which is my proper Scope) I shall only refer you to God himself: Hear what himself speaks of it, and what he sets it forth by; how he himself values the favour of it, who best knows how to value it, that is, best acquainted with himself, and knows what he bestows on us, when he unites himself.

The Scriptures I referr you to for this, are, Isai. 57. 15. For thus saith the high and Lofty one, that inhabiteth Eternity, whose Name is Holy; I dwell in the high and holy Place; with him also that is of a contrite and humble Spirit: To revive the Spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones. Parallel with Isa. 66. 1. and 2. Thus saith the Lord, the Heaven is my Throne, and the Earth is my Foot-stool: Where is the House that ye build to me? And where is the place of my Rest? For, all those things hath mine hand made; and all those things have been, saith the Lord: But, to this Man will I look; even to him that is poor, and of a contrite Spirit, and that trembleth at my Word.

1. It is Union with his poor Creatures, which he here indigitates, and holds up to their view, as the great benefit bestowed. [With him will I dwell;] By which Phrase, in the New Testament, Union with God and Christ, are still expressed; as also in the Old; 1 John 4. 15, 16. Whosoever shall confess, that Jesus is the Son of God; God dwelleth in him, and he in God: And we have known and believed the Love that God hath to us: God is love; and he that loveth, dwelleth in God, and God in him. And the highest Union of the Son of God, in and with the humane Nature, is termed, The dwelling of the Godhead Bodily, or Personally, Colloss. 2. 9.

Now, the Course God takes to Magnifie this his Grace of Union, or indwelling in us, is, by setting forth the Greatness of himself, in a comparative with our Meanness and Lowness.

I shall not here, at large or industriously set forth his Height or Loftiness, that's not my main Design at present; though that was elsewhere my Argument upon the same Text, which I opened then, to shew the distance of God from the Creature: But at present my single intent and purpose, is to Glorifie this Grace of Union.

Brethren, God here appears in, and puts on, as great a Glory, as any where else the Scriptures do express; and he doth it, to endear the condescention of his Love in Uniting himself unto us. I shall make instance of it in each Particular, whereby he sets forth his Greatness.

1. The high and Lofty One: High, for the transcendency and excellency of his Being: Lofty, for his Soveraignty and Dominion. To speak to each;

1. The high one, or Most High; a Title frequently given him in Scripture, and even by the Devil himself to him; God most high, Luke 8. 28. And it Notes out his Divine Being or Essence, to be of another kind than his Creatures are of; yea, and infinitely surpassing theirs, in that respect: As in Eph. 4, 5, 6. one Lord, one Faith, one Baptism: one God and Father of all; who is above all, and through all, and in you all. 1. He is said, to be above all; denoting the sublimity of his Godhead and Being; and in an higher kind ex-excelling theirs. And 2ly he is through all, in respect of the Immensity of his being, that extendeth to, and pierceth through all. Or if you look that other Parallel place, Isa. 66. 1, 2. Thus saith the Lord, The Heaven is my throne, and the Earth is my foot-stool: Where is the House that ye build unto me? And where is the place of my rest? For all those things hath mine hand made, and all those things have been, saith the Lord: But to this Man will I look, even to him that is poor, and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at my word. Where God, comparing himself in like manner with his Creatures, speaks thus slightly of them, and their Existence. These! Why, these have my hand made; and made out of nothing: Which expresseth their utter difference in kind from him, as well as his efficiency: For, what are the artificial works of any Mans hands, unto what himself is, that made them? And he speaks of their Existence. Those words [all these have been] Pareus renders, per eum existunt. Chap. 4.

Now stand agast, my Brethren, to think, that infinite pure Being of his (which runs through all immixed with his Creatures; and that, in the kind of it, doth transcend and differ, as a Man doth from a Picture he hath drawn: Or as the Rational Soul, or an Intelligent Spirit doth from the Body of a Man, or the Sensitive Soul in him, or in a Brute;) should contract so near an Oneness with us his poor Saints. When Adam was to have a Companion, God brought all sorts of Earthly Creatures to him, for him to choose one out of; but they being none of them, of his kind, he refused them all: And shall God vouchsafe to mingle himself with us, and dwell in us, as the Soul doth in the Body; be one with us, and make us Companions with himself; yea, and reckon us as himself! It is spoken of as a debasement of our Souls, that their condition should be, to dwell in Houses of Clay, Job. 4. 19. and their foundation to be in the dust; and will he that is the Potter dwell in his earthen Pots he makes, and become one with them, for him that is above all, and through all, (as you have it in Eph. 4. 6) It is the Immensity of his being, that he fills Heaven and Earth; and he were not God if he were not so immense: For this God to be in you all, (which is spoken of the Saints with a discriminating difference from all else, and to enhaunce the Grace of which, he had rehearsed those other,) is Grace indeed, and a presence infinitely beyond that Common to them with all things, of being through them.

Put together these two, That he that is above all, in the Eminency of his Being, and but through all things else, should further be in you all: And there's the Grace.

2. The lofty One, which imports, 1. What, according unto that height of his Being, he might in a Grandeur answerable thereunto, carry it towards his Creature, loftily and aloof; and might, out of a due and just valuation of himself, so keep off from any Communion with them. Sure I am, the Scripture speaks at this rate of him, as of what he might do, and that out of loftiness; when it says, that it is an humbling of him, to cast an eye, or so much as a thought, upon any of his Creatures; not on Earth only, but in Heaven: This is expresly spoken of him, Psal. 113. 5, 6. Who is like unto the Lord our God, who dwelleth on high; who humbleth himself to behold the things that are in Heaven and in the Earth? It as as if he had said, It is a condescension or stooping, a coming down from his loftiness, to cast a thought or look upon any of them, under any consideration; to take them so much as to be the Object of his Cogitation: And in this sense we use the Phrase of one who knowing his own worth and height, and rating himself proportionably, That he is too lofty to deign to do such or such a thing, that is far below him. O therefore! how far must he be from deigning to have any such a thought or inclination, as To be One with us, and to dwell in us, and exchange thoughts, affections, and joys with us, in so near a manner! yea, bestow even himself upon us! I had almost said, To cast himself away upon such worthless things! I will make this supposition (if it could be supposed) That if any Creature should ever have so presum'd and aspired, as to have made such a but far-off Motion to him, How would he, out of his loftiness, have with indignation rected it, and them that made it? Well, but this Grace within himself made the Motion for us, and caused this lofty One to think of it.

It is said in Scripture, That he purposed all things within himself, Eph. 1. 11. And to be sure, this of all others, must have been purposed within himself, and have come from himself; and that makes the Grace of it.

2. The Lofty One, that is, in respect of absolute Soveraignty, as in 1 Tim. 6. 15. he is described, Who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of Kings, and Lord of Lords. And further, to make it appear he is so, He hath a Son that is lesser than himself, considered as God-Man, Namely, Christ, and who is accordingly stiled, The Prince of the Kings of the Earth, Rev. 1. 5. (even as the Kings Son hath the Title of Prince, under the King his Father,) whom he will, in his times, one day shew, and cause to appear in Glory; as it is in the same place of Timothy. And this his Prince or Son, less than himself, is yet under him as God-Man, stiled also, The King of Kings, and Lord of Lords.

Think with your selves then, but of a great and lofty Spirited Prince, that is Lord of all, that he should design to unite to himself the lowest Beggar, and take her into his bosom, and bestow his Son or Prince upon her in Marriage, and unite himself therewith in the neareſt tye and Bond of Union. (And yet, Earthly Kings are but Kings by Birth, and in their Essence or Nature, but of the same kind as other Men), and yet this doth God. To conclude this, in Rom. 8th. ult. you read, that neither height, nor depths, shall separate from this love of God in Christ Jesus. Shall not separate, implies an Union made; Heights, are those heights of God's Loftiness, in being so infinitely above us: The depths are your depths of lowness, miseries and sins. Now these hindred not his conjunction with us at first, nor shall they ever separate, or work off his heart from us. In Marriages of Persons mean by Birth, though perhaps rich, with, or into the Nobility, it is often seen, that their height and loftiness, makes them in time despise those they have Married, and to have their hearts taken off from them, for the disproportion in respect of Meanness; so that it proveth in the long run, an uncomfortable Union. But it is not thus with the lofty heart of our God: His loftiness and your lowness, his heights and your depths, make the happiest Union that ever was, because it is his Grace makes it and brings it about, and holds us together.

3. Who inhabiteth Eternity; that is, 1. When none of these his Creatures had a Being, but made in the beginning of time, Gen. 1. 1. Whereas he for an Eternity of time past, when there was no Creature with him, as Prov. 8th. from Vers. 23. to 32. dwelt alone in himself, who is his own Eternity; and is an house to himself, compleatly furnished within himself, and hath no need of us, or any thing: Nor would not have had unto all Eternity to come, Acts 17. 24, 25. God that made the World, and all things therein, seeing that he is Lord of Heaven and Earth, dwelleth not in Temples made with hands: Neither is worshipped with mens hands, as though he needed any thing, seeing he giveth to all, life and breath and all things. They thought their Gods such, (as Paul's speech implies) that they contributed a Glory unto them to build them Temples, to invite them to come and dwell and receive Worship, and Sacrifices from them Offered therein.

And the Vulgar Jews had some like narrow conceits of our great God, as that our Parallel place, Isaiah 66. 1. insinuates: For what doth God say there to them? Thus saith the Lord, the Heaven is my Throne, and the Earth is my Footstool; where is the house that ye build unto Me? and where is the place of my Rest? Which is as if he had said, This Temple, nor all these things, are neither worthy of Me, to be a place or dwelling to Me; nor have they all Room enough to hold Me, that they should be my Rest, to take Contentment in.

Solomon himself, after he had built that stately Temple (the wonder of the World whilst it stood) when he came to Dedicate it by that solemn Prayer, 1 Kings, Chapter, 8. That God would dwell in it, and hear all sorts of Petitions, made in it, or towards it, at the Throne of his presence; doth in the midst midst and full carrier of his Prayer, make a stand, and puts a strange check or correction to himself, and a stop to his Petitioning any further, Vers. 27. But will God indeed dwell on the earth? Behold the heaven, and heaven of heavens cannot contain thee; how much less this house that I have builded? Whereas God's Promise to dwell therein, was the very corner stone of his Prayer, laid at the entrance of it, Vers. 12. The Lord said, that he would dwell in the thick darkness, which he builds all his Petitions upon. This so abrupt a clause and parenthesis to a Prayer that had run on so smoothly, for so long a Series of such Petitions for God's Presence, seems at first blush to have been a recalling, or calling into question that his foundation. But it was either a Divine Rapture, an Extasie, swallowing up his Soul into an Adoration of God's infinite Graciousness so to descend: Or, that his Faith took breath a little, by a brief Quæry made unto God, seeking to draw and suck in from Him, a confirmation and strengthning of his Faith therein; That so immense a God, should thus dwell, &c. was a thing became too big for his narrow Faith to retain, without some new impression from God to inlarge and widen it. And truly, by such free Quæres made in Prayer, the Saints often draw from God manifestations and impressions of his love, as to say, But wilt thou indeed pardon, and yet love me! (or the like) For, that this should have been vox dubitantis, the voice of unbelief, or of doubting, I cannot well suppose, (although the thing was (but that God had said it) in it self utterly incredible); because that ere he began his Prayer, he saw with his eyes the presence of God filling this Temple, Vers. 11. And having his Faith fully confirmed there, he at the beginning of his Prayer, rehearsed the Promise God had long before made of dwelling in it, Vers. 12. which the dark Cloud was the testimony of. I understand it therefore to have bin vox admirantis, the voice of admiration and astonishment, proceeding from a strong Faith of it: His Spirit was stounded at the thoughts of it, (whilst he was carrying it all along in his Prayer) and was indeed the main Petition in, and of his Prayer; and therefore when he had recovered himself, or came as it were to himself again, having uttered this, he goes on in the next Vers. 28. as he had done before, Yet have thou respect unto the prayer of thy Servant, and to his Supplication, Oh Lord my God, and so on; so as this but will God indeed dwell on earth and in a Temple made by me? This was but a stounding parenthesis; that so immense a God, whom the Heaven, and Heaven of Heavens cannot contain, should vouchsafe to dwell, &c. and it is as if he had said with wonderment; but is this true, and true indeed? Oh infinitely strange, and beyond all imagination! A condescension that would never have entred into the heart of man: And never enough to be admired at! Thus this proceeded not out of Doubting of the thing, though thus great, but from an Adoration of God, that he should vouchsafe it, considering his Infiniteness, and Immensity, thus to Lower Himself, to dwell under so unworthy a Roof, as that Centurion also spake of Christ, whom this Temple of Solomons did Typify. However it was, whether One or t'other, or both, either serves as a great step to my purpose, which is to greaten the Grace of God in dwelling on Earth; and withal, take this along with you, that the Prophet Esau his grand wondering, and this of Solomons, Was, that he that inhabiteth Eternity, before Heaven, or the Heaven of Heavens were built, or a stone thereof laid, should thus do.

Chap. 5.

But will you have me unfold the Mystery of all this admiration of Solomons, and bring it down more home to my Scope in hand? For God to have dwelt thus in that outward pile of Building, the Stone, Gold, and Furniture of Solomons Temple, as understood in the outward letter, was not the great Object that Solomons Faith, or Wonderment, was exercised about: Yea, that simply or abstractly, or alone considered, if no mystery had been in it, was not at all to have been believed: For if so, then it had been contradictory to that we heard from the Apostle, Acts 17. 24. God that made the World——dwelleth not in Temples made with hands.

Solomons Temple, indeed was God's Ordinance, having the Promise of his Presence; but there was this further deep and great Mystery intended by it, which Solomons Faith and the believing Jew, had in their Eye, and that we Book II. must understand to have been the Subject of his Admiration—as well as of his Faith.

This Temple, and the Ark, in the Holy of Holies thereof, in which God dwelt between the Cherubins, was His Christ that was to come in the flesh, God's Immanuel, or God with us: Even the fulness of the God-head dwelling bodily and substantially in an Human Nature, whereof this Temple and Ark were but the Shadow: (which opposition of shadow and body, is another Interpretation we may take in, to make that phrase of Dwelling bodily Compleat) It is Christ who is that true Tabernacle to be in Heaven, which not Man but God pitch'd, and was to be the Ark of his Testament, as Christ under the New Testament is called. And Christ not being then to come; there was nothing extant on the Earth visibly to signifie that Presence and Union of God with Man by, as this of Solomons did: So as this of Solomons was in a Shadow Ordained to be, and had Promises belonging to it, and a Reverence peculiar to it; though it was but a dwelling in darkness, as Verse 12. of 1 Kings 28. and in a Shadow.

This Temple likewise signified God's Church and Saints on Earth, and in Heaven likewise, as those in whom God dwells by so intimate a Presence. Which Inhabitation of his in them, is by derivation from and in the vertue of that personal union that the Man Jesus (Typed by the Ark) had with the Son of God, and dwelling in him therewith.

By these things forelaid, the Subject Matter of Solomons wonderment [Will God indeed dwell on Earth ?] doth prove to be really and indeed intended (though thus veyled under the Temple, and Solomons Admiration so Immense a God should dwell in it) of a Wonderment that this God should vouchsafe to dwell in the Temple of Christ's human Nature (as Christ himself calls his body John 2. 19.) And the fulness of the Godhead bodily fill and possess it; and that then through him, in the hearts of all his Saints, his Mystical Body, whether in Earth or Heaven, united unto him as the Head.———And we that live under the New Testament, and understand the Mystery of all these things, should therefore fall into a far deeper astonishing admiration, with ravishment, at the thoughts of this, as Solomon did at God's dwelling in his Temple, and this, when we shall further consider that Solomon in this his Prayer of Consecration of his Temple, did therein sustein the Type of our Jesus, consecrating his flesh and human Nature, by strong cries, and tears, and humblings of himself to his Father, whereof the 16th. Psalm, and 22th. Psalm, (made for him) are evidences; as also his Story, and the Epistle to the Hebrews shew. So that indeed this Argument in hand will rise in this: That the Man Jesus, wondred as much at his own advancement unto this Honour, That God should vouchsafe to dwell Personally in so sorry and poor a Man as Himself (considered as a Creature) was. And that he says as well as Solomon, (for Solomon doth it as representing Him.) And will God indeed dwell in a Tabernacle of flesh ? And by vertue of that union take Me up into Glory ? So near himself, that I should be able to say, I in my Father, and my Father in Me! Oh wonderful! And if all this will not make an impression hereof on you, that even this done to Christ (who is that Holy thing, That Holy One, &c.) is matter of such astonishment; Then add to this of Solomons, that other more clear Testimony of David his Father, in Psal. 8. wherein, whether you understand David himself as a Prophet, taking up the like Agastment to speak in his own Person, or whether in the Name and Person of Christ, he utters it as that which the Man Jesus as Man should take up; His words of him are these, Vers. 4, 5, 6. What is Man that thou art mindful of him ? and the Son of Man that thou visiteſt him? For thou hast made him a little lower than the Angels, and hast Crowned him with Glory and Honour. Thou hast made him to have Dominion over the Works of thy hands: Thou hast put all things under his feet. And that he speaks these things of Jesus as he is Man. The Application the Apostle makes of these words, is properly intended of Christ, so as of no man else in the 2*d.* Chapter to the Hebrews, Vers. 6, 7, 8, 9. do directly shew. But one in a certain place testified, saying, What is Man that thou art mindful of him, or the Son of Man, that thou visiteſt him ? Thou madeſt him a little lower than the Angels, thou Crownedſt him with Glo- ry and Honour, and didſt ſet him over the Works of thy hands. Thou haſt put all things in Subjection under his feet: For, in that he put all things in Subjection under him, he left nothing that is not put under him. But now we ſee not yet all things put under him. But we ſee Jeſus that was made a little lower than the Angels for the ſuffering of death, crowned with glory & honour.--Yea,& it may well be thought that David uttered this, as in the Name and Perſon of the Man Jeſus himſelf; for he had the fulleſt experience, and knew beſt what theſe high and glorious Viſitations of Grace, or dealings of God, proper and peculiar to himſelf, were; and which were ſuch as were vouchſafed to none elſe of the Sons of Men. He therefore had the greateſt cauſe to ſpeak theſe things himſelf unto his Father; who though a Son, learn'd Obedience, and to know what a Man he was in diſtance from God. And ſurely, if David ſpake theſe things of him by way of wonderment, and they therefore being true of him; he therefore did frequently in his Soliloquies with his Father, utter the ſame, or what were equivalent thereto: So as to meditate and ſay to God; O what was I, and what am I, the Son of Man, ſo ſorry a Man that thou ſhouldſt thus viſit me! or, that thou ſhouldſt be thus mindful of me! that is, ſet thy heart ſo on me; To viſit me in my Incarnation at firſt, when thou tookeſt my frail Fleſh into Union with thy eternal Word and Son! And that I ſhould be called The Son of God! and bear the Name of thy Immanuel [God with us] by virtue of that Union: And that thou ſhouldſt then make this Fleſh or Manhood of mine, by being through Death made lower than the Angels, the Means and Inſtruments of ſo great a Service to thee, as to ſave by my Death thine Elect of the Sons of Men? And then, after that work performed, I ſhould be crowned with Glory and Honour, far above all Principalities and Powers, and have Dominion over all the Works of thy Hands, and have all things put under my feet? My Brethren, you may extract much of the Subſtance of this Language out of many Paſſages in John 17. and his Prayer in the Garden: As to which latter, the 7th and 8th Verſes of the 5th Chapter to the Hebrews, I take to be a Comment upon it; Who in the days of his fleſh, when he had offered up Prayers and Supplications, with ſtrong crying and tears unto him that was able to ſave him from death; and was heard in that he feared: Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he ſuffered. Chap. 5.

And now when thou haſt ſeen Solomon, David, and Chriſt himſelf, wondring at this, then return to thy ſelf and fall down afore this God, and wonder at thy ſelf, and the reſt of thy Fellow Sinners, That God ſhould deſign thus to viſit and mind thee and them, and ſay, O what is man that thou art mindful of him! That we, ſuch Worms and Wretches, ſhould be thus, and in this manner ſo highly honoured, as for the high God to dwell in us: And will God indeed dwell in ſuch Houſes of Clay, mingled with ſin, and makes us his Temple! Thus, 2 Cor. 6. 16. you are the Temple of the living God. And Rev. 21. 2, 3. And I John ſaw the holy City; New Jeruſalem coming down from God out of Heaven, prepared as a Bride adorned for her Husband. Behold, the Tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them; and they ſhall be his People, and God himſelf ſhall be with them, and be their God. Where the Church is deſcribed, 1. By her Union with Chriſt, Verſ. 2. as being his Bride: And then by their union with God, and his dwelling in them, Verſ. 3. And if Solomon wondred God ſhould dwell in that his Temple made of the beſt and glorioſeſt of inanimate Creatures the World affords, but ſuch as never had diſpleaſed him: And if David and the Man Jeſus wonder, that God ſhould ſo dwell in him, who was the Holy One of God; How much more, that he ſhould dwell in us, who were once Temples of Satan, and in whom, at preſent, ſin dwells, as Rom. 7. 20. O infinite Grace!

And having thus led you along through theſe windings, and landed you at the ſame Point we began with; let your thoughts thus poſſeſſed, return again to our Prophet Eſay, who raiſeth this wonder farr higher than Solomon did, and reflect with your ſelves and ſay: Oh, that ever that God that hath not the Heaven of Heavens only to dwell in, which yet cannot contain him; but that hath had Eternity to dwell in ſtill, ſhould ever ordain to dwell

Book II. in a Cottage that was built but yesterday, and take that up for his Eternal Habitation, Cages of sin and Uncleanness, and bring Eternity down with him, the fullness of God into so narrow a Heart, yea, and to fill them, in the end, with all the fullness of God, as in that 3d to the Ephes. Vers. 19. you have it: That the whole blessedness of God should come down into thy Heart, who extendeth himself to fill all Eternity, both past and to come, in one instant: And because thou wert not extant then with him, during his Eternity, nor knewest none of what his thoughts were then; For him to bring with him down into thy Soul all the thoughts of love and affection, and all his dearest delights he had then of thee and in thee, during that Eternity (whereof you read, Prov. 8.) when he was alone, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost together; and so possess thee of his Eternity past, as farr as it is possible for thee to be possessed of it: And to gratifie thee so far as to open the full Mistery of his will, the intimacies of his Counsels so farr as they do concern thee: To discover the manifold contrivements his Wisdom impregnated of Love, intended aforehand; and forecast, how to shew his Love in the most ample and gracefull way to thee, thereby to take thy heart: He will bring down, I say, with him into thy heart, all those everlasting transactions he had with Christ about thee: All the Promises he made to him for thee (as Tit. 1.2.) All the blessings which in his own Gracious Purposes he had continually a design of blessing thee with in Christ: That these and all other the deep things of God (the bottom of his Heart) as the Apostle styles them, which Eye hath not seen, nor Ear heard, but which God then was a preparing for them that were to love him, these he will Reveal; whereof some, and in part, his Spirit (who searcheth the deep things of God) doth now in this Life upon sense of Union, begin to make known, as things freely given us of God. And the whole that remains, will God himself in that other World, fully unfold and relate unto thee, for the space of another Eternity yet to come, as being time little enough to do it in: For, Oh! how many are thy thoughts to us-ward! If I would declare and speak of them, they are more than can be numbred, says he, that was our Friend and his Counsellour, Psal. 40. 5. and that That Psalm was penned for him, the next Verse shews.

Again 4ly, in Isai. 66. 1. you have this also mentioned: Thus saith the Lord, the Heaven is my throne, and the earth is my foot-stool; and where is the House ye build me, and where is my Rest? And in, Isai. 57. 15. I that dwell in the high and holy place, It is I that dwell with you and in you: That is, that he, who hath built himself a Throne for himself; which is in Heaven, an high and holy place: as Nebuchadnezzar forsooth, says, he built himself a Pallace, for the Glory of his Majesty (so he foolishly boasted) that this God should choose to build another Throne for himself to dwell in, in a poor and broken Spirit; and therein by Grace to reign, as Rom. 5.21. as being a Spirit, of all other, so disposed and framed, as to give Grace the honour and Dominion of all. Kings use to say, That the Hearts of their Subjects are their surest and best Throne; and to sit in which, they most delight. And be assured of it, that God accounts your hearts a greater Throne, than what that high and holy place, the local Heaven is to him, which is called Holy, because the Glory of the holy God doth so appear there, as no unclean thing did ever enter it, or can abide in it; and that God Magnifies this place so much that he hath holy Spirits with him there, and none other; whose holy Hearts, and the Glory they give him therein, he accounts a farr more glorious Throne than the place; For it was for them he did build and prepare the place, as Christ speaks, John 14. 3. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto my self, that where I am, there you may be also. and Heb. 11. 16. But now they desire a better Countrey, that is, an heavenly: Wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God: for he hath prepared for them a City. And thus much is insinuated in Isai. 66. 1. where God first asketh them the question, where is the place of my rest, and abode? He speaks it to these Templers (as I may call those Jews that cryed, The Temple of the Lord, The Temple of the Lord) where is it can you imagine (says God) I should have Room or Rest in? A sufficient Dwelling, wherein

I may dwell like my self; Dwell like a God, so great a God as I am? What? Will you confine me to your Temple, and think that House good enough for me, that have Heaven for my Throne? When he had thus confuted them, he answers it himself: I have spied out a place for my Rest, you little think of; yea, which you generally despise, even a poor broken Spirit; and I will Rest in my love there, as Zeph. 3. 17. for ever, and seek no further: And not Rest only, but sit down therein with the greatest Joy and full contentment: The Lord thy God——will Rejoyce over thee with joy: He will Rest in his love; he will joy over thee with singing: It's his love causeth him to do it; and they are a poor People, Vers. 12. even as here in Isai. he also characters them. Chap. 5.

5. The Earth is my foot-stool: And I could kick it, or tread it to Dust and Nothingness, if I pleased, as well as I trample upon it now as my foot-stool. Well, but these poor contrite Souls, whom I have look'd at, Vers. 2. and have look'd at, and had in my eye from everlasting, these Clods of Earth and Dust; these Worms creeping on this Earth (yea, these small Pieces, and small Motes and Atomes of this Earth, compared to the whole of it;) these I have taken into my everlasting Arms, and taken up into my Bosom to dwell in them, even whilst I make the whole Earth my foot-stool; and they shall sit on my Sons Throne, as a Queen doth with her Lord, and he sits on my Throne, as Rev. 3. 21. To him that overcometh will I give to sit with me in my Throne: Even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his Throne.

6. Whose Name is Holy: And so holy, as the Heavens I dwell in, which I call my high and holy place, are not pure in my sight; that is, do not come up to that holiness which I am fully delighted in: And yet I, this highly holy One, will be one with these sinners; and that they are sinners, and their sins is that that humbles them, and breaks their Hearts, and doth it whilst they look upon me in my Holiness, who am so holy, as I cannot endure to behold any iniquity; and who, if I had chosen for Holiness, would have chosen the Angels that fell, whom I made excelling in Holiness, as well as strength; I chose the humble, poor, and contrite Spirits, broken for their Sins, and the miserablest and remotest in their condition, from any such a preferment and favour as this, to be vouchsafed them: Yea, and in their own thoughts, the fartherest off of all the Rest of my Creation, looking with trembling at my Word, fearing the shaking of every leaf therein; at every example of my wrath upon others; at every threatning; yea, lest I should in wrath Swear against them as I have done against others; lest I should tread on them, as Men use to do on Worms, whilst they lye Crawling with their Mouths in the dust, if there may be hope.

But what is the reason he should affect thus to Unite with such to choose, and so should ordain them to be such then when he chose them: That whereas he had respect in his Choice to nothing in the Creature to move him, for which he should first choose them. He would shew he had not, by this, that those he chose, he ordained with all to be such as should neither really have any thing to respect, and in their own apprehensions of themselves, utterly, without any thing in themselves, he should regard: But the clean contrary; which, their being termed the Poor, and Humble and contrite, do both here in the Prophet, and up and down in Christ's Speeches, import; he decreed them therefore to be such, and to work these apprehensions and dispositions of Spirit in them, to prepare them for this Union, and to accompany it when it should come to be actually bestowed on them. The pure Creatures, had they stood without his Election Grace, had been too full, too rich, and apt to Reign, in some respect, without him; and all the rest of Mankind that fell, are full of themselves, of their own Righteousness, and their Bellies are filled with his hid treasure of outward Comforts, Priviledges, &c. and they are all (whilst remaining such, too full for God to dwell in, Intus existens prohibet alienum, there is no Room for him (as of Christ 'twas said at his Birth) in the Inns. There is not a Creature-emptiness in them, to take me in, to the full of my Goodness, that so I alone might fill them: And says God, I bring Reader bring fullness enough with me where I come; the fullness of my Godhead which filleth all in all; and I need no addition from what is in my Creature; and the emptier my Creatures are, the more Receptivity and Capacity there is of me, to take up my dwelling in, and whole possession of them: And therefore their Poverty, Vacuity, and Brokenness of Heart, not only as Sinners, but as Creatures, and their becoming in their own eyes, stripped and devested of all their Excellencies they had, or might imagine to have, as such; even to be brought to nought in whatever they may think they are, (as the Apostle's word is) this makes them fit for my Godhead to fill. And these, are the meet Matches, for him with all readiness to close with: Then, when they can no way subsist in themselves; nor have comfort in their own being any longer without him; nor in any thing else besides him; nor bear up their own Souls from sinking, even to nothing, and worse than nothing; and are become actually, and in their desires, nothing in Comforts; nothing in their own righteousness; nothing in their own Ends and Aims; nothing in their own Abilities to any Good; nothing in any Creature Priviledge: And that when they look back unto their best Estate by Creation, they see their subjectness to Vanity, and continually to have faln and lose all (as they did) when the Soul is thus humble under its Creatureship, and the Vanity of that; and likewise of Sin, and its sinful condition: Now, says God, looking at the disposition of such a Soul, now shall I be God alone in the heart of this Man; here I see a Seat to erect a Throne to my self in; when I come to joyn with this Man, I alone shall be exalted in thay day; and he that glorieth, will Glory in the Lord; and my design in my Election is, that no flesh should Glory in my Presence, or where I come to dwell and reside, and manifest my presence, in, 1. Cor. 1. 28, 29. 31. And base things of the World, and things which are despised, hath God chosen; yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are. That no flesh should glory in his presence. That according as it is written, he that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord.

Again, If God would have the whole of Glory intirely to and for himself, these empty nothingnesses are fully fitted to give it to all wholly to him; and to entertain him upon his own terms of being glorified as himself can of Creatures. But above all, these are prepared to give him the Glory of his Grace, which is this Condition will be sure to be acknowledged, and to be adored as the Donour and Founder of all unto them.

To Conclude; there is not, nor could there have been a greater demonstration given, that God had no respect to what is in us, for which he chose us, than that he should design, together with his choosing us, to bring us, (in the deepest sense of our own hearts) unto this utter emptiness of all respect for which God should regard us; and choose out this as the highest and most pleasing frame or qualification of Heart in us, upon which he should promise, to come and dwell in us, or rather declare, that he doth dwell in us.

CHAP. VI.

The Primordial or Foundation Motives in the Heart of God, that moved him to Affect, Design, and Decree so high an Union of Creatures with himself, as they are expressed in Christ's Prayer, John 17. The first Motive was to manifest and declare God's Name, and to illustrate his Grace and Mercy to the Sons of Men.

THE Holy Spirit, who is the Intercessor in us, and who searcheth the deep things of God, doth offer, prompt, and suggest to us in our Prayers, those very Motives that are in God's heart, to grant the thing we desire of him: So as it often comes to pass, that a poor Creature is carried on to speak God's very heart to himself, and then God cannot, nor doth not deny. But yet therein the Spirit prays not immediately himself, but forms those Prayers in us; so as we are they that pray. But,

Here is one, [illegible] intimate with God, as the Spirit himself is, who here prays himself personally unto God, and was of Counsel with God from everlasting: And therefore surely, when he shall speak to God for any thing, and go about to move his Father thereto, he must needs utter the bottom of what did move him from everlasting, and will move him now to bestow it. He speaks the Intimacies of things between his Father and himself, which are privately known to them, with the Holy Spirit alone.

And truly, methinks when I read this Prayer, and therein his pleadings and memorials to his Father, I am admitted into the Cabinet Council of Heaven, and am made privy to what were and had been the bottom grounds that swayed that great Consultation from Eternity, unto that determination which he prayeth to be accomplished. Likewise, it became Christ, that as the thing prayed for (our Union) was the highest and utmost good that was to be, or could be prayed for by him for us; so answerably, to bring forth the deepest Motive in God's heart to urge him withal to grant it; for he was his Father's Counsellor, and prays accordingly.

Non ex nudo tantum fidei & charitatis sensu Christus Orat, sed ingressus, ante oculos habet arcana patris judicia: Calv. on John 17. v. 9.

The Inducements are many: I shall single forth Two principal grand Ones, of those which we find here in this Prayer: which Two do yet make Three; The latter being divided into Two.

1. The Manifestation of God's Name, that is, of God himself, in his Perfections towards us, especially of his Love and Grace; in his doing of which, God's manifestative glory, as it is made to us, doth consist.

2. The second is taken from the Oneness in Essence, and then the intimacy and sweetness of Communion that was and had been from everlasting between his Father and himself, as Persons, and so amongst the three Persons themselves, the [Us] and the [We] spoken of vers. 11. and 21.

There is a Third, from the Interest of Jesus Christ, as God-Man, and from the love his Father bears him, his Son, as first set up to be personally united to that Man Jesus, and in him and through him, cast and diffused upon his Elect, as they be considered in him, and for his sake, with difference from the world. But this I shall refer unto another Head, of Christ's Election as he is God-Man, and his Interest in our Election.

Book II. bring fullneſs enough with me where I come; the fullneſs of my Godhead which filleth all in all; and I need no addition from what is in my Creature; and the emptier my Creaturds are, the more Receptivity and Capacity there is of me, to take up my dwelling in, and whole poſſeſſion of them: And therefore their Poverty, Vacuity, and Brokenneſs of Heart, not only as Sinners, but as Creatures, and their becoming in their own eyes, ſtripped and deveſted of all their Excellencies they had, or might imagine to have, as ſuch; even to be brought to nought in whatever they may think they are, (as the Apoſtle's word is) this makes them fit for my Godhead to fill. And theſe, are the meet Matches, for him with all readineſs to cloſe with: Then, when they can no way ſubſiſt in themſelves; nor have comfort in their own being any longer without him; nor in any thing elſe beſides him; nor bear up their own Souls from ſinking, even to nothing, and worſe than nothing; and are become actually, and in their deſires, nothing in Comforts; nothing in their own righteouſneſs; nothing in their own Ends and Aims; nothing in their own Abilities to any Good; nothing in any Creature Priviledge: And that when they look back unto their beſt Eſtate by Creation, they ſee their ſubjectneſs to Vanity, and continually to have faln and loſe all (as they did) when the Soul is thus humble under its Creatureſhip, and the Vanity of that; and likewiſe of Sin, and its ſinful condition: Now, ſays God, looking at the diſpoſition of ſuch a Soul, now ſhall I be God alone in the heart of this Man; here I ſee a Seat to erect a Throne to my ſelf in; when I come to joyn with this Man, I alone ſhall be exalted in thay day; and he that glorieth, will Glory in the Lord; and my deſign in my Election is, that no fleſh ſhould Glory in my Preſence, or where I come to dwell and reſide, and manifeſt my preſence, in, 1. Cor. 1. 28, 29. 31. And baſe things of the World, and things which are deſpiſed, hath God choſen; yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are. That no fleſh ſhould glory in his preſence. That according as it is written, he that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord.

Again, If God would have the whole of Glory intirely to and for himſelf, theſe empty nothingneſſes are fully fitted to give it to all wholly to him; and to entertain him upon his own terms of being glorified as himſelf can of Creatures. To Conclude; there is not, nor could there have been a greater demonſtration given, that God had no reſpect to what is in us, for which he choſe us, than that he ſhould deſign, together with his chooſing us, to bring us, (in the deepeſt ſenſe of our own hearts) unto this utter emptineſs of all reſpect for which God ſhould regard us; and chooſe out this as the higheſt and moſt pleaſing frame or qualification of Heart in us, upon which he ſhould promiſe, to come and dwell in us, or rather declare, that he doth dwell in us.

The Inducements are many: I shall single forth Two principal grand Ones, of those which we find here in this Prayer: which Two do yet make Three; The latter being divided into Two.

But this I shall refer unto another Head, of Christ's Election as he is God-Man, and his Interest in our Election.

I. MOTIVE:

To manifeſt and declare God's Name.

THis he mentions firſt and laſt of his Prayer: The firſt at the ſixth Verſe, (where our intereſt begins to be mentioned) I have manifeſted thy name unto the men which thou gaveſt me out of the World: There Election is made the ground why he did declare God's Name to them: And therefore had been the Move in God's heart, why he had by Election given them unto Chriſt: Thine they were, and thou gaveſt them me; the force of which lieth in this, that becauſe he had deſigned them by Election to be his, he did ordain that he ſhould manifeſt his Name to them, as that which had moved him to elect them. Then again, Verſ. 26. I have declared thy Name, and will declare it; which is at the Concluſion of his Prayer.

We muſt firſt explain what is meant by God's Name.

I. In General; God's Name is God himſelf; and expreſſes what he is that is the only true God, as he had ſaid verſe 1. when it is ſaid, Bleſs the Name of the Lord, that is, God himſelf: What is his Name, or his Sons Name, canſt thou tell? as Prov. 30. 4. and Ezek. 36. 22. his Name is put for his Glory. Now that this was the great deſign of God, to have his Name declared by Chriſt, in ſuch a manner as never before, Pſal. 22. ſhews; which as in Chriſts Name it prophecieth of his being crucified in the fore-part, ſo the effect and conſequent of that being crucified is, I will declare thy Name unto my Brethren, in the midſt of the Congregation I will praiſe thee, verſe 22. which is quoted alſo Hebr. 2. 12. And this declaring of his Name, and this great Congregation is not to his Saints only upon Earth, it reacheth to Heaven, and unto all that ſhall be there manifeſted: Verſe 26. When he ſaith, I have declared what he had already done upon Earth, and I will declare, it was not only what he would do while they were upon Earth, but in Heaven alſo: So as the declaring of God's Name is the great deſign of God in this World to his Saints, and to be perfected for ever in the World to come.

2. Chriſt came not only to open what God's Name was, as it was more frequently held forth afore in the Word, as explaining the Attributes of God, as they are ſet forth in the Pſalms, and elſewhere, not ſo much as to open the heart of God in the continuance of our Salvation, and the bottom foundations of them.

3. Eſpecially therefore to lay open his grace, and love, and mercy to Mankind, that was the moſt eminent peculiar Subject of Chriſt's declaring God's Name: So 'tis expreſly ſaid by Chriſt himſelf, verſ. 26. I have declared thy Name and will declare it, that thy love may be in them: So then that part of his Name eſpecially is it Chriſt pretended: With which accords that paſſage, Pſal. 138. 2. I will praiſe thy Name for thy loving-kindneſs, and for thy truth, for thou haſt magnified thy word above all thy Name: The true intimate meaning whereof is this, Thou haſt magnified that part of thy Word that ſpeaks thy loving-kindneſs, and truth, above all thy Name elſe that is in thy Word: And ſo refers unto that Name proclaimed, Exod. 34. 6. The Lord God gracious and merciful, abundant in goodneſs and truth.

II. To declare thy Name, O Father! (who is the Fountain of the Deity;) This he ſaith in the 25th verſe, Father, the world knoweth thee not, but I have known thee, and I will declare thy Name. Jeſus Chriſt came in an eſpecial manner to open the heart of the Father to the World; John 1. 18. He came out of the boſome of the Father, and he hath explained him; he hath diſintrinſecated him, laid open what is in him, in his thoughts, purpoſes, and ends of ſending him into the World: The Deſign of his Preaching in his Sermon in the Goſpel of John, is to let open his Father's heart, and his own as the Son:

Son: And this is the knowledge which he boasts of, as proper to himself, and magnifieth; Father, I have known thee, verse 25. that was Christ's eminent skill and learning, and therefore I declare, and teach it, vers. 26. Though all the Treasures of Wisdom besides were in him, yet he magnified this Wisdom above all. Chap. 6.

III. The declaring the Father was to declare also the other two Persons, how they are in God, and that himself, the Son, proceeded from God the Father. The Father, as he is the Fountain of the Deity, so he is set for the Three.

In a word, all in God, is reduced to these two: 1. The perfection of the Divine Nature of the God-head it self: And, 2. the three Persons subsisting therein, and injoying of those perfections; and the manifestation of these Persons, and of their joynt Counsels and Offices about our Salvation, are the great Subjects of Christ's preaching, especially in the Gospel of John: And I am to shew how these were the original Inducements to him, for God is Primordially moved with nothing out of himself. And therefore I have singled forth these Two out of the many other Motives, which Christ useth in this Prayer, (as namely, that One I mentioned of his own Interest as God-man) which yet I here leave out, and refer to another place; because as he is such, it is a thing out of God himself, and set up by Election as we are.

These things first explaining what God's Name is, I come secondly, to shew how this was a Motive: For which there are these Demonstrations.

1. It's the Nature of Perfection to manifest it self, and so it is in God: And to be brought unto Union with God, is the utmost perfection of the Creature: I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made PERFECT IN ONE, verse 23. and so unto the uttermost, that they were capable of. Now it is the Nature of true Perfection to manifest it self: Our Saviour here expresseth it by the word [manifest] this Name, which accordingly holds forth the reason of the thing it self; for it is a known Rule, That it is the Nature of true Perfection to be manifestativum sui, to manifest it self: And so it is in God, and that moved him. Not that by being known any perfection could be added to himself, but that he might perfect others thereby, as our Saviour here, that they may be made perfect in one, praying for this Union: We see the Creatures desire to manifest their poor and low perfections; but they, because they think themselves perfected by being known to others; which stile God himself indeed condescends to utter himself in, in the manifestation of his perfection, as in that Speech, his power is perfected in weakness, 2 Cor. 12. 8. but in a clean contrary sense the Phrase there imports to be made known, or manifested; that is, to be made kown, or manifested to be most perfect and glorious in and upon occasion of our weakness: For in any other respect than of giving an occasion to discover it self, what perfection can weakness give to power? As for making any such manifestation, there was no necessity or impulse on his part for himself to have done; for his Essence being immense, it is comprehensive and big enough to have contained his own blessedness within himself, without flowing over: He is to himself a perpetual Spring of Happiness, and also a sufficient Cistern to receive, and hold, and retain all the flowings and reflowings thereof, within himself; all falls still back again into himself; which is from the infinite vastness of his Being: And therefore it is a meer act of his Grace and Will, which the Scripture every where so celebrates and attributes this unto.

Besides it was farr from any necessity, or addition to his perfection to have them thus made known; for there were three persons that Communicated in these perfections, that knew, and loved, and delighted as I have shewed elsewhere in each others blessedness.

But then, Secondly, these his perfections being crowned with Goodness and Grace; his goodness moved his Will unto this Communication of himself; and it is as known a Maxim that goodness is sui Communicativum, Psal. 119. 68. Thou art good (in thy Nature) and thou doest good, that follows; and the Book II. greateſt goodneſs He can do us is, to make known his goodneſs; Thus God to Moſes, Exod. 33. 14. I will make all my goodneſs paſs before thee.

But it was not ſimply his goodneſs, but his grace, which is the top perfection of his Name and this Grace our God did value as his choiceſt riches: His Grace, his mercy, you have it up and down in Paul's Epiſtles. And this as it is the excellency of his goodneſs, ſo ſtill helpt forward to make his will to Communicate all his goodneſs; For (mark it) Grace and Mercy are ſuch Attributes as have not himſelf for their Object, though for their Subject, and ſo if any needed a manifeſtation unto Creatures, then theſe. Himſelf indeed is the Object of his own Love, (he loves himſelf) but himſelf is not the Object of his own Grace, to be ſure not of his own Mercy. God is no where ſaid to be gracious or merciful to himſelf, nor is it meet to have it ſaid of him; and therefore in this reſpect he is not ſaid to be rich to himſelf, but as Rom. 10. 12. He is rich to others, even to all that call upon him. God indeed hath a glory ariſing from his own Mercy and Grace, but then it is but what is diſpenſed unto others; the riches thereof are diſpoſeable no way but to the uſe and benefit of Creatures. Well then, ſays God with himſelf, theſe riches lie by me, and I have no uſe of them, and yet I have them: I will therefore put them to uſe, and lay them out upon others, as rich Men do their riches, and lay them out upon ſome Purchaſe; ſo God reſolved that one day ſome body might be the better for them.

And laſtly, to inſtance in no more Particulars, take the reſult of that whole bleſſedneſs which aroſe from the injoyment of his own Perfections, namely the ſweetneſs, the contentment he had in his own happineſs; it moſt ſtrongly moved him to make Creatures Partakers of it. He would not be happy alone; He would have others (as Chriſt expreſſeth his Spirit, and his Fathers alſo, John 17. 3, 24.) who might ſee his Glory, and be glorified in ſeeing of it. And this is made the original of this Goſpel of Salvation, and of our Salvation it ſelf: For what other doth the goſpel hold forth than Gods bleſſed intentions, contrivements, and purpoſes for our Salvation for the glory of his Name, which Chriſt came to preach and declare? The motive thereunto is intimated in one ſmall word added, yet clearly enough, 1 Tim. 1. 11: According to the glorious goſpel [of the bleſſed God.] 'Tis a ſure Rule, wherever you find any ſpecial Attribute of God ſingled forth in connexion with ſome other thing that flows from him, it is ſtill ſuch as is peculiarly effective, or more properly the cauſe of that thing mentioned; and ſo here, the bleſſed God (bleſſed in the injoyment of his own glory) is here inſerted to ſhew what had moved him thereby to make his Creatures Bleſſed, and therefore to contrive the whole of this Goſpel of our Salvation.

But it will be ſaid, If this goodneſs and bleſſedneſs in himſelf were that which moved him, why then ſhewed he not this favour unto All?

The Anſwer is, that is not my part now to ſpeak to; the account thereof belongs to another place: My preſent buſineſs hath been, that whether it ſhould be to many or to all, to manifeſt himſelf was the motive.

The Second Anſwer is, That it was not to many, becauſe Grace was the great thing in his Name he meant to ſhew, and was that which managed his goodneſs, and had the prevalent ſway and hand in this matter, as every where the Scripture aſcribes it, then the glory of this Grace will ſhew itſelf in a free love, and ſo in a choice of the perſons: Says Grace, I am free and will uſe a freedom, and not communicate them to all; I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious: So the words run in Moſes, Exod. 33. 19. I will be merciful to whom I will be merciful: And as, Paul Rom. 3. 18. There is no fear of God before their eyes. And was yet more free in this, and therefore he calls the Elect Veſſels of mercy, ſingled out of mercy, on whom, and unknown, he will make known the riches of his Glory: He compares them to ſmaller Veſſels, and himſelf to the Sea that fills them: And what is it, a created Glory out of himſelf? No, but that glory which is in himſelf which fills them in making them glorious; which is properly his own: And thereupon if it be to be reſolved and determined by the will of God, and the graciousness of his will as concerning what persons, or why not others, then and thereupon the Apostle demands, Rom. 9. 22. 23. What if God, willing to shew his wrath, and make his power known, endured with much long-suffering the Vessels of wrath fitted for destruction; and that he might make known the riches of his glory on the Vessels of mercy, which he had afore-appointed unto glory? This hath still bred a murmuring at God in all ages, even in Davids, who takes Men up for it, Psal. 4. 3. Know the Lord hath set apart him that is godly for himself; and Gods setting him apart is that which made him Godly: And therefore do you all stand in awe, and sin not by murmuring at it; for God will injoy his freedom, having mercy on whom he will. Chap. 6.

CHAP. VII.

The Oneneſs and Intimacy of Communion which the Father, and Son, and Holy Ghoſt, had and have amongſt themſelves, was an Original and Primordial Motive of God's Ordaining us unto Union and Communion with himſelf.

IT is an ancient and renounced ſaying of Nazianzen, Bonum unitatis a Trinitate originem ducit: That this good bleſſing of Unity draws and derives its Riſe andOriginal from the Trinity;that three Perſons ſubſiſting, and being One in the God-head, was the Foundation and Original Inducement for the Union of a Creature with God, or of Perſons of an Intelligent Nature, who only were capable of it.

And that which hath induced me to take this, as a Motive, and not as a bare Exemplar and Sampler of it, is the Inculcation and Reiterated mention by Chriſt, of his, and his Fathers Oneneſs, ſo oft and ſo many ways, in this ſhort Prayer. You find it firſt in Verſ. 11. That they may be One as we are: And again, Verſ. 21. That they all may be One, as thou Father art in me, and I in thee; that they alſo may be One in us. And Verſ. 22. That they may be One as we are One. And then again, Verſ. 23. I in them, and thou in me; That they may be made perfect in One. Theſe ſo many repeated Indigitations, with ſo much urgency, in this laſt ſhort Prayer, I know not how to underſtand them to be only explanations of what kind of Union he meant; (which I intimated before, was yet meant) Or that only their Union was the Pattern or Exemplar of ours, (to which, many interpreters do only carry it;) Nor it is only to ſhew the order and deſcent of our Union, as that firſt, the Father is in Chriſt; which Union of them is the ſupream Rank of Union; and then, Chriſt in us is a lower and inferiour. All theſe, I confeſs, are intended, and as ſuch, intended, and are high Inſtructions and Doctrinal Truths, to be obſerved by us, concerning this Union, from this his ſo praying about it. But he uttering them to his Father, Prayer-wiſe, or in a way of Petition and Supplication, to obtain this Union for us; I cannot but withal conſider them intended alſo as Arguments and Grounds to move him thereunto, as well as any other. And the reſt of the paſſages, are generally ſo underſtood. And there is one word in Verſ. 21. That they [alſo] may be one in us; This word [alſo] hath more in it than what is in Verſ. 11. [As] We are One: Or than that it ſhould barely be to ſignifie, that by way of exemplar or ſimilitude only, they ſhould be One, but it further ſpeaks an Inducement to move his Father to grant it, becauſe he and his Father were One; that therefore [alſo] let them be One in us. Which is as if he had ſaid, thou knoweſt what an intire intimacy of Union hath bin between us, Thou in me, and I in thee; and how ſweet it hath bin unto us: I enjoy it, and thou art and haſt bin intimately delighted in it: Farther (ſays he) be moved to let theſe [alſo] have the like participation of it in us, and with us.

That each of the Perſons in the Trinity do ſpeak One of, and to the other, in this Language of [us] and [We;] and withal, that their being [One] in Eſſence, or in the God head, though Perſons diſtinct therein, is ſignified thereby, I have in a foregoing diſcourſe traverſed the Scriptures to demonſtrate; beginning at Moſes, 1 Gen. Let us make Man, and carried it on throughout unto this very ſpeech of Chriſt's in this Prayer; and found that alone, with other ſuch Scriptures as fall in with it, to illuſtrate it, to be a full and Rich

Vide of the Knowledge of God and Chriſt. Book I. Chap. 2.

Rich Argument of the Trinity of the Persons, and their being One God; so as I sought no other Proof. And I did single out and premise that sole proof, because the pursuit of that truth under the stile of [Us] did happily afore-hand make way for, and especially give light unto this I am now to prosecute upon this Foundation; As we are One. Chap. 7.

At the first making of Man, there was such a Consultation of the Persons held; and God the Father says to the other Two, Let Us make Man according to our Image: Wherein yet, Man's Union with God was then no way expressed or signified by the Union which those three Persons had in the Godhead, either as the Motive unto it, or as the Pattern of it. Nor was that Communion they held, made any Motive or Inducement to make Man; but all that's said, is, That he should be made according to their Image: Whereby, whether the Image of the Divine Perfections in Holiness and Righteousness, or of Christ, as God-man, predestinated afore all Worlds, be meant, is not material here; but only, that a consent and consultation of the Persons was held, to make him such. But here we see, that when this Supercreation Union, whereby the Elect were to be made One with Christ, and so with God his Father, and by consequence with the Holy Ghost indwelling in us also, comes to be spoken of, our Lord doth, as in the Person of the second Person (which he was) as well as of Man, pray to his Father to vouchsafe a like Union unto that of their own between themselves, and as a Motive thereunto, induceth the Oneness themselves had; That they may be One in Us, as We are One.

And look as when the Apostle would move the Saints to be One among themselves, endeavouring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of Peace, as Eph. 4. 3. he there inforceth his perswasive by the Unity of the Three Persons in their Offices or Relations towards us, Vers. 5, 6, 7. There is One God, the Father of all, and One Lord Jesus Christ. There is but one that hath dominion over you all, and there is but one Spirit, which, as the Soul in the Body, enliveneth, enforms, all and every Member. In like manner, when Christ, in Prayer to his Father, would move him to admit and entertain us into that Oneness with the Three Persons themselves, he urgeth it upon the Union and Fellowship those Persons have among themselves; and it is not their having agreed to take several Relations or Offices to us, and for our Salvation, which he specifies and denotates them by (as in that other in Ephes. 4.) but simply their Oneness and Communion one with another.

And although the third Person, the Spirit, is not here in this Prayer specified (as neither is he in usual blessings of wishing Grace, &c. or Doxologies, and Glory be to, &c. but only the Father and the Son) yet elsewhere (besides in that of Genesis, Let us make man, I have shewed) He comes in as one of this Supream [Us] as a third Person, and that as particularly as the Son and Father here; Isai. 6. 8. I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send? and who will go for us? The second Person, the Son, had appeared in Glory, vers. 1. compared with John 12. 41. And who then is this other Person that says, Whom shall [I] send? who also is one of the [Us,] but even the Holy Ghost, who (as Acts 13. 2.) sends out his Ministers, as a distinct single Person of himself: And that it was the Holy Ghost, will be evident, if we also compare Acts 28. 25. And when they agreed not among themselves, they departed, after that Paul had spoken one word, Well spake the Holy Ghost by Esaias the Prophet unto our Fathers. The Apostle applying that Speech in Isaiah expresly unto the Holy Ghost's having uttered and said it. So then, as there in Isaiah, there are but two Persons, the Son and the Spirit, who are in express mentioned, and yet in that [Us] all Three are intended, so here in the [We] and [Us] which Christ speaks in the Language of, unto his Father, the Spirit is also involved and intended.

A Digression. Whether Christ useth this speech [As we are one] as the second Person, or as God-man and Mediator.

Yet I find Calvin to caution against this Interpretation, which the ancient Fathers against Arrius, did so much and so oft betake themselves unto, as a strong Bulwark and Fortress, maintaining and defending the Deity of the second Person in Oneness with the Father [as we are One] they also withal observing, that Oneness of the Persons in the Divine Essence, to be the Pattern or,

or Exemplar of our Union. But Calvin, although he takes notice of this Argument of the Ancients, yet runs Counter, and affirms, That whenever in this Chapter, Chriſt ſpeaks of his being One with his Father, he ſpeaks not ſimply of the Divine Eſſence (or his being One with the Father in reſpect of that Eſſence) but ſpeaks it only as he is God-man and Mediatour. But Gerard herein doth rightly oppoſe him, arguing from that Parallel ſpeech of Chriſt's in Chap. 10. verſ. 30. I and my Father are One: which being taken with Chriſt's own Interpretation of it, Verſe 38. The Father is in me, and I in the Father; (both which are juſt the ſame Speeches that Chriſt uſeth of his Union and the Fathers here) Now, there (ſays he) we muſt underſtand it of the Oneneſs he had with his Father as God, and ſo as ſimply conſidered, a Perſon that was God: And that was it the Jews quarrelled his ſpeech for, that He being a Man, made himſelf God, Verſe 33.

Tenendum eſt quotiès unum ſecum Patre eſſe in hoc capite, pronunciat Chriſtus, ſermonem non haberi ſimpliciter de Divina ejus eſſentia, ſed unum vocari in perſona Mediatoris, et quatenus caput noſtrum Calv in Verſ. 21. John 17.

But I ſhall compound this Difference, and yield unto Calvin thus far, that Chriſt herein prays, both as he is Mediatour and Man, and alſo in the Name and Intereſt of himſelf, as ſecond Perſon, as in many other Paſſages he ſpeaks; and there is no abſurdity in comprehending both, whilſt both Intereſts conduce and are pleadable to obtain the ſame thing. May not any one, who hath two Intereſts or Perſonal Conditions, whereupon to pray for one Individual, uſe Arguments from both? There is no contradiction in ſo doing: As for a Prince to pray as a King, for his Subjects, and as a Man and a Chriſtian, upon a common account; and to urge Motives from either. And if two ſuch pleas may agreeably and ſuitably meet in and under one expreſſion that will comprehend both, who ſhall except againſt this? Eſpecially, when the one of them is the foundation of the other. The truth is, Chriſt hath a double Oneneſs with his Father; thē firſt and original Oneneſs, as he is ſecond Perſon, one God with his Father; and this is the Soveraign, Eſſential, and Supream Rank of Oneneſſes which is proper to the Trinity, it is the Oneneſs of the firſt Three ſimply and alone conſidered amongſt themſelves. But ſecondly, there being an admiſſion and aſſumption of the Man Jeſus (who ſpake this) into a Perſonal Union with the Son of God, the ſecond Perſon, he thereby is become free of the [U S] or of the Company of the Perſons, and one with them: In reſpect of which Union, the Man Jeſus, might and doth ſay, as on our behalf, Let them be one with us, as I am with thee, O Father: And this Union is a lower Union than the firſt, and the firſt is the original and the ground of this: And when one Intereſt is the ground and original of another, we may very well underſtand both to be comprehended in ſuch a ſpeech, but yet eſpecially that which is the original one; for it is in the vertue of that, that the ſecondary and derived one comes to have its Exiſtence: And therefore his being One with God, as ſecond Perſon, is chiefly to be attended in the ſaying, That they may be one, as we are one, &c.

Look then, as in the forecited place, John 10. 30. he ſays, I and my Father are one, he there ſpeaks both as ſecond Perſon, and that in that reſpect he is own in Power, Will, &c. with God his Father (for in reſpect of equal power it is, he ſpeaks it, as the former ſpeeches, in verſ. 28. and 29. do ſhew:) the ſame holds true in all other eſſential Attributes of the Godhead, that as ſuch, he is one with the Father in them (which is the primary and fundamental Oneneſs) and yet withal, we muſt take in the Man Jeſus, who being one Perſon with that ſecond Perſon, (who was thus one God with his Father) that he alſo in a true ſenſe ſpeaks it, as appears by his own Explanation of that former ſpeech: Say ye, Thou blaſphemeſt, becauſe I ſaid I am the Son of God? and ſo one in Eſſence with God: And then, verſ. 37. and 38. If I do not the works of my Father, believe me not: but if I do, though ye believe not me, believe the works; that ye may know and believe that the Father is in me, and I in him: which he ſpeaks as God-man, as well as ſecond Perſon; for he refers himſelf as to the Evidence of this, That he was in the Father, and the Father in him: (which is all one, and to be One with God, as verſe 30.) unto the works put forth viſibly ſibly by him, as he was a man viſible afore them, whom they heard to utter it: Believe me for the works ſake, that the Father is in me, and I in him; and ſo that I am the Son of God, and therefore as Man one with the Son of God, who is one God with the Father. In like manner, when here in Prayer he ſays, My Father and I are One, this ſpeech is to be underſtood as comprehending both theſe Unions, both as Son of God, as ſecond Perſon, and alſo God-man, through Union with that Perſon. Chap. 7.

Thus much in Anſwer to Calvin's Caution: And for a General Introduction unto this ſecond Motive from the Three Perſons.

Book II.

SECTION I.

The ſecond Motive in God's Heart, drawn from the Union and communion of the Three Perſons in the Trinity, branched into Two Particulars: The Firſt is, That their Union in Eeſſnce or their common Enjoyment of one, and the ſame God-head, did move them to make Creatures Partakers of ſuch an Enjoyment, as far as they could poſſibly be capable of it.

THis Motive, drawn from the Trinity, divides itſelf into two Branches, which in themſelves are diſtinct, and apart to be conſidered,

1. Their Oneneſs in Eſſence; Or that the Father and Son and Spirit, have in their common and bleſſed Enjoyment, one and the ſame God-head, and all the Perfections thereof: And how this did move them to make Creatures partakers of the ſame Enjoyment, as far as Creatures poſſibly are capable of.

2. The ſecond is, their mutual entercourſe and Society, as Perſons, one with another, and the ſweetneſs of that converſe thoſe three Perſons had among themſelves; that, That alſo was an inducement, to take up Creature-fellowſhip and Communion into a participation of that ſweet Society.

Theſe are different Notions and Conſiderations; the firſt being founded upon the Oneneſs of the three Perſons in an One Enjoyment of that One Godhead: The other, upon their Converſes had between themſelves, as Perſons ſubſiſting in that Godhead, glorifying, loving, and ſpeaking to each other, from everlaſting.

The firſt of theſe I found upon, John 17. Verſ. 10. and 11. And all mine are thine, and thine are mine, and I am Glorified in them. And now I am no more in the World, and I come to thee; holy Father, keep through thine Own Name, thoſe whom thou haſt given me, THAT THEY MAY BE ONE AS WE ARE.

In which words the grand and final Petition, and in which all the reſt of the words do center, is that ſhort clauſe at the cloſe of Verſ. 11. that they may be one, even as we are one: But he had premitted as a foundation thereunto, (or for a fore-explanation rather,) what it was he meant to comprehend in the laſt words of that petition, As we are one: And the words he premits that do fore-explain his clauſe, are the firſt words of Verſ. 10. All things that are mine, are thine; and thine, are mine: And theſe two paſſages which are the firſt and laſt in thoſe two verſes, are to be brought together, and more cloſely connected, as holding the neareſt intimacy, (as will appear:) But yet there is the interpoſition of another petition, before this laſt grand one, that coming between keeps them two paſſages a long while aſunder, and from cloſing each with other; untill he ſhould finiſh that other Petition; And that intervening requeſt is, Holy Father, keep them which thou haſt given me through thine own Name: And to inſinuate that to keep them in Holineſs, is that which he means, he accordingly compellates, or calls upon his Father under the Title or Attribute of Holy Father; thereby ſuiting the Attribute to the thing prayed for, as that which was to be the cauſe proper of the thing prayed for as the effect, and the fitteſt motive thereunto; which is frequently done in Scripture prayers. Now this ſomewhat long Petition with theſe adjacents coming between thoſe two, firſt Verſ. 10. and laſt passages Verſ. 11. mentioned; the laſt of them (which I call the grand Petition) that they may be One, as we are One, at the firſt appearance ſeems wholly, and only to joyn, or connect with, or belong to that long intervening Petition; whereunto he prefixeth this motive alſo: And now I am no more in the World, but theſe are in the World, and I come to thee. The Petition is to keep them in Holineſs; and that whilſt they are in the World: Keep them in holineſs, that they may be One as we are One: And it is true, theſe do relate and connect thus together; but they do not ſolely, or only refer thus together: As if that they may be One, &c. were cut off from, and had nothing at all to do with thoſe other ſo diſtant words at the beginning of Verſ. 10. All that are mine are thine; &c. whereas indeed there is the neareſt alliance and affinity, yea, identity between the very laſt words, As we are One, with thoſe firſt words, All mine are thine, and thine are mine: Both of them are perfectly One and the ſame in ſenſe and ſubſtance, and a plain explanation the one of the other: For, for Chriſt to ſay to his Father, All mine are thine, and thine are mine, is all one as to ſay, we are One: For the firſt ſignifies that there is nothing, that we have diviſion, apart, as Calvin's word is, and muſt therefore be one; ſo perfectly doth this expreſs their Unity: When therefore Chriſt ſhall, in the cloſe of this grand Petition, make this as his great ground and foundation, to obtain this like Union on our parts, both with himſelf, and his Father, and urge and plead [as we are one] which imports both, that becauſe we are one; as alſo after the ſimilitude of our being one; let them be ſo: And when we, to find that declaration that went before (and indeed ſtands alone) All mine are thine, and thine mine, to be the moſt exquiſite (though in larger words) deſcription or periphraſis to ſet out what and wherein the Unity of theſe two Perſons [we] doth conſiſt, then certainly that ſpeech, All mine are thine, muſt moſt rationally be conceived by us to have been intended and forelaid as a like ground, and plea for this our Union alſo, and withal explanatory of it: And being one and the ſame in ſubſtance and effect of ſenſe, it muſt be accounted that Chriſt doth, both at the beginning of this part of his Prayer, and again in the cloſe, enforce this for us; with a doubled repeated ſtrength: In the firſt, that ſeeing we are ſo much one, that all things the one of us have, the other hath; and thou having deſigned an Oneneſs for them with us, let them attain a participation of the ſame; that all things that are thus ours, may be theirs alſo together with us: And then again, that in the cloſe he ſhould reiterate, that they may be One as we are; this drives the nail home to the head a ſecond time, and at laſt: And herein we may diſcern our Lord his vehement zeal and deſires for us, to have this our Union granted and accompliſhed with his Father and himſelf; and that it ſhould be ſure to be ſuch a Union, that is as like unto their own Union, as was poſſible, in the participation of all things which themſelves have in common between them: And this he ſhews, he deſires above all things elſe which his Soul did, or indeed could deſire for them; which argues the depth of his love and dear affection to us: And indeed, there is nothing is, or can be above this: And you ſee how expreſs he is, to ſet out what he meaneth by that oneneſs he Prays for, and wherein it conſiſteth, in ſo exquiſite a deciphering of it; namely, Verſ. 10. that it was a participation of all things with God, and Chriſt; which themſelves have one with another: No leſs, than that all that is Gods, might be theirs; than which, there is not a more comprehenſive and greater bleſſedneſs (as to the matter of it) to be conceived or imagined.

Chap. 7.

You may now alſo eaſily diſcern the reaſon, why he brought in that interpoſed Petition; that they might be kept in Holineſs whilſt they were in this World, afore he would conclude with that final grand Petition; that (ſo) they may be One, &c. which yet was his general Aim, and Center, wherein all lines afore in Verſ. 10, and 11. do meet. It was to an advantage that the bringing in of that was delayed to the laſt: Here are two things differing, that are the ſeveral Subjects of theſe two ſeveral Petitions: the Firſt, is the accompliſhment of a perfect union of us with Chriſt, and God, to be attained in the life to come: (For it is the perfection of our Union, which Chriſts Heart and Eye was intent upon in this prayer, as appears by Verſe 24.) And this is the laſt Petition, on, and final concluſion of all, that they may be One. The ſecond is for the means, in order to the attainment thereof; that they may be kept in holineſs, and this throughout the reſt of their time in this life: And this is in the intervening Petition, ſubordinate to the laſt, as a means to an end; [that] they may be One; as the Particle ἵνα, that doth ſhew: And this being kept he prays for, as that which in this World was to be done for them, ſo expreſly; theſe are in the World, and [Now] keep them, &c. And therefore the Oneneſs, in order to the attainment of which, He intends this, their being kept, &c. is principally that Union at the end with him, in the other World; which alſo this falls in to confirm, it is, that all things of Gods, and Chriſts, do become theirs: And ſo makes them as entirely One with God, and Chriſt, as meer Creatures can be: 'Tis he that overcometh, ſhall inherit all things, and I will be his God, and he ſhall be my Son, Rev. 21. 7. And they do but narrow it, who underſtand it only of our Oneneſs one with another; and who limit it yet further, unto that which ought to be in this life; which I have ſpoken to elſewhere. Now then although that firſt paſſage at the beginning of Verſe 10. All mine are thine, &c. might preſently have had to ſucceed it, that laſt Petition at the end, That (ſo) they may be one, according to the true tenor of Chriſt's meaning in thoſe other words; yet our Lord to make his prayer yet more full, and comprehenſive, he choſe to fetch in, and interweave this other, which he knew was the neceſſary means for the attainment of compleat Union; and ſuſpends that concluſive One, that they may be One; which was the end, and aim of all, until that was finiſht: And then doth at once bring in what was his aim; and the Elixar of that his premiſed Speech, All mine is thine, &c. Take both the deſcription alſo of what that Oneneſs was he prayed for; take it alſo as it imported the moſt bottom ground, and ſtrongeſt Motive to obtain it at his Fathers hands; that ſeeing we are both ſo happy, as that all things are mutually one anothers, let them all be theirs alſo, according to thine own intendment: And then you will ſee which was the end, why he would have them kept in Holineſs without fail throughout this life, and indeed it is the great end, the greateſt we can arrive at, and the end of all the words; into which as into the common Sea, or Receptacle of all, thoſe remoter words, All mine, &c. do with the fuller ſtream pour forth, and empty themſelves moſt of all.

In fine to ſum up all, (for I would be underſtood) it is as if Chriſt had ſaid; Oh Father! ſeeing that all things whatſoever in the God-head, or any way belonging to the God-head, being in common mine as thine, and thine as mine; and in that community, that unity and communion of us both conſiſts; and is that whereby we as two Perſons are One; communicating in all theſe; yea, and that withall theſe Apoſtles, whom I now pray this for, are in a more ſpecial and endeared manner, both thine, and mine; and endeared to us by our mutual like propriety, and intereſt in them, for each others ſakes: My great requeſt is, that theſe may be alſo One, as we are, that is, by there Oneneſs with us, let them partake of, and communicate in all the good things, and bleſſedneſs, that we do, even of the Divine Nature, and of what belongs to us, in their capacity with us: Even as we by our being One, do enjoy all theſe Glories together; (only we are one with an eſſential Oneneſs, and communication, which theſe can never be:) But let theſe be one with us, in a fruition of all of ours for their good, and happineſs, as far as Creatures are capable of it, for their Eternal bleſſedneſs.

There being not a greater truth which concerneth our Salvation, or that makes for our comfort; and it being ſo full to that which we have purſued, and which hath been the main deſign of our Election; wherein Chriſt knowing what Gods Heart is, doth pray at this rate; viz. Our Union with God; And this Text alſo more clearly Expounding, and laying open wherein the quinteſſence of our Union with God conſiſts; viz. in a Poſſeſſion, and Enjoyment of all that is mutually Gods, or Chriſts: And alſo it diſcovering the very Original motion, (motus primo primus) the Firſt firſtly motion of all other; and is the very Corner Stone, and Original both of our Election, and Salvation, amongſt the Perſons: I ſhall therefore inſiſt yet more largely, and ſpeak to what may be further ſupplied, to what hath been ſaid to confirm more fully the truth of this Interpretation, and Connexion.

There

There are Four things incumbent on me to Explain, in order to demonstrate this to have been the true and natural Scope. Chap. 7.

I. What should be the extent of the [All] mine are thine, and thine are mine: That is, what that [All] should be; and what it reacheth to? And whether it be to be limited to the Persons of the Apostles; of whom he had said afore, they are thine, in the words afore; and in the words after, I am glorified in them: Thus some, especially the Socinians, would have it, so to cut off the Argument from thence, that Christ is God; because all things the Father hath are his.

II. Since that Speech of his is spoken of his Father, and of Himself; and Himself therein considered as the Second Person, as well as that he is God-man, and so of them as simply they are Persons in the God-head; though not on Christ's part, as he is God-man, is also intended, and to be taken in: Now 'tis to be Queried, whether the intent of this All things, &c. reach unto the perfections of the Divine Nature it self: For so I do include both, the one consideration of them, as well as the other.

III. That this Speech, All mine, &c. doth most expressively set forth; yea, is all one in substance with what he closeth this part of his Prayer, with Vers. 11. As we are one: And is all one in effect as to have said, herein consists our Oneness, that all mine is thine, and thine mine; according to the similitude of which, let them be one with us also.

IV: How putting thus all these things together, there should be a Motive-Plea, and an Argument arise up in it, That God the Father, and God the Son, (as two Persons) being One in the enjoyment of the Divine Nature, and all things belonging to them; that therefore he should have ordained, and accordingly should be moved now to grant that these his Elect should be One, as they are; and admit them unto this communication of all things also: And where in that Motive should lie.

These Four things are punctual to the Point in hand, and must all four necessarily concur to the demonstration of it.

As to the first, there is some appearance, and that entertained by many Interpreters; that he having just afore said, I pray for all those thou hast given me, for they are thine; and after in the next words, that follow in the same Vers. 10. I am glorified in them, (and in both these meaning, and intending, the Persons of his Apostles) that therefore in these words, that come between his sole, or at least primary intent, should be, only to plead that all the Persons that are mine (through thy gift, Vers. 6.) are thine, and thine are mine: And that therefore we, Oh Father, being both my mutual interest, and consent, ingaged to these persons, as ours alike; therefore save, keep them, and make them one with us, as it follows, Vers. 12. And thus unto the Persons of the Apostles, whom he prays for, do some Interpreters wholly, and strictly limit the words, and the Socinians especially: The [All] here being to be limited (say they) unto the Subject he was speaking of, which were the Persons of the Apostles: And by this their limitation of it, they utterly exclude and cut off all or any thing else belonging to the God-head in common, as no way here intended.

But I would and do take in all, both the Persons of the Apostles, and all things else, the persons, as the Subject prayed for; involving and strengthning his Motive: For in that they were mutually, and alike his Fathers, and his, and for one anothers sakes; and then all things I take in, as the things for which he prayed, for them to be made partakers of, with the Father, and the Son; and also as the ground of the Petition: And thus compounded both senses will stand, and be involved.

You

Book II.

You must know that the word [All] mine, &c. is in the Neuter Gender; and so notes forth properly things, not persons only: And in that parallel place, Joh. 16. 15. All that the Father hath are mine, it is spoken of things, and 'tis so Translated there [All things] the Father hath are mine; and accordingly it must here be understood, that all things universally that are mine, are thine: We may also observe, that these words, All mine are thine, and all thine are mine, are in their station a Parenthesis; which Brugensis hath observed, and Reads as such; and so stand out apart from the words: And as concerning the Apostles Persons, the sense runs currently on afore, and after, without these words: And it is apparent, they are a Maxim superadded by the way, that subsist of themselves; not as if they had nothing at all to do with what is immediately said round about them; but yet as uttering some further thing; and spreading and extending it self unto All things whatsoever; though upon occasion of having said of the Apostles to his Father, They are thine: And so thence they do include the persons of the Apostles, or Elect: It must be founded upon this, as a general Maxim, That all things whatever that are mine, are thine; and therefore it is that these persons I pray for, are both mine, and thine: And it is as if he had said, no wonder that they are mine, and thine; for Lo! all things whatever that are mine, are thine, even to the God-head it self; and upon that account it is, this Speech relates to, and involves the Persons.

But it may be Objected, that if the Apostles their being his, should come in but upon this general account, whereupon all things else are; this were only a common interest, and so they would be his but as all things else were: Whereas he intends, and in the reality of the thing, it is so that these Apostles were His, and the Fathers, upon a special property, as chosen out of all things else. This may some object; and that therefore we must either limit the speech to the Apostles Persons; or if we would Interpret it of All things whatever, as well as of them, we must leave the Apostles out, because their special interest cannot be intended by the common One: I will not detain the Reader here with Disputes about this Question; but have cast it into the Margent: But the Solution of all these Difficulties will be easie, by supposing (which is Rationally to be supposed) that there is tacitely implied, and to be supplied, this further Maxim to be added unto that forementioned: That look as in their several ranks, or kinds, or degrees, any or every thing amongst the [All things] are owned to be mine, or thine; and as our propriety in them is more, or less, and so in our value they are dearer, or less dear to us; according to this measure these Apostles, and the Elect being thine, and mine, in a special lot and degree, are therefore infinitely dearer to us than all Creatures besides: Now of these he had said to his Father, they were thine by special propriety of Choice, and Election out of All: And they became mine by thy gift; they are thine, and thou gavest them me; and that therefore look in what indeared respect they were thine, they are mine in the same also. And this Rule supposed (which those former words give warrant for) fetcheth in the Persons of the Apostles, as Gods, and his own choicest Elect; and with them, the Persons of all the Elect else, Saints, small and great: And will also admit an extension of the speech unto all things else that are Gods, in their several order, and degree, which ends the difference, and comprehendeth all we aim at in this Point.

It is certain, that if we should limit this Speech to the Persons of the Apostles, then Gerhards Argument would have place: Saith he, if you limit this to the Persons of the Apostles, as that whereby, Christ should make proof of that he had said just afore, (which they that do, must make to be the Coherence) They are thine; and then bring this as his reason, and (or for) all mine are thine, &c. Then says he, you made Christ to prove but idem, per idem, the same thing, by the same: And it had been but as if he had said, These are Thine; for the Persons of these, are both mine, and thine; Now this must not be admitted: And again, to have intended to say, these Apostles are mine, for all the Persons that are mine, are thine, and thine mine, and therefore these; this had been thwart to his Scope, and Method; which was singularly to Pray for, and present his Apostles as his chiefest, or choicest Elect, and patterns of Gods Election of the rest; So as if he had intended to note forth, that they were his, and his Fathers Elect ones; then rather all the Elect with them, must come in as intended: For he says all things, &c. as well as the Apostles: And so still it would fall out that the Apostles Persons should come in; but because the whole Body of the Elect, are Gods, and his: Whereas Christ's method in this prayer, and this place is, vice versâ, clean otherwise; for he mentions not the rest of his Elect, until Vers. 20. Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word: Having intended this foregoing part of his Prayer, especially for his Apostles, for their particular comfort, and all other the Elect; but by consequence, and inference from what the Apostles were to him: So as the main and grand Lot of the Interpretation, must still be extended unto [Things] All things that are mine, are Thine.

This

This for the first Head, what these [All] in general should be; not only the persons of the Apostles, or the Elect (though included in the All) but All things whatsoever. The second contains two things in it. Chap. 7.

1. That [All] mine are thine, &c. reacheth unto, and principally intends the perfections of the Godhead it self; All those Divine Glories are Mine and Thine, and Thine and Mine.

2. That this speech is spoken by Christ in the Person of himself, and his Father, considered as they are two Persons in the Trinity, enjoying the same Godhead, and not only as he is God-man; (and I am for both): And unto this sense many Interpreters of weight do carry it.

There hath been a Question raised by some, Whether any Sentence in this Prayer be uttered by Christ under the Notion or Consideration of his being the second Person in the Godhead, essentially considered, and so to speak any thing simply as that Person: Or that rather, (as they assert it) all that which he speaks of himself in this Prayer, should not be understood of himself, as he is Man personally united unto God; and so that in that sense only it is, That he as God-man, Head of his Church, should speak this here, That they may be one as we are One. And one general Argument they have, is this, That otherwise the Second person, as such, should pray: Unto which (ere we go any further) there is this easy Answer; That the Man Jesus prays, yet as the mouth that urgeth the Interest of the second person (to whom he was united) as such; which is for his honour as he is God, and not a lowering of him: 'Tis the Man that prays, but 'Tis the Name of the Second person he is united unto, which he prays in. Indeed, for the Second Person, simply as such, to have prayed for any thing belonging to him properly as such, as some would understand the words, Vers. 5. And now, O Father, glorifie thou me with thine own self, with the glory which I had with thee before the World was: This indeed had been below him: But that his interest, as he is God, should be urged on our behalf, this is no more improper, than for us to plead what is in the Name of God the Father, as God; The Lord God Gracious, &c.

For the second, the Ancient Fathers in their Disputes against Arrius, who held Christ not to have bin God, or a Second person Co-equal with his Father, partaking of the same Divine Essence or Godhead with his Father; had a great recourse unto the passages of this Prayer, and particularly to this, All mine are thine; Vers. 10. And as we are One, Vers. 11. and Vers. 21. Thou in me, Vers. 22, 23: That therefore he was one God with the Father in Essence, though they were distinct as Persons in that one Godhead: One, as God, though as Persons distinct, which is argued from his saying We and us. Thus also our Divines in their opposition against the Socinians, who deny Christ to be God, or a Second person in the Godhead, make use of this place.

Now, by All things, he means all things that are God's, whether they be essentially his, (that is, all Attributes of the Godhead) as also all that belong unto God by his Dominion over all, as he is God; such as his works ad extra (that is, which exist and are wrought out of himself, as the World, the Salvation of Men, &c.) which are by possession God's: These, or whatever else, that are God's as God, he intends here to be his, as well as they are his Fathers.

But above all, the Essential Perfections of the Godhead, which are (as Brugensis on the words expresseth them) all those increated infinite riches and Glories of the Deity whatsoever. For, the Father Communicates all and the whole of himself unto the Son, giving him by his Eternal Generation of him, the fulness of the Deity; and so the sense is, [All mine] that is, whatever essential Glory or Perfection, whatever Blessedness, &c. is in Thee, is in me; for we are One and Coequal in respect of Essence, and of all the same Divine Perfections of the Godhead; though as Persons, and in our relation as such, we are distinct, (Personal properties being necessarily here to be excepted) For he says, [We] are One, and so supposeth two Persons distinct, whiles yet he saith that they are One, or but in all things else they are One. Now this, all of us that believe the Trinity, do hold: But that which is to be be prooved, is, that the intent of this ſpeech is eminently to include theſe in this place; for which Obſerve.

1. Firſt, he ſays univerſally, All things; Et qui dicit omnia, nihil relinquit, which are Auſtin's words upon it, He that ſaith All things, leaves nothing excepted.

2. He ſays not, as in Matt. 11. 26. All things are delivered to me of my Father; but ſpeaks in a language indifferently, appropriating all to himſelf and his Father; All things [are] mine, as well as the Father's: All things that are mine, are thine; et è contra.

3. That Parallel place, John 16. 15. All things that the Father hath are mine, doth confirm the like to be the intent here; and this here, compared with that ſpeech there, confirms the ſame to be the intent there; he there ſays, not in an indefinite way, what the Father hath is mine; but puts a double Univerſality upon it (as Gerard hath obſerved on the place) πάντα, All things; and adds, ὅσα [Whatever] All things whatſoever: Which doubled Emphaſis, is leſt out of our Tranſlation. If he meant not to have ſaid, that he had the Eſſence, the nature of God, the Perfections of the Godhead, how ſhould he ſay, All things whatever, which my Father hath, and yet be underſtood that there is an infinity of things or Perfections, which his Father hath as God, (as Eternity, Immenſity, &c.) which Chriſt ſhould not have intended, whilſt he ſaid, All things whatſoever? Who ſhall limit this Univerſally Univerſal, and except the Eſſentials of the Godhead, when Chriſt, (whom we all acknowledge God) doth not except them? We ſay the Father hath Omnipotency, the Father hath Eternity, Immenſity, &c. And theſe are all Chriſt's, for whatſoever the Father hath are mine. Surely theſe ſhould not be excluded here; Not by us, who all believe that he is God, and hath all and the whole Godhead Communicated to him in the fullneſs of it; for Eſſentiæ communicatio facit omnia communia; The Godhead being Communicated by the Father, all things of the Godhead, or that can be attributed thereunto, are Communicated to all Three; only the diſtinction of Perſons excepted. Nor is it an Objection worth much conſidering, that he ſaith, All that the Father [hath] are mine; and therefore that he ſhould mean by that word, [hath] the things only which the Father poſſeſſeth as external to him; as the things which concern our Salvation, and the like, the world, and the fullneſs of it; as a Man is ſaid to have his Goods poſſeſſivè: But the Father is ſaid, to have his own Eſſence, and the perfections of it as well as the works of his Hands; the phraſe is uſed of what he is eſſentially; as, Who only hath Immortality &c. 1 Tim. 6. 16. which is an eſſential Attribute; Or as a Man is ſaid to have a Soul in him: Noteing the ſubſtantial being of him.

But moreover, that which confirms this to be his ſcope, is this, let it be further obſerved in that place, John 16. 15, that plainly he declares at once, both that he is God as well as his Father; as alſo, that he is the Second Perſon, in order next unto his Father in the Divine Nature, and in order afore the Spirit; and both theſe you muſt ſuppoſe intended, or he had not given a ſufficient Reaſon or account of that which follows. And you may obſerve by the words that immediately follow in Verſ. 15. Therefore ſaid I, that he ſhall take of mine; and ſhall ſhew it unto you, his profeſſed intent to be, to render a full and ſufficient Reaſon why he had in the words of the 14 Verſe, immediately afore this 15 Verſe, ſaid, he (the Spirit, namely) ſhall glorifie me, for he ſhall receive of mine, and ſhall ſhew it to you: And farther they are an account of what he had alſo ſaid in Verſ. 13. He ſhall not ſpeak of himſelf; but whatſoever he ſhall hear (from me and my Father) that ſhall he ſpeak. Now, if he had not been truly God, and Second Perſon in the Godhead, he had not held out a full and ſufficient Reaſon why the Holy Spirit ſhould not ſpeak of himſelf, but muſt have all that he ſpeaks and ſhews, from him, e're he can ſhew them to us: But being Second Perſon, he could truly ſay, Though the Spirit is God, and the third Perſon of the three, yet I am, in order of ſubſiſtence, afore him, and I am God likewiſe with the Father, and the Second next Perſon to the Father; and therefore he is to receive all from me. Now for the firſt, That he is God, and one God with the Father, that that he ſignifies and expreſſeth by this, that all things his Father hath, are his, (which is, what I have argued to the ſame purpoſe) And that he is the Second Perſon of the Godhead in order, alſo, he declares by the ſame words alſo, All whatever the Father hath are mine; Take them as they are a Reaſon that the Spirit muſt receive all from him firſt &c. for they are mine, and mine all, in order firſt; and ſo of neceſſity, the Spirit muſt have all from me, as well as from the Father. And otherwiſe his accompt had been weakned by this, that the Spirit elſe might have had all from the Father without him: For this is an aſſured Rule, that look in what order the Perſons are in ſubſiſting and dependence each of other for their perſonal ſubſiſtence in the Godhead; in the ſame order, they do depend upon each other for their Operations alſo, as they do for their ſubſiſtence. The Son's Subſiſtence, or his being God, is from the Father, who is the Fountain of the Deity; and his Son is very God of very God; and thereupon his Operations, as the Son, do depend upon what his Father firſt doth, and that he doth nothing but what he ſees the Father do, and the Father ſhews it him. John 5. 19, 20. Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, The Son can do nothing of himſelf, but what he ſeeth the Father do: For what things ſoever he doth, theſe alſo doth the Son likewiſe. For the Father loveth the Son, and ſheweth him all things that himſelf doth. And as elſewhere, I ſpeak not of my ſelf, (ſaith he) but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doth the works, John 14. 10. and Chap. 8. 28. And what is the reaſon of this dependence in doing and ſpeaking, but his being God, of and from the Father? Whereby it is (as the words have it) That all that the Father hath is mine. Now look, as his Perſon hath all in order firſt from the Father; and therefore it is he cannot ſpeak any thing of himſelf, nor do any thing of himſelf, but only what the Father ſheweth him; as you heard himſelf ſpeak of himſelf: In like manner, and upon the ſame ground, the Spirit muſt have all from him too, as he hath from the Father. It is not ſufficient, that the Spirit proceeds from the Father, as he is ſaid to do, John 15. 26. that therefore he ſhould have all wholly from the Father, and ſhew it to you, and paſs by the Son of God: No, ſaith Chriſt, he muſt have it from me too; becauſe the order of our ſubſiſting in the Godhead, is, That all the Father hath, is mine firſt, in order of Nature: For, my Generation by the Father, as his Son, is firſt, e're the Holy Ghoſt's Proceſſion; for he is the third Perſon; and then, all that the Father hath, being Communicated to me, thence it is, that the Spirit proceeds from both. For even that power to breathe forth the Spirit, together with the Father, is one of thoſe things intended, when he ſaith, All that my Father hath is mine. So as it is the account of the Order of their Subſiſtence, as the Foundation of this their Order in working, which he aims at in ſaying, All that my Father hath is mine, as well as to ſhew he is God: And that therefore neceſſarily the Spirit muſt take of mine, ſince it is I that ſend him as well as my Father. This he had ſaid afore, verſe 6. of that 16th Chapter: And it is as if he had ſaid, This I had not power to do, nor ought to have taken upon me to ſay or do, unleſs I were God with the Father; for the Holy Ghoſt is God; and were I not God as well as the Father, and that the Spirit proceeded from me, I, as meerly Mediatour, could not have ſent him.

Chap. 7.

If then this Parallel Speech in Chap. 16. verſe 15. imports, That all things in the Godhead were his with the Father, as a Perſon that was God with him; why ſhould we not, yea, how dare we but underſtand it of the ſame in this Prayer alſo? For, the one comes in as a part of his Doctrine, in a Sermon juſt preceeding afore his Prayer, and this follows after in the Prayer. This, for the Confirmation of this Senſe from John 16. 15.

4. A fourth Argument, from the manner of this Speech in John 17. 10. is, That Chriſt ſpeaks in terms of Equality with his Father, All mine are thine, and thine mine; that is mutually and equally and alike; and therefore 'tis ſpoken of him as God, and a Perſon in the Godhead. Yea, lo, he ſays not only, All mine are thine; but he ſays, Vice verſâ, on the other ſide, All thine are mine: It is after the manner of Equals among men; you may obſerve

Book II. ſerve that when the ſame things are ſaid of two Equals, the manner is indifferently to place either firſt, and then the other: So here, Mine thine, and Thine mine: No matter which firſt, ſo the ſame things be ſaid: 'Tis to ſhew, they are equal. But if Chriſt only ſpake this as God-man, in and under that conſideration ſolely, the Father being greater than he, he would not have ranged it with this equality, unleſs he had ſpoken as he is a Perſon of the Trinity equal with the Father, and one God with the Father: Therefore it is he ſpeaks it as ſecond Perſon chiefly, eſpecially if he had ſpoken as God-man, and had withal intended by the [All things that are mine are thine] the Apoſtles Perſons only, as ſome have it: He would rather have ſaid, All thine are mine. And why? Becauſe he had ſaid before, they were firſt the Fathers, And thou gaveſt them me.

5. Tollet upon the place caſts in this, That our Lord had ſpoken afore of the Perſons of the Apoſtles, how they were thine, O Father: So in the 6th verſe, Thine by Election, which is ſignified in that ſpeech, Thou gaveſt them me, and they were given to me as I am God-man: Therefore here, in theſe words (ſays he) Chriſt aſcends to urge a further and higher Intereſt in them, and in all things elſe, viz. as he is God, and Coequal with the Father. And certainly, that other particular Intereſt, viz. That the perſons of thoſe Apoſtles were both his and the Fathers alſo; he had before ſo ſufficiently expreſſed both in verſ. 6. and over and over again afterwards, within this ſmall compaſs of the words that follow, in verſ. 11. and verſ. 12. as it may well be admitted, that ſome greater thing, and more entenſive, ſhould in theſe words be intended.

This for the ſecond Branch, That by all things is not meant only all things extrinſecal, or all of the Perſons of the Elect, &c. but the Divine Eſſence it ſelf, and the Perfections thereof, proper to God, and common to the Three Perſons, That all theſe were his, as well as the Fathers.

Thirdly, This ſpeech doth fully import, and is all one as to ſay (though in a larger compaſs of words) that his Father and he are two Perſons, one in Eſſence; or (as he himſelf after in fewer words expreſſeth it) We are one: And mark it Brethren, that very thing it is that his Prayer here doth iſſue in, That they may be one as we are. For two Perſons to have all the Perfections of the Divine Nature equally, and in common, All thine are mine, and mine are thine; this is all one as to ſay, That theſe two Perſons are One: This is ſo clear, as I need not inſiſt on't. And truly Calvin, who is againſt the interpretation of [we are one] to be meant of the Oneneſs of the Perſons, as in the Divine Nature of God throughout this Chapter; yet when he is upon this place, he conſidering the waight and extenſion of this word, All things, hath theſe words; The Unity of the Father and the Son is ſuch, as they have nothing apart between them: Which is that very thing which I ſay, that their being one God is expreſſed by this, that all things are in a community theirs.

Tenenda eſt unitas Patris cum Filio, quæ facit ut nihil in ſe diviſum habeant. Calv. in loc.

4. This iſſues all the former, that it is ſpoken as a Motive or Plea; that therefore they (the Elect) ſhould be one as we are: There is this aſpect, this true and genuine Connexion between theſe two paſſages, though (as I at firſt noted) there comes in a Petition between for that which was to be the means of their Union; yet theſe firſt words All mine are thine, &c. do center in this grand Petition, That they be one, as we; or, let them be one: And the reaſons of this their firſt connexion and reference are theſe, 1. So 'tis that that ſpeech, All mine are thine, &c. ſtands as a Parentheſis from the reſt of the words, whether afore and after; and are to be ſeparate by an incloſure from the reſt. And ſo Brugenſis reads the words, and in his Comment notes it to be ſuch: 'Tis a Speech ſtands by it ſelf among the reſt, and ſent aforehand, a good way off, expecting a Mate, a Correſpondent, it ſhould yoke and claſp withal; and this is it, That therefore they may be one, as we are: And the Coherence of the words in the Verſes afore theſe words, All mine are thine, &c. and of thoſe that that immediately follow them, you may obſerve that the other Verſes run on ſmoothly without them, ſo as thoſe words are a Parentheſis; I pray for them, which thou haſt given me, for they are thine, Verſ. 9. and I am glorified in them, Verſ. 10. And ſo on. And Interpreters generally are ſo wholly intent upon this, that the Perſons of the Apoſtles are only intended in his ſaying, All mine are thine, as they fill up the whole of Chriſts meaning therewith; which alſo hath cauſed them to Judge the Oneneſs of the Saints themſelves, to be only meant in thoſe words, That they may be one: But I hope I have ſufficiently prov'd it, that our Oneneſs with God, and with Chriſt is here to be underſtood. 2. That They may be one, is the centre of his Prayer, which, what is before, determines, and falls into; and therefore this paſſage of all mine centers therein alſo. 3. The ſuitableneſs, and correſpondency; yea, ſameneſs of ſenſe, that is between theſe two Paſſages, All things that are mine are thine; and that which is laſt of all, As we are one, is ſuch as makes it undeniable. For if any ſhould have ſtudied never ſo much to expreſs what the Father and Sons being one is, or what the Unity of the Perſons, in reſpect of their Eſſences, or Godhead, is, it could not be more fully, and adequately ſet out, than by this, that it is a Communion of all things in God between thoſe perſons; and that ſaying of Chriſt which expreſſes this Communion, All mine are thine, is the ſame with this other As we are one: So then, that our Union with God, ſhould be expreſſed by our being one in our meaſure and proportion, As the Father and the Son are one, is the moſt ſignificant way of expreſſing it that could be: So as we ſee all to agree in a bleſſed Harmony. Chap. 7.

Now the force of the Plea therein, wherewith he moves his Father is, That they being One in the injoyment of all theſe increated riches of the God-head, which are mutually theirs; as of that eſſential Wiſdom, Power, Omniſcience, Holineſs, Bleſſedneſs, Glory, [All:] And being thus One in Eſſence, had agreed and conſpired in Love towards theſe: (For all the acts of the God-head internal, are common to the Three Perſons.) And ſo it is, as if he had ſaid, I am concurring with thee, Oh Father, as Second Perſon, in the choice of theſe perſons, and in the love of them, or in what degree of ſpecial love ſoever there is, in reſpect of which they may be ſaid to be thine, in the ſame love and degree thereof, they are mine alſo as Second Perſon: And Oh therefore, bring thoſe whom we have loved, into a Communication of all thoſe Glories, and Riches with us: Let them have all things that are ours, with a καθὼς, [an As] by way of ſimilitude of what we have therein; let us not be happy alone, nor keep the communication of theſe things wholly among our ſelves, but let them have all as far as meer Creatures are capable of: Which that it might be fully accompliſht according to my true intent, in my ſaying, All mine are thine, &c. and compleating my Prayer about this; I enlarge it ere I conclude, and end it with this farther requeſt, That thou wouldſt keep them in this life in Holineſs, that ſo they may perfectly attain, this bleſſedneſs, that all that is mine, and thine, may be theirs alſo, as hath been deſigned by us for them; which I reinforce in theſe words, to be granted them, That they may be One [As we are One] which is effected by their having all in common between us, whereby we are One, communicated unto them alſo: Whereby it is, they ſhall be made one with us alſo. And Oh let them thus have all, though not with an eſſential Sameneſs, that is impoſſible; yet with a fruition; let them have all the Power, Wiſdom, Grace, Love, Bleſſedneſs, that is in thee, and me; let them have them all in the enjoyment to make them happy poſſeſſively, though not eſſentially; (or as Chriſt afterwards differenceth it) let them be One in us, Verſ. 21. not One with us; and as we our ſelves, are one with another: For as their Union with us is of a lower kind, ſo the communication of all theſe muſt be; yet let them have all as far as is communicable: Let all their intereſt be ours, but their ſins, which let us ſeparate from them, that ſo they may be intirely One in us, that they may be able in the knowledge and ſenſe of their Oneneſs with us, to ſay in their measure unto us, All ours is thine, O God, and all thine is ours: And may say the like to me the Son, I am heir of Thee O Father, for I am thy Son, and to inherit all things in thee; and let them be heirs of God, and of all of God, with me, Co-heirs with me: As Rom. 8. 17. hath it.

And this plea of his as Second Person for us, shews the bottom Counsel of the Heart of God among the Holy Three from Everlasting: When that blessed and Sacratissimus Consessus Trinitatis was held, that most Sacred sitting of the Trinity, as Gerard speaks on Joh. 16. 14, 15. That Concillum Trinitatis, as Rolloc on the same place: Then it was this motion on our behalf was made amongst them, which the Son here expresseth; and the Original ground of that Motion, was the Communion the Three Persons do hold in that One God-head: Therfore they designed to communicate the same to those they loved, and foreknew, and were then a chusing unto an Union with them. And this the Second, or Middle Person, God's Counsellor, Angelus magni Concilii (as the Septuagint renders it, Isaiah 9. 6.) He knowing his Fathers Councels, utters it here in John 17. through the mouth of the Man, who was now become One Person with him; his part being now in a way of prayer to move his Father, he reminds him of the Original ground thereof: And He doth it to his Father in a Prayer, rather than in a Sermon to them his Apostles; and he does it in this his last Prayer, in which he layeth open the secrets of God, and higher than this we cannot go; and that this is the true meaning of this connexion, All thine are mine, and mine are thine, with this, that they may be One, as we are: If ever I did submit any Interpretation that ever I have given of any Scripture in my whole life, I do submit this.

We may see then the great stead the Being of the Trinity stands us in: We see first the Original Motion made for our Eternal Blessedness, to have founded on this, That there are Three Persons, that have the same God-head, and all in it as One; whereby they were moved to make the Creatures One in them, and to Communicate all in the God-head, and all else that was theirs unto them, and for them for their good.

SECTION II.

The Second sort or Branch of the Motive in the Three Persons. The mutual entercourse, and Society which as Persons they have, and had one with another; and the sweetness of that Converse, was an inducement to them to Ordain Creatures to be taken up into the like communion with themselves. This I found upon,

JOHN XVII. 21.

That they all may be One, as thou Father art in me, and I in thee, that they [Also] may be One in Us.

WHerein among other things, the intimate Communion of the Father, in and with the Son, and of the Son, in, and with the Father, is expressed by the Fathers being in the Son, and the Son in the Father: And that Converse is of the import of those Terms of expression.

And

Chap. 7.

And beſides the Perſonal indwelling of the Father in the Son, which Divines call Circumceſſion of the Perſons; Thoſe Phraſes do import all ſorts of intimate acquaintance, and knowledge of each other: We uſe to ſay, we know ſuch a man as if we were within him: Now the Father is in the Son, and the Son in the Father, and ſo are perfectly acquainted one with the other: And therefore accordingly that which follows, that They [Alſo] may be One in Us, is as much, as for him to have prayed, that they in like manner, may partake of, and enjoy in a like communion, and entercourſe in Us, and with Us, as we are. And ſuch a bleſſed intercourſe between the Father, and the Son, the 5th Verſ. of this Chapter ſhews to have been from Everlaſting; the Glory I had with thee afore the World was: As alſo Chriſt had in his Sermon, Chap. 16. 13, 14. towards the end of it made mention of, Whatſoever the Spirit ſhall [hear] that ſhall he ſpeak: He ſhall glorifie me, and take of mine: All the Father hath is mine. The Scriptures do preſent the Three Perſons, not only as three Witneſſes to us, but as three bleſſed Companions of a knot, and Society among themſelves; enjoying Fellowſhip, and Delights accordingly in themſelves: And indeed if this had been wanting, there had not been an abundant, or a compleat happineſs; for much of ſweetneſs lies in Society: (The ſweetneſs of a mans Friend, is Solomons Character) which if the Divine Nature had not afforded, in having in it three Perſons really diſtinct, knowing, rejoycing in, glorying of, and ſpeaking unto each other, there had not been a perfection of Bleſſedneſs: But from forth of this Society, an All-ſatiety did, and doth ariſe: The Son is preſented as in the boſom of the Father, Joh. 1. 18. No man hath ſeen God at any time: The only begotton Son, which is in the boſom of the Father, he hath declared him. And Joh. 10. 15. As the Father knows me, even ſo I know the Father: And the Son ſpeaks not, but what he hears of the Father: As you find again, and ſaid in that Goſpel of John; nor doth the Spirit ſpeak but what he hears of both, Joh. 16. 13, 14, 15. Howbeit, when the Spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth: For he ſhall not ſpeak of himſelf: But whatſoever he ſhall hear, that ſhall he ſpeak, and will ſhew you things to come. He ſhall glorifie me, for he ſhall receive of mine, and ſhall ſhew it unto you. All things that the Father hath, are mine: therefore ſaid I, That he ſhall take of mine, and ſhall ſhew it unto you. And this Fellowſhip, and Communion mutual is, and was matter of infinite delight, and pleaſure in them; as Wiſdom, i. e. the Son declares, Prov. 8. 30. in there uttering what had been between the Father and him, afore the World, Then was I by him, as one brought up with him, and I was daily his delight, rejoycing always before him: And this he ſays, was before the World; and then, when their delights thus lay in what by way of intercourſe had paſſed between him, and his Father, as thoſe words, rejoycing always [afore him] ſignify that He, as a Companion had been always in his ſight, his preſence, his company, now conformable and like unto, and next to theſe Delights, which had been between themſelves, were their Delights in the Sons of men, Verſ. 31. Rejoycing in the habitable parts of the Earth, and my delights were with the Sons of men. The Sons of men are ſociable Creatures, intelligent, and underſtanding; and much of their delights lie in mutual converſes: Now the delights of theſe Divine Perſons with the Sons of men, afore the World was, lay much in thoughts taken up aforehand; of what a ſweet fellowſhip one day they ſhould have, in admitting them into an intimate converſe, and acquaintance with themſelves: The Sons of men were their delights, not as things that are uncapable of converſe, are ſaid to be; but which the correſpondencies held among perſons do afford: You read in the Apoſtle John, 1 Joh. 1. 3. of a Fellowſhip which we now have with the Father, and the Son, and they with us; and as in Verſ. 7. that following clauſe expounds it, we have fellowſhip one with another; that is, they with us, and we with them: And it was the thoughts of theſe mutual delights, in our, and their fellowſhip one day to be had and enjoyed, when we ſhould actually exiſt, was a ſpecial Objective matter of delight unto thier thoughts ſo long afore; They infinitely pleaſed themſelve in the view, and contemplation of this: Now when I ſay it was ſuch, both to the Father, as well as to the Son, my ground even in that place of the Proverbs is, Chap. 8. Verſ. 30, 31. That although it be Wiſ-

Book II. dom, the Son that only says, my delights were with the Sons of men; yet that the Fathers delights were in common with his in them, the words afore instruct us: I rejoyced in the habitable part of [His] Earth, (he loving the very ground they go on) wherein these Sons of men should dwell: The insertion of [His] name by his Fathers, shews it was his Fathers interest as well as his own; yea, and his own for his Fathers sake: And elsewhere his Father is said to have delighted in them, to choose them, Deut. 10. which common interest, this Text expresseth, thine they were, and thou gavest them me: And mine are thine, holds good even here.

And the mention thus first of these proper delights, peculiar to the Persons, and then of theirs in us; and the thoughts of our fellowship with them to come, and the one in so near, and immediate a conjunction to, and with the other, strongly insinuates, that they affected this secondary fellowship with us Creatures, from the delights of what Origihally they had among themselves, both as the exemplar of that to be had in time with us, and as the rise, and inducing Motive; that so they among themselves, and we together with them, might all rejoyce together, which was the freeness, and greatness of the grace of it: that though they had a perfection of delights in what was proper to themselves, yet they would have other company to delight in: It was the sweetness, and delightfulness of their own proper Consortium, which induced them to have more company, partakers of their joy, who might rejoyce together with them in their capacity, and proportion; who might therefore bless and adore them for taking them up into it; and make, as Christ speaks, their joy, if possible, more full; they would not be happy alone.

And that the Three Persons both singly, and joynt were prone, and propense unto such a creature-fellowship, and admission of them unto their converse with themselves, the Scriptures, and the reason of the thing doth shew.

For as you have fellowship with us, attributed to the Father, and the Son, in that of 1 Joh. 5. 3, and other places; so you have as expres, the communion and fellowship of the Spirit distinct from that of theirs with us, 2 Cor. 6. Vers. 13, 14. Now for a recompense in the same, (I speak as unto my Children) be ye also enlarged. Be ye not equally yoaked together with unbelievers: For what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? And what communion hath light with darkness?

And the reason of the thing, how it came to pass it should be so, may be fetcht and drawn down from what was said in that Head of the first principal Motive, viz. the manifesting and declaring the Name of God; whereby, as I shewed, was principally meant the Grace, Love, and Goodness in the Divine Nature; all which are in Common: The Perfections of each person alike, of one as well as the other: For all mine are thine, and thine mine, saith Christ: As therefore the Godhead, or Divine Nature, is disposed to this Union, and Creature communication to us, so they being the properties of the Persons subsisting in that Nature, the Persons themselves are inclined thereunto, both joyntly and singly: There is love and infinite riches of Grace in God the Father; Ephes. 2. 7. That in the Ages to come he might shew the exceeding Riches of his Grace, in his kindness towards us, through Christ Jesus. There is Grace in God the Son; a free Heart to bestow the riches, the fulness of delights that himself possessed; 2 Cor. 8. 9. For ye know the Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was Rich, yet for your sakes, he became poor that ye through his povertie might be Rich: And there is the highest readings and propensness in the Holy Ghost unto Creature Communion also; you have all in one Verse, 2 Cor. 13, 4. The Grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the Love of God, and the Communion of the Holy Ghost be with you all, Amen. And as I then shewed, that it is the property, the Nature of Goodness, Grace, and Love, to Communicate and manifest themselves to others; so we find the same said of the Persons singly; each of them having the same blessed property. Thus of manifestation, it is said, John 14. 21. 22. He that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and manifest my self to him: And Vers. 23. My Father will love him, and we will

will come unto him, and make our abode with him: Thus of the Father and Son. And there is the manifestation of the Spirit also, 2 Cor. 12. and he is promised to dwell in us, and be with us for ever, John 14. 17. and is the Revealer of Gods, and Christs mind to us, and of the deep things of God, 1 Cor. 2. 10, 11, 12, 16. And all these dispensations in time, have for their Spring and Well-head, these original Purposes and Transactions from Everlasting. Chap. 7.

They each singly, and joyntly for one another, desired to have themselves made known to us, to the end to be glorified by us: The Spirit Loves to glorifie the Son to us, John 16. 14. He shall glorifie me, for he shall receive of mine, and shall shew it unto you. The Father to have his Son honoured as himself is: John 5. 22, 23. For the Father judgeth no Man: But hath committed all judgment unto the Son: That all Men should honour the Son, even as they honour the Father. He that honoureth not the Son, honoureth not the Father which hath sent him. Father glorifie thy Name, say's the Son of the Father: John 12. 28. I have glorified it, and will glorifie it again, says the Father to the Son in answer thereunto: They love to have their own personal Inbeings, and communications among themselves made known to us, as farr as we are capable: John. 14. 20. at that day ye shall know that I am in my Father, and you in me, and I in you.

The Man Christ Jesus united to the second Person, speaks the sense of that Person, and his Fathers also in this, John 17. 21, 22. As thou Father art in me, and I in them, that they also may be one in us. Which is as if he had said, Thou, Father, knowest how blessed and delightful this Oneness of ours together hath been unto us; what infinite joy and happiness it hath produced to us, and in us; and it will be sweet to us to have Fellows, who [also] may be partakers of our joys, who may both be enjoyers of it themselves, and also may understand what hath been among our selves from all Eternity (according to those words of Christ's, John 14. 20 yea shall know that I am in my Father, and you in me, and I in you;) and adore us for it: You see also that this Man, God's Fellow, when he was taken up into that Fellowship, he became of the same disposition; he desired not to be alone: And he had it from the disposition of the person he was united to, the Son of God; and so God gave him Fellows thereupon, Psal. 45. 7. And he being manifest in the flesh, expresseth and utters but what was in the heart of all the three: Thus this Natural Society of the three, and the pleasure thereof induced this acquired, and sought out Society made up of Creature-converse with this God and Three Persons, To whom be all glory for ever.

I conclude with this, the Divine Nature, and the three Persons are all, and the whole that are in God: And lo, you have all these graciously inclined unto this our Union and Communion with them, and then you have all that is in God become motives, and inductives to it: And you can have no more.

I might add for the confirmation of this Notion, That what was in the nature of God, had influence upon his Gracious will to move him to do the like for us in many particular instances only. What he should do for us, being matter of will in him, he might do it, or not do it as he pleased, and to whom, or whom not, as he pleased, because it was matter of will; yet something that was natural, was the inducer of his will therunto.

Use. O let us take heed, lest we be left out of this royal Society! as by allusion to what is lower, and lesser I may call it; Lest our lot should fall to be with the rest of the World, as in Vers. 23. of this John. 17. Christ sets it forth, lest that we only know, and that too late, that there have been a company of Men whom God hath loved, and taken up into Union with himself, to be ever with the Lord; wherof our selves shall have that fatal sentence pronounced against us by our Lord Christ, Depart from me, I know ye not: And it is that you are workers of iniquity that will cause this eternal separation: He therefore saith, depart from me ye workers of iniquity: And as the Apostle saith, let every one therefore that Names the Lord, depart from iniquity: The words of Christ concerning the World are these in the 23 Verse, That the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them, as thou hast loved me; which will be the effect upon all the World of wicked Men at that great day, which is called the day of their visitation, that they shall see unto what an infinite blessedness the Saints are raised up unto, through Union with God and Christ; and what a glorious Christ he will appear to be, that even they all shall know that God hast sent him, and that he is the Christ indeed, and has loved these his members, united to him as God has loved him. But this conviction will be too late, for it is to be joyned with depart from me; and therefore seek unto God to keep you in this World, to keep you pure from the evil of it, that the World lieth in; that in the end this Union may break forth in you, and upon you, unto your own glorious sense of it: And so Christs words run; Holy Father, keep them through thy own Name, those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one even as we: To sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob was the Phraseology of the Old Testament: Though Christ used it coming in the verge of it, but to sit down with the Us, the Three, another manner of Three than Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, to sit down with God the Father, and God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost; and to have these to dwell in us, and we to dwell in them, this is Christs Language, this is New Testament Language: Oh! To be bound up in that bundle of life with the living God, and with Christ that hath life in himself, Oh let this be the whole of the strength of the aim of our Souls; and be moved and affected so with it, so as not to want a part and share in and with this good company: They were sufficient company to themselves when they inhabited Eternity, and sufficient to make themselves happy one in another; how much more are they sufficient to make us so, by taking us up into their intimate converse? Suppose, (wee'll make but a supposition of it,) that God had chosen but one Soul besides that Man Jesus whom he took up into one Person with his Son (for we meer Creatures should not have been immediately united to God without a Mediator of Union, who was more than a Creature, and therefore his presence is necessary unto our happiness, as Vers. 24.) Upon this supposition, how infinitely blessed would that one Soul have been in the sole and single Society of God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, and with the Man Jesus, made one person with the Son; he would not have needed to have had the company of Peter and Paul to have made that happiness perfect; But I in thee, and thou in me, would have made that Soul perfect in one: It is but an additional and ascititious happiness which the Saints have from their Oneness one with another; but it is, I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one, is their happiness in solido, wherein the substance thereof consists: If of that single Soul Christ had said, Father, I will that this Soul also whom thou hast given me, may be with me, where I am, that it may behold my glory which thou hast given me; this Soul would have been perfectly happy. Have you had experience at any time any of you (I do not say you have not Grace, if you have not had it) of that in John 14. 21. My Father will love him, and I will love him, and will manifest my self to him; i. e. Have you had the Father telling you he loves you? And then again, have you had the Son saying to your poor Souls, how he loves you; and manifesting himself, and his Heart unto you? And have you had the Holy Ghost communicating himself in like manner? And this vouchsafed here in this life in some short converses of each of these Persons with your Souls, which yet are but imperfect manifestations of them to us in this life? Oh what sweetness will there one day be then in Heaven, in the fulness of converse and manifestation of these Three Persons; when it will be, if not all, yet the great discourse that will be had and heard in Heaven, with your poor Souls, by all the Three Persons, bringing all the delights they have had in you from Eternity, down into your hearts, and making discoveries of them, to Eternity.

OF ELECTION.

BOOK III.

The Infinity of Grace is Gods choosing us, proved from the Nature of Election both simply considered in its self, and also compared with that other Act of Reprobation.

But in Gods Book and Rhetorick it speaks and denotes a Grandness put upon the Persons Chosen. To such ELECT, is the greatest word can be asked of us. One of Christs most Eminent Titles, Isaiah, 40. 1. Mine Elect, (speaking of Christ) And even the Pharisees apprehending that the Messiah should be some eminently eminent Person, expresses it by this, The Christ whom God hath Chosen, Luke 23. 25.

Suppoſe, (wee'll make but a ſuppoſition of it,) that God had choſen but one Soul beſides that Man Jeſus whom he took up into one Perſon with his Son (for we meer Creatures ſhould not have been immediately united to God without a Mediator of Union, who was more than a Creature, and therefore his preſence is neceſſary unto our happineſs, as Verſ. 24.) Upon this ſuppoſition, how infinitely bleſſed would that one Soul have been in the ſole and ſingle Society of God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, and with the Man Jeſus, made one perſon with the Son; he would not have needed to have had the company of Peter and Paul to have made that happineſs perfect; But I in thee, and thou in me, would have made that Soul perfect in one: It is but an additional and aſcititious happineſs which the Saints have from their Oneneſs one with another; but it is, I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one, is their happineſs in ſolido, wherein the ſubſtance thereof conſiſts: If of that ſingle Soul Chriſt had ſaid, Father, I will that this Soul alſo whom thou haſt given me, may be with me, where I am, that it may behold my glory which thou haſt given me; this Soul would have been perfectly happy. Have you had experience at any time any of you (I do not ſay you have not Grace, if you have not had it) of that in John 14. 21. OF ELECTION.

BOOK III.

The Infinity of Grace is Gods chooſing us, proved from the Nature of Election both ſimply conſidered in its ſelf, and alſo compared with that other Act of Reprobation.

CHAP. I.

The Grace of Electing us ſimply conſidered, and the Gratneſs of it prov'd from the Greatneſs of the Benefit.

I. LEt us conſider, It is the Election only] Critiques will put upon it a Metonymy in Rhetorique, as the Creation for the Creatures. But in Gods Book and Rhetorick it ſpeaks and denotes a Grandneſs put upon the Perſons Choſen. To ſuch ELECT, is the greateſt word can be asked of us. One of Chriſts moſt Eminent Titles, Iſaiah, 40. 1. Mine Elect, (ſpeaking of Chriſt) And even the Phariſees apprehending that the Meſſiah ſhould be ſome eminently eminent Perſon, expreſſes it by this, The Chriſt whom God hath Choſen, Luke 23. 25.

II. Let us conſider, 2. Who hath Choſen? GOD, 1 Theſ. 1. 5. Knowing your Election of God. In all Choices the perſon chuſing, puts a value on the choſen, and upon the Act to be made choice of by a King unto ſuch an Office Employment, or by a whole State that are Wiſe and Honourable; how doth it dignifie a man? It is one of Titus commendations, 2 Cor. 8. 19. who was alſo choſen of the Churches, &c. But that the great God the bleſſed and only Potentate, the only wiſe God, who hath Glory, Immortality, Majeſty, and Dominion, and Power, ſhould chooſe ſo poor contemptible, weak, and fooliſh a thing as thou art, 1 Cor. 1. 26, 27. For ye ſee your Calling, Brethren, how that not many wiſe men after the fleſh, not many mighty, not many Noble are called. But God hath choſen the fooliſh things of the World, to confound the Wiſe: And God hath choſen the weak things of the World, to confound the things that are mighty. And baſe things of the World, and things which are deſpiſed, hath God choſen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are, That no fleſh ſhould Glory in his Preſence. And as the Emphaſis is put upon Chriſts choice, The Chriſt whom God hath choſen; ſo it is put upon ours alſo; The Elect whom God hath choſen, Mark 13. 20.

And theſe two put together. 1. Elect, or Choſen, And then, 2ly. Whom God Choſe. And it ſpeaks, 1. All worth, Honour, and Excellency: The choſen of God muſt needs be choice, it makes them ſuch. If Elect, then precious, 1 Pet. 2. So of Chriſt, Then again of us. Take Gods eminent Saints, what is their higheſt Title, and Honour, Moſes the Choſen of God, Pſal. 106. 3. Aaron the Choſen of God, Pſal. 105. 16. Paul a Choſen Veſſel, Acts 9. 15. Ye are a Choſen Generation, a Peculiar People, 1 Pet. 2. 9. That is, Elect. He had begun his Epiſtle with, To the Elect, &c. Chap. 1. 2. And that Phraſe λαὸς εἰς περιποίησιν, as the reſt there mentioned is taken out of Exodus 5th. Where 'tis——A peculiar Treaſure to me, (ſays God) above all people. It imports all that is dear and precious to God. Iſaiah 43. 4. Since thou wert precious in my ſight, thou haſt been Honourable; that is, ſince I have Choſen thee [and loved thee] as it follows, and thereby becameſt precious in my eyes, that haſt been, and art, and ſhall be Honourable in mine, ſo in all the whole Creations eſteem; this did put the preciouſneſs. Mens chooſings are out of whom they find the choiceſt, 1 Chron. 19. 10. Joab choſe out all the choice of Iſrael; but Gods chooſing makes them choice.

2. It ſpeaks all bleſſedneſs and the fulneſs of it. Bleſſed is the Man whom thou chooſeſt, Pſal. 65. 4. Yea, he is moſt bleſſed, Pſal. 21. or as the Hebrew hath it, ſet for bleſſings ſet, a part, and appointed for Bleſſings. He hath bleſt us with all Spiritual Bleſſings in things Heavenly, according as he hath choſen us, &c. 'Tis the Womb, the Treaſury Fountain of all Bleſſedneſs.

3. Let us conſider unto what he hath choſen us, unto the neareſt Approach to God, that is, to the higheſt Communion with himſelf, and that is founded on his chooſing us to the neareſt Union with himſelf.

4. Let us conſider the time ſince when he choſe us of old; Of Old, even from Everlaſting were we Ordained unto this Salvation: Paul dates it from the beginning, 2 Theſſ. 2. 13. God hath loved us ever ſince he was God, and whilſt he is God he will continue to do ſo. The eldeſt date of his being God is from Everlaſting, and of his continuing to be God, is to Everlaſting, Pſal. 90. 2. Before the Mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadſt formed the Earth and the World: Even from Everlaſting to Everlaſting thou art God. And his love to us is as old, Jer. 31. 3. I have loved thee with an everlaſting love, And Pſal. 103. 17. The Mercy of the Lord is from Everlaſting to Everlaſting. And as it is a love as Ancient as God himſelf is, He hath loved thee ever ſince he was God; So it is a love that hath fixedly continued ever ſince Eternity, it hath been conſtant ever ſince the very time God choſe us, even unto the moment of our being called. This I take to be the genuine aim of Jer. 31. 3. The Lord hath appeared of old unto me ſaying, yea, I have loved thee with an Everlaſting Love. The true aim or ſenſe of that Scripture lies in this; It is a Dialogue between God and his Church, God had begun, Verſe 2. Thus ſaith the Lord, the people which were left of the Sword, found Grace in the Wilderneſs, even Iſrael, when I went to cauſe him to reſt. The Church now in deſertion, interpoſeth her Complaint, and Scruple, The Lord hath indeed Ap-

That which hath diverted this Interpretation is, that our Tranſlation hath made the forepart of the Verſe to be Gods ſpeech, as well as the latter, The Lord hath appeared of old, [ſaying] whereas ſaying is not in the Hebrew. And therefore the firſt is the Churches Speech, and the other Gods Reply. Vide Junium & Tremellium.

peared of old unto me; that is, in former Ages, which is a concession to God's Speech in the foregoing Verse, what he had been to her of old. The people in the Wilderness found grace, &c. True, say the Lord hath appeared in former times: O but now! What Answer doth God return to this? Yea, I have loved thee with an everlasting love. (The word saying is not in the Original, and its being put in hath marred the scope:) As if he had said to her, Again dost thou speak of my Appearances of old to thee, and as if now I had left thee? Yea, my love is of an ancienter date by far, than my Appearances unto thee, which thou sayest are of old; i. e. those Appearances you speak of, were but a thousand years ago in the Wilderness, &c. but my love in my heart to thee, hath been from everlasting, &c. Everlasting is opposed to old hidden love, unknown love from everlasting unto Appearances. It hath suffered no Ellipsis, no interruption, no paresis between. To ratifie which, God sets his great Yea, or his Amen: Yea, (says he) I have loved thee with an everlasting love. Which to be all one, that of the Apostle shews, 2 Cor. 1. 20. All the Promises of God are Yea and Amen. 'Tis a great yea this, and set to the greatest thing that ever God did concerning us, which you may see how himself accounts of by it; and it comes in the way of a most punctual Answer unto the greatest Doubts and Thoughts his People use to harbour. And further, besides his own Yea or Asseveration, he gives this Evidence that he had born such a continued love unto them, Therefore with loving kindness have I drawn thee, Vers. 2. Now consider, what should it be that mov'd me so to do, when you had nothing but Enmity in you against me? Certainly, it could be nothing but my own meer loving kindness born towards you before, that must move me to it; it must be some aforehand purpose: And when, or at what time think you did that kindness first begin in me, or that loving fit first take me? Was my love ever Nay, and then after a time became Yea? No, says he, here I am an everlasting God, and I have no new purposes, that are of yesterday, but which are as of old, as my self am: For then I should have an alteration or change made in me, as you Creatures have; new thoughts to day which I I had not yesterday; and to be sure, in my love towards you, of all things else, I have not such: For I love like God, like the Great God, where I love. Neither could there be any thing but such a love, so born to you, that could ever move me to call you, for there was nothing in you to draw on my love; for the truth is, I was forc'd to draw you, you were so backward, and utterly averse. And now after I have called you, I am a God that changeth not, Mal. 3. 6. For I am the Lord, I change not: therefore ye Sons of Jacob are not consumed. And so my love is from everlasting to everlasting, Psal. 103. 17. But the mercy of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear him: and his righteousness unto childrens children.

Chap. 1.

CHAP. II.

The Infinity of Grace in God's Electing us, discovered by a Compariſon of it with the other Act of Reprobation. The vaſt Diſparity between Election and the Grounds, and Iſſue thereof, and the Act of Rejection of others, and the Grounds and Iſſue thereof.

I Can put the Doctrine of the foregon Diſcourſe unto no better uſe than an Exaltation of the Grace, and love of God towards his, in his Decrees of Election, both 1. To the End, as of them conſider'd unſaln; and 2. To the Means, conſidering them as faln, by and through a Comparative made of theſe his Decrees of Election, with thoſe Paralelly oppoſite of his denials of thoſe, both End and Means unto others; which ſo vaſtly differing Compariſon between the one and the other, the called Elect of God are deeply to conſider to the End, the more to adore the ſurpaſſing Grace of God towards them.

And that this high Duty is due from us upon the account of this difference and diſcrimination that Electing Grace hath made, I ſhall inſiſt but upon one grand Example, that of Chriſt himſelf on our behalf. We find our Lord bleſſing his Father on our behalf upon this Comparative Account, Matth. 11. 25, 26. Jeſus ſaid, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of Heaven and Earth; becauſe thou haſt hid theſe things from the wiſe and prudent, and haſt revealed them unto Babes: Even ſo Father, for ſo it ſeemed good in thy ſight.

In which paſſage obſerve,

1. That God's good pleaſure in putting this difference between his Elect and others, is here the ſubject matter of his Speech.

2. That Chriſt, the Natural Son of his Father, and ſo privy to his ſecret Counſels, touching theſe Diſpoſements, doth reſt and acquieſce in his Fathers good pleaſure, which with an Emphaſis Brugenſis hath obſerved out of theſe words, Ναὶ ὁ Πατὴρ, which we Tranſlate [Even ſo] but he renders it, Rectè O Pater, Thou haſt done rightly, O Father, in ſo doing: So in the higheſt meaſure approving it.

3. That he alledgeth no other reaſon for this difference, but only his Fathers good pleaſure, and reſolveth all into that he ſpeaks not, Quâ ratione placuit, upon that Reaſon it pleaſeth his Father, but only that it pleaſed him; and therefore only alledgeth it, becauſe 'tis that which ſhould ſilence all.

4. That which is ſpecial to my purpoſe is, that That he not ſimply approves of this, but ſingularly bleſſeth his Father for it; and that not only or meerly becauſe he had revealed theſe things to his babes, but comparatively alſo; ſetting before it, and together with it, his having hid theſe things, which are the Means of ſaving men, from the wiſe and prudent. Father, I thank thee, that thou haſt hid them, &c. which he mentions as that whereby his Father's love was magnified the more unto his Elect, in whom his good pleaſure was pitched; and Chriſt was moved to do this, they being thoſe he loved ſo much, having been given him by the Faher as his Sheep to dye for.

5. The occaſion he takes for this his thanks, uttered in this Comparative, was the hardneſs of heart, and impenitency of thoſe many Cities he had preached to, Verſ. 20. and eſpecially of thoſe wiſe and great men that lived therein, and had been made partakers of his Miniſtry.

And

And his saying, Father, I thank thee, &c. must be understood, in such a sense as the Apostle useth, Rom. 16. 17. God be thanked, ye were the Servants of sin. What doth he thank God simply that they had been such? No, but that which follows must be taken in, viz. but ye have obeyed from the heart, &c. which expresseth their Conversion. So as that they had been the Servants of sin, is brought within those Thanks, not simply, but by way of comparison, to extoll the more the Mercy of their being now the avowed Servants of God, which this former contrary Condition, did set out the Grace and wonder of. And thus here in Christ's Speech the like Intention holds. Chap. 2.

Now what affected Christ's heart to provoke him to so high a thankfulness on our behalf, ought to affect ours unto the same end, and so much the more, as it is our personal interest which this concerns.

Thus far in General, that it is our Duty to compare the difference of these two Procedures of God to the Sons of Men, to the end to bless and magnifie the Lord the more for his special love to us.

I come particularly to institute the Comparative it self, that is, to enlarge upon the Particulars of it. All which Particulars I shall reduce to two Heads.

First, That infinite Disparity that is between those two Acts themselves, of Election, and the Grounds thereof in the Heart of God, and the Issue thereof, and the Act of rejection of others in the grounds and issue thereof, setting both in view together, by which the transcendency of Electing Love will the more appear.

Secondly, A Comparative made in respect unto the Persons Refused and Elected, as considered in the common Condition of both, and the Circumstances which both stand in, and that he should, viewed in the same circumstances and condition, choose thee and not others, which will also wonderfully Magnifie the electing Love unto us. And for the several of these you may take two texts as instances of such a comparison. 1. Thess. 5. 9. For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain Salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ.

The matter of this comparative are the two Acts themselves, and although brought in there as motives to us, unto obedience, yet also they serve as well to us to be matter of thankfulness, that God hath not ordained us to wrath; In the connexion of the words immediately afore, they follow as the object of the hope every Christian hath. God hath not ordained them to wrath, but, &c. And in saying, hath not appointed us to wrath, he stirs them up to reflect upon what he hath done to others, and supposeth such an Ordination of Gods to have been towards others.

Negando quod nos posuit Deus in iram, affirmationem insinuat, quod Reprobos Deus posuit ad iram. Cajetan

2ly. For the Second comparison of persons you have, 2. Thess. 2. 13. But we are bound to give thanks always to God for you, Brethren, beloved of the Lord; because God hath from the beginning chosen you to Salvation, through sanctification of the Spirit, and belief of the truth.

This you see comes in a more express way provoking unto thankfulness, and those words [But for you &c.] do as expresly referr unto what the lot of others was, whose fate he had particularly deciphered in the Verse before, Vers. 11. 12. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lye: That they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness.

1. For the comparative between the Acts themselves. It is not unknown that in Election, there is discerned by Divines, Two eminent Parts, as some call them; or Gradus, or Degrees of proceeding therein, as others; several Instants, the School-men call them. And it is also acknowledged by them that there are Two eminent Parts of what is tearmed Reprobation, oppositely accompanying those Two of Election, as dark Shadows do light some Bodies. For Election Acts are the first and primary in order of Nature, and Reprobation Acts do follow or Answer thereto, as those words speaking of Election, the rest were blinded, Rom. 11. 7. does shew. Gods first Act (which his heart is upon) is his choice; and those left out therein are called the rest: As when the choice of some are first culled out of an heap, those that remain are the Rest.

The

Book III.

The first Act of Election is ad finem: Thus Acts 13. 48. As many as were ordained to Eternal Life, Believed.

2. To the means to that end, as in 2 Thess. 2. 13. Through Sanctification of the Spirit, and belief of the truth. Whereinto Christs death and Redemption is also to be taken in.

Now how the first of these is to be referred unto Man, considered before the Fall, as the Object of it; and the latter unto Man as faln, as the Object of it: As likewise how there are two Acts towards those. The [Rest] whom vulgarly we call Reprobates, that answer unto these Two of Election, I have in a former Treatise handled.

The one is a bare, not ordaining them unto that ultimate Glory, which is the End, Viz. Gods being all in all to them, as 1 Cor. 15. 28. The other a withholding from them these effectual Means, after, or upon foresight of their Fall. Such means, as through which he ordained his Elect to come unto that Glory, denied to those other; which Act it is the word Reprobation doth properly denote.

In the first they are considered as unfaln (I express it so indeterminately, unto them whether as Created or Creabiles, or that were to be Created) and so that ultimate Glory, being supernatural to the Creature by the Law of Creation, that Glory was Gods own propriety, which he might dispose of as his own at free pleasure. In the other Act of denial of the effectual Means, they were considered as faln into sin, and therein justly denied those effectual means by which the other are restored out of that Estate.

Now my business in this first Branch, is an Exaltation of Election Grace, in respect of these its two Acts of Grace shewn in Election, through the help of a comparative disparity of the two Acts of Electing Grace, with those correspondently opposite Acts of Reprobation, in their aspects unto either State.

1. Compare we that Act of Absolute Ordaining them unto that ultimate Glory, as viewed without the consideration of the faln Estate, with that other of simply not ordaining the [rest] to that Glory.

Tis true, concerning either of these, that there is in both a Pure Absolute Act of Dominion exercised, even in his not-Ordaining those unto that Glory, as the End, as much as Electing these other unto that Glory. For that Glory is wholly supernatural, and purely Gods own. And I may here apply that speech of Dominicus Bannies, Est manifestatio maximæ libertatis, quam habet divina voluntas circa dispensationem bonorum supernaturalium, quæ maxima est perfectio Divina. In the bestowing therefore of this supreamest Glory, the greatest liberty of the Divine Will is seen. And as liberty and Freedom is most conspicuous in it, so answerably, a Love supereminent. Insomuch, as let us suppose God should by another Decree bestow never so many and so great Good things on these, and yet not this superlative good of super-Creation Glory; the bare denyal or omission of this were an Act of hatred, in respect to a meer comparison of that Love in that ordination of others to that Glory. I conceive, that the instances of Jacob's Election, and the denial to Esau of this ultimate blessing, do most properly and pertinently hold forth the difference of these two bare Acts of Election to Glory, and the Negation of it, as to what God doth towards men, considered as afore the Fall, even as Pharaoh's instance in the same, Rom. 9. was alledged of Men considered as faln and hardened; and therefore the Apostle saith, upon occasion of this example, Whom he will he hardens; whereas in the Estate of the Example of Jacob and Esau, he here useth this gloss of his own upon it; Being yet not born, nor having done good nor evil; that is, as they were purely and abstractly considered from any sin or guilt any way contracted, as also before they were born: Our birth being that which brings us into an actual and visible Residency in this World. And unto this he applies that in Vers. 13. Jacob have I loved, and Esau have I hated, thus in the Type alledged, signifying Men unfaln. Now God ordained Esau (in the Type) to many good things, and great blessings, as in Isaacs blessing of him, Gen. 27. 39. 40. Behold, thy dwelling shall be the fatness of the Earth, and of the dew of Heaven from above, &c. But that which was the bleſſing indeed, this, his Brother (here ſays) had taken away, Verſ. 35. which was that by Election (which we are upon.) And thus did God without the conſideration of the Fall, ordain his choſen to that Supercreation Glory, though he denied [the reſt] that great good. He yet did purpoſe to ordain them to other good things of an Excellent Nature and Kind, as that Creation perfect Holineſs which was Gods Image, and the Dominion over all the work of his Hands, which Adam, and in him, we all were appointed unto by the Law of his and our Creation; which Condition, we all predicate as a compleat hapineſs: But ſtill this was not that good we ſpeak of, not that Glory in which God becomes All and in All. And although, unto ſo great a good, all Men were in this manner made heirs of, yet that will hold true which was ſaid of Eſau, in compariſon of Jacob's Portion, Eſau have I hated; and in that compariſon, Election to that ſupercreation Glory only hath the name of Love. And I underſtand the purport of thoſe Speeches thus; That there was ſo vaſt a difference put, and ſo great a love caſt upon the one, and ſo tranſcendent, as that comparatively the other was as Hatred: I underſtand it, I ſay, that this Love was ſo infinitely high, as that it made all other Love, and that Love to all Mankind in their Creation, to be but as no Love, no Glory (as the Apoſtle ſays of the Law in compariſon of the Goſpel which excelleth) yea it was as hatred. And thus I am taught to underſtand that hatred may be underſtood of a leſſer Love when ſet in compariſon with a Love farr exceeding: As when our Saviour ſpeaks of what Love ought to be beſtowed upon himſelf ſo deſervedly above what to Father and Mother, he ſays, If ye hate not Father and Mother, ye are not worthy of me. Hatred there imports, not barely a leſs loveing, but alſo ſerves to expreſs, and ſet out how great a Love that muſt needs be, and ought to be, that ſhall only deſerve the name of Love, in compariſon unto which, all other Love of what is, and ought to be in other reſpects, the higheſt Love amongſt Men (for we ought to Love Parents and Wives above all other Relations on Earth) ſhould be accounted hatred, and that whilſt we thus Love them, we muſt but Love them, with a Love ſo far below that Love we owe to Chriſt, as it muſt be but an hatred of them in collation with that towards him. thus. And thus in like manner to magnifie the Love he beareth his Elect (Jacobs,) he termeth that Love he beareth all others of Mankind, but hatred.

Chap. 2.

Thus Vaſquez and Eſtius. Habet ſe ad modum odientis, quod aliquid donum qui uni dat, alteri non concedat. Deus amat omnes homines in quantum vult aliquid bonum omnibus in quantum quibuſdam non vult hoc bonum nempe vitam æternam dicitur eos odio habere. See Arrowſmith pag. 314. and Daven. de Electione p 177.

And the comparing alone of this Supernatural good with all other good things, God did beſtow either on Adam, or on Men after the Fall, in Gifts Supernatural, as enlightnings and taſtings of the Powers of the World to come, &c. or outward Bleſſings, the Glory and Happineſs ſuppoſe which millions of Worlds could afford, might alone be ſufficient to enlighten us in this Argument to magnifie electing Grace by. I may ſay, That if all the common Mercies and Favours of all or any ſort that God hath ſcatteredly vouchſafed to and among all men, were heaped upon one man alone, and he made the Poſſeſſor of them, they all would be found too light in the Ballance with the Endowment of this Eternal weight of glory on us, and ſo light, as that they will be allowed no better account than of hatred; and it is a big word to be ſaid, This.

'Tis true indeed, that commonly men do not diſcern or conceive of the greatneſs of this Election priviledge made without, or afore the conſideration of the Fall, but by the Fall and the miſery they are brought into by ſin. Yet in this other way of Compariſon I have now made, theſe other good things forementioned muſt be acknowledged (if taken in by us) to be a moſt piercing and accommodate way to aggrandiſe it by: I ſhall further urge this Comparative of it with this Suppoſition made concerning Adam's ſtate and condition. Suppoſe we that Adam and all men had ſtood to this day (and to illuſtrate things we may make Suppoſitions of things that were never, but might have been as Chriſt, does Luke 10.13.) and not only ſo, but ſhould have ſo continued for ever; and that God, out from among them had elected ſome to that ultimate Glory and Kingdom we have been ſpeaking of, whom he had taken up immediately into it without Redemption, &c. whilſt thoſe others ſhould have enjoyed but that holineſs and happineſs they were created in, and continued in ſtill upon

Earth

Book III.

Earth, ſuch as Adam and Eve themſelves did, which is the Opinion of many Divines, he only ſhould have enjoyed. What an infinite difference would this have been? as much as of an earthly and heavenly State. And thereby even all along, during that eſtate ſo continuing, there had been an infinite illuſtraſtration given unto that heavenly Glory, in that a compleat happineſs on Earth, in enjoyment of God had, as a lower way been extant, infinitely ſhort of that heavenly Glory Election had deſigned ſome of them over the Head, as we ſay, of that Earthly State.

But further, if we withal ſuppoſe (as de facto it was) that all this holineſs and happineſs in Adam's State did mutually depend upon the changeable vertibility and ſlipperineſs of Free-will, lyable to fall, and ſo to forfeit it all in the twinkling of an eye, by admitting one ſinful thought, whereas in that firſt Act of Election we have been ſpeaking of, this ultimate Glory was immutably and unchangeably endowed upon thoſe God foreknew; and ſo whereas that other holy and happy ſtate hung but as a Comet or Meteor, wavering in the Air, this Gift of Glory was fixed in God's heart towards them, as the Sun is in the Firmament, as Pſal. 89. whereas the other were not liable only to fall, but de facto would have faln (even as Adam alſo did) at one time or another. What an infinite Favour and Grace then was it aforehand to enſure this Victory of his Elect? whether fall they, or not fall, they lye under an unchangeable Decree.

Again, Under this Head the Compariſon comes in between God's intention of our Salvation, as his End in Election, and of Mens Damnation in the point of Rejection.

'Tis true, that in his Decrees of either, his own Glory is the Supreameſt End in both Decrees, but yet in the point of Election, the Glory and Salvation of the Elect themſelves, is an ultimate End, which his heart is directly and abſolutely ſet upon. An End ſimply and for it ſelf deſired by him, as which his Soul ſingly and abſolutely delighted in, for and in it ſelf: Whereas in Reprobation the Caſe is otherwiſe; Damnation is the End indeed of the Perſons, yet no otherwiſe, but as Death is ſaid to be the end of Life, which is indeed the Iſſue, the Terminus which Life expires into; but 'tis not the End for which we live. And accordingly God proteſteth of the Death of a Sinner, that he hath no pleaſure in it, that is, not ſimply for it ſelf. Every end of any thing is optimum quid, and the perfection of a thing: But Damnation is the Extremity of Evil, and the higheſt Imperfection; and therefore was not the End God prounded to himſelf, which he cannot be ſaid to make the Creature for. And therefore moſt aſſuredly the Matter of Election and Reprobation, is not ſtated well by thoſe who ſay, That Mens Damnation and Reprobation, and Mans Salvation in Election, do ſtand in a like Poſture or Reference in God's intention, that is, intended by God upon like terms, for his own Glories ſake.——No there is an infinite difference; for beſides the Tendency which our Salvation hath unto his Glory, it was alſo intended by God ſimply and directly in it ſelf, as his End, though inferiour to his own Glory; but that of Damnation was never intended by him for it ſelf, as an End which he delights in.

Cum æterna Damnatio non ſit finis hominis, ſed tantum extremum τὸ ἔσχατον, ut vocant Græci, omnis finis eſt optimum quid et perfectio rei: Damnatio autem eſt extremum malum, & ſumma imperfectio, & ultimū malum ut mors eſt terminus vitæ, quæ non tamen eſt finis vitæ. Kecker. Syſt. Theol. lib. 3. chap. 3.

This for the Act of Election, conſidered as afore and without the Fall, and a Comparative of that Glory denied in that Act unto thoſe God paſt by, with all the other good things God did or might beſtow upon them.

But it pleaſed our God permiſſively to Decree thoſe Elect to fall together with the reſt, as for many other holy Ends, ſo for this one eſpecially that reſpects the matter in hand, that we might diſcern the difference of immutable Holineſs running along with Glory which Election brings unto, 1 Epheſ. 4. from that of Created Holineſs; which if we ſuppoſe Man had not faln from, but ſtood by, his free-will Grace had not been ſo manifeſtly deſcerned, but the Glory of it would have been obſcured and attributed unto mans Free-will, and not the Grace of Election.

Chap. 2.

I therefore Secondly come to a compariſon of the Acts of Election and Reprobation, as they were framed for and reſpected mans Faln Condition.

Now this firſt purpoſe unto this ultimate end, though it ſtand firm, yet it cannot bring unto that Glory, but by new Means, and ſuch as muſt be ſuited to bring ſinners to God. And hereupon that firſt Decree to Glory out of Abſolute Dominion, will not now ſerve the turn: For without Faith and Holineſs no man can pleaſe or ſee God: And without theſe God ſtood as peremptorily reſolved none ſhould ſee his Face, as he did to that other, to bring us to that Glory: And therefore a Decree of theſe new Means are neceſſarily required. For though God ſhould have taken (as he might) his Elect, by the firſt Decree, immediately out of that State of Creation, with that holineſs they were made in unto that ſupream Glory, yet that holineſs then, though perfect in its kind, was never ordained as a means to that Glory, viz. the Kingdom of the Father, as Faith on Chriſt and Holineſs flowing from thence now are: For that any thing ſhould be a means unto Glory, depended upon an ordination of God and an ordering of one for the other. And this ultimate Glory the Kingdom of the Father, & God being all in all, ſhould never have gone by Works only, which was Adam's Covenant; So that if we ſhould ſuppoſe that act of his Grace had purpoſes and ordained to take up theſe his Elect unto Glory, out of that State of Holineſs by Creation, (ſuppoſing Adam alſo not to have faln, but to have propagated that Holineſs to his Poſterity) yet the Holineſs of that Covenant had not been an influential Means to that Glory, but was thus far, and upon this account neceſſary, yet indeed it muſt have been continued; For if it had not, then Guilt had ariſen, and ſo a Barr unto that Glory; ſo that indeed it was a requiſite, ſine quo non, but not a Means of influence by that Covenant, no more than Creation it ſelf was. Well, but now upon the Fall, there is an Abſolute Bar to Glory, the Elect are faln into the Demerit of the Contrary, of Hell and Damnation, as well as thoſe others which the Scripture calls the Reſt or the Refuſed.

Hence therefore, if the Elect be brought to Glory, conſidered as faln, there muſt be New Decrees of Means in order to that end: Chriſt muſt become a Redeemer, a Redeemer from ſin, to remove that Demerit; and then on our part, Faith on him, and Repentance for ſin (in which two our calling conſiſts) are ordained to be given them to bring them to Salvation. When thoſe means came to be Decreed, it will be tryed whether his firſt purpoſe of ordaining the Elect to Glory be firm or no. In the Apoſtles words, Rom. 9. 11. Now when they are conſidered as faln, whether God will now in this neceſſity (as abſolute as the former) further ſhew forth his Love in giving Chriſt, as a Redeemer, and effectual calling to you, not at all, proceeding therein by works which our firſt Creation Covenant proceeds by. And if faln man would have attempted to perform, he could never have obtained at God's Hands, to call or work Repentance in them.

Now as to the magnifying God's Grace in his ordaining to give his Elect thoſe new Means, after the Fall, theſe things may be conſidered.

1. When the Decree of thoſe means ſhould come to be made, there was and muſt have been a New or Second Election, or renewal of that firſt Act of Ordaining to the End: As often after the miſcarriages of the Elect, the Scripture ſpeaks, Iſaiah 14. 1. For the Lord will have mercy upon Jacob and will [yet] chuſe Iſrael. And as for the thing it ſelf, it's no abſurdity to ſay, that God in continuance renews his Acts of Election every moment; but here there was a neceſſity of it, a neceſſity at leaſt of another Act to be added to the firſt, Namely, that which Divines moſtly appropriate the word Predeſtination unto, as they diſtinguiſh it from Election ſimply conſidered, which, ſay they, more ordinarily imports barely a choice unto the End; But Predeſtination to be an ordaining of means, and through theſe means unto the End. And therefore now there needed a new further extent of Love and Mercy, not only to continue his reſolution to Love, notwithſtanding the Fall, but to contrive the means of carrying them through to Glory notwithſtanding that Fall. And upon and for this Act it is, and upon occaſion of it, that the Scripture ſo celebrates the Love of GOD. GOD ſo loved the World, as he gave his only begotten Son, namely, as a Redeemer, John 3. 16. and 1 John 4. 10. Herein is love, not that we loved GOD, but that he loved us, and ſent his Son to be the Propitiation for our ſins. And herein the ſtrength and firmneſs of that firſt Act of Election appeared, and ſhewed, that God was ſo reſolute therein, that nothing could diſſolve or alter it. And thus by this order of Decrees (which in the former Treatiſe we ſhewed) and by this Second Act, the Grace of Election comes to be the more magnified.

2ly. That together with this New Act Ordaining to theſe means, there was a denial of giving the ſame unto the [Reſt] to whom he had alſo denied Glory afore in that firſt Act of Preterition. And this ſecond Denial of the means to be made with ſo manifeſt a difference, doth mightily enhance Electing Grace, Matt. 13. 11. It is GIVEN TO YOU to know the Myſtery of the Kingdom of Heaven, but to them it is not given. And how given to them but by and from Election? The Election obtained it [whereas the reſt were blinded]. As alſo Chriſt, John 10. 26. Ye Believe not, (which is the means to Salvation) Why? Becauſe ye are not of my Sheep, Namely, by Election; alſo John 6. 64, 65. But there are ſome of you that Believe not, for Jeſus knew from the beginning, who they were that Believed not, and who ſhould betray him. And he ſaid, therefore ſaid I unto you, that no man can come unto me, except it were given unto him of my Father, compared with John 13. 18. I ſpeak not of you all, I know whom I have choſen, but that the Scripture might be fulfilled, he that eateth bread with me, hath lift up his heel againſt me. Where the Reaſon of giving Faith is plainly reſolved into Election (and is not choſen unto Apoſtleſhip, that is there meant but unto Salvation before the World) and exemplified in the inſtance of Judas there brought, as alſo of thoſe others ſpoken of in that 6th. of John, which enjoyed the beſt and moſt powerful outward means (Chriſts Miniſtry) that ever was or ſhall be; but it was Election that put the difference, by which they were made Chriſts Sheep Originally, and which Ordained to give the other Apoſtles ſaving and effectual inward means, and workings of Grace over and above thoſe outward means vouchſafed.

And this is amplified as the former was by this, that as in the firſt Act of Election, though God gave that Holineſs that was by Creation, due, or to be due unto thoſe of Adams Poſterity, ſuppoſe he had Propagated, whom yet he had denied that Supream Glory unto; or did Ordain that Creation Holineſs to be a means to that Glory: So here with this ſecond Decree of his Elect to ſaving means. God indeed anſwerably ordains to give the beſt of good things that in this World men are capable of, unto many of thoſe [the Reſt] which are yet ſhort of true Faith and Grace. He gives them Spiritual gifts, unto the Rebellious alſo, as he ſays in the Pſalmiſt, Enlightnings, Taſtings of the Powers of the World to come, which are given indeed, that men might be ſaved, as Chriſt ſpeaks of his Preaching, which are an outward means to Salvation, John 6. That is, They have a tendency to Salvation; Even as Chriſt's Miniſtry (as himſelf witneſſeth) tended to the Salvation of them that heard thoſe things. I ſpeak (ſays Chriſt) That you might be ſaved, but yet they have not Salvation in them, or accompanying them, and annext to them, as Heb. 6. 4, 5. and 9th. compared, true Grace is ſaid to have. And GOD doth this, to illuſtrate by this difference, his Electing Grace in giving ſaving means unto his Choſen.

3ly. Let us compare the Grounds of thoſe Acts themſelves, viz. The Decree to give effectual means to the one, and the denyal thereof to the other, let us compare I ſay theſe two together, and ſuch a difference appears, the Grounds or Foundations of doing the one, and the other, as will ſerve greatly, yet more to inhance the Grace of God in this Act of Election to the means through that compariſon of thoſe ſeveral grounds.

The Foundation of his Decreeing his Elect to thoſe effectual means, proves ſtill to be as pure an Act of Dominion, and ſo out of meer Love, and Grace, as much as was the former Act of Election to the End, and with a ſuper-addition of mercy to it, yea, and further degree of Dominion exerciſed therein; whereas on the other hand, the ground of his denial of thoſe means to the other conſi-dered now as fallen, becomes not an Act of pure Dominion, but of Juſtice, though put forth by his Will. Chap. 2.

And how from this compariſon of theſe two, there accrews that which will yet magnifie the Grace of Election, I ſhall ſhew after. I ſhall have firſt cleared and explained the Premiſes.

That Gods denial of effectual means to thoſe we call Reprobates to bring them to Salvation, after Man is conſidered as faln, is not as then an Act of pure Dominion, Soveraign Dominion, but hath a jus ordinatum in it, which juſtly may move him thereunto.

It is true indeed, thoſe that hold all Acts of Election and Reprobation to have been after the Fall conſidered, they do in this reſpect make Reprobation an Act of pure Dominion, Namely, that if the Enquiry be why he choſe thoſe and thoſe, and not the others, and why he Reprobated, when he might have choſen them whom he caſt away; And on the contrary, have caſt away whom he choſe, according to that, I will be merciful, to whom I will be merciful, and whom he will he hardens; and in ſo doing (ſay they) God lookt not at all at Sin as the Motive to his paſſing by thoſe individual perſons he did paſs by: And though this be true, yet I withal muſt add, that there remains ſtill this difference, that Sin and the loſs of Holineſs man had before the Fall, did bring in a deſert to be Reprobated, and to have the means to bring men effectually to Salvation denied them, and this none can deny. And therefore it is acknowledged by ſome, that though ſin is not Cauſa reprobationis, take the Act, Eſt tamen cauſa reprobabilitatis. Wollevius Lib. 1. Cap. 4. Can. 5.

And further that efficacious means ſhould be withdrawn, is from their ſin, they being now faln, according to that of Chriſt, leſt they ſhould ſee with their eyes, &c. Matt. 13. 15. For the Fall foreſeen, did from the firſt preclude them from thoſe means, for it brings in a want of all good, and poſſeſſes the whole of the heart with the contrary unto all thoſe means, ſo as God ſhould not have needed to exerciſe any Act of Dominion, unto the perſon thus fallen in this denial of means; for the guilt and power of ſin in the heart do preoccupate and prevent, or rather prepoſſeſs the room of thoſe Principles, which are now to be the means of bringing men to Glory; ſo as although as to the Perſons, whom after the Fall viewed, He Reprobated, whilſt he choſe others to thoſe means, there was indeed a Dominion exerciſed, yet as to the thing denied, there was not a pure Prerogative exerciſed, but a jus ordinatum, concurred with it, and was mingled with it; a juſt Cauſe or Reaſon, de jure, or in right for God ſo to do; and this is a certain truth, that not to grant a thing De Novo or, anew, that is, by a forfeiture excluded and debarred to be given, is not a meer Act of denial thereof, or pure Act of Prerogative, for there is deſert in it, why it ſhould be done, but this is the Caſe in the Point afore us. And I ſpeak thus of it, although they forfeited in Adam, what indeed was leſs in ſome reſpects, than is required now, as the means to bring them unto Glory, yet in ſubſtance it is the ſame Image of God that was Created then, that is, Created now. Yet ſo, as by the guilt of that loſs there aroſe a juſt prohibition in Law againſt the giving of new means to bring faln Man to Salvation by, without a new interpoſition of Soveraign Grace.

So as now the working of that Grace and of Holineſs in us, that are now Ordained to be the effectual means having Salvation in them, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Heb. 6. 9. flow all purely and immediately from Election, and the fruits of it, yea, and become an Act of higher Dominion, than was exerciſed in that other, to the end and that not only becauſe that all is a free gift, as Rom. 5. 15. 16. in this reſpect, that there was an utter want of Power to bring forth ſuch efficacious Acts unto Salvation, yea, a Principle contrary unto all the Works of Grace; but alſo in this, that there was a deſert to the contrary by a Law, even the Law of our Creation; ſo as now there muſt be an overruling Dominion of Grace exerted to work them. And now its not in him that runs, nor in him that wills, but in God that ſhews mercy, which is ſpoken in reſpect to the means of Salvation: And indeed all the withdrawings of thoſe means after the Fall are to be conſidered as judicial Acts in God, as leaving them unto Sins and Damnation following thereupon: Theſe are all Book III. along after the Fall Acts of Judicature, on Gods part, and his Decreeing of them, or diſpoſing of them foreſeen, are to be put unto the Account. And as God Decrees not to Damn, but only for ſin, ſo he Decrees not to withdraw the inward means of Salvation but for ſin foreſeen.

Hence therefore for God to chuſe to the means effectual to bring to Salvation his Elect conſidered as faln, there is a jus Abſolutionis in it, hightened to the higheſt. But in Reprobation, not to give them to Man faln; there was what ſhould move him to it, and a Juſtice in it.

Now if this ſecond Act of Election unto the means, be thus an Act, Juris abſoluti in the higheſt kind, which the other is not, as by the former Comparative appears; then how may and ſhould we afreſh magnifie the Grace and Love of God ſhewen therein? If God had in Decreeing to give thoſe effectual means, gone by a jus ordinatum, or a Rule, or any thing revived in us, that ſhould have deſerved the giving thoſe means, as our Running, or our Willing, as Motives to beſtow them, then the Dominion of giving them, had gone by a jus ordinatum: And then it had gone by Works, and had not been of him that calleth; Namely, out of his pure Dominion, as that oppoſition declares in Rom. 9. And then his Grace, and Love, would have been leſſened in this Act. But being otherwiſe, now the purity of the Glory of Grace continues ſtill as high, and ſhines as clear and glenous, as in that other Act of Election to the end, yea, higher, for the Reaſons given aforeſaid. How then ſhould this Love and Grace be magnified by us in this ſecond Act of Election, by theſe conſiderations.

1. For where more of Dominion is, and appears in an Act, that is, an Act of Grace, there is the more of Grace ſhewn therein; For then it is Grace Abſolutely and every way Grace, when there is nothing obliging or moving thereunto in the leaſt; and Grace is then Grace when it is every way Grace, and kept free of all Obligations or encouragements that are from us. It is not only the greatneſs of the gift, that ſets out the Grace, but the freeneſs and abſoluteneſs of the giving and beſtowing of it; now where there is the more Dominion, there is the more liberty in the giving, and the more freeneſs, and ſo the more Grace in it. Kings are ſaid in their gifts to be gracious, becauſe they have ſo high and Soveraign Dominion, and free from Obligations to their Subjects. The glory of Grace lies in Freedom, when it is mero motu, as the ſtile of Kings in giving gifts doth run.

2. In that former Act of Election to the end, towards us as not faln, but Creabiles, or as conſidered in creating appears, (as it was indeed) an abſolute Dominion, becauſe in Beſtowing it, God beſtowed purely what was his own. And wherein there is maxima libertas, as out of Bannies was ſhewn. And beſides the greatneſs of the Dominion, its being a Deſtination, ſo great a Glory doth inhance it. For think with your ſelves, a thing out of nothing, Decreed to be created, and then created, and whilſt it is yet nothing, could no way be conſidered to have any thing in it to move or oblige, but yet ſo as ſtill there was nothing contrary, which could be viewed therein. If you will ſay it was ſimply in the Power of God and the Soveraignty of God to Ordain this, but yet there was no bar to hinder the procedure of it, and yet put in a Caveat, or Plea againſt it in the leaſt, but where ſin is, (as in Man conſidered as faln) there is a Law utterly to the contrary as was ſaid, and therefore 'tis a higher Dominion to remove thoſe croſs bars, to Anſwer thoſe Pleas, and over-rule and give means to faln Man to Salvation anew, than to Ordain to the End at firſt; and therefore it is the Scripture ſets forth by this the Love of God to us, that while we were ſinners Chriſt died for us. And ſo God loved the World, that he gave his only begotten Son, and the like; which were but means to ſave Man faln.

3. There was in that faln Condition when it was in view, Cauſa reprobabilitatis, a Cauſe to have been Reprobated, not ſo in the former Act: A reprobability there was to the denying of all means for the future, and ſo of Salvation it ſelf. For without theſe means, none that were faln could be ſaved, and there was the ſame provocation to deny it to thoſe the Elect, conſidered as now faln, as was to the other, if the Dominion of Grace and Love, had not ſtept in. And therefore in Iſaiah 41. Verſ. 9. 'Tis ſaid that when Gods Law choſe thee, He might have caſt thee away. Thou whom I have taken from the Ends of the Earth, and called thee from the chief men thereof, and ſaid unto thee, Thou art my Servant, I have choſen thee and not caſt thee away. Of which ſpeech there may be a double meaning. 1. That God was immutable in his Love, that whom he had ſo choſen, he would never caſt away; Or, 2. That when he choſe them, it was Free to Him, and he might as eaſily have laid them aſide. It was to him but as a man would turn a Key one way or th'other, to lock, or unlock. It was but ſaying, Yea, or no, I know you, or I know you not.

CHAP.

CHAP. III.

The Infinity of Grace in Electing us, further evinced by a Comparative made in reſpect unto the Perſons Refuſed and Elected, as conſidered in the Common Condition of both, and the Circumſtances which both ſtand in Of their firſt Condition in the poſſibility before the Creation, as then view'd by God, repreſented in his Infinite Mind, the Elect were ſeparated from the others rejected.

THIS for the firſt Head of comparing the Acts themſelves; my next is a Comparative of the Perſons Elected or paſt by, as they are conſidered in their Conditions or Circumſtances out of which they are choſen or refuſed. And for this my Text is 2 Theſſ. 2. 12, 13. That they all might be damned, who believed not the Truth, but had pleaſure in Unrighteouſneſs. But we are bound to give thanks alway to God for you, Brethren, beloved of the Lord; becauſe God hath from the beginning choſen you to Salvation, through ſanctification of the Spirit, and belief of the Truth.

Thoſe words [but for you] are a Diſcrimination and Exception of theſe from others, whoſe Condition he had declared in the immediate Verſes afore; Verſe 11, 12. in theſe words, And for this cauſe God ſhall ſend them ſtrong deluſions, that they ſhould believe a lye. That they all might be damned, who believed not the Truth, but had pleaſure in Unrighteouſneſs. And that Election had put in that [but] and made the difference: So ſtirring them up to thankfulneſs by his own giving thanks on their behalf.

'Tis true, the Condition of thoſe conſidered as faln into ſin, is the Matter here compared, yet is it in a ſpecial manner pitching the Compariſon upon the Condition of Perſons. I therefore take it for a ground work for what concerns a Comparative of Perſons, whether conſidered as faln, or without the Fall; No Scripture adequately comprehending both: Yet upon occaſion of handling the Compariſon about the ſtate of man faln, I may extend it to either, and begin it higher with that afore the Fall, which other Scriptures warrant the Truth of, as our Divines have defended it out of Rom. 9. and other places.

1. The ſtate of Elect and Non-elect, afore or without the conſideration of the Fall, is that of Creatureſhip ſimply and abſolutely conſidered, wherein God in and at his Decree for Creation, whilſt he was determining to Create, and viewed the whole Crop of them a growing up, but as yet in his purpoſe and will to Create them, his gracious good Will did, together with that his Creation Decree, both of thoſe he elected, and of all things elſe, put forth that Election purpoſe, pre-ordaining them to be the firſt Fruits of his whole Creation, ſetting them apart for himſelf, and conſecrating them unto the higheſt Communion with himſelf, and of ultimate Glory above the reſt of their fellow Creatures: And thus, but as conſidered as Creatures, though in their kind wherein they were to be created——.

You have this foreſaid Expreſſion in the Apoſtle James, That we might be the firſt Fruits of his Creatures; and put we all the Particulars that do follow together, and the Aſſertion will come out of them.

1. It

1. It is the whole heap or harveſt of the firſt Creation, as ſtanding on the ground afore him, he means by Creatures, whereof theſe are ſaid to be the firſt Fruits: For it is the Saints univerſally, all of them, that are as the firſt Fruits, ſevered and differenced from the reſt of God's Creation, as univerſally taken, and not of ſome ſpecial Saints of that Age, the firſt Fruits of other Saints to come, as Vorſtius would have it. Chap. 3.

2. The firſt Fruits were in their Original Condition, but of the ſame that other their fellow Fruits were of, and were conſidered but as ſuch in themſelves; only were by God's choice conſecrated to himſelf in a ſpecial manner, becauſe the firſt; as the firſt Fruits of their kind.

3. Theſe in James were made the firſt Fruits wholly by a Free Election or Choice of them; but thoſe other firſt Fruits were thoſe that were firſt by Natures production ſhot forth out of the Earth, and then conſecrated by God: But that theſe Perſons ſhould be the firſt Fruits, was the whole of it meerly from a Choice made of them, from a ſpecial love and good will, calling and ſingling them forth out of that common Creature Condition, that which they were by Creation. And the Text inſinuates thus much, even God's ſpecial good will to have been the Cauſe, as the immediate words afore do ſhew, Of his good will he begat us, that we might be the firſt Fruits. What will? that εὐδοκία, (whereof Eph. 1. 5.) That ſpecial good will, from whence their being begotten again—— and their being the firſt Fruits, which is the End and Iſſue thereof, and all do flow. And indeed, the reaſon of the thing it ſelf would carry ſo much: For it is Election from Eternity that moulds all, orders all, to the main End thereby aimed at, and ſo muſt have done this, and it could have no other Original it depended on.

4. Then ſurely that ſpecial good will and choice muſt be ſuppoſed to have taken them up as viewed in the common Condition of Creatureſhip: And it muſt not be ſaid that this their Election was only (in the order of Act) after the Fall; but he climes up higher, and places it from the firſt, with that of their own and others Creation, out from amongſt whom, and conſidered ſimply at Creation (together with the reſt of their fellow Creatures, whereof, as ſuch, they were to be the firſt Fruits) it was they were choſen. And why elſe doth he ſay of the Creatures or Creation? And not of Mankind. Why not of man faln, but of the Creation? And the firſt Fruits of the whole firſt Creation? This doth at leaſt import that they were choſen the firſt Fruits, as early as they and their fellow Creatures, conſidered as Creatures, and decreed to be Created. So as theſe two Decrees of Creating all things, and Electing of theſe with the firſt, muſt at leaſt have been Twins of the ſame Birth at once brought forth, for they have mutual reſpects of Creatureſhip and firſt Fruits one to the other, and are as old one as the other. And what is ſaid to be the firſt thing compared with other things, muſt be ſuppoſed to Exiſt from the firſt, with thoſe they are compared unto. And therefore theſe two, Creatures and firſt Fruits, had the ſame Order in God's Decrees; and thoſe two Acts and Decrees are allied (and akin, and aſſociated more than any other) comported and connext together.

5. Add this alſo; That the firſt Fruits were not ſtiled the firſt Fruits of the reſt of the kind, when corrupted and proved rotten.——Not of a Basket of Ezekiel's bad Figs, ſo bad as they could not be eaten. No, it were moſt improper to inſtitute ſuch a Compariſon: It relates therefore to the Creation of all things, when viewed in his Purpoſe and Decree, as Good, (as after the Creation perfected, God did view them and approve them) and ſuch likewiſe in his intuition of them in his Decree and purpoſe ſuch to make, and under that view ordained theſe in the Iſſue to be made ſuch: And therefore this doth refer to a Decree made of them at that of the Creation, and that then it was God did will them the firſt Fruits.

If it be objected, That he ſpeaks there of what they are made by Regeneration, and not of God's firſt Decree and Regeneration, ſuppoſing their being ordained the firſt Fruits, and upon the conſideration of the Fall.

I Reply. It is true indeed, he ſpeaks not expreſly or immediately of what his Decrees were; but it muſt be ſuppoſed, according to what was ſaid even now, that they are the Moulders and Framers of what is in the Event. Secondly, 'Tis true, that in the Execution or Performance of the Decree, they became not actually the firſt Fruits, but by Regeneration, which ſuppoſeth them faln; and yet this the ultimate End of being the firſt Fruits, may and was notwithſtanding (according to the former Arguments) intended with the firſt of their Creation with other Creatures,

Now this of their being the firſt Fruits, is eminently and emphatically in the Text ſet forth, as the ultimate End of all, ἵνας τὸ εἶναι, To the end that they may be the firſt Fruits; which End was firſt deſigned conjunct with the Decree of the Creation of the whole.

And although in Execution or firſt performance, they firſt became, at Regeneration, to be the firſt Fruits actually by this new Creation, and that ſuppoſeth the Fall afore, viewed (that is granted) So as their εἶναι, or elſe Actual, is the fruit thereof, yet their Eſſe notitionale, their being ſuch, might be, and was entended as the end of their Creation, and with the firſt of the Decree thereof. It is evident that the being the firſt Fruits, is here the End of their Regeneration, and yet intended and aimed at with their Creation, and his good will, that was from Eternity ingaged in both: But his Decrees of you to be the firſt Fruits, was the Primitive Decree, as of the End, and that of Regeneration, but as of the Means to accompliſh that End.——This the Means of Execution, but that of being the firſt Fruits of the Creation; thats the End. And indeed denotes the ultimate End, even that the performance of it will be next unto Chriſts; for 'tis to be even the firſt Fruits of the whole Creation, as he the firſt born of every Creature, and ſo in the Iſſue to be exalted and preferred unto the higheſt top of Glory, even above any of his Creatures, Angels or Men. And unto what a height the Priviledge and Dignity imported thereby will amount to, will not be known untill the latter day be over, and that we be eſtated into the Glory and Kingdom of the Father. Matth. 25. 34. Then ſhall the King ſay to them on his right hand, come ye bleſſed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the beginning of the World. And it became him, by whom are all things, to joyn the Decree of Creating the Elect (as the Subjects of that Kingdom) and to Elect them therewith, as their ultimate higheſt End, and of their firſt Creation.

In Fine therefore, as to the Objection it ſelf, the Sum of my Anſwer, and the Series of the words is, that by Regeneration, which is Decreed after the Fall foreſeen, our being Gods firſt Fruits of all Creatures, which was Decreed at, and with that of the Creation of all doth by regeneration begin to be effected, in a Smaller degree of firſt Fruits in this life, and accompliſhed in Glory.

And ſo the contexture fairly ſtands thus, as if he had ſaid, that God hath Created us anew out of his Everlaſting good will, thereby to bring about that which was his great and firſt Deſign of all other, of making us the firſt Fruits and Glory of the whole Creation, and conjunct with his Decree of Creation of them, and all things elſe; and as ſuch viewed by him, when he firſt Decreed to make them as the ultimate End, he with their Creation had ordained them unto.

2. Let us advance the Terminus à quo, or the Objective Conſideration of us, out of which Election at firſt took us: Yet higher, Mundus nondum conditus, the World as yet not Decreed to be Created, muſt firſt be in Gods view, ere he put forth that Decree to Create it. For ſo in every Artificer the Frame and Model of what he purpoſeth to make, is firſt in his thoughts, 'ere he reſolves to make it. And by the Rule, aforeſaid, viz. that Creation and Election ran as Parallel Acts, there was, and in order of Nature it muſt firſt be ſuppoſed, that thoſe Elected were firſt in view, but as things he could both Create and Elect, under the view of Eligible and Creable; and the State of either things to be Created, and theſe to be Elected and Created, was but of meer Poſſibilities; To have a Being decreed them, as God pleaſed, whe-whether yea or not: And ſo their State they were taken forth of, when firſt Elected, was the ſame with that which all things Created had afore the Decree of their being Created; meer poſſibles in reality of Creatureſhip, pure nothings every way, utter Non-entities, which yet God could Decree, and give an Exiſtence unto. Chap. 3.

When I ſay [every way] Non-entities, nor having a Shadow of Being: The meaning is, that not only they were nothing in that they were not yet de facto Created; for ſo the whole World, untill Decreed to be Created, was nothing in actual exiſtence; but that they lay afore God, as not yet ſo much as Decreed to be Created, and ſo had not a Being in Gods Decree, till that paſt on them together, both for their Creation and Election to Glory.

For the underſtanding hereof; we may with the Schoolmen, make a Threefold Eſſe or Being aſcribed to the Creature.

1. An Eſſe actuale, an actual Being, which is when 'tis Created.

2. An Eſſe volitum, which is a Being that lies in Gods will, which is the State of them after God hath purpoſed to Create them.

3. An Eſſe Poſſibile, which is a meer poſſibility, afore Gods Decree paſſed to have being, firſt Decreed it, and then to be by Creation given to it. Which lying in Gods power, in that he can, if he pleaſe, make it, or otherwiſe not, meerly lies in Gods underſtanding, in the Image or forms of it.

Now the State and common Condition of all Creatures, immediately afore God decreed to Create them, was this Latter only, which aroſe from this, That Gods Power preſented to his Infinite underſtanding, an Infinity of Shadows or Ideas, Images of Creatures, which he might make if he pleaſed, which yet he never did, or ever willed to make; And the Number of theſe are infinite, becauſe his Power is infinite to Create ſuch, and his Underſtandlng is infinite to faſhion and form up the Shapes or Images in his Mind, of all that his Power can effect. Man is narrow both in his Underſtanding and Power; and his Underſtanding may never have the Forms or Models of all that he is able to do, or make, for to enter into his thoughts. But with God it is otherwiſe; his Underſtanding being infinite, doth form up the Idea of all, and every thing his Power can effect diſtinctly. The State and Condition of theſe things, as they lay in Gods ſimple ſingle intelligence, the Scripture expreſſeth in ſuch Speeches and Terms as theſe, To God all things are poſſible.

Now the mediate State of all the Elect afore Gods Decree to chooſe them, being no other than this, of all things elſe, as they lay in a Capability to Creation and the Decree of it; and under that view of things poſſible only; they were objected or propoſed to Gods Will, both for their Creation and Election together; and Gods chooſing of them having been (as was ſaid) an immediately conjunct and aſſociated Act with Gods Decree to Create them, without a preſuppoſition of their being yet to be Created, much leſs faln. And that both theſe Acts Proceeded hand in hand together, or rather like Twins twined about together, and their hands embracing each other, not depending upon any other Conſideration or view that was had of them; this I ſay, being ſuppoſed true,

Hence it will follow, that the State of Gods Elect was of meer poſſibles, as immediately afore their being Elected, as other Creatures, or themſelves were, in reſpect unto Creation, and the Decree thereof: For it is certain, there could be no other State of things afore Creation was Decreed; Nor could the Divine Underſtanding have any other view of any thing, or all things, until his Will had paſt a Decree upon them, and given a Fiat to create them: And what could that be other than that which God's Underſtanding hath (now ſtill) in his mind, of things which he never means to create, and yet might if he pleaſed: And the ſame was the caſe and condition immediate of the Elect, unto Election and Creation both, until the Divine Sanction of his Will had come upon them: Till then they were meer appearances and ſhadows, as all things elſe were, which God might or might not chooſe and create. And till they lay in that indiſpoſed heap of things, about which God had made no determination at all, no, nor ever will make any, they floated in a meer vacuity and pure emptineſs, both as to Being or Glory: And look as his Decree to create gave his Elect, and others, a Being to come in due time, ſo his Decree of Election eſtated on them that Glory to come, and both immediately brought forth by theſe his Decrees, out of that meer Lump of Poſſibilities forementioned. Let the more learned Reader excuſe my ſo often repeating things (to the ſame effect,) it is for the weaker, their ſakes, that they may both underſtand and fixedly retain the Notion of it.

The proof of this, That God might have choſen others out of meer Poſſibilities, whom he hath not, nor never would, and ſo that they remain in their pure poſſibility to Eternity, may adequately be drawn from God's offer unto Moſes, Deut. 9. 14. Let me alone that I may deſtroy them, and blot out their name from under Heaven: And I will make of thee a Nation greater and mightier than they: And to be in their room a Surrogated People to him, as they by Election had been; for elſe he had not made up a ſupply: Yet this People God never did make, nor will make, but could have done. The like out of the Baptiſt's Speech, Luke 3. 8. I ſay to you, God is able, out of theſe Stones, to raiſe Children unto Abraham.

Of the common condition of the Elect, and rejected in the faln Estate of Mankind. The Infinity of Grace toward the Grace Magnify'd by the consideration of their being segregated out of that General corrupt Mass, wherein they lay equally with others: Gods Infinite Grace in choosing us also discovered by the vast Disproportion of Number between the Elect, and the Rest.

WE have seen what that Act of Election without and afore the Consideration of the Fall doth afford.

Let us now descend unto what the Prospect of Mans Condition (as it lay also afore God, and was disposed of by him) considered as faln, will in the like comparative way, contribute to this Argument. And this the Scriptures do more inlarge upon, as that which doth far above the former magnifie the Glory of Electing Grace, and by so much more as the evil of sin Man is faln into; and the misery thereby doth exceed a State of meer nothing, or of no Being at all, or but meer possibility of Being. And here also that Quere of the Apostle hath its most eminent lustre, Who made thee to differ? 1 Cor. 4. 7. GOD. And what in God? ELECTION, The Election obtained it, and the rest were blinded.

And it is this Comparison between Elect and the Rest after the Fall; it is the Condition wherein the one or other are found in after the Fall, which is the chief and principal, to inhance this discriminating or differencing Grace, although the comparison of Number will follow us in this too.

Now the view of the Conditions of Men after the Fall, are reduced to Two Heads.

1. The Common alike Universal Condition by, and through the Fall of Adam; That all have sinned and come short of the Glory of God, as the Apostle declares. Or,

2. The several and more particular Conditions amongst Mankind upon the Fall, in their variety; as for instance, several Sises and Degrees of actual sins, and other Circumstances, which men Elect, with the Rest stand in, and were thereto foreseen, and disposed of by God, so to fall out when he then chose us through the means of Salvation; all and each of which, do tend to magnifie this Election Grace.

I. The Common Universal, and alike Condition of Man Faln. And to set forth the greatness of this Grace and Mercy, is the full and set scope of the Apostle in Ephes. 2. 1, 2. where speaking of their Calling (which is the Looking-Glass of Election) he presents them alike dead in sins and trespasses, as the whole bulk and Body of Mankind were in, and these Elect ones, Chapter, 1*st.* together with them, We (says he) even as others, that's his Comparative, as it is mine here, and those others were of such as God Eternally left in that condition, passing by them, and leaving them even as he found them, and by this he heightens the Grace, Love, and Mercy God had born to them, as the Cause of all this, Vers. 4. According as he hath chosen us in him, before the foundation of the World, that we should be holy and without blame before him in Love. And he concludes thereupon, by Grace you are saved, Verse 5.

Book III.

an infinite Grace manifeſted by this common condition of us with others. And although theſe things are ſpoken of them, of what they were at, and afore the time of their Calling, and in their Unregenerate condition: Yet this Act of Election we are now upon, that had Man faln for its Object, and the common condition thereof did take men, and viewed us at and afore calling them, they are found to be in and of this Act. The Rule certainly holds, that look what a calling God found us to be, in that Election viewed us. Which that paſſage, 1 Cor. 1. 26, 27. (For ye ſee your calling Brethren, how that not many wiſe men after the fleſh, not many mighty, not many noble are called: But God hath choſen the fooliſh things of the World, to confound the wiſe; and God hath choſen the weak things of the World, to confound the things which are mighty.) evidently ſhews, Thoſe words, But God hath choſen, &c. come in as an Explanation, or Confirmation of the former words, You ſee your calling. As if he had ſaid, Look what thoſe were whom Calling ſingles out, and what they are after Calling in Paucity; the ſame they were therefore for their conditions, whom God choſe, and in his view ſuch to be.

II. And here let us, 2. Now add to the Conſideration of this common Condition, the infinite Number of thoſe [others] whom God hath laid aſide in this faln Condition, in compariſon of ſo very a few, who together with thy ſelf, were Elected out of them; which the event doth manifeſtly declare the multitude of thoſe left, and the paucity, or fewneſs of thoſe whom God ſets his heart upon; and unto what a ſtupendious infinity will this enhaunce the Grace of that Election towards thoſe few. Though the Number of the Children of Iſrael, be as the ſand of the Sea, a Remnant ſhall be ſaved; and that Remnant is that of Election, Rom. 11. 5. A Remnant according to the Election of Grace. A Remnant, ſignifies a ſmall number, in compariſon to the whole: As alſo his compariſon, Verſ. 29. ſhews, Unleſs God had left us a Seed, we had been as Sodom, and been made like unto Gomorrha. That notes their fewneſs, being but as when the moſt of a mans Crop is ſold and eaten, there is but a very ſmall part reſerved for Seed againſt the next Harveſt. The like unto this, doth that compariſon of the firſt Fruits in James, and in the Type import.

Now the paucity of men enjoying any Priviledge, magnifies it the more; as in the caſe of Noahs Preſervation and Salvation, forementioned in the Third Chapter of the Firſt of Peter. It is expreſly noted, that few with him were ſaved, that is, but eight perſons, ſaith he, unto the whole World. Verſ. 20. Likewiſe Luke the 12*th. Says Chriſt, theſe things do the Nations ſeek, Verſ.* 30. Viz. The things of this World; and God gives them to them, but in oppoſition thereto, Verſ. 32. Fear not little Flock, for it is your Fathers good pleaſure to give you the Kingdom. (q. d.) He hath reſerved that of the Kingdom for you. And his ſcope is withal, to ſhew that hereby it is rendered the greater mercy, and that ſo few of you ſhould be preferred unto ſuch favours, whilſt the reſt are left to ſeek other things, as their beſt and only portion. The Old Law in dividing the Lands by Inheritance to the people of Iſrael, had this Rule given them, Thou ſhalt give the more Inheritance unto many; And unto few thou ſhalt diminiſh, or give the leſs Inheritance, Numb. 26. 54. But this Inheritance of Heaven, and of himſelf, God took a few of Mankind, and gave the whole of that Inheritance to all, and each of them. 'Tis ſaid, Deut. 32. 8. That when God divided the Inheritance to the Nations, he ſet their bounds according to the number of the people of Iſrael, Seventy Nations (as Gen. 10.) according to the number but of ſeventy Souls, which was their whole number when they came out of Ægypt, Gen. 46. 27. A ſmall proporton of 70 men, to 70 whole Nations of others, of one man to a whole Nation. But then what did God reſerve for theſe Seventy men, and thoſe of their Seed which he had choſen? it follows in the ſame place of Deut. Verſ. 9. The Lords portion is his people, Jacob is the lot of his Inheritance: whom he reſerved for himſelf, to be his Inheritance, and he to be their Inheritance, as you often find. And this only becauſe (as in the ſame Deut. Chap. 10. 15.) Only the Lord had a delight in thy Fathers to love them, and he choſe their Seed after them, them, even you above all people, as it is this day. Although at Verſe 14. (and he ſays it with a Behold, of infinite wonderment; Behold! The Heaven and the Heavens is the Lords thy God, the Earth alſo with all that therein is: Which is as if he had ſaid, Though he had enough before him of Angels once in Heaven, and of Men on Earth, yet this is thy Priviledge above all, that God choſe out ſo few at firſt, when he choſe thee, which Verſ. ult. he minds them of: Thy Fathers went down into Egypt with threeſcore and ten perſons; and now thy Lord thy God hath made thee as the Stars of Heaven. And again, though he had the Heaven of Heavens, large enough for Millions of Worlds of men to have filled it, many Manſions as Chriſt ſays, yet he took thoſe few of Iſrael, and of thoſe but a Remnant to poſſeſs it, and gave the Earth only unto all the Reſt; with which falls in, Pſal. 115. 15. You are the bleſſed of the Lord which made Heaven and Earth: For ſo it follows, Verſ. 16. The Heaven, even the Heavens are the Lords: But the Earth hath he given to the children of men. That is, he hath culled or ſingled forth [you] from out of the reſt of the children of men, as whom he would bleſs with all Bleſſings in heavenly things; but hath given the Earth, and the Bleſſings thereof, to the reſt of the children of men. Chap. 4.

And now to affect your hearts, begin to caſt your eyes firſt upon that world of Mankind which is now extant and in being at this day, and you may even well nigh ſay of the men of this Age and World in all Nations at the preſent, as the Apoſtle did of all Nations for the time paſt until his times, God ſuffers them to walk in their own way. Or you may ſay as the Apoſtle John ſaid of the ſame Age, and the then preſent evil world, (as Paul Epithites it, Gal. 1.4.) ſo of this preſent froward Generation of Mankind, that the whole world lies in wickedneſs. And thoſe few of us that are of God, are thin ſowen, a poor ſmall handful of gleaning unto the whole great Crop of Mankind; you have it 1 Joh. 5. 19. This we know, ſaith he there. And by the ſame anointing we alſo now may ſee the ſame event, and de facto to be the ſame. And what falls out thus in the event, is but Speculum decretivum Dei, the Looking-glaſs of, and repreſenteth what lay in God's Decrees from everleſting.

And oh, how deeply ſhould the Comparative of this affect our hearts! For a few to be ſingled forth and ſaved, when a multitude, yea a generality of others, are ſuffered to periſh! How doth it heighten the mercy and grace of a Salvation to us, that is but of a lower kind, as if but Temporal deliverances from Bodily death, or the like: And for God in his Providence to order many outward means to ſave and deliver a few, which he denies to thoſe others, who periſh. How doth this affect the perſons that are preſerved? How much more when it falls out thus in ſo great a Salvation as this is, as the Apoſtle ſays of it?

This you may ſee in ſuch Examples as were but Types and meer Shadows in compariſon of this very thing, as in the Inſtance of Noah and his Family in the Flood appeared: God ſaved Noah (ſays the Text) bringing in the Flood upon the [world] of the ungodly; even the whole world of them. And it is reſolved into this by God himſelf, Gen. 6. 7, 8. But Noah found grace in the eyes of the Lord: which Grace was as there heightened by this Comparative of his deſtroying man from off the Earth, as in the ſame Verſe, who were a world of ungodly, as the Apoſtle ſays. The ſame appears in the Example of Lot, pulled out of Sodom by the hand and force of Angels (even as we were ordained to be delivered, as by force, as the word ἐρρύσατο ſignifies in Coloſſ. 1.14. Saved out of the fire, ſays Jude. And Paul alſo in 1 Cor. 3. 15.) The Lord being merciful, ſays the Text. Gen. 19. 16. And behold with what, and how deep a ſenſe and valew did Lot entertain this mercy. Lot did greaten it to himſelf, from this Comparative between him and thoſe in Sodom, in the ſame Gen. 19. 19. Behold! now thy Servant hath found Grace in thy ſight, and thou haſt magnified thy mercy, which thou haſt ſhewed unto me in ſaving my life.

But

BOOK III.

But there is this further to be conſidered in our being thus delivered forth of this our condition of like ſinfulneſs and wrath, that was different in the Caſe of Lot or Noah. Noah was righteous in his Generation, &c. And of Lot 'tis ſaid, his righteous ſoul was vexed, &c. They were not guilty of the ſame ſins in common with others, for which God brought the flood and fire. And their Condition was then, de facto, changed by Grace from the ſtate of ſin unto a ſtate of holineſs.

But here, when we were ordained unto Salvation, we lay afore the great God in a like Condition of Guilt and Reprobability, as to the means that all lay in; and that then the Decree concerning us, ſhould alter and change that ſtate of Sin, into which we were faln, into a ſtate of Grace and Righteouſneſs, as the means to bring us to Glory. How ſtupendious was the Mercy of God towards us! All had ſinned, and there was no difference, as Rom. 3. 19. None ſuch as between Noah and the Old World there was, when God ſaved him in the Ark.

Chap. 5.

CHAP. V.

The Infinite Grace of God in Election by a view of the Particular Conditions of Elect and others compared.

THeſe Particular Conditions are drawn from the ſeveral Sizes and Degrees of Actual ſin greater or leſſer in the Elect, compared with others paſt by; or elſe ſome other outward Circumſtances, wherein many of the Elect and thoſe others, are found ſometimes the ſame; ſometimes again diverſe in the one and th'other, (All with Conditions are d iſpoſed of upon the foreſight of the Fall) and yet all of them do in various, and ſometimes contrary reſpects, in a way of comparing each Condition with the other, conduce and conſpire all and each of them unto the magnifying of Gods ſpecial and ſupereminently ſingular Grace of Election (as inde ed ll things ſerve to do.) The particular inſtances will ſhew the truth and meaning of the Premiſe. There are many of them, and it may prove that I ſhall Inſtance but a very few.

And yet e're I come to thoſe Particulars, I muſt yet premiſe one thing further; namely, that the Elect, in comparing any of theſe Particulars, I ſhall inſtance in, many take a ſurvey for the affecting of his Heart of the Conditions, not only of believers in the preſent Age, but that have been in all Ages paſt, yea, and to come; and ſome way or other (as I ſhall indeavour to direct) improve it for the adoring Gods Grace to himſelf. Look as in the laſt General Comparative common to all Mankind thou hadſt the whole World of Mankind afore thee, in reſpect to the Common Condition of Sin and Miſery: So here thou haſt, in forming up this new ſort of Compariſon, the particular Caſes and various Conditions of all ſorts of men in all Ages, and thoſe as foreviewed by God when he choſe them to compare with thine own, to the end to Glorifie his Grace towards thee in Particular the more.

My warrant for our Entring this Comparative into the Condition of Perſons in all Ages, is firſt that paſſage in 2. Theſſ. 2. &c. which ſhall be my preſent Text; But we are bound to give thanks always to God for you, Brethren, beloved of the Lord, becauſe God hath from the beginning choſen you to Salvation through Sanctification of the Spirit, and belief of the Truth. For that Particle, [But for you] ſending us to the Verſes afore, there we find the Condition of others ſet out, whom God had rejected, [But] hath choſen [you.] Now who were theſe others, but ſuch as the Apoſtle foretels were yet to come, and to be a more corrupt Generation than ever had been in the World before them, and that were to come many years after; Concerning whom he prophecies thus, Verſ. 3. There muſt be a falling away, and that Man of ſin be revealed, the Son of Perdition; Verſ. 9, 10, 11, 12. Even him, whoſe coming is after the working of Satan with all power and ſigns and lying wonders; and with all deceiveableneſs of unrighteouſneſs, in them that periſh; becauſe they received not the Love of the Truth, that they might be ſaved. And for this cauſe God ſhall ſend them ſtrong deluſions, that they ſhould believe a Lie; that they all might be damned, who believed not the Truth, but had pleaſure in unrighteouſneſs. And then follows that [But we are bound to give thanks for you, that God hath choſen you &c.] And this Man of ſin, he means, is Anti-Chriſt, the Pope and his deceiving Clergy, the whole Body of them, who for ſo many Ages ſhould be able to deceive the whole World, as their multitude, thoſe deceived, are termed, Rom. 13. 3. and to continue and prevail throughout many and many Ages after theſe Theſſalonians ſhould be in their Graves, being at this day, and to make up the greater part of the European World. Now theſe Theſſalonians, that lived in the firſt pure Age of Chriſtianity, were notwithſtanding in bleſſing God for their own Election

lection, to take their view unto that whole ſucceſſion and multitude of Men, and for ſo many Ages, during which Popery was to continue, and compare in themſelves (though but a particular compariſon) with the condition theſe Generations were to be left unto by Gods juſt preordination; to magnifie that love of God to them ſelves, as illuſtrated by all that unrighteouſneſs and infidelity, ſo great a multitude for ſo long a continuance ſhould be given up unto.——— Thus doth he propoſe this very Comparative to heighten this love of Gods, and their thankfullneſs for Election. In, Rev. 13. 7, 8. the Holy Ghoſt makes the ſame Compariſon indeed between a few Elect, and the others of all Nations, Tongues, Kindreds; yea, in a manner all that dwell on the Earth that worſhipped the Beaſt; and on the other hand, a few Elect, that ſhould not be deceived by him; which he doth to greaten the ſame love of Election. Thus expreſly Verſ. 8. And all that dwell upon the Earth ſhall worſhip him, whoſe names are not written in the Book of Life of the Lamb, ſlain from the Foundation of the World. There is this ſmall difference between theſe two Comparatives in theſe two Scriptures, both of which yet remain full to this purpoſe we have in hand; that That in the Revelation concerned, and was ſpoken of thoſe Elect, who ſhould live in thoſe very Ages, wherein Popery and Anti-Chriſtianiſm ſhould Reign, and be in its Ruff, who ſhould be then alive, and ſee with their Eyes all the whole World &c. worſhipping the Beaſt (who is the ſame Man of ſin in the Theſſalonians) that ſo they might adore and worſhip God and the Lamb for their Election out of the reſt of the World, with whom they then lived: And with the higheſt Admiration attribute their preſervation from that Idolatrous Worſhip, unto their having been written in the Lambs Book, and Glorifie God. Whereas theſe Theſſalonians lived in the Apoſtles times, when that Miſtery began but to work in Hereſies that were the forerunners of that Apoſtaſie, and as ſmaller Streams, empty ing themſelves at laſt into that great Sea or Lake, and yet were to take in the proſpect of this Apoſtatizing World ſo long afore; and yet to adore and Glorifie God, that by Election had ſecured them in their effectual Salvation: And this they were to do as well as thoſe other Elect, that were to live in thoſe times, amongſt thoſe Idolatrous Worſhippers. However, both Inſtances ſerve to our Argument in hand, viz. That this Comparative with others, ought to be made by us, both with the preſent World, and corruption of the times and perſons we live in, and with whom we live; and alſo to be intended to all Ages to come, yea and the World that ſhall be to the End of the World; and then by like reaſon, ought alſo to be improved to the like Glorifying of God for his Electing Mercies, in compariſon with his rejection of Men in all Ages that are paſt, ſince the beginning of the World. So then this our Comparative ſtretcheth it ſelf over all times, and to take into the account the infinite Number of Perſons that have been, are, and ſhall be, whom God hath caſt off. And are accordingly bound to give thanks unto God for his Election of us, and not them from out of all, as we and they lay in one heap and view afore him. And the reaſon is clear; for when God Elected thee, thou wert not choſen out of the lump of this preſent Age, but all the Sons of Adam lay afore him in a like great Level. It was free to him to have appointed then, any of the ſeveral times they ſhould live in, when he diſpoſed of their ſeveral everlaſting Conditions. He then appointed the times they ſhould each live in, ſo as he might have allotted thee to have lived in any of thoſe Ages, paſt or to come, as eaſie as the preſent time thou liveſt in: And therefore there is the ſame Reaſon thou ſhouldſt ſet thy ſelf in this Compariſon with the whole Lump of Man-kind in all times, as with that with whom thou liveſt. And thou art to conſider Election to have proceeded upon the common firſt Level, and ſo to compare thy ſelf with all men that are, or have been, and when all Mankind ſhall be viſibly extant, either the Goats at the left hand, and this little Flock at the right, when with us they ſhall hear that voice, Come ye Bleſſed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the beginning of the World. To the other the contrary pronounced; Depart from me I never knew you, And thereby Reprobation expreſſed in its Negative Act of Neſcio, I never knew you, as in the other ſpeech declared oppoſitely you were fore- known and choſen hereunto; and accordingly, that Kingdom they were entring into, was prepared from the Foundation of the World, unto which they were choſen. And the oppoſite negation thereof will be avowedly profeſſed and acknowledged by Chriſt himſelf, to have been at the Head of theſe two Iſſues of the Sons of Men.——Whereby, how will (as it muſt needs) Electing Grace be infinitely extolled, and with what Exaltation of it and Exultation of Spirit in us, and adoration of God, will this Comparative (ſo little minded) be then entertained by us; Even which I have all this while exhorted you unto? And yet whoſe Heart almoſt doth the Conſideration of this enter into and ſtrike? Indeed becauſe what is yet to come we know not, and what is paſt is, ſailed out of ſight, and ſo affects us not. Oh! yet, how conſpicuous ſhall all this be at that day, when Chriſt ſhall have the whole World Randezvouzed afore him? Even when the ſucceſſion and account of the World ſhall have been finiſhed and perfected, and the Stories of all be told. Chap. 5.

You that are the choſen of God, having this large proſpect afore you, may further affect your hearts with theſe Particulars of your ſeveral Conditions.

I. Particular. You were fore-viewed by God when choſen, as thoſe that would actually of themſelves run into the ſame exceſs of ſinnings, the very ſame ſins, with all and the like Circumſtances of Aggravation, and in a continued courſe of ſinning, afore their effectual Calling, that others, the Reſt, are and have been, and ſhall be left unto no difference at all in that reſpect neither, as the ſame 2 Epheſ. 2. & 3. Verſ. ——Wherein in time paſt ye walked according to the courſe of this world, according to the Prince of the Power of the Air, the Spirit that now worketh in the children of Diſobedience: Among whom alſo we had our converſation in times paſt, in the luſts of our fleſh, fulfilling the deſires of the fleſh, and of the mind; and were by nature the children of wrath as well as others. And then comes in the like [But] Verſe 4. But God who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us, Even when we were dead in ſins, hath quickned us together with Chriſt, &c. As in that 2 Theſſ. 2. 13, 14. Now conſider that God hath and doth ſuffer theſe [others] to go on and perſiſt in that courſe to the end of their days, and to dye in their ſins. And if thou hadſt gone on, what a Monſter in ſinning wouldſt thou have proved to be? How great and ſwelling Toad in wickedneſs? This might have been thy lot. But God had ordained thee by Faith and Repenance, (whereby he called thee with an holy Calling) to obtain Salvation through Jeſus Chriſt. This the foregone Rule given, concerning both Calling and Election, doth ſufficiently alſo confirm: For Calling finds us in all the ſinfulneſs of our fore-paſſed courſe, and therefore Election viewed us in the ſame at Calling. The ſame horrid ſin of Crucifying Chriſt, which the Elders of the Jews ran into, and the generality of the People, for which they were remitten to that Condemnation, thouſands of the Elect Jews were guilty of, together with them, and yet they were ſaved from that froward Generation; which expreſſion uſed by Peter, reſpecteth the generality of that Nation in that Age, and is uſed to ſet forth the greatneſs of that Salvation tendred them (they now beginning to repent) ſo to move and promove them thereunto, and to draw them unto Faith on Chriſt; and yet the ſin of Crucifying Chriſt was committed by them that were (there) ſaved, as well as by thoſe that periſhed. And as the Perſons were ordained to one or t'other of theſe Ends or Iſſues of them, ſo all things that concerned that hideous Act, were all fore-determined by God's Eternal Counſel, as they were committed by the one as by the other. Acts 4. 28. For to do whatſoever thy hand and thy counſel determined before to be done.

II. Particular. That even after effectual Calling, many of theſe Elect (and it may be it hath been ſome of their Caſes that hear me) were fore-viewed to run through many of the ſame ſinful Temptations; yea, and to fall into the like groſs acts of the like kind of ſinning for a ſeaſon, which of themſelves would hazard and endanger their ever coming unto Glory if Election redeemed them not, as much as de facto, it falls out that the damnation of the other is carried on thereby. And the difference lies in this, That God takes and resolves to take advantage against the one, as he did against Saul and the Jews that crucified Christ, when not against David nor against those. This magnified Electing Love in the Case of David and Solomon, in that though they forsook his Laws, and walked not in his Judgments, but brake his Law, &c. Nevertheless I will not break my Covenant, &c. Psal. 89. from Verse 28. to 35. The Apostle Jude doth the very same; for writing to the Saints of that Age, the preserved in Christ from amongst such fatal ruins as other Professors had then fain under, the whole Structure of their Profession falling on them, and the fall of that house was great, as Christ speaks. He to magnifie God's Electing Grace to us, sets before them, first, their having been chosen and beloved by God the Father, in Vers. 1. as the Foundation of their Preservation; and then the contrary Fate of those wicked men in that Age, Vers. 4. There are certain men who were ordained afore of old to this Condemnation, ungodly men turning the grace of God into lasciviousness, and denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ. And the very measures, both of their Sin and their Condemnation, he, to this our purpose afore us, sets out Vers. 11, 12, 13. Wo unto them; for they have gone in the way of Cain, and ran greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, and perished in the gainsaying of Corah. These are spots in your Feasts of Charity, when they feast with you, feeding themselves without fear: Clouds they are without water, carried about of winds; Trees whose fruit withereth, without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots; Raging waves of the Sea, foaming out their own shame; wandring Stars, to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever.

III. Particular. Thou mayst single forth the worst of Mankind that are now in thine eye alive, and acting the height of wickedness, or whom thou hast heard or read of in Ages past. The Gigantick Monsters of Mankind, as were the sinners of the Old World, great for renown in sinning, the Hectors in wickedness, as the worst of Emperors, the Nero's, or the wickedst Popes, the men of sin, many of whom sin hath sublimated unto meriting the name of men of sin, in comparison of other sinners. Thou mayst take also such as have had their Spirits invenomed with that which is the Devils sin, a wilful malice against God, his Christ, and their Saints, the sin first against the Holy Ghost, the Pharisees, the Julians, &c. that have been in the World, pitch upon any, the thought of whose Case did at any time most dread thee to be in, and go home and bless God he left thee not to the same: That thou wert not Cain, nor Judas, nor any of these fore-mentioned (which thou mightest have been:) And further, That God hath chosen thee to such a glory: For what in God made thee to differ? That which you heard out of the Thessalonians——[But God hath chosen you.] That very Scripture doth not only give the Warrant to do this, but, doth plainly and directly excite to it; whilst he sets afore them some of those wicked Popes, &c. whom he brands with the dreadful Mark worse than Cain, the man and men of sin, on purpose to aggrandise the Mercy of this particular Election thereby, that they were not left by a permissive Decree to have been such as one of them.

IV. Particular. On the contrary, compare thy self and thy condition in sinning, with those that have been far less sinners than thou hast been; and this Consideration also will conduce to exalt Electing Grace towards thee. For upon the consideration of the Fall, God viewed this their Condition of less sinning, together with thine, and yet chose thee, and refused them; when 'tis certain, there was found a far greater matter of Reprobability (as I spake afore) in thee, than was in them. It is certain both from Scripture and Experience, that God vouchsafes that Transcendent Mercy and Priviledge of his Word and Gospel unto some that were, and afterwards prove the wickedest of Men, whenas he denies it unto others far less wicked, and more teachable and receptive of it. Thus in the Prophet Ezekiel, God tells the Prophet, That if he had ſent him to any other Nation, utter Strangers to any of his Meſſages from God, as a Prophet, which were familiar to the Jews, yea, that were unacquainted with the Prophets Language, had I ſent there unto them, they would have hearkned unto thee, Ezek. 3. 7. But the houſe of Iſrael will not hearken unto thee; for they will not hearken unto me. For all the houſe of Iſrael are impudent and hard-hearted. And yet God paſſed by them Nations. Now God, according to his pleaſure, diſpoſeth the outward priviledge of his Word, with ſo great a difference towards men, even of them whom he calls; away ſo much more doth he ſhew it in Electing Grace, in his not vouchſafing to cait it upon leſſer ſinners, nor to go by ſuch a Rule, but often upon greater, as upon Publicans and Harlots, when not upon Phariſees, the ſtricteſt ſort of Juſticiaries, as Paul, Acts 26. 5. ſaid; and as Chriſt's Speeches and Parables ſhew. And look as God's vouchſafing his word (Goſpel) to thoſe forementioned, was the higheſt aggravation by reaſon of the comparative difference between them, ſo on the contrary, that God hath left ſuch a Multitude of better diſpoſed ſinners in all Ages paſt, than we, and yet give in both the outward knowledge of his Word, and inward Grace of his Spirit to accompany it, this heightens his Love and Mercy to us. In Matthew the 11th, Chriſt having inſtanced in the moſt debauched Cities that have been in the World, Sodom and Gomorrah, and withal, in the moſt Civil and moſt Ingenuous of all the Heathens, Tyre, (I characterize them ſuch, becauſe of their Ingenuity unto God's People, the Jews, not malicious as was Edom, &c. but friendly and aſſiſtant, even to the building of the Temple, and who by their vicinity might eaſily have been made partakers of the Priviledges of the Jews,) all advantages they had, and their ſuſceptiveneſs and aptneſs to have received the Goſpel, if preached unto them, was ſuch as Chriſt ſays, that if thoſe works had been done in Tyre, they would have repented in ſackcloth and aſhes: And yet God afforded not to theſe the knowledge of his ways, much leſs of the Goſpel, as he had done to theſe Cities of the Jews whom Chriſt there upbraids; the Mercy of which towards them, he upbraids them with to their juſt Condemnation; which when he had done in Verſe 22, 23, 24. he takes occaſion from thence much more to magnifie God's Mercy vouchſafed unto his Elect; (whether thoſe few of thoſe Cities, whom his Miniſtry had wrought upon, or others elſewhere converted by himſelf or John) in his ſubſequent Thankſgiving, (we have ſo often made mention of) Verſ. 25, 26. At that time Jeſus anſwered and ſaid, I thank, thee, O Father, Lord of Heaven and Earth, becauſe thou haſt hid thoſe things from the wiſe and prudent, and haſt revealed them unto Babes. Even ſo Father, for ſo it ſeemed good in thy ſight. In which Speech he had his eye upon thoſe forecited Examples, both of Tyre and Sodom, in compare with theſe hardned Capernaites; that God had hid theſe things from both leſſer and greater ſinners, and had not only outwardly declared them (which he had done unto Capernaum) but inwardly and effectually had wrought upon his Babes thereby; for it was upon occaſion Chriſt broke forth into ſo ſolemn an Adoration of God, as theſe words [At that time Jeſus anſwered and ſaid] do ſhew: For they are continuatio Orationis, a continuation of his former Diſcourſe, as Chemnitius obſerves; and the word [he anſwered] referreth not to others, having firſt ſpoke to him whom he ſhould have anſwered; but it relates to the matter foregone, and ſo that he ſpeaks anſwerably thereto: So as this of Chriſt, and the matter by-paſt, do hold a congenial Connexion with the former. And Chriſt's Adoration of God for Electing thoſe he had converted, drew down into it, and involved in it, a comparative with thoſe Examples of thoſe others mentioned, that had been paſt by, both Tyrians, Sodomites, and thoſe of Capernaum.

Chap. 4.

And indeed, (if there were no other) this alone would argue what I intend, viz. That by the ſame Rule whereby Chriſt aggravates the ſin and puniſhment of thoſe Cities, a ſin ſo highly perpetrated againſt ſo great a Mercy of Chriſt, his preaching the Goſpel, which he had not vouchſafed to ſinners of a leſſer ſize, and that would have repented if they had enjoyed it; and that notwithſtanding God had not deſigned it to them; by the ſame Rule I ſay, by way of Parallel, a like reaſon (though alledged to this clean contrary purpoſe) ought thoſe that had been converted by Chriſt's Miniſtry in thoſe Cities (and ſo ought we) to have celebrated God's Electing Grace, in his having revealed thoſe things to them inwardly and effectually. The very outward manifeſtation of which to thoſe Tyrians, &c. in former Ages, would, if they had known them, have brought forth ſome Fruits of Repentance, as the Ninevites had alſo done: And theſe Babes he ſpeaks of, upon Chriſt's Speech, and after his Example they might have ſaid, We, whom our Lord hath thus converted, and God fore-choſen, had yet as hard and impenitent hearts as any in Capernaum and Bethſaida had, untill God, by his mighty Power, inwardly revealed his Son to us; yea, and they were ſome of the Nations that were our Neighbours in former Ages, that were farr leſs ſinners than we, and of more noble and ingenuous Spirits, more readily to have entertained the Goſpel (as of the Bereans it is ſaid) and God paſt by them, but hath Revealed it unto us. Unſpeakable mercy! What cauſe have we then to bleſs God in the ſenſe thereof, for this his diſcriminating good pleaſure towards us. And if Chriſt involves and wraps in the Examples and Inſtances of theſe into his thanksgivings, as matter of thankfullneſs, then how ought we?

But we need not go by Inferences thus to make good the Truth of this Branch; for God hath more plainly and explicitly reſolved this difference of greater and leſſer ſinners, &c. into his Electing Grace, Deut. 10. 15, 16. Only the Lord had a delight in thy Fathers to love them; and he choſe their ſeed after them, even you above all People, as it is this day. Circumciſe therefore the foreſkin of your Heart, and be no more ſtiff-necked. When he ſays [only] that ſecludes all other Motives and Conſiderations, and ſhews God barely and ſimply choſe thee out of Love above all Nations elſe, not for thy Righteouſneſs, He ſpeaks it in a Compariſon with other Nations, and not ſimply alone; for he there brings and preſents them to a view of other Nations, and ſo the ſcope runs thus: That they were no more righteous than other Nations whom he refuſed, nor did he refuſe other Nations upon that account; and not only ſo, but that they were worſe than other Nations, as that additional, Be no more ſtiff-necked imports: Inſinuating thereby the ſpecial Obduration of that Nation above any other; 'tis a comparative Speech that too. And with that Character God frequently Brands and upbraids them, as more peculiar to them, as in Exod. 32. 9. I the Lord ſaid unto Moſes, I have ſeen this people, and behold, it is a ſtiff-necked people. And in Chap. 33. 3. 5. And Moſes in his time had ſaid the ſame of them, Exod. 34. 9. which in Deuteronomy he repeats again and again to them, as upon his conſtant Experience of them; And tells them, though the Nations that were caſt out were very wicked, and for their wickedneſs caſt out, that yet they themſelves were in a more eminent manner, a ſtiff-necked People: Compare for this Deut. 9. 5, 6 Underſtand therefore, that the Lord thy God giveth thee not this good land to poſſeſs it for thy righteouſneſs, for thou art a ſtiff-necked People. This was that Brand and black Mark of them, by God himſelf, which Moſes terms hardneſs: Look not to the HARDNESS of this People, and their wickedneſs, Deut. 9. 27. Which God foreſaw, yet he choſe them; yea, he ſaith it of them, whilſt he is a telling them, he choſe them, above all people, as thoſe Places ſhew; inſinuating alſo thereby, that as he choſe them above all, ſo that they were ſtiff-necked above all.

V. Particular. Thou mayſt compare thy Condition with others, whom God hath wrought great and mighty works upon, that yet fall ſhort of ſaving Grace: As thoſe in Hebr. 6. 4, 5. That have been enlightned, taſted the good word of God, and the Power of the World to come, and yet fall away, as Verſ. the 7th in a way of ſuppoſition he there intimateth; and Expeperience hath ſhewn in Multitudes in our days afore our eyes. And as in the third Particular, I bid thee there ſingle forth the higheſt and worſt of ſinners, and magnifie the Grace of God towards thee, in that thou mightſt, and wouldſt of thy ſelf, have been like to them, yea the ſame; ſo now I ſend thee to the Beſt of Sinners (as I may ſo term them, for, for a time they are ſuch) that have by a work of the Holy Ghoſt been elevated and raiſed up to the higheſt pitch of Gifts (I cannot ſay Graces) which brought them neer the Kingdom of God

God, that were even at the Door, as the fooliſh Virgins were, and yet at length ſhut out; and many other inſtances of ſuch do the Scriptures afford; ——The firſt prove laſt, and the laſt firſt; that is, ſome of the moſt forward and eminent Profeſſors vaniſh, and come to nothing; and poor weak Believers, they come to be the firſt, that is, the higheſt attainers of Grace. Chap. 4.

Now, what is it that puts the difference but (originally) Electing Grace, as our Saviour hath reſolved us, Matth. 20. 16. So the laſt ſhall be firſt, and the firſt laſt: for many be called, but few choſen. Thoſe laſt words (as that particle [for] ſhews) give that as the reaſon of it. By the like Compariſon, though of a lower Size, the Apoſtle Paul doth magnifie Electing Grace in the latter End of Chap. the 9th and 10th to the Romans, and at the beginning of the 11th which continues that his diſcourſe, Chap. 9. 30, 31. The Gentiles, which followed not after Righteouſneſs, have attained to righteouſneß, even the righteouſneß which is of Faith: But Iſrael, that followed after the Law of righteouſneſs, hath not attained to the Law of righteouſneß. And again at the 10th 20th 21th. But Iſaias is very bold, and ſaith, I was found of them that ſought me not; I was made manifeſt to them that aſked not after me. But to Iſrael he ſaith, all day long I have ſtretched forth my hands unto a diſobedient and gain-ſaying people. Which in the beginning of Chap. the 11th he reſolves into Election of Grace, Verſ. 5. and Verſ. 11. Iſrael hath not obtained that which he ſeeketh for, but Election hath obtained it, and the reſt were blinded.

Thou mayſt in the Contemplation of this Branch, inlarge thy thoughts unto all the ſeveral Sizes of thoſe who have been more ore or leſs wrought upon by works not ſaving, which defect is herein, in their not perſevering, and ſo they fall ſhort of Grace, as Hebr. 12. 15. Look diligently, leſt any man fail the Grace of God, leſt any root of bitterneß ſpringing up, trouble you, and thereby may be defiled. And herein thou mayſt extend thy thoughts unto the higheſt attainments, of ſuch that have after proved Apoſtates, thou haſt ever read or heard of, that have abounded in all knowledg, come behind in no Spiritual Gift, whilſt thou a poor weak, yet ſincere Saint, art behind in all ſuch kind of Spiritual Gifts of Praying, Speaking, Utterance, Memory, &c. and yet haſt a little thing in thy Heart, called Sincerity and Honeſty of Heart, (as Chriſt calls it) towards God, which is the fruit of Election, which puts as great a difference between thee and thoſe, as is between a Star in Heaven, and a Meteor in the Air, or Glow-worm on the Earth. The other may have done farr greater outward Service to Chriſt, in outward works, as in Propheſying in his name, &c. and have ſuffered as great things for Chriſt, and many have inwardly been wrought upon with affection to things ſpiritual, though not ſpiritually; their Converſation, their Speeches, their Prayer about Holy things, the ſame; and the difference to be but as of Oyl in the Lamp, ſerving to preſent performances, and Oyl in the Veſſel, in the Heart it ſelf, inwardly and habitually bringing forth fruit, but yet without Root in them ſelves. They have yet wanted that great principle of Love unto God, and his Saints, as 1 Cor. 13. Paul there, though in a way of ſuppoſition, affirmeth their defect to lye therein. Verſ. 1, 2, 3. Though I ſpeak with the Tongues of Men and Angels, and have not Charity, I am become as ſounding Braſs, or a tinkling Cymbal: And though I have the gift of Propheſy, and Underſtand all Myſteries, and all Knowledge, and though I have all Faith, ſo that I could remove Mountains, and have no Charity, I am nothing: And though I beſtow all my Goods to feed the Poor, and though I give my Body to be burned, and have no Charity, it profiteth me nothing. But, if thou canſt (though in a very weak, yet ſincere meaſure) ſay, as the Apoſtle, of theſe Believing Hebrews, Chap. 6. 9. That thou hopeſt better things, and things accompanying Salvation. For God is not unrighteous to forget your work and labor of Love, which ye have ſhewed towards his name, in that ye have miniſtred to the Saints and do miniſter, Verſ. 10. The difference between thee and them in appearance ſo ſmall, but yet is ſuch in that reſpect as is between the Counterfait of a Jewel and a Diamond it ſelf; and yet in reality and according to true worth and the price which God ſets upon things, ſhould have ſo infinite a difference as by the iſſue and event

Book III.

(so great as Salvation and Damnation are of) appears, which Issue it is that Election did design to bring the one unto; and that same Providential Free-will-Grace rising no higher than meer self love, wrought upon by Spiritual objects, brings the other unto. On what thanks art thou bound to give unto God, because God hath from the beginning chosen you to Salvation and Belief of the Truth, whereunto he called you by the Gospel to the obtaining of the Glory of our Lord Jesus Christ.

This as to the point of Actual sinnings, and a Comparative reared thereupon in these several variations. Secondly there are certain Circumstances which were cast and disposed of by God upon the Fall among the Sons of Men, the continuation of which serve in as great a variety to enhance this Election Grace also towards those that are his.

VI. PARTICULAR, As take such as are, Hard, contemns Poverty, Honour, and Riches, thou mayst consider the great disproportion of thy outward Condition in this World, with what hath been and is of those others [the Rest] whom God hath past by, that give a just occasion in the like variety for the Declaration of Gods Grace to thee. Thou art poor, and mean, and despicable in the World: And take thy Intellectual Parts, the most of you are weak, and comparatively a foolish Generation, and the Children of this World, says Christ, are generally wiser in their generation. You know how Paul urgeth and indigitateth this for the Saints to reflect upon in comparison with others, 1 Cor. 1. 26. For ye see your calling, Brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called; and resolves the obtaining of it into Election, as the disposer that it should so be, Vers. 27,28. But God hath chosen the Foolish things of the World, to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the World, to confound the things which are mighty; and base things of the World, and things which are despised, hath God chosen; yea, and things which are not to bring to nought things that are. So as an eminent Glory ariseth to God thereby. Our Saviour also particularly instanceth in such a difference of Wisdom for all other whatever &c. For it is the greater excellency Man hath to Glory in, and excelleth folly, as Solomon says, as far as light excelleth darkness, Eccles. 2. 13. Wherefore Christ magnifies this Grace of Election, Matt. 11. 25, 26. At that time Jesus answered and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of Heaven and Earth, because thou hast hid those things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto Babes. Even so Father, for so it seem'd good in thy sight. And 'tis for certain that the consideration of these kind of outward differences, although they are but such as are and continue, but whilst we are in this World, had a mighty wait and impression upon our Saviours heart whilst he thus extoll'd his Father thereupon, as those Considerations which do mightily tend to the Glory of Gods Grace in choosing such comparatively to others, and therefore should have the like place and esteem with our Hearts; for Christ was privy to Gods Councel, and an equal Estimator of things as they stand in Gods own intention and esteem———I need not amplifie how much the Scriptures do inculcate this very thing, as James 2. 5. If you say, these are but outward respects that are but for the moment of this life, how should these then have much subserviency to Glorifie Electing-Grace, which is to eternity and from eternity?

I Answer, Even as well as our outward Sufferings, though but for a moment, work an eternal weight of Glory to us, these small differences in Condition insinuate and conduce to the everlasting Glory of Gods Decrees and Particularly for that of Wisdom. The matters of the other World run upon other Feet, another account, from what in this World Mens natural abilities and gifts, largeness and quickness of understanding, and notional Knowledg, even in Divine things in this World proceed upon; they contribute nothing at all as any preparative of the Understanding, the subject they are in to widen or extend it the more, or capacitate men to take in the knowledge of God, as in Heaven he is known; but an understanding that was narrow and clung even of Fools and weak ones here, is there stretched by an intuitive height of Glory to take in the knowledge of God more ſublimely and largely than the wideſt in outward Wiſdom, although withal they be Saints, when God yet doth not vouchſafe a greater meaſure of intuitive hight unto them. The Saints that are of the largeſt ſize of Underſtanding, and of the greateſt capacity here, ſhall not at all have the greateſt meaſure of knowing God in Heaven; but Babes and weak ones may excell them. Much more it is true of Worldly wiſe Men, that their great Parts make them not neerer &c. God hath no need of any kind of Mens Abilities to make them more capacious of ſeeing his Face in Glory, no nor of attainments to a greater meaſure of Faith or Holineſs here. And therefore God in Election is at a perfect liberty to chooſe out of Babes, and to leave out thoſe wiſe ones; yea their wiſdom is the greateſt hinderance unto that Grace Election worketh. Chap. 3.

And what Chriſt applies to Wiſdom in ſuch reſpect unto Electing Grace, thou mayſt apply the ſame unto any other Excellencies whatſoever; as Riches, Glory, Power, Renown &c. Iſai. 41. 10. God magnifying Electing Grace I have choſen thee and not caſt thee away ſets it it out by this, that he ſingled them, he choſe them out from the chief Men of the Earth.

Again on the other hand, thoſe few Elect that are Honourable, and Rich, and Mighty in this World, they have in other reſpects as great cauſe to glorifie God as the former, as upon another occaſion James ſpeaks, The poor rejoyceth, he is exalted; the Rich hath cauſe to do ſo, and that both in reſpect of the fewneſs of that ſort of men: Not many wiſe, nor many Noble; and therefore ſome, Theſe of high Degree, may exalt and adore that Grace which ſingled them forth from the Heap of thoſe their Peers, in Riches and Honours; thus a Prince and Nobles, that are Godly, have cauſe to do ſo, in reſpect of the fewneſs of ſuch, NE UNUS EX CENTUM, ſays Calvin often, as he a dying, ſent back word to his King, having ſent to viſit him. Tell him I am going to a place where few Kings come; ſo for Nobles, &c. Have any of the Rulers, or Phariſees believed on him? John 7. 48. Which none of the Princes of this World knew, 1 Cor. 2. 8. But only Nichodemus, and Joſeph of Arimathea. And as for the Rarity ſo the Priviledge, for a Prince to be born to a Crown here, and hereafter, what a great mercy is it!

And here in the manage of thy Meditations about this Branch, thou mayſt again aſſume and make uſe of that forementioned ſurvey of the Conditions of Men in all Ages paſt, and through that Teleſcope, take in the Proſpect of all Men that have been Great and Worthy in this World upon any ſuch reſpects, and then viewing thy ſelf in thy differing condition of Meanneſs, Lowneſs Contemptibleneſs, every way, mayſt thereby take occaſion to exalt the Grace of God to thee, who hath loved thee, and choſen thee! Oh think with thy ſelf what and how many Wiſe, Heroick, Valiant, Virtuous, Generous Grandees; What Great Souls have been in the World; Men of Renown in the Famous Nations, as the Prophet ſpeaks.

Ezek. 32. 18. Son of Man, wail for the multitude of Egypt, and caſt them down, even her, and the Daughters of the Famous Nations, unto the nether parts of the Earth, with them that go down into the pit. Whom God hath laid aſide in Hell with their Swords under their Heads, and their iniquities upon their bones, as the Prophet Ezek. ſpeaks, Chap. 32. 18, 19, 20, 21, 22. But hath choſen thee a deſpiſed man, and as Godly Iſaiah ſays, He hath choſen thee from the ends of the Earth, and from the chief men thereof, and not caſt thee away, (that is) as he hath done them. There is a ſmall word in Peter, which is yet of infinite import to this, 1*ſt.* Epiſt. 1*ſt.* Chapter. Verſ. 5. Begotten ſays he, to an inheritance [reſerved] in Heaven for you, ready to be revealed in the laſt time——— [Reſerved] for you, (that's the word) though it had been ready, or prepared even from the Beginning of the World, as Chriſt ſpeaks; and the import it ſeems to ſpeak to me is, That God having had in all Ages paſt, multitudes of Perſons that had paſſed afore him, whom he might have beſtowed this Inheritance upon, and as they paſſed along, they might have tempted him (If may ſo ſpeak after the manner of men) to have letted and beſtowed this Inheritance upon millions of great and excellent Souls. If reſpect of Perſons (which Phraſe is properly meant of a reſpect unto mens outward condition) might have had any place with God, so as to have given their places away ere you had come into the World, and have fill'd Heaven, and the Number of whom he meant to save with such Goodly Personages as these; yet those places in Heaven reserved for you stood thinly Inhabited, and in a manner vacant all that while. Oh! therefore stand astonished at his special Grace to you, says the Apostle, That he reserved it for you, and that he still said all along with himself, pass them by, let them all go, I have others who are [yet] in mine eyes, I keep those Mansions empty for, and none shall have them from them. And the wonder is set forth by this, that it was for those that are born in these latter days of the World; And as Paul says of himself, born out of time. As one would think, I may illustrate it, by (what indeed was the Type of this) 1 Sam. 16. Even by the stay of Davids choice to the Kingdom. God to set off the greatness of his Grace, ordered first, that Ten Sons of Jesse, should pass afore Samuel (as the word is in Verse 8, 9, 10.) the Elder first, so goodly a Person, and that lookt like a Prince already, and so great a Majestick Grandure in his Person, that Samuel when he lookt on him, said at first sight, Surely, the Lords Anointed is afore me, Vers. 6. If Samuel had been to choose, this should have been the Man, he would have said, what shall we look any further? But the LORD said unto Samuel, look not on his Countenance, or at the height of his Stature, for the LORD sees not as man sees, &c. Vers. 7. And in like manner to this, did the other Nine Brethren in a successive way pass afore him. But God had (to speak in Peters language) RESERVED this Kingdom for David 'the Youngest, not yet grown up, nor now at home, but out of sight in the 'field, and so out of mind a Young-ling born out of time. It entred not so much as into his Fathers thoughts, that God should have intended him; Or that he have staid his coming, having such other choice of so many Worthies afore him; But Samuel enquiring if he had no more Sons, bad him send for him, and no sooner came he in, but God said, This is He, Vers. 12. I have staid for till he should come, &c. And by this, or such like Representations as these, mayst thou in like manner quicken and actuate thy Meditations of thy Election, and the mercy in it. And we that are born Sixteen hundred Years yet further downwards in the World, after Peter wrote this unto them, after so many more Revolutions have past over the Generations of the Sons of Men, we have more occasion, and matter greater to improve, and enhaunce this Grace towards us, that by vertue of Eternal Election, we should be in this latter end of the World, begotten to this Inheritance, Reserved all along for us, from the Beginning, I say, by vertue of Election.

For what was it that had thus Reserved it for thee in these days, and for them then? The Apostle had Premised it at the first dash, in an entrance in Verse 2. Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, that was the Original of all, and 'twas it he had said, that God had viewed all others that had been afore them, but Fore-knew, and fixt his Love by choice on these, and overlookt all the Rest, wink't at them, as the Apostles phrase is in another case. These have my hands made, but 'tis these to whom I look.

Election it self is in respect of the Persons chosen, stiled a reservation of a Remnant, Rom. 11. 4. 5. I have reserved unto my self Seven thousand that have not bowed the knee to the Image of Baal. Even so then that at this present time also, there is a Remnant according to the Election of Grace. As a man foreseeing common and general Ruins, makes a reservation of some few whom he especially fancies to be kept out of it. Thus Election is there expressed, and here in Peter, There is a reservation, or keeping of an Inheritance, by vertue of the same Election; as by a Father for a Son whom he loves, till he come of Age, as Abraham did the Inheritance of Isaack, Reservations both, equipollent unto which, is that acknowledgment of the Apostle Paul of himself, and those others in the Primitive times, That God had hid the Mystery of the Gospel from foregone Ages: having Ordained it for our Glory, Kings and Prophets having desired to see and hear what we do, as Christ speaks, Luke 10. 25.

And

And hereby thou mayſt Adore the conſtancy of Gods Love, and the firmneſs of his purpoſe, according to Election, as the Apoſtles ſpeech imports, Rom. 9. 11. 'Tis like as if a Prince having (as ſome have feigned) had when young, a foreſight in a Dream, of a great Beauty as then unborn, ſhould be ſo ſet and fixt in Love unto her, that although when grown up, he hath a thouſand greater Beauties perhaps to paſs afore him at ſundry times, yet is ſo conſtant in his purpoſe to the Perſon whoſe Idea he had taken in, and reſolved to make his Spouſe ſo long afore, as he refuſeth them, and ſtays till ſhe is both born, and grown up Marrigable for him: And by this Similitude (caſting off what after the manner of man, was to be ſuppoſed to make up the Parable, and for the imperfection thereof, muſt not be applied to God) you may help your conceptions alſo of Gods love to you, who having had but the Idea and Image of you afore the World was; Yet bore that entire and indiſſoluble affection to you, comparatively to thoſe infinite Millions that have been in the World, and hath ſhewn it by this in refuſing them, though appearing in all ſorts of Excellencies unto him, and ſtaying all that while, reſerving himſelf for you, as in that ſpeech, I have reſerved to my ſelf, &c. you have it. And reſerving the Inheritance of Heaven and Glory, likewiſe for you. Chap. 5.

VII. Particular. There are other ſorts of outward Circumſtances, Relations, and Conditions that the Elect are placed, wherein God comes near home to you, as in near Relations, &c. that are more Approximate: Thou mayſt perhaps behold this much of differencing Grace, put between thee and others in thy Fathers houſe, thy own Family, Kindred, thy Relations, and Companions, Play-fellows, School-fellows, Friends, Collegues, Fellow-Servants, and multitude of the like Relations—by the Providences of God, others have been yoaked and conjoyned with thee, & thou with them; & by the differences which by Election God hath put (as in the iſſue of mens Lives, Courſes, and Spirits, doth and may appear) between thee and them, thou mayſt diſcern conſpicuouſly Gods ſpecial Electing Love that hath taken hold of thee, when not on them, they remaining ſtill in Nature, or ſome, yea perhaps many of them having dyed without any Evidence of a Saving Work upon them, and ſo in their ſins.

That infinite love of God to thee, hath caſt about and contrived all ſorts of ways (and even by ſuch ways as theſe) to make endearments of it ſelf unto us; and his variety of Wiſdom, did upon the foreſight of the Fall, diſpoſe of mens conditions ſeveral ways, to the end to inhaunce this love to his own by, if we had but eyes to ſee and underſtand; Hearts diſpoſed to be affected therewith accordingly.

But you will ſay, do ſuch ſmall differences as theſe put between men ſo conjunct in one and the ſame Relations, or like Employments, Partnerſhips, Office, &c. That one ſhould be taken and choſen of God, and th' other rejected; have ſuch ſmall Circumſtances as theſe, any weight or influence to heighten Electing Love?

Yea verily, much every way. For Evidence of which, take theſe Inſtances.

1. The Inſtance of Jacob and Eſau, Mal. 1. 2. I have loved you (ſays God to Iſrael, as Verſ. 1.) yet ye ſay, wherein haſt thou loved us? Do you ſay ſo, ſays God? nay then I will give you a manifeſt demonſtration of it. Was not Eſau Jacob's Brother, ſaith the LORD? yet I loved Jacob and hated Eſau; thus ſpeaks God again. This ſo near relation of being Brethren, although but an outward relation, yet ſerved wonderfully to enhaunce and make apparent the Grace ſhewn to Jacob through ſo vaſt a difference: Yea, and the greater nearneſs of the circumſtances here were in that conjunction, proportionably the love appeared; and ſo by the like reaſon proportionably in other relations that are more far of. This inſtance the Apoſtle Paul takes the advantage of, and improves it to this very purpoſe I now inſiſt on, applying it to Election and Rejection, Rom. 9. (for thereof he plainly treats in that Chapter) Verſ. 10, 11, 12, 13. And his inſtance is ſo full to my purpoſe as nothing can be fuller, and he accordingly preſſeth it. Theſe Two Jacob and Eſau were not half Brothers only, as Iſhmael and Iſaac, whom he had ſpoken of afore, Verſ. 7,8,9. having but one Father, but not one Mother; and yet he argues it from them alſo. But here are Two who had one and the ſame Father and Mother, of whom alſo they came not in a ſucceſſion of time, one in one year, the other in a year after, as Brethren uſe to do; but both were conceived at one time, yea inſtant, which thoſe words Indigitate, Verſ. 10. When Rebecca had conceived [by one] even our Father Iſaac, at one and the act of Generation, ſhe concived them both out of the ſame ſubſtance of matter that came from Iſaac's Loyns at once; where (when fall'n into her Womb) there was a diviſion made by God's providence, one part thereof ſettling to the one ſide of her Womb and made Eſau, another to the other and made Jacob; they were Twins: And as we ſay of Two pieces of the ſame cloth cut out for ſeveral uſes; there was but a pair of ſheirs went between them: No difference whether in worth or works foreſeen or the like; born alſo at the ſame birth, wherein if there were any difference, Eſau had it; for he was the Eldeſt, and ſo by the Law then in force had the dignity of the Birthright. And afore they were born God declared his different purpoſe and council about them, The Elder ſhall ſerve the Younger, and ſo be deprived of his Birthright, and thereby of the Bleſſing and of the Inheritance of Canaan, the Type of Heaven.

Now this neerneſs of relation and circumſtance heightned the Love in the purpoſe of God according to Election; that is, his diſcriminating purpoſe in his freely having aforehand choſen the one and rejected the other: For to that very purpoſe God in Malachi mentions it to ſet out and greaten his Love to Jacob, as Paul in this his citation of it doth to make good his aſſertion of the different Grace in the promiſe of Salvation, whereof Election was the Original, and the Promiſes the extract Copy. Yea, and to this purpoſe of aggrandiſing God's love to Jacob it is that Paul alſo intends it, as thoſe words in Verſ. 10. which are introductory to this inſtance, do ſhew [Not only this] &c. as connecting this new inſtance with the former inſtance of Iſhmael and Iſaac, Verſ. 7 and 9. and both to the ſame purpoſe; who, although Abraham's Children, yet on Iſaac was the Bleſſing ſettled and entailed, and not Iſhmael, which greatned God's ſpecial Love to Iſaac in that reſpect. Well, but ſaith the Apoſtle [Not only this] inſtance or example of Iſaac's &c. doth ſhew this, but much more that which I now bring (ſaith he) of Jacob and Eſau; and from both I have what I perſue to make good, viz. That the nearneſs of ſuch relations through circumſtances therein that do make relation between Brethren the neareſt, ought to be a matter of provoking ſuch perſons Elected to glorify God's grace towards their perticular, and taking up God's own words to ſay with themſelves, Hath not God loved me and that with a tranſcendent diſcrimination, when he hath afore mine eyes laid aſide thoſe that lay in the ſame Womb that I did, or that were my Brethren by the ſame Father, or perhaps my parents themſelves?

And you may and ought to extend this comparative to other relations and circumſtances wherein thyſelf and others do ſtand, and are or have been yoaked and coupled together in, though not riſing up to ſo great a nearneſs. Thus Peter and the Apoſtles did, that Judas who eat bread at Chriſt's Table with them, was an Apoſtle ſent forth as well as they; For he was numbred with us, and had obtained part of this Miniſtry, Act. 1. 17. ſhould prove a caſtaway and themſelves choſen; Compare this, Joh. 13. 18. I ſpeak not of you all, I know whom I have choſen; but that the Scripture may be fulfilled, He that eateth bread with me hath lift up his heel againſt me. And Joh. 17. 12. While I was with them in the world, I kept them in thy Name; thoſe that thou gaveſt me I have kept, and none of them is loſt but the Son of Perdition, that the Scripture might be fulfilled. Take for confirmation of this the inſtance of the Two Theives, both Brethren in iniquity and fellows in the ſame condemnation in being crucified together, the one on Chriſt's Right Hand and the other on his Left; and that whilſt they were hanging on the Croſs, Election ſhould break forth in the one and call him, and Chriſt ſhould take him within an hour or two after into Paradiſe to himſelf, and the other left to his own accurſed curſing Spirit, and at the ſame time dying with the other ſhould go to Hell.

Hell. Do not you think that this distinction of Fellowship in these circumstances, though remoter than [illegible] did not wonderfully affect the good Thief's heart, whilst [illegible] heard Christ promising him This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise, whilst the other can be heard his fellow [illegible] persisting [illegible] and dying in his Sin? A difference put [illegible] like near [illegible] though but in outward mercies, and not in [illegible] to affect mens hearts; as in the case of Joseph's Brethren, his Betrayers, in reference to Prison and in danger of death [illegible], and after according to Joseph's Prophecy of the fate of each, Vers. 13. That Pharaoh should upon his Birth day (which Princes use to do acts of Grace) as Vers. 21. Restore the Butler to his place again, and he gave the Cup into Pharaoh's hand; and so on the contrary [illegible] the chief Baker, Vers. 22. as had interpreted; and thereupon is the Butler's ingratitude evidently branded, that he laid no more to heart the kindness of Joseph (although his own Lot in telling him his different Fate and Destiny) that was shewn within Three days, as Vers. 13. Yet did not the Chief Butler remember Joseph, but forgat him. And if the meer prediction of this should have obliged him unto a grateful acknowledgment, &c. unto Joseph the Dreamer, (as he stiles himself) how much ought he to have done it unto Joseph's God, (who it was that revealed this to Joseph) and whereof assuredly (to the end that God might have the Glory) Joseph had declared so much unto him, who in his everlasting purpose and Providence was the Author of this merciful difference?

Chap. 30

And if you say he knew him not, this yet however you must say, he was obliged then to extol the grace of Pharaoh towards him herein. And therefore all you that know God and are known of God, and that it is he who made thee to differ so greatly from another that is thy Fellow and Companion; how should this comparative affect thee to think with thy self, who lived so many years in one and the same Family together, and were joyned in partnership or office together, so and so familiar in a constant converse, and that it now proves God hath recieved me for him self and left him to Satan, and his Lot and portion; and has so cast and designed this difference that thou mightest understand and consider it, and be affected accordingly? And this as certainly thou should'st do, as on the contrary thy Fellow and Marrow and Associate once with thee, doth in Hell for ever lye under this tormenting Consideration amongst others? That such a Brother, such a Companion, such a Fellow-Apprentice, Fellow-Servant of mine, is by Electing Grace calling him, gone to Heaven, and there is in everlasting Bliss (as Abraham told the Rich man that Lazarus was) and lo here I am tormented and shall be for ever? As the loss of Heaven will cause Weeping and Wailing; so that thy Fellow should obtain it when thou art refused, will cause indignation and Gnashing of Teeth. Shall Hell be affected at this difference put, and that in respect unto such relations as have been mentioned, and at the day of Judgment shall the stories thereof affect Angels and Men when Christ comes to be glorified in his Saints, and shall not these things have due place in our Hearts according to the merit of them in the things themselves, and intenion of God in his Love therein? I conclude, referring you for more such particular conjugates or Yokings together, unto what Christ hath so seriously declared, Math. 24. 40,41. Then shall Two be in the Field, the one shall be taken and the other left: Two Women shall be grinding at the Mill, the one shall be taken and the other left. And in Luke, hath enlarged it, Chap. 17. 33,34,35. Whosoever shall seek to save his life, shall lose it; and whosoever shall lose his life, shall preserve it. I tell you in that night there shall be Two men in one Bed, the one shall be taken the other shall be left. Two Women shall be grinding together, the one shall be taken and the other left. And certainly, among many other blessed Aims Christ had in these Speeches (as that he will take some few instances, and other the like) he certainly had also this in his Eye, that through this comparative difference men might learn to bless and adore God.

CHAP. VI.

The Grace of Election illuſtrated in one particular; the moſt Eminent demonſtration of it: viz. Diſcriminating Grace; As by God's deſign it appears in God's diſpenſations towards, and the difference put between Temporaries highly enlightned by the Goſpel, and his Elect whom he invincibly ſaves.

THere appear in the execution and event many Contrivements to have been in the Heart of God, whereby he deſigned to illuſtrate and magnifie his Grace of Election towards us the Saved of the Lord: Some of which I have particularly ſpoken of in the Chapter before, wherein I diſcourſed of the Grace of Election comparatively with others, and their ſeveral conditions, whom God paſſeth by, and whereby he ſets out his Grace the more to his.

But, above all ſuch extrinſecal Contrivances and diſpoſements, there is this One, which the Scriptures do ſingle out and inſiſt upon, and that is, God's diſpenſations towards temporaries and Children of the outward Kingdom, who are the Corrivals (if any rejected may be ſtiled to have been ſuch) and Pretenders with the Elect for Grace and Mercy; which doth, above all, ſerve to glorifie this Electing Grace.

For my Text, I take our Saviours words, ſo oft inculcated.

MATH. 20. 16.

Many are Called, but few are Choſen.

For the expoſition of this Text, It is not as if the Elect and non Elect were both called with the ſame work of calling; and that ſome of them called with the ſame true calling, being non Elected, do fall away in time.

But the Scripture doth diſtinguiſh (happily) of a Twofold Calling; one proper only to the Elect; And the other more common in ſeveral degrees of it to non Elect; Thus Rom. 8. The Elect are differenced in their very Calling at firſt, from the reſt that profeſs to have been truly called, but were not; By this, the called according to purpoſe, that is, by Election, which original difference works differing calling from others. And in that Text the difference is expreſt, thoſe that love God, as the proper principle wrought in them, at their callings, which is not wrought in any Temporary. It is found alſo diſtinguiſhed by the proper effect of Holineſs wrought in their Calling, 2 Tim. 1. 9. Who hath ſaved us, and called us with an Holy Calling, according to his own purpoſe and Grace &c. in Chriſt Jeſus afore the World began. Holineſs is the peculiar Effect of Election. Alſo Faith diſtinguiſht by its original, the Faith of Gods Elect, proper to them; though the Doctrine of Faith is thereby alſo meant, both the Object and the Act of Faith.

That God, to ſet out his Grace towards his ſavingly Called ones, the more, hath in his juſt and all-wiſe diſpoſing Providence, ſet up together by them, and with them, examples of Men called with an imperfect work; whom he leaving in the end, to the conduct of their own Wills, do fall away; whilſt he invincibly carries thoſe others on to ſtabliſhment and perfection.

Chap. 5.

Oh! Quantum turbarum peperit liberum arbitrium in Eccleſia: ejus arrogantia, exaltatio ejuſdem vires ad ſalutem obtinendam, in quo conatu, fruſtratur. What a ſtir and a do hath the Pride and Preſumptuouſneſs of the liberty and changes of Mans Free-will in it ſelf bred in ſeeking to attain Salvation of its own ability; and how many ways, and by ſeveral degrees hath God tried it, by aſſiſting it with helps and aids of ſeveral ſupernatural Elevations more and leſs, to let Men ſee that vain Opinion of Man of himſelf, by all thoſe helps to attain to Glory without regenerating Grace. Falling ſhort after all Gods ſtrivings with them, they are in the End left unto their Luſts and Hardneſs of Heart.

The Point thus drawn out, there are two or three things I am to perform in the proſecution of it;

1. To give you advertiſements concerning what is the proper dint of my Scope in this point
2. Some explanations of the Aſſertion
3. Some proofs, both from { 1. Inſtances / 2. The tenor of the Scripture.

Concerning my Driſt,

1. It is not to repeat unto you, that there are two ſorts of Profeſſors, ſound and unſound.

2. My driſt is not in this diſcourſe to ſhew you, that God magnifies this his Grace to us-ward as with difference in that vaſt extenſiveneſs that is between [us] and all the Reſt he paſſeth by of the whole World; but from that ſpecial narrower difference he puts between thoſe others whom he calls, as well as us, out of the World; who are arrived very farr in Religion, whom yet he ſuffers to fall ſhort of the Glory of God.

3. That this point is a new additional unto the Glorifying Grace of God, (the God of all Grace) towards us: Beſides all that I have or ſhall inſiſt on, it is a new exemplification and amplification of his Grace, beyond all other; 'tis a diſcovery of a New Mine of Free Grace, exalting it ſelf towards us, by a compariſon of his different dealings with us and others; not the vaſt and wide World only, but a compariſon more contracted, to a farr leſs Number, even with thoſe whom he calls only, and who profeſs this Name; Which ought therefore anew to affect your hearts, and cauſe you to break forth into a new acclamation and freſh adoration of God and his Grace towards you; and to cry, and cry aloud, Bleſſed be the God of Grace, yea of all Grace, ſhewn all ſorts of ways towards us: And that hath not ſo dealt with others, who yet have had the knowledge of his ways, and thoſe under Goſpel-light, in ſo high a meaſure; which is a ſtrain farr beyond the Ela, which the Pſalmiſt's Note of praiſe roſe up unto, whilſt he magnified his Grace towards his people in compariſon with the Heathens, whilſt he ſays, Pſal. 147. 19, 20. He ſhewed his word unto Jacob, his Statutes and his Judgments unto Iſrael: He thath not dealt ſo with any Nation; and as for his Judgments, they have not known them: Praiſe ye the Lord.

2. For the explanation of the thing it ſelf. The firſt is, how God's Grace to us, may be ſaid to have any influence upon what God doth to others whom he paſſeth by?

That Grace hath an influence hereunto, for the illuſtration of it ſelf, will eaſily be yielded, when we ſhall conſider that the God of Grace, in his ordering all things, to make Salvation ſure to his Elect and Called ones, did put all, it is other purpoſes and counſels, into Grace's hands to diſpoſe of ſo as to infinite manifold Wiſdom might beſt ſerve to magnifie his Grace; this was his top and eminent deſign, the Glory of his Grace. Grace had the dominion, the Throne, given it; the diſpoſitive Power (which the Throne always carries with it) of all, both without God, that is, of all Creatures; &c. and of all within God, that is, of Attributes, and Perſons in the Godhead, to conſpire unto its Glory. And let it not be lookt at as ſo ſtrange a thing, though it be not ſimply or directly the firſt mover of God's other Decrees and Purpoſes; yet ſo farr it rules as to cauſe them all to ſerve and be ſubordinate unto this one ſu-

ſupream counſel of all other of his Will, as thoſe of Juſtice and wrath &c. that yet Grace ſhould over-look, ſuperviſe them all, and order and diſpoſe of them all, and the execution of them to Perſons under ſin, as they might turn unto Grace, its praiſe and Glory; and ſo obliquely, collaterally and at the rebound they all ſerve to illuſtrate and advance this of Grace, which is the top and firſt deſign and delight of Gods Heart, even the praiſe of the Glory of his Grace, as Eph. 1. 6. And therefore in Verſ. 11. of that Chap. 'tis expreſly ſaid, that we are predeſtinated according to the purpoſe of him who worketh all things according to the Counſel of his will; (which words if we take in with other Scriptures, as 2 Cor. 5. 18. Heb. 2.) are there added to ſhew that his Counſel ordered all things to ſubſerve to that his grand purpoſe of predeſtination, which is all one, and to ſerve his purpoſes of Grace to us: So that whilſt God for other ends of Glorifying his Juſtice &c. was purpoſing ſuch and ſuch Perſons called, to be left in the end to the counſel of their own wills and ways, for the immediate and direct Glory of other his Attributes; yet free Grace ſtept in, and took the advantage to mould and order the ranging of ſuch Perſons, as in providence might comparatively ſerve to ſet forth the Glory of it ſelf; that, as The wrath of Man ſhall praiſe thee, ſays the Pſalmiſt to God, ſo even, the wrath of God ſhall praiſe thee, O thou the Delight and Darling of Gods Heart, Free Grace.

1. I do not ſay, that this is his primary end of ſuch his dealings with ſuch; No, but the primary end therein is to ſhew his own Soveraignty and Glory of his Juſtice, and to confute and confound the utter diſability of the Creature, which will be a ſetting up its own Free will and ability, with an Opinion of attaining Salvation, if it be but in any degree elevated and aſſiſted by God. Theſe are his primary direct ends; yet ſo, as in the manage and carriage of it, and his providence, ordering and diſpoſement thereof, there is a Remote end thereof (as ſome of our Divines have ſaid) that puts, a great and a Glorious reflection and luſtre upon his Grace towards his Elect thereby, and was intended by God it ſhould be ſo. You may obſerve that the firſt declaration of the Election of Grace runs in theſe terms, The Eleder ſhall ſerve the younger, as if the elder had been made for the younger, which yet is obliquely and collaterally done, though directly only for God himſelf, Prov. 16. 4.

Quia hæc ſecretio Negativa (or non-electio) quæ in reprobatione reperitur, pendet ab illa ſecretione quæ eſt in Electione; hinc reprobationis finis remotus eſt ſplendor illius Gratiæ, quæ in Electione manifeſtatur. Ameſius Medul. l. 1. c. 25. n. 36.

2. If you ask, How this ſerves to illuſtrate Grace to us-ward? The anſwer is obvious; As contraries ſerve to illuſtrate one another, that as dark ſhadows ſet forth Pictures unto a greater Life, and Glory, and beauty; ſo is it here, you have the like, though upon another occaſion, Rom. 11. 22. Behold the goodneſs and ſeverity of God; on them which fell, ſeverity; but towards thee, goodneſs, if thou continue in his goodneſs &c.

Ameſius cites for this in the place now quoted, Rom. 9. 22, 23. He endured with much long ſuffering the veſſels of wrath, that he might make known the riches of his glory on the veſſels of mercy.

The like parallel comparative courſe to illuſtrate thy Grace, he ordinarily takes and gives demonſtration of in the Elect themſelves, whereof many of you have experience in your ſelves; All being Fallen, Free Grace took advantage of improving it ſelf by the Fall even of the Elect in Adam.

That whereas when Faln, he might yet have ſanctified them all in the womb, (as he doth multitudes of Infants that dye:) No, but he rather doth very generally leave them that live to years of diſcretion, and to remain and live in an Unregenerate condition to be as ignorant, prophane &c. as any other, Eph. 2. 1. 2, 3. And you hath he quickned, who were dead in treſpaſſes and ſins, wherein in time paſt ye walked, according to the prince of the power of the air, the Spirit that now worketh in the Children of diſobedience. Among whom alſo we all had our converſation in times paſt, in the luſts of our Fleſh, fulfilling the deſires of the Fleſh and of the mind, and were by nature the Children of wrath, and adds this in the cloſe of all, Even as others; and why? but as it follows, Verſ. 5, 6. To make Grace the more Glorious, Even when we were dead in ſins, he hath quickned us together with Chriſt (by Grace ye are ſaved) And hath raiſed us up together, and made us ſit together in Heavenly places in Chriſt Jeſus: When dead in ſins, by Grace ye are ſaved: This Contrivement (which coſt Chriſts Soul the more for them) was Free Grace's. So that you ſee he gives an exemplar of ſuch a comparative illuſtration of Grace in the very perſons of the Elect themſelves he ſaves, that ſo, by a Comparative view of themſelves in a twofold Eſtate, their Eſtate of Sin and their Eſtate of Grace, after which former Eſtate of Sin and wrath afore, they might be provoked to Glorifie his Grace the more. Chap. 6.

Well now, bring this to the preſent point in hand: In like manner Free-grace (the great diſpoſer) takes advantage of what Gods purpoſes are to others (obſerve the difference in the foregoing inſtance, it was a comparing of two differing States in the ſame perſons here, of two differing Works of Calling in the perſons of Elect ones, and others) I ſay Free-grace that ſuperviſeth all Gods decrees, takes the advantage and guides Providence in the execution of them to caſt and diſpoſe it ſo as that ſuch and ſuch of them that ſhould be ſo and ſo farr wrought on, who yet fall away, that ſome of them ſhould live in ſuch an Age, at the ſame time &c. Wherein ſome of his Elect and Called ones live alſo, who ſhould alſo profeſs in ſo and ſo high a manner and that ὄντως really, as Peter's word is, as from a real work wrought on them: And its deſign herein is to ſhew, that by meer pure Grace his truly Called ones are ſaved, which is clearly ſeen by this comparative, which is herein, contrary to that former inſtanced in; That was, that the Elect were in the ſame, State even as others; but this Even not as to others you lived withal, who were wrought upon ſo far, and yet their ſtate was never altered from that of Nature to Grace. I ſhall conclude by ſaying of Free-grace that great Soveraign and its diſpoſements, and the varieties of them, to ſet forth it ſelf, what Job ſays of the great God himſelf, Job 5. 9. It forecaſts and contrives works of this kind without number —— And many ſuch things are with it.

3. For the proof and demonſtration of the great Point;

I ſhall, 1. ſhew how the Doctrinal Scope and Tenure of the Scriptures, that treat of Election, &c. to be for this great Truth, as thus it ſtands ſtated.

2. Give you pregnant Inſtances, throughout the Old and New Teſtament, confirming it.

For the firſt; to ſhew you that it is the ſcope of thoſe Scriptures, that treat of Election, to be for this Truth, as thus I have ſtated it.

1. It is the very ſet ſcope of the Apoſtle Paul in the Epiſtle to the Romans, Chapter 9, & 10. It is well known, that in thoſe Chapters it is his general ſcope to ſet out the Doctrine of Election and Reprobation: But that which falls under my cognizance is, That he ſets the one, that is, God's purpoſes of Mercy and Grace; and thoſe other, his purpoſes of Juſtice and Wrath; he ſets them, as Solomon ſays in another caſe, the one over againſt the other, or in compariſon together, on purpoſe that the Examples there alledged, and the Doctrine of Preterition there inſiſted on, might the more illuſtrate, and ſet forth thoſe other Diſpenſations of Electing Grace: Thus Verſ. 21, 22, 23. Hath not the Potter power over the clay, &c. Here the making of one a veſſel of diſhonour, reflects not only the more honour on thoſe that were veſſels of honour; but above all, upon that Mercy, and Grace that made them ſuch; and did put the difference (as it appears there is put) which is of Mercy indeed (as there, Verſ. 18.) Therefore he hath Mercy, &c. that here alſo he ſhould ſo ſh w Mercy on whom he will, whilſt he yet leaves others to the hardneſs of their Hearts, this tends to magnifie the Mercy to others the more; for as Chap. 11. 22. Behold therefore the Goodneſs and ſeverity of God; on them which fell, ſeverity; but towards us goodneſs, if thou continue in his goodneſs, otherwiſe thou ſhalt be cut off. Vide that of Ames Med. Theol. lib. 1. c. 2 §

And though he ſpeaks of the whole maſs of Mankind, who are paſt by in Verſ. 20, 21. &c. and therefore alledgeth inſtances of Heathens, as well as of the Jews, viz. of Pharaoh, and his Egyptians, raiſed up by God on purpoſe to ſhew his power upon Man, appoſite parallel with Moſes and his Iſraelites, to manifeſt his Mercy upon them, in giving Nations for them, as Iſaiah, in Chap. 11. Verſ. 2. and the Pſalmiſt celebrates it; and theſe ſet up in one and the ſame Age, in one anothers ſight and view, that the difference might be the more conſpicuous; though I ſay, the Apoſtle extends his Diſcourſe to this Univerſal of Mankind, yet as if ſuch Inſtances were too wide, and ſerved no enough to magnifie this diſcriminating Grace, He gives an other ſort, contracted into Book III. a norrower compaſs of parallel together, and tells us, there was an Iſraelite in Iſrael it ſelf; Verſ. 6. he ſays not an Iſraelite of Election, in the word, but in, and amongſt the Iſraelites themſelves. And in Verſ. 27. Though the number of the Children of Iſrael be as the ſand of the Sea, a remnant ſhall be ſaved. Juſt as in the Apoſtles times we heard, there were a (they) of falſe Chriſtians, that had once been amongſt, and Numbred with us, 1 John 2. 19. Yea, and the Iſrael he ſpeaks of, were ſuch as were Sons of Belial, but that ſought after righteouſneſs, Rom. 1. 31. had a zeal for God, Chap. 10. 2. Who yet fell ſhort of true righteouſneſs, as theſe who had willed and ran, Verſ. 16. That is, who had made uſe of legal and natural helps, and endeavours, to to attain unto Salvation. And indeed the occaſion, or riſe he took, of bringing in that diſcourſe of Election, and Preterition was, to give an account how it came to paſs that thoſe who were Iſraelites, to whom pertaineth the Adoption, and the Glory, and the Covenants, and the giving of the Law, and the Service of God, and the Promiſes: &c. Verſ. 4. ſhould ſo Generally miſs of Salvation; he cleerly reſolves the account, into the difference which Election had originally ſet, and to the condition which Preterition had left the other unto: And upon that occaſion it is, he breaks into the Doctrine, theſe Two in the following part of his Diſcourſe, continued from Verſ. 6. of that Chapter unto the end of the 11 Chapter; at leaſt purſues it in all them Chapters, as the ultimate concluſion he aimed at, which by Chapter 11. Verſ. 5. and 7 compared, is evident; Verſ. 2. That but a remnant, Verſ. 5. whom he calls the Election had obtained it, but the reſt were blinded, Verſ. 7. And he ſhews likewiſe that there was an effectuall Calling of Grace (which was the fruit of Election) which that difference had been manifeſted thus in, Verſ. 11. Chap. 9. (For the Children being not yet born, neither having done any good or evil, that the purpoſe of God according to Election might ſtand, not of works, but of him that called: And Chap. 9. Verſ. 16. So then it is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that ſheweth Mercy. And this comparative thus ſtated is cloſe and home to our Point in Hand.

2. I have obſerved, That in ſome eminent places of the Epiſtles, where the condition of Temporary, or Profeſſors abortively called, and their falling away is ſpoken of, there the Doctrine of Election and Immutability of Gods Love, is likewiſe adjoyned, as in an opportune ſeaſon for the mention of the ſame; and to what end ſhould it be, but becauſe by ſetting them ſtill together, the Glory of diſcriminating Grace doth in that moſt eminent manner appear thereby; and the fixedneſs and unchangableneſs thereof is magnified, by the contrary mutability and failure of the higheſt Workings and Gifts vouchſafed the Non-Elect.

Firſt, in that known place, 2 Tim. 2. After and upon occaſion of the mention of Hymeneus, and Philetus, their Apoſtacy, Verſ. 18. Who concerning the Truth have erred, ſaying that the reſurrection is paſſed already, and overthrowing the Faith of ſome, He preſently ſubſoins, Verſ. 19. Never the leſs the Foundation of God ſtandeth ſure, having this Seal, the Lord knoweth them that are his, &c. This paſſage extends not it ſelf unto the comparative of Gods Diſpenſations with the World, or whole Maſs of Reprobation, but contracts it ſelf unto ſuch as call upon the Name of the Lord. And that which follows, Verſ. 20. But in a great houſe there are not only Veſſels of Gold, and of Silver, but alſo of Wood and of Earth: And ſome to honour, and ſome to diſhonour, ſhews the difference to lye there in Utenſils and Veſſels uſed in the ſame Houſe or Family, the Church of God (as that inſtance of Jacob's and Eſau's was, of thoſe of the ſame Womb, and the Foundation of that difference between them to be,) that God knew who were his, and ſo had ſevered them from thoſe other. And there is this obſervable in it, That though the Apoſtle uſeth the ſimilitude which he had done, Rom. 9. Verſ. 21. namely of Veſſels of honour, and Veſſels of diſhonour, whilſt in thoſe Verſes there, he yet ſpeaks of that Election and Rejection that divides the whole Lump of Mankind; yet herein, ſimply he applies it reſtrictively unto thoſe Veſſels of Honour, and diſhonour, that are found in the ſame Houſe, the viſible Church of God, which have the ſame outward ſhape of profeſſion, but differ in the ſtuff or matter they conſiſt of, and were made uſe of in the Church, whereby his Grace in foreknowing His, with ſo vaſt a difference from the other is, by the nearneſs of this their relation, and rendred far more conſpicuous than in that other of Election, from out of the whole World at large. Chap. 6.

2. A ſecond Scripture is Hebr. 6.——in the beginning of which Chapter he had delineated the ſtate of Temporaries that fell away in the higheſt of their attainments, Verſ. 4, 5, 6. who were once enlightned. For it is impoſſible for thoſe who were once enlightned, and have taſted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghoſt, and have taſted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come; if they ſhall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance, ſeeing they crucifie to themſelves the Son of God afreſh, and put him to an open ſhame. And then after ſome Encouragements and Exhortations given to the true and ſincere Believers, he brings in the Doctrine of Immutability of God's Counſel, declared and confirmed by God's Promiſe and his Oath, in Verſ. 16, 17, 18. That by two immutable things, in which it was impoſſible for God to lye, we might have a ſtrong conſolation, &c. which are inſerted as to aſſure them that God would carry ſuch through, notwithſtanding thoſe other fell, ſo to ſhew the foundation of that difference to be the Eternal Counſel of God, uttered in that Promiſe and Oath made to Abraham; as likewiſe to glorifie his Grace by theſe Comparatives of two ſuch different Diſpenſations.

2. In a ſet of Inſtances.

You ſhall ſee how both in the Old and New Teſtament, God's Prudence did ſet up at one and the ſame time, and in one anothers view, ſuch differing Examples; yea, and ſometimes when their ſins, for the kind and heynouſneſs of the Fact were the ſame, yet his Grace did make a difference.

Concerning which Inſtances, I premiſe this one for all of them, That theſe things fell not out by chance, and therefore they had, and muſt have had that diſpoſement and intendment from God, which we are ſpeaking of, viz. of exalting his Mercy to the one, by his contrary dealings with the other.

I Inſtance. Cain and Abel.

Theſe from the firſt were Profeſſors of Religion, Sacrificing both of them unto God, according to his own word, own inſtitution alike, and together, Gen. 4. 3, 4. and you know the different iſſue of either, as unto Salvation, and the ground thereof, out of Hebr. 11. 4. and 1 John 3. 12, 13.

II. Inſtance. Eſau and Jacob.

Concerning whom, God in the Womb declared his different purpoſe, afore they had done good or evil, as in Rom. 9. the Apoſtle urgeth. But I ſhall wave that, and ſhall farther inſiſt on what, when they came to do either what was good, or what was evil, was their condition. Eſau had the outward advantage of Jacob in Spirituals, having by elderſhip the birthright, which was a ſpiritual Priviledge, and engaged him unto an holy Profeſſion of Religion above what his Brother was, as being thereby deſigned to be the Prieſt of the Family, and Performer of the worſhip thereof, and to have thereby occaſion of nearer addreſs and acceſs to God, (and God doth promiſe to draw near to them that draw near to him) was that in force? But he profanely deſpiſed it, and ſold it. And upon his Father giving the Bleſſing from him alſo, there came a great fit of the Spirit upon him, ſtirring ſelf-love in him, which moved him with all earneſtneſs to ſeek the bleſſing, and yet God would not, yea God held his Father's heart ſo faſt, and fixed to a Declaration of God's purpoſes therein, that he would not repent, though Eſau ſought it with tears. You have the kind of this proceeding alledged, and thus explained in Hebr. 12. 16, 17. Leſt there be any Fornicator, or profane perſon, as Eſau, who for one morſel of meat ſold his birthright. For ye know, how that afterwards, when he would have inherited the Bleſſing, he was rejected: for he found no place of Repentance, though he ſought it carefully with tears. And yet then again he comes to have the advantage in outward ſpiritual Opportunities of his Brother Jacob; for he lived and continued ſtill in his Fathers Family, where God was worſhipped, and Religion profeſſed, and the Ordinances of God were diſpenſed, whereas Jacob was driven into an Heathen Family, where outwardly there was only a worſhipper of falſe Gods, hereby he was in hazard to be loſt, as to his Profeſſion. And yet though God might have taken the advantage againſt Jacob for him to have loſt his birthright, for his ſin committed in ſeeking to get it, for his lye; as well as God had done againſt Eſau, for ſelling it for a Meſs of Pottage; yet God kept and carried Jacob through theſe and other great Trials, to the very laſt of his days, and his bleſſed end, you know.

And all theſe Paſſages ſerved but to magnifie that grace of God as to Jacob, whereof (as the Apoſtle there intimates) Eſau did fall ſhort.

'Twas a ſhort and quick Anſwer God gave by his Prophet Malachi, Chapt. 2. Verſ. 3. Behold, I will corrupt your Seed, and ſpread dung upon your faces, even the dung of your ſolemn Feaſts. As if he had ſaid, Did you ask wherein I have loved you, the Poſterity of Jacob? Compare but my different dealings with Eſau and with Jacob your Father, firſt in their own Perſons, and ever ſince between the Edomites your Brethren, and your ſelves; and was not Eſau as fair an Object, think you, for my Love to have been ſet upon, as Jacob, when both were in the Womb, as alſo in thoſe reſpects fore-mentioned? And my Grace might have been as free to the one as to the other; (God on purpoſe compares thoſe together, to ſet out his love to Jacob the more,) and did you now ask, Whether I have loved you or no? I trow, ſaith God, I have hereby ſhewn it to the purpoſe.

III. Inſtance. In Ephraim and Judah.

The like we find between the Ten Tribes, and the Tribe of Judah, though at the firſt, and for a long time both were alike his People, yet at laſt Election began to paſs a diſcrimination, as you have it ſet forth in Pſalm 78. towards the Cloſe of that Pſalm. Ephraim, or the Ten Tribes, had at firſt the advantage of Judah in Spirituals: For the Ark, the Token of God's Preſence, was committed unto their keeping at Shiloh, the Seal of God's Worſhip and Ordinances were betruſted to them, and Judah muſt come up thither, if they would ſeek the Lord: But Ephraim for their ſinning againſt that worſhip, forfeited and loſt it, and ſhould therefore have the keeping of it no longer, no not for ever any more; but Judah had it at Bethlem, till at laſt it was fixedly ſeated in Sion, as the Earth is eſtabliſhed in that Pſalm: And this for no other reaſon than that he had loved them, and out of love had choſen them; Verſ. 67, 68, 69. Moreover, he refuſed the Tabernacle of Joſeph, and choſe not the Tribe of Ephraim; but choſe the Tribe of Judah, the Mount Sion which he loved. And he built his Sanctuary like high Palaces: like the Earth which he had eſtabliſhed for ever. For otherwiſe Judah was as well as Ephraim alike involved in the ſame guilt of ſin which had forfeited it; as Verſ. 56, 57, 58, 59, 60. (Yea, they tempted and provoked the moſt high God, and kept not his teſtimonies, &c.) of that Pſalm plainly ſhews. He ſpeaks it of the whole in thoſe Verſes, and yet takes the occaſion againſt Ephraim, to remove it for ever. Thus the firſt are laſt, and the laſt firſt; and thoſe whom God's Preſence is with for a while, upon ſome eminent ſin God begins to withdraw from them, and by degrees, as he did by that People of the Ten Tribes, till at laſt he caſt them off from being a People; but dealt not ſo with Judah, though theſe made a forfeiture of their Temple, and Worſhip, and Nation, in the the Captivity of Babylon, yet God reſtored all again to a greater glory at laſt: The Ground was that in Verſ. 68. Zion which he loved. Chap. 6.

IV. Inſtance. In David, and Saul, and Solomon.

And this Inſtance follows next in that Pſalm and endeth it; Verſ. 70. He choſe alſo David his Servant, &c. You know I have in the preceding part of this Diſcourſe alledged David as the great Pattern of Grace, in ordering all things about him for his Salvation, and ſhadowed forth in his dealings with him about his kingdom; yet behold, God thought not enough to ſhew Mercy ſimply and abſolutely to David's own perſon, but ſet up Saul together with him, yea indeed afore him, as a foil of a contrary diſpenſation to illuſtrate his Grace towards David. As for Saul, you know what once Samuel ſaid to him, as from God, 1 Sam. 10. 6, 7. And the Spirit of the Lord will come upon thee, and thou ſhalt propheſie with them, and ſhall be turned into another man, &c. Yet in a ſhort time God ſoon takes the advantage of a ſin of his, upon which to declare his rejection of him from the Kingdom. And ever after that, upon every occaſion, he withdrew from him more and more, till at laſt he anſwered him neither by Urim nor by Thummim, nor any other way, but gave him up to enquire of a Witch; a practice the moſt contrary to his moſt avowed Principle; for of all other wickedneſſes, he had been zealous againſt that. David committed as great a Sin, yea greater by far than that firſt of Sauls Sins was, for which God rejected him.

Then Solomon his Son, who had the Covenant of Grace entailed upon him, together with David, and he committed greater Sins for kind, than that of Saul's was, or David's either. Saul's firſt fatal Sin was but worſhipping the true God a few hours afore Samuel came, and he was in great diſtreſs, which moved him ſo to anticipate it, and he had that aw of God in it, that he would not go to Battail without having Sacrificed firſt. Whereas Solomons Sin was the permitting the worſhip of falſe Gods, of Devils, yea, and building Temples for them on the Hill oppoſite to Mount Sion, where the Temple ſtood; concerning whom the Prophet thus ſpeaks, 1 Kings 11. 33. Becauſe they have forſaken me, and have worſhipped Aſhtoreth the Goddeſs of the Zidonians, Chemoſh the God of the Moabites, and Milcom the God of the Children of Ammon, and have not walked in my ways, to do that which is right in mine eyes, and to keep my Statutes and my Judgments, as did David his Father. This Charge you ſee lies upon many more than Solomon, but yet in the laſt words thereof, there is a ſting that turns all that guilt upon Solomon, in thoſe words, As did David his Father. The Indictment lies againſt him, as he that cauſed Iſrael to Sin; aggravated by this alſo, that he had the Example of ſo good and holy a Father as David: Notwithſtanding all which, God yet profeſſeth he would not take the kingdom away in his days, but that he ſhould be a Prince entirely over the whole, all the Days of his Life; as in the following Verſe 34. and after his death, he left to his Poſterity that part which God had choſen out of all the Tribes, Verſ. 32. as alſo in Verſ. 36. And unto his Son will I give one Tribe, that David my Servant may have a light always before me in Jeruſalem, the City which I have choſen to put my name there.

Again, what was an other of Saul's great Sins, but perſecuting of David whom God had declared and anointed King in his ſtead, by the Prophet? Solomon did the very ſame, in the like caſe of Jeroboam, his being anointed, 1 Kings 11. 40. yet Lo, what ſays God in 2 Sam. 7. 13, 14, 15. But my Mercy ſhall not depart away from him as I took it from Saul, whom I put away before thee. God was not contented to expreſs his Grace ſimply, as in and to their own Perſons diſcovered, but would needs add, as I took it from Saul, whom I put away afore thee; that is, in thine own view, afore thine own face. So then, God in this his dealing with Saul (beſides what was of Juſtice in it towards his Perſon) had this great aim in it, to caſt a luſtre on David's

Book III.

Mercies: And this Instance makes good the words I put the Doctrine into.

Thus much for the Old Testament Instances. I come to those of the New, which are more direct, and punctual to Gods discrimination, as to the point of Salvation: Some of those of the Old, are such wherein this Election and Rejection were seen, in respect of outward Priviledges, for outside of them, yet such as shadowed out with all the eternal rejection of the persons themselves forementioned, from Salvation, as well as in respect to those temporary things.

I. You have an Instance in Peter and Judas.

These are the first and leading ones, unto all the other that followed, and were accordingly the most eminent and conspicuous. The great God, the more to shew and magnifie (even to an infinity of Grace) himself as a God of all Grace to Peter, did in his Providence order a contrary occurrence to fall out unto Judas, whom he had set up an Apostle, like as Peter himself was. God thought it not enough to manifest his Grace towards Peter, singly considered in such an issue of deliverance, out of and preserving him therein, but was farther pleased to set it off in the highest, in a comparative way with Judas. It cannot but be highly remarkable unto this purpose, that God so ordred it that one and the like temptation for kind against their Master Christ, (though not in degree of sinning) the one of renouncing, and forswearing him, the other of betraying him; and both within the compass of a few hours, the same night. They both lay as Malefactors, bound in Chains of Guilt, afore God; and God foreseeing Peter's forswearing him with a curse, I know not the Man, he might have said as at latter day he will to Judas, Depart from me thou cursed, I knever knew thee, thou worker of iniquity: And so in like manner I swear concerning thee, that thou shalt never enter into my rest. And he might have taken Judas, and shewn the same Grace to him in Peter's stead; and yet, admire! for see the difference he puts, he sends Peter out a weeping bitterly with Godly sorrow, and repentance never to be repented of, and restored him to Grace and Apostleship again: But sends Judas forth to hang himself, though repenting also, yet out of horrour and dispair. And all this was transacted in twelve or fourteen hours space.

We farther read, that the self same Peter, having been perfectly pardoned, healed, restored, strengthned and recovered that very night of his fall, within a very few days after the Spirit of God singled him out of all the company of Disciples, to preach Judas his fatal funeral Sermon. God would have him, of all other Men, to tell and relate that Tragical Story of Judas his Apostasie, and undoing; and the same Spirit immediately inspired him with sight into a Propheſie, that had fore-told this of Judas, which otherwise he would never have applied to him. Of which I may say, that Peter took it for his Text; read the whole, Acts 1. 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20. And in those days Peter stood up in the midst of the Disciples, and said, (the number of names together were about an hundred and twenty) Men and Brethren, the Scripture must needs have been fulfilled, which the Holy Ghost, by the mouth of David, spake before concerning Judas which was guide to them that took Jesus. For he was numbred with us, and had obtained part of this ministry. Now this Man purchased a Field with the reward of iniquity, and falling headlong, he burst asunder in the midst, and all his bowels gushed out. And it was known unto all the dwellers at Jerusalem, in so much as that Field is called in their proper Tongue, Aceldama, that is to say, the Field of Blood. For it is written in the Book of the Psalms, let his Habitation be desolate, and let no man dwell therein: and his Bishoprick let another take. O! with what a bleeding, melted, broken, and yet with a rejoycing heart, and adoring of the grace of God towards himself, and blessing him for it, must we needs suppose that penitent Peter, (when now filled with the Holy Ghost) did utter these Passages, He was numbred amongst [Us;] O! that I, who deserved to have been hanged on the same Tree together with him, and then to have hung in Hell next to him, should still be here among you the holy Apostles, the called ones of God, and still be numbred among the [Us] among you, who are the choicest of his Saints, even his Apostles. O! I was in danger for ever to have been excluded, as we have but now seen Judas was. Chap. 6.

II. There are Instances out of the Epistles.

That Age that followed, which first were termed Christian, afforded plenty of such parallel Examples of Apostatizing Professors, and persevering Saints, growing up together in one anothers view; such as the Apostles in their Epistles abundantly did shew. Paul from his experience and observation sets both together in Hebr. 6. from vers. 4. to vers. the 11*th.* as in one Scheme, as also scattered in divers other Passages of that Epistle, especially Chapter 10, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27. and from Vers. 32. to the end, the connexion whereof in vers. 39. is this Summary: But we are not of them who draw back unto perdition; but of them that believe to the saving of the Soul. Also in his Epistles to Timothy, especially the latter, he sets Phygellus and Hermogenes over against Onesiphorus, 2 Tim. 1. 15, 16, 17, 18. Hymeneus and Philetus over against those whom he had known to be his, Chapt. 2. 17, 18, 19, 20, 21. In Chapt. 3. he adds the same almost throughout them. In Chapt. the 4*th.* he sets the names of Demas, who had forsaken him, and loved this world, vers. 10. once his fellow Labourer, with Marcus, Lucas, Philemon, together with the very same Persons, whom he here in Timothy again mentions, as continuing and persevering, Vers. 11. likewise Alexander the Copper-smith, of whose zeal and sufferings for Paul, you read Acts 19. 33. but now turned Apostate; as in Vers. 14. of the same 4*th* to Timothy; as also in 2 Tim. 2. 18, 19, 20, 21. as hath been shewn: James his whole Epistle is but a continued Character, and discovery of unsound Professors. And of the true intermingled set, John doth the like in his first Epistle, Chap. 2. 16. And up and down in the rest of the Epistle, from first to last. Peter the like, in his second Epistle, Chap. 2. throughout, Graphically describes both Professors now faln; and another Company of faithful Ones living with those, and within one anothers knowledge, to whom (the faithful Ones) he inscribes in that Epistle, under the title of those that had received like precious faith with us. The Apostles themselves, Chapt. 1. 1. whose pure minds he stirs up to look for, and hasten to the Kingdom of Christ, Chap. 3. 2. and so on: But instead of all other, I choose out the Epistle of Jude, and in the next Paragraph shall, to this purpose, more insist on it, in which the Holy Ghost represents, as in a Glass, the differing Face and Condition of Professors in the last Scene of the Primitive Times, and holds up to our view the preserved in Christ, verse the 1*st*; and bears the Title of the whole Epistle oppositely to those multitudes that had withered and faln away: His decipher of them takes up the greater part of that Epistle; but of this in the next Paragraph: So as upon the matter, though I will not say, That in all and every Epistle, this Argument should be insisted on, yet I may justly say, That of all the Apostles that wrote, they have in their Epistles, one or other, touch't upon, yea enlarged, this very Subject; and the Records thereof are for an admonition unto all succeeding Ages, especially unto us, upon whom the ends of the world are come; as that which ordinarily should fall out, especially in such Ages and Places wherein the Gospel should break forth with a brighter light and warmer Beams. Paul propheſies of this like different event of Christianity in the profession of it, 2 Tim. 3. from vers. 1. to vers. 14. This know also, that in the laſt days perillous times ſhall come, &c. And exemplifies the Character of ſuch, by the like ſort or gang, which in thoſe times were then extant, whom he accordingly points unto verſe the 6th.——Of this ſort are they, &c. So as thoſe Examples then were parallels of what in after Ages was to come, which differing ſort of Profeſſors extant together, will continue until the end, and be found to hold true, even at the very laſt: For at Chriſt's coming, Matth. 25. 1, 2. our Lord tells us, that then, that is, at that time, The Kingdom of Heaven ſhall be like unto Ten Virgins, &c. and five of them were wiſe, and five were fooliſh: There are as many of the one ſort as of the other, and both had Lamps, and both ſlept; yet the one ſort fell ſhort, and were ſhut out, the other were preſerved, and taken in.

Chap. 7.

CHAP. VII.

A Brief Expoſition of the Epiſtle of Jude, by way of Confirmation of the Precedent Doctrine, that Gods diſcriminating Grace appears in the vaſt difference he puts between Enlightened Temporaries, and his Elect, that perſevere ; with Uſes and Directions proper to the Doctrine, out of that Epiſtle.

THis hath been the Doctrine, and here is a whole Epiſtle made on purpoſe for it, both for the Confirmation of it, by the greateſt and moſt famous inſtance of all others (which I therefore reſerved laſt) and plentifully affording the moſt pertinent Uſes fitted unto the Doctrine.

An Introduction to the Expoſition.

Before I can ſet ſet out the Doctrinal Points, and Uſes contained in this Epiſtle, I muſt firſt ſpeak ſome things as to,

1. The Inſcription.
2. The Time, or Seaſon.
3. The Occaſion of writing the Epiſtle.

1. The Inſcription,

To the Preſerved in Chriſt.

This Inſcription or Dedication of the Epiſtle in General, ſpeaks the Argument of the whole. [To the Preſerved in Chriſt] which comes in after, Beloved in God the Father, [of which reading afterwards.] A ſtrange and uncouth Title, and not found in other Apoſtolical Epiſtles : as Beza alſo Obſerves, he giving withall this witneſs concerning it, that this paſſage alone fully Teſtifies or Argues the Epiſtle to have faln from an Apoſtles Pen. It is indeed full of a Spiritual Emphaſis in it ſelf, and alſo breatheth forth the Spirit and deſign of the whole Epiſtle, which is the ſum of this Doctrine I have inſiſted on ; for the true reaſon and ground of his ſaluting the Chriſtians under this Title of The Preſerved in Chriſt, was the occaſion of his writing againſt another Sect and company of men, ſaid to be fore-Ordained to a contrary condemnation, Verſ. 4. Which two ſorts of men, He ſets as in oppoſition each to other, as thoſe words, Verſ. 20. But you, &c. do expreſly ſhew. Beſides, the Evidence of the thing it ſelf. And this ſo Glorious a Preſervation, and that other ſo dreadful a Condemnation, do take up the whole. And the Epiſtle containeth nothing elſe, (I ſay nothing elſe) but what belongeth unto theſe Two ; we are therefore called the more deeply to conſider this Argument ; in that one whole and entire piece of Holy Writ, ſhould be on purpoſe Penned by the Holy Ghoſt upon this Argument, Even as Solomons Book of Eccleſiaſtes, was to ſhew the Vanity and Vexation in all Worldly things. I ſhall not be ſolicitous about any accurateneſs of Analyſis, but will endeavour to give the Rays and Gleam of it under theſe Heads.

2. The Seaſon and time of Writing thereof.

Jude lived the laſt of all the Apoſtles but Old John, and at this time when he wrote this, it may ſeem that Peter, and James, and Paul were Dead, with the reſt of thoſe Apoſtles, who did not write any thing, who yet in their Preaching, had foretold this great Apoſtacy Jude here ſpeaks of. And this (as Eſtius hath obſerved) may not obſcurely be gathered from his manner of citing the other Apoſtles, Verſ. 17. But Beloved, Remember the words which were ſpoken before of the Apoſtles of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, as ſpeaking of them now dead, and not then extant, as to whoſe living Teſtimony, otherwiſe he might have had recourſe, and therefore alſo bids them remember their words as of Perſons now gone off the Stage, whereas Peter when he wrote his Second Epiſtle concerning the ſame men that Jude here writes againſt, ſpeaks in another ſtrain, 2d. Epiſt. 3. 2. Be mindful of the Commandments of us the Apoſtles, the moſt being yet alive as well as himſelf. Not ſo Jude. However it is certain our Jude wrote in the latter end of that Apoſtolical Age, or the laſt of thoſe Primitive times, when the Profeſſion and courſe of Chriſtianity had now ran out well nigh, (if not the full) Forty Years ſince Chriſts Aſcention into Heaven. In which ſpace as perfect an Eſſay, and diſcovery had been made of what Period, End, or Iſſue, the profeſſion of all, or any ſort of Profeſſors converted by the Apoſtles had come unto. Forty Years was long enough for ſuch a trial, and it is very likely, That as the People of Iſraels coming out of Ægypt, and falling in the Wilderneſs through Unbelief, Caleb and Joſhua, holding out to the end, is made in the New Teſtament a Type of thoſe Primitive Chriſtians, and of us all to the end of the World, and the iſſue of us all, one way or other, as 1 Cor. 10. Heb. 3. 4*th.* Chapter, and is here likewiſe in the firſt and chief place of all other old inſtances remembred by Jude, Verſ. 5*th. I will therefore put you in remembrance, though you once knew this, how that the Lord having ſaved the people out of the Land of* Egypt, afterward deſtroyed them that believed not. So that in the very ſpace of time, there might ſome correſpondency have been intended by God, that is, between that time of tentation then, and this of the firſt Primitive Ages, which was Forty Years to both.

Now towards the declinings of that Age it was, that Paul wrote to the Hebrews, and Peter likewiſe his Second Epiſtle after Paul, and then Jude, this his Epiſtle after that of Peters. For Peter therein ſetteth a Seal of Confirmation to all Pauls Epiſtles, and alſo to that of his to the Hebrews, in a ſpecial manner in his Second Epiſtle, Third Chapter; And both thoſe Epiſtles touch much upon this Argument of Temporaries, and Backſliders. But Jude wrote after Peter, for he in a manner cites him, if you compare Peters Third Chapter Third Verſe, and this of Jude, Verſ. 17, 18. As alſo becauſe he takes up the Inſtances which Peter uſeth in his Second and Third Chapters. Yea, the very words whereby Peter had ſet forth thoſe Apoſtates in that Epiſtle of Jude, following Peter herein as Mark in his Goſpel doth that of Matthew.

3. As for the Occaſion.

The thing being thus ſtated as for the Time, or Seaſon, the Occaſion now follows. That Age aforeſaid of Chriſtians which had thus enjoyed the Apoſtles Miniſtry whilſt they were all or moſt of them alive; I may compare unto the ſeaſon of a hot and bright Summer, ſuch an one, as no Age ever ſince, can be ſuppoſed to have had the light and heat of.

I alſo might aſſimulate John Baptiſts, and Chriſts time, to have been as the Spring, or beginning of the Goſpel, as Chriſt expreſly calls it, Matt. 11. 12, 13. Luke 16. 16. But the very laſt of that Age wherein Jude, and Peter, wrote his Second Epiſtle, were as the Autumn at the end of the Summer; and this of Jude, was the laſt of that Autumn, and ſo the declining of that Age as the fall of the Leaf, which John calls the laſt hour, Namely, of that firſt day of the Apoſtolick Age, and not of the world only in the Evening of which he wrote, and he proves it by this very token, 1 John 2. 18, 19. Even now, there are many Antichriſts, whereby we know that it is the laſt time. They went out from us, &c. Chap. 7.

And now to return to this my begun Alluſion. This Age was as the Autumn, and ſo fall of the leaf, after that foregone Summer, in which the goodly Fruit of many withered. 'Tis Jude's own compariſon, Verſ. 12. He compareth theſe Apoſtate Profeſſors, unto trees, whoſe fruit withered. Δένδρα φθινοπωρινά. The uſe of which words is to ſignifie Trees of Autumn (as is well known.) Which is Tranſlated whoſe fruit withereth; becauſe Fruit and Leaves, and all fell off at the expiring of this Age, as Trees in Autumn uſe to do.

Now there having fallen out ſo great a falling away of many, as Chriſt alſo foretold ſhould be afore the end of that Age, which was at the diſſolution of Jeruſalem, (which alſo fell out towards the end of this Autumn) Matt. 24. 12, 13. Becauſe Iniquity ſhall abound, the love of many ſhall wax cold. But he that ſhall endure to the end, the ſame ſhall be ſaved. Hence theſe Saints that continued to keep Faith and a good conſcience to the end, theſe were pretious Saints indeed; as in the Account of God and Chriſt, ſo of theſe Apoſtles that were left alive. And Peter ſo ſtiles them in the beginning of that his Second Epiſtle, Verſ. 1. To them that have obtained like pretious Faith with us. That is, with us the Apoſtles of Chriſt, and called by the communication of the Divine Nature, Verſ. 3. And Jude in like manner here. And the mind of this his Frontiſpice and Dedication, is as if he had ſaid, Oh! you preſerved ones in Chriſt, I congratulate you, and Chriſtianity preſerved in you, That but for whom the Chriſtian Profeſſors of this decayed Age, had been like unto Sodom and Gomorrha. [Unto whom Jude compareth thoſe other Apoſtates, Verſ. 7.] But you remain as laſting Monuments of perſeverance, let this be written on your Tombs, The Preſerved in Chriſt, and Called. In you, and upon you, hath that other part of Chriſts Prophecy been fulfilled, Matt. 24. 24. For there ſhall ariſe falſe Chriſts, and falſe Prophets, and ſhall ſhew great ſigns and wonders, inſomuch (that IF IT WERE POSSIBLE) they ſhall DECEIVE THE VERY ELECT. And ſuch are you; it is apparent, that you are them theſe falſe Chriſtians could not deceive.

2. The weight and moment of the matter of this Epiſtle, which is induſtriouſly inſinuated in his Preface unto it. Verſe 3. Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common Salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort that ye ſhould earneſtly contend for the Faith which was once delivered unto the Saints, which hath been in theſe times vehemently oppoſed, and in danger to be loſt.

In which words, I do take notice of Three things.

1. That it was a more than ordinary impulſe which he had upon him, cauſed him to write of this matter, and in this manner. 'Tis true indeed ſays he, I had a great deſire upon me to write to you as ſome other Apoſtles have done; I gave all diligence or ſtudy; that is, 'I had a purpoſe and attention of mind, 'to write to you, and waited for the Holy Ghoſt to come with a ſtream upon 'me, &c. But this proceeds not meerly out of ſuch an ordinary provocation, for when I did attempt, I found a neceſſity, Ἀνάγκην ἔσχον, ('Tis under Tranſlated to ſay, I thought it needful) I was conſtrained, or impelled, a neceſſity lay upon me (Thus Calvin.) And therefore ſeeing I was thus ſingularly carried on by the Holy Ghoſt to write what now I do; it is your part and duty, and a neceſſity lyeth upon you alſo, to attend unto it.

Quod ad ſcribendum propenſus & ſedulo intentus fuiſſet, Ad ſcribendum neceſſitas etiam tum coegerit.

Secondly, Whereas this my own deſire of Writing, had pitcht upon matters of Salvation, as they did in common concern all us Chriſtians, [His word is the common Salvation] that is, to have delivered ſuch points of Doctrine about Salvation in a promiſcuous way, as Paul, and other my fellow Apoſtles have done in their Epiſtles [When] ſays he, I began to ſet Pen to Paper by the impulſe of the Holy Ghoſt, I was diverted by him from out of that common Chanel and General Road, into this particular Chanel, to write ſingularly and alone of this Argument, the fatal Condemnation of many the Profeſſors of this Age; and the Grace vouchſafed you that are ſincere Chriſtians. In the preſervation of you, I found my Spirit bound up and confined to this; and this the Holy Ghoſt directed unto me, and this alone, yea and by a ſtrong hand conſtrained me, as he did the Prophet; Iſai. 8. I was, φορέμενος, carried as with a Stream, into this Chanel; and it is all the Meſſage which the Holy Ghoſt hath, as by my hand, to deliver to you: Yea, and though Peter had written afore of the ſame ſort of Perſons, as dreadful things as I do, yet the Holy Ghoſt would have me to do it again; he would have this Word ſet on by two Witneſſes; and therefore, Beloved, do you entertain and regard this with the greateſt attention, as that which is more than ordinarily intended for you by God.

For Thirdly, Theſe things which I write are wholly for you, and your inſtruction, and therefore I write to you, verſ. 3. 'Tis to you only I wrote this. For as for thoſe others whom I write about, I know it to be, as to them, but as a Sentence of Death and Condemnation (to which, he ſays, they were ordained) pronounced by the Holy Ghoſt upon them, except ſome few there yet may be, on whom he did ſhow compaſſion with difference, verſ. 22. as of whom there may as yet be hopes: And therefore take it all as yours, directed and intended for your admonition. And accordingly we may obſerve, how beginning with the Apoſtates, from verſ. 4. he ends with the preſerved Saints with divers Exhortations, from verſ. 20. to the end: So as indeed, what he had ſo much enlarged upon concerning theſe Apoſtates, from verſ. 4. to verſ. 20. ſerved but to afford the ſtronger Conſolation, and more powerful Provocations to incite the Called unto thoſe Duties he from the firſt had intended to exhort them unto. Thoſe that he ſo declares againſt, had not been always profane Ones of the World, that had never been wrought upon, or that knew not God; but ſuch as had been eminent Profeſſors of Chriſtianity, but now were corrupted in Faith and Manners, more than the worſt of the Heathen. 2. The wrathful Vials of woe and deſtruction he denounceth againſt them, as determined and prophecied by Enoch, verſ. 16, 17. and by the Apoſtles, verſ. 18. This for the Introduction. The Expoſition it ſelf follows.

SECT.

Chap. 7.

SECTION I.

The first part of the Exposition of Jude's Epistle, wherein is demonstrated God's discriminating Grace, as it appears in the vast difference God doth put between enlightned Temporaries that fall away, and his Elect he doth in Christ preserve.

THese things premised concerning the Occasion, &c. I come to the Matter of the Epistle it self; which I shall divide into two parts.

Two Doctrinals.

And two Uses suited thereunto.

The first Part, and Doctrinal is,——The differing Fate and Condition of these two sorts of Persons.

1. Apostates.
2. Preserved Ones.

The Condition of which Apostates is set forth in

1. Their Sin.
2. Their Punishment, from vers. 4. unto vers. 18, 19.

What the Condition of the preserved in Christ was, is scatteredly and promiscuously set out up and down in the whole Epistle,

And as to this first Doctrinal Head, there is a singular Use made thereof by the Apostle, proper thereunto: An Use consisting of several Directions given upon occasion hereof unto those preserved Ones, of what their Duties are, that they may still be kept and preserved; and this from vers. 21.

And these two, 1. The Doctrinal Part: And 2ly, those Uses, do make up that which I call the first part of my Exposition of this Epistle.

In the Second Part there is,

1. The Doctrinal, which concerns the different Fountain, or Original (as in God's heart of old) of both these two, so vastly differing Conditions of these two sorts of Persons.

1. The Original Causes of the Preservation of the one, vers. 1, 2, 21. As 1. their having been beloved in God the Father (of which reading afterwards) And 2. given to Christ to be preserved and called, vers. 21, 22.

2. The Original of that Condemnation which befell those other, vers. 4. Fore-written of old unto this Condemnation.

2. This second Doctrine, as the former, hath an Use shaped out for it, and proper to it, as had the former been to its Doctrinal specified, and that Use begins explicitely, vers. 24, 25. in the Close and Conclusion of the Epistle; Now unto him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the Presence of his Glory with exceeding joy, to the only wise God our Saviour, be Glory and Majesty, Dominion and Power, now and ever, Amen. And this second mentioned Doctrinal, and this Use, I cast together, to make up a second part of this Epistle, and all serving properly and pertinently unto the main Doctrine I at first propose, concerning discriminating Grace towards, &c. and those two shall be all the Uses I mean to make thereof, these being thus made unto my hands by the Apostle himself.

As to the first Part, and therein the first Doctrinal Head setting forth the state and condition of these two sorts of Persons.

1. What concerns the Apostates Condition, which I reduce unto these three Heads.

Book III.

I. That theſe (he ſo inveighs againſt) had been Profeſſors of the true Chriſtian Religion once; Both, 1. Enlightned Profeſſors: 2. Eminent Profeſſors.

II. Their Sin and Apoſtacy.

III. The Judgment denounced againſt them.

I. They were Inlightned Profeſſors once.

1. Verſ. 4. ſpeaks thus of them, Men crept in, &c. It would ſeem by that word, that there was a ſolemn Admiſſion ordinarily in uſe amongſt Profeſſors of Chriſtianity, which Admiſſion was carefully heeded and obſerved with a ſtrictneſs and warineſs about them, when they were admitted. And the Apoſtles had given all Churches warning aforehand, that there would be ſuch as would prove falſe Profeſſors in the end, would notwithſtanding ariſe from among themſelves, and ſome that were Wolves in Sheeps cloathing, as Chriſt gave warning, and Paul warns the Epheſians, Acts 20. who yet pretended their having had a work of the Holy Ghoſt upon them, and had been received; yet on their part (they having never been truly Called) their Admiſſion is termed but as a creeping in amongſt the other that were ſincere. For as Chriſt ſaid to him that had not the wedding Garment, How cameſt thou hither? And as John, They were never truly of us; there is one reſpect for which they are ſaid to be crept in: And it may perhaps be ſaid that many did creep in through negligence and want of ſtrict heed and vigilancy in thoſe that ought to have taken them in upon a through knowledge of them. Elders and Churches ſhould diligently enquire into whom they receive; which in thoſe decaying Times they did not.

2. Theſe Perſons here in Jude, were ſuch as have known the Grace of God; for ſo verſ. 4. 'tis ſaid, they turned the Doctrine of Grace into wantonneſs; both in looſe Opinions and alſo Practices, which if they had not been enlightned in, the Doctrine of Grace more or leſs, they could not be ſaid to have ſo perverted the Grace of God; that is, the Goſpel way; for the Doctrine it conſiſted of is ſtyled The Grace of God, which taught the contrary: 2 Titus 11. 12. For the Grace of God that bringeth ſalvation, hath appeared to all men, teaching us that denying ungodlineſs and worldly luſts, we ſhould live ſoberly, righteouſly, and godlily in this preſent world, &c. And eſpecially the Doctrine of Free-grace revealed therein, and the love of God in Chriſt. Likewiſe they are here ſaid to have once profeſſed the true and only Lord God, and our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, in the ſame 4th verſe: For now it is ſaid of them, they had denied him the Lord that bought them, whom once they had owned. Profeſſors then of Chriſtianity theſe had been, and received into their Churches, though crept in.

II. They were Eminent Profeſſors. Which the Examples he alledgeth to ſet forth, and paint out their Condition by, ſufficiently ſhews. Theſe Examples are only ſuch as are taken out of the Old Teſtament (as the manner of the Apoſtles Allegations and Applications unto men, under the New, was to do) yet of ſuch therein, for the moſt part, as had been of men enlightned in the Word and Law, and had been Perſons eminent in their profeſſion in their reſpective times. He compares them to ſuch as came forth of Egypt at firſt, which is attributed to have been done by ſome light of Faith wrought in them, which Moſes teſtifies of them, Exod. 4. ult. The Examples of theſe men whom he proſecutes the deſcription of in the fore-front, verſ. 5. of this Epiſtle; I will therefore put you in remembrance, though ye once knew this, how that the Lord having ſaved the People out of the Land of Egypt, afterwards deſtroyed them that believed not. Who indeed were lively Types, as 1 Cor. 10. of theſe Profeſſors now, who through the light and power of the Goſpel, by the Apoſtles Miniſtry, had come forth from under that common Bondage of Wickedneſs, in which the Heatheniſh World, or generality of men, doth lye; who, as John ſays, and as Peter ſays of them, had eſcaped from them that lived in Pollutions and Errors of that World; and this through the knowledge of Chriſt.

His

His ſecond Alluſion is yet higher, even to the Condition of the Angels that fell; verſ. 6. And the Angels which kept not their firſt eſtate, but left their own habitation, he hath reſerved in everlaſting Chains under darkneſs, unto the Judgment of the great Day. His drift is to compare like ſin and puniſhment of the Angels that fell from Heaven, with that of thoſe Profeſſors, having once ſhined in their Churches as Angels of Light, but out of their own Luſts and corrupt Free-will, have forſaken and faln from that Station, as theſe Angels did. Chap. 7.

Thirdly, Likewiſe to Balaam, the Man (as himſelf ſpeaks) whom the Spirit of God came upon; the Man whoſe Eyes were open, which ſaw the viſion of the Almighty, Numb. 24. 2, 4. And knew the knowledge of the moſt High, Verſ. 16. And what affections he had from that enlightning, you know that Paſſage, Numb. 23. 10. alſo ſhews, Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my laſt end be like his. Who yet for a reward, gave that curſed counſel to intice the Iſraelites from God, by the Moabitiſh Women, drawing them alſo to Idolatry, and him, with that miſchievous deſign, ſo to bring a Curſe from God upon them, Numb. 31. 16.

3. And he alſo makes his Alluſion to Cain the eldeſt Son of Rejection, yea, and of Profeſſion; for he offered Sacrifice to God as well as Abel, (as I ſhewed,) yet in the End, hated and perſecuted his Brother, as theſe alſo did the faithful Chriſtians.

Likewiſe ſo Korah and his company (you have all theſe three together, Verſ. 11.) Now you read Numb. 16. Verſ. 1, 2. Now Korah the Son of Izhar, the Son of Kohath &c. took Men, and they roſe up before Moſes, with certain of the Children of Iſrael, two hundred Princes of the aſſembly, famous in the Congregation, Men of renown. So in like manner theſe were ſuch as had been famous in the Congregation of the Saints in their times, but now were rebellious againſt their Elders, Churches, and all.

4. In the ſame Verſe he ſays, they had once been Trees, that had had Fruit on them, and after their firſt death in Adam, had yet had ſome Life, ſap, and greeneſs renewed in them, whereby they had put forth that fruit; but their fruit was now withered, and they were utterly become without fruit; and were now dead a ſecond time, twice dead; and ſo incurably dead for ever, having no Life to come into them again.

5. His alluſion is to Stars that had their place and ſtation in the Heavens, and gave forth a ſhining light, and who had ſeemed in their motion to have gone the common courſe of the other Stars; ſo theſe of the profeſſion and practice of the Churches they lived in, but now after ſome progreſs of time, were diſcovered to be but wandring Stars; and to have had another by and Eccentrick Motion of their own; differing from the common courſe of the reſt, Crooked ways (as the Pſalmiſt tearms the private path's of ſuch, Pſal. 25. ult.) To Inſtance in no more.

III. As to their Apoſtacy, and what ſort of Apoſtates they proved, and how great.

1. As to the Grace of God, which they had entertained and profeſſed, their ungodly Hearts turned this Grace into wantonneſs, their luſt abuſed the Doctrine of Gods Free-grace, to warrant all licentiouſneſs or liberty to Sin, which Peter in other words expreſſeth of them, they promiſed [as if they had had Gods warrant and encouragement for it] 2 Peter 2. 18, 19. For when they ſpeak great ſwelling words of vanity, &c. While they promiſe them Liberty, they themſelves are the Servants of Corruption, &c. Simon Magus, they ſay, the firſt Heretick of the Primitive Times, began this Doctrine from the firſt, viz. That believers were free to do what they would; for Men were ſaved by Grace and not good Works: And taught, that good had come in but by accident, through the envy of the Angels, that had laid Bands upon Men Conſciences: Thus Irenæus.

Liberos eſſe credentes agere quæ velint; ſecundum enim ipſius gratiam ſervari homines, & non ſecundum opera juſta. Iren. lib. 1. cap. 20.

Now

Book III.

Now indeed, this Simon Magus, having afore he profeſſed Chriſtianity, been, through his famed Sorceries, accounted the power of God, Acts 8,9, 10. But there was a certain Man called Simon, which before time in the ſame City uſed Sorcery, and betwitched the People of Samaria, giving out that himſelf was ſome great one. To whom all gave heed from the leaſt to the greateſt, ſaying this Man is the great power of God. His pride became ſuch, now under Chriſtianity, as he took upon him to be the great God himſelf; yea, and in imitation of the commonly received Doctrine among Chriſtians, of the three perſons, he affirmed of himſelf, that he was both God the Father, and the Son that was Crucified at Jeruſalem, and the Holy Ghoſt; and ſo, in Imitation of the Chriſtian Doctrine, he taught, that Men were ſaved by his Grace, as being himſelf alone that God in three perſons, which is a great confirmation alſo, that to be ſaved by Free-grace had been the Doctrine of the Apoſtles. But he curſedly added, beſides his other Blaſphemy, that all were at a liberty, as himſelf, to all ſorts of Actions free (as the curſed Language of ſome in our Age hath been) be it Adultery, or any Action elſe, never ſo wicked, there being nothing, as they have ſaid, in it ſelf, evil or unlawful, nothing common, unclean; and though theſe latter Hereticks, in this Autumn of the Goſpel, when Jude wrote againſt them, after Magus had broke his neck, were aſhamed to own him as their Maſter (ſo Ireneæus expreſly ſpeaks) yet ſaith he, they taught his Opinions: that is, like Opinions unto the example of his; viz. That it was Gods Free-grace indeed that ſaved Men (not Simon, they were aſhamed to own that) yet ſo, as that Grace did utterly ſet them that believed, at looſe from any thing, in reſpect of its being ſin to them.

Quamvis non confiteantur nomen Magiſtri, attamen illius ſententiam docent. Iren. lib. 1. cap. 30.

And the ground of this perverting ſo Glorious a principle as Gods Love and Free-grace, into ſo high wickedneſs, is that Monſter of Self-love, which remaining in enlightned Profeſſors wholly unmortified, and the power of it remaining entire, and only directed unto other new Divine Objects, but is in them ſuited to a gratification unto Self: Hence Self in them drinks in and entertains this Grace greedily; but like as an empoiſoned Plant, perverts the Rain, yea, a Soveraign Cordial or Water, it is bedewed or watered with all, and by reaſon of its innate venom, turns all into Poiſon like it ſelf; ſo doth Self-love the Grace of God.

Two principles there are in mans Nature, which (when a Man is once enlightned) do endanger him, though to a contrary way; viz. Conſcience,—— and———Self-love.

1. Conſcience, not ſubordinated by Faith, ſets a Man into a legal way, and calls upon him for ſtrictneſs to ſatisfie Conſcience, but then turns all performances into Legality, yea, even in Goſpel-Duties, and makes them, as it were, works of the Law. Well if that Rock comes to be diſcovered, and the light of Free-grace comes in upon the Soul, then Self-love meets therewith, which receives the news thereof, that is, the Doctrine of Free-grace, with joy, but converts all of it into it ſelf, takes all to it ſelf, and Self is the moſt diſingenuous abominable Principle that ever was We daily ſee and find, even amongſt Men one with another, how Self will take all the love and kindneſs that another Man ſhews it, and entertains all with ſelfiſh ends, and makes for a time, ſome returns anſwerable; But in the end proves unthankfull. But to God (whom to be ſure, naturally we love not, no not ſo much as Men do one another) to him Self-love proves a Devil, and will take and ſwallow down all the Love and Grace that he declares and revealed towards Man; and not only proves unthankfull to return nothing again, but will in the end turn it all into an encouragement to ſin and injuries to God, and a nouriſhment of Luſts, which are the darling natural Children of Self, and not into the ſervice of God, Deut. 29. 13, 19, 20. Left there be any among you, Man or Woman, or Family, or Tribe, whoſe Heart turneth away this day from the Lord our God, to go and ſerve the Gods of theſe Nations; leſt there ſhould be among you a Root that beareth Gall and Wormwood; and it come to paſs when he heareth the words of this Curſe, that he bleſs himſelf in his Heart, ſaying, I ſhall have peace, though I walk in the imagination of mine Heart, to add drunkenneſs to thirſt: The Lord will not ſpare him, but then the anger of the Lord, and his jealouſie ſhall ſmoak againſt that Man, and all the Curſes that are written in this book ſhall lie upon him, and the Lord ſhall blot out his Name from under Heaven. Your ſelves that have true love to God, yet having this bitter root Self, find ſuch (many ſuch) ſpringings up: And theſe two Rocks Men moſt ordinarily ſplit upon; the Circumciſion did fall upon the firſt, theſe in Jude fell foul on the other. Chap. 7.

II. You have next THEIR SIN, and APOSTACY. And therefore you need not wonder at that wickedneſs in practice that you here read of, as that they ran into, Sodomy, Fornication, Verſ. 7. Even as Sodom and Gomorrha, and the Cities about them in like manner, giving themſelves over to fornication, and going after ſtrange Fleſh, are ſet forth for an example, ſuffering the vengeance of eternal Fire. Verſ. the 8. Likewiſe alſo theſe filthy Dreamers defile the Fleſh, deſpiſe Dominion, and ſpeak evil of Dignities. They were deſpiſers of Dominion, Dignities, that is of Miniſtry, whether Eccleſiaſtical, as Apoſtles, or others ſet over them, as all civil Magiſtrates Power; and therefore are ſaid to perſiſt in the gainſaying of Corah, that rebelled againſt both Moſes and Araon, Numb. 16. 3. And 3ly again, Verſe the 10. They ſinned even againſt what they knew naturally, as it follows of them; But theſe ſpeak evil of thoſe things which they know not: But what they know naturally, as Brute Beaſts, in thoſe things they corrupt themſelves. They ſinning as freely as Brute Beaſts do actions of nature; theſe having firſt ſinned away their light, you may read the other Characters that follow, Verſ. 11, 12, 13, 15, 16. Wo unto them, for they have gone in the way of Cain, and ran greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, and periſhed in the gainſaying of Corah &c. (as indeed what wickedneſs would not hereupon follow.)

Then 4ly, again in Opinions, in the 4th Verſe, Denying the Lord God, and our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. For Men began ſoon to turn or change (as the Apoſtles words is of the Heathens concerning their Religion) 1 Rom. 23. And changed the Glory of the uncorruptible God into an Image made like to corruptible Man, and to Birds and four-footed Beaſts, and creeping things. So theſe, the Glory of the perſon of Chriſt, which conſiſts only of God-man in one perſon, (the Man crucified at Jeruſalem) into multitudes of ſpeculations and Dotages. They had begun to impoſe upon the Saints, to ſet up an other Chriſt, even in the time before Paul had wrote his ſecond Epiſtle to the Corinthians, 2. Cor. 11. 3d and 4th Verſes. But I fear leſt by any means, as the Serpent beguiled Eve, through his ſubtility, ſo your minds ſhould be corrupted from the ſimplicity that is in Chriſt. For if he that cometh, preacheth another Jeſus whom we have not preached, &c. And to err in this point concerning the perſon of Chriſt; there is nothing more eaſie, nor nothing more dangerous: For his perſon conſiſts in Indiviſibili, that is, in what nothing muſt be detracted from, or added to; and ſo as by either we do un-Chriſt him, make no Chriſt of him; there is an unity of Faith concerning the Son of God, Eph. 4. 4, 5. in all Ages, which if any deflect from in the leaſt, they ſpoil and evacuate the true Chriſt unto their faith, and imbrace a Cloud, and run into a Fancy or Phænomenon, which we ſee hath been Verified in the varieties of Hereſies about his perſon in Elder times; and ſince he is the Son of God, God united into one perſon with a perfect Man, the Man Jeſus, who was Crucified at Jeruſalem in our Chriſt, add hereto, or detract from this, and he ceaſeth to be Chriſt, a Saviour; as take away God, and take Saviour too, and ſo of the reſt: And theſe Men did both, and ſo denied him, as the Text hath it.

In nihilo facilius in nihilo periculoſius erratur.

Again 5ly, Theſe were high-flown Seraphick Super-Celeſtial Profeſſers, and were ſo much in ſpirit, as they profeſſed, that as for all thoſe Ordinances Chriſt had appointed and themſelves had embraced and once joined withall, (as the word Separating ſhews) they pretended to be above them, being profited or benefitted thereby, and now needing no ſuch things; And upon that ground it was that they ſeparated themſelves, Verſ. 19. Theſe be they who ſeparate themſelves, ſenſual, having not the Spirt. As being paſt a building ling up by publick preaching, or the like action and means, as the Lords Supper &c. This you may discern to have been the Apostles meaning in that Expression, Separating themselves; by the opposite that follows; But you, &c. Vers. 20. But ye, beloved, building up your selves on your most holy Faith, praying in the Holy Ghost. From these therefore, and such Ordinances as these it was, they wholly sequestred themselves; and it was not a setting up these same Ordinances among themselves, as we do, but a total relinquishing of them. And yet observe, these would partake in the good Cheer of Church-fellowship therein, with the true Christians, and their Assemblings, as to such ends, when they had only Feasts of Love; and yet therein, they by their gluttony and riot, shewed and discovered they were utterly without all reverence, or fear of God, from whom those blessings came, feeding themselves without fear, Vers. the 12. But truly, I would say to all such, that surely while their Bodies needed those Ordinances of Meat and Drink, (the Ordinances of Nature) to repair their natural Spirits, that surely their Souls should need the Lords Supper, and all the Ordinances of Grace much more.

6. They pretended unto a living in the Spirit, and being filled with the Spirit; and hence it is, that the Apostle says of them, Vers. 19. These be they who separate themselves, sensual, having not the Spirit. As in perfect contradiction unto what they gave out of themselves, and what they pretended to the most of any other: And this their life in Spirit, they professed to consist, 1. In points of knowledge of higher Mistery than the Tenents of that common Salvation, Jude speaks of, did, (which yet were Generally held forth by the Community of Christians, and once delivered by the Apostles) but they pretended unto a knowledge more sublime, and far more spiritual, which the Apostle Paul (it beginning in his time) aims at, whilst he reflects thus upon them, Science or Knowledge (as they cried it up) but falsely so called, 1. Tim. 6. 20. As also the Evangelist John, Depths, as they speak, (says he) but of Satan, Revel. 2. 24. The common Salvation, as Jude here, Vers. 3. once delivered to the Saints; the common Faith, as 1 Titus. 4. This they, as too common, despised, because of the commonness of it.

And 2ly they pretended to incomes of the Spirit, Revelations and Enjoyments, &c. which their Doctrines, and that Spirit raised them up unto, above what the Doctrine of Christ, and Faith in him, did elevate the true Christians unto (though that fills them often with joy unspeakable, and full of glory) so as they boasted themselves to be the only Spiritual Men. Irenæus says, that they stiled themselves, φύσει πνευματικοὶ, naturally spiritual, and all other Men, φυσικοὶ, living but an animal Life, as appeareth by Tertullian's Title of a Book, and themselves to be spirited above all gratious actings or habits, beyond an having the Spirit communicated by Ordinances. Sensual, says the Apostle of them, not having the Spirit. And as to these their rants and highflownness, the Apostle, by similitudes, fully expresseth both them and their Doctrines: Clouds they are, Vers. 12. that soar high, and the emptier the higher, but without water; that is, any solid Doctrine to make their Hearts, or others, fruitful: And Vers. 16. Their Mouths speak great swellings things, Supra modum turgida, ὑπέρογκα, or like bubbles swelled with wind, which therefore, Peter. 2 Epist. Chap. 2. Vers. 8. Tearmed swelling words of vanity. But as for this high pretence of the Spirit, we also find it in 2 Cor. 11. 4. For if he that cometh preacheth another Jesus, whom we have not preached; or if ye receive another Spirit which ye have not received; or another gospel which ye have not accepted, &c. and the reason of it was, as in those words afore, The simplicity of the Gospel, of the person, that is Christ, and the truths about him, which they look upon as too mean, and not high enough for them. But what Spirit that was they had got in stead of ours, and which inspected them, and made a supply to them in stead of our Holy Ghost by Ordinances, and which blew them up above all Apostolical Truths, you may enform your selves from the same Apostle, in the very same Chapter, if you read Vers. 13, 14, 15. Raging waves of the Sea, foaming out their own shame; wandring Stars, to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever, &c. This for their Apostacy.

III. As

Chap. 7.

III. As for the Judgments he denounceth againſt them, they are the moſt dreadful. For Capernaum's Caſe is an Univerſal meaſure, that the higher men are lift up in Englightnings once, and in their Affections unto Spiritual things Heaven-wards, if they Apoſtatize, the lower they fall into Hell hereafter, and a Diabolical frame of Spirit hereupon: This Heb. 6. 4th and 8th verſes ſhews.

Now the dreadfulneſs of their Judgment is ſet out,

1. In General, verſ. 4. This Condemnation with an Eminency and Tranſcendency.

2. Particularly. 1. Deſtroyed, verſ. 5. 2. Reſerved irrecoverably in everlaſting Chains under darkneſs, to the Judgment of the great day, verſ. 6. as the Devils, to whom in their Fall they had there been likened. 3. Suffering the vengeance of eternal fire, verſe 7. 4. Wo to them, verſ. 11. 5. They periſh in the gain-ſaying of Corah. And 6ly. are Trees twice dead, to be pluck't up by the Roots, verſ. 12. 7. To them is reſerved the blackneſs of darkneſs for ever. Not darkneſs only, but the blackneſs of darkneſs: If there be any place in Hell darker than other, theſe ſhall have it: And Darkneſs is attributed to Hell, as the Inheritance of Light is to Heaven.

The ſole Obſervation I raiſe from hence is, That in ſuch Ages wherein the light of the Goſpel ſhines brighteſt, and with moſt power, in that Age God in his Providence diſpoſeth it ſo, that there ſhall be enlightned Profeſſors to the higheſt eminency of Profeſſion, that fall into the worſt of Errors, and the moſt abominable of Practices.

Where there hath been ſuch a Summer, look for a great Fall of the Leaf: And this, inſtead of being a ſtumble or ſcandal to any againſt the Profeſſion of the true Religion, doth rather give a witneſs and ſeal unto the ſoundneſs and power of it. Such an Age breeds up deſperate Apoſtates, like as the exceſſive heat in Africa doth Monſters. The Primitive times produced this, and alſo the times of Luther and Calvin, and of thoſe other holy Reformers, did the like, which the Papiſts object againſt us; and our own experience in this Age, in this Nation, hath ſeen the ſame; ſo as we may ſay, as it was then, ſo it is now: Nor could ſuch helliſh Abominations have been made even Principles of Religion amongſt us, had not our light and priviledges in that reſpect been alike: Had not Heaven been let down amongſt us, or that we had not been lift up to Heaven (as they were) this had not faln out. I could make a great and large Application of all theſe things, unto the Complexion of Twenty years laſt paſt, which was the Autumn of a glorious Summer foregone; and I believe that your ſelves, in theſe Characters I have drawn out of Jude, made by him of Primitive Deſertors, have had your thoughts all along in this my Diſcourſe of them, upon a reflexion on our Times paſt which you have ſeen, and your Experience had in your view; and the Monſters of our Times have been painted unto the Life, in theſe Portraitures of Jude's drawing of thoſe of old, of many Principles, Doctrines, and Actings that have been found amongſt us. The Devil hath read over his old Collegian Methods or Lectures anew, but did it with ſome refinements; that old Serpent growing wiſer and learneder every Age, and attempers his addition of falſhood to the temperament of the Ages.

The Uſe of the Doctrine, from thoſe words in Jude 24, 25. Now unto him that is able to keep you from falling, and to preſent you faultleſs before the preſence of his Glory with exceeding joy. To the only wiſe God our Saviour, be Glory and Majeſty, Dominion and Power, now and ever. Amen.

To provoke you the called and preſerved Ones in Chriſt, to give Glory to God, and Adore him for thoſe differing Diſpenſations of his, with difference from thoſe other Profeſſors, this Doxology at the cloſe of the Epiſtle, like a ſtrong Whirl-pool draws down, and ſwallows up into it ſelf the main Stream and Current of the whole Epiſtle, as matter of Praiſe to God; and that is the General Scope of theſe two laſt Verſes: And it is evident that the main driſt of Book III. that Stream from the firſt to the laſt, had been to ſhew both how the Love of the Father, and the Mercy of Chriſt, had been the original Cauſes of the Calling, and the contriving Cauſes of the keeping and preſervation of thoſe called Ones; when as others had been not only left, but ſore-written unto ſo ſad a Fate; ſo the Epiſtle begins, verſ. 1, 2. Jude the ſervant of Jeſus Chriſt, and brother of James, to them that are ſanctified by God the Father, and preſerved in Jeſus Chriſt and Called: Mercy unto you, and peace, and love be multiplied. So it runs on to verſe the 4th, For there are certain men crept in unawares, who were before of old ordained to this condemnation; ungodly men, turning the Grace of our God into laſciviouſneſs, and denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. And appointed to this Condemnation that follows. Thus the Epiſtle begins: And ſo it continues in verſe 21. Keep your ſelves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt unto eternal life. And thus drawing to a Concluſion, the Apoſtle celebrateth God for all theſe Specifications; the comprehenſive drift of which Celebration, I take up and methodiſe thus.

1. He takes in all thoſe Attributes, or Acts of God and Chriſt, mentioned afore, either in verſe 1, 2. or in the 21ſt verſe; as Love, Mercy, which are all one with Free-grace; and that we ſhould, for theſe, glorifie God and our Saviour, is implicitly intended.

2. Thoſe Attributes and Acts which have had an hand hitherto, and muſt have, and ſtill continue to carry on and perfect our Salvation; as his Power, to him that is able, verſ. 24. which ſuppoſeth his willingneſs to do it, and which being engaged, it will be ſure to perfect it to the laſt and greateſt Act of it: Which laſt Act or Scene he ſets forth to be a Preſenting them faultleſs, &c. before the preſence of his Glory, with exceeding joy.

3. That great Attribute of Wiſdom, which had ſecretly and hiddenly in his foreknowledge laid and contrived the whole of the Deſign, from firſt to laſt, ſo as to glorifie his Grace the moſt that might be towards us.

1. To the wiſe God.

2. The only wiſe God. And this as ſhewn in being our Saviour: For all which give glory to him again.

3. He mentions the Ends which God had in theſe ſeveral Deſigns in loving us, calling us, and preſerving us: And to that end lays afore them the Demonſtration of his 1. Glory; 2. Dominion; 3. Power; 4. Magnificence, as Beza renders the word μεγαλωσυνὴν; and with theſe, and for theſe alſo themſelves, Celebrate him alſo, as thoſe which eminently and above all appeared therein.

4. He ſpecifies the Time and the Contrivance of our doing this: 1. Now at preſent: 2. For ever. The love out of which he did all this, was from everlaſting; and therefore good reaſon we ſhould adore him for ever. There is added, the whole of our Souls giving this Praiſe, contracted and poured out in an AMEN.

You will ſay unto me, Is not this Doxology or Praiſe given to God only upon that General account, that it is ordinarily elſewhere given, as intending only the ſetting forth of his Praiſe, what a glorious, wiſe, powerful God he is in himſelf? And upon that account only to give Glory to him, as the Apoſtle ſeems alſo to do, 1 Tim. 6. 15, 16. in that Paſſage, Which in his times he ſhall ſhew, who is the bleſſed and only Potentate, the King of Kings, and Lord of Lords; who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto, whom no man hath ſeen or can ſee: To whom be honour and power everlaſting. Amen.

My Anſwer is, 1. That this being ſo ſhort an Epiſtle for the Matter of it, and that yet it ſhould have in the Cloſe a larger enumeration of Attributes (larger for number enumerated) in this his Doxology, than in the Cloſe of great and large Epiſtles, we find the Apoſtles to have uſed, this muſt have ſome ſpecial reaſon for it, as relating to the Eminency of the drift and ſubject Matter therein.

2. And

2. And seeing every Tittle thereof falls in so aptly, and suits unto that foregoing Matter and Scope of the Body of the Epistle it self, which tends to magnifie God in his Love and Grace in Electing, Calling, Preserving to the end, in which his Wisdom, Power, Glory, Majesty, Dominion do appear. Chap. 7.

And thirdly, Two of the Titles of God here, for which he gives him praise, do eminently relate to his Grace in Electing, Loving us, Calling us, and Preserving us unto the end; Namely, 1. To him that is able to keep you, &c. which begins the Conclusive Doxology, vers. 24. And to God and our Saviour, vers. 25. This shews particularly, that what went afore is here again considered; and therefore to him, as such a God, be glory and power, &c. And for this reason all the other of Glory, Majesty, Dominion, Power, as Contributers to this Salvation, are to be included, and Glory to be given for them.

4. The Instances of the like Doxologies, in other Epistles warrant this; as Rom. 16. 25, 26, 27. Now to him that is of power to stablish you according to my Gospel, and the preaching of Jesus Christ, according to the revelation of the Mystery, which was kept secret since the world began; but now is made manifest, and by the Scriptures of the Prophets, according to the commandment of the everlasting God, made known to all Nations for the obedience of Faith: To God only wise, be glory through Jesus Christ for ever. Amen. In which the principal Matters of that Epistle is summarily wrapt, as the special ground of that Praise given to God therefore: And therefore that Epistle is a compleat Systeme of the Doctrine of the Gospel, which had been the great Subject delivered in that Epistle; and he winds in, (as you see) and contracts the brief or main of all, as Matter for which God is to be praised and adored by us. And Jude doth here the like, and exceeds that other Apostle in enumeration of Attributes and Praises. The like you find done by Paul to the Hebrews; he in a Prayer summing up the most material Matters of that foregoing Epistle in the Close of it, Hebr. 13. 20. for which, see my Sermon on that Text.

So as, although I will not wholly limit this Doxology in Jude unto the Matter of his Epistle, (though most eminently it is suited to it) but also allow it to be extended unto all of this Glory attributed to God in himself, (as was objected) yet upon this warrant I shall at least handle all the Particulars only, as they may and do relate unto the Love and Mercy of God the Father, and of Christ, as the original and continuing Causes of our Calling, Preservation, &c. As this Love is set off by those his differing Dispensations unto the other Apostates, as they have been opened; and thereby, by way of Use, I shall endeavour to provoke you to bless God for each one of them, as he doth here those he wrote unto; and shall briefly shew how all these Attributes are to be adored by us, in relation to these Dispensations.

1. Go up to the Original Cause. Take, Beloved, the Love of God the Father, Vers. 1. and bring it down hither, and say, and cry aloud, To the only wise God and our Saviour, be Glory, &c. for that his love. Bless him that he hath such, and so great a Love in him, that he can love some of his Creatures so well, who had not, nor could give any thing to him, to move him to it; with which the Apostle concludes his Doctrine of Election, Rom. 11. 35. That he hath Loved them so wonderfully, so immutably, so infinitely, in his Electing Love, that although you read he is willing, for his Glory, to pass by others, and to take an occasion to shew the Power of his Wrath on such, as have prepared themselves by sin, for Destruction; that yet he hath it in his Heart, Nature, and Purposes to Love some so singularly transcendently, who was bound to none, more than to deal with them according to the Law of their Creation, which was and is the Covenant of Works. Draw but a draught in your own thoughts, an Idea of what a Love, our Doctrine of Election, out of Scriptures hath given; a love so great, as everlasting as himself; so free, unlimited, absolute, peremptory, unchangeable, invincible, and the same in such respects wherewith he Loves the same; and then bless him that such a love is in him, which must needs render him lovely, though thou hadst no share in it; a Love of the greatest intimacy,

Book III.

Beloved in God the Father. Let Beza quarrel the Phraſe, as improper, to my Soul, and that as it hath been opened, it is moſt expreſſive, importing that you lye next his very heart, you lay in his very bowels, Matrix, in the Womb, or Mother of his Will; as that word in the Canticles ſignifies, Cant. 4. 9. Moſes ſays, his people are in his hands, as Deut. 33. 3. Yea, he loved the people; all his Saints are in thy hands: And they ſat down at thy feet, every one ſhall receive of thy words. And afterwards he ſays they are in his Everlaſting Arms. And being in his Hand, Chriſt ſays, None ſhall pull them out. Well, but you are nearer yet, you are in his Heart, in the very womb of God, his bowels; and a piece of that muſt be pulled out, if you be pulled out. The phraſe imports, as I have ſhewed out of 1 Theſſ. 1. 1. and 2 Theſſ. 1. 1. The Church in God the Father, and in Jeſus Chriſt. You would be ſafe enough in either of them, but for ſureneſs, you are in both.

2. Conſider his Commending you, and giving you to Chriſt, as thoſe that were his own, and whom he had loved; and had loved them with the ſame Love he had Loved himſelf, as John 17. tells you. And that therefore by all the love there was between them two God the Father and himſelf, he ſupplicates, that God would be ſure to Love, and take care of them. Chriſt remembred it well, and it ſtuck with him when he was to dye. Thine they were and thou gaveſt them me; and I have kept them in thy Name. Things dear and pretious to us, we lay up in ſafeſt places. If a King hath a deareſt Spouſe, an only one of his Love, and there be Armies and Dangers round about in the Dominions where ſhe is, he will be ſure to ſtow her ſo, as to be preſerved, in ſome Caſtle that is impregnable, if he have any ſuch; and with a Garriſon to defend her. Now God hath done ſo with you in Chriſt; he hath committed you to Chriſt, you are the preſerved in Chriſt, and he is your Rock, Defence, ſtrong Tower. Even all that the Pſalmiſt ſo much and ſo often celebrates and inculcates,——that way is fulfilled in him: Nor are you kept in Chriſt only, as in your Caſtle, but as with a Garriſon which is all the Power in God, 1 Peter 1. 5. Kept as with a Garriſon, as the word ſignifieth. If any have any Jewels, where will he beſtow them? In a Cabinet, a ſtrong Iron Cheſt. Remember who is your Cabinet: It is Chriſt, who yet is more worth than all your Jewls: In him are hid all Gods Treaſures; as of Knowledge, and Wiſdom, and Riches, of Merit unſearchable to ſave you; ſo alſo your ſelves, your perſons, your Salvation are laid up in him, as Gods choiceſt Jewels; and as indeed for whom all thoſe other Treaſures are deſigned: Never fear Plundring, you are as ſafe as all: Yea, your life is hid with Chriſt in God, Col. 3. Hid as Treaſures are, and therefore you are as ſure and ſafely lodg'd, as Chriſt himſelf is.

3. You have the Mercy of Jeſus Chriſt, both in Verſ. 2. and Verſ. 21. The ſure Mercies of that David, Chriſt, as they are called, Iſa. 58. 34. And adds, 13. 34 compared. Theſe are the Summity, the hight, the ſum of Mercies, God hath to beſtow; the Mercies of Eternity. Take all other Mercies, beſtowed on the World, which yet are infinite Riches of Goodneſs, Patience and Long-Suffering, Rom. 2. that are ſpent upon wicked men, to whom alſo he vouchſafeth ſuch pretious Gifts, Enlightnings, Taſtings, which you read of ſhort of Grace; yet if you could ſuppoſe all ſuch Mercies that have been, from Cain the eldeſt ſome of wickedneſs, ſhewn and beſtowed upon all of that ſort, to the end of the World; if God ſhould heap them all, and every one of them, in never ſo great meaſure, of ſuch kind of Mercies together, with all thoſe Gifts of Enlightnings, and that man alſo were to live as many Ages, as the years of each mans life, that have lived in a ſucceſſion amount to, which would make a Great hole in Eternity to come, yet one call of his Grace and Loving kindneſs unto thoſe, whom in Chriſt he tearms the meaneſt, pooreſt, deſpicableſt, miſerableſt of his Called Ones, is infinitely more worth than them all: For all that would not amount to the Pardon of ſo much as the leaſt ſin. O therefore, look to the Mercy of Chriſt, as Verſ. 22. in Pſal. 36. David having firſt diſcourſed at large of Gods common Mercies towards the wickedſt of Men, whoſe wickedneſs he had ſet out from the 1ſt Verſ. to the 5th he then ſtands admiring at the infinite vaſt heaps of Mercies which he

he leaves with them, notwithſtanding that wickedneſs, of which I underſtand the next immediate words, Verſ. 5, 6. Thy Mercy, O Lord, is in the Heavens; and thy Faithfullneſs reacheth unto the Clouds. Thy righteouſneſs is like the great Mountains; thy Judgments are a great deep; O Lord, thou preſerveſt Man and Beaſt. Which is to be underſtood common Mercies vouchſafed to Man, ſuch as to beaſts: That were he not a God that lives in Heaven, and in perfect Bleſſedneſs, from whom thoſe Mercies came, he would never leave them with them, nor be in that manner good unto them. He then, in the Contemplation of thoſe other ſo farr Excelling Mercies (we are ſpeaking of) with which he perſues his Children that know him, breaks out, Verſ. 7, 8, 9. How excellent is thy loving kindneſs, O God! Therefore the Children of Men put their truſt under the ſhadow of thy wings: They ſhall be abundantly ſatisfied with the fatneſs of thy houſe: And thou ſhalt make them drink of the River of thy pleaſures. For with thee is the Fountain of light; in thy light ſhall we ſee light. O! therefore bleſs God for this his Mercy in Chriſt; and the Mercy of this Chriſt our Saviour. Chap. 7.

4. Bleſs God for the continuance of theſe both from Everlaſting, after they had been ſet upon their perſons by the Father, untill our Calling, Verſ. 1. and untill their being preſented to himſelf before the preſence of his Glory, as Verſ. 24. The real import of the word multiplied, ſays de Quiros, in Verſ. 2. imports three things.

1. A Continuation of them
2. And that by a multiplication.
3. Untill all be preſented and compleated.

Bleſs him for the continuation of theſe towards you, His Love and Mercy, as hath been opened: The conſtancy whereof I have opened: For ſuch, and ſo great a Love to continue the ſame, fixt and firm, from Everlaſting to Everlaſting, is of a long continuance: And for God to have you in his Heart, Eye, what can be more? No Lover that ever was, had him or them he loved, continually in his actual thoughts; much leſs for an Eternity of time: This is only proper to the Eternal and Unchangable God. And that God hath had his people thus in his Heart, Iſaiah 49. 16. ſhews; Behold I have graven thee upon the Palms of my hands; thy walls are continually before me. God did Pourtray a Model or Draught of what he would make, and rear them up to be in Glory in the End, and he bore it continually in his Heart and thoughts;———And did ſet them, as a Seal upon his Heart and Arm, Cant. 8. 6. as the Church ſpeaks of his Love, Verſ. 7. 'Tis ſaid of Chriſt, who had choſen them, (as God had done,) that whom he loved, he loved to the End, John 13. 1. It ceaſed not after it firſt began, Iſai. 64. 5. In thoſe is continuance, and we ſhall be Saved. [In thoſe] what things are thoſe? his ways of Mercy and Grace, ſpoken of before, which poor Souls remembring, and having recourſe unto by Faith; though God be wrath for a while when we have ſinned, yet in thoſe ways of Mercy is continuance and we ſhall be ſaved. I quoted afore the 36th Pſalm for the difference of thoſe Mercies which God vouchſafes his Elect, that know him and truſt in him, from thoſe that are common to the reſt of the World. This in Verſ. 7, 8, 9. And then he continues Verſ. 10. O continue thy loving-kindneſs to them that know thee; and thy righteouſneſs to the upright in heart. The word in the Original, as alſo in the Margent, is varied, is drawn out at length. It hath been, one would think, drawn out unto a length, great enough in that it hath been continued from Everlaſting; but theſe Mercies, and this Infinite Loving-kindneſs, will be drawn out to an Infinity of length further, even to Eternity in Heaven; which follows, In thy light we ſhall ſee light: They will ſtretch and reach from Everlaſting to Everlaſting, Pſal. 103.

2. They continue and are drawn out at length, and ſo have been by their being multiplied; which was another thing I opened upon Verſ. 2. Renewed every Moment. And this ſtill proves a higher agrandiſing of this. As they ſay of Beams, or the Species's, or viſual Images that flow from the Object unto the Eye, that they are a multiplication of the ſame Image, without interruption falling upon the Eye, ſuch as thoſe raies and wings of the Sun, it is but one and the ſame Love multiplied in the Acts of it continually; as Juſtification is ſaid to be but Actus unicus, and yet is renewed all of the ſame every Moment; ſo both is Gods choice and Love, (which ſhews over abundantly) that is, what it appertained to; yea there is not only a New Act of remembrance, but a [cannot forget] put upon it, Iſai. 49. 15. I will yet chooſe Jeruſalem, Iſaiah. 14. 1. and Zach. 2. 12. 17. O! At once comfort thy ſelf, and bleſs and adore God: Thou multiplieſt to Sin, and he multiplieth to Love: Thou multiplieſt breaches between him and thee, and he multiplieth to pardon, Iſa. 55. And the older you grow, the more you do need this multiplication of Love and Mercy the more: For your Sins, take them from firſt to Laſt, are multiplied: And all your ſins of Youth, middle Age, are afore him, and would one day alſo incompaſs you round about, as Pſal. 7. 2. were it not that God multiplies to Pardon. Thus alſo Grace, continuing to Sanctifie, is renewed day by day, 2 Cor. 16. Yea night and day; yea, every moment, Iſa. 27. 3. I the Lord do keep it, I will water it every moment; leſt any hurt it, I will keep it night and day. O bleſs him and adore him for this!

3. It is continued untill all is perfected, even as here, till thou comeſt to be preſented afore the preſence, (Verſ. 24.) of his Glory, and then thou art ſafe enough. Thus 2 Theſſ. 1. 11. Wherefore alſo we pray always for you, that our God would count you worthy of this Calling, and fulfill all the good pleaſure of his goodneſs, and the work of Faith with Power: And Pſal. 23. 6. Surely goodneſs and Mercy ſhall follow me all the days of my life, and I will dwell in the houſe of the Lord for ever.

And Laſtly, When thou art in Heaven, that is the time when Love and the Kindneſs of Love are drawn out, and drawn at length indeed; That in Ages to come he might ſhew the exceeding riches of his Grace, in his kindneſs towards us through Chriſt Jeſus. Heaven is but the kindneſs of God, heaped upon kindneſs; Kindneſs indeed, and this continued in the fulneſs of it, to all Eternity.

Hitherto of our Celebration of God for thoſe Attributes or Effects thereof, which we find to have an Hand and Influence into our Salvation, in the foregoing part of this Epiſtle.

I come now to thoſe Attributes and Acts, which here in the Concluſion of his Epiſtle, he more directly incites us to give God the Glory of, for thoſe his Diſpenſations towards us, that are Called and choſen with ſuch a vaſt difference from others, as eminently appearing therein; which part of the Epiſtle begins at Verſ. 24. Now unto him that is able to keep you from falling, and to preſent you faultleſs before the preſence of his Glory with exceeding joy.

Theſe words that celebrate his Power, &c. have two Scopes or Aſpects, as Eſtius hath obſerved.

1. The one Implicite, yet ſtrongly implied, viz. a ſupport or Prop unto Faith, from what in God they ſhould further Eye, beſides his Mercy and Love, as which are engaged to preſerve them, and that is his Power, To him that is able, &c. or as in Rom. 16. 25. To him that is of Power to Eſtabliſh you.

The 2d Scope is Explicite, and that is, to give Glory to God for that his Power joyned with his Love, as that which would certainly keep them to the End; and that he ſhould provoke them to praiſe God for this, afore the work was carried through to perfection (as in thoſe he wrote to, as yet, it was not) imports withall Gods Faithfulneſs to be joyned with that Power, which they might be aſſured of, he would put forth, even all the Power that was in him to perform it.

Three particular things then you have further here to celebrate God for in this Verſe.

1. His Power that is engaged by his Love to carry you through, To him that is able, &c. And that his Power is ſaid to be engaged to be put forth, 1. In this life to keep us from falling. 2. When you come to dye to preſent you, &c.

Where-

Where ſecondly comes (as a new Head to be conſidered) the End or Iſſue of all, as that which his Love had deſigned (though 'tis his Power muſt effect it) which is to bring you to the preſence of his own Glory faultleſs; for which ſo glorious End and Iſſue of all you are to glorifie God. Chap. 7.

Thirdly, The exceeding joy that will be in God and Chriſt's heart, when he hath brought you ſafe home to himſelf, which argues his great and conſtant Love. This as to the ſetting out that Diviſion of the words, and the Heads drawn out from thence, which I am to enlarge upon.

I. Celebrate his Power; whereto

1. In General, Pſal. 59. 16, 17. But I will ſing of thy Power; yea, I will ſing aloud of thy Mercy in the morning: For thou haſt been my defence and refuge in the day of my trouble. Unto thee, O my ſtrength, will I ſing; for God is my defence, and the God of my mercy. Where you ſee Mercy and Power are ſtill joyned; as alſo in Pſal. 62. 11, 12. In Epheſ. 3. having firſt pray'd, verſ. 19. And to know the Love of Chriſt which paſſeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fulneſs of God, he then adds this Doxology made to his Power, as that which muſt work and effect all in them, verſ. 20. Now to him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the Power that worketh in us. The Power that worketh in us, is all one as to ſay, The Power that is ingaged in us, by having begun, is intereſted to continue to work. And you ſee how, upon the account of that alone, he gives Glory to him, (even as here) verſ. 21. Unto him be glory in the Church by Chriſt Jeſus, throughout all Ages, world without end, Amen. And as his Love paſſeth Knowledge, ſo for our Comfort his Power doth. The like to both you have, Rom. 16. 25. Now to him that is of power to eſtabliſh you, be glory for ever. Verſ. 27. To God only wiſe, be glory through Jeſus Chriſt for ever, Amen.

But Particularly, bleſs his Power for two things;

1. For that it engaged to keep you from falling in this life; that is, both from Apoſtaſie, which you have ſeen others run into; and in this life from falling into groſs ſins, which is Peter's ſenſe of falling, 2 Pet. 1. 10. If you do theſe things you ſhall never fall; that is, into any foul, ſcandalous miſcarriage. As alſo Paul to the Galatians, Chapt. 5. 16. This I ſay then, walk in the Spirit, and you ſhall not fulfil the luſts of the fleſh. And for that alſo, Secondly, That if they do fall, they ſhall riſe again, and by Repentance ſhew themſelves clear in that matter, as if they had never ſinned. This is to keep you ſo, as in the End and Iſſue of all to be blameleſs: And to carry us in this manner through all Rocks, Hazards, and Dangers, as in reſpect of ſinnings, is a far greater Miracle, than to ſteer a Ship through the moſt dangerous Seas that are known to be in the World, or to carry a Candle through a vaſt Heath in the midſt of Winds and Storms, and to preſerve it from being extinguiſhed.

The ſecond thing is at your Deaths, and at the Day of Judgment to preſent you faultleſs; which faultleſneſs muſt needs be underſtood of perfect holineſs: For it is that faultleſneſs which is at your coming to Glory, and is a further degree than that of being kept from falling, or a being reduced again in this life; for this faultleſneſs at death is to be without all ſin, made perfect. Is it poſſible, ſays the guilty and defiled Soul, that ever I ſhould be preſented faultleſs, eſpecially on ſuch a ſuddain as the inſtant of Death? Yes: God hath Power in him to do it, Epheſ. 5. 27. That he might preſent you to himſelf a glorious Church, not having ſpot or wrinkle, or any ſuch thing: But that it ſhould be holy and without blemiſh. And there needs no Purgatory for it, but Chriſts Blood, and the efficacy thereof, (ſo in the words afore) who gave himſelf for his Church, that he might ſanctifie and cleanſe it with the waſhing of water, by the Word. O glorifie his love, that this is and hath been the deſign thereof, Epheſ. 1. 4. According as he hath choſen us in him, before the foundation of the World, that we ſhould be holy, and without blame before him in love. Ye ſee that was the firſt of his thoughts, as the order of its placing there ſhews, and indeed it is a greater benefit, and more than glory. And again, Glorifie his Power that is able to effect this in you, when you look upon your vile bodies now vile or baſe; or if your Souls could caſt an eye into their Graves, and ſee how they lye in duſt and rottenneſs, and then conſider that God's Power is able, and will preſent them to himſelf as glorious as Chriſt's Body now is. The Shine that came from which, is and was more glorious than the Sun in its ſtrength, as Paul teſtifies, Acts 26. who himſelf ſaw it. And yet be aſſured his Power will effect this for you, Phil. 3. 21. Who ſhall change our vile body, that it may be like unto his glorious Body, according to the working whereby he is able even to ſubdue all things to himſelf. And now from off the preſent Condition of your Bodies, caſt your eyes upon your Souls, with all the more abominable filth and rottenneſs in them, and believe that that Power that ſubdues all things it ſelf, will change them into ſo glorious Souls in holineſs, as they ſhall be able to bear the preſence of God's own glory, without dazling or winking. O bleſs in God his Power! To him that is able thus to preſent you, To him be Glory, &c. Amen. This the firſt main Head, To preſent you faultleſs in the other life.

The ſecond thing propoſed, was the preſenting of you before the Preſence of his Glory, and your enjoyment of it, which is the ultimate end that God aimed at to bring us unto, in his firſt loving us, calling us, and preſerving us. The end (as 'tis called) which he made with our Lord Chriſt, James 5. 11. You have ſeen the end of the Lord, (ſays he;) as if it had been ſpoken in reference there, unto that which Paul ſays Hebr. 2. 9. We ſee Jeſus crowned with glory and honour; that was the end God made of him: And this end of Chriſt is the enjoyment of the preſence of God's glory; as Chriſt ſays of himſelf, Pſal. 16. 10, 11. Thou wilt ſhew me the path of life, in thy preſence is fulneſs of joy, at thy right hand there are pleaſures for evermore. There is an enjoyment of God in and by effects of his, and means that manifeſt him, whether of his Law, our Graces, or Creatures. And there is an enjoyment of his immediate preſence. And thus Hales, that ancient Schoolman (whom Aquinas and Bonaventure were Scholars to) did clearly and with evidence long ſince ſtate and difference it: There is a twofold knowledge of God, (ſays he) one by his Effects, the other by his Preſence to and with the Soul——And he is preſent (ſays he) to the Soul, in that he preſents or makes preſent that Bleſſedneſs which is in himſelf (which are the very words of our Text here) And the one, the firſt he ſays, is not of Grace, but Nature: but the other of Grace. That is, ſay I, the one was by the knowledge of God, which by Creation Adam was made for; the other is by Chriſt and Grace only in Glory. Pſal. 16. 11. Thou wilt ſhew me the path of life; and is termed in Scripture the Glory of God which Chriſt receives us unto. Now this Glory of ours is not the iſſue, or event, or cloſe which God's love brings us unto, but it was the Original deſign of all at firſt; both unto which he hath ſubordinated all things, (All things are yours, and you are Chriſts, and Chriſt is Gods, 2 Cor. 5. 19.) as that which above all things his heart hath been in; this is the εὐδοκία, or the good pleaſure of his will.

Duplex eſt cognitio Dei, una præſentialis ſeu ſua præſentia ſui, alia per effectus: cum per eſſentiam ſuam ſit præſens omnibus, et in quantum præſens eſt ſibi ipſi beatificat quoad illum ſe ipſum. Alexander de Hale, Part. 3. Queſt. 61. Mem. unica ſit gratia, alia per gratiam. Ibid.

Now therefore, that whereby I would provoke you to bleſs God for is this, That if our Glory (as it is ours) be not only the iſſue of his Election, but a primary intended end, and the direct ultimate end taken in for it ſelf, out of pure and meer love intended; then there is all reaſon and obligation on our part, that we ſhould give all Glory unto God for this, not only that himſelf intended it ſhould be for his Glory, but that he in ſuch a manner alſo intended it as your glory; yea, and his own glory to be the immediate cauſe of yours; and this end of all out of Grace to be the cloſe and laſt Scene of this continued plot and ſtory: There is all reaſon, I ſay, for this, &c. For nothing can be more proper or ſuitable, than that for Glory, thus intended and deſigned to us, we return glory unto God again, eſpecially when God's glory is the very Principle and immediate Cauſe of ours, as here in the Text you ſee it is made to be. And therefore no wonder if in Heaven the whole of their time runs out, and is ſpent in glorifying God: For why? their glory riſeth immediately from the glory of God communicated unto them as the cauſe. And his being glorified in us, ariſeth not from the glory which he hath beſtowed upon us, but from our being preſented afore the Preſence of his Glory; and ſo it is but the return or the reflection of that to him and upon him, which they receive from him, glory for glory, not only given and received, but for glory given, as the immediate cauſe of that glory received. And therefore be provoked to give glory to God, as verſ. 25. for his preſenting you to the preſence of his glory, the Fountain of them and all, as the deſign of his pure Love and Heart towards you, as out of verſe 1. I ſhewed. Chap. 7.

The third thing to bleſs God for is, That himſelf will preſent you to himſelf with exceeding great joy; which joy is mutual, not on your parts only, but on his alſo: (What joy will be on your parts, I handled in the Uſe of Direction). For as it is his joy he admits you into, Enter into thy Maſter's joy; ſo it is the joy of his heart to admit you into it, as well as yours to be admitted. And to teſtifie this, he preſents you to himſelf, and rejoyceth with infinite joy (when that time comes) in doing of it.

You may meaſure what this joy on God's part will then be.

1. By what joy is in his heart at their Converſion, which is indeed the firſt Calling of you into glory, as Peter hath it, 1 Pet. 5. 10. There is one whole Chapter on purpoſe ſpent upon it, to declare the joy that is in God's heart at that time.

Both in the Parallel of the loſt Sheep and Groat, which is ſpoken of the Lord himſelf, and Shepherd of that loſt Sheep: Who alſo, verſe 6. ſays unto his Friends, Rejoyce with me. So as it is God and Chriſt himſelf that are the great Rejoycers: For he calls upon his Friends to rejoyce with him. The Bridegroom that hath the Bride rejoyceth more than the Friends of the Bridegroom.

Secondly, In the Parable of the loſt Son, verſ. 22. The Father ſaid to his Servants, let us eat and be merry. 'Tis the Father ſays it, verſe 23. And theſe Parables are applyed unto what joy is in Heaven upon the Converſion of a ſinner here in this world, verſ. 7. Thus in that Parable, I ſay unto you, that joy is likewiſe in Heaven: And the Scope in both is therefore, chiefly to ſet forth what is the heart of God the Father, under the repreſentation of the Father of a Prodigal. Now if this joy be at the initiation and birth of an heir of Glory, how much more is there in the heart of God and Chriſt upon his Coronation, and upon his firſt arrival in Heaven, afore the preſence of God's glory, to be for ever made partaker of it.

Thirdly, There is this further manifeſt Reaſon for it, becauſe the fulneſs of time, ſo long afore deſigned and waited for, is now come, and alſo the conſummation of that which all his Decrees (about us) from everlaſting, had center'd in, and primarily pitcht upon, as that which was the end of all aimed at, and that which he had from before the world ſo much pleaſed himſelf in with the thoughts of that day: (For his delights aforehand were in them, as Prov. 8. even ſo long ago, and ſtill continued.) And to delight ſo long beforehand, muſt needs produce full and compleat joy, when the thing delighted in is accompliſhed, and did begin the firſt conſummation of all them delights, as this firſt preſenting us afore him is. Moreover, between his electing of them and this conſummation, he had called them; which is indeed a kind of new Election, and the firſt beginning of the execution of the firſt Election, and bears the Image of it. Look as a Merchant having launched a Ship to Sea, (and ſuch our Calling is) for a great, long, and dangerous Voyage, with certain hopes of great returns of Profit, if he come home ſafe in her, and proves alſo a Ship that hath run through many hazards and dangers of Shipwrack and Pyracies; (as we through manyfold temptations, &c.) And look as the Merchant or Owner rejoyceth when his Ship doth come home ſo rich laden, through ſuch great Adventures, ſo doth God at our ſafe arrival in the Haven, to which Metaphor the Scripture once and twice alludes.

Now that God will entertain you with ſuch an exceeding joy and triumph too, (as the word here imports) affords the higheſt ground unto you to bleſs him, and give glory unto him in the faith and confidence hereof aforehand. For nothing can more argue, that this glory was the deſign and longing deſire of his heart, and delight of his ſoul from eternity, than that he ſo exceedingly rejoyceth when it is perfected. And it is a true and certain meaſure we may make hereof, that ſo much joy as ariſeth in any ones heart, in ſuch a caſe, there was ſo much love; for theſe affections are commenſurable. And therefore if God aforehand tells us he will preſent every particular perſon of us afore his own glory, with ſo great joy, as to himſelf, this infallibly argues the like proportion of an infinite Love to have been born by him towards us in his heart: Let us therefore, firſt caſting our eyes backward unto his eternal Love that deſigned all to us, and then turning and ſetting our eyes forward unto that joy that will be at the accompliſhment, retire in the view of both to bleſs and adore him for all, and ſanctifie him in our hearts. And this for that third and laſt thing in verſe 4.

SECTION II.

The diſcriminating Grace of Election, as it appears in the difference God puts between Temporaries, and thoſe whom he finally Preſerves, further illuſtrated in an Expoſition of the other part of Jude's Epiſtle; wherein are diſcovered the different Fountains and Cauſes in Gods Heart of our Salvation, both Original and Continued.

1. YOu have in Verſ. firſt and ſecond of this Epiſtle of Jude, the Cauſes of Salvation, and of our being kept, held up unto our view.

Then Secondly, The eminency of that Grace and Favour illuſtrated by the oppoſite thereof, viz. The Condemnation and Apoſtacy of others (ordained of old to this Condemnation.)

Then thirdly, a provocation of theſe ſaved and preſerved Ones, to give Glory unto God for all his diſcriminating Grace towards them, Verſ. 24, 25.

And that we all ſhould adore and bleſs this God for all theſe, is my Second Uſe which I intend to proſecute at this time, founding all I ſhall urge upon you therein, upon what Jude hath ſpoke before me.

In the doing of which, I ſhall but open the remaining Paſſages in Jude, not ſpoken to the laſt time; and which, added to the former, will prove as ſome brief Expoſition upon the reſt of the Epiſtle.

You have the cauſes of Salvation and our Preſervation in Jude, Verſ. 1. To them that are the beloved of God the Father, and preſerved in Jeſus Chriſt, and called.

In this firſt Verſe you have the original cauſes both of the Perſons { God the Father, Jeſus Chriſt.

As alſo of the Acts in both which are the Foundation of our Salvation, &c.

1. Love in God the Father; which ſpeaks his Electing of us. Beloved in God the Father. For which reading I ſhall give an account.

2. Preſerved in Chriſt; which ſpeaks his having Given us unto Chriſt out of that Love for him, to keep and to preſerve us.

That third of being Called, is brought in as the firſt breaking forth of that Love of God upon us, at and from which Chriſt's actual performance in keeping of us, commenceth, and from thence is continued to the end.

Verſe 2. Mercy unto you, and peace, and Love be multiplied.

In this Verſe you have the continuing and continued Cauſes of our Salvation (as in the former the Original) by the multiplication of which, with their proper proper Effects upon us, it is that we are preserved to Salvation; which yet for Substance are no other than the former, in Verſ. 1, And theſe are 3. Affections and Diſpoſitions in God's Heart and Chriſts. Chap. 7.

1. Mercy or Grace in Chriſt's Heart, who undertook the preſervation of us.

2. Peace in God's Heart towards us, wrought and purchaſed by Chriſt. He is our peace, Epheſ. 2. 14.

3. The Love of God the Father at firſt ſet on us. Theſe being continued and multiplied in Effects ſuitable to each, I call the continuing Cauſes of our Salvation.

As 1. The Mercy and Grace in Chriſt multiplying the Attributes of Mercy on us.

2. Peace from God, being at peace with us through Chriſt, and multiplying the ſenſe of that Peace in our Hearts with joy, &c.

3. The Love in the Heart of God the Father; multiplied in all Spiritual Bleſſings, as Epheſ. 1, 2. by which we are carried on unto Salvation.

And although theſe come in, as a prayer or wiſh, ſuch as is uſed afore Epiſtles, yet that here they are brought in with a pertinent Connexion with Verſ. 1. and the General Scope of the whole Epiſtle, as the Cauſes of the Preſervation there ſpecified, I ſhall after ſhew.

1. As for the original cauſes of our Salvation and preſervation. Verſ. 1. Beloved in God the Father, &c.

Three things are to be performed for the Explication of this.

1. Some Reaſons why I ſo read the words.

2. To Explain what the import of that Phraſe ſhould be, In God.

3. To prove that by that Expreſſion, Beloved in God the Father, is, connotated that God the Father Choſe and Elected us.

You have it indeed here read, and tranſlated, Sanctified by God the Father. But if we conſult both Commentators, and Greek Original Copies, as they are alſo cited by interpreters, we ſhall find that diverſe, as Authentick Copies (as thoſe that read it Sanctified, &c.) do write it Beloved, in or of, or by God the Father, ἠγαπημένοις, Beloved, inſtead of ἡγιασμένοις. And the Phraſe ἐν Θεῷ πατρὶ, is all one, ſay ſome, with ἀπὸ Θεοῦ πατρὸς, Beloved of God the Father, or, διὰ, By God the Father; which reading Pareus juſtifies; and Commentators generally do willingly agree to take either.

Now where there are found two ſuch readings in ſo many Copies Antient; and but a ſmall difference in the Greek words themſelves, which might eaſily occaſion a miſtake in the writers; in this caſe, that which muſt caſt it, is unto whither of the two the Scope, Series, and order of the Matter afore or after, rationally conſidered and compared with other Scriptures, do moſt incline: And therein (I take it) ἠγαπημένοις, Beloved, in and of God the Father, hath far the advantage and appearance for it; to have originally faln rather from our Apoſtles Pen.

For which there are theſe Reaſons unto me of weight.

1. Their being Sanctified is apparently mentioned, and comes in afterwards included, under and in the word Called, as in like manner often our Sanctification doth; as in Rom. 8. 30. And Saints by Calling 1. Cor. 1. And I confeſs the reading as here it ſtands, Sanctified firſt, then Preſerved, and after both of them, then Called; this did always, in former times, in the reading of it, breed ſome jar in my thoughts, as if the words had not been, at leaſt rightly and orderly placed, but when I met with this other, Beloved of God the Father, it reconciled all to me.

2. I conſider that the act or work of Grace here intended, is that which is properly God the Fathers, and ſo is to ſpeak what his ſpecial Hand is in our Salvation and Preſervation. Now to ſay, Beloved of God the Father, ſpeaks what is moſt proper unto God our Father, and what his Hand and Original Act in our Salvation is; and is that which is more generally proclaimed throughout the New Teſtament, every where almoſt where he is ſpoken of in diſtinction from Chriſt.

For both, 1. Love, is in a way of eminency attributed to the Father; the Love of the Father; when the work of the three Perſons are diſtinguiſhed;

Book III.

2 Cor. 13. ult. 2 Theſſ. 2. 13, 16. and up and down every where.

Alſo 2. Election is peculiarly attributed to him, as his eminent work: And to be beloved of the Father, and to be Elected, are equivalent, and are put for each other, or are often joyned together; Love being the firſt and chief moving Cauſe of Election. Thus Rom. 11. 28. Beloved according to Election; that is, therein and thereby they are the Beloved of God indeed. And 2 Theſſ. 2. 13. We give thanks to God for you (Brethren) beloved of the Lord, becauſe God hath choſen you, &c. And ſo therein and thereby hath manifeſted you to be his deareſt beloved, and for that, and in that reſpect, bearing the title of Beloved: And joyn thereto Verſ. 16. where his having choſen us that went afore, in Verſ. 13. is here, who hath Loved us.

3. By this reading the Series and Order of the three things in Verſ. 1. is ſet right, and rendred more clear at leaſt: 1. Beloved of God the Father, who is the firſt perſon, as that of Election is the Original Act. 2. Preſerved in Chriſt, which is the ſecond perſons part. 3. Called, which is the Holy Ghoſts. Beza's Gloſs and Interpoſition, is very obſervable upon that ſecond; [Preſerved in Chriſt] that is, (ſays he) having been ſet a part, or choſen in and by Gods eternal Counſel; they who ſhould be given to Chriſt to be kept by him. So as he, though he inclines rather to the other reading of ſanctified, and makes a difficulty of our reading it Beloved of God the Father, and is againſt it; yet he takes in the ſenſe thereof, as touched in the other word, Preſerved in Chriſt: He diſcerned both from the Scope of the Epiſtle, and the great Emphaticalneſs of that expreſſion Preſerved in Chriſt. So that Election by the Father muſt be ſuppoſed firſt, and neceſſarily taken in; and a giving us to Chriſt, (which accompanied that Election) to be the proper Cauſe of our being preſerved in and by that Chriſt: And ſo that Preſerved in Chriſt, referred unto the Fathers Act of giving; and therefore he would have it to be brought in ſome where, though but implicitely aimed at in that expreſſion [Preſerved in Chriſt.] But why then ſhould we avoid this other reading of Beloved of God the Father, which more plainly and expreſly denotes that Act of Gods, out of which, and together with which, God did give us to Chriſt; and gave us thereby with this Commendamus and Declaration of his will, that he the Father, having loved them firſt, and thereby made them his, and had now given them to him, and that therefore out of all that love to him, and between them, he would preſerve them (which I ſhall by and by again ſpeak to;) ſo then, that Beloved of God the Father, that is, Elected by him, ſhould be ſaid firſt to hold the moſt fair coherence of all other with Preſerved in Chriſt, (as that which follows next) declaring therein the very ground and foundation of that our preſervation, and that as in Chriſt, and ſo ſhewing the true order of Cauſes; God the Father's Love firſt, in chooſing, &c. and Chriſt's next, to whom they were given, and is anſwerably in order here firſt placed, it having been the fountain and original of all, the ſource, and beginning of our Salvation, as the Father is of the Perſons.

4. The Parallel of other Scriptures does favour this our reading of the words; The Apoſtle Peter in like manner annexing this benefit of preſervation (as Jude here) unto Election: For whereas, Verſ. 5. he ſays. Who are kept by the Power of God unto Salvation; he had firſt entitled his Epiſtle, as Jude doth To the Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father; Verſ. 1. and then, who are kept by the power of God, Verſ. 5. (and the word is the ſame that here.)

5. The oppoſite mention of God's rejecting and ordaining thoſe Apoſtates to that Judgment, verſ. 4. as the original of their Condemnation; this caſts backward, and refers unto what he had ſaid of theſe other, their having been ordained unto Salvation and Preſervation. And therefore this reading, Beloved of God the Father, is rather to be ſuppoſed to have been his meaning. For 1. the Apoſtle's ſcope being to comfort and inſtruct the Saints in this Epiſtle, much more than to ſet out the fate of theſe Apoſtates, and the narration thereof being but to illuſtrate that ſtate and grace to thoſe Saints, ſurely of the two, he would to that purpoſe rather make mention of their Election, than of the others Reprobation. Eſpecially, 2dly, ſeeing Acts of Grace do more readily readily proceed from God than Acts of avenging Juſtice; therefore if the ones Reprobation be mentioned (as it is) much rather the others Election. Chap. 7.

2. What the import of the Phraſe ſhould be [in God.]

Beloved [in] God the Father.

Beza indeed ſticks at the Phraſe Beloved [in] God the Father; as the Greek ordinarily hath it. This is an unuſual Phraſe to be uſed of the Act of the Father's Election, but it ordinarily runs, and much oftner, choſen and beloved in Chriſt: But in the Father, we no where read.

But this is ſo far from being an Objection, as it turns to be a reaſon to confirm our Interpretation.

For (beſides what was ſaid, that ἐν is put for ἀπὸ, διὰ, or ὑπὸ, and ſo it is all one to have ſaid, Beloved of, or by the Father). The Phraſe (in the Father) aptly notes out the eminency of that Act in God himſelf, riſing up, and abiding within himſelf, in his own heart and breaſt, in himſelf alone, as from himſelf. And ſuch Acts, his loving us and chooſing us from everlaſting, were and muſt be acknowledged purely to have been, and thus in like manner it is termed, his good pleaſure which he purpoſed in himſelf, Epheſ. 1. 9.

Nor is it an Objection of weight enough, that it is ſaid, Beloved and Choſen in Chriſt, to exclude this of ours; as if therefore Beloved in God the Father ſhould be improper, no more, than becauſe in that place laſt cited, it is ſaid, which he purpoſed in himſelf, ſpeaking of the Father, that therefore it ſhould be improper to ſay the ſame of Chriſt; which yet we find, Epheſ. 3. 11. According to the eternal purpoſe which he purpoſed in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord. For that Phraſe (In the Father) denotes the Subject and efficient Cauſe, and that of In Chriſt, the Medium or Inſtrumental Cauſe. Yea, according to this Rule, their reading ſanctified in God the Father, ſhould be excluded alſo, becauſe it is more often ſaid, and in uſe, ſanctified in Jeſus Chriſt, than in God the Father.

3. The third thing for explaining this of [Beloved in God the Father] is, That thereby is imported and connotated, that God the Father choſe and elected us.

Yea, theſe two are mutually put each for other: The very act of Election is expreſt by God's loving us: Jacob have I loved, Rom. 9. 13. which is alledged, as a Proof of Jacob's being elected, ſpoken of afore, verſ. 11. and is there termed the purpoſe of God according to Election, towards him.

Thus God's Election of Chriſt (whoſe Election is the pattern of ours) as he is God-man, is expreſſed by his having loved him; John 17. 24. Thou lovedſt me afore the foundation of the world; that is, thou lovedſt me, and out of love choſeſt me. And he ſpeaks not of that love he bare to him, purely conſidered as ſecond Perſon, but that of him as God-man, and Mediatour: Whilſt Chriſt ſpeaks it, he alſo ſays, That God had loved us, as he had loved him: Now between the love which God bare him, as ſecond Perſon ſimply conſidered, there ought not to have been any ſuch Compariſon made of what his love is to us, ſo as to ſay, that he loved us as he loved him as ſecond Perſon; but as Mediator it might be ſaid; and therefore it was all one as to ſay he choſe him: So that here for God the Father to be ſaid to love us, is equivalent to ſay he choſe us.

2. Preſerved in Chriſt.

Between theſe two (Beloved in God the Father, and then preſerved in Chriſt) doth riſe up, as couched in each of them, and as the reſult of both in this Connexion,

Our having been given by the Father out of his love to Jeſus Chriſt, for him to preſerve; and that Chriſt undertook ſo to do.

This is ſtrongly implied here, if withal we bring thoſe other Scriptures which Eſtius, and diverſe others (having obſerved this as connotated here) have ſent us unto, to explain this paſſage, in which is ſet forth the original

Gerard upon both the Epiſtles of Peter, in which Grace and Peace be multiplied are wiſht (even as here) interpreteth there Grace to be meant, as I did here, and Love and Mercy to be meant chiefly of the Effects of Grace, but of the Fountain of all, The Free Grace of God. Per gratiam quidam μετωνυμικῶς, intelligunt beneficia gratiæ collata: Sed rectius intelligitur Fons illorum beneficiorum omnium, viz. Favor Dei Gratuitus. And for the proof of this ſenſe in Peter, alledgeth this Parallel in Jude; Nam in parallelo Judæ 2. Χάρις exponitur per τὸ ἔλεος. Thus he on 1 Ep. Peter 1. 2. as alſo upon 2 Ep. chap. 1. verſ. 2.

riſe,

riſe, the deſcent, and ſtory of our being Preſerved in Chriſt. 1. Love in the Father, made us to be his. Thereupon, ſecondly, proceeded a giving us to Chriſt; that as he loved him, he would keep us as the end of his giving us: Which thirdly, Chriſt willingly undertook and performs. All theſe you have fully ex reſſed by Chriſt in his laſt Publick Prayer, John 17.

1. That they had been given him by his Father, as his own. So the Second Verſe begins, that He ſhould give eternal life to as many as God had given him. He purſuing this again, ſays, Verſ. 6. I have manifeſted thy name unto the Men which thou gaveſt me out of the World: Thine they were and thou gaveſt them me. Then Verſ. 9. I pray for them, I pray not for the World, but for them which thou haſt given me; for they are thine.

2. Given him they were, for that end, for him to keep; and therefore he returns an account to his Father, how he had kept them: And indigitates it twice, Verſ. 12. While I was with them in the World, I kept them in thy name: Thoſe that thou gaveſt me I have kept, and none of them is loſt.

3. That he had undertaken to keep them, upon his Fathers giving them, all and every of thoſe words declare: As namely, his giving that account of the diſcharge of his truſt therein; Verſ. 6. I have manifeſted thy name unto the men which thou gaveſt me out of the World. &c. And that he had done (what in him lay to do) that which might preſerve them; I have manifeſted thy name, Verſ. 6. I have given them thy words &c. Verſ. 8. And alſo by the effects he had wrought in them, Verſ. 8. They have received them, and have known ſurely that I came out from thee, and they have believed that thou didſt ſend me. And then likewiſe by his Care to recommend them again unto his Father; Verſ. 12. While I was with them in the World, I kept them in thy name: Thoſe that thou gaveſt me I have kept, and none of them is loſt.

4 And all this, and thoſe other great benefits that follow, do run up into Gods having loved them, which is not only implied in his urging they were thine; But that God had choſen them. Thou haſt Loved them as thou haſt Loved me, Verſ. 23. Now of himſelf, he ſays, thou lovedſt me afore the Foundations of the World; that is, haſt choſen me: Which I ſhewed even now. And he expreſly gives it, as the reaſon, why he had ſo kept them, Verſ. 9. For they were thine.

If you will take another Scripture they alſo referr unto, John 6. Verſ. 39. And this is the Fathers will which hath ſent me, that of all which he hath given me, I ſhould loſe nothing, but ſhould raiſe it up again at the laſt day. Theſe words ſhew;

1. That they were given by Election; for he ſays, All that the Father hath given me, ſhall come to me, Verſ. 39. and therefore given before their coming, and as the cauſe of their coming. And when afore, but at the date the Scripture placeth Election at? Afore the World began.

2. Given for this very end to be kept, and that to be Gods will, and intention in Giving them, and expreſt at his giving them, doth as manifeſtly follow there, Verſ. 38. and 39. For I came down from Heaven, not to do my own will, but the will of him that ſent me. And this is the Fathers will which hath ſent me, that of all which he hath given me, I ſhould loſe nothing, but ſhould raiſe it up again at the laſt day.

3. Their being called ariſeth from their having been given by the Father, Verſ. 37. And all that the Father giveth me, ſhall come to me, &c. And ſo you have in this one Scripture all thoſe three things met, which are mentioned in my Text; and likewiſe the Prop, Order, and Connexion of all theſe; firſt, Beloved of the Father; and ſo ſecondly, Given to, and preſerved in Chriſt; And thirdly, Called.

And this is a clear Reaſon, why preſerved in Chriſt is ſet afore called, becauſe it pre-imports that original act of Giving us unto Chriſt, and alſo is the cauſe of our being Called. For although indeed Chriſt's actual preſervation of us, and his performance of it upon us, begins from Calling, and follows for ever after it: Yet becauſe the Foundation of that preſervation lay in God's having given given us unto Chriſt out of his Love, and this from everlaſting, as hath been ſaid. Therefore this of preſervation in Chriſt, is made conjunct with, and ſet next after Beloved in God the Father, and before called: For calling it ſelf proceeds out of that love, and our being given to Chriſt, as out of thoſe paſſages of John hath been obſerved. There might other Reaſons be given, why called is fitly ſet after preſerved in Chriſt, as that becauſe there were ſome new Converts, who had ſprung up in that, though a declining Age, of old Profeſſors, which young ones had not had time or continuance long enough to experiment the Grace of Perſeverance, as thoſe others had done; and yet they having been ſavingly wrought upon, with an holy Calling, were concerned both in the Comfort and Duties that he after gives, as well as thoſe others that had been for a long time preſerved. Alas! might ſome ſuch Novices ſay, I have not had the trial of having been kept long; I am but of yeſterday. Well, but ſays Jude, thou yet haſt the bleſſed experience of having been called, and thereby maiſt comfort and aſſure thy ſelf of thy being certainly kept againſt all the fears of falling away, which are incident to ſuch Chriſtians, from the examples of ſuch apoſtated Profeſſors: The Promiſe is as well unto the truly called, as it is to you that have been a long while preſerved. But though this be a Reaſon of weight for this placing of called laſt, yet I conceive the other of more. And this for the firſt, the Original Cauſes. Chap. 7.

II. The CONTINUING CAUSES of our Salvation and Preſervation, in their being multiplyed, follows in Verſ. 2. Mercy unto you, and Peace, and Love be multiplyed. And in Verſ. 21. Keep your ſelves in the love of God, looking for the Mercy of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt unto eternal life.

Three things are here to be explained.

1. What is meant by Mercy, and Peace, and Love.

2. That here they are prayed for to be multiplyed as Cauſes, and the Carriers on of our Salvation and Preſervation.

3. What is meant by the multiplication of them.

For the firſt, The Interpretation I give is, That,

1. Mercy in the heart of Chriſt.

2. Peace or Reconciliation having been made by Chriſt, and continued in the heart of God towards us by and through Chriſt.

3. That original Love in the heart of God born towards us, being for ever continued and multiplyed with the Effects thereof; Theſe are eminently intended.

I know Interpretators generally underſtand, Love in our hearts to God, Peace in our hearts, and all ſorts of good things, which are uſually wiſht, under the names of Peace; he wiſhing that theſe ſhould be multiplyed more and more in them.

But though I deny not theſe, as the Effects of the former, to be included, yet I take it that the more principal, the other as they are in God's and Chriſt's heart, are mainly intended, as being the Fountains of theſe Effects; and ſo the Effects with their Cauſes were at once prayed for.

And my Reaſons are,

1. That look what is meant by Love and Mercy in verſe 21. the ſame is meant here. Let Jude interpret Jude. Now there he tells us, verſe 21. it is the Love of God, and the Mercy of Chriſt, which we keeping our ſelves in, and by Faith looking unto them to keep us, are the means of our being kept. Now in the firſt verſe, he had named, firſt, God the Father, and ſecondly, Chriſt. Why then, his intention is to wiſh the Love of God the Father, and the Mercy of Jeſus Chriſt to be multiplyed towards us, as being the Cauſes of that Preſervation and Salvation likewiſe.

2. For one of theſe, this of Mercy, all will acknowledge to be underſtood of the Grace and Mercy in Chriſt's Heart; and not of the Grace of Mercifulneſs in ours; nor yet meerly the Effects of Mercy: And therefore, by the ſame reaſon, why ſhould not Love alſo be meant of the Love in God the Father's Heart born to us?

The

BOOK III.

The Query will be, How Peace ſhould be meant in ſuch a ſenſe, which yet comes in between Mercy and Love?

For the multiplying of Peace, would ſeem to import only the Grace of Peace in our Hearts, as it is the fruit of Juſtification and Reconciliation with God, according to that in Rom. 5. 1. Being Juſtified by Faith, we have Peace with God. Alſo Peace imports all good things whatever, and ſo the Effects.

Anſwer. I grant this, and take them all in: But I deſire it to be conſidered, that all thoſe Effects of Peace do flow from this, that there firſt is a Peace in Gods Heart born towards us, which we may and muſt ſtile the original Peace of all, whatever that Peace may import in us, or towards us. When Chriſt was born, the Angels proclaimed this original Peace in Gods Heart; Peace on Earth, Good will towards Men, Luke 2. 14. And his decrees and purpoſes of Grace, as to Sinners, are ſtyled Thoughts of Peace, Jer. 29. 11. For I know that the thoughts that I think towards you, ſaith the Lord, are thoughts of Peace, and not of evil, to give you an expected End.

My third Reaſon why I interpret them of what is in God's and Chriſt's Heart towards us, as well as of the Effects, is, that elſewhere theſe three are mentioned together in the like Salutation as in the Second Epiſtle of John, Verſe 3. Grace be with you, Mercy, and Peace from God the Father, and from the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the Son of the Father, in truth and love. By Grace there, Love is meant, being diſtinct from Mercy; and withall, Mercy and Peace are added even as here, and thereby not the Effects of Mercy, &c. But the Grace and Mercy it ſelf, which is in God's Heart and Chriſt's towards us, are alſo intended there. It is expreſly added, from God the Father, and from Jeſus Chriſt, the Son of the Father: And that as diſtinct from the Effects on us; for they follow, In truth (that is) Sincerity and Love, which are the Effects in us of the former, in our Hearts.

Per gratiam quidam μετονυμικῶς intelligant beneficia ex gratiâ collata, ſed rectius intelligitur Fons illorum beneficiorum omnium, videlicet, Favor Dei gratuitus.

II. But the Query will yet be, How is it that theſe are multiplied? Gerard, upon the Epiſtles of Peter, in both of which (Grace and Peace) are wiſhed to be multiplied, maketh the ſame objection. For he there interpreting Grace, as I have here interpreted Mercy and Peace, not of the Effects of Grace chiefly, but of the Fountain of them all, the Free-grace of God (as I aforecited him;) thereupon he puts this Objection, How the Love In God, remaining always the ſame, ſhould be ſaid to be multiplied.

1. Himſelf Anſwers it chiefly by this, That in reſpect of the manifeſtation of it to our Souls, and the ſhedding it abroad in our Hearts, it is therefore ſaid to be multiplied: And to this effect he ſpeaks in both thoſe Epiſtles 1 Pet. 1, 2. and 2 Epiſt. 1, 2.

And unto this indeed agrees, what in that ſecond Epiſtle follows: where, when Grace and Peace are wiſhed to be multiplied, 'tis added, In the knowledge of God, and of Jeſus Chriſt: Which (as he) is all one with διὰ, through the knowledge, &c. becauſe through the knowledge of God and Chriſt, the Love and Peace that are in the Hearts of God and Chriſt, are come to be multiplied upon us. So as by this Anſwer and interpretation given, it is ſtill more manifeſt, that it is the Love in God the Father, and Peace of Chriſt, which are the things multiplied in us, through and by the means of Faith in us taking them, and receiving of them thereby into our Hearts.

Tum de multiplicatione in quantitate diſcretâ, tum de augmento in quantitate continuâ accipiatur. Inde quidam reddunt multiplicetur, quidam verò adimpleatur. Gerard. in 1 Pet. 1. v. 2.

But Secondly, I ſhould give a farther Anſwer; viz. That even the Love and Mercy in God's Heart, and Chriſt's, are within themſelves truly ſaid to be multiplied towards us. The word πληθυνθείη, ſignifies both a continuation of the ſame thing, and a renewal thereof, and alſo an increaſe, or the fulfilling of a thing unto perfection. Now the two firſt ſignifications do fitly agree unto this love in God to us; For there is both a continuation of it, after it was once taken up towards us; and that continuation is maintained by a renewal, or repetition of the ſame, again and again, for every moment: I joyn both, and ſo it is continued by multiplication. Of Juſtification, Divines uſe to ſay, it is one Act at once, Actus unicus & individuus: But yet becauſe it is continued, yea renewed every day (as our Lords) Prayer teacheth us, and many other other Scriptures) therefore the Scriptures expreſly ſpeak of it, as a multiplying to pardon; Iſai. 55. 7. We multiply tranſgreſſions, by adding unto the heap new acts of ſinning; and for our comfort, God multiplies to pardon by renewing the Acts of Grace in a full and perfect pardon every day; not only of thoſe daily ſins committed (which yet we are moſt ſenſible of) but of all our ſins, as at firſt, 2 Col. 13. yea, and correſpondently hereto, the Scripture ſpeaks of God's Election it ſelf, which of all other acts of God's, is ſuppoſed to have been done but once, and that before the foundation of the World; and yet the Scripture, in many places, ſpeaks of it as reiterated or renewed again and again, which repetition, or renewal of it, is ſpoken of upon ſolemn occaſion of God's taking his people into his favour after ſome diſpleaſure. Thus you have it, Iſai 14. 1. The Lord will have mercy on Jacob, and will yet chooſe Jeruſalem. And in Zach. 1. 17. upon occaſion of reſtoring them, he ſpeaks thus, The Lord ſhall yet chooſe Jeruſalem: and Chapter 2. 12. The Lord ſhall chooſe Jeruſalem again. Nor is this meant wholly and altogether of a temporary choice (as yet in the Type I acknowledge it was) but ſo as that Type holds forth the ſubſtance towards his Elect people among them.) For it is ſuch a choice as upon which his peoples ſins are done away, and whereby Satan, that impleads them, which in the next words, Chapt. 3. verſ. 2. is rebuked. The Angel, Chriſt, that pleads againſt him, anſwers him with this. The Lord, who hath choſen Jeruſalem, rebuke thee. And it was by ſuch an Election renewed, as by virtue of which, Joſhua's filthy Garments were taken away, that is, his ſins, verſ. 4. Chap. 3. and ſo proper to God's Elect, which that in Rom. 8. fully anſwers to, Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge of God's Elect? It is God that juſtifies. Chap. 7.

Now as Juſtification and Election are thus renewed and multiplyed, ſo I ſay not only, why may not, but that neceſſarily withal, Mercy, and Love, and Peace, as in God's heart, muſt be together with them ſuppoſed to be ſo: For theſe Mercies are but the thoughts and purpoſes of Grace, Love, &c. immanent in God born towards us, as well as thoſe acts of Juſtification and Election, are acts of God upon us, and yet immanent firſt in himſelf; yea, and thoſe Mercies, and that Love, are the Cauſes of thoſe acts, and therefore are renewed together with them, upon his renewal of them within himſelf. And hence, in the ſame ſenſe, may Love and Mercy in God's heart be ſaid, by a multiplication, to be continued to us, as thoſe acts are. And in this reſpect it is, that, Pſal. 40. 5. like as the works of God, ſo his thoughts towards us are ſaid to be many, and multiplyed; Many, O Lord my God, are thy wonderful works which thou haſt done, and thy thoughts which are to us-ward: They cannot be reckoned up in order unto thee; if I would declare and ſpeak of them, they are more than can be numbred. It is Chriſt's ſpeech of whom the Pſalm is made, and that relating unto his Father's reſolved purpoſes and contrivements from eternity, and thoſe continued unto his ſending Chriſt into the World to dye for us, as verſ. 6, 7. It follows ſo, as although his thoughts and purpoſes were but one individual act at firſt, and never to be altered; yet they became many, through a perpetuated reiteration of them, wherein his conſtancy to himſelf is ſeen. The Prophet David, in Pſal. 25. v. 6. imprecates God's Loving-kindneſs in theſe words, Remember, O God, thy tender mercies, and thy loving-kindneſſes: For they have been ever of old: which Phraſe imports it is of old; that is, from eternity: So for ever of old; that is, all along from eternity perpetuated; and therefore ſuitable to this meaning, he deſires that God would remember them: It is good now to remember theſe; and remembrance is but a reiterated act of the Underſtanding with the ſame Affections that were taken up at firſt.

And the reaſon from all this is as evident; for ſuch acts as are of pure, free, and abſolute grace in God, are in their kind ſuch, as though he doth act any of them towards us in this moment, yet to continue the acting of the ſame the next moment, or upon the next occaſion, is from, and depends upon a new Grace in him; yea, the Promiſes of Grace have a freſh act of Grace to move him unto the performance. Lament. 3. 22. It is of the Lord's mercies we are not conſumed, becauſe his compaſſions (thoſe which in himſelf) fail not. They are new every morning both; the Mercies which are the Effects, and his Compaſſions which are the Cauſe; great is thy faithfulneſs. And thus much for how they are multiplyed.

III. The third thing is, to prove that Mercy and Love thus multiplyed, ſhould here be mentioned and intended, as the Cauſes of Preſervation and Saluation unto the end.

And indeed, that theſe are Cauſes hereof, none will deny: But the Queſtion only proceeds whether here in this ſalutation and wiſh, they be intended by the Apoſtle? To which I anſwer, 2. That they are ſo intended here. Perhaps in other ſuch Salutations (eſpecially in Paul's large Epiſtles) they come in abſtractly, or as altogether ſevered from a coherence with the matter afore or after; as Human Salutations among the Jews, and thoſe Eaſtern Nations, ordinarily were wont to do, Dan. 4. 1. yet here in this ſhort Epiſtle, I take it, they hold a ſtrict coherence with what immediately went afore, and follows after.

And the reaſon in general of this difference in this Epiſtle, and in others is, becauſe that the ſole and entire ſubject of this ſhort Epiſtle (I ſpeak of what immediately concerned the Saints) is profeſſedly the preſervation of them unto Salvation, (as hath been ſhewn;) and alſo it was the Love and Mercy of God and Chriſt, that had hitherto been the preſervers of them, as verſe 1. And ſo as the Series and Order of things in thoſe two verſes, proceeds thus; 1. That a Love in God's heart had given them to Chriſt to keep. 2. A Mercy in Chriſt's heart had moved him to undertake this. And thirdly, in order thereto, he had purchaſed their Peace with his Father. 4. All which, Love, Mercy, and Peace, had broke forth in their firſt calling. And 5. from thence had been their Cuſtodes, the Keepers of them thereunto. This is the ſubſtance or real ſum of verſ. 1. Hereupon, ſays our holy Apoſtle, in verſ. 2. in a pertinent coherence hereunto, what other is my wiſh and prayer for you, but that the ſame Mercy, Peace, and Love of God the Father, and of his Son Jeſus Chriſt, (as another Epiſtle in words ſupplies this) be multiplyed? and thereby ſo continued on you, ſo as ſtill to preſerve you to the end, even all along, from the firſt being called, unto the being preſented faultleſs afore the preſence of his glory with exceeding joy, verſ. 24? From this genuine coherence, I conclude, That this his Prayer for the multiplication of this Love and Mercy, holdeth a ſtrict connexion with, and aſpect unto, that Cauſe (preſerved in Chriſt) as thoſe which had been the Cauſes of that their having been preſerved for time paſt. And to that end he prays for the multiplication of them for time to come.

And that which more expreſly ſhews them this reaſon, is the Aſpect that verſ. 11. hath upon this ſecond verſe. In verſ. 21. it is and hath been made evident, that he points the Eye of their Faith to the Mercy of Chriſt, and Love of God the Father, as thoſe, which for time to come, the Eye of their Faith was to look at, as the primò moventia, the Supream Cauſes of all other, of their being kept. The words are, Keep your ſelves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt unto eternal life.

And that this interprets to us what Love, and in whom, or whoſe (even that of God's and Chriſt to us,) Love it is that in verſ. 2. is intended; eſpecially when we take in thereto the coherence of verſ. 1. Beloved in God the Father, and preſerved in Chriſt, hath been already opened. Now then, what is the difference between theſe two verſes, but this? That this ſecond verſe is an Apoſtolical Prayer to God, that the ſame Mercy and Love might be multiplyed; which in verſ. 21. is an Exhortation to them to have the Eye of their Faith upon; but ſo, as both do agree and centre in this, that thoſe are the primary Cauſes of their being kept, this being the common ground of either. And to ſhut up this, there being the ſame Mercy and Love, in both verſes intended, the Argument proves ſtrong from the latter to the former, verſ. 2. that if the Mercy and Love in verſ. 21. be directed unto, as the Cauſes of preſervation, then that the ſame are intended in their being prayed for, as the Cauſes of our preſervation, verſ. 2. which is the point in hand.

Thus

Thus much of the Cauſes of Salvation, in verſ. 1,2. both original and continued. Chap. 7.

I come next to diſcover,

II. The Original or Antecedent in God's diſpoſement of the Apoſtates Judgment and Condemnation, as it is in verſe 4. There are certain men creept in unawares, who were before of old fore-written unto this condemnation, &c.

That this Paſſage is ſet in way of oppoſition to, and compariſon with the former, in verſ. 3. Beloved in God the Father, &c. to the end to illuſtrate the grace of Electing, and diſcriminating grace the more, is evident at the very firſt view of both, to any intelligent Readers thoughts.

And how infinitely the grace of Election is magnified to us, by ſuch a comparative way of ſetting that of Reprobation by it, I have remitted to another place or method. I ſhall now only give an Expoſition of this Paſſage, and ſhew how this ordained of old unto this Judgment, is to be underſtood, this being in view, one of the harſheſt Speeches concerning God's diſpenſations, to the ſons of men, that is found in Scripture.

We are firſt to inform our ſelves of theſe Two words therein.

1. Fore-written, tranſlated Appointed.
2. This Judgment, tranſlated Condemnation.

1. Fore-written, ſo the word in the Original. We muſt know that God's Decrees about the perſons of us intelligent Creatures, the ſons of men, (being the top of his Decrees) are expreſſed to us under the Metaphor of writing in a Book their Names; taken from what is uſual amongſt men, that is, of ſuch as have power to diſpoſe of perſons and things at their will, for ratification ſake, do it by writing, or ſetting their pleaſure down in ſome Record: As when a man hath Goods, or an Eſtate to diſpoſe of, he doth it unto perſons by a written Will, or Record; or if Offices to beſtow, he pricks down (as our Kings do Sheriffs) whom he thinks fit, and leaves out whom he pleaſeth: As among the Romans, Patres Conſcripti, of Senators; Milites Deſcripti, of Soldiers. Thus the Scriptures do attribute unto God a Book of Life, in which the Names of all his Elect are regiſtred, and thereby we find Election it ſelf expreſſed. Phil. 4. 3. And I intreat thee alſo, &c. and with other my Fellow-labourers, whoſe Names are in the Book of Life. They do ſet forth in like manner God's diſpoſal of the reſt of mankind, as Rom. 11. 5. they are termed under the ſame alluſion. That in general, Rev. 20. 12. it is ſaid, that at the day of general Judgment, the Books were opened; importing that there were other Books, concerning the reſt of men, beſides the Book of Life, which is there termed another Book, that is, a more ſpecial, and as it were, a more choice private Book, which God keeps by him. Anſwerably, there is a black Doomsday Book, in which, what concerns thoſe the reſt, is regiſtred and recorded, as foreſeen by God concerning them.

And in proſecution of this Metaphor, the Scriptures do more particularly ſet out what concerneth them, under two Acts.

1. Negative; That they are left out of the Book of Life, their names are not found written there; Thus Rev. 13. 8. Whoſe names were not written in the Book of Life. So that the firſt and main Act concerning them, is but a leaving them out, and not writing them in that ſpecial Book. And that Negative Act is indeed an Act of pure, and meer, and abſolute Will in God, and is but this, That God did not love them ſo far, as abſolutely to deſign them unto Supercreation Grace and Glory. Obſerve how I expreſs it, it is but a leaving them out of that Book, wherein was an ordaining Men unto ſuch benefits and bleſſings, as were purely Supernatural, and above the due of Creation; whether for Grace as the means, or Glory as the end: In ſuch things they were left out, and it was but a meer leaving them out, as to ſuch things unto which the other were Elected, and their Names ſet down to inherit. Thoſe bleſſings are thus expreſſed, 1 Epheſ. 3. All ſpiritual bleſſings; 1. In Heavenlies; 2. In Chriſt, which were not due by Law of Creation, in Adam, and in ſuch only the reſt were left out; But otherwiſe, as to Creation Grace, and what here-

Book III. herein by any Law of their Creation it was meet for God to give them, he ordained to give them it to the utmoſt, and to deal with them therein according to that Law, even whatever; as to Creatures was any way requiſite, all the good of Holineſs, Life and reward, that by Creation could be meet for intelligent Creatures, endowed with Free-will, to have, [which was the Law of their Creation;] This God did ſet out for them; but mark what Holineſs by a Supercreation title, was to be renewed in Chriſt, and by Chriſt, if they fell, the unchangeableneſs of that Eſtate in Holineſs, which as I take it, is the Holineſs which in 1 Epheſ. 4. is ſaid, That in Election [as there 'tis intended] we were choſen unto, what Life, and Glory, and a participation of God above the Law of Creation, or the attainment thereof, ſuch as is in Heaven, theſe were Supernatural bleſſings in Heavenlies, and in Chriſt; wherein God was at full liberty to diſpoſe thereof, where he pleaſed. 'Twas no part of that Eſtate which was due to Creatures, as Creatures, but as a third part of a Londiner's Eſtate, is by Law purely his own to beſtow. Now theſe were the Bleſſings only which God left them out of his Will about. Now ſearch the Scriptures, and you ſhall generally find, that the ſtreſs of Reprobation is put upon this Negative Act; as throughout the Scriptures of the New Teſtament, I might ſhew you how 'tis expreſt by this Negative, of not chooſing: As the Election obtained it, the Reſt, Rom. 11. 5. that is the Non-elected were left out; So the one written in the Book of Life, implies the other not written: So of the one, the Lord knows who are his; of the other, I never knew you: That word [Never] reacheth backward to Eternity. So of the one, they are my Sheep, John 10. 14. which my Father hath given me, John 6. 36, 37. But I ſaid unto you, that ye alſo have ſeen me, and believe not. All that the Father giveth me, ſhall come to me; &c. And I muſt bring them, &c. Verſ. 16. Becauſe I know the Father, Verſ. 15. and whom he hath decreed to ſave. But ye believe not, becauſe ye are not my Sheep, Verſ. 26. It runs on the Negative.

Matth. 7. 23.

2. But now you will ſay to me, But here in this place there is a Poſitive act expreſt, a being of old forewritten to this Condemnation, and that doth import, that God not only had a Book of Life, which they were left out of, but a Book of Death, their names were ſet down in.

I will not anſwer you here, as Dr. Hammond doth; they were fore-written, that is, prophecied of by Chriſt, Matth. 24. which Goſpel was then writ in Jude's time.

I ſhall in few words give you my thoughts of this.

1. Thoſe Men, as to this Act, are looked upon by God as ſaln: For however Election, and Non-election, in the ſenſe given, might have proceeded upon Man, conſidered as not ſaln; yet fore-writing to Condemnation, neceſſarily importeth more. And in that their Fall, God uſed no Prerogative Will at all, no ſupercreation Act; only decreed to permit it: And that Adam ſinned, was from the mutability of his own Will, and defect, unto which, as a Creature he was obnoxious; and for God to have kept him from falling, as here, Verſ. 24. Jude ſpeaks of us, had been ſupercreation Grace, and belonged to the rank of thoſe Benefits, which are in Chriſt, as, to be preſerved in Chriſt, is ſaid here to be; God muſt have gone out of his line of Communication, to have kept him, and it had been an Act of ſupercreation Grace.

Then the firſt man being ſaln, by the ſame Creation Law it was, that all Men fell, or ſinned in him, as Rom. 5. 12. I ſay by the Law of Creation, the Law of our Nature, viz. that equal Law, that holds as juſtly one way as th'other; that he, being the firſt Father of all Mankind [as Iſai. 43. 27.] if we ſhould have received Holineſs from him, by the ſame we ſhould receive ſin from him; it was the Law of our Propagation from him, ſuch as was given to all Creatures, having ſeed of Life, Gen. 1. to bring forth in their kind; And in that ſenſe we are Children of wrath by nature; that is, by the force of the Law of nature, Epheſ. 2, 3. as well as by Birth.

Now then ſecondly, all Men being ſaln, and their being ſaln, having been at one and the ſame inſtant fore-ſeen by him, as all his own Works were, uno

actu intuitus, by one intuitive act, thereupon all Men were now by Nature viewed prone to all sin; for so their Nature, being faln, disposed them, even to all or any kind of sin whatever, of themselves, and still not by any influence of his. Chap. 7.

Hence thirdly, their running into sin is only of themselves, and from their own corrupt Nature and inclination, according to the outward Circumstances and Conditions, &c. which they should stand in, and all that of God is said [as to any positive influence of his into sin] you have well expressed, Acts 14. 16. Who in times past suffered all Nations to walk in their own ways.

Yea, and fourthly, they being not ordained to supercreation Grace in, and by Christ, by which their sin should be any way healed, in order to Eternal Glory, but left unto themselves, without it; hence that meer Negative, and not being Elected, that alone without any Positive Act of Gods ordaining, would have left them to all or any sin whatever. And hence you find that in those Scriptures, where but only that Negative Act of Non-election is mentioned, in the same places, the sins they commit are mentioned, as the consequents of it. I do not say the effects; for they flow from their own corruption. Thus 1. For their not doing Good, that they believe not, is attributed as the consequent of their not being Gods sheep, John 10. 26. But ye believe not, because ye are not of my sheep, as I said unto you. 2. For their Doing evil, their own corruption so carry them thereto. Revel. 13. 8. and all that dwell upon the Earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the Book of Life of the Lamb slain from the Foundation of the World. Where plainly their giving themselves up to Anti-christian worship, and Idolatry, is attributed to the Negative, that their Names were not written in the Book of Life; for why supercreation Grace being restrained [which at no time was their due] their own corrupt Hearts, would of themselves carry them on to those sins. So in that other place, cited [for I instance in all I quoted] Matth. 7. 23. their damnation is ultimately resolved into Two Acts; 1. The Negative, I never knew you. 2. Their own, being workers of Iniquity. Which a meer negative Act of Gods could have no positive influence into; for out of a meer negative never did any thing positive arise; all this is but to them, whereto the said cause of Mens damnation is to be resolved.

Well, but you still urge, That here is a Positive Act of Gods, his fore-writing them to this Condemnation. Mr. Cotton observes, that the word κρίμα, signifies contention, as in that place to the Corinths, [There is utterly a fault among you, in that you have, κρίματα, Contentions] And that in like manner it should be here used of their opposition unto that faith, which upon that occasion he has exhorted true Believers, yet they should contend earnestly for, &c. And so that should come to this, that amongst the sinners of that Age, that were afore of old in Gods view, (when he was the ἀγωνόθετος, orderer of those Contentions) He had wrote down their Names, as the Men and persons that should so oppose the Faith; and so it is an Allusion from the manner of those games, which was conscribere, to set down in writing the Names of those that offer'd themselves to enter into the Lists. 1 Cor. 6. 7.

But Secondly, the strength of my answer rests upon this small word, εἰς τοῦτο, to this Condemnation, or sinful Contention; and it is to me a mighty word, to clear this matter in hand, that God did forewrite their individual Persons unto this or that particular way of sinning: Now consider, what that will amount to at the utmost, taking in what was aforesaid, but only unto this, how that all Men lying faln in Gods view, and of themselves prone to all sin, he might leave them to their own swinge and corruption, to one sin as well as another; but he shews himself a God in ordering or ranking their actual sinfulness, and particular ways of sinning; some to this Sin, some to that Sin, that all might not run into any; and so 'tis but meerly the disposing of Mens sinnings, which of themselves they would commit. When all the World were sinners, and there was no difference, and all and every Man would be as Devils, and run wildly, headily, and as Horses into the battel, into all manner of wickedness, the great God in his infinite wisdom and goodness, leaves one Man to ſuch a particular ſin, as thoſe here to this contention; an other Man unto that, and not all to perpetrate every one, which of themſelves they would do: As he turned the Heart of the Egyptians to hate his people, and reſtrained them from other ſins, as he did Abimelech, I kept thee from that Act of Adultery: But then he ſuffers them to take a Liberty to ſuch, or ſuch particular corruptions, and wickedneſs: So as indeed this fore-writing theſe Men to this contention, rather than other ſins, was no more than leaving them electively, to that, and not to another, and leaving them to that way of ſinning, and not other Men of the ſame Age, and in the ſame circumſtances with them; which particular way of ſinning is purely their own way, and their own doings, without his Decree having any influence upon them, but ſetting them in ſuch, and ſuch circumſtances: And this ordering thus ſome Men to this ſin, ſome Men to that, though it be from Gods will, to order and leave them, thereto, yet the fact it ſelf is not from God, and yet is juſtly ſtiled a forewriting appointing it ſo and ſo, and deſerves the Name, becauſe it is electively, and deſignedly, and truly done by him; and yet herein this appointment of his has no more outward influence, than of a Man that would draw water into ſuch, and ſuch a Chanel, he adds nothing to the propenſion of the waters, they run of themſelves; and thus God is ſaid to have turned the Egyptians Hearts, to hate his people, and to turn the Hearts of Kings as rivers of Waters.

Man

2. This fore-writing to ſuch great ſinnings, is but by the way of puniſhment of other ſins which they firſt commit, as Rom. 1. Therefore God gave them up. That theſe men, Rev. 13. worſhipped the Beaſt, this account is given, 2 Theſſ. 2. 10, 11. Becauſe they received not the love of the Truth, that they might be ſaved. And for this cauſe God ſhall ſend them ſtrong deluſions, that they ſhould believe a lye: that they all might be damned, &c. And ſo he wrote down theſe men to this contention and apoſtacy, upon the foreſight of their ſinning.

3. Let me add this to juſtifie God, that this fore-writing of men to ſeveral particular ways of ſinning, when as they are all prone to all, or any, and every man would be as wicked as the Devil, to whom no ſin comes amiſs; to act or ſet that man to this, is ſo far from being that harſh act of abſolute Reprobation, ſo exclaimed upon, that it is goodneſs and mercy to the generality of mankind. For, 1. it is done with a reſtraining them from other ſins, which elſe would make this world an Hell. I may expreſs it by this Compariſon: Suppoſe a thouſand barrels, full of either precious or poyſonous liquor, that had each of them a thouſand holes to let that liquor run out at, for a man that is the diſpoſer of them, to ſtop with Pegs the moſt of thoſe holes, in every ſuch barrel, and to let out here and there as he pleaſeth; ſome he lets run at the top, and there comes out weaker kind of poyſon, others at the bottom, whence the moſt deadly flows; and he did all theſe in a Wiſdom and diſcretion, and by an appointment with himſelf: Will any one ſay, that this Man is the Cauſe of thoſe Effluxes of Poiſon, which he barely lets out, and yet he is the appointer of them?

Laſtly, Hereby God ſhews an infinite wiſdom, in the variety of thoſe his appointments, ſo ſhewing every Man what is in his own Heart, whilſt he lets it out in others; and in this manner, appointing all manner of ſinners to be extant in the World, as in Rom. 1. as he doth all ſizes of Grace in his own, and all by appointment.

OF ELECTION.

BOOK IV.

The mighty and powerful Grace which God diſpenſes to his Elect, in effectually calling them, in preſerving them from temptations and ſin, in ſtrengthning and inabling them to perſevere unto the end, and in bringing them at laſt ſecurely to an Eternal Glory: By all which, the greatneſs of Election Grace is more fully cleared and proved.

I PETER V. 10.

But the God of all Grace, who hath called us into his eternal Glory by Jeſus Chriſt, after that you have ſuffered a while, make you, or, [will make you] perfect, ſtabliſh, ſtrengthen, ſettle you.

CHAP. I.

The Explication of the words. What it is for God to be a God of Grace? A Threefold Grace in God. His purpoſing Grace. That which he diſpenſes to his Elect. And the Riches of Grace that are in his Nature. What the Grace of his purpoſes is.

OUR Apoſtle Peter had himſelf greatly ſuffered for a while: Satan ſought to winnow, and ſo devour him, but the God of all Grace did by Chriſt, and his fore-warning of him, and through his Prayer for him, graciouſly reſtore, ſtrengthen, ſettle, ſtabliſh him, as the Story of the Evan-

Book IV.

Evangeliſts and the Acts record. So all this was exemplified firſt in himſelf; and he, who himſelf hath been exerciſed in temptations and ſufferings, is the ableſt fore-warner and inſtructer of others. You know our Saviour did thereupon take occaſion to command him, that when he ſhould be converted or reſtored, he ſhould ſtrengthen his Brethren, Luke 22. 31. And this our holy Apoſtle, you ſee, is carefully mindful of, and that to the utmoſt; and hath left it behind him, for all his brethren to the end of the world, the greateſt Conſolatory againſt Satan, and all Temptations, that hath in ſo few words fallen from any Apoſtles Pen.

And when I more ſeriouſly compare things together, I am ſtrongly induced to think and believe, that Peter, in uttering theſe words of Exhortation and Comfort in the 8th, 9th, and 10th verſes, had thoſe very paſſages of Chriſt to himſelf, in his eye and view, And be your ſelves the Judges. Luke 22. 31. And the Lord ſaid, Simon, Simon, behold, Satan hath deſired to have you, that he may ſift you as wheat. And obſerve the Parallel.

1. Satan hath ſought] That is, obtained leave of God, by ſeeking, Thee (Peter) to winnow thee; and ſhake forth all grace out of thee: Thus Chriſt to Peter. Correſpondently Peter here to us. [Satan] your Adverſary, goes [ſeeking] whom of you he may (have leave to) devour: And as Chriſt gave Peter fore-warning there, ſo Peter here his Brethren.

2. Chriſt prayed that his [faith ſail not;] That was the matter of Chriſt's Prayer for him on that occaſion. Faith's not failing, is Satan's foiling: Anſwerably the ſubject matter of our Apoſtle alſo in his Exhortation here is, whom reſiſt ſtedfaſt in the faith: As that which is the moſt effectual remedy and ſhield of reſiſtance of all other. It is not [in the faith] as underſtanding the Doctrine of Faith only, as ſome would ſeem to reſtrain it, becauſe of the Article τῇ πίστει, but [in the Grace of Faith] as Calvin more genuinely: And the Grace of Faith is ſo eminent in it ſelf, and hath ſo great an hand, and bears ſo great a ſtreſs in this buſineſs of Temptations, that it deſerved here the honour of this Article.

Eph. 6. 16.

3. Strengthen thy Brethren] There are but two words, yet both are here in terminis. Knowing that the ſame Afflictions are accompliſhed in [your Brethren] in the world; ſo verſe 9. There's the one: And then verſe 10. After ye have ſuffered God will [STRENGTHEN] you; there's the other. So publiſheth he the Comfort and Concernment thereof to all his Brethren in the world; and contents not himſelf to utter it barely in the very ſame word of ſtrengthening, but further ſurroundeth that for the more abundant Conſolation, with a multiplication of words to the ſame intent, He ſhall reſtore you, (ſee Gal. 6. 1.) καταρτίσει) that is, when you are faln, ſet you in joynt again, which was Peter's very caſe; Stabliſh, [ſtrengthen] ſettle you.

4. Laſtly, (which is not to be neglected) Chriſt in ſtrengthning Peter's Faith againſt Satan, ſets a [But] I have prayed, as in direct oppoſition unto all that Satan could do: And Peter, when he had ſet forth Satan as our profeſſed Adverſary in the greateſt dreadfulneſs, he then in like manner of oppoſition, brings in his intended Conſolatory with a [But God] the God of all Grace by Jeſus Chriſt, &c. ſet in full aray and counter againſt him on our behalf, as our Undertaker, Guardian, and the ſtrength of our hearts for ever.——— This for an Introductory Preface, and (it may be) not a little conducing to diſcover the main Scope of the words.

Theſe words are The Publick Faith of Heaven, that is, of God and Chriſt, given for the ſafe Conduct of all the Called of God, through all Temptations and Aſſaults in this world, unto Glory.

Two things more at preſent requiſite to our underſtanding this to be his Scope.

1. That under the Phraſe of Afflictions in the ninth verſe, and Sufferings in the tenth, not outward Perſecutions only or chiefly are intended to be comforted againſt, but all inward Aſſaults, either from our own Luſts or Satan, and ſo all Temptations whatſoever: This the coherence, intent and extent of this Conſolatory Exhortation ſhews; Be ſober and watch, ſo the 8th verſe;

verſe; this reſpecteth Luſts: Whom reſiſt, this relates to inward Temptations of Satan's unto ſin; Knowing the ſame Afflictions or Conflicts do befall your Brethren. And then his ſetting afore the Eye of our Faith God, as the God of all grace, for our relief and help argues it. For his [grace] principally and more ſpecially ſtands to help us againſt inward ſins and temptations to ſin, &c. And then that extent of it, the [All] of his Grace reacheth, not only unto all ſorts of outward miſeries, but unto all ſins; which are our greateſt miſeries, which do need his Allſufficient grace above all other; and which grace in God chiefly reſpects: And therefore this is extenſive unto all Evils that Grace may be ſuppoſed a remedy unto. Theſe therefore are the Afflictions principally intended, wherein alſo thoſe very Sufferings of Peter mentioned, did alſo lye. Chap. 1.

Neither is the word Suffering averſe to be taken in ſuch a ſenſe,

1. For Temptations from Satan] For of Chriſt the Head it is ſaid, He ſuffered in that he was tempted, Hebr. 2. 18. where Temptations are plainly termed Sufferings. Nor yet 2. unuſual to be underſtood of ſins themſelves in 1 Cor. 10. 13. God will not ſuffer you to be tempted above what you are able to bear: this is ſpoken of ſinnings; and the word [to bear] imports them to be ſufferings; and indeed they are of all the greateſt to them that are truly holy, and to ſuch he there ſpeaketh. And when it is ſaid, Chriſt was tempted in all things like as we are, though without ſin, as the Iſſue of the Temptation, yet he was tempted unto ſin by Satan; which is the difference put between his temptations and ours, Hebr. 4. 15. and was no ſmall part of his Sufferings.

The ſecond thing is, that the words do hold forth a promiſe that God will ſtrengthen and eſtabliſh &c. Beſides that many original Copies read the words in the Indicative, καταρτίσει, he will perfect, and not καταρτίσαι, the Optative, by way of wiſhing it, or praying for it. And however, if they ſhould have been intended as a Prayer, as they fell from Peter's heart, yet ſtill that Prayer ſuppoſeth, and muſt contain a Promiſe which God is ingaged in to perform, for ſo all Prayers are ſuppoſed to do: This being a ſure Rule, that as we are to turn Promiſes into Prayers, ſo we may extract Promiſes out of all thoſe Prayers which we find in Scripture, for Promiſes are the foundation of them; and ſo it comes all to one: We will take therefore the words Promiſe-wiſe, as Gerard and others do, to this ſenſe, that after ye have ſuffered a while, God will or ſhall perfect, ſtrengthen, ſtabliſh you. To confirm which reading and intent, there are more reaſons to follow, when that Clauſe comes particularly to be ſpoken to.

[The Diviſion of the Words.]

The words being thus underſtood, the parts thereof are Two:

1. The great Engagement: The Engagement of God and Chriſt to relieve and carry all that are truly called, in and through all Temptations and Sufferings.

2. The Promiſe of performance, or the Execution of it.

I. In the Engagement.

1. The Perſons, God and Chriſt.

2. The Pledge or Gage already given by both to aſſure the performance; Who hath called us into his eternal Glory: No leſs, not into the ſtate of Grace meerly, as Rom. 5. 2. but of glory; that is, The undoubted right to it from the firſt ſtep we ſet into our being called.

II. In the Promiſe to perform it.

1. That God will be ſure, as he is a God of grace, to ſtrengthen and uphold.

2. The Limitation or Manner of performance, After you have ſuffered a while, &c. And,

3. All theſe are propounded to Believers, in order to produce [ſtedfaſtneſs in faith] which he had pre-exhorted to in verſ. 8. and unto which theſe words, and every word of them, do viſibly look and refer, as a compleat adequate

Book IV. ground ſet forth unto their Faith; and which, if we believe, we have abundant matter of ſtedfaſtneſs and ſecurity.

I begin with the Engagement of the two Perſons, 1. God, 2. Chriſt, which was the firſt part of the Diviſion; and accordingly the firſt words that preſent themſelves, are the firſt of theſe Perſons, But the God of all Grace.

Neither ſhall I inſiſt on theſe words, nor any of the other, any farther than as they directly tend to, and iſſue in the proof of my main Subject, which I have propoſed at firſt as the ſum of all the words; and to ſerve unto that purpoſe, I do undertake for each and every word.

1. [But God.] You may obſerve in what a terrible manner he had ſet forth our Adverſary the Devil, in all things that may render him dreadful to us; An Adverſary for malice, a Lyon for ſtrength, a roaring Lion for dread; (The Lyon roars, who will not tremble?) walking about, ſeeking, ſuch is his diligence, whom he may devour, being able by one Temptation to drink up (as the word καταπίῃ) at one draught, any Soul ſuddenly, and at once as it were, making no bones of it, as he did Judas, and held him faſt in his belly, as a Lion his prey, ſo as never to get out again; ——and farther, (which of it ſelf would encreaſe the trouble) he tells them that all and every Saint were in danger at leaſt of being tempted ſorely by him; if not continually, yet at ſome time or other every Saint, both great and ſmall, the whole Brotherhood (as the word is) were ordained to ſuffer by his hand, ſo verſ. 9. And when he had done this, then in full oppoſition unto all comes in [But God] as a Carer and Undertaker for us; ſo he is ſtiled, verſ. 7. But God, the God &c. ſo ſetting him in full Butt, as we ſay, againſt the Devil and the fears of our own Hearts, as our Preſerver, Vindex, and Undertaker, (as Job) and great Carefather for us, as Peter here, verſ. 7. So then take all theſe Verſes, and joyn them together, that is from the 6th to the 10th verſe, as meeting in this one great ſcope, and you may behold (and it is a pleaſant ſight to ſee) the Devil, our Averſary beſieged, and every way ſurrounded; that if he but offer to meddle with us, God is preſented ready to riſe up on every ſide, againſt him, (as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks, Pſal. 124. 1.) There is God, the mighty God, that careth for us, on the foreſide, afore him; then, but God, the God of all Grace, on the other ſide, behind him: And what ſhould we now fear?

If it were not for this [But God] what ſtrange doings from mens luſts, yea in Saints hearts, yea and from Satan, would there be in the world? Parallel unto this is that of another Apoſtle, The Spirit that is in us (Saints) luſteth after envy and revenge, &c. And whether would theſe carry us? BUT God giveth more Grace] to help us againſt theſe, James 4.

O that this [But God] were but always in remembrance with us, when the iniquity of our heels, and ſtrong and various temptations do encompaſs us about round, to oppoſe this through Faith againſt them, as the Apoſtle here. The like coming in of a But God you have again and again in the New Teſtament, Eph. 2. 4. 1 Cor. 10. 13. In the Old, Pſal. 73. 26. ——And if God be for us, who ſhall be againſt us? Rom. 8. 31.

2. [The God of Grace] If God be for us, &c. But if moreover God, as the God of Grace be for us, who then can be againſt us? You may obſerve how proper and ſuitable the ſingling forth and mention of this Attribute of God's is, [A God of Grace] when you have to do with Satan in point of perſonal Temptations, &c. when elſewhere, the Church at Rome had to do with him, in reſpect of Diviſions raiſed up amongſt them by him. The ſtile the Apoſtle giveth to God, for their relief againſt him and them is, [The God of Peace] in full oppoſition unto Diviſions; that is, a God who was able, and would one day therefore ſettle and compoſe them. Rom. 16. 17, 20. The God of Peace ſhall bruiſe Satan under your feet ſhortly: He ſpeaks it in relation unto Diviſions, as verſ. 17. But when our Apoſtle here would raiſe up our ſpirits againſt Temptations, which are perſonal from Satan, or Corruptions of what kind ſoever, he then, as appoſitely, ſtileth him The God of Grace; nothing

ſo proper, nothing ſo ſoveraign a remedy for theſe, as is his Grace, no not in God himſelf. 'Tis that which we need in that caſe, above all other. When Paul was under Temptation, and a Meſſenger of Satan, or the Angel Satan (you may read either) was ſent to buffet him, what was it that God did immediately ſuggeſt unto him for relief? My Grace is ſufficient for thee; that is; the Grace that is in my Heart towards thee, and the Grace that is the effect thereof working in thy Heart, and both are ready to aſſiſt thee, and is ſufficient for that preſent need; yea, all that could befall him: And this was an anſwer which God himſelf gave (for in anſwer to his praying thrice, it was that God made this return, And God ſaid my Grace, &c.) Chap. 1.

So then both Apoſtles, who had both run through temptations themſelves, knew none more pertinent ſupports to Faith than this; yea, God himſelf could ſpeak no greater comfort than this: 'Twas HE ſaid, my Grace is ſufficient for Thee.

3. You may further Obſerve, That though we find it every where elſe almoſt, The Grace of God, and that God is Gracious and full of Bowels, and the like; yet no where but in this place, this ſtile [The God of Grace] eſpecially no where [of all Grace] but there only Man needed it, when Temptations are ſpoken of, eſpecially when they come upon him: And the Holy Ghoſt reſerved it for this ſpecial occaſion. And it is not ſpoken only, to ſhew what God is in his Nature ſimply, but what he is to his Children. Even as elſewhere, when it is ſaid that God is Love, 1 Joh. 4. 8. it is not only intended what God is in his Eſſence, but ſpecially what he is to his Children, out of his Love, and from his Nature; and the like is not ſaid of any Attribute elſe. And what doth it ſignifie? Verily that God is All Love, nothing but Love, is made up (in his carriage towards them) as a God all of love, and ſo here the like. That God in point of Temptations, Sufferings, Tryals of his Children (yea and in all things elſe) deals purely upon the Terms and Principles of Free-grace, and will in the Iſſue ſhew he was no other, but a God of Grace, and of All Grace towards us; All, whoſe ways are Mercy and Love (not one excepted) Pſal. 25. 10.

What it is to have God to be A GOD OF GRACE TO US?

Now Brethren! Do you indeed know what this means, The God of Grace, or the Grace of God? or what it is to have God to be a God of Grace to your Souls? To know this in reality, as it is in God towards us; our Apoſtle makes it the Periphraſis, the very Character of a Man ſavingly converted, If ſo be ye have taſted that God is Gracious, 1 Epiſt. Chap. 2. 3.

My meaning is not to enumerate all Particulars, in reſpect of which, God is a God of Grace to us. It is not requiſite to the Subject I profeſs to handle, (which is my main ſcope) and indeed it would be infinite: For that would comprehend all the ways wherein God is Gracious, all the benefits beſtowed, all the Acts of Grace which God hath done or does for us; all the workings of Grace in us; the whole of what Chriſt did, which is ſtiled the Grace of Chriſt, by which we are ſaved; in a word, the whole Goſpel, and all contained therein, is therefore entitled, The Grace of God. I ſhall firſt reduce all unto three general Heads, which I ſhall in time, and in their order treat only of, and that in Generals. There is a threefold Grace in God; Act. 15. 11.

1. His Purpoſing Grace afore this World, and ſtill continued in his Heart.

2. Diſpenſatory Grace in the World, or his Gracious dealings with, and giving forth of Grace to us.

3. The Riches of Grace that are in his Nature.

The Grace of his Nature, moved him to form up all ſorts of Purpoſes of Grace within himſelf; and then he diſpenſeth Grace exactly according to thoſe his purpoſes: And then again, the Riches of Grace in his Nature are ſuch, and ſo vaſt, as they have wherewith to maintain and make good both theſe ——The Grace in his Nature is the Fountain, the Spring; The Grace of his Book IV. his Purpoſes is the Well-head; and the Grace in his Dealings and Diſpenſations are the Streams. When I come to the next Head, his being The God of all Grace, I ſhall then ſpeak to the firſt and latter of theſe; but in treating of this his being a God of Grace, I ſhall ſpeak of the Grace in his Heart, or his purpoſes of Grace towards us, which are by the Pſalmiſt, and the Prophet, termed his Thoughts of Peace and Mercy, which in his Heart he hath taken up towards us, or which he thinks towards us, as the Prophets word is———Nor yet ſhall I ſpeak of all of theſe his thoughts neither; for as the Pſalmiſt ſays, Thy thoughts, O God, which are to us-ward, cannot be reckoned up in order, Pſal. 40. 5. But I ſhall inſiſt but upon ſuch Particulars only, as directly ſerve to the Point afore us, of his carrying us through all Temptations unto Glory.

Jer. 29. 11.

And to ſpeak of this his purpoſing Grace firſt, the Text it ſelf invites, yea requires us: For it manifeſtly ſpeaks of that Grace which God had in his Heart to us afore he calls us, and out of which he calls us, and which moved him thereunto, as that parallel place in 2 Tim. 1. 9. more expreſly ſhews; Who hath called us with an Holy Calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpoſe and Grace, which was given us in Chriſt Jeſus before the World began: We are apparently then ſent to conſider that purpoſing Grace, which was given us in Chriſt afore the World was; For as here, ſo there it is declared to be that Grace, out of which we are called, with an Holy Calling, and is rightly ſtiled his Purpoſing Grace: For according to his purpoſe and Grace, &c. And that of the Apoſtle, Rom. 8. concords with both, The Called according to his purpoſe. Begin we with that then.

1. The firſt Act of which Grace towards us, and by which indeed it is that he firſt becomes a God of Grace to us, is ſeen in the chooſing and ſingling forth the perſons of thoſe he purpoſes to be a God of Grace unto; who are to be the Objects or Subjects, or rather the Creatures of Free-grace, as I may ſo ſtile them: Election of the Perſons therefore is ſtiled the Election of Grace, Rom. 11. 9. and this is the fundamental Grace and Act of all other Graces which are all built upon it: The Foundation of the Lord remains ſure [The Lord knows who are his] And this the [us] not others, in the Text imports, who hath called US; out of his being firſt a God of Grace to us, which word, when I ſhall in its order come to treat of, I ſhall then enlarg upon this diſcriminating Grace.

2. To be a God of Grace to you, is to love you (your perſons) meerly becauſe he loves you: I ſay meerly becauſe he loves you. The very word Grace imports ſo much, without any addition. Grace is the Freeneſs of Love: The import of it is a ſuper-addition of freeneſs both to Mercy and Love, Rom. 3.24. Juſtified freely by his Grace. Hoſ. 14. Receive us graciouſly, ſaid the Church in her Prayer, Verſ. 2. In anſwer to which, ſays God, I will love them freely. This is Grace: which freeneſs of Grace, becauſe it was firſt put forth, and was primarily ſeen in that firſt act of the choice of the perſons, afore they had done good or evil, to invite him thereunto, therefore 'tis that it is termed The Election of Grace; That is, 'twas ſuch a choice of perſons as Grace meerly ſwaied, it chooſing according to its own Genius, frank inclination, nobleneſs and free diſpoſition: And what that was, follows, Verſ. 6. And if by Grace, then it is no more of Works; (diſtinguiſh you of works as you pleaſe, it excludes them all:) Grace affected therein to be ſo abſolute, Entire, and alone, to and within it ſelf, as it riſeth up againſt all Works, and their intermingling any reſpects of themſelves therewith, as thoſe which ſhould any way ſway or move it in this its Reſoluteneſs about perſons, and as thoſe that would Stain that Sole Glory that it affected therein; yea, as being oppoſite to the very being of it, otherwiſe Grace is no more Grace, ſays he. And he ſpeaks all this of Electing Grace, as the Coherence ſpecified ſhews.

Now this ſecond Aſſertion, I ſtated it thus [He loved us meerly becauſe he loved us] And Lo, this we have in terminis, Deut. 7. 7, 8. The Lord did not ſet his love upon you, nor chooſe you becauſe ye were more in Number: But becauſe the Lord loved you. Where you have two things; the Act and the Ground of that Act; 1. The Act is his loving them, cleaving to them in love love (as the original hath it) Verſ. 7.———For in his ſaying, The Lord did not ſet his love upon you for your Number; there is the moſt pregnant Suppoſition and vehement Affirmation that he had ſet his love upon them, upon ſome other reſpect and ground: And that Negative [not] relates but to the removal of what was not the cauſe of that love. 2. The ground or motive to that act is ſet out not barely Negatively (as was ſaid) not for your Number; (And by the ſame reaſon, not for any other qualifications in them, as of Righteouſneſs or the like, which he after alſo doth as expreſly name and exclude, Deut. 9.5,6. Not for thy Righteouſneſs, or the uprightneſs of thy Heart, &c. For what then? Chap. 1.

The Poſitive Ground is, But becauſe he loved you, which indeed is but what he ſuppoſeth, and had affirmed ſufficiently afore in Verſ. 7. and yet comes in again with an indignation, purely to ſhew that this was the only ground or reaſon it ſelf of that Act of his having ſet his love upon them, [BECAUSE HE LOVED &c.] and 'tis ushered in, and amplified with a But, as in oppoſition unto, and with an excluſion of all other things in the Elect themſelves, that might have any ſuppoſition of being motives to him thereunto: So then, there being but that ſuppoſed Inſinuation in the 7th Verſe, The Lord did ſet his love upon you, unto theſe firſt words of the 8th, But becauſe he loved you; that is, put the Act and This as the ground together, and the Iſſue and Reſult is, as if he had ſaid, The Lord loved you becauſe he loved you, and for no reaſon elſe as in you, but for this alone in himſelf, and in his Heart taken up towards you; and ſo loved you meerly becauſe he loved you: That's his reaſon; which were the words of this third Aſſertion at firſt. And though it be ſpoken of the Election of them in time unto that good Land, as in the Type, yet as ſhadowing forth his Election to Glory, as the ſubſtance of both.

3. For God to be a God of Grace to you, is to reſolve to love you, and that for ever; To be unchangable in his love, and never to have his Heart taken off you.

There are two words in the Text, (for upon the Text I would found each and every of theſe Heads and all along.)

1. That he is ſuch a God of Grace to us, as in Calling, he Calleth us into his Eternal Glory, no leſs, at the very firſt entrance: He doth not ſay, he hath called us into Grace only, or unto his Favour, but into Glory and Eternal Glory; that is, by calling he eſtates us into the whole and full right thereof for ever. The meaning whereof, what is it? But that he calls us out of ſuch a Grace and Love, as he did, and doth reſolve to be a God of Grace to us for everlaſting; and therefore calls us paſt recalling, even into Eternal Glory. Rom. 11. 29. A God of all Grace indeed!

The Second word is under-ground, and not rendred by our interpreters: For having ſaid this firſt, that he is A God of all Grace who hath called us into Eternal Glory, then proceeding on, αὐτὸς, He, ſays he, the ſame God, will Perfect you &c. (which αὐτὸς there placed) (repeats and draws in that former clauſe into it ſelf, and carries it on to the reſt) And ſo is, as if he had ſaid He, This ſame God of Grace, whom I have thus ſet out, and who hath called you, He will preſerve you by ſetling, &c. and ſo bring you infallibly unto that Glory. So then the mind of it is, that firſt and laſt, and all along, he is a God of Grace in all: He was a God of all Grace to you in loving you afore calling, and out of that Grace it was he called you, and he continues the ſame after calling, to reſtore and ſettle you, ſemper idem, always the ſame, from Eternity to Eternity I am God, I change not, (of which more afterwards upon James 1.) He ſpeaks it of his love to his people, Therefore ye are not conſumed; and the ground of this continuance and ſtedfaſtneſs of his love, is meerly becauſe he is a God of Grace to them; Whom he loved, he loved unto the End, John 13. 1. Grace cauſeth him firſt to fall in love, and that fixeth his Heart: His Heart is ſaid to cleave in love, Deut. 7.7. (the word the ſame that is uſed of Shechem to Dinah, Gen. 34. 3.) But hear Free-grace it ſelf ſpeak in its own free and proper Language and Native Tongue, I will be Gracious to whom I will be Gracious. ('Twas ſpoken to God by Moſes Moſes firſt, God thereby expreſſing his having choſen him, Exod. 33. 19. and then applied by the Apoſtle to all the choſen of God, Rom. 9. 15.) 'Tis ſpoken like Grace it ſelf, which is moved by and from nothing but himſelf, and which hath no other reaſon but it ſelf within him: He loves becauſe he loves; ſo at firſt, Deut. 7. And he will love becauſe he will love——Stat pro ratione voluntas; That's all his reaſon. There is will upon will; I will and I will: Grace is the moſt reſolved, (I had almoſt ſaid) wilful Principle in the heart of God. If in other purpoſes of his, you find his Reſolution fixed, as Iſa. 14. 27. The Lord of Hoſts hath purpoſed it, and who ſhall diſannul it? much more in this matter: And the reaſon is evident; for Acts of Grace are not barely Acts of his Will, but of his good Will, and of the good pleaſure of his will, Eph. 1. 5. In which he is delighted, Deut. 10. 15. And rejoyceth with his whole heart, and his whole ſoul, Jer. 32. 41. The property of Grace is to love becauſe it will, therefore to love whilſt he hath a Will, or love to love withal.

BOOK IV.

4. This Grace, thus fixed in God's Will, is the moſt ſoveraign and predominant Principle in the heart of God, to over-rule all other things he willeth, ſo as effectually to carry on his Reſolutions of Free-grace. Grace, as 'tis the moſt reſolute, ſo the moſt abſolute Principle in the heart of God; unto it belongeth the Dominion: What means elſe The Throne of Grace? Hebr. 4. 16. And why elſe is it ſaid, to reign unto eternal life? Rom. 5. ult. You find this round about the Text, in the words afore, verſ. 6, 7. Humble your ſelves under (or ſubmit to) his mighty hand, (that is, his Soveraign Power,) that will exalt you in due time; ſo verſe 6. After which follows, Who is a God that careth for you, verſe 7. All which is carried down to this Head of his, being a God of all Grace. Then in the next words to thoſe, The God of all Grace will ſtabliſh you, &c. it follows, verſe 11. To him be glory and dominion for ever; that is, to him, as a God of all Grace, who profeſſedly deals thus graciouſly with his People. The effect of both is, That he being a God of all Grace, to whom the Dominion belongs; Therefore give your ſelves up to him, as ſuch a God, whoſe Grace in caring for you and exalting of you, hath the Soveraignty.

And this Soveraignty of his Grace is given to it, not only in reſpect of all things out of God, that ſhould be ſuppoſed to ſtand in the way to its Reſolutions, but is attributed unto it, as in a compariſon to all other the Attributes in God himſelf, all which come in and give up their intereſt, as to the accompliſhing Free-graces deſigns, which were the ſupream and top Deſigns that were to be found in the heart of God. Thus in the firſt and ſecond Chapter to the Epheſians, where he mentions other Attributes, as having a hand in our ſalvation, he magnifies the wiſdom of God diſcovered therein, verſe 8. as alſo the exceeding greatneſs of his power therein, verſe 19. yet he ſets the Crown on Free-grace its head, All to the praiſe and glory of his Grace; ſo verſe 6. And in reaſon, that muſt be acknowledged to have the Dominion, that hath the principal Glory, as that, for the glory of which, all was at firſt deſigned. Now the whole of all Spiritual Bleſſings, (particularly Election, Predeſtination, Redemption, &c. Eph. 1. 4, 5 6.) are all ſaid to be to the praiſe of the glory of his Grace, verſ. 6. Yea, thoſe other Attributes employed in this work, although they are to have their proper glory out of our Salvation, yet in the work of our Salvation, they have but as it were an acting under Free grace to effect what it deſigns: They put in their joint ſtock indeed, but are content that their glory ſhould come in to them, ſo far as they ſubſerve this glorious Grace in its contrivements.

If any hereupon ſhall Query, Is this the Prerogative of Grace which you mean, that it ſaves men, continue they what they will, and ſo ſaves them meerly out of an abſolute Soveraignty, becauſe it will ſave them?

Anſw. 1. God forbid. We defie ſuch a Soveraignty ſo underſtood, as if it ſaved any man without rule, much leſs againſt rule. The very Text that ſpeaks as high of Grace as any other Scripture, yet when it ſtyles him The God of all Grace, as in relation to our Salvation, adds, who hath called us, as without which all the Grace in God would not be able to ſave a man; and that Calling is to be an holy Calling too, Who hath ſaved us, and called us with an holy Calling, according to his Grace: Without holineſs no man ſhall ſee the face of God. The reaſon of this is, that this Dominion and Monarchy of Grace hath Fundamental Laws (as all well regulated Monarchies have.) Let this Foundation of the Lord be never ſo ſure, that The Lord knows who are his; yet 'tis added, Let him that calls on the Name of the Lord depart from iniquity, 2 Tim. 1. 19. or, he cannot be ſaved. Chap. 1.

Anſw. 2. If by Prerogative and Soveraignty be meant an effectual, infallible, over bearing, over-powering all in our hearts, and all things elſe for the bringing about of our Salvation, and enabling us to keep thoſe Rules that are ſet us as eſſentially requiſite to Salvation, then by ſuch a Soveraignty and Prerogative we detract not to affirm, that it is attributed to Grace. And there is nothing that may be ſuppoſed to ſtand in its way, or in oppoſition to this, but, forſooth, man's Freewill; as if God had made a Creature, which himſelf, and all in him, could not rule; and that ſuch a Soveraignty is in his Grace, as that it engageth all in God, and draws all in him, unto its Aſſiſtance; this we are not aſhamed to affirm. And look as Grace complies with all thoſe other Attributes, as with his Holineſs, Wiſdom, &c. in ſetting ſuch Rules, ſo withal it draws thoſe other Attributes into an Engagement, to undertake to aſſiſt it for the keeping us, and our otherwiſe perverſe Wills, within the compaſs of ſuch Rules, and to overcome all oppoſition to the contrary. And herein it is that Grace its Prerogative is ſeen. In the ſtrength of which it is that Jer. 32. 40. God maketh an everlaſting and ſo abſolute a Covenant with us, That I will not turn away from them to do them good. But what, is this ſpoken in ſo abſolute a manner, that let them continue to do what they ſhall or would do, however, he will continue to do them good for ever? No: But I will put my fear in their hearts that they ſhall not depart from me, and he adds, for ever. The reſult whereof is plainly this, That unleſs they have the fear of God preſerved ſo in their hearts, as not to depart from him, God himſelf muſt turn away from them, and from doing them good: And ſo 'tis manifeſt that God conſidered that as one of his own Rules he could never diſpenſe withal, and this whilſt he uttered that everlaſting Promiſe: For he cautioneth it there with a But (for with a But it comes in) [But] I will put my fear in their hearts, and they ſhall not depart from me for ever: The reſolve of all which is to this effect, that That very ſame Grace, which at firſt had ſo fixed him as to ſay, I am reſolved I will not turn away from them, the ſame Grace undertook to cauſe them to obſerve and keep to this Rule; and unto that end engageth all that is in God (for elſewhere it is ſaid, He doth this with his whole heart) to put his fear in their hearts, that they ſhall not depart (that is, wickedly depart) from him. Now unleſs it were for this his undertaking to work thus in them, God by the mouth of the ſame Jeremy profeſſedly declares, He would never ſave them. Thus Chap. 3. 19. How ſhall I put thee among the Children: ſo wicked Wretches as he had deſcribed them in verſ. 4, 5. Wilt thou not from this time cry unto me, my Father, Thou art the guide of my youth? Behold, thou haſt ſpoken and done evil things as thou couldeſt. God demurs as it were upon the matter; What ſhall I then do to put thee among my Children? Thy preſent wickedneſs is utterly incompatible with my Rule, therefore how ſhall I do it? But Free-grace ſteps forth, and anſwers it, And I ſaid, Thou ſhalt call me Father, and ſhalt not turn away from me; and then God ſays, I will work on them at laſt. The effect of which Reſolve of his is, I will cauſe him to keep my Rule, and ſo bring him within the compaſs of the benefit of it.

5. This Grace, this purpoſing Grace in God's heart, had the ordering and diſpoſitive power of all left to it, that is, of what ſhould prove oppoſite, to ſee to it that it ſhould not hinder. Or, ſecondly, The diſpoſing of all neceſſarily conducing to the Salvation of thoſe God loved.

And

BOOK IV.

And in the general, there is this reaſon by way of deduction from the former, that if it had the Scepter, the Throne (as was ſhewn) then the diſpoſing power of all, the Legiſlative or Diſpoſitive power always follows the Dominion.

But particularly in reaſon, If Grace had all the power given up to it, then to be ſure, it would continue and forelay all things ſo (as to this point of Perſeverance) as to make ſure work, That the purpoſe of God, according to Election (which indeed is no other than Free-graces purpoſe in God's heart) might ſtand, as Rom. 9. 11. and not be defeated, fruſtrated, or over-thrown, or as elſewhere, It would lay ſuch a foundation, as might not ſtand only, but ſtand ſure, as 2 Tim. 2. 19. Certainly Free-grace that ſate in the Throne, among all the other Attributes of God, would ſee to this: It had all that God ſhould purpoſe to do before it; all in its hands to diſpoſe of: And the heart of God being, through his Grace, ſo full of thoſe two great Intereſts mentioned, 1. Of ſuch a love to thoſe whom he was pleaſed to love: 2. The other of exalting the Glory of that his Love in their Salvation. Certainly, it would contrive all that ſhould befall us ſo, as ſhould advance theſe two Intereſts moſt. God was now to ſet down his Will, and gave to Free-grace the Commiſſion to draw up all the Writings, Conveyances and Deeds, with this Charge, to be ſure to make all ſure. And all this, though after the manner of men, ſet out by me, you will find up and down in the Scriptures ſingly and apart. I ſhall ſingle forth one place or two, which ſpeak home, in terminis, to the ſubſtance of the words I have now delivered this fifth Aſſertion in.

In 2 Sam. 23. 5. when David came to dye, and then had the proſpect of all God's foregone dealings throughout his whole life, what doth he reſolve the whole mannage of his Salvation, he now expected, into? God hath made an everlaſting Covenant with me, ordered in all things and ſure, for this is all my ſalvation. I quote it, as being a full and adequate proof to every word of this fifth Head.

1. This Covenant was the Covenant of Grace, as you ordinarily ſtile it, and it carries that name from all the other Attributes. For indeed, Free-grace made that Covenant, and contrived it, and brought God himſelf under the bond of it. To confirm which, compare Iſa. 55. 3. An everlaſting Covenant: The ſure mercies of David: ('This paſſage in Iſaiah eminently alludes to this ſpeech of David at his Death.) 'Tis Mercy's Covenant then you ſee; and to ſay, 'Tis Mercy's Covenant, is all one as to ſay, Free-grace's Covenant: And obſerve, 'tis called ſure mercy; and ſure Mercy will be ſure to make a ſure Covenant.

2. This Grace (the great Covenant-maker there) having all in God to concur with it ſelf, and all that ſhould come from God at its diſpoſure, it is ſaid to have ordered matters, ſo as to effect and bring about its purpoſe. The three Verſions render the word made ready and prepared; and what is Predeſtination but Præparatio beneficiorum Dei, as Auſtin of old hath it?

And thirdly, Ordered ALL THINGS, not a few Paſſages or Events only, but All that ſhould concern David, or befall him, even all and every one: Which Deſignment, David in Pſal. 59. 10. calls [His Mercy] properly and perſonally ſet out for him.

4. And all and each unto what End or Iſſue, but unto David's Salvation? This is all my ſalvation.

5. And All things ordered ſo firmly, as to make ſure work to arrive at that, and bring David to that End, and Iſſue, and Period at the laſt. And this David had ſo clearly diſcerned throughout the whole courſe of his life, in the Chain and Series of things that befell him, as at his Death, upon the view of all, he ſaw by experience, beſides his faith on the Promiſes, that the whole had been, and muſt needs be a plotted contrived Deſign by God, that it could be no other; and thereupon it is, that now he ſet his Seal and Teſtimony to this at Death. I have found it ſo upon the view of all the Paſſages of my life.

And

And in like tenour of ſpeech to this, God ſpeaks in general of all his works, Known unto God are all his works from the beginning; yea Eternity, Acts 15. 18. (which ſpeech yet is ſpoken by the Apoſtle James, with a particular aim and relation unto his Decrees, about the Salvation of the Gentiles, and Caſting off the Jews, as the Verſes before and after ſhew:) As likewiſe that Speech, that he diſpoſeth the whole World, Job. 34. 13. (a word neer of kin to this of ordering all things, uſed by David in his caſe) but in a more ſpecial manner. He uſeth this word, or what is equivalent to it, in other Scriptures; viz. That he hath ſet in order and appointed his own People, and what belongs to them, or concerns them.

You have this in Terminis, Iſa. 44. 7. And who, as I ſhall call, and declare it, and ſet it in order for me, (and that he ſpeaks of all his works;) but it follows, ſince, or ſeeing that 'twas I that appointed the antient people, and the things that are coming, and ſhall come? God here takes on him, to himſelf alone, the declaring things to come, upon this invincible reaſon that he had the ſetting in order of all things in his eternal purpoſes, and the calling of things that are not or were not into being; and therefore he alone can foretell them, none having been his Counſellor: For when he ſays, who ſhall ſet in order for me? It implies that himſelf did, and none for him, or beſides him. And that word, ſetting in order, imports his having all afore him, even as now our Compoſitors or Printers have their Letters which they place, and cauſe to ſtand fixed every tittle in order to impreſſion; and ſo things in his Counſels ſtand fixed, and ready to be brought into Exiſtence, and are all ſo ſetly placed, as nothing can be added thereunto; and therefore, no wonder, ſays God, I can declare things to come.

But then Secondly, for a viſible Evidence of this, he produceth this one ſingular eminent inſtance for all the reſt, what he had declared and ordered concerning his own people, Since I appointed the Antient people, and the things that are coming, and ſhall come. The Antient People in the Hebrew, is, The People of Antiquity, or of Eternity; that is, in the time paſt, as the word is uſed in Iſa. 44. 15. 17. and imports, how from everlaſting, afore the World, He had ſingled them forth, and appointed them, and accordingly had ſet in order all things about them, as it there follows; and in reſpect unto this alſo it is, that in the Verſe he had ſaid, I am the firſt.

And herein lies Gods Argument, or the Evidence I ſpeak of; lo! I have ordered by appointment, and decree from everlaſting, all things about this my ſo antient People, and accordingly have in my Scriptures, which you all may read, things about them, which have come to paſs many of them already, and many other I have appointed too, which ſhall aſſuredly come to paſs; and therefore all the World may be convinced that I have ſet in order all other things, and only can declare them aforehand.

I underſtand the word tranſlated ſince, not for a note of time, as if he had meant ſince the Time &c. but as a note of Evidence, or Inference alledged, or of appeal unto; that is, ſince that, or ſeeing that I have done thus and thus about my Antient People; you may be aſſured, ſays God, that I have ordered all other things elſe, and only can declare them.

And for the Confirmation of this, concerning my own People, I referr you, ſays God, to all that I have written in all my Scriptures hitherto, (and for whoſe ſake it was I wrote them) from Moſes to Iſaiah's times, whereof a word hath not faln to the ground; yea, and I began to declare ſundry things about them when there was not one Man of them born, but Abraham himſelf, to whom I firſt declared it, Gen. 13. 16. and 15. 5. ſo as all the World may thereby ſee, that I alone have diſpoſed and ordered all things elſe, having exerciſed my Grace and Wiſdom ſo exactly herein towards theſe my Choſen Ones, and the Firſt fruits of my Creation. I ſhall caſt in another Paſſage of Davids in Pſal. 61. He having declared in his Own behalf, the purpoſe of God towards him for Everlaſting Salvation; he (ſpeaking of himſelf) ſhall abide before God for Ever, Verſ. 7. he withal conſidering what he was to run through in this Life, and what it might require to keep him unto the End, and ſo for Ever, doth preſently thereupon, in way of Prayer, ſubjoyn, Oh!

prepare Mercy and truth, which may preſerve me. As if he had ſaid, I have yet a long journey to go, and through many hazards, and thy Promiſe is, I ſhall abide afore for ever: Lord thou haſt need lay up and aforehand, prepare an abundance of Mercy and truth to preſerve me for time to come. I have cited this, and that other paſſage of David's, rather than any other Scriptures (which abound as to the effect of this Aſſertion) to gain the advantage and light which this word [ordering] firſt uſed by David, gives to this great Point in hand, and yet is indeed no other than in the plain-ſong of it, and in fuller terms more largely, you find in the Apoſtle, Rom. 8. 28, 29, 30. And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpoſe. For whom he did foreknow, he alſo did predeſtinate to be conformed to the Image of his Son, that he might be the firſt-born among many brethren. Moreover, whom he did predeſtinate, them he alſo called; and whom he called, them he alſo juſtified; and whom he juſtified, them he alſo glorified. And the real iſſue of all is this, that if God did thus appoint them afore the World was, unto Salvation, as Eph. 1. 3. 2. Theſſ. 2. 13. then alſo he ordered and diſpoſed All that ſhould fall out to them, or from themſelves in this World, ſo as they ſhould no way diſannul their Salvation, but work together for it: So as neither life nor death, &c. you know the Triumph in the Concluſion of that Rom. 8. that as 'tis ſaid of the Law, that coming four hundred years after the promiſe, Galat. 3. 17. it can never make the Promiſe of none effect: So here.

6. Now ſixthly, If all things were thus ordered aforehand to the Salvation of them, then ſpecially all their Temptations, Sufferings, Diſtreſſes, Sins, are ſo either prevented or precluded, (as Pſal. 59. 10. The God of my Mercy ſhall prevent me) or ſo diſpoſed, over-ruled, and ſucceeded with Repentances, Reducements, and Eluctancies out of them, and all ſo forelaid together with the Temptations, that there is a ſureneſs (which is David's word) yea an impoſſibility (which is Chriſt's) that they ſhould miſcarry by all or any of theſe. And unto this his ſpecial ordering of TEMPTATIONS, our Apoſtle in theſe words of the Text, and in what is round about it, hath a ſpecial and particular Eye and aim; and as in the whole, ſo in ſeveral words points at it.

He firſt particularly and expreſly ſets out Temptations, &c. as the object matter about which His Diſcourſe was intended under the name of ſufferings from Satan, as hath bene ſhewn.

2, He then had preſented God as aforehand, Verſ. 6. to be a God that careth for us in reference unto thoſe Temptations; as one whoſe vigilant and fore-knowing care is taken up, and buſied both over us and thoſe our ſufferings: And it is the property of Care you all know, in one that is wiſe and able, to foreſee, and order a prevention or relief, and it is accordingly often ſynonimouſly expreſt by forecaſt to forelay and provide againſt

3. To this Scope alſo it is, that he draws our Eyes upon, and would have us look at God in all theſe things that ſo fall out, as upon a ſoveraign God, that hath a mighty hand in bringing them upon us (with which accords that in Acts 4. 28. concerning Chriſt our Pattern; to do whatſoever [they have] and thy Counſel determined before to be done) and then in delivering us from under them, and who hath a prerogative, a power to order them, ſubdue them &c. And withal, a God of all Grace, which Grace makes him willing to exerciſe and uſe that Soveraignty towards us, and this in relation unto all that may depreſs us, or caſt us down, as thoſe words, Verſ. 5. clearly ſhew; humble your ſelves under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you, &c. Such a prerogative hand it is, as he is ſaid to have brought Iſrael with out of Egypt, and deſtroyd the Egyptians; whereof the ſame, and like phraſe is uſed, Exod. 14. 31. Chap. 32. 11. Deut. 3. 24. and by which Chriſt was incarnate, and the bleſſed virgin conceived, Luke. 1. 49. 51.

4. And farther, he declares, how in thoſe ſufferings and depreſsments, that his Prerogative hath a deſign upon you to exalt you the more in the Iſſue. Humble your ſelves, that he may exalt you; with which that of David accords, Thou haſt lifted me up, and caſt me down, Pſal. 102. 10.

Yea

Yea Fifthly, And hath in his Eye a time, a due time to exalt you again; in that he may exalt you in due time, in a set-time to have Mercy; so as it follows in the 13th Vers. of that Psalm. Chap. 1.

6. He again tells us, God hath set both the time how long, and the measure how much, after ye have suffered, ὀλίγον, which is translated a little while, as for time only, but signifies both a little space, for the time; and 2. but a little deal, for the measure: Yea, and he has so designed this, that you shall not be exalted afore, but after that ye have suffered first: All these having been thus ordered by him, out of his Prerogative or Soveraign Power, and out of his care moderating them.

And then Seventhly, He declares his Design to be to perfect and stablish, &c. after all these sufferings; not reduce you only, or bring you forth of them, but bring you to a perfection thereby: What can be more manifest than that this design is driven in all these?

But lastly, If you require the word Appointed to be given, as used hereof, you may discern and find it in the word Accomplisht; Knowing the same Afflictions are accomplished in your Brethren in the world. And an Accomplishment, we know, is but the fulfilling of what was afore designed, of which afterwards. Gerard on that word.

So as the Text confirms every tittle of the Assertion, and so sufficiently, as I shall not need call in the help of any other Scripture.

The main Conclusion by way of Inference from hence is, That if things be thus, then there is an absolute sureness unto an impossiblity of a miscarriage, which, as I said, Christ himself pronounced concerning the Elect in the very case of hazard from Temptations. One Impossible is used of Gods Promise and Oath pawned to his Covenant of Grace, and his Decrees thereof. Heb. 6. 18. And the other, or rather the same, is used by Christ his Counsellor in the very case in hand, namely, of Temptations, such as if it were possible the Elect should be deceived. And well he might; for God hath ordered and taken care of all, out of a preprogative and Grace: God foresees the objection and hath the answer ready. He permits the wound, the poison; and hath the Antidote, the Salve ready: This you have in terminis, Isa. 57. 17. 18. For the iniquity of his Covetousness was I wroth and smote him, I hid me and was wroth, and he went on frowardly in the way of his Heart: I have seen his ways and will heal him, I will lead him also, and restore comforts &c. Tis the worst extremity supposable. He suffers, and moderates the Temptation; and appoints the issue, the escape, the out-let of it; this is also in terminis, 1 Cor. 10. 13. There hath no Temptation taken you but such as is common to Man; but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able, but will with the Temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it.

If a great and gracious Prince being to send his Son on an Embassy into a farr Country, where there are many dangers and hazards to run through from Thieves and Enemies; but with all if he did punctually foreknow all the Counsels of Enemies, their motions (as God speaks of Sennacherib) I know thy abode &c. at what passages they will lurk and lie in wait (as God did of the King of Syria, 2. Kings 2. 8. &c. at such and such a place (as there) and then withall should send an invisible Guard (that is invisible as to the Enemies) stronger than they, secretly to accompany them, as he did to the Prophet Elisha, either to bring them off when in extremity, or to give them secret warnings to beware at such a time, as in that case, 1 Kings 6. 10. the Prophet from God did the King; or in case they would be too hard for them, then either not to suffer them to assault at all, or to befool them, as the Prophet in the same Chapter did that great Host in the way, at Dothan, Vers. 14, 15, 19. &c. In this case if all be thus certainly forelaid, although they may hardly escape sometime, yet they will certainly come to their journeys end, be it never so long.

BOOK IV. Now this is the very Case here, 1 Pet. 1. 5. We are kept as with a guard of Souldiers unto Salvation, says the Apostle there; and God knows how to preserve the righteous, as in 2 Pet. 2. and suffers not the temptation to assault, unless there be need, as in 1 Pet. 1. 6. Wherein ye greatly rejoyce, though now for a season (if need be) ye are in heavinesse through manifold temptations: and only to the end to glorifie his Grace in the Issue, as verse 7. it follows; That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise, and honour, and glory, at the appearing of Jesus Christ. And God hath infinite and strange ways to keep and preserve them from sin, and to deliver out of Temptation. Sarah, when in bed with Abimelech, as some have thought, I restrained thee, says God to Abimelech. So Joseph's Brethren were withheld from killing him; and David was kept from cruelty and rage by Abigails wisdom. 1 Sam. 25. 22. compared with vers. 32, 33, 34. David said to Abigail, Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, which sent thee this day to meet me; and blessed be thy advice; and blessed be thou which hast kept me this day from coming to shed blood, and from avenging my self with my own hand; for in very deed, as the Lord God of Israel liveth, which hath kept me back from hurting thee, except thou hadst hasted and come to meet me, surely there had not been left to Nabal, by the morning light, any that pisseth against the wall. In this case, though the righteous may be scarcely saved, as the same Peter speaks, yet they are surely saved: For all that hinders is ordered and contrived; ——or to give another Instance.

The Authors and Contrivers of Romances, or feigned Stories; they usually design with themselves to exalt and magnifie such and such persons, whom they make great and glorious in the end, or conclusion and issue, but do tell you stories about them first, and all along of the greatest hazards, encounters, perils, difficulties and extremities by the way, which they run through; and those often such, as he that reads stands wondering, how and by what means they shall be delivered out of them: But still the Author of them hath aforehand invented ways by which deliverances, rationally supposable, should still be wrought unto a glory: And this is a Rule and Law observed by such, in framing such Stories, that they will be sure never to set down such or such perils, or put them into writing, if they had not aforehand the thoughts and Idea's of rational ways of delivering them out of them, and themselves being the Fictioners and Framers of all those Stories, both of the one and the other, have all afore them of what they do invent to set down, as their pleasure is; they can and may aforehand order and frame a thousand distresses, and still as many strange deliverances, as they will, yet so as to be sure to make a pleasant and joyful close at last.

Now the Great and Soveraign God had the sole power and soveraignty of ordering and disposing of all about his People of Antiquity, afore the world was, or themselves were: And to be sure, he could unto a reality of effect, contrive, and with an infallibility dispose of the various Conditions, and the Issues and Events of them, and of all things about them, with such an interchangeable mixture dispersed amongst them, as his Wisdom saw meet: And his Grace designing Glory at last invincibly to be the Goal or Price to be attained, his Wisdom and Grace can and will order all, so as to be sure of that Event; and he doth, and could do this, and effectually carry it on with more facility and easinesse, than ever the greatest Wits can or have done their Projections and Intentions, concerning those Issues of their Fancies, as they set themselves to magnifie and exalt them. Our very thoughts and purposes are far less the Creatures and Figments of our minds, (which yet they are stiled, Hebr. 4. 12, 13. compared with Gen. 6. 5.) than all things that really are come to pass and exist, and are brought into being, (as the Apostles word is) which he calls into being, Rom. 4. and that in their Existencies, than are or were the Creatures of his Infinite Power, Wisdom, and Soveraignty, for whose pleasure they were created, Rev. 5. ult. and he can and doth bring all his resolved thoughts and contrivances that come into his mind, his will and purpose, more easily to pass, than the greatest Understanding can invent, or having invented, can ſet down in writing the Imaginations and Fictions of his Brain; yea, and God can and doth ſo order them, as to be ſure to bring it to paſs, For who hath reſiſted his will? And 'tis as certain (for 'tis the grand Proviſo and work committed to Free-grace to ſee to it in this diſpoſement) That no Temptation ſhould be brought upon any of his, which he had not in his purpoſe a ſure and effectual way to bring them out of. Chap. 1.

You have had a brief Doctrinal Scheme, what it is for God to be a God of Grace in his purpoſes about us, ſpecially in his fore-ordering ſins, Temptations, and then Reducements and Deliverances forth of them, or preventings of them hitherto delivered, but as in an Aſſertory way.

And the two or three latter of thoſe Aſſertions were (as you have ſeen) founded chiefly upon that Speech of David's on his Death-bed, uttered to God; Thou haſt made a Covenant with me, order'd in all things, and ſure &c.

In which you have heard of David's faith about this great point in hand; [This is all my ſalvation] (ſaid he) and ſo cloſeth up his eyes. It may not be amiſs to take in David's Experiments alſo, upon the view of which it was that he uttered this at his death. And for a further encouragement unto this, let us have recourſe unto another Speech of his a little afore his death (for 'twas upon the occaſion of one of the laſt acts he did, that he ſpake it) wherein he indeed refers us to the whole ſtory of his Life, as a moſt magnifick Exemplification of the truth of the performance of that Covenant: And hereupon, as we uſe to ſubjoyn Examples unto Rules, in teaching Arts, which add no ſmall illuſtration to thoſe Rules, ſo I ſhall produce and joyn unto thoſe two latter Aſſertions or Maxims before given about Covenant Grace, David his Trials and Emergings out of them throughout his whole life; in which will riſe up and appear an ocular demonſtration of what hath been but aſſertorily delivered, ſpecially in thoſe two laſt; and in the whole, of the main Concluſion which was from them laſt inferred.

The paſſage is in 1 Kings 1. 29. And the King ſware, and ſaid, as the Lord liveth that hath redeemed my Soul out of all diſtreſs, &c. Wherein, in this laſt publick Scene of his Life, which was the crowning of his Succeſſor, his Son Solomon, he ſums up the whole in a general Proteſtation or Oath made, both unto God and for God, the Matter of which in effect is this, That look as God had promiſed him in that Covenant of Grace, that even ſo he had exactly performed for him, in every point and tittle, and therefore would perform that remaining part of his Promiſe, concerning his Son Solomon, yet left behind to be fulfilled.

Concerning which, take it as it is an Oath for God, and about his faithfulneſs to him, I ſhall afterwards enlarge in the Cloſe of this Head; but in the mean time, it fairly leads us into the examination and view of the paſſages of David's whole life, that are recorded (for he refers us, as you ſee, thereunto) in the Narrative of which, you will perceive and diſcern all things about him, had been indeed ordered and made ſure, in the manner we have been diſcourſing.

Now in the Story of David's life, his ordering Grace appeared both,

1. In his being preſerved in the midſt of all outward diſtreſſes and hazards to his Perſon, which were and had been Temptations to him to try his Faith.

And ſecondly, In his Sins, which were his greateſt Trials, together with Repentances and Returnings out of them,

The firſt had been from Satan and his own heart; the other from God; and yet all ſo ordered, as he was ſafely and ſurely carried through unto Salvation in the iſſue. 1 Chron. 21. 1.

I joyn both theſe Two together: For his very outward diſtreſſes and deliverances from dangers were a Type, and Pawn, and Pledge to him of his being kept unto Salvation, which the promiſe of the Kingdom ſhadowed out, and yet beſides, were in themſelves alſo great Trials of his Faith, as to the point of Salvation; and both involved in that Covenant of his which hath been inſiſted upon.

1. In

BOOK IV.

1. In his being preserved and brought unto the Kingdom: What a multitude, and variety of Hazards, Dangers, Distresses did he run through? 'twere infinite to reckon up all, much more to enlarge on each; and as strange Deliverances had he: He sums up all, Psal. 18. from Saul, and all other enemies; as in the title of that Psalm. Afore his flight from Court, in the first Chapter of Samuel; and then after his flight, from other enemies besides Saul; as from Doeg that informed Saul; from the King of the Philistines, whose Champion Goliah he had killed: And the Courtiers informed the King, 'twas he of whom that triumph for it, was made, 1 Sam. 21. 11. And the servants of Achish said unto him, is not this David the King of the Land? Did they not sing one to another of him in Dances, saying, Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands? Which is as much in effect, as if they had said, This is he that killed Goliah: Then from the people also, that ever and anon ran and told Saul where he was quartered, 1 Sam. 26. 1, and when some among them would, to gratifie Saul, have given him up, yea from his own Party, that followed him at Ziglag, 1 Sam. 30. 1. who speak of stoning him, Vers. 1.

But above all from Saul, from whom he was in jeoperdy every Moment, and had been so oft in danger, and so often had escaped, that his carnal reason concluded at length, I shall one day perish by the hand of Saul, 1 Sam. 27. 1. The Pitcher will be broken at last; and these all were purposely designed by God, who would have it so, whereof this is one sufficient evidence: For when he had got into a safe Hold, with his Father and Mother with him, and with the favour of the King of Moab, in whose Dominion he was, he was commanded out of it by God, and his Prophet Gad, sent on purpose for that End, bidding him come into the Land of Judah, yea and confined him to that Territory, where he was in Saul's Power and Dominion perfectly: God would have it thus; and him to be within the Power of this Lion, who hunted him as a Flea, and a Partridge: As if he had been too safe, and would have been too quiet and secure in Moab, for God to shew forth his Grace towards him: But God would have him in continual danger, to enact his Grace in Deliverances of him; yet have I set my King, &c. Psal. 2. 6.

Then after he was King;

1. Absolom: The Conspiracy ('tis said) was strong, and the People encreased continually with Absolom, 2 Sam. 20. 2.

2. Then Sheba: 2 Sam. 20. 2. Every Man of Israel went up from after David, and followed Sheba: 'Twas as great a defection (of the Ten whole Tribes sheere) for the time present, as that fatal one from Rehoboam afterwards: But God brought in the Tide again to David.

3. Then at last Adonijah was made King, against David's mind, and against his Promise, and Gods also; which was for Solomon: And all the Kingdom was for it, and against David in it, 1 Kings 2. 15. Yet God delivered David out of this, and all his distresses; there was none he was not delivered out of: And why? For all these dangers, and the deliverances were part of Gods sure Covenant, as the pawns, and pledges of it: and so were one and the same time forelaid, even from Eternity; and there was no distress designed then, but there was also a deliverance out of itforeset; and so all was ordered, and made sure.

II. In the personal preservation of him unto Salvation: What are the dangers, and hazards about that, but sins; and if ever any Man put free Grace to it, in that respect, 'twas David: I may say of it, he did make bold to try whether the sure Mercies of David would hold, or no: Hold tackling, or no: He put them to it: Yet all was ordered, and his reducements out of them therewith; and not barely to bring him off within the compass of the Rules of Salvation, but with an addition of a Glorious issue, and advantage; yea, and of Triumphs unto Free-grace.

His eminent sins were his Murther, and Adultery, and Numbering the People.

1. His Adultery, and then Murther of Uriah, as bad, as bad could be: But God not only ordered the means to bring him out of it, ſent Nathan the Prophet to him, but his repentance alſo upon his Miniſtry: The accompliſhment whereof you have in Pſal. 51. I ſay, God not only forelaid theſe, that his Salvation might not be prejudiced, but brought him off with an Overplus advantage: for what were the eminent Mercies of David's Life? Chap. 1.

His Son Solomon; (for that any other of his Children had Grace, we read not) how ever he was Jedidiah, the eminently beloved of God, and to whom the Promiſe of his Houſe was made: Now behold, and ſtand aſtoniſht! If Uriah had not been kill'd, he had not married Batſheba; and by her, in lawfull marriage, it was he had Solomon: Yea, and his Repentance was ſo accepted by God, that (ſtand aſtoniſh't at it) he had Solomon for a reward; (ſee Pſal. 127. the title, compared with Verſ. 3.) to be ſure not of his Sins, but of his Repentance that was fore-ordered to follow his Sin.

2. A ſecond Sin was his Numbering the People, and provoked thereunto by Satan: And how many more we know not. This was ordered, and his Repentance; and the iſſue of it as glorious as the other. One of the moſt famous things, or promiſes ſpoken of, was God's choice of a place, whither they ſhould bring their Sacrifices, where the Temple was to ſtand, and where God was to meet his people worſhipping of him; the higheſt Type of Chriſt: And where that place ſhould be, was reſerved as a great ſecret for four hundred years: Loe, and behold how God ordered it; David comes to profeſs a publique Repentance, with the Elders; the Angel directs him by God to go, and ſet up an Altar in the Threſhing-floor of Arawnah, 1 Chron. 21. 18. and David Sacrificed there, Verſ. 28. though the Ark was at Gibeon Verſ. 29. But what was the iſſue of this? read Chap. 22. 1. Then David ſaid, this is the Houſe of the Lord God; and this is the Altar of the Burnt-offering for Iſrael. And it was ſo revealed to him; and from that time it was he began to prepare materials for the Temple; Verſ. 2. &c. And David commanded to gather together the ſtrangers that were in the Land of Iſrael; and he ſet Maſons to hew wrought Stones to build the Houſe of God; and David prepared Iron in abundance, &c. And compare with theſe 2 Chron. 3. 1. Then Solomon began to build the Houſe of the Lord at Jeruſalem in mount Moriah, where the Lord appeared unto David his Father, in the place that David had prepared in the Threſhing-floor of Ornan the Jebuſite. Were not theſe ordered Mercies? Sure Mercies? and yet the iſſues of his greateſt ſins; by which you may judge of all the reſt of the Paſſages of his Life.

Well; you heard what about the Covenant of Grace it ſelf he had declared at his Death, which was his Foundation, and hath been of our diſcourſe: Let us now ſee in another place how at his death, having the view of his whole life, both of his diſtreſſes, and deliverances, both in reſpect of dangers, and ſins, (which are our greateſt dangers) he ſums up the experience of all, 1 Kings 1. Ver. 29. And the king ſware, and ſaid, as the Lord liveth that hath redeemed my Soul out of all diſtreſs: David was now to dye, and this was his laſt act, and one of his laſt Speeches, whilſt he wrote the Pſalms in his life-time: He had again, and again ſaid, many are the troubles of the righteous; but the Lord delivereth them out of All: But he ſeals it by experience at his death. And it is as if ſaid, If you ask me what a God he hath been to me? He hath been a God hath redeemed me out of all diſtreſs: He hath left me in the arrear of none; not one. At their deaths Saints have uſed to entitle God by what they have eminently found him to be; and under the Title and Notion thereof, have recommended that God to their Friends to ſerve: And David here entitleth God by this; and Jacob at his death had done the like, Gen. 43. 16. Yea, and as Dr. Preſton had wont to ſay, That he often tryed God, but now he would truſt him; David here goes further, he ſwears for God; He takes his Oath upon it for him: And the King ſware, and ſaid, as the Lord liveth that redeemed me; &c. You have had confirmation enough of this Head; both, from the Covenant to David, and from David's Example, and from his own Teſtimony, both of Faith, and Experience at his death, given in by one of the moſt tryed Saints in the World; Even this, that God

So Dr. Preſton did to ſome of his Friends.

Book IV. God orders, and contrives all Diſtreſſes, Temptations, Sins, afore-hand; together with ſuch Iſſues of them as ſhall make Salvation ſure.

Uſe. For You that be old Diſciples of Chriſt, let me ſpeak to you firſt: (The Apoſtle calls them ſo with Honour, Act. 21. 16.) there are ſome of ſuch among you: You have heard all that hath been ſaid, and you have profeſſed the Truth a long time, it may be thirty, it may be forty years; Come hither, let me ſpeak freely to you: You muſt ſubſcribe that God is true in this his dealing and promiſe, or ſtudy your Caſe that you may ſubſcribe it; I uſe that phraſe Subſcribe to the Lord, for you have it, Iſa. 44. 5. One that was a dying ſaid, Is there not ſuch a promiſe? ſpecifying a ſpecial Promiſe had taken his Heart; pray turn to it, Bear witneſs, ſaid he, that this Promiſe is true; God is faithfull, and hath fulfilled this Promiſe to me. The like do you, according to your experiences of his having ordered all, and carried you through hitherto, as hath been related; that as David ſays, Pſal. 92. 14. The righteous ſhall bring forth fruit in his Old Age, to ſhew that the Lord is upright; that is, that he is a God of all Grace, who having Called me ſo many years ago, hath carried me through all my Temptations, and through my Sins, and hath kept and brough me hitherto. I do not enquire, what your ſins have been: But ſome may have run into ſin more than others, and perhaps ſcandalous ones; But I demand of you, hath not God ſtill reduced, ſetled, ſtabliſht you more in the end? as David alſo ſays, Pſal. 71. 18. 19. Now alſo when I am old, and gray-headed, O God forſake me not; untill I have ſhewed thy ſtrength unto this Generation, and thy power to every one that is to come. Thy righteouſneſs alſo, O God, is very high, who haſt done great things: O God, who is like unto thee? God exalts pardoning Grace to ſome more, and ſanctifying Grace to others; he is the God of Grace. Thoſe ſhips that have been in long Voyages at Sea, three or four years out, have gone through hot Climates and Cold, paſt the Equinoctial again and again, and have run through many a difficulty, and great ſtorms, and yet have been kept alive at Sea (as they ſpeak) when theſe ſhall meet one another at Sea neer the Haven, how will they Congratulate? And Old Diſciples ſhould do ſo, that God hath kept Grace alive in their Souls. And I would ask you how many thouſand Ships have you ſeen caſt away before your eyes? How many that have made Shipwrack of Faith, and a good Conſcience, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks? This and that Profeſſor, that has run into this and that errour damnable, or falſe opinions and teachings, though all of ſmaller moment; others that have ſtruck upon Quickſands of Worldly preferments, and many ſplit upon Rocks, and yet you have been kept: This ſhould move you to bleſs this your God, The God of Grace, the more. Come, let me knock at your Hearts; Are none of you Old Profeſſors, like old hollow Oaks, who ſtand in the Wood among Profeſſors ſtill, and keep their ſtand of Profeſſion ſtill, and go to Ordinances, &c. but the Rain they drink in, as the Apoſtles word is, ſerves to no other end but to rot them——Theſe are nigh unto curſing: Or, have you green Fruits ſtill growing on you, as quickly and lively Affections to God and Chriſt, and Faith and Love, as at the firſt, and more abounding? O! Bleſs God you are ſo neer the Haven; and lift up your Hearts, your Redemption draws neer: And withall raiſe your Confidence, that That God of Grace who hath called you into his eternal Glory, will keep you for it, and poſſeſs you of it ſhortly.

Chap. 2.

CHAP. II.

That God is THE GOD OF ALL GRACE diſpenſatorily. He gives ſupplies of Grace proportionably to the Needs, Diſtreſſes, and Temptations unto which his Elect are obnoxious in the courſe of their lives here on Earth. He is the God of all Grace eſſentially; In that his Nature contains Infinite Riches of Grace.

HE is the God of all Grace diſpenſatorily, or by way of performance, and execution, and gracious diſpenſations of all ſorts: This differs from that other laſt diſpatch'd. There was ſhewn how God had decreed, permiſſively at leaſt, all ſorts of needs, and wants, ſins that may poſſibly befall Saints, Miſeries of all kinds, on purpoſe, and with a purpoſe to ſhew himſelf a God of all Grace, in giving ſupplies and reliefs thereunto: But in this Head is to be ſhewn, that there is in God that Grace, which in actu exercito will ſupply the needs, and de facto doth it: He is a God of all Grace executively, and in reſpect of the Effects: He hath decreed, and is ingaged to be the effecter and giver forth of an All of gracious Reliefs and Supports; Supplies of all ſorts of wants, needs, temptations, ſufferings his Elect can be ſuppoſed capable of.

I ſhall diſpatch this Head by three things;

1. By proof out of the Text, that ſo it is intended.
2. An Explication.
3. A Confirmation of your Faith added to theſe proofs.

I. For the firſt: That this ſenſe is intended in the Text, I take my Obſervation from the fifth verſe, where 'tis ſaid, God gives grace to the humble; and it leads on to the matter of this Text. That word giveth grace, ſpeaks the performance, a diſpenſing, or beſtowing of grace, by way of gracious effects. In his fellow Apoſtle James, Chap. 4. 6. there you find it, He giveth more grace; quoting the ſame words of Scripture which the Apoſtle Peter doth, God reſiſteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble: And obſerve the occaſion of it in James; it is ſpoken in relation to ſubduing his peoples luſts, particularly luſting after envy: So in the 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5*th verſes*. And truly that's grace indeed; that when luſt grows high, the grace in God ſhould provoke him to give the more grace, whereby to deſtroy it; unto them that humble themſelves for thoſe luſts, he gives more grace to the humble. And therefore, when here in the Text, he goeth on to give this promiſe of perfecting, ſtabliſhing, ſtrengthning, it is in further proſecution of what he had begun with, and relates unto God's giving grace in the fith verſe. And ſo by this coherence, his being ſtiled the God of all grace, is to be underſtood, as in relation unto all ſorts of gracious effects, that flow from him as the God of all grace.

That other ſtile of his, when he is ſaid to be the God of all comfort, as in 2 Cor. 1. 3. helps likewiſe to clear the ſenſe of this here, how he is called the God of all grace, in the like manner: Now that is ſpoken in relation to effects of Comforting, and what he doth; (as in the Pſalms 'tis ſaid, He is good, and doth good:) and ſo it follows, Who comforteth us in all our Tribulations, verſ. 4. And as we may ſay of that Attribute of Goodneſs, That he is a God of all comforts diſpenſatorily, the like we ſay of this. And again, you have it Chap. 7. 6. of that Epiſtle, God that comforteth thoſe that are caſt down: It is an Attribute, ab effectu, as that when he is ſaid to be, A God hearing prayer, and a God of pardons, Neh. 9. 17. (ſo in the Hebrew) from what he doth, He is a God pardoning iniquity, &c.

Although this is to be added, That when in 2 Cor. 1. 3. he is called the God of all comforts, this may take in his being the God of comforts objectivè, as to us; i. e. That our Souls may find in God, as our chiefeſt good, all ſorts of Comforts, and in him alone. And that as God is ſubjectivè in himſelf, a God of all bleſſedneſs in himſelf, unto himſelf; ſo all that is comfortable in him, is for our comfort: But ſtill the direct and proper ſcope of that place in its coherence, reſpects what he is in giving forth comforts to his People. This parallel hath been alledged for the clearing the ſenſe of the Phraſe, the God of all grace, that it is in reſpect of all gracious effects which the grace in God doth afford.

Secondly; Let us next come to the thing it ſelf: Look as when it is ſaid, He is the God of [all] comfort, in that place afore, you eaſily underſtand that it is ſpoken reſpectivè, in relation unto all ſorts of diſtreſſes and diſcomforts, &c. which the Saints at any time have, and are capable of: And ſo Paul interprets himſelf in the fourth verſe, Who comforteth us in [all] our tribulations. And then the meaning of that title, the God of all comforts, is, that he hath in apparatu, in a readineſs, a particular ſpecial comfort to give forth to every diſcomfort, and that in due time, de facto, he doth it. And then in like manner, when he is ſaid here to be the God of all grace, it muſt be underſtood as ſpoken reſpectivè to every want, to every need the Saints may be ſuppoſed to be in; and that God hath a proportionable grace for the ſupply and relief of it.

Only in the third place I add this, as touching theſe two which I alledge as Parallels, the God of all comforts, and the God of all grace, that though that of his being the God of all comforts, ſerves, as I have alledged it, to clear the ſenſe of the Phraſe, viz. that he is the God of all grace, unto all ſorts of gracious effects; that yet (which tends to magnifie) this his ſtile of all grace, above and beyond that of comforts; (and yet that tends to our comfort too) is that theſe two are not adequate, or of the ſame commenſuration: But of the two, his being the God of all grace, is larger in reſpect of its gracious effects; for God's diſpenſations of grace, are larger than his diſpenſations of comfort in this world: He gives grace in caſes wherein he doth not give comfort; and ſo he is the God of all grace, in a far larger extent than of all comforts, though ſtill both are alike to be underſtood in reſpect to effects; yea, and often he gives moſt grace, when not comfort, (further than ſo as to uphold the Soul from ſinking.) He carries on ſome Souls as he did Chriſt at his Death for a while, unto the higheſt gracious Acts of Obedience, whilſt yet he vouchſafes no Comfort; witneſs that doleful Expreſſion of Chriſt, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? when yet he was in the higheſt performance of Obedience, Obedience unto death, as the Apoſtle agrandiſeth it. Thus in thy temptation God influences thee with grace, ſecretly aſſiſting and ſtrengthning, when he affords not comforting Grace, to thy own ſenſe. Carry this home with thee, thou who haſt ſo many years been afflicted, toſſed with tempeſt, and not comforted.

Fourthly; And take that other Epithete coupled with this already mentioned in the ſame place of the Corinths, namely, The Father of Mercies too; for that is parallel alſo with this, the God of all grace, as to the interpretation and ſenſe given in relation to the effects of Mercies; for Mercies there ſo called, are the Works of Mercy, the Effects of Mercy, and ſo often and uſually ſtiled in Scriptures. And it is not ſpoken in the ſingular only, the Father of Mercy, but of Mercies, which imports a multitude, and variety of them. Now Grace here, and Mercy there, are all one; and the God of all grace, is all one as to have ſaid, the Father of Mercies; that is, of all merciful Diſpenſation.

This for the proof of this ſenſe which I have given.

II. Next for Explication of the thing it ſelf.

1. That when 'tis ſaid, there is all of diſpenſatory Grace to be given forth; the conſectary that followeth from thence is, that there is no temptation that doth, or can befall a Saint, that's under the dominion of Free-grace, but God hath a Grace prepared, to be applied in due time: It ſpeaks that he hath a Grace fitted, and ſuited, to give it forth, as need and occaſion ſhall require: There is no Sore in the Heart, but he hath a Plaiſter ready ſpread for it, to be laid on in due ſeaſon: He hath cut out his Grace into ſingle Plaiſters. The reaſon of this Conſectary is, that look as the word Grace in the thing it ſelf, is a Relative to need, and to temptation; ſo all Grace muſt needs be a Relative to all, or any needs whatſoever. If there were any want, which the Liege-ſubjects of Free-grace, (ſo I ſhall ſtill call them, as in relation to the dominion of Grace,) are capable of, and God had not a ſpecial Grace for it, he were not the God of all Grace: For than the miſery of theſe his Subjects of Free-grace, would be more extenſive, and larger than his Grace, which to be ſure ſhall never be ſaid of God, when God is ſaid to be Almighty, (which is by interpretation, the God of all power;) what's the import of that? That all matters of extremeſt difficulty, are poſſible to him; yea, nothing too hard, as Jeremy firſt, Chap. 32. 17, 27. And an Angel to the bleſſed Virgin afterwards, Luke 1. 37.

But you will ſay, God may be Almighty, and nothing is too hard for his power, when yet I may not be relieved; for God is ſaid to be Omnipotent, but not Omnivolent; and ſo he may be the God of all Grace, and yet I for ever be denied in my particular caſe. But I reply; when you ſhall ſay he is the God of all Grace, who is in himſelf alſo the God of all Power, put but all Grace unto all Power, and the reſult will be, that he hath a gracious will to put forth power; and put forth all his power; and it is at Graces diſpoſal: That he is the God of all Grace, makes him all-willing: And that he is the God of all Power, ſpeaks his ability to help according to his will, which Grace hath ingaged: Joyn, I ſay, but theſe together, according to that of the Pſalmiſt, God hath ſpoken once, twice have I heard it, Power belongs to God: Alſo unto thee O Lord belongeth Mercy, Pſal. 62. 11, 12. And thou that art a dependent upon, and Leig-ſubject of Free-grace, muſt needs be ſecure in all thy Temptations, for a gracious Iſſue: For if all Grace did not ſerve to help in all caſes that Grace ſerves for, Grace were not Grace: Joyn God of all pow-power, and God of all Grace, and what will not be done?

2. The ſecond thing; As he hath Grace for all needs, ſo he is a God of all Grace to give forth help as the need and occaſion ſhall require: For need is the time and ſeaſon for Grace to ſhew it ſelf, Heb. 4. 16. Let us therefore come boldly unto the Throne of Grace, that we may obtain Mercy, and find Grace to help, in time of need. And as Solomon, 1 Kings 8. 59. frames his Prayer, That God would maintain the cauſe of his People Iſrael at all times, as the matter ſhall require: This is full to my joyning the former, and this together; for he ſaith at all times, as well as in all matters: If God ſhould let ſlip any one due time and ſeaſon for help to any one need, he were not the God of all Grace. For it is one part, and a great part of being gracious, to relieve ones need, in time of greateſt need.

3. That God is a God of all Grace, in reſpect of diſpenſation, ſhews that God takes not this Title upon him, Potentially; that is, that he hath Grace in him which is able to help; But it ſpeaks that he is a God that, de facto, in actu exercito doth, and will manifeſt himſelf to be ſo, And that by Inſtances of all ſorts; he will actually give full proof of his Miniſtry, or Oeconomy of Grace: (That I may allude to that Speech of Paul to Timothy, 2 Tim. 4, 5.) That ſo at latter day, he may have the honour, not only of having been the God of all Grace Potentially, but the God of all Grace Actually, and in the performance of it: And this is ſeen in ſin, which is the worſt of all Temptations, and Miſeries: There is one Temptation, or ſin indeed that is excluded from this Grace; 1 Cor. 10. 13. There hath no Temptation taken you, but ſuch as is Humane; ſo in the Greek: The ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, is the De-

Book IV. vils ſin; a ſetled revenge againſt God; and ſo is diſtinguiſhed from all other ſins that are humane, or common to Men. As Beza upon 1 John 5. 16, 17, 18. hath obſerved: And the Apoſtle in giving that exception in that diſtinction, hath confirmed the general rule of all ſins elſe, that they are capable of pardon: And the place ſhews that all ſuch Humane Temptations may befall, and de facto, do befall ſome or other of the Elect. Chriſt expreſly ſaith of ſins, that All manner of ſins ſhall be foregiven: And then he adds that exception: And not ſins committed before calling only, but alſo after; for who ſhall limit it? And the reaſon of that ſpeech of Chriſt there, is the ſame that's here; that God is the God of all Grace; and therefore will ſhew all ſorts of Grace, in pardoning all ſorts of ſins. And as this holds true in pardoning Grace, ſo in ſupporting, and relieving Grace. Some will be apt to ſay, their Temptations have been ſuch, as never befell any that have been ſaved: Why truly as ſome perſons muſt be the chieſeſt of Sinners, and yet are in Heaven; ſo ſome muſt be miſerableſt for outward trials. I go further, if thou hadſt no inſtance of any that ever was under the like, and kneweſt no particular Promiſe, or Example for thy caſe; yet this one Manifeſto of Gods, that he is the God of all Grace, ſpeaks home to thy caſe fully, and ſufficiently: God ſaid but to Paul, my Grace is ſufficient for thee; and that was enough: If no Man or Angel could tell thee of any, yet this is in ſtead of all; that he is the God of all Grace; that would reach it.

III. I ſhall add Confirmations unto your Faith, to help you in the belief of this.

1. God, who is the Fountain of all Grace, hath given to all, and each Saint, all Graces, in their ſeveral degrees; yet all for the kind thats proper to make them Saints, to exerciſe towards himſelf and their Brethren; with command, to exerciſe them as opportunity and occaſion ſhall be offered: And draws forth in ſome one Saint or other all ſorts of Graces; though in ſome, one ſort of grace more, and other Graces in others: So as take the whole Body of them, we may call them Saints of all Graces, as to the exerciſes of all Graces amongſt them: Hence therefore it invincibly follows, that God, who is himſelf the God of all Grace, in his kind, and the Father and Fountain of all Grace that is in us, that he will be ſure to do, and perform this.

1. That he hath given each, and all ſorts of Graces to every Saint habitually, 2. Pet. 1. 3. informs; He hath given us all things belonging to life, and godlineſs: And 'tis ſpoken in imitation of God himſelf, of his Divine nature, That as he is the God of all Grace in his Nature, ſo we have all Grace in ours: And ſo it follows, Verſ. 4. Being made partakers of the Divine Nature.

2. He hath furniſht his Saints with all, and each Grace, to the end, that as occaſion is, they ſhould exerciſe, and put forth theſe Graces: And accordingly in the ſame Chap. Verſ. 5. He exhorts them to add grace to grace: And in 2 Cor. 8. 6 he exhorts that as God had begun, ſo he would alſo finiſh in them the ſame Grace alſo: He ſpeaks of a particular Grace of liberality, to the poor Saints; and means that they ſhould exerciſe that, and (by the ſame reaſon,) every grace, as occaſion, and a fit opportunitie, and juſt matter is offered to draw it out to others, as their need ſhall require.

3. Take the whole Body of Saints, and God doth give opportunity to draw forth every ſort of Grace among them, all ſorts of ways that Grace is extendible unto, from the loweſt ſort, to the higheſt: So there is no kind of Grace, no ſtrain, or vein of Grace, no diſpoſition of Grace, but God will give the experiment of the acting of it, in one Saint or other. Shall I give you an inſtance of one ſort of Gracious Diſpoſitions, and that of the higheſt ſort, which was put forth in one Saint, as an evidence not only of what Grace in any other might be raiſed up too; (for if any one had ſuch a high Elevation of his Grace, that none ever had; yet it being the acting of his Grace, the principle whereof is common to all, it will follow, that the ſame might be raiſed up in any other:) But alſo it is an evidence that any other Grace of lower ſort may be educed and acted in the Heart of ſome other; and in like manner every Grace in ſome one, or other, and that God will in ſuch a like manner cercertainly do it. The note, or ſtrain which I ſhall mention, being as the note Ela in Muſick; the higheſt that one Mans voice could reach to, it will readily be yielded, that all other degrees lower, may much more eaſily be reached by ſome, or other; and that they are, it will ſhew how farr the Divine Nature in us, that is, Love to God, will ſtretch and extend: Think with your ſelves, how high! Will it be ordinarily thought, and imagined, that to wiſh a Mans ſelf accurſed from Chriſt, ſhould ever have been found in the Heart of any Saint, which yet upon occaſion, and a fit ground preſented, hath been found in the Heart of one Saint, who yet profeſſed to Love Chriſt, and did Love Chriſt more than any other Saint we read of, to be accurſed from Chriſt, whoſe Injoyment he ſo long'd for, and ſo impetuouſly deſired to be diſſolved, and to be with Chriſt, and had been with him in the third Heavens; yet having before his Eyes, a meet occaſion, and opportunity, as he judg'd it, to put forth this act upon; God did draw it out of him, Rom. 1, 2, 3. The occaſion was the Glory of God (as he thought) in the Salvation of Iſrael, which would ariſe to God more than out of his own particular Salvation alone; in this juncture he wiſhed himſelf accurſed from Chriſt: And we may interpret his Heart in it by what was Chriſts, who was made a Curſe for Man that ſinned, which was his own fleſh; and in being made a curſe, was not ſeparated from acting Grace, and love to God; for his Grace towards God never wrought more than when on the Croſs; but it was a ſeparation from all preſent comfort: And thus it was in Paul's Heart, who was content to have all the comfort, he ſhould have had from Chriſt, debarred him for ever; but not the exerciſe of Grace; for this was of the higheſt: And that ſo he might for ever have glorified God in the higheſt manner; it being with the greateſt ſelf-denial that ever was. Chap. 2.

Now what do I inferr from hence, but 1. That there being ſo full and proper an occaſion, or ground for Paul's Grace to riſe up to this Elevation; and that God did draw it out accordingly; that therefore in like manner God will extract from out of the Hearts of the reſt of his Saints, (ſome or other,) all, and any other ſorts of graces, when the like meet Occaſions and Opportunities ſhall be, to draw them forth, to the end that he may give a full experiment of all grace in the exerciſes of them, upon All ſuch occaſions? The Second thing I inferr is, that on Gods part there can be in us no temptation, or need; no caſe ſo deſperate in any one that is called, but that there muſt be ſuppoſed that he hath in him a grace, and a Love to extend and apply it ſelf thereunto, and overcome it: Shall Paul riſe up in the way of the exerciſe of his grace, unto the higheſt ſtrain that is ſuppoſable, and exceed God in the exerciſe of the grace that is in him towards us? There is no caſe, but God can find in his Heart, a ſuitable grace for it; yea, he being the God of all grace too, if there were any caſe more extraordinary than other, he would greedily take the advantage thereof to chooſe, and not ſlip ſo great an opportunity of ſhewing his grace to the utmoſt, to ſuch a Soul; and then certainly for the glory of his grace will do it to all, or any other need, in ſome of his Saints, or other.

I might illuſtrate this by that which is the greateſt oppoſite unto grace in us, and that is ſelf-love in its raign and height: Do you know, or can you Imagine into what Shapes this Proteus, this Monſter, this Devil Self-love, will be turned into, as occaſions, and circumſtances, one is put into, may and do draw it forth in ſome or other; unto what heigths of wickedneſs, it may by occaſion, be broach'd forth into; what Infinite varieties of its workings there are of all ſorts? We may ſay, that every Mans Heart in this reſpect, is the ſeed of all ſin; and yet withal we may ſay, that every Mans Corruption is not drawn forth to all, and every ſort of evil: And yet likewiſe, that there is no ſort of ſin, or wickedneſs, or ſtrain of inordinate acting of ſelf-love, but hath been acted, and ſhewn it ſelf in ſome manner or other: So as take the whole Body of Mankind, and we may ſay, the Body of ſin among them hath had a compleatneſs, as a Body in the Community of them; And for this you may read the Scriptures: Look about you throughout the World, Stories of all Ages, and read your own Hearts; If God ſhould ſeal up to any Man, as he hath hath done to the Devils, that he will never be merciful unto them, even any Man that hath had the light of the Goſpel with any power upon his Heart, he would certainly flie in Gods face, fixt with an eternal revenge againſt him, as the Devils alſo do; and this is but the effect of ſelf-love, though the higheſt; which is all wickedneſs in the nature, in the principle of it, and diſpenſatorily, (if I may alluſively uſe this word, in this matter,) is all wickedneſs in the exerciſe of it, in the Body of Mankind. And certainly ſelf-love cannot be drawn out to more varieties of ſinfulneſs, and higher Actings of it, than the Divine Nature may be in the Saints, in contrary diſpoſitions of Ingenuity to God: And therefore, as all Sins, ſo all graces have acted in ſome Saints or other towards God, and their Brethren Saints; even ſo as to die for one another, (as John ſpeaks,) as the opportunity hath been. God will be as ſure to give the experiments of the workings of graces of all ſorts as well as ſins; and though not in the parallel perfection for degrees, yet for kinds.

Now parallel to theſe things, bring your ſins, and temptations, all ye Saints, before the God of all grace: Will grace in us, and will ſin in us, ſtretch to all ſorts of the actings of each ſuppoſable, and ſhall not Gods grace, who hath the title of the God of all grace? He is ſaid to be the god of all grace; and his grace being the pattern of all ours, and infinitely exceeding it, then how much more ſhall he do the like, by the exerting of his grace upon all occaſions of it, in all caſes, yea the worſt? Doth God declare himſelf in this manner to be the God of all Grace, in the high Divine principles thereof, and ſhall he not to thoſe to whom he hath ſaid I will be gracious, put it forth upon all occaſions, which are his opportunities to glorifie his grace by?

Conſider, Secondly, How that not only our Graces will thus extend, and may be thus acted, as hath been ſaid, but further, himſelf Commands us poor Creatures, who have yet but little grace in us, (narrow Veſſels are we in this reſpect) yet to abound in every grace, 2 Cor. 8. 7. Therefore (as ye abound in every thing; in faith, and utterance, and knowledge, and in all diligence, and in your love to us; ſee that ye abound in this grace alſo. Obſerve how 'tis ſpoken concerning the relieving of the neceſſities of others, in their wants; concerning which he gives this particular Command, See that ye abound, as in every thing, ſo in this grace alſo: And however poor Creatures fall ſhort in the performance of theſe Commands, yet the ſcope and intent of God's Command is and there is that in our grace which might be wrought up to it, that it ſhould be drawn out as any occaſion and opportunity is offered to exerciſe it: Nor is there any way ſuppoſeable, for ſo I ſtate it, wherein to ſhew forth any grace, of any kind but the intent of the Command reacheth it: And do you think that God himſelf, that commands this of us, and that profeſſeth this ſtile of himſelf, that he is the God of all grace, in order to the relieving of our wants, whom he hath taken care of; do you think he will not abundantly ſupply you? As in the ſeventh verſe of this Chapter in Peter the Apoſtle had aforehand aſſured us; for in that he ſaith, he declares himſelf to be the God of all grace to his called ones, it doth not only ſhew what he is in himſelf, but it intimates, and inſinuates a Promiſe of ſhewing himſelf the God of all grace to them: And if in theſe his Commands he doth bind, and oblige us unto Obedience, then ſurely he himſelf obligeth himſelf by his Promiſes to perform them: The very ſame thing that he commands us towards others, the ſame he will himſelf certainly fulfil. Alas! we are Creatures ungracious, and have no grace but what he puts into us: And ſhall God, that is the Fountain and Original of all Grace, that requires this of us, not execute it himſelf? Certainly yes: God ſaith, as it were himſelf, I am a holy God, true, juſt, faithful, (as was ſaid to us before) I abound in all theſe, and in every Perfection elſe; Shall I not abound in this Grace alſo, to relieve the ſpiritual needs of my poor Children, that have declared my ſelf to be a God of all grace? What doth the Apoſtle John ſay, 1 John 3. 17. Whoſo hath this worlds goods, and ſeeth his brother need, and ſhutteth up his bowels of Compaſſion from him; how dwelleth the love of God in him? If God ſpeak thus to us concerning a Brother, to us, I ſay, that love but in part, and O how little! yea, and in the verſe before, he commands us, if the caſe ſo calls for it, and require it of us, to lay down our lives for the bre-

brethren: And ſhall not that God, of whom the ſame Apoſtle John ſaith, that He is love it ſelf, Chap. 4. 16. God is love; that is, He is all love towards his own Children; for that is the meaning of it there: And of whom he alſo ſaith immediately, afore the aforecited Speech, in the fixteenth verſe of the third Chapter, Hereby perceive we the love of God, becauſe he laid down his life for us; and thereupon he obliges us, and we ought to lay down our lives for the Brethren: Shall not he, I ſay, if he ſeeth a Son of his in pure need of ſpiritual grace, and deliverance out of Temptation, ſhall not he draw out his bowels towards him? Or elſe it would be ſaid, How doth this Love, this All-grace, by which the Apoſtle Peter here ſets him forth; how doth it dwell in him, the Fountain of all Grace and Love? And he perſwades and obligeth us to lay down our lives for, and relieve our Brethrens needs, becauſe he hath profeſſed to love us ſo, as to lay down his life for us. Chap. 2.

Now to Apply this: Suppoſe that Chriſt himſelf were alive, or that any were alive that were commiſſionated by him to heal all manner of Diſeaſes, as the Apoſtles were, Matth. 10. 1. would any of you that had (I'le make the ſuppoſition) the worſt Diſeaſe that ever any man had, yea, that you had never heard of to have been ſince the World began; wouldſt thou refuſe to make trial, whether he would, or could heal thee, or no? Now God hath ſet up his Bills, as I may ſay, upon every poſt, proclaiming himſelf to be the God of all grace, the God that healeth thee, Exod. 15. 26. and elſewhere hath applyed it unto Souls, That healeth all thy diſeaſes, and forgives all thy ſins, Pſal. 103. That healeth thy backſlidings, Hoſ. 14. 4. and often backſliding is the moſt deſperate caſe of all other; yet the God of all grace hath undertaken to heal them. And as bad a caſe as a Saint is capable of after Calling, is that in Iſa. 57. 17. For the iniquity of his covetouſneſs was I wroth, and ſmote him; I hid me, and was wroth; and he went on frowardly in the way of his heart. He did not only fall into interrupted or intermitted Acts of backſliding, but he went on, as in a courſe for a while, in the way of his heart, and that frowardly: Well, but what ſaith the God of all grace to this? I have ſeen his ways, and will heal him, verſe 18. And Hoſea gives this his reaſon of it, even becauſe he is a God of grace, verſe 2. and loves freely, verſe 4. I will heal their backſliding, and I will love them freely; that's the reaſon of it: And receive us graciouſly, ſay they accordingly, verſe 2. when they return to him; ſo will we render the calves of our lips. The Love that is in the heart of God, will in the end cauſe him to turn all Anger, towards them, away: For mine anger is turned away from him, as it follows in the ſame, verſe 4. And I will be (anew) as the dew unto Iſrael, and he ſhall grow as the Lilly, and ſo forth; Who is wiſe, and he ſhall underſtand theſe things; prudent, and he ſhall know them: For the ways of the Lord are right, and the juſt ſhall walk in them; though they may often fall in their way: but the tranſgreſſors, that were never ſavingly called, ſhall fall, if they perſiſt, therein. It is the Concluſion of that Chapter and Prophecy, and ſerves to prove this other place in Peter, That God is the God of all grace in diſpenſing ſupplies anſwerable to the needs, diſtreſſes, temptations, and ſins of his Elect Children.

III. He is a God of all grace eſſentially; or in reſpect that in his Nature he hath infinite riches of grace, which is the Root and Fountain of theſe his deſigns, to maintain and make good this his All-Diſpenſatory of Grace: He is the God of all grace; that is, he is an All-gracious God in himſelf, even as well as that he is ſaid to be a God Almighty, which is an eſſential Attribute. He ſays not, that God is all grace, for he is juſt alſo: As when 'tis ſaid he is Almighty, it imports not that he hath no Attribute elſe: But he ſays, he is a God of All Grace; that is, that no Perfection that ſhould make him eſſentially gracious, is wanting in him: He is an All-gracious God, and ſo in his Nature: There is a Sea of Grace in him, to feed all the Streams that his purpoſes or diſpenſations of Grace are to iſſue forth: And ſo our Conſolation from hence is, That all the Grace that is the Nature of God, is in this Promiſe, of his being a God of all Grace to his Children, declared to be engaged to afford ſupplies unto his poor People, even to the utmoſt expendings and layings forth of thoſe riches

riches upon them, as their need ſhall require: And further, that in all his diſpenſations of Grace, he will ſhew himſelf gracious as God, and to be a great God of Grace; that is, he will be gracious ſuitably, and at the rate of the greatneſs of his being God, or of ſo great a God: This David (the greateſt Subject, and Favourite, and Adorer of this Grace, that we find in the Old Teſtament) was apprehenſive of, and it took his Heart and Faith, 1 Cor. 17. 19. According to thine own heart haſt thou doue this: And it follows, O Lord! there is none like thee; none beſides thee: that is, Thou art a God of Grace; (For it was a point of Grace, and of high Grace he there ſpeaks it of) and ſheweſt thy ſelf ſo to be; for he ſpeaks it of his Covenant of Grace with him in Chriſt, then newly declared to him. And verſe 18, he ſays, What can David ſay more? As if he had ſaid, The favour, the thing it ſelf is too great for me, that I can ſay nothing to it: But if God will have it to be, even as Paul: What ſhall we ſay to theſe things? If God be for us, &c. ſo David here; He ſpeaks as an aſtoniſht man that could ſay no more: The greatneſs of the thing made him ſilent; but he conſidered that God had done it out of his Greatneſs, as God: Thus if he pardons, he pardons after the rate and manner of a great God: He will abundantly pardon; not according to your thoughts, (ſaith he) but my thoughts: Iſai. 55. 8. As the Heavens are higher than the Earth, ſo are my thoughts in pardoning: (For 'tis of pardoning abundantly that he utters this, verſe 7.) for this ſets his Children a wondring at him; Who is a God like our God? pardoning, &c. Micah. 7, 8. Yet withal there obſerve, how his pardoning mercies in the exertings, and diſpenſings of them, are limited to the remnant of his inheritance; Free-grace's Subjects, as I call them.

And as it is thus in pardoning, ſo in all other exertings of pure grace, what ever they be, towards the remnant of his inheritance: He doth them all, as a great God. Thus David, 2 Sam. 7. ſpeaks of the advancement of himſelf and his Houſe to the Kingdom; which ended in the promiſe of Chriſt: Which in Verſ. 18, 19. he ſpreads afore the Lord, Then went King David In, and ſat before the Lord; and he ſaid, who am I, O Lord God? and what is my Houſe, that thou haſt brought me hitherto? And this was yet a ſmall thing in thy ſight, O Lord God! But thou haſt ſpoken alſo of thy ſervants houſe, for a great while to come; and is this the manner of Man, O Lord God? The latter clauſe that I take hold of, is, is this the manner of Man, O Lord God? The Law of Men, as in the original, the intendment of which is, to diſcriminate Gods manner of dealings (in point of Grace) from Mans: And Grace being the ſoveraign in God, enacteth its Laws as well as Men-Soveraigns uſe to do: And with God, the purpoſes of his Grace to ſave his Children, are ſuprema lex, of all other with him; and all his wonted decrees of Grace, are made according to his Divine Greatneſs, or as God; and are infinitely differing from, and ſuperiour to thoſe of Men, though never ſo gracious: The height of our comfort, (which is the reſult of this paſſage of David's) lies in this; That in all his diſpenſations of grace, he is gracious as God, and as becomes the great God to be, and whom he takes on him to be, a God of all grace; and therein to act, and do for them, and to ſhew himſelf in ſuch a manner and meaſure, to be a God of all grace, as is worthy of ſo great a God in himſelf, and that he may be owned as ſuch a God; And how farr this will reach, never yet entred into the Heart of Man.

Now for me to ſet forth the infinite Ocean of the Mercy and grace of his Divine Nature, is not, ſhall not be the main part of this Diſcourſe: But how this may miniſter ſupport to us, comming in the rear to all the former; and how all the grace that is in God, is engaged to ſuccour us againſt Temptations; and that it will extend it ſelf to the utmoſt, to carry us through them; this I ſhall inſiſt on a little.

It is obſervable, to the end to ſhew, how this of the graciouſneſs of his Nature, is that which engageth it ſelf to make good the two forgone Aſſertions, about his Purpoſes and Diſpenſations; that then when God uttered that great Charter of Grace, I will be Gracious to whom I will be Gracious; (And that is the ſum of his decrees, or purpoſing Grace we have been ſpeaking of,) he

He prefaceth this unto it, I will cauſe All my goodneſs to paſs before Thee: That is, All the goodneſs that is in my ſelf and nature; And I will proclaim the name of the Lord afore Thee: that is, all that whereby my Nature, as to the point of Grace and Mercy, is to be made known to men: Then, and after that, come in, [I will be Gracious to whom I will be gracious:] The reſolve of which two Paſſages, thus joyned together, is, That on whom God's Heart and Will, (which directs his Grace to the Perſons whom, and how,) is ſet to be gracious by Election, (which is called the good pleaſuure of his will, or the gracious purpoſe of his will,) there he intereſteth all the Goodneſs of his Nature; and it remains ingaged for their good. And to make demonſtration of this, he therefore cauſed the whole train of his goodneſs to paſs afore Moſes, to let him ſee, and to hearten him by ſeeing of it, how great a Strength, Magazine, and Treaſure of Power in Goodneſs, was ſtored up in him, to maintain that reſolution of his Will, when he ſaid, [I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious:] And to make good that ſpeech, further obſerve, That whereas at firſt God had there begun to declare his Grace, but particularly and perſonally unto Moſes his perſon, Thou haſt found Grace in my ſight; Verſ. 12, 13, 16, 17 of Exod. 33. Yet afore he did proclaim openly and publickly, all that his Goodneſs thereafter ſpecified, Chap. 34. or cauſed it to paſs afore Moſes, he, before it, declared this the Common Intereſts of all his Elect to be the ſame that Moſeſs was, in that matter of Grace ſo proclaimed; The Lord, the Lord gracious, &c. declared firſt, I ſay, in that clauſe, I will be mercifull, to whom I will, &c. thereby ſhewing, that what was ſaid and done to Moſes herein, concerned the Bulk and whole Body of the Election; that they all, (being called) might view and take comfort in that Proclamation of all his goodneſs in that Proclamation, Chap. 34. 5, 6, 7, And the Lord deſcended in the Cloud, and ſtood with him there, and proclaimed the Name of the Lord: And the Lord paſſed before him and proclaimed, The Lord, The Lord God, mercifull and gracious, long-ſuffering and abundant in goodneſs and truth: Keeping mercy for thouſands, forgiving iniquity, and tranſgreſſion, and ſin; and that will by no means clear the guilty: Viſiting the iniquity of the Fathers upon the Childeren, and upon the Childrens Children, unto the third and forth generation: Juſt as in Rom. 8. verſ. ult: ordine inverſo (though in an inverted method) you find the unſeparableneſs of God's Love to the whole lump, Verſ. 35, 36, 37. loudly proclaimed in the ſingle Name of Paul, Verſ. 38, 39. for I am perſwaded that neither death, nor life, nor Angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things to come; Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, ſhall be able to ſeparate us from the Love of God, which is in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord: The juſt Inference from both which Inſtances is, That what God in point of Grace is to one, that He is to all of his Elect; and what He is to all (as to their intereſt in Grace,) that he is to every perſon of them: yea, and withal, That that his Proclamation there to Moſes, is to ſhew, that he is Gracious as He is the great God; (which is that I have been a ſaying all this while:) for in the forepart of that Proclamation he firſt ſtiles himſelf, and that three times; 1. The Lord; 2. The Lord; 3. God; to ſhew that he is Gracious as God, as the Great God: And that Grace and mercy are inherent in his Divine nature, and his being; and alſo to ſhew, that all in him as God, is turned into Grace and Mercy towards thoſe he will be Gracious unto: As when the Apoſtle ſays, God is Love, all Love; So then, you have all the eſſential Grace in God, which is rooted in his being God, the whole of the goodneſs that is in God, and that turn'd into Grace, to back and uphold your faith: And what ingagements greater can your Souls deſire?

Chap. 2.

Condſier then, thou Called ſoul; called with a holy Calling, (I ſpeak as to this point only now to ſuch) that through that little chink, or narrow paſſage from death to life, thy Effectuall calling, wich was thy firſt enterance into thy Eternity, thou maiſt (as through a ſmall Cranny we uſe to view the Sun;) firſt contemplate that purpoſing Grace of Gods Will ſet on thee; (for by Calling, Election is made ſure;) And then again, through that being thus fixt on thee, thou maiſt behold an Infinite boundleſs Ocean of Grace, and Love, beyond

Book IV. that of his Will, and Purpoſes, which is in his Divine nature, and maiſt draw into thy Soul to fill it: Enlarge (and a little of God ſoon fills us) All and the whole thereof, for thy comfort and ſupport, haurire Dietatem (as he ſaid). Calling will bring thee to Election: And therein if by thy calling, with the ſpirit of God ſhedding abroad his Love into thy Heart, thou findeſt God knows thee by Name, (as he ſaid to Moſes; And Chriſt knows his ſheep by Name, and is known of His;) thou wilt further find this little word, or ſentence of God, I will be gracious, to whom I will be gracious, will be as a Sluce ſet open, and all the Grace and Mercy in Gods Nature will through it flow in upon thee as thine, for thy Heart to Swim in the abundant Conſolation of.

May I take the boldneſs for an improvement of this Head, to make a Suppoſition; (which yet is not truly to be made on Gods part, but which in caſe thy unbelief ſhould make; and how wicked ſuppoſals that Forge will make, and bring out, we find too much by experience;) we will therefore make it, and give thee a ſupport beyond it, drawn from this Topick Head; The Engagement of the Grace of God in the Divine Nature, where Calling and Election have once for ever fixt themſelves: The ſuppoſition which thy unbelief might make, is this; That thou feareſt, leſt God in his purpoſes of Grace, had been too narrow, as to thy particular Allotment: And thou ſhouldeſt imagine they may have been too ſcant, and faln ſhort through thy too prodigal expenſiveneſs in ſinnings, or remiſs neglects of ſo great Salvation ſince thy Calling; So as they ſhould not have been large enough to ſerve thy turn as to the diſcharge of what thoſe infinite arrears ariſe unto, beyond that particular portion of Mercy, his Will made at firſt, and allotted thee; (I alluding to that of the Prodigal his portion:) but that thou hadſt ſin'd beyond the extent of purpoſing Grace. As if God had not ſet apart Grace and Mercy enough in thoſe his Legacies and bequeathments, in his Decreeing, or Purpoſing Will; and that it had not Clauſes ſo full, and large enough, nor proviſo's for number, or variety ſufficient, that may reach all thy Caſes, and Aggravations of ſinnings: And ſo out of the dreadful view of theſe, or ſuch like vain Imaginations, thy Faith and Spirits ſink, and deſpond.

Though this would be in thee, or any, a moſt wicked ſuppoſition, and derogatory to the foreknowledge of God, who knew all thy thoughts aforehand, and what thy ſins would be; Yet if thou wouldeſt but further ſuppoſe, and believe, that He hath bound over All, and the whole of thoſe vaſt, and boundleſs, unſearcheable mines of Grace, that are in His Nature, to afford wherewith to diſcharge his called and choſen ones of ſinnings, though never ſo grievous; and that his purpoſing had kept them from ſo falling, as is utterly incompatible with Grace: Certainly this engagement of the Grace in his Nature, may beyond the former, enſure thee againſt all ſuch fears and ſuppoſitions: For to be ſure this Grace can afford Aſſets, and ſufficient enough to relieve againſt all; againſt whatſoever hath faln out, or ſhall fall out, to forgive what is paſt, and to prevent for the future what threatneth to deſtroy thee, as thou Judgeſt.

Uſe 1. You call Uſes Applications; I will give you one properly ſo called, which preſſeth you to ſeek to apply all this to your ſelves. That God is a God of all Grace, is as I have handled it but a general to, and among all Saints. But the Query may be, what may I, or You, or any particular Saint apply to our ſelves of all this? You find an Example of the Application I intend, made to your hands by David, it is in Pſal. 57. 10. The God my of mercy ſhall prevent me. God the God of all Grace, that is the Doctrine; but The God of mercy ſays David; And again, Verſ. laſt, He is the God of my Mercy, That's the Application. And this uſage of Speech is no where elſe in Scripture. The God of all Grace, ſays Peter, to the Brotherhood, But The God of my mercy ſays David for himſelf. The greateſt Application you can make of any thing, is to be able to ſay, This is mine. All the ſtirs in the World, are about Meum and Tuum, Mine and Thine: As Luther ſaid, There is more force in Pronouns, Meum and Tuum, than in any words. If a man be abſolute to ſay, The Grace of God is mine, it is no matter what elſe thou canſt ſay is thine, if thou canſt ſay, the God of my mercy.

mercy. I will give you what ſenſes either are, or may be put upon that paſſage to comfort you in this way of application. And they are reduced unto thoſe Three Heads, which in the Doctrinal part I have gone upon, of Grace in Gods Diſpenſations, of the Grace in his Purpoſes, and of the Grace in his Nature. Chap. 2.

1. The firſt ſenſe may be, Take mercy as it ſignifies the mercies given from or beſtowed by God, diſpenſatorily. Thou mayſt ſay to this God, He is the God of all the mercies, that any way belong to me, or that I ever have need of; Begin we there. Brethren, it is a wonderful condeſcention, that God ſhould make this an Attribute of Himſelf, I am the God of the mercy of every particular Saint of mine: That as he is thy God, the God of thee perſonally, ſo alſo of thy Mercies, it notes out that He hath taken this on him as an Office.

When any one takes a Title upon him of a particular thing, it argues his undertaking the charge thereof, and that he puts himſelf under a truſt, and enters into the Bond of Faithfulneſs to perform it, as to ſay, One is a Guardian of a Child, or Steward of ones Houſe, it betokens an Office, a truſt, and engageth to faithfulneſs: For the great God to ſay, I am Deus tibi à miſericordiis, I am the God of all thy Mercies, it imports a devoting himſelf to take care of all the mercies that ſhall any way concern thee. And when God takes a title upon him, it becomes his Name, and God will not take his own Name in vain; to be ſure He will perform his truſt. That's one ſenſe, and it is a comfortable one.

2. The ſecond is this, That every Saint hath in purpoſing grace a ſet and ſufficient portion for him of grace and mercy ſet apart and allotted to him, which he may call his mercy, [My Mercy]. Suppoſe thou ſhouldſt not need all the mercy that is in Gods nature for thine own particular, yet be ſure God in his Decrees, hath ſet apart a portion big enough for thee, and that is Thy Mercy, a portion ſo large, that it ſhall never be exhauſted either by thy ſins or miſeries, which is Gods meaning to the Apoſtle, 2 Cor. 12. My Grace is ſufficient for thee; And Pauls meaning in that ſpeech of his, Phil. 3. [THAT] for which I was apprehended by Chriſt, THAT is, THAT which was allotted me by God for Chriſt to give forth to me, it was his portion; there is a Phraſe carries it to this ſenſe in Pſal. 59. 10. The God of my mercy ſhall or doth prevent me, or hath prevented me.

1. If we read it, He hath prevented me, the meaning is, there is no kind of need I can have, but the God of my mercy hath prevented me in his purpoſes from Eternity; As a careful Father, he lays up plaiſters ready ſpread againſt the time, knowing that his Children will cut their fingers. In the Text it is ſaid, God careth for you; care is that which forecaſts what will fall out, and orders what may prevent it. He hath made proviſion beforehand by his mercy for whatever I ſhall need of any kind, and in that reſpect, He is the God of my mercy. That's the firſt.

Or, 2ly. He ſhall or doth prevent me, I am in a diſtreſs and I pray, and God oftentimes prevents me, and my Prayer. He comes in the Nick, in due time, as if he had laid in wait. I can no ſooner pray, yea, often before I pray, he doth the thing for me: Why? for he is the God of my mercy, He prevents me. In the confidence of which, Verſ. 8. ſays he, God ſhall laugh at them, ſpeaking of his Enemies deliverance from them, was the mercy he ſpeaks of. If one ſtood on the top of a Watch-Tower that belongs to a City (as in Holland they are wont) and ſaw an Army coming againſt that Town, and withal ſaw a ſtronger army (as Eliſha did) that would certainly prevent them, he would in that caſe certainly laugh all the while to ſee what a ſtir the one kept, and what a do they made, and all in vain, and in the like confidence hereof David concludes, he is the God of my defence, the God of my mercy; For he hath prepared a defence for every aſſault of the enemy; And the ſame holds true of ſpiritual enemies.

3. You may interpret it of the Mercy in the nature of God, and in that ſenſe you may ſay all the mercies that are in God are my mercies, carry it home with thee. In this ſame Pſalm, you find him ſaying, I will ſing aloud

Book IV. OF THY MERCY, verſ. 16. he calls it God's Mercy; and yet verſeult. The God of my Mercy: The meaning is, that all the mercy of God is my mercy, I can lay claim to it as need is. And the reaſon of it is pregnant; for, Is God our God? If ſo, then all the mercies in God, upon the ſame account, are our mercies; yea, it was mercy in him that moved him to become our God at firſt, and that made him make himſelf over to us: So that, if thou canſt ſay, (poor Soul) The God of my mercy, this doth contract the whole of God's being, and all the grace in him to thy ſelf. Art thou called? Do but lay thy eye through that little hole of Vocation, as through a Perſpective; that is, through this Conſideration, I am one whom God hath called with a Holy Calling, and ſaved; and ſo thou maiſt draw in all of God through that little hole; even all the grace in God's Nature hath an inlet through that Sluce, and comes in upon thee, and thy Faith may take it in this one expreſſion, I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, ſets open (as I ſaid) the Flood-gates of all in the Nature of God, to a poor Soul, to whom God hath been gracious in calling him. Shall I ſpeak a very big word to you, and ſo end? You heard, God is the God of all grace to the Brotherhood: I tell thee, if any one Soul had all the needs that all the Brotherhood have, if nothing would ſerve his turn, but all the grace of God that he hath for the whole, yea in the whole of himſelf, he would lay it out for thee. The Lord help us to conſider theſe things, for they are true. Poor Soul, thou uſeſt to ſay, This or that is my ſin, and it is ſo; a grievous ſin perhaps, and I am prone to it: And again, this is my miſery, but withal, I beſeech thee to conſider, that God is the God of thy mercy, and that all the mercy in God, upon occaſion, and for a need, is thine, and all upon as good a title as that ſin is thine: For the free donation of God, and of his Will, is as good a title as the inheritance of ſin in thee.

Uſe 2. You have heard what God is in his Grace: Shall I invite you to the latter part of an Intercourſe, which as great a Subject, yea indeed a Favourite of Free-grace, as ever any, had with God, when his Soul was fill'd and flush'd with the apprehenſion of God's Free-grace towards him, when he hung as a little Globe of glaſs in the Sun, as full of glory, ſhining through and through him, as he could take in or hold? Shall I bring you where you may liſten to, and over-hear at what a rate ſuch a Soul talks and ſpeaks to God, when he is in ſuch a frame? You find it in 2 Sam. 7. 8. to the 23d. David ſate before the Lord, and he ſaid, Who am I, O Lord God! and what is my houſe, that thou haſt brought me hitherto? And this was yet a ſmall thing in thy ſight, O Lord God, but thou haſt ſpoken alſo of thy Servants houſe for a great while to come, and is this the manner of man, O Lord God? And what can David ſay more unto thee? for thou Lord knoweſt thy ſervant; for thy word ſake, and according to thine own heart haſt thou done all theſe great things to make thy ſervant know them; wherefore thou art great, O Lord God, for there is none like thee, neither is there any God beſide thee, according to all that we have heard with our ears.

God had firſt begun with him, and had thereby ſet his Soul thus on fire: God had ſaid his ſay by Nathan; which that Concluſion unto what had foregone in verſe 17. According to all thoſe words, and this Viſion, ſo did Nathan ſpeak to David from God, ſhews. It would be too long to enlarge on the forepart of this viſit made by God, in that of the foregoing Chapters; only this I will ſay, There was never any Favourite ſo courted and careſſed by any great King, as David had been by God before this. The occaſion God took to expreſs what he did to him was, There came into the heart of David a motion to build God an Houſe, and it was Free-grace from God that put that into David's Heart too. For God doth but pump, (if I may ſo ſay) 'tis but as putting in water to draw out more, he puts in Grace, and we return it; and God took this kindly: Verſ. 2. David had ſaid, I dwell in an houſe of Cedar, but the Ark of God dwelleth within Curtains. So he would build God an houſe; God took this kindly, for God takes advantage to expreſs his love to us. David had ſpoken this as to day, God took it ſo kindly, and his heart was ſo full of it, that that very night, as you read verſ. 4. he ſays to Nathan, Go and tell my ſervant David, &c. he would not defer one moment Anſwer. The grace of God is often ſeen in ſwift returns, and anſwers to our Prayers; and the Meſſage is all of Grace. God pours out his heart upon him, from verſ. 8. to 18. And let me only add this, That in all this Meſſage of Gods about building, to David, an Houſe, and about his Son, David eyed Chriſt, and underſtood it ſo; for Hebr. 1. 5. what God ſays here of David's Solomon, I will be to him a Father, and he ſhall be to me a Son, refers unto the 14*th verſe* of this very Chapter, and yet is there plainly applied to Chriſt, and that David underſtood it ſo, that of Peter warrants, Acts 2. 30. David being a Prophet, and knowing that God had ſworn with an Oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the fleſh, he would raiſe up Chriſt to ſit on his Throne, &c. Therefore he eyed Chriſt, and his eternal Salvation in him, as Abraham did in Iſaac, and ſaw Chriſt's day: And verſe 21. of this Chapter inſinuates this; For thy words ſake, ſays he, (that is, for thy Chriſt's ſake) and according to thine own heart haſt thou done this. Nay, there had been no former word delivered unto David about this, which he ſhould here refer to, therefore that word is Chriſt, ὁ λόγος, like that of Daniel, Chap. 9. For the Lord's ſake. Chap. 2

What God is to us in point of grace, is not my buſineſs now, the Doctrine hath cleared that enough. It is the after-part, David's reception and entertainment of all this from God, and how his heart took it, that I would make you to over-hear, and work an impreſſion of upon you anſwerable thereto. Thus is it will concern you for a pattern and example to you, and will ſerve as a proper Uſe of this Doctrine.

Now then, thou that profeſſeſt thy ſelf a Subject of Free-grace, come and ſit down a little with David, for as, Verſ. 18. David ſat down when he uttered this, and let his Meditation be thine; what David ſays of his Houſe and Kingdom, apply thou to thy Soul, for that was chiefly in David's Eye: My houſe indeed is not ſo, as I had hoped (ſays he) but thus is my (perſonal) Salvation; 2 Sam. 23. yet God hath made with me an everlaſting Covenant, ordered in all things and ſure, for this is all my Salvation and all my deſire. 'Tis true, thou haſt no Meſſias to come out of thy Loins, as David had; thou haſt no earthly Kingdom to be advanced to; but thou haſt greater things; though thou haſt not Chriſt to come out of thy Loins, yet thou haſt Chriſt to dwell in thy Heart, and that is more; Chriſt to be formed in thee, as the Apoſtle ſays in the Galatians; and thou art more intimately one with him, than if thou hadſt been his Forefather, yea his Mother, or hadſt had him in thy womb; for that alone is but an outward priviledge of the Fleſh, as Rom. 9. yea, and as Chriſt ſpeaks it of his Mother and Brethren: And though thou haſt not an earthly Kingdom, yet thou art intereſſed in the true Kingdom of David, as that of glory is called, Luke 1. 32. The Lord God ſhall give unto him the Throne of his Father David &c. And what David here ſpeaks of his Houſe, Verſ. 19. as for a long time to come, thou mayſt apply to Heaven, thou haſt a Houſe, not made with Hands, eternal in the Heavens; 2 Cor 5. 1. And (as I ſaid) the truth is, David is fain (as for his own perſon) to betake himſelf to this at laſt. Now this premiſed, I will go over David's ſpeech, and do thou in ſuch a way apply it to thy ſelf all along.

1. Says he, what is my Houſe, that thou haſt brought me hitherto? Alas had God ſaid; Thou wert a Shepherd, Verſ. 8. I took thee from the Sheep-cote; from following the Sheep, to be Ruler over my People, over Iſrael, and have made thee a great name, like unto the great Men that are on the Earth.

Now, what in lieu of this canſt thou ſay? I was dead in ſins and treſpaſſes, an Aſſyrian ready to periſh. By grace thou art ſaved, and he hath cauſed thee to ſit in Heavenly places with Chriſt Jeſus. To David God only ſaid, I have made thee like unto the great Men that are but in the earth; but he hath made thee a greater name, like unto the name of thoſe that ſit with Jeſus Chriſt in Heaven. The Lord called and converted thee, when thou waſt in thy Blood and filth, and caſt out to the loathing of thy perſon; and he ſaid unto thee, live; and he called thee the firſt moment of thy being called into eternal glory, into as perfect right of it, as ever thou ſhalt have when thou ſhalt have been millions ons of years in Heaven, and God hath hitherto kept thee, and thou maist say as David did here, Lord thou hast brought me hitherto: How many temptations hast thou had to sin? How many reducements and deliverances? And the more thy Temptations have been, the more of his Power has been expended in keeping thee. Thou hast been like a Ship at Anchor, held by a straw, as to thine own sense, and yet held. Thou hast reason to thank God thou hast been brought hitherto, that thou hast escaped so well, and hast had so good Quarter in the World: Thou hast escaped many sins and scandals, thou mightest have fain into, but God kept thee: This the first.

Then Secondly, David being overpowred with Free-grace in his Soul, said WHO AM I, O LORD? Do thou also put these two together, Who am I, O thou great God! Set that dust of the Balance (I) a Creature, and (I) a Sinner, with the great God, the high and lofty One that inhabitest Eternity, and humble thy self to the dust in the sense of thy nothingness and baseness.

Then thirdly, take the next words of David, and this was yet a small thing in thy sight, O Lord God, but thou hast spoken also of thy servants house for a great while to come; and is this the manner of Man, O Lord God! (the word is, is this the Law of Man?) His purpose in that phrase is (as the opposition shews) to set in comparison the wont, the Law, the usage of Gods Free-grace, with the manner or Law of Mens kindnesses, so to aggrandise it. God comes with some one, and that so great a kindness, that shall make a Man think, and justly, what can be more? And yet before he hath done with him, he will make that but a small thing in comparison with others. Free-grace, after calling, loves to exceed it self, outdo it self in what it hath done. God will still do as Christ said to Nathaniel, Dost thou wonder at this? Thou shalt see greater things than these, thou shalt see the Heaven opened, Joh. 1. ult. I shall give you some instances.

1. Look to thy first calling; wer't thou called with seeing thy sin? And was thy Heart changed then, and sanctified withal, and didst thou find the Image of God spick and span new in thee? Thou thoughtst this wondrous great—— But then,

2. Thou foundest that all this would not justifie thee, and thereupon all thy Sanctification became but a small thing to thee; and O! Then did thy Soul cry, Blessed is the Man whose sin is covered; and O that I had Christs righteousness to cover my sin! And then thou esteemest all thy sanctification but as dross and dung in comparison of being found in Christ, not having thine own righteousness, but the righteousness of Faith, &c. And what a do hadst thou after that first work of Sanctification, to work thy self out of that thy new-created righteousness, and to obtain that of Christ's?

3. When thou hadst pursued thus after Justification through the Blood of Christ, and hadst obtained some quiet and easment, and perhaps thereby assurance, then Adoption appeared, and thereupon Justification alone and Pardon became but a small thing to thee, when you were assured of being a Son, an Heir, a Co-heir with Christ; and then your Soul began to rejoyce with a new joy, as Rom. 5. 2, 3. we rejoyce in hope of the glory of God.

4. Then Union with Christ and being one with him came in to view: And then how did thy Soul value this above all, and pursued after it accordingly, even to know, that as the Father lives in the Son, so that the Son lives in me: As John 14. 20. And upon this, all those former priviledges simply considered, became but small things, John 17. 22, 23. you will find union with Christ preferred to glory; And in the glory which thou gavest me, I have given them, that they may be one, even as we are one; I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one, &c.

5. And not only so, but we joy in God, Rom. 5. 11. through Christ, God is to become all in all. And thus still as thou goest on farther and farther, so Free grace presents thee with new things, greater and greater; and although thou maist have known and heard of all these priviledges at first, yet they were not set on with an impression worthy of them, but that was done by such a gradual succession, as hath been shewed. Yea I add,

6. Suppose

6. Suppoſe thou hadſt been millions of Ages in Heaven, and there been ſatiated with the fullneſs of God and Chriſt, yet thou wilt then ſay, Lord hitherto thou haſt brought me; but this is but a ſmall thing, a finite portion of time of enjoyment hitherto, compared to Eternity; Eternity is for a long time to come indeed, (as David here;) the thoughts of which do multiply our joys by every moment wherein we are yet to enjoy them. Chap. 2.

So as I may really ſay of this ſeries of Diſpenſations, what your new Projectours of Philoſophy have feigned; Say they, Every fixed Star is a Sun, and if we ſhould travel over and through the infinite Heavens, we ſhould meet ſtill with new Suns, which at this diſtance ſeem but Stars, and then this Sun it ſelf would become to view but as a Star, when they are aſcended up ſo far above it: Now 'tis certain that Chriſt himſelf conſidered as God-man, & as now ſhining in his Diſpenſatory Kingdom, is but as the bright morning Star unto God himſelf, when he ſhall be all in all. ——— But to return again to David. Rev. 22. 16. 1 Cor. 15.

4. What doth David further ſay to all theſe things? even this, what can David ſay more unto thee? For thou Lord knoweſt thy ſervant. He ſpeaks as a man nonpluſt, his thoughts ſwallowed up his words, as Jobs; he could go no farther, ſeeing that as a Creature he could make no proportionable return, nor acknowledgment, no not in words: And the Apoſtle alſo doth the like Rom. 8. when he had run his Courſe through all the Progreſſes of Free-grace, Verſ. 31. He ſtops with this, What ſhall we ſay to theſe things? I uſe to ſay, Faith is never nonpluſt; but we ſee that love is. Faith and Love divide that Verſe between them. If God be for us, who can be againſt us? That's the Voice of Faith: And therefore it hath ſtill to reply againſt all can be ſaid to the contrary; What ſhall we ſay to theſe things? For Love ſits down overcome and ſilenc'd therewith, and hath nothing to ſay, but to embrace them.

3. Says David, thou knoweſt thy ſervant, that is, 1. Thou knoweſt what my Heart is to thee, as Peter ſaid to Chriſt, Lord thou knoweſt I love thee; 2. He alſo reſolves all the grace of God beſtowed upon him into God's foreknowledg, Thou knoweſt me, and that by name: As of Moſes God ſaid, I know thee by name, Exod. 33. 12. 17. and what elſe is the intimate intent of his inſerting his own name in his ſpeech to God here [what can DAVID ſay more,] for Thou knoweſt thy ſervant: What was it to tell God his name? No; but it is as if he had ſaid, Thou haſt known David of old, whoſe name is ſweet unto thee; and therefore I am bold to mention it. Yea 3. And thou knoweſt my ſinfulneſs too, Thou knoweſt our frame, and that I am but duſt, duſt mingled with ſin, and that over-whelmeth me, that thou ſhouldſt have reſpect to ſuch a wretch, ſo as that I can ſay no more, but Who am I O Lord God!

6. And laſtly, do thou as he, fully admire afreſh the infinite greatneſs, freeneſs, and nobleneſs of his grace. For there are theſe three things farther in his Speech.

1. A knowledge of the freeneſs of that grace, that is, that God doth all this out of no principle, but his own Heart; (and that is properly grace) ſo ſays David, thou haſt done all theſe things out of thine own Heart, and from no other motive, and for thy Word ſake, Verſ. 21. that is Chriſt; for that theſe Promiſes reſpected Chriſt, I ſhewed afore.

2. The Nobleneſs of this grace. For no other End, ſays he, haſt Thou done this, but to make thy ſervant know them. When God ſhews mercy, He doth it but that you may know it, and bleſs him for it: As I ſaid, he loves, but becauſe he loves; ſo he ſhews love, but that we may know how much he doth and can love.

3. There is the greatneſs of this grace, verſ. 22. Wherefore thou art great, O Lord God, for there is none like thee: [Great] that is, in thy acts of grace, for in ſuch God had declared himſelf: Thou doſt all like the great God. Thou comeſt upon a Soul with thy greatneſs, but it is with the greatneſs of thy grace: And he compares it alſo with what man uſeth to do, Is this the manner of men?

You

Book IV.

You have now ſeen this Man in his heights; and it is a very high, and a gallant frame of heart that he was in; all mere Ingenuity toward God that he expreſſeth.———And who in ſuch a caſe would not have wiſht to have died? For thou couldſt not have died in a better time.

And let any Soul be but thus ſpirited, and hung as a Globe of glaſs in the Sun, as I ſaid, during this; and how will that Soul ſhrink, and faint, and ſink, but to think I ſhall ſin again, it would rather dye ten thouſand deaths.

But lo, as it is ſaid, 2 Kings. 23. 16. Joſiah turned himſelf and ſpyed the ſepulchers, &c. then ſaid he, what title is this I ſee?) I mention this but by way of Alluſion) Oh my Brethen, I turning but two pages off, no more, from this of 2 Sam. 7. which I have inſiſted on (as you may alſo do the like) and what titles are theſe I ſee? Over the 3 page David's Adultery, that's over the firſt Colume of it; then Uriah ſlain, that's over the ſecond. Is this the man we found even now in the 7th Chapt. in ſo great glory and ſo ſublimated with the grace of God, and that here we ſee in mire and filth? David had ſaid that when he was in his Elevation, what can David ſay more? But ſay I now, what could David do worſe? as the Prophet Jeremy ſaid Chap. 3. 5. Thou haſt ſpoken and done evil things as thou couldeſt.

And now I will again take up the Apoſtles words to another purpoſe, Brethren, what ſhall we ſay to theſe things? I will tell you what your Workmongers and Legaliſts that are oppoſite to Free-grace will ſay, Here's your Doctrine of Free-grace, you ſee what it comes to, and ends in: This would they ſay. Nay I'll tell you farther what God would have ſaid, if he had conſidered David as in a Covenant of works: My Covenant he hath broken, and I regard him not; yea, I will ſwear againſt him, he ſhall never enter into my reſt; I will never have to do with him: And Give me this man, would Juſtice have ſaid, to make a Trophee, an Example of to glorify this my Juſtice upon, which would have been more glorified on this man, than on a thouſand other ſinners who never knew what Free-grace meant.

But Let us hear what ſays Free-grace to theſe things. Conſider every one of you, though you have not had Bathſheba's to lye with, nor murthered Uriah's, yet you have had thoſe, or other ſuch luſts and paſſions, Envies and ſtrains of ſelf-love, unto a monſtroſity; and bearing your ſelves high upon your Eſtates, Names, &c. in this world, and reigning therein, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks: Well! but what doth the God of all Grace ſay to theſe things? I deſired you but even now to view David in theſe two Chapters, Chap. 7. and 11. Now I deſire you firſt to conſider what God had ſaid for his part to David in that very ſame 7th Chapter; And then ſecondly, what a punctual performance of it you read of, notwithſtanding all this, from the 11th Chapt. to the end of the ſtory.

Firſt Whereas you often have heard out of Pſal. 89. 35. how Free-grace had ſaid, Once have I ſworne by my holyneſs, that I will not lye unto David, my Covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips, nor fail David: (But David fail'd him.) Now ſtand and wonder: Where is it that this Covenant is to be firſt found; where but in this very 7th chapter we have been upon? There it is, and there firſt it was that God did give it forth [that once] for all; ſo v. 11. The Lord tels thee, that he will make thee an Houſe, and when thy days be fulfilled, I will ſet up thy Seed after thee, wich ſhall proceed out of thy bowells, and I will eſtabliſh his Kingdom; he ſhall build an Houſe for my Name, and I will eſtabliſh the Throne of his Kingdom for ever. I will be his Father & he ſhall be my Son; if he commit iniquity, I will chaſten him with the rod of men, and with the ſtripes of the Children of men, but my mercy ſhal not depart way from him, &c. Here's the very Covenant the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks of, and this was the firſt Revelation of it before David had expreſſed himſelf ſo, as I have been opening.

And here let me but remind you but of that one paſſage of David's thereupon Chap. 7. 20. Thou Lord God knoweſt thy ſervant: He knew him indeed, and knew not only how he had ſerved him afore this Covenant, but alſo how he would ſerve him, even ſo as in the 11 Chapter 5, you find he did. Indeed David ſpake that ſpeech, Thou knoweſt, &c. to another purpoſe; but God knew all this his Sin alſo that followed, and yet knowingly expreſt, and made this Covenant with him. I may ſay by alluſion to illuſtrate God's grace, what Daniel ſaid to aggravate Belſhazzars wickedneſs, Thou, O God, knoweſt all this: After that fatal Chapter, the 11th Chapt. we ſhall ſee the performance, and how Free-grace went on notwithſtanding to make good all this, & is as buſie at work about him to perform his promiſe, as if he had never ſinned; nay, when he was in that Eclipſe, David was as the Moon in the Heavens, and he was in motion to get out of it as the Moon alſo is. Therefore, Chap. 2.

Secondly, Let us conſult the Chapt. which follow after that: What Titles then do we ſee next? Chapt. 11. Nathan's parable, and David's repentance. And the what next that? Solomon is borne. That was a good lump of mercy, upon his repentance, at one birth after all this; for what was it but the beginning of performance of what he had promiſed and foretold in Chapt. 7. I will raiſe thee a Son, and I will be his Father, &c. The truth is, though God puniſht David in moſt of the reſt of his Childern; you know Amon raviſht his own ſiſter, and Abſalom killed Amon, and Joab his kinſman killed Abſalom, Solomon put to death Adonijah, and ſo they killed one another to the end of the ſtory, yet God took Solomon for his. Go on and look over the 22*th Chapt.* you have David there transfigured again, and as much in his robes of Glory as ever he was in: The Moon, that was in the eclipſe, is not only out of it, but ſhines as bright as ever.

This Pſalm was penned by David when he was old, as Interpreters generall ſay, and the oder of placing it in this ſtory together with, and juſt afore his laſt words, Chap. 23. and the title of it. Pſalm 18. [in the day when God had deliverd him from All] his enemies, Abſalom, Sheba, as alſo the comparing one of his laſt ſpeeches, 1 Kings 1. 29. and the paſſages of the Pſalm do ſhew. They all, ſays Muis, do refer unto his deliverances all along, and though from Saul is eſpecially mentioned, and laſt, yet it was becauſe that was the moſt eminent: and ſo now afore his death he having thoſe deliverances through thirty years paſt, freſh on his heart, having been the greateſt of any of the latter, he puts all together into one ſummary.

And then you find him, 1 Chron. 29. 11, 14. gathering materials for the Temple, which was the laſt work he did, and the beſt work that ever he did; better than killing of enemies, though in lawful war, which in the Type cauſed God to ſay, that he ſhould not build the Temple: and there again you ſhall find David in as gallant a frame upon that his offering, Verſ. 11. He is again at his acknowledging God's greatneſs, and at Who am I? Thine, O Lord, is the greatneſs and the glory, but who am I, and what is my People, that we ſhould be able to offer ſo willingly after this ſort? And this was not now for Kingdoms, or for an Houſe to ſucceed in them, which are the great things man is taken withal: No, but that he had wherewith to offer, and then for having an heart to offer ſo willingly; and though he gave God but his own, as he alſo there ſays, for the mercy hereof alone and ſimply conſidered, it was, that he humbled himſelf ſo deeply, even to duſt, whilſt he acknowledgeth this, and utters that great Thankſgiving for this alone. This proceeded from pure Grace in his heart, and from a more clarified and ſpiritualler habit of heart than the former, which might have much of Self mingled with it, and ſhews that by his ſinnings, he had learned to value ſerving and glorifying of God, more than his own exaltments.

I need not now inſiſt on that execellent Spirit of Faith we find him in, when he came to dye, 2 Sam. 23. 5. There he had ſeen ſomewhat to abate, and fall indeed, in the hope of his Houſe; I ſhall tell you my private opinion on it: When God had firſt talkt of making him an Houſe, beſides what God intended and performed in Solomon, &c. I conceive that he might have enlarged his thoughts about it unto this, that every one of his preſent Children ſhould be godly: You are all apt, when filled with the grace of God, or under great drawings near of God, to run out in your thoughts too far in ſome thing or other, and to form up ſome private Faith of your own, of having ſuch or ſuch a privilege, as perhaps perſwade your ſelves that all your Children ſhall be ſaved (having prayed for them at ſuch time, or the like;) but ſays poor David now, my houſe is not ſo; that is, ſuch as I had hoped they would have proved: Solomon and Nathan were good, reckoned in Chriſt's Genealogy, but for the reſt, we know not what they were: But yet ſays he, Though my Houſe be not ſo with God, he hath made with me an everlaſting Covenant, orderd in all things and ſure, for this is all my ſalvation, and all my deſire, although he make my houſe not to grow, as I once ſuppoſed he would.

And now let me once again repeat, What do you ſay to theſe things, when put thus alltogether? This I ſhall only ſay, Oh what is his man! the beſt of men? and what is God?

1. What is Man, a baſe unworthy, mutable, and ungracious Wretch? And 2. the ſecond is greater than this firſt; O what is God, even the God of All Grace! And ſo give me leave alſo to uſurp that ſpeech of David, and cloſe with it, What can thy ſervant ſay more?

CHAP.

CHAP. III.

God is the God of all Grace, with a diſcrimination to [US,] not to others; eſpecially ſuch others as have an imperfect Temporary work wrought in them; or he is the God of all Grace only to his Elect, whom he effectually calls and invincibly ſaves; not to others, whom he leaves to fall away.

I PETER V. 10.

——hath called [US]——

I Undertook for every word that it ſhould contribute to our Subject, either ſome addition unto the Illuſtration of the grace of God, the God of all grace; or the confirmation of our Faith in God's carrying US through Temptations unto glory, or unto both.

[US] here may ſeem to ſerve to no further uſe, than to denote thoſe to whom he wrote to be the perſons whom God had called, &c. and as lightly to be paſt over.

But I hope to make it appear, that it hath beſides this a further eminent and moſt emphatical importance; as if he had ſaid, God hath been to [US] a God of grace in our Calling, and in preſerving [US,] but ſo he is not [to Others] whom yet he calls, but leaves to fall away; and this will bring forth a new and great point for the exaltation of Free-grace towards us.

This Intention of Diſcrimination in this Expreſſion [US,] not [Others,] by the Apoſtle, will appear,

1. By the reality of the things here ſpoken by Peter.
2. By the import of the Phraſe [US].
3. From the Occaſion whereupon Peter uttered this Conſolation to the Church of God.

I. This Diſcriminating intent will appear from the Reality of the things ſpoken here by Peter in the Subſtantials of them, according as they have been already opened, when put together.

For, 1. That God doth, out of ſpecial Grace, call [US] as a God of grace to [US,] this in Scripture language elſewhere imports, that there are others whom he calls not out of grace, but from ſome other Principle in himſelf: Thus expreſly Rom. 8. 28. The called according to his purpoſe; which in 2 Tim. 1. 9. is further explained to be, as in the Text, A Calling according to his own purpoſe and grace, and the other part of the diſtinction is added, not according to works. Theſe both are in thoſe Scriptures intended for apparent Notes of diſtinction of a Calling of [US] out of Grace as the cauſe, from calling of Others from out of his Providence; and which is carried on according unto works. Theſe note a difference in the Tenure of Callings; the Original Tenure which they hold of, ours holds in capite, in Free-hold of Grace; but others have theirs in Copy-hold of Works, and but Dum bene ſe geſſerint, If thou doſt well, thou ſhalt be accepted. So that [US] here the Subjects of the God of grace calling them, doth in that reſpect ſecretly imply and connotate with it, and a Not Others, who yet have a ſort of Calling.

BOOK IV. 2. Thoſe words hath called, taken as the effect of Grace as the Cauſe, note out a difference of calling for the kind of it, and that theſe are ſome others that have a Calling different; and this difference we alſo have in 2 Tim. 1. 9. expreſly, Hath called us, [with an holy calling] It is a Diſcrimination that too, which likewiſe doth implicitly note that there are Others called, but not with an holy calling; and ſo ſtill [US] not Others, is the voice of both theſe Apoſtles, and is to be underſtood in the reality of it, to be Peter's intention. Now the priviledge promiſed to the [US] here, who are thus called is, that we ſhould be perfected, ſtrengthned, &c. which notes out this difference from thoſe others in the Iſſue and Event of calling, that others, though called, yet are not perfected, but left in the end to their own wills and ways, to fall away; for 'tis a calling according to Works, and accordingly it is managed.

And whereas it may be ſaid to be intended with a Commotion of difference from all others of the World.

I grant you may take them in alſo as a further amplification of the grace of God towards us, yet I would further add,

1. That this diſcriminating Grace is more conſpicuouſly ſeen by thoſe others that are called, as well as we, whom yet God leaves to fall away. And indeed, if you underſtand it only in the way of the before-mentioned Diſtinction (as hath been ſaid) then ſo conceived there needed no ſuch diſtinction, as in the word Calling is intimated; for the generality of the World are of ſuch as never were, or ſhall be ſo much as called; it muſt therefore be mainly intended of thoſe others that have had ſome work of calling upon them, as well as this [US] themſelves.

Moreover, ſecondly, his Scope being to fortifie and comfort this [US] from fears of falling away, and the fears of falling away being occaſioned by, and uſing chiefly and moſtly to ariſe from the Examples of others, that are in their apprehenſions called, as well as themſelves, whom yet with their own eyes they daily ſee to fall away; whom ſhould he in this caſe, by way of diſcrimination, intended (if he intended any at all) other than theſe?

In the laſt place, although [US] ſeems to come in without any Emphaſis at all, and to ſerve but only as a Noun that follows the Verb hath called, as if denoting barely the perſon; yet elſewhere you find, when it is (as here) joyned with Calling, that there is a ſpecial Emphaſis ſet over the head of US, Rom. 9 24. Even US whom he hath called, not of the Jews only, but alſo of the Gentiles. Where obſerve,

1. He ſays not barely who hath called US, but even US whom he hath called, the accent is ſet over the head of the US; and the effect of Peter's Speech here comes all to one with that there: For it is no leſs than as if he had placed his words alſo thus [US] whom the God of all grace hath called.

And ſecondly, To what purpoſe is it that the Accent, the Emphaſis there over US, but to ſhew the infinite vaſt difference which Grace and Mercy puts between that [US] whom he hath called, and others? 'Tis as if he had ſaid, even US, and not others, through diſcriminating Grace; for which read the words afore, and you will acknowledge as much, Verſ. 22, 23. What if God willing to ſhew his wrath, and to make his power known, endured with much long-ſuffering the Veſſels of wrath fitted to deſtruction? And that he might make known the riches of his glory on the veſſels of mercy which he had afore prepared unto glory?

And if any ſay, That this difference there put, is but that which is between the Elect, and all others of Mankind that are the veſſels of wrath.

I anſwer: Read and annex Verſ. 15, 16. He ſaith to Moſes, I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy, and I will have compaſſion on whom I will have compaſſion: So then it is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that ſheweth mercy. So that from that [US] there thus indigitated that are called alſo, that attempt to will and run, and to obtain Salvation thereby, it is apparent that there is intended a more ſpecial ſort of men, from whom even [US] by a true Calling are diſtinguiſht, unto the greater magnifying of God's grace thereby.

And

And 3ly. You may obſerve the [Us] there to note out the whole Church, for ſo it follows, Even Us whom he hath called, not of the Jews only, but alſo of the Gentiles, which two divided the World. This for the reality of the thing it ſelf in Peters Scope, That [Us] is intended in a diſcriminating ſenſe from others Called. Chap. 3.

II. If we conſult the peculiar Phraſeology and Uſe of the word [Us] or [We] as in the Apoſtles mouths it ſounds, when they ſpeak of Saints, whom God hath called, we ſhall find it notes forth the whole Body of the true Church, as a ſet and fixed number that ſhall not be diminiſhed in any one of them; and who are ſpecially called forth out of the World, yea, and diſcriminated from another ſort of Profeſſors, called out of the World, together with them who fall away.

I might, yea, I ſhall I think to give an account of every title of this ſignificancy of the word [Us] as applyed unto true Saints by calling of whom only here Peter ſpeaks.

1. [Us] Sets out and denotes the whole bulk and Body of the true Church of God, firſt culled out of the whole Maſs of Mankind by the Election of Grace, then called forth by effectual vocation from the reſt of the World; From whence it is indeed, it bears its name, and is ſtiled by way of Eminency, ἐκκλησία, or the Church. Inſomuch that every Saint being a Member of that great Corporation may ſpeak of himſelf, and of or to another, in the language of [We] and Us, by way of apartment from all the World.

2. They are termed an [Us] in a far narrower diſcrimination than that from all the World, even from them that are called out of the Community of the World, by a real work of the Spirit upon them, as well as upon theſe Saints themſelves; Yet but with an Abortive imperfect work of Calling, and Profeſſion, that proves vain, as James ſpeaks, as to the iſſue thereof. Thus expreſly you have it, 1 Joh. 2. 19. They went out from [US] but they were not of [US] for if they had been of [US,] they would no doubt have continued with [US]; but they went out that they might be made manifeſt, that they were not all of Us.

1. He Entitles the whole Body of truly called ones, that had received that Unction from the Holy One, in the next Verſe, where there is an [Us] four ſeveral times.

And 2ly. Thoſe, in difference from whom he terms theſe the [US] were ſuch as through a work of Calling had once joyned themſelves unto them, as thoſe words, They went out from Us, and continued not with Us, do manifeſtly declare; Yet (ſays he) of a differing kind and ſort from Us; for if they had been [of Us] they would have continued with Us, but went out that it might be manifeſt they were not of Us; that whereas they had been accounted and reckoned to be of [Us]. Having made a ſeparation from the World as well as we, and profeſſed Chriſt and Chriſtian Holineſs, as well as we; Yet to the end that vaſt difference that was betwixt that work of Calling which had been upon them, and that which was upon Us, and which did as really diſtinguiſh Us from them, that that might appear, they were left to fall away, and ſo to go out from Us.

By which, 3ly. It alſo there appears, that this true Us, (genuinely and rightly ſo ſtiled) are (as was ſaid in the Aſſertion) a fixt and ſtanding and durable Company, or Body, whereof not one ſhall be diminiſhed; And obſerve how peremptory and concluſive he is in it; for, ſays he, If they had been of [Us] truly called, they would [no doubt] have continued with [Us.] As if he had ſaid, All of the right Breed and Calling, or of the right Company of the true [Us] they do continue together for ever, they are a ſtanding durable Body to Chriſt, and every one of them continues ſo; and he doth not barely affirm it (which being an Apoſtle, were ſufficient) nor doth he only bring it in by way of a reaſon, or certain evidence, that therefore thoſe other were none of Us in thoſe words, For if they had been of Us, &c. But he would have us out of all doubt, or queſtioning of it, [without doubt] ſays he, there muſt never ſo much as a thought be entertained to the contrary, nor ever any queſtion by any of you be made of it.

And

BOOK IV. And 4ly. He tells Us that thoſe other were therefore left thus to fall off in and through a ſpecial deſign on Gods part who had this end or deſign in his thus ſo ordering of it, that they might be made manifeſt, they were not of Us. Now where there is an end, there muſt be a deſign guiding to that end, and whoſe was this but Gods? Who in his Providence brings it to this iſſue, like as elſewhere you have it, that they that are approved may be made manifeſt among you. The manifeſtation of theſe in both places, was not the work of man, but Gods, who knowing who are his, accordingly doth call them, whom he hath Predeſtinated, them he hath alſo called; And therefore full well knows who are his own true [Us] as I may ſo ſpeak: And he knowing alſo that thoſe other were never in reality and truth of his [Us] or owned by him for ſuch, none of his rightly Called Ones, as Chriſt knew Judas all along that he was a Devil, Hence he who is a God of Holineſs and truth cannot always bear with them, Rev. 2. 2. (As of the Angel of Epheſus 'tis ſaid) but (as there alſo) tries them that ſay, They are called, but are not, and proves them Lyars: God ordinarily at the long run leaves them to diſcover themſelves in this World, and they that are otherwiſe cannot be always hid, 1 Tim. 5. 25. Likewiſe alſo, the good works of ſome are manifeſt beforehand, and they that are otherwiſe, cannot be hid.

And this import or ſignification of the word [Us] is (I think) in all things home to the point we have been treating of and purſuing, and juſtly inferred from the Apoſtles language and uſe of the word.

III. And more Particularly, That Peter ſhould upon a ſpecial peculiar Motive and Conſideration, uſe this word in this ſenſe in this paſſage of his, we may perhaps be eaſily induced to think, if we conſider. 1. That this word [Us] in this very importance of it did firſt of all the Apoſtles fall from Peters own mouth. And 2. Withal conſider the occaſion of it then, and how near it came home to Peter; And then, 3. The near relation and correſpondency that the matter of theſe Verſes doth hold with that occaſion.

1. It fell firſt from Peters mouth in this ſenſe, and that in the firſt Sermon we read of after Chriſts Aſcention, Acts 1. 13. 16, 17. In thoſe days Peter ſtood up in the midſt of the Diſciples, and ſaid, This Scripture muſt needs have been fulfilled concerning Judas: For he was numbred with Us, Verſe, 17. The Scripture he means that was fulfilled, is afterwards rehearſed by him, Verſ. 20. In the mean time he Prefaceth concerning Judas in theſe words, He was numbred amongſt [Us] whom doth he mean by [Us] but amongſt [Us] Saints the Church of the New Teſtament, whereof One hundred and twenty were preſent? as alſo amongſt Us Apoſtles, whereof Eleven remained and were preſent, and not one of them ever to fall away, as Chriſt's Prayer, Joh. 17. 12. ſhews, None of them is loſt but this Son of Perdition.

2. The occaſion of the [Us] in that ſenſe, was upon the firſt and moſt notorious diſcrimination from that [Us] that ever ſhall be made, and ſo famous an one as the New Teſtament rings of it to this day, of one who in an inſtant fell from the moſt eminent Calling, having been called by Chriſt himſelf, and by reaſon of that his Calling thus numbred and unqueſtioned by any of them among the firſt Saints, and the higheſt rank of Saints the Apoſtles, and had obtained part of this Miniſtry; So it follows Verſ. 17*th.* In Joh. 18. 4. you read it ſignally noticed, and ſtudiouſly obſerved by the Evangeliſt himſelf; And Judas that betrayed him ſtood with them, that is amongſt thoſe, or that Company who came to take Jeſus; and ſays Peter here, Acts 1. Verſ. 16. Who was guide to them that took Jeſus; Yea, it would ſeem he was become as the Captain of them, Joh. 18. 3. Judas then having received a Band of Men and Officers from the Chief Prieſts and Phariſees, cometh thither with Lanterns, and Torches and Weapons: What a diſmal ſtanding with theſe his new Acquaintance and Companions was this? For from henceforth for ever according to his own choice, he was to take his Lot with them for ever, who ſtood with him then. He till then had been numbred amongſt Us, but from thenceforth was numbred amongſt the [Us] no more. This is Peters Scope there, and the Story ſhews it; then and there it began to be manifeſt that he was not of them, and in the very literal Hiſtorical ſenſe, 'tis ſaid, He went out from them, Joh. 13. 30. To go to theſe other never to return again, or be of that company any more. Chap. 3.

And how near unto Peter's Heart this eternal ſeparation and diſcommoning of Judas muſt needs come, at the ſame time, even whilſt he was uttering of it, we may eaſily apprehend, when we recall that his own fate had been to deny his Lord thrice, with Oaths and imprecations, within two or three hours ſpace, after that Judas had betray'd the ſame his Lord and Maſter alſo. His ſin came as near (in the kind of it, though not in degree) unto that of Judas, as near in that reſpect, as it did in ſpace of time from Judas his committing his: Whereupon we may well conceive, that any, or all of them that heard him that day, might preſently ſay within themſelves, doſt thou talk of Judas his having been once numbred amongſt U S? and in thy ſaying ſo doſt take upon thee ſtill to number thy ſelf with U S? (for in ſaying [U S] he included himſelf amongſt that number ſtill.) Yea, but who and what was it put this difference, and kept thee among the number of [U S] whilſt Judas was eternally cut off? I ſhall anſwer for him out of his own words here in the Text (and his own Heart for certain, if he were here alive, would beat and ſpeak the ſame) it was the God of all grace who had called me; and for that he had called me with an holy calling, and had given me ſaving Faith, as he hath done to the reſt of you, the [U S:] 'Twas he who did reſtore, ſtrengthen, ſtabliſh me, the very ſame night; and it was Jeſus Chriſt that lookt back upon me, (by whom God calls and ſtrengthens, as in the Text) who had prayed for me, that my Faith, which had been in my firſt calling wrought in me, ſhould not fail.

And his ſpeech being thus underſtood; the mind thereof hath this reflexion and rebound back again upon all the reſt then preſent, and upon the whole Church of Chriſt, to the end of the World; and it is as if Peter had ſaid, that I who am the firſt and higheſt example of diſcriminating and unchangable grace under the New Teſtament; that is, of one ſet thus in compariſon with another of ſo eminent a ſtation, that I ſhould be thus kept, and ſtill able (through grace) to number my ſelf amongſt you; this may you all interpret to be a bleſſed hanſel, and an everlaſting good omen, earneſt and gage unto you, the whole of [U S] and the whole Church of the New Teſtament to come, that God will in like manner keep all you, that are of our [U S] unto eternal life, as he hath done me, maugre all Temptations that may endanger the contrary, and nevertheleſs, that you have ſeen with your eyes (and the Churches in all Ages will ſee the like) another that was called thus to Apoſtatize, God having exemplified in him, and me, the Fate and Condition of two ſorts of called Profeſſors, as leading Caſes under the New Teſtament.

This for the firſt occaſion of uſing the word [U S] in this diſcriminating ſenſe and how near it came home to Peter.

But if we ſhall add to this the third thing, the near correſpondency and affinity that the matter of my Text doth hold with that firſt occaſion, we may perhaps be yet further induced to think that Peter intended this ſenſe of diſcrimination in the word, [U S.]

It is evident, that his full and fervent aim is, in this cloſe of his Epiſtle, to leave behind him a ſtrengthning Confortatory unto the whole Church of the New Teſtament then in the World, and in them unto the whole Catholick Church to ſucceed to the end of the World, againſt the fears of falling away; which thoſe called ones are obnoxious unto, from the experience of their own Hearts, temptations, falls, and of the falling away of many, that are called as well as themſelves. And it is as evident that this matter of comfort given the whole Church againſt ſuch fears, is but one and the ſame with what himſelf had been comforted withall, from the experience of that difference put by God between him, and Judas; and indeed was the neceſſary inference, conſequent, and leſſon learned therefrom; which as he did ever carry about with him, and could not but have the proſpect of often in his thoughts; ſo in a ſpecial manner it may (if not that it muſt) be ſuppoſed (if at any time) to riſe up in his Heart upon this occaſion, and ſo that in the ſenſe thereof he penned this; and not leſs rational it is to think, that upon theſe coincident appre-

Book IV. apprehenſions within himſelf, and falling upon his own Heart, he ſhould intend here [U S] that are truly called in the ſame ſenſe of diſcrimination, from others abortively called, in which he had at firſt uttered it in Judas his caſe, when he ſaid, he was numbred amongſt U S.

But you will (it may be) be more fully perſwaded unto it, if you caſt but your thoughts back and recal that obſervation which I caſt in at the entrance of the expoſition of this text, which I then ſaid conduced much to the illuſtration of Peters ſcope and Heart herein, how that certainly it had been Chriſts Admonition unto Peter upon the foreſight of his fall——Satan hath deſired to winnow thee, but I have prayed thy Faith fail not, wherefore when thou art converted, ſtrengthen thy Brethren: That charge (I ſay) left upon him by Chriſt, gave fire and vent to his ſpirit to inſert this conſolatory concluſion, and adminiſtred the materials to him, yea, and many of the very words which he forms his ſpeech in; And accordingly having firſt given them warning, as Chriſt had done him in the verſes juſt afore, that Satan did ſeek to devour and drink up at one draught (which was Judas his perfect caſe) any of the Brotherhood in like manner; He then preſently comes in with But the God of all grace, by Jeſus Chriſt, ſhall ſtrengthen, ſtabliſh, &c. And you may review what a ſet and formed up parallel in many particulars there is found between the one and the other, as I then ſhewed. Peter here going about to ſtrengthen his Brethren, and that in writing now in the ſame or like words, when he is reſtored and converted: So as I doubt not to affirm, that Peter had a remembrance of, and an eye thereunto in this of his.

And upon all this we will find good reaſon, that he having that Command of Chriſt in relation to his fall afore, in perfect attention at the penning of this, yea, and as provoking him thereunto, that he ſhould have withal in freſh remembrance, after his fall and recovery, that narration of his own, Acts 1. (for Judas his being cut off and himſelf reſtored was one of the greateſt occurrences that ever befell him, and muſt needs ſtick with him the moſt,) and that paſſage eſpecially, he was numbred amongſt U S, wherein at once are ſummed up and beſpoken his own reſtoring (according to Chriſts words) and the preſervation of the reſt, the whole Church to be continued on [U S] to Chriſt for ever; together with Judas his everlaſting excluſion from them; and in all theſe the diſcrimination that the God of Grace did ſhew thereby, does eminently appear: For why? both this of his own, as well as the other of Chriſts, relate to and concern one and the ſame thing: So as indeed he could not remember the one, but he muſt needs call to mind the other: And thereupon in the Idea and impreſſion of them all, he could not but ſet down theſe words of my text, which do correſpond with the matter and ſcope of either.

And look, as in my text, and in the Verſes afore, immediately leading to them, he makes uſe of the very words Chriſt gave his command in, and unto the ſame purpoſe that Chriſt intended them: So in like manner it muſt be ſuppoſed, that he makes uſe of and intends this word [U S] in the ſame diſcriminating ſenſe (which Free-grace puts between U S and others) which himſelf had uſed it in, in that firſt leading inſtance given between Judas and himſelf, and the reſt of the Church there, and here in like manner applies it to diſcriminate the whole Church of truly called ones, that then was, and is to come, from all others that ſhall profeſs, as Judas did (whoſe inſtance was primum in iſto genere) without an holy calling: And all this he did to the end to magnifie the God of all Grace, and the Grace that is in that God the more, which alone puts that difference, and illuſtrates his Grace by this Difference: To whom be glory and Dominion for ever.

CHAP. IV.

Effectual Calling the fruit of Election-Grace. It is also the Foundation of all the following Acts of Grace. The Calling of the Elect different from the common Work of Calling that passes upon others, who are not finally saved. The difference between them not only in Degrees, but in Kind, in what that difference of Kind consists. Calling according to the Purpose of Election is a work of that excellence for Kind above all other, that God is engaged to carry it on to Perfection. This Manifested from the Special, and Unchangeable Love of God toward us, which produces in us that Good and perfect Work.

I PET. V. 10.

Who hath Called Us.

MY former Discourse of Gods being a God of Grace, and a God of all Grace hath run mostly upon what God is in his own heart, in his Purposes, in his thoughts (as the Prophet) towards us, and in his nature made over to us by his Grace. But these having been hidden within himself (although the foundation of all, 2 Tim. 2. 19.) it is his Calling us, that is, 1. The first outward effect or fruit of that his Grace. 2. And the first manifest token, or visible marking forth the Persons whom this Grace hath pitcht upon. 3. And thereby farther made by God as a Pledge, Gage, and Earnest that he will carry them on, continue that Grace, and perfect that his Work begun in them.

My purpose is is not at all to engraft large Common-place Heads on this or any other of the words, as not to insist on what Effectual Calling, or what that Glory is, or how great it is, he calls us unto; but punctually to keep to this Scope, how each and all of these words have that in them as doth conduce to strengthen our Faith in this great Point of Perseverance, and the engagement that God hath hereby both put and taken upon himself to carry us through to the end.

There are Five things here in this parcel of words, [Who hath called us into his Eternal Glory] that do exactly serve to confirm our Faith in this great Point.

The 1. Is, That he hath Called, therein Working a work of such a kind, as his Grace that wrought it is interressed to carry it on. The effect of which is that the God of Grace, when he calls out of Grace, worketh such a Kind of work as the same Grace doth engage him to perfect it.

2. [Who] hath called——Even the God of all Grace, and therefore will certainly carry it on.

In the first of these the weight of the Argument rests properly upon that respect which God hath towards the Work, which out of Grace he hath wrought, He hath called.

In the Second shall be considered, that he Calling US as the God of all Grace, and shewn himself so highly to be such, even in calling, that therefore we may be sure he will carry on all other workings which are necessary to bring us to Glory.

3. That he hath called us into Glory.

4. Into Eternal Glory.

5. Into [His] Eternal Glory.

The Handling of which as they Explain the Text so, each and all of these make for Us, and ascertain Us that God will carry us through all Temptations, &c.

I begin with the First, That he hath Called.

There are two things under this Head to be Handled.

I. Some things concerning the work of Calling, necessary to be premised.

II. That a true and Effectual Calling of God, is a work of that kind, and Perfection for kind, and proceeding from, and out of that Grace which I have spoken of, as God hath engaged himself to carry it on to perfection.

As to the First I shall only say these few things.

1. A Saints being Called, is the first immediate fruit and breaking forth of Electing purposing Grace. The River ran under ground from Eternity, and rises and bubbles up therein first, and then runs above ground to Eternity: It is that first and great difference that God puts between man, and man; the first mark God sets upon his Sheep, whereby he owns them, and visibly calls them HIS. Rom. 8. 30. Whom he hath Predestinated, them he hath also called: That's the first and next benefit unto that in Gods heart, viz, Predestination: You have the same in 2 Tim. 1. 9. who hath called us according to his Purpose and Grace; and hence Make your Calling and Election sure, 2 Pet. 1. 10. He singles forth Calling of all things else, calling upon us to make it sure, and thereby Election will be made sure, that is, made sure to your Faith. It is not that Election is not sure without it, The foundation of the Lord standeth sure before he calls; but it is not made sure to our Faith thereby. The Apostles therefore do speak one uniform Language, of one Woof and Thred; and of a like extent, either when writing to Saints, they say men called to be Saints, that's one Title, as 2 Cor. 1, 2. Unto the Church of God which is at Corinth, called to be Saints, or Saints by Calling. As also when they write to them under the notion of Elect, as 1 Pet. 5. 13. The Church, says he, Elected, together with you, &c. and you know that of the Elect Lady, 2 Joh. Vers. 1. These are made terms equivalent in men Called, and thereby the Apostles signifie that they acknowledge no other calling to be true Calling, but what was the immediate and proper fruit of Election, of which I have been Discoursing: For there are terms commensurate, that is, of equal extent to be truly and Spiritually Called, and to be Elected, Commensurate, as to the same Persons; None are called in their sense of Calling that are not Elect, and there are none Elect, but either such as are, or shall be Called.

A Second thing I premise, is, That a true and Spiritual Calling (so I shall hereafter call and notifie it) is the foundation of all the Actings of Grace which afterwards do follow, and thence it is that the weight and stress of this whole matter of making Election sure, is put upon this Calling: For every Spiritual acting of Grace, to the end of a Mans life, evidenceth that first work of Calling to be sound and saving, and so conduceth to make a mans Calling, and Election Sure. This is evident in that forecited place of Peter, Make your Calling and Election sure; He hath that at the 10*th Verse.* But he had before Premised two things; the first at the 3. Verse, according as his Divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him who hath called us to glory and vertue: From whence it is plain, That God when he calls, doth endow the soul with all and the whole of the Principles, and Seeds of all Graces whatsoever, and which it shall for ever act: And this he doth through the knowledge of him who hath Called us, that is, a knowledge of God; and at Calling all this is for to signifie, why it is those words, Through the Knowledge of him are added unto who hath called us. He works not on us as Stocks, but through a knowledge of God, who is the Caller: For my Brethren, know it for a great truth, that the first light you have in your Calling, is a new light of God (who is Primum credibile) which is the Original Seminal cause of all that work that accompanies Calling. It may be Objectively your thoughts were not taken up with God so as with nothing else, no, but yet light of him came in, and in the strength of that you began to see what sin was, as it is in it self against an Holy God, and so to see what Holiness is; and this knowledge of God is that which is so eminently, and in the first place mentioned in the work of the new Covenant of Grace, Jer. 31. I will teach them all to know me, and when he hath done that, thereby the Law becomes written in their hearts. And thus he doth give us all things that pertain to life and Godliness, even together, with, and through the Knowledge of him who hath called us to (all) glory and vertue. He gives the whole Cluster, the whole lump, whole Principles of Graces at first. The Second thing he had said before is, That when he hath thus inlaid the Principles of all Graces at first, he then acts them, he draws them out, and he doth it in what order he pleases, and is a doing it all a mans life; and this second follows in Vers. 5, 6, 7. And besides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith vertue, and to vertue knowledge, and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience, and to patience godliness, and to godliness brotherly kindness, charity; And thus adding of these Graces in acts and Exercises of them one to another, is that I mean by drawing of them forth all a mans life. Now observe as to the Point afore us, That the effect or fruit of this Adding or Exercising of Graces all a mans life is in the following 10*th Vers.* said to be a Making your Calling and Election sure. Wherefore Brethren says he, Give all diligence, (that is, by thus acting your Graces, whereof you received all the Principles at your Callings) to make your Calling and Election sure; for if you do those things you shall never fall. Chap. 4.

Brethren, you use to have recourse to the first work only, and what flaws you find in that, if you have not the whole of what Ministers set out to you, you are apt to Scruple and question the truth of your Calling; or if you have them not in that method in your discerning, wich they set them out in, you narrow your comforts thereunto. But give we leave to say to you by the Apostles warrant, That God, when the light and knowledg of Himself comes in, impresseth withall on your hearts all Principles of grace wich he is a broaching, and drawing out all your life time, and hence every Act of grace you perform is, and may become an evidence of your Calling, as well as what was wrought at first. The measure therefore of your judging of your Calling, is not simply to be confined to what work thou hadst at first, but to be extended to the whole progress thy life, in the course of which thou findest ever and anon such and such an holy, and gracious disposition of heart-breaks forth towards God, that is certainly grace. Now you are to take these as evidences of your Calling, as well as that first work; and this that passage in Peter shews, put but the 5th Verse and 10*th* together, and it will rise up to it. And it is a thing you are much to take in for your comfort,

Suppose thou hadst at first (I speak to them that are wrought on by degrees) for thy actings of grace, but some few particulars, thou discernedst, which yet are substantial to the state of grace; yet for thy help and comfort, take in withall what thou hast thy whole life since to view, and survey, and therein all thy self denials, and dispositions of ingenuity towards God, &c. And there are all evidences of thy being truly Called Book IV. led, & of thy having recieved all things pertaining to life and Godliness, which by degrees God hath drawn out of thy heart.

Only I must add this, That in the Calling of some, there shoots up very suddenly an apparent visible Election-Conversion; (I use to call it so) You shall, as it were, see Election take hold of a Man, pull him out with a mighty power, stamp upon him the Divine Natuere, stub up Corrupt Nature by the roots, root up Self-love, put in a principle of Love to God, and Launch him forth a New creature the first day, both in the spiritual sense of himself, and visibly to the observation of others. He did so to Paul, and it is not without Example in others after him, as you shall see.

First in Paul, 1 Tim. 1. 14. The grace of our Lord was exceeding abundant in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus; the work of both which was perfected in the first four days, that you read of in his Story in the Acts, and so in his Epist. to the Galatians, God revealed his Son in me, says he, Gal. 1. 12. And it is not without example of the like in others; as of the Thessalonians, the Apostle instances in them, 1 Thes. 1. v. 4, 5. Knowing Brethren beloved your Election of God: And why? The work that was upon you was so apparent and suddain; For our Gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance; that is, an assurance of the things delivered, as well as in an assurance that they had an interest in them: As ye know what manner of men we were among you for your sakes; And ye became followers of us and of the Lord, having received the word in much affliction, with joy of the Holy Ghost: And Vers. 9. And How ye turned to God from Idols to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from Heaven, &c. There were such visible Conversions then, and sometimes now adays, I call them Election-Conversions, and they are undeniably such, and visible tokens of Election, by such a work of Calling, as all the Powers in Heaven and Earth could not have wrought upon a mans Soul so, nor changed a man so on a sudden, but only that Divine Power that created the World, raised Christ from the dead: And the soul that feels it must say so.

3. I must yet come in with this, That the Scripture speaks of a Calling, a work of the Spirit upon men that is called a Calling, and yet is not that Calling the Apostle here speaks of, and which we seek for. That speech, Many are called, but few are chosen, which our Saviour Christ hath repeated again and again, but especially Matth. 22. 14. where if you look to the Coherence, you will find it punctual to this point: For there came one in that was called, but wanted the wedding Garment, upon occasion of whom it was Christ says, Many are called, &c.

My Brethren, you shall observe in the very places I have in the former Sermons insisted on for the proof of purposing Grace, that the Apostle, when he speaks of saving Calling, he inserts this by way of distinction, Called according to purpose: The Apostle is fain here to distinguish upon it, because there is another sort of Calling, that is not according to purpose: You find it in Rom. 8. 28. All things work together for good to them that love God, to them that are the Called according to his purpose: Which distinction evidently shews (the Apostle would not have so sedulously put it in else) that there is a Calling that is not according to his purpose, but according to the pleasure and menage of his common providential Grace, which accompanies the word, about which is all the Controversie under the name of sufficient Grace.

There are some, both Protestant and Popish Divines, that hold Election as strongly as any, and do as fully profess that there is a Calling proceeding from that Election, and that those that are so called according to his purpose, shall never fall away; and that of such this place Rom. 8. 28. is to be understood: But withal, say they, there is a sufficient Grace vouchsafed to many others, who are thereby savingly called, and have, by being called, obtained as true Grace as the other; nay, and some of them go on to be saved by the same sufficient Grace continued to them, or revived upon them, and improved by them; and in those that do not so persevere, there is yet no difference in the work of Calling it self they once had, from that in the Elect, take the meer work of it, but only in the event or issue, that some such do finally fall away; whereas none none of those that are the Called according to his purpose, do so fall. And the reason of that difference they give to lye in this, that Election, and the God of all grace that wrought it, do maintain and carry on the one; but Freewill grace having the keeping of the other, it squanders away that work in them, though it may fall out that some of such as improve that, are saved: Thus they compound the business. Chap. 4.

But I should only ask of those of that Opinion, this Question, which the former Discourse suggests, How can any man make his Election sure by his Calling, if this Opinion hold true? For the works, you say, in Calling are the same, and there is no Characteristical difference: And so those that are Elect, are still left as much, yea, utterly to seek to make their Election sure by their Calling, that's certain, unless there should be something in their Calling, which is not found in the others, that should put the difference.

The Papists therefore to salve this, plainly say, That no man can be assured but by a special Revelation, and by that they mean a Vision from Heaven by an Angel, or the like, which is their way of Revelation: And as for the Testimonies of the Spirit in the case, they account that to be Fanatical.

I demand again, if things be thus, To what purpose is this Scripture (my Text) and many other Scriptures exhorting to stedfastness of Faith, and assurance in this point, That God, as the God of all Grace, will carry his Called on to the end, as having given us this pawn and pledge, that he hath called us (the God of all Grace who hath called us, says the Text) will therefore perfect, establish, &c. with which multitudes of other Scriptures joyn issue in the point, and give their suffrage unto, whereof some I shall have occasion after to mention? This Opinion of theirs, enervates such Scriptures, and makes them void.

That's the third thing concerning Calling (for I am yet but upon the first Head, to premise some things concerning Calling.)

4. And now you will ask me some differences between such a Calling from Election, and the other. Truly it were infinite to enlarge upon differences: I shall give you first a general Answer, and then mention two or three particular Differences after.

For a General Answer, I shall only say this; There being in every true Calling (as you heard) all things given pertaining to life and godliness, the trial of which, and the drawing forth of which, is throughout the whole course of a Mans life; that therefore there is throughout, from the first of a true Calling, a difference in all Actings that do spring from that root; that is, in all acts whatsoever that are spiritual acts, exercised about any sort of spiritual things and objects: And truly this is to me a great truth; I shall give you some little account of it.

If you demand; Have not the Non-elect, and the Elect, from their very first saving workings, many actings about some things spiritual that are meerly common to both, that is, both go so far and so far, and thus far together, as in historical Faith, and the like; so as that the actings of each, which they exercise towards several Divine Objects, are without any difference at all in the acts themselves, having both but one and the same kind of working, till they come to some such or such special act or acts; that puts the first difference, as of Faith justifying as justifying, or the like, purely Evangelical? I confess I am perfectly of another mind.

I shall give you two grounds for this my general Assertion.

1. Perhaps the very having said, they receive all things pertaining to Life and Godliness, at first might carry it; in that having received all these in order unto the bringing forth all sorts of Actings about Objects pertaining to Life and Godliness, whatsoever they are; that therefore, as they all do spring from that one universal root and principle received, so they do all of them differ from what other Men have or act, who have not this root of the matter in them; for the fruit always answers in kind unto the root, and therefore as there is a new root differing in all things, so must the actings of it differ also; conform to which, and confirming which, is that 2 Cor. 5. All things are become new in the new Creature: As for the principle, he receiving all things be-

Book IV. belonging to Life, &c. So suitably, all things become likewise new for ever; even the knowledge of the Person of Christ; and that not only in the point of Faith justifying, or when put forth for justification indeed, but the knowledg of his Person and of all in him; if I have known Christ after the flesh, henceforth I know him so no more; all his knowledge of him, as he was the Messias, was wholly new.

My Explication of this first ground is, that whereas you may think and judge that a Man that is savingly called, and a Man that is otherwise wrought upon, they both believe that God is, but only in common, from one and the same principle, which serves both alike to act so far: For this, you'l say, is but a meer Historical Faith, and the acts thereof are common to both of them. But give me leave to tell you, that to believe that God is, this in a Man truly and spiritually called, is a different act and thing from the Faith that is in the other; and you have Heb. 11. 6. plainly for it, he that comes to God must believe that he is, &c. From this I would infer, that to believe that God is, (which is the A, B, C, of a Christian) he that is called, begins to believe it anew: He begins even there anew, that is, he hath another kind of act of Faith about it, and upon another light and ground than another Man hath, be he never so much enlightned, (if not savingly.) So likewise to believe that God made the World, in which the Apostle instances also in the same place, and my argument from that place is, that the Apostles scope is there to give instances of saving Faith, and that as with difference from others: For to speak of such a Faith as is saving, he had professed to do, and of no other in that foregoing speech, which leads on to that whole discourse of Faith, in Chap. 11. in these words, in the last verse of Chap. 10. But we are not of them who draw back unto perdition, but of them that believe to the saving of the Soul; he therefore speaks altogether of saving Faith, and throughout in the following Chap. 11. and then all those instances which are there given, must belong all of them unto saving Faith, flow from it: And saving Faith we are sure, is proper to them that are called: And then all the Acts of such a Faith must differ in kind from what the same are in others not saved; even as saving Faith it self differs from Faith that is not saving in others. And these, to me, are undeniable things, that therefore from the very bottom or foundations of Faith, a true Believer begins a new.

To instance likewise in the Works of Humiliation for Sin, and Sanctification of Nature, which we say are preparatory for Faith, they are far different from what are wrought in any other.

Brethren, Consider for this but what was the eminent effects of John the Baptist's Ministry, of whom 'tis said, That he did turn men to the wisdom of the just, &c. that is, he truly converted them: Yet what was the most eminent effect of his Ministry? Truly he did but point to Christ, and in like manner unto Faith in Christ, as Acts 19. 5. hath it, and as the Story of his preaching shews: But the main business of his Preaching, and the above-ground Fruits of it in mens hearts was, That he but prepared the way for the Lord in humbling and empeying men, which a Spirit of Sanctification went along with, and fell upon them. You find it prophesied of, Isa. 40. 3. Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make streight in the Desart a high-way for our God: Every Valley shall be exalted, and every Mountain and Hill shall be made low, &c. The voice said Cry: And he said what shall I cry? All flesh is grass, and all the goodliness thereof is as the flower of the field. The grass withereth, the flower fadeth, because the Spirit of the Lord bloweth upon it. Observe what I shall say hereupon: That which you call the Work of Humiliation and Repentance, which his Ministry set their hearts on work upon, and which was the preparing the way for Christ, and which above ground did more appear, and grow up highest in their spirits, were yet as true Evidences of an effectual Calling, as any of those things that followed in those Converts upon Christ's preaching that followed. As that all flesh was grass, because the Spirit of the Lord had blown upon it, and had withered the World, and all things in it; yea, and all the fruits of flesh in a man's own heart that he trusted in, so that he did then see an emptiness in Creatures, in legal Works, Duties, Abilities in a man to help himself as to Salvation; to have all Valleys filled, Hills cast down, all Conditions laid level in mens eyes; these are and were proper Fruits of Election, and pieces of true Calling: And when our Saviour preacht, Matth. 5. (John having prepared a People for him) observe but what he at first preached to that poor prepared People, who had, I say, (John having spoken to them of him) withal some sparks of Faith in them towards him; Now, how doth Christ apply himself to these? Blessed, says he, are the poor in Spirit: He speaks to these very Hearers and Converts of John, (as some of his Apostles had been) that were utterly emptied, and the eminent Grace appearing in them, was this emptiness and poverty of spirit likewise: Blessed are those that mourn, in that they have sinned against a holy God, and from whom now they are a seeking pardon and forgiveness: And blessed are those that hunger and thirst after righteousness; for they saw no righteousness of their own to rely upon. And blessed are the meek; they lay at God's feet, and at his dispose; they put their mouths in the dust, if there might be hope God might do any thing with them, and they not repine. So also Blessed are the Peacemakers; that is, such as having seen themselves to have been in a state of wrath from and with the great God, and seeking peace and pardon at his hands for their own Souls, do out of pity unto others, whom they see to continue in that Condition, endeavour to convert their Souls unto God, to make peace with him, as he in Job speaks. Such dispositions as these were the eminent Effects and Impressions from the Baptist's Ministry, and preparatory unto their being baptized with the Spirit by Christ as fire; and yet they rose not up to prevailing faith, and righteousness was not distinctly brought forth to victory. John pointed them to Christ, as Acts 19. tells, and their Faith had him in their eye, but was not bloomed; and in the mean time these dispositions were wrought, and they were effectually called. Now then suppose (as it falls out ordinarily) that mens minds, at their first being wrought upon, are apt to be so intent upon it for a while, as thereby to be retarded in their going out of themselves so fully to Christ, and that a great deal of Legality doth accompany the work in them, yet still there's the root of the matter a working up in them; and although Self love may be so much stirred in a man together, and mixt with these actings, that a man cannot discern the difference, and that a legality also cleaveth to them, that doth much divert the Soul, or at least obstruct it in the clear, and pure, and abstract actings of Faith, as justifying upon Christ: Yet these inlaid principles have their spiritual workings proper to them; and being in their spring and root Evangelical, do work themselves out of that legality, and self, and come in the end to breath in the open, pure, and free Air of Free-grace, and Justification in Christ, &c.

Chap. 4.

These Hearers of John had received all things belonging unto life, and godliness in their first work, and their Calling began with these Dispositions forementioned, and yet a great legalness of spirit cleaved to them, and much darkness about Christ and his righteousness: And we see now adays, men that are called and converted, what ado they have to get themselves out of themselves, and out of Self-righteousness, Ability, or from acting from themselves, and their own Graces, as a new Nature in them, and from doating in any manner upon that new Grace they have received, and long it is e're Christ comes to be formed in them, and yet there is a true spiritual Gospel-root that shall and will work it self out of all. And in the mean time there is a true spiritual difference in those its actings from all workings whatsoever in any other, though mingled and covered with so much of self and legal dross, as hath kept them from a clear emergency, and working of them out of themselves with a prevailing victory; but they lye in such dispositions as those afore-specified, in which spiritual life works like a Mole under ground, that is still heaving and casting up the Earth it is covered withal, until it gets above ground.

Only I add this, That they receive little certain comfort in any of all of these, till Christ doth come more sensibly into their hearts, and until Faith that is in the bud, mixt with all these, begins to blow, as we say: As indeed Faith did not in those Hearers of John Baptist, until Christ himself came, and preached Book IV. preached to them, for whom, and whose Ministry it was they had been prepared by John; though in it self it was not a bare Preparation, but a saving Work of Callig in them. And thus much for my first ground.

My second ground is this, No man can pitch upon any act, which he would have first to put the difference, but there's a Counterfeit of it; so as you must distinguish upon that also, and so you must upon all the rest. Let a man called effectually, say he hath Assurance, that other sort of Professor will say so too: Therefore it is not such or such a particular act that begins to put the first difference, as if all actings afore it were but such as are common to others with them, and no other: No; but it is the kind of that and all other that puts the difference.

And if you ask, What is that kind of them all, or wherein lies it?

I Answer; It is the Spiritualness of all acts flowing from the new Creature wherein the difference lies, if we could discern it: Our very Historical Faith, whereby we believe the things themselves, as that there is a God, &c. would, and may serve to make a difference between a man called, and one not called, only we cannot so readily discern that difference, it is not so sensible. I found this Answer upon that of our Saviour, That which is born of the Spirit is spirit; the Spirit begotten is the whole bulk, cluster, and lump of Graces in our first Calling received, (we have spoken of) the whole Seed infused when first born and begotten, all of which, and throughout, is Spirit, says he, and it hath not one only, or a few particular Objects to be drawn out unto, but all sorts of Divine and spiritual things prepared for it to exercise it self upon both in the first workings of it, and afterwards.

Now one that is not Elect, he is wrought on so as to be manned and carried out to Divine Objects that are spiritual; and one that hath this Spirit begotten in him, he is carried out to the same Divine spiritual Objects also; how then, you will say, shall we distinguish them?

I will give you it in as few words as I can. What is the Root of all? That Root you see is Spirit. What doth that import? That he is made a Spiritual Man: And to discern that, let us go to 1 Cor. 2. 14, 15. The spiritual Man discerneth all things [spiritually;] the natural Man receives not the things of the spirit, because they are spiritually discerned, but he that is spiritual judgeth all things. From whence I learn, that to have spirit begotten in a Man, is to make him a spiritual Man; And what doth his being a spiritual Man capacitate him for? To take in all spiritual Objects spiritually. It is the Apostles own distinction that he puts; a School-man could not distinguish more exactly, and it is one general distinction which serves to distinguish all acts of a spiritual Man in the goings forth of his Soul unto Spiritual Objects whatsoever: You will then ask, What is it for a spiritual Man to take in Spiritual Objects spiritually? I answer when he considering them all, or any of them, as they are simply in their own Spiritual nature, is then acted spiritually towards them, and hath suitable spiritual actings upon them in every power of his Soul; whereas one that is not savingly called, though he be exercised about spiritual things, yet being not born Spirit, the whole of his Soul is not acted or carried forth to them, as barely apprehended in their spirituality; and so he doth not do it spiritually. But still how may we discern the difference between these two? It is easy, I do not say to discern it, but to give the rule for it: It is this, when our Understandings take in, and consider any spiritual thing, as it is in its own spiritual Nature, and thereupon we find something throughout our whole Hearts suited to that spiritualness of it taken in under that apprehension, or consideration of it, so as to be affected, moved, stirred, carried on according as it is thus apprehended, then there is a spiritual acting: For instance; let thy Understanding take in the spirituality of God or Christ, or of Christ's Righteousness, (to instance in that) what it is in it self, in the excellency of it, above thine own, as Paul, who counted all his but as dross and dung in comparison of this of Christ; yea, although thine own should be made up as compleat as that which is in the Holy Angels in Heaven; yea, and as perfect for degrees as the righteousness of all the Angels in Heaven; if that which is in them, all were put into one, yet the Soul would rejoyce it had such a righteousness to throw away, and trample upon, to glorifie this of Christ's in justifying of thee. And so as this thy valuation, and affecting to have this righteousness made thine, is not only or meerly because it saves thee, but because the way of thine, and a Sinners Justification, by it alone, tends so greatly to glorifie God, and his Grace: Now findest thou an Heart suited to, and thus heartily affected towards it, under these Apprehensions about it, or such like to these? Here is a spiritual acting towards that object: And as a liberal Man will devise liberal things, so a spiritual Man will be devising such spiritual things as these, and his Heart will work after them accordingly. Yea, take sin, as it is set out in the Spiritual Nature, and as a Man considers sin, as it is contrary to the purity and Holiness of the Great God, and contrary to his righteous Will, and he finds withal suitably a contrariety in his Heart; not only in his Conscience, but in his Heart against that sin, upon the account of this contrariety to God and his Holiness, this is a spiritual acting towards that Object. The 7th Chapt. to the Romans, from the 14th Vers. to the end, confirmeth this: Doth he speak of a godly Man there under the person of himself? Yes, yet he abstracts in that view of his Heart there set forth the workings of Sanctification against sin from Faith in Christ: The issue indeed is to drive the Soul to Christ, Vers. ult. but yet in all the foregoing passage he had barely viewed and considered sin and Holineß in his Heart, as they opposed each the other; and his own words tell us his Eyes were fixed thereon alone, I see, (says he) and I do what I hate; and it is not I, but sin that dwelleth in me; I see, (says he) in my mind, a Law contrary to the Law of sin; that is, take sin as sin, I have the contrary Law in me enacted in my whole Man. Have you the like? This is from the Spirit of Grace; this is Grace wrought in a true Calling. Chap. 4.

So that my Brethren, from all these Instances set together, I collect and gather, that from the first to the last, from bottom to top, there is a difference in all and every Spiritual acting whatsoever, since in these forementioned there is.

Only this I again add, that till Faith blooms, or blows, as you say of a Rose, we cannot have firm comfort in any of those things; Yet however such a difference there is in the things themselves: Also where those with these differences are found, there Faith upon Christ is always in the bud, though it should not be fully bloomed: Also though there is this difference, yet if we rest in these things without acting Faith on Christ immediately every day, there's so much Legality; and the Apostle had much ado (and we all much more) to get out of himself, and was all his life time jealous of his own Righteousness, and of his own heart, lest it should at any time turn in to that Righteousness he detested, and lest his heart so much as for any one moment, should be taken and found out of the exercise of pure and clear faith on Christ, as you read, Phil. 3. 9.——And be found in him not having mine own Righteousness, which is of the Law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the Righteousness which is of God by faith. Thus much as to a general Answer, what difference there is in Callings.

2. If you ask me Particular differences, I shall give you two, which I find annexed unto such a Calling, as is according to Gods Purpose, and the proper effect thereof; and shall add a third.

You know I mentioned two places for this distinction of being called according to his purpose, Rom. 8. 28. 2 Tim. 1. 9. We will have recourse to both these places, and only take those Characters, which we there find; First, Rom. 8. 28. We know that all things work together for good to them that are the Called according to his purpose; so far we cited it for our purpose afore; but observe what comes between as a Character, whereby we may be able to distinguish, [to them that love God] to them that are the Called according to his purpose.

So that, 1. True and sincere love to God is a proper note, and fruit, and effect of being called: The Apostle you see puts that in when he would make a distinction, and absolutely pitches it there; They are those that love God:

Book IV. You plainly see, the one is Exegetical, or Explanatory, or Characteristical of the other, Them that love God, them that are the Called according to his purpose.

But you'll say, Is this that that will infallibly distinguish a true calling from another calling of one that is not Elected?

Yea, and I will give you the greatest Evidence for it that the Scripture hath; It is in Heb. 5. 12. compared with the 6*th*. Chapter, Vers. 4, 5, 9. 10. It is a great instance, and punctual to the point of difference afore us; and therefore the greater, because in the one, he speaks the lowest things of these Hebrews that could be spoken of sound Professours, For when for the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need that one teacheth you again, which be the first Principles of the Oracles of God, and are become such as have need of milk and not of strong meat, [you are become such] as if they had been otherwise once: Here's as low as low can be, for men that had professed Christianity for Thirty years as they had. On the other hand he speaks the highest things of the work upon, or calling of a man not Elected, Chap. 6. 4, 5. Who were once enlightned, and had tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and had tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the World to come. And at the 9*th Vers.* He yet says of the true Believers amongst them, But, Beloved, we are persuaded better things of you, and things that accompany Salvation, though we thus speak. Now what Grace is it that the Apostle, to choose, singles out to instance in, as that which was and argued better things in them, than all that other work upon the others rehearsed, Vers. 4, 5. and things accompanying Salvation, But this very thing of love? So Vers. 10. For God is not unrighteous to forget your work, and labour of love, which ye have shewed towards his name, in that ye have ministred to the Saints, and do minister.

But you will say, How shall I know how I love God? Would you have me give you a sign of a sign? Suppose Jesus Christ were here, what course would he take? I cannot take a better. If Jesus Christ were here (and I in his stead, as you know the Scripture speaks) what course did Christ himself take? He asked Peter the Question, Peter lovest thou me? Nor did he go and rifle his heart by signs of that; but Peter, lovest thou me? I beseech you but turn over your own hearts in all that hath past between him and you; have you never found intermingled with other workings on you, any true strains of love to Him? No dispositions of Ingenuity towards him? None? Think again; If Christ did now himself appear, and did put but this Question seriously to thee; I know his Presence would awe thee to speak what thy heart doth at the bottom ultimately conceive and apprehend, though thou canst wrangle it out, and dispute it with Ministers, (as your manner is) that you have no love to Christ, none. Christ is now here present, and we in Christs stead, do put that Question to thee.

2. The Second Character averred (for I take only such as expresly and setly annexed) unto a Calling according to Purpose, in that other, 2 Tim. 1. 9. Who hath called us with an holy Calling, according to his Purpose and Grace. So then, hath God stamped Holiness on thy soul? Hath thy soul again and again considered this, how he is an holy God; Whose pure eyes can endure no iniquity; and thy heart cleaveth to him under this thought, and apprehension of him, though thy heart and life abounds with that which humbleth thee, and causeth thee to mourn, as contrary to that his holiness? Doth thy heart approve of all his Commands in all things as holy and good, because this Holy God hath given them, though never so contrary to thy lusts? And, is it thy constant wish, Oh that this Holy God would make me partaker of this Holiness! and that I might live with this Holy God for ever! I should have an happiness in him. Are there any such buddings? any such secret pulses, and strings, or veins of heart as these flowing in thee?

But you will say to me, Holiness is but a Legal thing, a conformity to the Law of God, and was in the heart of Adam, who was under a Covenant of Works; and will you say that it is a certain evidence that the God of all Grace hath savingly Called me? I do not say that is without Faith; but where true Ho-

Holiness, there must be Fuell, as where smoak is, there must be fire; and being so understood, I do avouch, and will give you an invincible Scripture for it, that true Holiness in the least degree is a proper fruit and effect of the Covenant of Grace, and a certain evidence that God will perfect and stablish thee: Thus Heb. 10. 14. By one Offering he hath perfected for ever them that are Sanctified. The effect of these words is the same with that I am upon out of Peter; Paul says, Them that are Sanctified, are perfected for ever; and Peter saye, He hath Called us into Eternal Glory, and you will see the God of all Grace engaged in it. Thus Paul also speaks, Them that are Sanctified he hath perfected for ever, that is, He hath put them out of all danger of miscarrying as for Salvation. Chap. 4.

Obj. Well, but you will say, may we build upon this, That those that are truly Sanctified are the Persons are thus perfected, and in the Covenant of Grace?

Answ. Yes, you may build on it: For it hath a Duplicate of Evidence for the ascertaining of it. 1. That the Holy Ghost by Paul's Pen hath uttered it, which single witness were enough: But, 2. Paul expressly says, That the Holy Ghost in another Scripture hath testified it, whereof the Holy Ghost is a Witness, says he, (and his proof is most punctual, and invincible) as also that it is the commensurate effect of the Covenant of Grace, Vers. 15, 16, 17. Whereof the Holy Ghost also is a Witness to us; for after that he had said before, This is the Covenant that I will make with them, after those days, saith the Lord, I will put my Laws into their hearts, and in their minds will I write them, and their sins and iniquities will I remember no more. Observe the accurateness and exactness of this proof. There were two Branches of that his Assertion in Vers. 14.

1. They that are Sanctified,
2. Are Perfected for ever.

(Even as here, Called into Eternal Glory.)

And the Scripture he cites, punctually speaks and joyns both these together, even as the Apostle doth.

1. Them that are Sanctified in those words, I will write my Law in their hearts, and so true Sanctification is expresst in Scripture, My people in whose heart is my Law.

2. Perfect for ever, in those other words, Their sins he will remember no more: And I hope they whose iniquities God remembers no more, are perfected for ever.

Unto which I add (that which I intimated afore) That the God of all Grace would appear interessed in it, viz. That this Holiness, which this Promise, Thus to be perfected is made unto, proves to be the proper fruit of the Covenant of Grace, and of that alone; For of the Covenant of Grace it is he speaks; when the Holy Ghost in the Prophet prefaced unto it, This is my Covenant after these days, namely, under the Gospel, that Covenant whereof the Apostle had afore said, Christ was the Minister, with difference from that legal Covenant, Heb. 8. Vers. 6. But now hath He obtained a more excellent Ministry, by how much also He is the Mediator of a better Covenant, which was established upon better Promises; And Vers. 10. For this is the Covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; after those days, saith the Lord, I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts, and I will be to them a God, &c. There is no other, nor no better: All truly Sanctify'd are in that Covenant; and none that are truly Sanctify'd, are Sanctify'd otherwise than by vertue of it.

I might add a Third, that I may not leave out the Principal Verb, as we say, viz. Saving Faith, and it is found in the same, Jer. 31. 3. The Lord hath appeared of old unto me, saying, Yea, I have loved thee with an everlasting love, therefore with loving kindness have I drawn thee. Hath God drawn thy heart to him? ſpecially was it his everlaſting kindneſs wherewith he hath drawn thee? I do not ask whether with Aſſurance of that his love; I am not ſo ſevere: For there is another Drawing, even in the way of Faith, of Adherence, and Recumbency; wherein he hath propoſed to thy Soul all that which is ſaid of his eternal Love to his People, to allure thy Soul to himſelf; yea, and thereby hath allured it, and hath ſtrengthened thy heart to ſpread it and plead it afore him blind-fold, That he would accept and wrap thy Soul in that bundle. Eternal Love hath herein found out, and owned thy Soul, and thy Soul hath owned and laid hold on, or rather refer'd it ſelf unto. And hath God cauſed thee, in this manner, thereon to truſt, as David ſpeaks, and to give up thy ſelf thereto, as to be ſaved, to the conduct of it, ſo to be carried on by it, and to fulfil in thee the good pleaſure of his Will, even the will and the deed, according to his good pleaſure, thou working out thy Salvation in a ſubordination and dependance thereupon; and do the drawings and motions of it in thy heart ſtill recover thee from ſin when thou art faln, break thy heart, and humble thee for falling; and the little holineſs thou haſt, hath come in this way? And doſt thou owe the greateſt part thereof (at leaſt) to theſe drawings by God, and pleadings of thine with God about that his everlaſting Love? (or his Free-grace, as we uſually call it) and thy intereſt in it? Doſt thou grieve that thou art not made altogether holy by it? Hath God indeed drawn thy heart (ſhall I ſay even out of thy ſelf) thus, and taken thy heart thus with this his everlaſting kindneſs, and canſt thou think that this God will leave thee? What, and have drawn thee with this Love? No, he will never do it. He can never find in his heart to do it; his Love hath ingaged it ſelf to thee, and himſelf thereby. And what is this drawing by loving kindneſs in Jeremiah, other than in the Text, The God of all grace hath called thee? And in drawing thee with loving kindneſs, hath drawn thee to Chriſt, according to that of our Saviour, None comes to me but him, whom the Father draws.

I will but further caſt in this for the comfort of ſome, which this place in Jeremiah ſuggeſts: O! thou maiſt ſay perhaps, I was thus drawn and affected once; and for a long time was carried along thereby in ſweet and free acceſſes to the God of all Grace, as ſitting upon, and reigning in his Throne of Grace; having together with theſe Acceſſes, ſome holy Obedience ſuitable, which I carried away with me, from thoſe near Acceſſes unto Grace: O, but Wretch that I am! I am greatly fallen and decayed in thoſe reſpects: For thy comfort, read but the words afore in that Prophetical paſſage, Again, I will build thee up, and thou ſhalt be built. I know in the letter it is ſpoken of reſtoring their outward Condition; but his everlaſting love being alledged as the cauſe of it, and his drawing them as a conjunct Effect, I may warrantably apply it unto their Souls, as God alſo would have thoſe his drawn or called ones among them to underſtand. What do I then infer from hence?

Haſt thou run into Dilapidations and Decays of that former work, when it was a time of Love, and when thou wert thus firſt drawn? Lo, Again, ſays he, I will build thee; And why? For my love is everlaſting, and continues the ſame: I will heal their backſlidings, and love them freely, as in Hoſea. And what is this alſo, other than what Peter alſo here farther ſays, The God of all Grace who hath called Us, will perfect, the word is reſtore, when faln ſet in joynt again, when laxated or out of joynt through falls, as Gal. 6. 1. it is uſed. This for the firſt Branch of this firſt Head, [Hath called;] which was intended by me but only as ſome few things premiſed about Calling according to God's purpoſe.

II. That Calling according to purpoſe is a work of that perfection for kind, with difference from all other works found in others, as thereby God is ingaged to carry it on unto perfection. This is added to the former, and is home to the point afore us. I put, you ſee, God's maintaining of this his work upon theſe two things.

1. His ſpecial Love that works in us a work of ſuch a kind as hath a perfection in it.

2. That

2. That his Love continueth an unchangeable respect unto it for the kind and perfection of it, as bearing the peculiar stamp of such a Love. These two, in this Argument, have a Recursus or Recoil, a running back again one into the other: 1. His Love works the work: That work wrought, hath that hold on, and interest in his Love, as it is engaged to carry it on, because it wrought it, which indeed is no other than what is in the Text. 1. The God of Grace hath called: 2. This God of Grace having called, will perfect, stablish it. Chap. 4.

I shall single forth but one Scripture, which alone speaks fully, and to the whole of this Assertion; it is James 1. 16, 17, 18. verses, Do not err, my Brethren: Every good gift, and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of Lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning: Of his own will begat he us with the word of Truth, that we should be a kind of first fruits of his Creatures. Upon this passage it is, I shall center my Discourse, as being proper and adequate unto every tittle of the Assertions, which were,

1. That there is a good a perfect work of Regeneration and Calling, which proceeds out of God's special good Will.
2. And this with difference from other gifts and works bestowed upon temporary Professors.
3. Unto which work God bears an unchangeable respect, without shadow of turning from it; and that both because,
   1. It proceeds out of his good Will at first.
   2. Because it is accordingly a perfect Gift, wholly differing from all other Gifts whatever that he doth bestow upon the Sons of Men.

And a glimmering of all or most of these do appear out of the Text in the very reading of the words; especially if their Coherence with James his whole Discourse before (which I shall presently set out) be weighed and considered.

Although I shall land in this Passage, Vers. 17, 18. as the Conclusion; yet in order unto the greater illustration of the Apostles set scope in these words, I must fetch a compass about, and run over, as briefly as I can, the fore-part of this Chapter, unto vers. 10. which may perhaps cast some light upon the whole Epistle, as to what is the main design of it, which hath not been so fully observed.

And the Reason why I am to do this is, I did necessarily put in this Clause into the Assertion, That Regeneration or true Calling is &c. with difference from whatever other works or gifts God bestows on any others; and indeed, one great end of God's, in bestowing other gifts upon men Non-elect, is to set off the more, that his special Grace shewn to his only called Ones, in the perfection of that work on them, with difference from all other works that are but the Counterfeits thereof; and therefore the Consideration of both these together, set in view one by the other, serves greatly to illustrate this great point in hand: And this (I say) is one eminent scope in James, which I must punctually keep unto, and not digress; so as you are not to expect handling particular Differences of these works further, than as in the opening of James any such shall start forth, and discover themselves there to lye: But the sum of it, viz. that such a difference there is, and that this is James his design, is all my present business.

I shall draw the Current of James his Discourse into these rills.

1. He at first breaks in abruptly upon them, with the greatest Paradox to the World that ever was uttered, and which true Christianity only can receive and imbrace, vers. 2. My Brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers Temptations. 1. All joy, Count it matter of joy, and of full joy: 2. When ye fall as into a Precipice, that is, suddainly, without warning or being lookt for: And 3dly, at once, not by degrees or succession: 4. Into Temptations, not one, but many, in the plural: 5. And those of divers sorts; for Persecution draws a train with it, as of Poverty, All taken away, Imprisonment, Banishment nishment (as John often, and Aquila, Priscilla,) Sickness through ill usage, Death, Miseries on Wives, Children, Families.

Book IV.

Now for an Apostle, God's Herald, to proclaim this with so great a triumph to all joy and glorying (as vers. 9.) thus aforehand, when they were but putting on their Armour, when men use to do, that when Victors put it off; and to inculcate this as the best news, and greatest happiness and blessedness that could befal them, verse 12. Blessed is the man that endureth temptation, &c. All this must have this supposal or thing taken for granted at the bottom of it, That the God of all Grace had afore designed a most glorious issue, and would most infallibly and certainly uphold and carry all, truly called, through all these Temptations to the most glorious issue and atchievement at last that the heart of man could conceive or expect; for so he inserts, vers. 3, 4. [Knowing this, &c.] that is, laying down this for a certain truth, take it for granted, and be assured of it at the very entrance into them: And indeed, to have made this Proclamation without this Foundation for the bottom of it, had been the most weak and uneffectual Exhortation, not to say the greatest Vanity, in the world: For otherwise, without this Assistance and undertaking from God, such Temptations do work upon flesh the clear contrary; and it is impossible, at least an infinite hazard and danger, but that they should do so, and so they would be matter of the greatest discouragement as could happen unto man; only understand all this to belong unto sound Christians, and to none else.

Now what is this, but the same, and no other than the grand point we have been upon all this while out of Peter here in the end of his Epistle, and with which also himself had made his entry in the beginning of the Epistle, Chap. 1. vers. 6. 7. Wherein ye greatly rejoyce, though now for a season (if need be) ye are in heavineſs through manifold Temptations: that the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be try'd with fire, might be found unto the praise, &c.

'Tis true indeed, James speaks of outward Temptations; yet these are always, we know, for a season, accompanied with inward Temptations many ways, as in the same ways Peter acknowledgeth, in those words, Though now for a season, ye are in heavineſs through manifold temptations: And our James gives a set and solemn Admonition about them also, Vers. 13. Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God, &c. Of which more afterward.

But although this about Temptations was James his entrance, and he begins with that as a necessary exhortation for those times, yet it served but to lead on to another greater, and more principal design, and that was a discovery of false and unsound Professors, who fill'd their Churches, of whom in Temptation, many already had, and others would fall away: And indeed, the very design of God himself in sending these Temptations was, and is to try and discover the sound and unsound, by enduring Temptations; so Vers. 4. that the trying your Faith, viz. of you, and the Faith that is in you, whether it be sound or no. And Vers. 12. Blessed is the Man that endureth Temptation. Hence, though this about Temptations was his Preface, yet it gave but the Occasion and Introduction to that other more general Scope now specified; and this Discovery to have been the set general drift of the Epistle, Aretius was well aware of, though few (if any Interpreters else) That although there are (says he) many other particular Propositions handled by James, yet there is no general one, which you may find (says he) in Vers. 22. Be ye doers of the word, and not Hearers only, deceiving your own selves: And often (in effect) again repeated in the Epistle. And the occasion was, says he; that there were many that profest Religion in their Churches that were not sound, of whom the Apostle gives many and shrewd Characters, through this Epistle, which other Interpreters smother, noting them only under the notion of vices or corruptions in practise among them: These Characters are such as these, A double-minded Man is unstable in all his ways, Vers. 8. And Vers. 23. If any be a hearer of the word and not a doer, he is like unto a Man beholding his natural face in a glaſs, &c. Then Vers. 26. If any Man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his Tongue, but deceiveth his own Heart, this Mans Religion is vain. In the 2d Chap. an allowed allowed Partiality in keeping Gods commands, Verſ. 10, 11, 12. Whoſoever ſhall keep the whole Law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all: For he that ſaid, do not commit Adultery; ſaid alſo, Do not kill: Now if thou commit no Adultery, yet if thou kill, thou art become a Tranſgreſſor of the Law. So ſpeak ye, and ſo do, as they that ſhall be judged by the Law of Liberty: Alſo of thoſe that would put their Religion in Faith, without works, from Verſ. 14. to the end. In the 3 Chap. 14. he ſpeaks of Profeſſors whoſe zeal, though about matters of Religion, was bitter, Verſ. 14, 15, 16. But if ye have bitter envying and ſtrife in your Hearts, glory not, and lye not againſt the Truth; This wiſdom deſcendeth not from above, but is earthly, ſenſual, deviliſh; For where envying and ſtrife is, there is confuſion, and every evil work: Which he diſcerns from that wiſdom which is Truth or Grace, whoſe character you find, Verſ. 17. But the wiſdom that is from above is firſt pure, then peaceable, gentle and eaſy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocriſie. In the 4*th. Chap.* he gives like Characters of worldly Profeſſors; the vigour and ſtrength of whoſe intentions and contentions was ſpent upon ſeeking things of this World, Verſ. 1. and 2. and who if they prayed for them, yet 'twas to conſume upon their luſts, Verſ. 3. which ſort of Men he terms in downright terms, Adulterers and Adultereſſes, Verſ. 4 for there were of both ſexes ſuch: Ye Adulterers and Adultereſſes, know ye not that the friendſhip of the World is enmity with God? Whoſoever therefore will be a friend of the world, is the enemy of God: And at Verſ. 8 he gives them that counſel and direction which alone was proper to their condition, even to begin an initial Repentance and converſion from out of a ſtate of ſin, which they yet lay in, Verſ. 8, 9, 10. Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you; ceaſe your hands ye ſinners, and purifie your Hearts ye double-minded; Be afflicted, and mourn, and weep; let your laughter be turned to mourning, and your joy to heavineſs: Humble your ſelves in the ſight of the Lord, and he ſhall lift you up: And it is certain that the double-minded there, was one that was hitherto in his ſins, and not hitherto in the ſtate of Grace. Chap. 4.

Now though Aretius ſeems firſt to deſcry this at Verſ. 22. of Chap. 1. yet I hope you will diſcern the miſtery of this Diſcovery to work from the beginning of this firſt Chapter, and to have had a good progreſs all along unto Verſ. 19.

II. Hence flow's then the ſecond Rivulet, the fore-part of this Chapter runs into, that James doth induſtriouſly ſet out two ſorts of Profeſſors, ſound and unſound, or Temporaries; and alſo two ſeveral works upon them, although intermingledly; ſometimes ſpeaking of the one, ſometimes of the other; and all to ſhew that the falling away of the one, ariſeth from the imperfection of that gift, or work that is upon them; and the enduring of the other from the Perfection or Goodneſs of that work wrought in them.

For the Demonſtration of which, I ſhall curſorily run over from the Verſ. 3. to the 19*th.* and then mainly center in the Perfection of a true work, out of Verſ. 17, 18. which is the point, for the ſake and proof of which, I was induced to this Expoſition of this firſt Chapter of James.

I. Begin we with his beginning at Verſ. 3, 4. which we have a little already opened, Knowing this that the trying of your Faith worketh patience, &c.

I. To what ſort of Chriſtians doth he ſpeak this?

Certainly to none other but the ſound: For it is,

1. To them that have ſuch Faith as will bear the trial, and will, being tried bring forth that patience which we have been a ſetting out. 2. They are each as have already had ſome knowledge and experience in leſſer trials and skirmiſhes, that their Faith hath begun to bring forth Patience in ſome meaſure.

2. It may be ſeen, by what a Character of Perfection it is, (as oppoſed to Counterfeit and Imperfect, ſays Beza) that he ſets upon their Faith and the workings of it.

I. The

BOOK IV.

1. The Faith it ſelf he there ſpeaks of, is a true and perfect work of Faith for kind; for lo, the Operations and iſſues of it are ſuch.

2. The very word [works] Patience, in the greek ſignifies a through and a perfect working, and not by halves; if you will engliſh it, ſay [perfecteth] Patience, that is, begets ſuch a Patience as is true, perfect, genuine, this true Faith doth. Then again, Fides per patientiam exercetur ut per hanc, quadam ſit perfecta probetur. Beza in verba. Κατεργάζεται peroperatur, i.e. plene & [perfecte] operatur. A Lapide in verba.

3. Let that patience have but its perfect work, as when Patience is of the right breed it will have, either in a leſſer or greater degree. And then,

4. The effect of all theſe will be to make you, (the perſons in whom theſe things are,) perfect, that is, will bring you to that perfection of thirty, ſixty, or an hundred fold, which God hath appointed to bring you to Heaven with all. Here is Perfect upon Perfect, and Perfect and Perfect again; and Faith it is that is the great Grand-mother of all theſe, and therefore it is a Perfect or ſound Faith only he aims to ſpeak of, which begets in its kind ſtill what are perfect even as it ſelf is. And what doth this other then point us to, and indeed withal interpret that very point of difference, which he centers in Verſ. 17. Even as this thus begins it, every good and perfect gift; viz. in true Believers, as in diſtinction from what are counterfeit and imperfect, as which will never make him, that hath them, perfect, as the Laws weakneſs and imperfection the Apoſtle ſpeaks; which true Faith, you ſee, (he ſays) doth. And is not this the very point of difference alſo, which Chriſt in the Parable gives between the Thorny and good ground; the one brings not forth fruit to perfection, Luke 8. 14 but the good with Patience, Verſ. 15. of which afterwards.

III. The third Head or Rivulet is, That in a ſpecial manner thoſe words of this firſt Chap. Verſ. 11. For the Sun is no ſooner riſen with a burning heat, but it withereth the graſs; and the flower thereof falleth, and the grace of the faſhion of it periſheth: So alſo ſhall the rich Man fade away in his ways; Theſe words, I ſay, are in this Coherence intended as an Admonition unto a rich Profeſſor, who being unſound, would certainly wither and fall away, if he repented not: And although the former general Scheme might ſufficiently evince James his Scope, to have been to ſet out theſe two ſorts of Profeſſors; yet I do further ſingle out this Verſe, more largely to inſiſt upon; becauſe the opening of it will both give further light to this Epiſtle, and alſo becauſe that the words taken with the words afore in Verſ. 9. 10. contain in them a foundation of difference, in this ſort of Profeſſors, of the imperfect work wrought on them, from that good and perfect work of Regeneration, Verſ. 17, 18. and Gods different reſpect had thereto, which is the main point in hand; and to I ſet this Verſ. 11. and Verſ. 17, 18. in a comparative oppoſition one to the other.

I ſhall expedite the opening of this Verſ. 11. by three Heads.

1. Why, under the inſtance of rich Profeſſors, he ſhould expreſs the ſtate of Temporary Believers, rather than under that of the poor, of whom he had ſpoken Verſ. 10. as well as of the rich? Or why not under the Perſons of both? Why ſhould he take the advantage to bring in this Admonition concerning Temporaries upon the ſcore rather of the Rich?

I ſhall give an Anſwer to this, to prevent an Objection that had been obvious to be made upon the ſequel of my Diſcourſe.

The account I give of the Reaſon hereof is,

The Caſe ſtood thus: He writes to the Jews, to the twelve Tribes ſcattered abroad, Verſ. 1. The Jews were then ſcattered over all Countries, and among all the Nations.

And obſerve, 1. That the Apoſtles in thoſe few Epiſtles which they write to the Jews, give more frequent and ſharp admonitions and characters about Temporary Believers, than all elſe that were written to the Gentiles. There are Epiſtles written to the Jews, Peter's, Paul's to the Hebrews, and James's: [illegible], you ſee how he deals with them in his ſecond Epiſtle, Chap. 2. towards wards the latter end. Paul wrote to the Hebrews, and no Epistle speaks so much, so oft, so home, to temporary Believers, and of falling short of the grace of God; of mens being enlightned, and tasting of the powers of the World to come, &c. and of being sanctified by Christs Blood, and yet falling away from Ordinances first, and then proceeding to do despight to the spirit of Grace, Chap. 10. and the like Admonitions to take heed of such a state, Chap. 3. and 4. not all the Epistles so much. And 3ly James: He in a manner chiefly pursues this Argument. Whatever might be the reason of it, I know not; yet this argues there were amongst the Professors of Christianity of the Jewish Nation there, de facto, extant, more Temporary Believers comparatively, than in other nations of the Gentiles. Chap. 4.

Again, 2. That Nation of the Jews were generally rich, and more given to seek riches than any other Nation, and to that end they were Merchants, or following Merchandise, as they are to this day, full of griping, greedy of gain; and this James in this very Epistle insinuates, Chap. 4 v. 13. Go to now you that say, we will go to this City, and continue there a year, and buy and sell, and get gain; ἐμπορευσόμεθα, that is, we will Merchandise, Trade, and Traffick: In so much that Dr. Hammond think that this their course of Merchandise was intended here in this 11*th verse*. So shall the rich man fade away in his ways; ἐν ὁδείαις, here may possibly be (says he) a change of the Transcriber for ἐμπορίαις Tradings, or Merchandisings, as Chap. 4. 13. 'Tis the rich mans speech, ἐμπορευσόμεθα, we will Traffick, &c. The Vulgar hath it, in itineribus; Piscator, in Profectionibus; They lost Religion, and withered whilst they tumbled up and down for Gain from City to City. He here speaks their hearts and their course; and this was their sin; and this their sin to this very day; and they are apt to hoard up Riches. There is no People in the world, where they are not kept down, that do so strangely grow rich, as they do: And they tumble up and down the world, as these did: Now it fell out in Providence, that in these Churches James writes to, there were may of such rich Professors that were but Temporaries, that despised the poor Saints, Chap. 2, 6. that were Masterly men, &c. James speaks of them, Chap. 3. 1. who bustled in their Congregations, thinking with their greatness to carry all afore them; Men of unruly tongues, that did set on fire their Churches; and of which, in relation to disturbances in their Chrches, Grotius interprets those passages in Chap. 3. Vers. 4. 5, 6, 7, 8. These had Religion in respect of Persons, Chap. 2. v. 1. My Brethen, have not the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory, with respect of persons); and sought themselves for all the respect in the Congregation, because they were rich and great; and it was the measure they went by in giving of respect, as Vers. 2, 3. If there come unto your Assembly a man with a Gold ring, in goodly Apparel, and there come in also a poor man in vile Raiment; and ye have respect to him that weareth the gay Clothing, and say unto him, sit thou here in a good place; and say to the poor, stand thou there, or sit here under my foot-stool, &c. To confound them; Hearken, my beloved Brethren, let me speak a word in your ear, says James, I will give you a Memento, and mind it well; Chap. 2. 5. Hath not God chosen the poor in this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the Kingdom? This is full James: The Collection from hence is, That though, as the Apostle elsewhere says, Not many Rich, yet some; there are some of them that are called. Yet there were amany of rich People amomg these Temporaries, for the reason I have told you; and the Temporary Believers lay most among that Heap: There were fewer of the poorer sort that were Temporaries: The Holy Ghost knew this, and therefore directs the point and dint of his two-edg'd Sword against the Rich, and speaks more comfortable things of the Generality of the poorer sort, as of those in which heap Election lay: And therefore, above all others, do you examine the work of your Calling wrought in you, and the sincerity of your Profession: Do you take heed you do not err and deceive your selves, as Vers. 16. and 22. Take heed therefore, says he, you rich men; your are in most danger; yea, and your rank consists more of such as are unsound.

And thirdly, You find in the Parable of the Sower in all the three Evangelists, where these different works on Professors are spoken of, you will find in all the three our Saviour Christ to indigitate that it is Riches choaks the Seed, and though he mentions other things, yet all mention Riches, The deceitfulness of Riches choak the Word, Matth. 13. Himself foretold hereby, That it would prove the fate of rich men in a special manner. So that truly, James had reason to speak to rich Professors among them, as such, to warn them of this above all other sorts of men, as being those, among whom the most of Temporaries usually lay.

The second thing for the understanding of this 11th verse, is the manifest Allusion and exact Parallel that is between Christs' words in that Parable of the Sower, and James's here. This James, whether he were James the Son of Zebedee, an Apostle, or James sirnamed the Just, the Brother of our Lord, was one that followed Christ up and down, and heard his Sermons, and so was well acquainted with Christ's Parables.

1. Our Saviour utters his Parable of the difference of Professors under this common stile, Hearers of the Word, as in all the Evangelists; the close of them all is, Take heed how you hear; (and to this day you call Professors, Hearers,) James doth the like, vers. 19, 20. He describeth Professors by this Title, He is one that hears the Word. Thus also in Matth. 7. 26. Every man that heareth these sayings of mine, and doth them not, &c. And here in James 1. vers. 22. Be not hearers only, deceiving your own souls.

2. James expresses falling away by withering; so you have it in verse 11. The Sun is no sooner risen with a burning heat, but it [withereth] the Grass: Look the Parable, Matth. 13. 6. and Mark 4.6. Christ useth just the same expressions.

3. The Parable expresses their withering to be caused by the Suns rising and heat: When the Sun was up, Matth. 13. 6. they were scorched, and because they had no root, they withered away. How doth James express it concerning those rich Temporaries? Says he, The Sun is no sooner risen with a burning heat, but it withers the Grass: It is expresst the same in terms.

4. What doth James interpret this Sun rising, but of Temptation? So in the following vers. 12. Blessed is the man that endureth Temptation; which is his Inference brought down through this 11th verse. The Parable in like manner thus expresses it, When Tribulation or Persecution ariseth for the word, Matth. 13. 21. And in Luke 8. 13. more expresly, And in time of temptation fall away: The other call it Persecution and Affliction, but Luke plainly useth James his word Temptation.

5. James instanceth in the rich, so all the three Evangelists instance in that above all other, Riches choak the word, Mark 4. Luke 8. 14. Matth. 13. 22.

6. How doth James express the opposite Saving Work? 1. By a good Work. 2 By a perfect Work, vers. 17. He had said vers. 4. Let Patience have her perfect work: In what language doth the Parable speak? They are the good Ground (says he) that first, having good and honest hearts, they do 2. bring forth fruit with patience; and 2. do bring forth fruit to perfection: For that is one difference whereby the thorny ground is diversified from the good ground, They bring not fruit to perfection, Luke 8. 14. Oppositely says James, Let Patience have her perfect work, and it will make you perfect. That which is perfect Faith, and of the right kind, will, when tried, bring forth Patience; and let Patience have its perfect work, it will make you perfect.

7. And lastly; Whereas in the close of the Parable, Christ says, Take heed how you hear: For whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he seems to have; thereby meaning those imperfect Gifts and Impressions, and Profession thence arising. Now come to James, If any man among you seem to be Religious, &c. This for the second Head, The Parallel of the Parable.

IV. You

Chap. 4.

IV. You have the elegant Similitudes whereby he expreſſeth the unchangeableneſs of God's Love and Dealings with and towards this work. The Compariſon is made between God and this Sun which you ſee; He calls both the Father of Lights; therein they agree but with a diſſimilitude; 'tis a Compariſon from an unlikeneſs, as the word [without] variableneſs, &c. ſhews. As if he had ſaid, God the Father of Lights is not in theſe reſpects as this Sun: Alſo this Compariſon, with an anſwerable difference, may be extended unto thoſe Graſſy fruits, verſ. 10. which the Sun brings forth out of the Earth, as bearing in this Compariſon the reſemblance of that work on Temporary Beleivers, as will appear. And on the other hand, he oppoſeth to them, and ſets in compariſon with them, theſe ſuper-excelling good and perfect fruits, which God the Father of Lights brings forth in the hearts of ſound Chriſtians, which he likens, not only unto the beſt firſt fruits of the Earth, but of the whole Creation.

1. In General, That his Scope is to inſtitute a Compariſon between God and this Sun; that the Phraſe, Father of Lights, manifeſts, which yet ſome do underſtand ſimply and ſingly ſpoken of God, without any Alluſion unto the Sun at all, and interprete it by the like Titles given to God in other places, as Father of Glory, 1 Eph. 17. and ſo to be all one as to ſay, a Father full of Lights, Pater luminoſiſſimus, and ſo to import only what elſewhere is ſaid, God is Light, and in him is no darkneſs at all ——and who dwells in light inacceſſible, &c. But that this Title of Father of Lights, is,

Erasmus, Vatablus, Dr. Hammond.

1. Not ſpoken only of what he is in himſelf, but in reſpect to his Effects, that come down from him, (though what he is in himſelf, muſt be underſtood to be the Foundation of it) is plain: For he is termed Father in reſpect of his Gifts, as theſe words ſhew, Every good and perfect Gift cometh down from the Father of Lights, James 1. 17. And Father, we know, is all one as the Author or Creator, as Father of Spirits, Heb. 12. 9. and elſewhere often; and here in reſpect of begetting us, not out of his Nature, but his Will, verſe 18.

And ſecondly, That it is ſpoken in Alluſion to the Sun, appears, 1. Not only by this, That this Sun is known to be the Principle and Fountain of Light, both in the Moon, and in the Stars, and in the Air; and ſo God is of all Lights in Angels, who are called Angels of Light, 2 Cor. 11, 14. and his Saints Children of Light: He is alſo the Author of that Light which is in the univerſality of Mankind, who enlightneth every man that cometh into the World, John 1. 9. Now then, the meaning is this, That God, He who is the Father of all Lights, in all theſe owns himſelf, to be in a ſpecial manner, Father of ſuch Spiritual Lights as are a good and perfect gift, which regenerates and makes men Children to him, as in verſ. 18. and enlightneth them with the light of Life, as Chriſt by way of diſtinction ſpeaks, John 8. 12. 2. This Alluſion alſo that of firſt fruits confirms: And, 3dly, many of thoſe Interpreters that would have him ſtiled thus, in reſpect of being Light in himſelf, and ſo quaſi Pater luminoſiſſimus, as Father of Glory, &c. yet are fain to acknowledge the next words, No ſhadow of turning to bear a Compariſon with the Sun in a way of Diſſimilitude. This as to the general import of the Similitude: 'Tis a Compariſon with the Sun which the enſuing Particulars will more fully clear.

Pater luminum, ſays Beza, qui eſt Fons & Author ISTIUS Lucis ſeu notitiæ, that Light which is perfect and ſpiritual, which he had afore diſcourſed of.

Piſcator, Beza, Grotius.

[The Particulars of the Compariſon.]

1. He expreſſeth the difference of the two Works, perfect and imperfect, under the Similitudes of the FRUITS which God and this Sun produce. This the Similitude of the firſt fruits of the whole Creation, verſ. 18. on the one part, to which he compares Regeneration, and all perfect Gifts accompanying, doth ſhew; being ſet in compariſon with thoſe imperfect Graſs fruits, ſpoken of in verſe 11. on the other part; which he ſtiles but Graſs, and the flower of Graſs, which, though they have an outward Grace in the faſhion of them, yet are but Graſs, as his words there are: And by ſuch he ſets out the moſt glorious Gifts that are in Temporaries.

BOOK IV.

And the Compariſon of thoſe two words is exceeding elegant.

1. Theſe common imperfect Gifts had been moſt aptly compared to thoſe graſſy, earthly Fruits, which the Sun brings forth, in the ſtony and thorny Ground: For indeed, how is it that the Sun doth bring forth theſe, or indeed any other other, not immediately, but out of the Principles which are in the womb of the Earth, only the Sun quickens and enlivens them, and draws them forth, by the influence of his Being, Light, and Heat; but creates them, not immediately, but educeth them as forms are out of the Principles in the Matter, as Vapours that it draws up out of the Earth.

And although Chriſt in the Parable inſtituted his Compariſon only between theſe Fruits that are but Graſs, and thoſe other good Fruits of the Earth that are Grain and Corn riſing up to perfection; yet James his new Compariſon, Verſ. 17. riſeth far higher (as in the ſequel will appear,) and further ſets out theſe firſt fruits by their high deſcent (as I may tearm it, in alluſion to James his Phraſe of them) as being in their original meerly celeſtial, and in that reſpect no fruits on Earth to be compared with them, and this heavenly original of them; the Parable took no notice of, but compared them only to thoſe pretious Fruits of the Earth, of Corn, &c. So as the compariſon here, as James advanceth it, runs between ſuch fruits as are but meer Graſs, and ſuch as are ſuppoſed heavenly and celeſtial: And this their original is here emblaſoned in three ſeveral Phraſes.

That they are from above, which is all one as to ſay, from God; yea, and from God wholly, as of Chriſt 'tis ſaid, in John 3. 31. He that cometh from above is above all: He that is of the Earth is earthly, and ſpeaketh of the Earth; he that cometh from Heaven, is above all. And ſuch, in reſpect of their origine, are theſe firſt fruits, in compariſon to thoſe others. And to this very purpoſe doth James himſelf uſe the Phraſe in this Epiſtle, when ſpeaking of the difference of true zeal, and counterfeit zeal, about matters of Religion, he ſets that difference forth by their different original, as well as by their effects: That true zeal is a Wiſdom (or Grace) from above, &c. Verſ. 17. The Wiſdom that is from above is firſt pure, then peaceable, gentle, and eaſie to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocriſie; but bitter zeal, πικρὸν ζῆλον, which we tranſlate bitter envying, Verſ. 14. and ſtrife in your Hearts, though about matters of Religion; This Wiſdom, Verſ 15. deſcendeth not from above, but is earthly, ſenſual, deviliſh; It is but the acting the corrupt Principles, that are in the Heart already, Principles of Fleſh, &c. which the Devil alſo will ſtrike in withal to make diviſions; and therefore, ſays he, Glory not in ſuch a zeal (as Jehu did,) and lye not againſt the truth, in judging that to be true Grace: No. The like may be ſaid of other Graces, and of their Counter-faith, for all have their Counter-faith. Theſe differ thus in their original, and therefore in their kind, and in their effects.

2. Theſe perfect gifts are ſaid to deſcend, καταβαίνον, as the Holy Ghoſt himſelf is ſaid to do, Joh. 1. 33. that is, wholly and purely comes down from God, and nothing of it is from what is beneath.

3. Theſe firſt fruits are wholly by Creation, yea, and by a ſecond Creation, being the firſt fruits of the whole Creation, and ſo excelling the firſt; and yet the firſt Creation was totius entis, of the whole being of what was then created; and therefore hereby theſe are imported to be wholly from him, in the whole being, or entity of them. 'Tis the Seed of God which is let fall into the Heart from above, and ſo wholly Heaven-born for kind, though in degrees imperfect, and though accompanied in the Heart where it is, with innumerable mixtures of Self and Corruptions.

Now as to thoſe other imperfect gifts, this viſible Sun brings forth Common Herbs, as Dazies, Primroſes, and ſuch as grow alone in the Wilderneſs; and ſuch, and no better, are Moral Vertues, which are produced in Heathens, and without the Word, and are but Graſs, as all will acknowledg. And the ſame Spirit produceth, with and by the means of the Word, Enlightnings, and Affections ſtirred by theſe enlightnings towards theſe Objects or things held forth in the Word; yet ſtill, the work it ſelf, if it be examined to the bottom, tom, ſprings and ariſes but from the Principles that were in the Heart before, only are now elevated, lifted up, and raiſed and taken up about new Divine Objects by a new light preſented to them. Chap. 4.

If you Object, are they not ſaid to be partakers of the Heavenly Gift, Heb. 6. 4?

The Anſwer is, There is indeed a Participation of a Gift from Heaven, but 'tis but in reſpect of an influence from Heaven, without which they would never be drawn forth; and in that there is a word that comes from Heaven, which moveth and affecteth them, by the inſtrumentality of which, there being a light to direct them to new Divine Objects, above what Nature or Reaſon, &c. would any way reveal, or ſo far enlighten them in, theſe new Objects are ſet on with power, yet ſo as the Priciples in the Heart are not radically or intrinſecally changed.

1. The Underſtanding hath not a new Principle, a ſpiritual Faculty to capacitate it to take in thoſe ſpiritual things ſpiritually, and as they are in their own Nature. And ſo, though there ſeems to be a great Change, becauſe both a new Light is let in, and new Objects preſented that never were afore; yet, as a piece of Glaſs remaining red or green, gives every beam of light let in, a tincture of that colour that is in it ſelf; ſo that the Objects that come to the eye through it, are died and tincted alſo, and ſo diſcoloured; whereas through a pure Chriſtal Glaſs, they appear in their own native hue and excellency. Thus is it here, a new Chriſtalline is put in to take in all ſpiritual things in their own true native hue and glory:

2. Self-love, which in corrupt Nature that is not truly regenerated, is the ſpring of motion unto all the wheels, the Affections, which riſe and fall no farther than as ſelf, that poſſeſſeth, informs and ſpirits all theſe, doth find it ſelf concerned; that Principle in the Heart meeting with ſuch things in the Word, as do ſo deeply and neerly concern a Mans ſelf, and ſuch things in the Word, are now ſet upon the Soul with power (which are therefore ſtiled the Powers of the World to come;) hence the Will, and all the Affections that are ſeated and rooted in Self, are awakened, ſtirred, acted; and they receive the Word with joy, and ſo other things in the Word, with other Affections, according as the things revealed do concern Self, but no farther then as that is the ſpring and mover.

And 3ly, from theſe the Counterfeit of all Graces will ſoon ariſe and ſpring up, and a zealous Profeſſion for a time

2. And yet, ſecondly, all theſe are (as you may eaſily diſcern) in their Root and Principle, but fleſh, though produced by an aſſiſtance from above, and ſo are accordingly to be reckoned but amongſt fruits of fleſh; and that the beſt, if you compare them with the fruits of the Earth, as Chriſt doth, but as the flower of the Graſs, as both James, Verſe 10. terms them, and Iſaiah alſo, Chap. 40. 6, 7. and Peter likewiſe, 1 Epiſt. Chap. 1. 23, 24. Being born again, not of corruptible Seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever: For all fleſh is as graſs, and all the glory of man as the flower of graſs; the graſs withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away. And what is there termed fleſh and graſs, &c. by Peter, is not meant only of worldly Glory, as of Riches, Honours, &c. (as, nor that of Iſaiah) nor chiefly ſo, but alſo and more principally of all Excellencies and Gifts that are ſhort of true Regeneration, which he oppoſeth to them, and which is wholly a right Seed, and incorruptible, but all other are of a corruptible Seed or Principle, as hath been now explained, and as the Apoſtle ſtiles them there in diſtinction from that incorruptible Principle and Original let down into the heart; and the knowledge of this diſtinction anſwers a great Objection I ſhall afterward have occaſion to mention. This the comparing of verſe 23. ſhews, Being born again, not of corruptible ſeed, but &c.

And indeed, Chriſt himſelf in the Parable, ſpeaks at ſuch a kind of rate, of theſe bringings forth on the thorny and ſtony Ground, of which James, verſe 11. and 13. ſpeaks, and how that indeed, and in reality, all their Gifts and Graces were not Fruit, they deſerved not ſo much as the name of Fruit, nor doth he thus vouchſafe ſo to ſtile them of the thorny ground (who were the higheſt highest sort of those Professors) and intended in Heb. 6. vers. 4, 5. as appears by comparing vers. 7, 8. (as I have elsewhere shewn;) For it is impossible for those who were once enlightned, and have tasted of the heavenly Gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come; If they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; ——— For the Earth which drinketh in the rain that cometh oft upon it, and bringeth forth herbs meet for them by whom it is dressed, receiveth blessing from God. But that which beareth thorns and briars, is rejected, and is nigh unto cursing, whose end is to be burned. Of the thorny ground, I say, it is expresly said in the Parable, not only that they bring not forth fruit to perfection, Luke 8. 14. the Root and Principles not being perfect, nor are the Fruits such: They have neither perfect Gifts, nor bring forth perfect Fruits. But more expresly both in Mark and Matthew, 'tis said, That they became unfruitful; but yet more expresly in the former, or fore-part of that of the thorny ground, as by Mark it is recorded; Mark 4. 7. 'tis said, It yielded no fruit.

Now then, if all the gifts and profession in such Professors be not Fruits, though never so goodly, and deserve not so much as the name, what must they be accounted then? Why truly, no other than Grass; as those deaf ears, as you call them, that grow upon House tops, although they have the same shape that stalks and ears of Corn have, as growing out of Chaff left in the Straw, yet they have the name of Grass, Psal. 129. 7, 8. Wherewith the Mower filleth not his hand, nor he that bindeth sheaves his bosome. Neither do they which go by, say, The blessing of the Lord be upon you: We bless you in the Name of the Lord. So these here; only they are the flower of the Grass indeed; the highest and greatest Excellencies and Endowments that this Earth affords, yet but Grass: And the reason is, God loved, &c. and his Glory aimed at the heart, as the pith and substance of all godliness: Take these out of all Duties performed by us, or out of Gifts wrought in us, and they are but flesh as well as any other Excellencies of Honours, Learning, Wisdom, Vertues, &c. For why? If the Kernel, the Grain, the Corn be wanting, the Stalk and the Ear are no other than Grass and Chaff. The most goodly Flowers that the Earth affords, as Lillies, (which indeed are our Tulips, and brought from those Countries) so glorious, as Christ says, Solomon in all his glory was not cloathed as one of them, Matth. 6. 29. yet, verse 30. he stiles them but Grass, which to day is flourishing, but cast into the Oven the next day. And thus all such Profession, it is but Grass, and will wither here, and be burned hereafter, as John 15. 6. If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered, and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned. This for the first part of the Comparison, Gifts in unsound Professors are not Fruits, but Grass.

But opposite hereunto, he sets true Regeneration, Vers. 18. and those Graces flowing from it, specified by him, of Faith, Vers. 3. Patience, Vers. 4. Prayer, Vers. 5, 6. Humiliation, and the blasting of all outward Glories, a valuation of things at their own rate, Vers. 12. and then Love, Vers. 12. These, and such like, he compares to the first fruits of the whole Creation; by the extent of which similitude, he prefers them, not only unto the best Fruits, as of Grain and Corn, arrived unto full perfection, unto which Christ in his Parable had only compared them: And so that, look what difference of worth or valuation Corn or Grain, do bear amongst the Sons of Men, in comparison of what is but Grass, and the flower of the Grass; such a difference do these sustain in God's esteem: And what an high rate such Fruits of the Earth have, or ought to have, and would have in times of want amongst Men, Our James also hath prompted us to consider, honouring these with the Epithite of the Pretious Fruits of the Earth, Chap. 5. 7. as the Psalmist had afore him compared the Tears and Prayers of the Saints unto pretious Seed, Psal. 126. 6. He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing pretious Seed, &c. and compare with it the other, Psal 129. 6. Let them be as the grass upon the house tops, which withereth afore it groweth up.

But

Chap. 4.

But, obſerve that here he doth not compare them ſimply to the beſt or Firſt fruits of the Earth, as our Saviour afore him had done, (which are yet more precious than Gold or Diamonds, which the Earth alſo affords, for they preſerve mans life; but you cannot eat Gold or Jewels): But unto the firſt Fruits of the whole Creation, which is a far wider Territory than the Earth, and ſo takes in Angels and all; as Auſtin hath extended the Compariſon, Gratia Dei non ſolum omnia Sidera, verum etiam omnes Angelos ſupergreditur; The Grace of God ſurpaſſes not only all the Stars, but alſo all the Angels; and Aquinas his reaſon is evictive of it, Majus opus eſt quod terminatur ad bonum æternum divinæ participationis, That is a greater work which is ordained for, and terminates in ſuch a good Eternal in the participation of the Divine nature; quam quod terminatur ad bonum naturæ mutabilis, than that which is terminated in the good of a changable nature.

Lib. 2. ad Bonifacium Ep. 8.

Now take that Grace of the Angels which they had by their Creation, and it was in the termination and tendency of it, take it as it was by Creation only, but a mutable, and changeable good, as was ſufficiently ſeen in thoſe that fell; and the ſame might have fallen out, and would yet fall out in them that ſtood, had they not more than their Creation Grace.

If therefore theſe gifts be for their perfection the firſt Fruits of the whole Creation, then more excelling in their kind than the whole Creation: Even as when our Lord is ſaid, to be the firſt fruits of them that ſleep, 1 Cor. 15. 20. And again Verſ. 23. Chriſt the firſt fruits, and afterwards them that are Chriſts, as Chriſt is there ſo ſtiled, in reſpect of his tranſcendent Excellency, in compariſon of them that are his, ſo likewiſe are theſe the Firſt fruits, ſo ſtiled for the like reaſon of Eminency unto the reſt of the whole Creation. Perfect gifts then theſe theſe are, and the moſt perfect God can produce, and therefore perfect, becauſe they make us the chief and top of the Creation: Deus ſuis Donis facit illos perfectiſſimos, and at laſt, they do make us moſt perfect.

De Quiros in verba.

There is this further in this ſimilitude which James uſeth above that which Chriſt had imported, that he likens the producing of theſe his Firſt fruits to a Father his begetting his Children; For as, Verſ. 17. He ſtiles God, The Father of Lights, that is of theſe lights of Grace: So Verſ. 18. he ſays, He begets us, that we might be the firſt fruits of the Creation. Now mark this. Theſe precious Fruits of the Earth, which the Earth brings forth, the Sun is never ſtiled the Father of them, they are but the Effects of his benign Heat which accompany his light. He is termed indeed, The Father of all thoſe lights that are in the Heavens; As the Stars, the Moon, &c. but not the Father of the Fruits of the Earth; For they no way wear his Image, his Beams, as we ſee the Stars, &c. do thoſe of the Sun: But God the Father of lights, begets theſe Graces in Us, as a Father that conveys his Image; ſo that look as himſelf is The Father of Lights, ſo thoſe that are born of him, are Light in the Lord, and Children of Light, as many Scriptures in the New Teſtament ſpeak. And their Graces have the perfection and glory to be the Image of that light and holineſs that is in himſelf. So that if you would fill up this new compariſon of James, to the full of it, you muſt firſt fancy this Viſible Sun to bring forth not earthly Fruits only, as in the Earth we ſee it doth, but that every one of thoſe fruits bore, and had the Image of the Sun it ſelf ſhining, and ſparkling, with light in their proportion as it ſelf doth, as if he cauſed new Stars to riſe out of the Earth inſtead of ſtalks, as well as in the Heavens we ſee Stars are enlightned by him: And this is the every caſe here, Phil. 2. 15. That ye may be blameleſs, and harmleſs, the Sons of God; without rebuke, in the midſt of a crooked and perverſe Nation, among whom ye ſhine as lights in the World; Let there be Lights in the Firmament, ſaid God, Gen. 1. 14. φωστῆρες, ſay the Septuagint, the ſame word that is uſed here: Our Graces are ſuch in their Original, and ought to ſhine as ſuch in this World; and it is, as if Paul had ſaid, Look what the Stars, and thoſe Lights are in the Superiour World, that you are, and ought to be in this lower World, and as far exceeding of them Stars, as your Heavenly Father, the Father of theſe lights, doth exceed the Sun, that is the Father of thoſe other. And obſerve farther in that 2. Phil. how they are termed at once both Sons of God, and LIGHTS, even as here likewiſe they are

are ſaid to be begotten of God, as the Father of Lights; both places agreeing in this import, that ſuch Sons doth God beget, even Children of light, and ſuch products as their Graces are. And thus much for the firſt compariſon between the works of themſelves, with the difference of them, as in our James it is held out in Temporary Profeſſours, and thoſe that are truly Regenerate.

The II. Compariſon holds forth the Reſpect, or Regard God hath for and towards his Firſt fruits for ever after they are brought forth by him, different from what he beareth unto the other, The Work on Temporaries. Which different reſpect he elegantly ſets out, and amplifies from and by what this viſible Sun bears, and holds towards theſe fruits forementioned, which are but Graſs which it brings forth.

1. This Viſible Sun, James tells us, Verſ. 11. and Chriſt alſo, no ſooner ariſeth, but with a ſcorching heat it withers ſuch Graſs, &c. but not ſo God's Firſt fruits; he permitteth not Temptation to ſeize on them, unleſs need be, as Peter tells us, and but ſo far as need is: He reſtrains the roughneſs of the Eaſt Wind that would hurt them, Iſai. 27. Takes care the Sun ſhall not burn them by day, nor the Moon by night, Pſalm 121. 6. This in the Eleventh Verſe.

2. In reſpect of its Courſes, Motions, and Influences towards them, in Verſ. 17. clearly different from what God the Father of Lights holdeth towards his; of which by and by. For (as I ſaid) it is a compariſon of God unto the Sun with difference.

Solem illum immutabilem à ſolis illo volubili ſecernit. De Quires on v. 17. Num. 100 and many others.

And my Brethren, be aware of this once for all, and take it along with you, as the Meaſure and true Rule of Interpretation to theſe words; That his chief end here, is not to compare God to the Sun, in reſpect of the purity and unchangeableneſs of his Nature or Eſſence, as if it run thus, That though the Sun ſhould be ſubject to a Variableneſs, and to a Shadow, and Darkneſs in it ſelf (which to our view it is not, as we daily may obſerve) yet that God is not: And yet unto this do Commentators ordinarily carry the ſcope of James in this paſſage; and in the very reading you ordinarily apprehend this meaning of it. But the Apoſtle's ſcope is to compare the Sun in the variation of his Courſes and Motions to and fro, up and down, towards the Earth, and towards the Fruits it hath begotten thereon; and thereby, as by the contrary, to ſet out what an unchangable poſture and carriage, and dealings, God holds towards theſe his Firſt fruits, that it is without variableneſs, or ſhadow of turning, namely, of turning off from them; no, never in the leaſt.

1. That it is not ſo much to ſet out the Unchangableneſs that is in himſelf, as the Unchangableneſs of his love towards theſe his perfect gifts, which having once come down from this Father of Lights, he never turns off from them however, but carries himſelf without variation towards them everlaſtingly.

That this is his meaning, 1. Not only the very terms of the Similitude here uſed do ſhew, for they ſignifie the various Courſes and Motions of the Sun (of which by and by) of which he ſays, God is without them, and therefore it muſt be underſtood, he intends to ſignifie, that God is without ſuch a variation of Motion, Poſture, or the like, towards his Children: But, 2. The next words do expreſly explain them of his Will, and ſo of the motions thereof: Of his own Will he begat us at the firſt, and accordingly in like manner continues the ſame, his good will after the production. This is it that theſe words, Without variableneſs, and ſhadow of turning, principally point us to.

Though indeed it muſt be added, That this Unchangableneſs of his Will towards them, proceedeth from the unchangableneſs of his nature, according to that of the Prophet, Malachi 3. 6. I am the Lord, I change not, This is the foundation of all; And therefore it is, that You the Sons of Jacob are not conſumed. Yet ſtill ſo, as it is his Free-will that flowing from his Nature, cometh between Us, and that his unchangable Nature, which is the immediate Cauſe of it: For that is alſo one of the differences here made of God from this Sun, That the Sun begets its Fruits, neceſſitate naturæ, out of a neceſſity of nature, but but God this Father of Lights, out of his Will, in whom, and as he pleaseth. Chap. 4.

Alſo this is to be taken in, that though it be his meer good Will moves him to beget us at firſt, yet that after he hath begotten it, that then ever after his Will bears a reſpect unto his own gift, as it is a perfect gift: For thoſe words, With whom there is no variableneſs, &c. are ſpoken as in reſpect unto thoſe perfect gifts that came down from him as Father of Lights, and ſo do import a reſpect unto the perfection of them. Theſe things premiſed,

To come to the Compariſon it ſelf. The terms here uſed without variableneſs and ſhadow of turning, are perfectly Aſtronomical, and expreſs the various motions of this Sun toward this Earth, and the fruits of it. Hierom was the firſt that diſcerned this, and Eraſmus after followed him; and ſome other late Interpreters having the ſent of it, have acknowledged it, and purſued it: And yet, which is ſtrange, Though they agree that the various courſes and motions of the Sun are meant, yet they fall croſs, under which of theſe words, the one, or the other ſhould be meant; That whereas to all mens knowledg, and obſervation, the Sun varies in reſpect of two ſorts of courſes, and motions, The firſt Riſing and ſetting every day, which we call his Diurnal or Dayly motion; the other from the Northern Tropick to the Southern; The firſt in Winter, the ſecond in Summer; in the one deſcending lower to the Earth which makes Winter, whereby he hath leſs influence of Light, and Heat; the other in aſcending ſo high again in the heavens, which makes Spring and Summer: And this Courſe of his in the whole reciprocation of it, is performed in a years ſpace, and we call it his Annual or yearly motion.

Theſe are the various Courſes of the Sun: You ſee accordingly here are two different words to ſet theſe out by.

1. Variableneſs, παραλλαγὴ. 2. Shadow of turning τροπῆς ἀποσκίασμα, and yet Interpreters that aſſent to this, that both are intended, differ about it which of the words ſhould import the one, which the other.

I will not much trouble you about it. De Quiros he peremptorily ſays the firſt word παραλλαγὴ imports the yearly motion of the Sun, that receſſus hyemalis, that departure of the Sun that makes Winter, and quotes Proclus for the Import of the Greek word; and that other word ſhadow of turning, he interprets of his ſetting and turning into the other part of the Earth every night, by which he caſts a ſhadow, which cauſeth night.

Vox enim Græca παραλλαγὴ apud Proclum in ſphæra Solis reciprocationem ſignificat. De Quiros on v. 17. num. 100.

Doctor Hammond is for the clean contrary ſignification of the words; yet agrees that both theſe motions are meant; to Him, I refer any that will read him, for he is largeſt upon it. However, between both, I have what I aim at, That both theſe motions of the Sun are intended; though I for my part encline to think with Piſcator and others, that by ſhadow of turning, or the ſhadow cauſed by his turning, is meant, That his nightly Turning off from this or that part of the World, by ſetting into the other, and ſo leaving cold night and a ſhadow behind him.

But the Application of this gallant Similitude unto the unchangeableneſs of Gods love and motions towards us, is that I aim at, and which this hitherto hath made way for.

Videtur eſſe metaphora ab occaſu ſolis; tunc enim Sol ad oppoſitum Hemiſphærium ſe convertens obumbrat Hemiſphærium quod relinquit. Piſcator in verba.

1. This viſible Sun by reaſon of theſe its motions and turning leaves a damp upon the fruits forementioned, and indeed all other which it brings forth; In Winter theſe fruits dye, and ſhrink into the root; every night caſts a ſhadow on them, and a coldneſs which is prejudicial to them, the Sun thus as it were careleſſly leaving them.

But 2. not ſo God in his courſes towards thoſe his Firſt-fruits.

1. He never alters in the leaſt degree his good will towards them; (and in reſpect of the unchangeableneſs of his Will it is that this compariſon is made) we or ſelves may change as, poor creatures, we do; but God changeth never towards thee; his heart towards thee is what it was: Thou indeed mayſt have clouds come between thee and ſin, a dark and cloudy day, as the Prophet Ezek. Chap. 34. 12. but it is day ſtill; yea, there may be tempeſts and ſtorms upon thy ſoul, but it is Day ſtill; as in Countries where the Sun it at the higheſt, there are; and moſt there of all other Countries; but his Love is in its Zenith, ſtands as Ioſhua's Sun at the top over thee, fixed and perpetually) It alters not, removes not a degree, the fixedneſs of its ſtation is pitcht and taken up towards thee, in reſpect of everlaſting kindneſs. He may let thee feel the effects of his love leſs one day than another, in comforts quicknings (for he works the will & the deed of his own good pleaſure) but his love ſubſtantially and ſolidly is one and the ſame, and varies not, whatever you may think: I know, ſays God, Jer. 29. 11. the thoughts I think towards you, thoughts of Peace, and not of evil, in all tryals.

Nor 2. Art thou to reckon of this love, either by the yearly courſe, or long run, as if thou having been in the ſtate of Grace for ſo or ſo long a time, yet then for the other half year, or more perhaps, thou ſhouldſt be out of it again, (I mention that ſpace of half a year, becauſe it was about that ſpace ſome would have David to have had a total interciſion of Gods love until Nathan came to him) and then the other half year this Sun ſhould come back again unto thee in his love, and good will. But take the whole courſe of God from firſt and laſt, and he is thine. Make not thy Almanack by ſuch uncertain Rules; Gods Calendar is otherwiſe: Remember that God is here ſaid not to be like the Sun, neither in reſpect of its yearly motion, and the alternation and variableneſs thereof, nor yet his Daily: Gods Almanack calculated for Eternity, varies not his love in either reſpects. Count up then with thy ſelf that God loves thee not by the year only, that is, as if thou take the whole of thy life in groſs by the great: No, but God loves thee by the Day; He varies not in his Love; It is unchangable in reſpect of any daily receſs or leaving of Thee, I ſay his love is. Jeſus Chriſt, this Sun of Righteouſneſs, his Love never ſets when once it is riſen, but as, Heb. 13. 8. Jeſus Chriſt the ſame yeſterday, and to day, and for ever; I confeſs, that place is mainly to be taken, of his being the ſame in his vertue and efficacy in the yeſterday of the Old Teſtament, and the preſent day of the Goſpel, and for the for ever in the other World; but withal when I caſt my eye upon the 5th Verſe, where he had newly ſaid to every particular Soul, I will never leave thee, nor forſake thee, (the five-fold foree in that Speech you have often heard of) you ſhall give me leave withal to take in this high Conſolatory, that Jeſus Chriſt is to every particular ſoul in reſpect of his love, in no wiſe, nor in no degree leaving, or forſaking them; The ſame to day that yeſterday he was, or at any time of thy life, and will continue the ſame for ever. And therefore go and carry home this for thy comfort, every one of your ſouls that have been ſavingly Called for your particular, firſt caſt but your eye on the words, Verſ. 5. I will never, &c. And then on the 8th. Jeſus the ſame, &c. and ſee if they do not directly look one upon th'other. Again, when Paul ſays, My inward man is renewed day by day, 2 Cor. 4. 16. Our Spirits would be in a miſerable plight, if in any day, even of ſinning moſt, we ſhould not be renewed, for then we ſhould fall back inſtantly into Unregeneracy, but in the worſt day of greateſt ſinnings we do not; He upholds by renewing ſomething of his Grace, and gracious conflicts againſt ſin in us: And though we feel not theſe renewings, yet I promiſe you ſaid Old Mr. Dod, in my hearing once, I believe I am thus renewed every day, though I diſcern it not. Yea, God loves thee not by the day only, but by the Moment, Iſai. 27. 2. 3. In that day ſing ye unto her; A vineyard of red Wine. I the Lord do keep it; I will water it every moment: leſt any hurt it, I will keep it night and day. Remember but out of the Text, how that Gods good will varies not as the Sun doth, neither in reſpect of a yearly motion, nor a daily motion off from theſe; but not ſo to a Temporary work with which he deals Providentially, and as this viſible Sun doth towards the Fruits which it brings forth.

Uſe 1. Haſt thou had ſuch a work upon thee, as even here out of James, hath been ſcatteredly ſet out? 1. That of Humiliation, Verſ. 7. 10. through which by the power of the Spirit this world hath been blaſted to thee, the Spirit of the Lord having blown upon it for ever; that this Valuation of things hath been for ever changed, and withal thine Intereſt changed from things of this World, that thou makeſt thy Height, ὕψος, the height, the top of thy deſires, ſires, eſteem, purſuance, the things of the other World, ſo as thou glorieſt not in any Excellency, as Jer. 9. 23, 24. Let not the Wiſe man glory in his wiſdom, neither let the Mighty man glory in his might, let not the Rich man glory in his riches; but let him that glorieth, glory in this, that he underſtandeth, and knoweth me, that I am the Lord, &c. which words do particularly ſpeak the very ſum of James his aim in theſe 9th, and 10th Verſes. Chap. 4.

2. And then haſt thou had Faith wrought in thee, laying hold on the love of God in Chriſt Jeſus, As, Verſ. 3.

3. And that Faith when tried, thou haſt found to work patience in thee, ſubmiſſion to God, quietneſs of heart upon this ground, that thou waiteſt upon God, and leaveſt the iſſue of all unto him. As Verſ. 4. Though perhaps Patience hath not yet had its full perfect work which it ſhall have in thee.

And 4. In all Diſtreſſes thy heart cleaves unto God, which it ſhews in earneſt addreſſes unto him for Grace, and Wiſdom, to carry thee through, and ſeekeſt that wiſdom, more than deliverance, eſpecially when thou feareſt to be called to ſuffer for Chriſt, which whenſoever it falls out, thou ſtill reſolveſt to cleave to him, and adhere to thy Profeſſion in all truths and duties revealed to thee, which thou ſhalt come to be tried in, as thoſe which thou art to hold faſt in ſuch a day; to confeſs and not deny, as it is ſaid of John, and as the three Children, Dan. 3. 16, 17. Shadrach, Meſhach, and Abednego, anſwered and ſaid to the King, O Nebuchadnezzar, we are not careful to anſwer thee in this matter; If it be ſo, our God whom we ſerve, is able to deliver us from the burning fiery Furnace, and he will deliver us out of thine hand, O King: And ſo thou wavereſt not, haſt not ſo much as wavering thoughts whether to cleave to God and the times, and though all this is come upon us, Yet have we not forgotten thee, neither have we dealt falſly in thy Covenant; Our heart is not turned back, neither have our ſteps declined from thy way: Though thou haſt ſore broken us in the place of Dragons, and covered us with the ſhadow of death; If we have forgotten the name of our God, or ſtretched out our hands to a ſtrange God; ſhall not God ſearch this out? For he knoweth the ſecrets of the heart: Yea, for thy ſake we are killed all the day long, we are counted as Sheep for the ſlaughter. Pſal. 44. from 17. to 23. (for this is that not wavering which James intends in thoſe times of Diſtreſs, and Temptation, and not only or mainly a doubting in reſpect of an Aſſurance that God will hear my prayers in this or that particular.)

5. And then laſtly, haſt thou love to God, which James inſerts in Verſ. 12. When he is tried, he ſhall receive the Crown of life, which the Lord hath promiſed to them that love him? (Of this I ſpake ſomething when I ſpake to that of Calling.)

And this is the frame and pulſe of thy heart? Let me tell thee from James, or God rather, Theſe gifts are of the ſort of perfect and good gifts for kind, as will in the end make thee perfect; continue but in the exerciſe of them, and let them but have more time and ſcope in thy heart, let them have their perfect work. Yea, and they are ſuch gifts as God out of his Eternal Good Will hath begotten in thee, and which in the end will riſe up to be, and cauſe thee to be the Firſt fruits and perfection of the whole Creation; and for which God hath an unchangable reſpect, and will follow and proſecute without variableneſs, or ſhadow of turning off from thee; and having wrought theſe good gifts in thee, he hath an everlaſting regard unto them, and out of his faithfulneſs will continue to preſerve them.

For the Cloſe, and for your further conſolation and confirmation, I ſhall here caſt in this further Conſolatory. You may obſerve in ſeveral Scriptures where this good and ſaving Work of Calling is ſpoken of, that there God's faithfulneſs is brought in, and laid afore you, as the Pawn and Gage to perform it, that Attribute of all other is ſtaked thereat, as that by virtue of which God hath called us, and is obliged to preſerve that work of Calling by a more ſpecial kind of Obligation, and there muſt be ſome ſpecial thing in it, and reaſon for this their Connexion; but thus you do find them joyned together, 1*Cor.* 1. 8, 9. Who ſhall alſo confirm you unto the end, that ye may be blameleſs in the day of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. God is faith-

Book IV. ful, by whom ye were called unto the fellowſhip of his Son Jeſus Chriſt our Lord. Then again, 1 Theſſ. 5.23, 24. And the very God of Peace ſanctifie you wholly, and I pray God your whole ſpirit, and ſoul, and body, be preſerved blameleſs unto the coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Faithful is he who hath called you, who alſo will do it.

1. By faithfulneſs in theſe places, is underſtood firſt, That God is conſtant to himſelf, and to his own purpoſes of Grace, in that whom he predeſtinateth, he calleth; and whom he calleth he glorifieth: And he having in Calling given a moſt full demonſtration of the conſtancy of his everlaſting good-will towards us, this may fully aſſure us of the continuance of it: For, the Caſe ſtood thus, That he had cloſe kept thoſe purpoſes in his own breaſt from everlaſting; and the perſons now called, could never have known of them, nor enquired after them, had he not, in meer conſtancy to thoſe purpoſes, called them at firſt, and thereby diſcovered himſelf in his intention to them, which therefore afterwards he will bide by; for the foundation of the Lord is ſure, &c.

Or ſecondly, You may refer this faithfulneſs unto thoſe Promiſes which had gone before in the Old Teſtament, whereof you read Jer. 31.33. and 32.40. I will write my Law in their hearts, (there's Calling;) And then follows, I will put my fear in their hearts, and they ſhall not depart from me. And ſo in reſpect to thoſe Promiſes gone out of his mouth, wherein the Promiſes of Calling have annexed Promiſes of Preſervation; in that reſpect alſo he is ſaid to be faithful who hath called, &c.

But this is yet further improveable for our Comfort, and ſtedfaſtneſs of our Faith.———Faithfulneſs, you know, is the performance of a Truſt committed to one by ſome other that relies upon him, or the diſcharge of ſome Obligation that ariſeth thence.

Now upon Calling there is a twofold Truſt committed unto God; one by Jeſus Chriſt, and another by the perſons themſelves that are Called; and ſo an Obligation ariſeth upon God thereupon.

1. Between God and Jeſus Chriſt, whoſe intereſt in the Promiſe I have good reaſon to draw in; for the Text hath it, Called by Jeſus Chriſt. Chriſt is our Covenant between God and us, and unto whom the Covenant was indeed firſt made, and given by God as for us, and on our behalf; and ſo the performance of it by God is juſtly termed Faithfulneſs on his part. God truſted Chriſt to dye for us, promiſing him that he ſhould ſee his Seed, the travel of his Soul, and be ſatisfied, Iſa. 53.10, 11. which comes to paſs by God's calling them, and making them his Children, as the phraſe is, Jer. 3. you have the ſame likewiſe in Iſai. 49. Chapt. throughout; Chriſt died upon this bare Promiſe of God's having millions of Souls, that he bare in his Womb upon the Croſs, that were yet unborn, much more that were uncalled and unſaved. Now hence therefore, whenſoever God calls any of theſe to himſelf, and begins to work ſavingly upon them; this being the firſt and fundamental performance of his Promiſe to Chriſt; hence therefore in a ſingular reſpect, God is ſaid to be faithful, and ſhews by this his good beginning, he intends as faithfully to carry and bring them throughout unto Salvation.

You may find, 1 Cor. 1.9. when this faithfulneſs of God is ſpoken of, the Expreſſions run thus, Who ſhall confirm you to the end; God is faithful, by whom ye were called unto the fellowſhip of his Son Jeſus Chriſt our Lord. I underſtand part of its meaning to be this, That Jeſus Chriſt was, by Covenant made to him by his Father, to have Fellows or Companions, Partakers of the ſame Grace and Glory with himſelf: The Man, God's Fellow, was not to be in Heaven alone, John 12. but to have fellow Copartners, Pſal. 45.14. and to mediate and procure this was the end of his Dying, as in John 12.23, 24. The hour is come that the Son of Man ſhould be glorified: Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, except a Corn of Wheat fall into the ground, and dye, it abideth alone; but if it dye, it bringeth forth much fruit: and unto that end it was he died. Now Calling is the firſt Foundation act of performance of this by God, and then firſt we are actually admitted unto Communion with Jeſus, and into the right of Copartnerſhip with him of all his Priviledges; We are then then drawn by the Father unto Jesus Christ; we are then coapprehended by Jesus Christ, Phil. 3. 12. and have all blessings in Christ estated upon us for ever, to be given forth as need is, and as the time appointed by the Father comes to give them forth unto Eternity: And therefore, God that hath done this in faithfulness after so long a time since his Covenant with Christ, will perform it to the end. For faithful is he, &c. and Christ lives and sees to it to see this done, and calls upon him for it. You may find all this most lively set forth by Christ himself, in John 17. at a time when he was within less than a days space to offer up himself by dying, when it is he leaves behind him (and 'tis now upon Record) with his Father, what he expected to be performed by him in Answer unto his end and Covenant in dying; there you find Christ telling his Father, first that those his Disciples, whom he had from Everlasting given him, had been Converted and effectually Called; Verse 6. I have manifested thy Name unto the men thou gavest me out of the World; thine they were, and thou gavest them me. Verse 7. Now they have known that all things whatsoever thou hast given me, are of thee: Verse 8. For I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me, and they have received them, and have known surely that I came out from thee, and they have believed that thou hast sent me: And then he commits them to him at his farewel, and as his Farewel, Verse 11. I am no more in this World, but these are in the World: And now I commit them unto thee; Holy Father, keep them through thy Name. Whilst I was in the World I kept them in thy Name: Those whom thou gavest me I have kept, and none is lost. And Verse 20. Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their words. This is Christ's last Prayer at his death; it was the terms upon which he offered up himself, and it is made for all who should believe and be called, and it is you see, That they should be kept. He trusts his Father with them, and those thereafter to come in, to call and preserve them, and he prayeth these things in the preintuition of, and as foreseeing their Temptations, Vers. 15. I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the World, but from the evil; as if he had said; they are to live to serve thee yet in the World, only preserve them from what ever evil it is their Lot to conflict withal; and rather than they should not be kept from the evil, even take them out of the World. These things having been thus transacted between God and Christ, therefore God, the God of all Grace, now when Christ is gone to Heaven, both did then, and will be sure to perform all this exactly, according to Christs word, and the full Tenure of this his Prayer; and as he did keep those Disciples he before had called, and then commended to his Fathers care, and made holy Apostles of them, whose Fruit remains to this day, and themselves are now in Glory, so he hath performed the rest of Christ's words, both in effectually Calling the rest of those Souls Christ died for, and were to believe, through their word, to the end of the World, whom also he keeps and preserves, as we know God did these disciples unto the end of their days; and all this God hath, and will be sure to perform in very faithfulness unto Jesus Christ. And this is the discharge of the first Trust made by Christ. Chap. 4.

2. God is engaged in very faithfulness unto the very Souls whom he calls: For not only their Conversion it is an espousal of them unto God, 2 Cor. 11. 2. I have espoused you to one husband: And this God doth in very faithfulness, Hos. 2. 19. I will betroth thee unto me in righteousness, and in loving kindness, and in mercies, Vers. 20. I will even betroth thee unto me in faithfulness, and thou shalt know the Lord.

But truly, besides that God is pleased thus to engage himself of himself, it is further considered by God how great a trust the Soul of every poor Creature, when God called it, and it effectually answered to his Call, did then commit unto God: And consider well the terms of your Calling, (Brethren) even on your part. A poor Soul at its first coming to God, gave up all to him, not yet knowing whether God would save it or no, even upon bare hopes, It may be God may be merciful, casting it self upon him, if there might be hope; and it did this really and in earnest, We have forsaken all, says Peter, and whither shall we go; and thereupon the World began to hate them, because they they began to profeſs, and it will never heartily love them again; (as it doth not, no not an Apoſtate, becauſe once a Profeſſor of Chriſt) yea, they adventured upon, and did take on them this profeſſion of his Name, ſeeing their own unability to think ſo much as one good thought, knowing that all their ſufficiency is of God, and that he it is that muſt work in them to will and to do according to his good pleaſure; and they knew, and conſidered, that the World would be ſure to ſcandal and reproach them for any evil they ſhall run into, and expect and exact great ſtrictneſs and exactneſs from them, or take advantage againſt them to ſpeak all manner of evil of them; for they did it even for what is good in them.

Now if this be the Caſe, (as it is) for a Soul to give it ſelf up unto the Lord, and his ways for ever; this is the greateſt, the pureſt truſt that you have ever heard or read of: And can you think that God will not be faithful? Faithful is he that hath called you and drawn this ſelf-forſaking, and ſo high an undertaking from you. Truſt on your part draws out Faithfulneſs on his: One Scripture, and no more for this, 2 Tim. 1. 12. I know whom I have believed, and I am perſwaded that he is able to keep what I have committed unto him againſt that day: All that could fall out between his firſt believing, and that day, he committed to God; becauſe that he was able, was one ground and that he was Faithful, was the other [I know whom I have believed] this referreth to faithfulneſs, and that other [I am perſwaded] unto his Ability, as Grotius hath obſerved.

CHAP. V.

The second Topick or Head of Arguments unto our Faith from God his Calling us, The God of all Grace hath Called us: Or, that in our first Calling, God hath shewn himself A God of All Grace, and therefore will carry us through all Temptations unto Perfection.

I PETER V. 10.

WHO hath Called Us.

TWO things are in this Head to be spoke to:

I. That in that one Work of Calling God shews himself to be a God of all Grace towards those whom he calls.

II. The Arguments and Inferences from thence, for our support, that God will carry us thorow, &c. which is the Point I shall pursue.

This here you will find, not only distinct from what hath been handled in the foregone part of this Discourse about Calling, but to add a great encrease to the Confirmation of our Faith herein by new and great Considerations.

I. That in that one work of Calling, God hath shewn himself to be a God of all Grace, &c.

In handling this, my purpose is not simply to set out the greatness of God's Grace shewn in Regeneration, and how it so exceeds, in many respects, all other Works else which God after doth for us, even Glory it self: I have done this in another place. I will retrieve nothing I then handled about that Subject. But what I shall now treat of, will be a going over the eminent Particulars of God's Grace, and demonstrating that God hath shewn himself a God of all Grace in each of them, in and at his Calling of us; and then I shall bring them all, and each of them, down into the second Branch, and draw Inferences from thence for the Point I am pursuing.

1. I begin with pardoning Grace. God shewed himself then to be a God of all Grace in pardoning thee; he shewed a plenitude, a fulness of Grace, yea an All of Grace, in the forgiveness of thee. Thou hadst run on the score of sinning, from the first thought in thine Infancy, and every thought from the first dawning of Reason, had been evil continually; and thy sins lay all on heaps, piled up as high as Heaven, and stacked down as low as Hell; and this for many years continuance. Suppose that for twenty or thirty years thou hadst done no good, but all thy ways were abominable; and lo, then at thy Calling by one act at once, God forgave thee all thy Trespass s, Col. 2. 13. And you being dead in your sins, and the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath he quickned together with him, having forgiven you all trespasses. And in that lump perhaps all sorts of sinnings, in respect of Concupiscence at least, or the imperfect puttings forth of them were found in thee, for so Paul speaks of himself, as at his Conversion he found it, Rom. 7. And thus he was the God of all Grace in pardoning thee.

2. Also

Book IV.

2. Also in bestowing on thee then a righteousness, and that of Christ's, which had all Obedience in it, and he bestowed it then on thee wholly, and at once, and not as by parcels afterwards; not some of it at one time, some of it at another; no, but in one entire single gift: So, as well might the Apostle, comparing this gift of Christ's righteousness and obedience imparted, with that one disobedience of Adam imputed, (which yet Divines say, had in a manner all sorts of sins in it;) declare that gift of Christ's infinitely to abound, not in merit or worth only, but even as containing a full and perfect righteousness of all sorts for parts, Rom. 5. 17, 19. compared: For if by one man's offence, death reigned by one, much mor they which receive abundance of Grace, and of the gifts of Righteousness, shall reign in life by one Jesus Christ. Verse 19. For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners: So by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous. God in his heart and purposes, is a God of all Grace, as I shewed; and Christ in his righteousness is fully adequate to all the purposes and designs of Grace in God's heart. And all, and the whole of this thou receivedst at thy Calling, and as much of this as all the Saints put together do receive; for Christ is not divided in the gift of his righteousness. The least Called one hath the whole. And this made Paul so to extoll the Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ bestowed on him at his first Conversion; 1 Tim. 1. 14. And the grace of our Lord was exceeding abundant, with faith and love, which is in Christ Jesus. 'Twas exceeding abundant, ὑπερεπλεόνασεν, superabundavit. It was more than full, or more than enough.

And in both these respects he was a God of all Grace in justifying thee at thy Calling.

2. He shewed himself the God of all Grace in sanctifying Grace, which consists of two parts, Mortification of sin, and the new Creature that is wrought in the room of Corruption then mortified: And in each of these God shewed himself then a God of all Grace in that kind of Grace also.

1. In mortifying Grace, in that every Lust had its deaths wound at thy first putting on Christ; Galat. 5. 24. And they that are Christs have crucified the flesh, with the affections and lusts. A Crucifying death it was, like to his, which reacht to every Vein, Artery; and thus this extends unto all the Members of Sin, inward or outward; they are all put into a dying condition, Rom. 6. 6. Therefore we are buried with him by baptism unto death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in the newness of life. 'Tis the whole Body of sin, and every Member of it, which his mortifying Grace extends unto.

2. In respect of the new Creature wrought. It was then at thy Calling that his Divine Power gave and furnished thee with all things, &c. 2 Pet. 1. 3. According as his Divine Power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and vertue. I cited it afore, but for another purpose; in like manner, when of the new Creature 'tis said, That all is made new, 1 Cor. 5. 17. Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new Creature: old things are past away, behold, all things are become new. Though imperfectly, yet ALL is of the new Creature. As Adam conveys all sorts of Lusts, so Christ begets for kind his own Image compleat for parts: And grace for grace, John 1. 16. as the Child from the Father receives Limb for Limb.

Thirdly, Usually at Calling, he acteth and assisteth that new Creature (as new Converts often find) with all sorts of assistances, viz. resisting Lusts, quickning Affections, carryings on in Duty, and all sorts of Enlargements, 2 Tim. 1. 14. Paul speaks of his first Conversion, The Grace of our Lord was exceeding abundant in Faith and Love. In faith, for Justification; in Love, in raising and stirring up Affections unto God.

Yea, Fourthly, The Foundation of all Glory was then laid, which the Text hath; as also Rom. 8. 30. whom he hath called, them he also justified; and whom he justified, them he also glorified. Why should I instance in any more? Adoption and right to eternal Life is then given, According to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of Regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Holy Ghoſt, which he ſhed on us abundantly, through Jeſus Chriſt our Saviour. That being juſtified by his Grace, we ſhould be made Heirs according to the hope of eternal Life, 3 Tit. 5, 6, 7. Chap. 5.

II. Now for the ſecond thing, viz. The Arguments of Comfort and Support from hence, That then God will, as the ſame God of all Grace, carry thee on through all Temptations.

Conſider he having thus begun as a God of all Grace, to juſtifie thee in this manner, and to ſanctifie thee at once; what is it that now ſhould divert or interrupt this great God of all Grace from this going on to carry thee through? He muſt be directed either,

1. By the Guilt of Sin riſing up, and committed after calling. Or,
2. By the Power of Sin, recovering again its ſtrength in thee.

1. Not by the Guilt of Sins afterwards (if any thing they did, they would provoke him not to continue his Grace to thee:) And it is they muſt begin to turn Gods Heart off from thee, if any thing elſe do: But none of theſe ſhall be able to do it.———For conſider, if he juſtified thee at firſt from ſuch an heap of ſins, as a God of all Grace, and that he thereby becomes engaged to continue a God of all Grace even after to thee, then ſurely he will not ſtick at pardoning thy after-Sins, and therefore they ſhall hinder.

But to demonſtrate this, by comparing matters as they ſtood in this reſpect afore Calling, with the ſtate thereof after. Compare we things with things afore and after.

1. Then before Calling he pardoned a continued courſe of ſinning for many years, wherein there had been laid up heaps upon heaps; But the pardoning of thy Sins after Calling, is at worſt but of backſlidings, repaired and filled up with many great Repentances coming between: And if, as a God of Grace to thee, he pardoned a tract or courſe of Sinning, he will much more, and may more eaſily continue to forgive ſuch backſliding (ſo entermingled with ſerious Repentance,) although they have been reiterated Sins, faln into again and again: Turn O backſliding Iſrael, for I am married to thee, ſays God, Jer. 3. 14. Married ſhe had been to God afore, but had gone a whoring from him: And though in that caſe, Man had not mercy enough to receive a Wife again, but would ſtand upon point of honour in it, as Verſ. 1. They ſay if a Man put away his Wife, and ſhe go from him, and become another Mans, ſhall he return unto her again? Shall not that Land be greatly polluted? But thou haſt plaid the Harlot with many lovers, yet return again to me, ſaith the Lord. Yet, ſays God, Verſ. 12. yet return, O backſliding Iſrael, for I am merciful. Beſides that, I am already engaged by marriage, (and when is that but at ones firſt converſion, then it is that God was eſpouſed to thee) and did then give up my ſelf to be a God of all Grace to thee: Moreover, I am as merciful as ever I was, and I cannot, but I muſt forgive thee, and that upon the loweſt terms thou canſt deſire, and I can with honour grant; Only do thou acknowledge thine iniquity, that thou haſt tranſgreſſed againſt the Lord thy God, and haſt ſcattered thy ways to the ſtrangers under every green tree; and that you have not obeyed my voice, ſaith the Lord, Verſ. 13. As if he had ſaid, ſo eaſily am I prevailed with; for it muſt be acknowledged the leaſt of requiſites unto reconciliation in ſo high a breach; yea, and even that alſo this Ἀυτὸς, he that ſame God of Grace in my text, doth promiſe to give them an Heart to do ſo, and moreover to heal their backſlidings alſo, out of the ſame love and Grace, that ſo he may honourably come off to pardon them, he performed the Condition himſelf thus in the ſame Chapt. Verſ. 19. though he ſticks at it, and makes a demur upon it (it being the higheſt act he could perform in a cauſe ſo grievous) within himſelf. How ſhall I put thee among the Children, and give thee an Heritage, &c. yet himſelf ſoon thinks how to bring it about; And I ſaid thou ſhalt call me Father, and ſhall not depart from me. He might well ſay at the 22d Verſe, Return, O ye backſliding Children, when himſelf gave them power to return; and withal farther promiſeth, I will heal their backſlidings, ſo in the ſame verſe. And their Hearts were accordingly moved to do it, and to answer God's Call, as in the following words of that 22th verse, Behold, we come unto thee: For thou art the Lord our God. God, you see, continues to own them, after their most desperate backsliding, and to do all in them, and for them, and then they return to own him. You have the same, Isai. 57. 17, 18. For the iniquity of his covetousness was I wroth, and smote him: I hid me and was wroth, and he went on frowardly in the way of his Heart. I have seen his ways and will heal him: I will lead him also, and restore comforts unto him, and to his mourners. As also Hos. 14. 4. I will heal their backslidings I will love them freely: And truly, this happy issue of healing in the end, what is it other than what is in the Text, After ye have suffered a while, I will strengthen, &c.

From all which passages this conclusion will remain for me, that if God hath married himself, by Calling us once, and then hath forgiven us, as a God of all Grace, so many years sinnings contrived in (for which a Man never so much as once repented all his life) then how much more will he forgive those, which thou interminglingly humblest thy Soul for, and applies the Blood of Christ for? Which is of as much force to be sure, under the New Testament, as it was under the Old, to make reconciliation and atonement between God, and them that are the called according to his purpose in all such cases.

And thirdly, he can do all this with more ease, (as I may so speak) than what he did for thee at the first.

For first, At the first thou hadst an Heart that was wholly hard and impenitent, and did God then break it, and melt it, and withal, forgave thee all thy Sins? How much more easily can he, yea, and doth he, break thy Heart, that hath been broken already? Melt and soften the Heart that hath been melted, and which never yet came to be wholly cold, after its first melting? And though it should be so, yet one can more easily set that Coal on fire that hath been in the fire so often already, than kindle a green Stick that never was kindled.

And as he can more easily melt thy heart, than at first; So secondly, He can in this way of dispensation more easily forgive thee, than at the first he did: For at the first Conversion he pardoned all, and all at once; but his course of pardoning thy sins, after Calling, is but by driblets (as we say) or by lesser Sums. For he now pardons you afresh every day as thou committest them, and humblest thy self for them: And so that of John is fulfilled, The blood of Christ cleanseth from all sin. Which words note out a continued act; for such it is to a Soul after Calling, that Blood becomes a Fountain. Fons perennis, that daily runs and washeth, Zech. 13. 1. In that day there shall be Fountain opened to the House of David, and to the Inhabitants of Jerusalem for sin, and for uncleanness: that is, it continues to be such after it hath been first opened, as at first Conversion it begins to be. Afore Conversion Christ was as the Rock which Moses struck, it had stood long in the Israelites view, it flowed not at all till Moses applied his Rod to it; but when once struck, it became a continual River that followed them; and that Rock was Christ, as 1 Cor. 10. 4. and that Water was his Blood, which when once opened, it runs continually, and runs with ease, without any force or violence used, and in that manner washeth out the stains of daily sins with far more ease and expedition (if any such difference may be supposed) than it did those Guilts of a deeper dy, that had continued from man's Infancy till then, and which at first Conversion a man was found guilty of.

And did God do this then for thee at thy Calling, and will he not afterwards; especially when thou art found to humble thy self all along as thou sinnest, and continuest to seek grace, as a man condemned useth to do for life, and hast a daily recourse still as thou failest, unto the Throne of Grace for grace and mercy in time of need? Thou confessest, acknowledgest thy sins, applyest the Blood of Christ to them, and pleadest forgiveness for his sake, and thorow his Intercession; and though it is not for these (that is, these humblings and seekings, as thy are they doing) that God pardoneth thee, yet this way his course of pardoning doth run.

I will only leave this great word with you, as to this point, That if this mixed ſtate, intermingled ſtate of ſinnings and repentings, which are the conflictings of fleſh and ſpirit, ſhould have been ordained by God to continue to Eternity, αὐτὸς, he, this God of all Grace, could and would have continued to pardon thee to Eternity, and that in this way forementioned much more eaſily than he hath given a præ-univerſal pardon, as he vouchſafed firſt to thee, when thou hadſt continued ſo long unregenerate, or any other one that hath long continued in an unregenerate ſtate, with a perpetration of great ſins, as ſome or other have done. Chap. 5.

If this, that ſins after Calling ſhall not hinder, but ſtill be pardoned, let it be inferred from hence, That God, as a God of all Grace, did call and pardon, ſo as at the firſt we have ſeen he did.

Object. But perhaps ſome of you that have yet been effectually called, may be ready, yea and have cauſe to ſay, alas! My ſins ſince my Calling have been greater and groſſer than any I committed afore.

Anſw. 1. It may have faln out that they have been more and more heinous, as to the outward act of ſome ſins; beſides, thou haſt perhaps lived years double, ſince thy Calling, unto what thou didſt afore; and alſo the greateſt part of that former time was paſt in Childhood and younger years, but ſince thou art grown up, and according to the courſe of Nature, Luſts with them; and though thoſe Luſts did receive a deaths wound at firſt, they may yet exerciſe more ſtrength than thou perceiveſt ſuch Luſts had when thou wert younger.

Anſw. 2. The Circumſtances thou haſt been ſet in, may have occaſioned, for the acts of them, ſome worſe ſins, than thy unregeneracy ever knew. Job and Jeremiah were certainly more impatient, even almoſt to Blaphemy, than ever in their younger times; for the Temptations grew higher.

Anſw. 3. As thou conſidereſt thy ſinnings all along, thou muſt conſider thy Reducements, thy Repentance, thy humblings of thy ſelf, that have run all along with them, and have come between thy ſinnings, and ſtill have broken the force and extream violence of them: And theſe to be ſure God remembers, and thou thus crying daily to him againſt them, and confeſſing of them, the Blood of Chriſt hath ſecretly all along cleanſed thee ſtill from all thoſe ſins.

Anſw. 4. As thou conſidereſt thy greater ſort of ſinnings, ſo thou ſhouldeſt withal conſider the different manner of ſinning, which hath accompanied thy committings of them, from what there did afore, which do really make that great difference between thy ſinnings now and afore, that though the outward act may have been greater and more grievous ſince, than any were afore, yet the difference in ſin might teſtifie to the ſincerity of thy Grace; yea, may and doth ſerve as an Evidence of the Spirit of God his continuing to dwell in thee, and ſo of Gods having ſtill continued to pardon thee all along through the Tenour of the Covenant and ſtate of Grace firſt made by him, and entred into by thee. Yea, and take thy leſſer ſins, and compare them with thy ſinnings then, in them then thou ſinneſt with thy whole heart, whereas now in thy groſſeſt ſins, but as with half thy heart. Sin hath not had dominion over thee, that is, not the full rule of thee, as afore it had, thou haſt ſtill ſinned with a lame heart, thou haſt gone halting about it, as one which hath a broken legg; though thou maiſt have had many foul miſcarriages againſt light, yet in thy perpetration of them thou haſt been as a man that wields a weapon with a broken Arm, nor doſt thou ever come to lay the weapon of Reſiſtance down, or to give thy ſelf up as a Servant (whoſe ear is boared thorow) unto any of thoſe Luſts thou ſtill runneſt whining, Gemens after them that prevailed with thee; as a Prince that is led captive; neither have thine ever-comings been as theirs, whom Peter ſpeaks of 2 Pet. 2. 21, 22, 23. They are, as the Dog returns to his vomit again, with the whole of his appetite, as greadily as ever, when the ſickneſs of his ſtomack once is over, his deſire to what is vomited is the ſame. And ſo the Sow lies down in the mire with her whole delight. A Sheep may fall into the mire, but the Sow lies down in it, and wallows in it, with her whole delight. I appeal to all the experience of thine heart, if ever thou didst so. If not; then God hath maintained an opposition against sin in thee; and if so, how easie is it for him to pardon thee in comparison to and above what thy rate of sinning was in thy former condition?

Object. But thou wilt further say, I fear my Condition is much worse than in my former condition of Unregeneracy.

Answ. There I will grapple with any of you that ever have had true Grace; if any be otherwise, what I shall say will not reach them, or concern them.

Come on, take the worst Condition thou hast ever been in since, and consider the frame of thy heart therein, and compare it with the best of thy condition afore Calling. I put thee to it: Durst thou exchange this now, with that then? Consider how then, afore Conversion, 1. Thou hadst not as then a dram of the least holy Affection in thee, no aim at the glory of God: Thou wholly didst set up thy self, and thine own Lusts; thou hadst no respect nor fear of God afore thine eyes, none at all: but since thou hast (take the whole of thy course) carried all along afore thee an eye unto God, though as David says of himself, Psal. 119. ult. thou hast as the lost Sheep gone much astray; I have gone astray like a lost Sheep, seek thy servant: For I do not forget thy Commandments. Thou then calledst not upon God, unless in a formality: Thou hadst no reluctancy against sin, no pursuing after holiness, as now, though thou fallest short of what thou wouldst be. Thou talkest of Devils hurrying thee with Temptations; ay! but then thou hadst a Devil dwelling in thee, as in his own House, in peace, ruling effectually in thee, and taking thee captive at his will. Thou complainest of thy deadness now too, and in duties, and yet performest them with some Affections; why, then thou wert wholly dead in sins and trespasses. It may be thy graces are not so shining; but lay thine hand on thy Pulse, it doth still beat, though faintly; there are in thee, longings after God, and desires to fear his Name, and there is a Spring of such dispositions in thee: There is a Spiritual Living Creature in thee, which like the Mole under-ground, is working up towards the free air, heaving up the Earth, and breaths Heaven-ward. Come, be ashamed to talk thus; Are there seven Devils entred into thee worse than the former? Is thy latter end worse than thy beginning? O No!

2. For the other part of Justification, Gods justifying thee, and covering thy sins with Christs righteousness. It was that whole righteousness which was then imputed to thee at thy Calling (as was said) by the God of all Grace. And if he had not been a God of all Grace, he would never have bestowed that gift upon thee, of all other; and having bestowed that once, thou maist build upon it, that he will continue to justifie thee for ever. It would be the highest dishonour unto that so Infinite perfect Righteousness of Christ, if where and when it were once imputed, it should be once frustrate, and made of no effect unto that person: For where once the whole of it is imputed (as the whole always is, with all the priviledges or consequents that do accompany, and are entailed upon it) it brings with it the purchase of an eternal imputation, to whom it is imputed once, never to be taken off, or made a Non-imputation. Where it sealeth, it makes an end of, and seals up sins for ever, with a Seal never to be broken off: And makes reconciliation for iniquity, and brings in an everlasting righteousness to whom soever it is applied, which our sins shall never out-do, Dan. 9. 24. That righteousness is so extensively transcendent, as it will not permit it. It shall never be said, that sin imputed, was too hard for Christ's Righteousness imputed, or that it hath more interest with God against one to whom it is imputed, than Christ's Righteousness hath; No; Heb. 10. 14. For by one suffering he hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified: Which being perfected, is seen (as the Apostle himself there interprets it) in Justification, (the Point now afore us) in that it causeth sins to be remembred no more, as in the following Verses.

And

And this for this Inference from the imputation of Chriſts righteouſneſs at firſt, that therefore God will continue to pardon and juſtifie for ever. Chap. 5.

2. The ſecond thing that may be ſuppoſed (if any thing) to obſtruct and interrupt the efflux and courſe of God's Grace begun in any of us, in carrying us thorow all Temptations, is the power of ſin within a Mans own Heart, leſt that getting head again, God's Heart ſhould be diverted from us.

But if God did ſanctifie us at firſt, as a God of all Grace, in the manner that hath been ſpecified; this affords a new Head or Ground of Confirmation of our Faith, that notwithſtanding the hazards with which our remaining Corruption might ſeem to threaten us, that yet God will aſſuredly preſerve Grace in us, maugre all Temptations.

1. God ſanctified thee at the firſt, by inlaying in thy Soul the Seeds of all and every Grace and gracious Diſpoſition that ever was to be, or ſhall be: This we ſhewed in the fore part, and therefore αὐτὸς, this God, as a God of all Grace, is engaged to all and every ſuch Grace in particular, wrought and inlaid in thee by him then, to preſerve it and them unto a perfect conſummation. All Temptations whatever, that have any thing of danger in them, and that do or can befall thee, are the oppoſites unto ſome or other of thoſe Graces wrought in thee at the firſt. For the Law of Sin, and the Law of the Mind, that is, Grace in us, and Sin in us, are adequately, and commenſurately oppoſite, and contrary in every Soul in which Grace is wrought. Hence therefore every particular Temptation and Luſt in us, muſt be conſidered as that which oppoſeth ſome particular Grace or other; as James mentioneth Envy as oppoſite unto its contrary Grace, James, 4. 5, 6. (of which anon:) Now then, when any Temptation falls out, or any particular Luſt ariſeth, αὐτὸς (He) that was the God of all Grace in Calling, and who is therefore the God of that Particular Grace in his working it at the firſt, is engaged, and will in a particular ſpecial manner, as occaſion ſtill ſhall ariſe, look unto the Preſerving of that individual Grace, and maintain it, and uphold it againſt that Temptation, ſo far as that it ſhall never become extinct by it, but in the end and iſſue, ſooner or later be brought forth to Victory.

And indeed, the whole intereſt or univerſal ſtock of all Grace lies every way at the Stake, upon this iſſue of God's maintaining each and every Grace in the day of its Diſtreſs, againſt the Temptations that would deſtroy it, as will appear by putting theſe four Particulars together.

1. On Grace's Part: For if any particular Grace ſhould be made extinct by any particular Temptation and Luſt, then the whole of all the reſt of that Charter of Graces would alſo fail, and be diſſolved, as it was in Adam by the prevailing of one Temptation. Graces, they are all of a knot, break one, and all fall aſunder; they were given all together at once at the firſt, and they would, and muſt depart all together at once, if any one doth fail.

Hence ſecondly, On God's part, he having as a God of all Grace, been the Author and Founder of all thoſe Graces, and they his work; hence his Heart works in him, and doth concern it ſelf whenſoever any particular Grace comes to be in danger, and according unto what proportion in his Wiſdom he ſees meet, he doth relieve it, and that upon the account, or in the ſtrength of his being a God of all Grace, as hath been ſaid. Yea, and the whole of his Grace, comes ſtill into the Field for the ſuccour and relief of any one Grace, ſo as if all the Grace that is in God thus intereſted, will be able to maintain and preſerve that one, yea every Grace, the leaſt; it ſhall have, in its due ſeaſon, all in God to raiſe the Seige of any, and every ſort and kind of particular Temptations whatſoever, ſet down about it: I ſay in his due time, as Peter doth Proviſo it, Verſ. 6. of his 5th Chap. So as though a Temptation may prevail for an act, or many acts, yet it ſhall never, uninterruptedly finally or wholly: For even that very Grace, when it is moſt put to the worſt, is yet in ſome degree renewed day by day, as our whole Man is ſaid to be. What would you think, if all the power of ſuch an Empire as that of the Turks, yea, the ſtrength of the whole Empire, ſhould upon all occaſions, come into the Field, for the relief of any, or every ſmall City that is beſieged, which belongs unto its Dominions or Protection: Now ſo it is here.

3. Con-

Book IV.

3. Consider, that the Graces in thee have to do and to conflict but with particular Temptations singly at once, or but with few, though sometimes with diverse, yet never with all, as two Apostles tell us.

Now to draw a Conclusion from all these things: How easie is it for God, that is the God of all Grace, and who wrought all Grace, De novo, that is, anew at the first, still to strengthen any one grace, or graces that are already wrought, and are extant in being in thy heart, against what is, or are but a particular temptation or temptations, when Grace is thus but singly set upon and assassinated? And this Inference is most strong from the Premisses; Namely, That he that created all Graces wholly De novo, or a new at the first, should certainly be both able and willing to maintain particular Graces still as they are all along assaulted. And his being a God of all Grace, doth make him as willing, as he is able for it. This as for the point of his upholding and maintaining thy Graces.

II. Seeing that in such temptations, thou hast to do with such or such a corruption in particular; I bid thee take or single forth any one particular corruption, or Corruptions, which thou findest, are, or have been most prevalent to endanger thee: Consider that if God, as a God of all Grace, at Calling first gave an universal wound, a crucifying unto all and every lust in thee, (as was shewn) and that he did this when he found the body of sin whole, and in its full strength and vigour, and unbroken, hardned, accustomed, and habituated unto evil, as the Prophet states the Case; And withal that this God continues to be the same God of all Grace to thee, (Αὐτὸς) Then certainly he is afterwards able and willing much more to help thee out against, and in the end to strengthen thee against that corruption, or corruptions, that have been already thrust through, and go limping with a mortal wound, though they rise up with a renewed strength at the present: For it is both a more easie work to him thus to assist thee, and likewise his Grace engageth him more afterwards to this, than it did at first to work the whole of all Grace in thee; especially when thou findest that he continues to work in thee some hatred of that corruption, some mourning for it, with a desire of the contrary Grace, running all along with thy being overcome by it.

Shall I give you one place of Scripture to confirm the most of what have been lately said, It is in James, Chapt. 4. Vers. 5, 6. Do ye think that the Scripture saith in vain, the Spirit that dwelleth in us, lusteth to envy? But he giveth more Grace, wherefore he saith, God resisteth the Proud, but giveth grace unto the humble.

1. It supposeth that our most bloody conflicts are still with some particular lusts, and temptations, for so his instance carries it, mentioning only a lust of Envy, which Saints had then, and have at this day too much of in them one against another, the Spirit that is in [Us] Us Saints (for of those he speaks) lusteth after envy.

A Second Is, that when a soul being sensible of that corruption, doth humble it self under it, and for it, and bewail it unto God; and hath already a Grace begun actually working in opposition to it, that is, to resist that envy and pride, (from whence it is that envy riseth) that hath an heart to seek for humility, which is the contrary Grace, where God, says James, hath wrought, and continues these oppositions thereto; He, the same God, will (as a God of all Grace) give more Grace unto that soul, and these two are most express, either in the Words, or their Coherence. For,

1. In Vers. 6. He says, God will give more Grace, whereby in the first place is meant, that he will give more of that particular Grace, which is contrary to that lust of Envy, though together there with a further encrease of all Grace also: For they do still encrease together.

And 2ly, It is as express that the Persons he promiseth to give this more Grace unto, are those whom he hath begun to have wrought some of this Grace in.

1. For

1. For the word More Grace, imports an addition unto Grace already ſuppoſed to have been received, which this is to be an addition to: And alſo that he will give more Grace in reſpect to the ſubduing that corruption in the end, which is a diſtinct thing from the other, and a ſpecial Grace of it ſelf for God to do it. Chap. 5.

And 2ly. The Promiſe for this out of Scripture, runs thus, Verſ. 6. He giveth Grace to the humble; It ſuppoſeth therefore, Humble already, and that qualification of Humility, is alſo the very radical oppoſite Grace to Envy.

And 3ly, So the Promiſe muſt be underſtood to mean this; That where God hath wrought ſome beginnings of any Grace contrary to corruptions, continued with conflicts againſt thoſe corruptions (as the word Luſteth implies, compared with Gal. 5. 17. 21.) As of Humility, againſt Pride, and Envy, there God will give yet more, or farther ſupplies of Grace, unto that Soul. And [More] either ſo as to prevail over that luſt, in the continual aſſaults of it, or at leaſt to afford that ſoul, during that preſent aſſault, ſuch ſupplies ſo far as to enable it to continue to reſiſt it; but in what degree it ſhall be, is as himſelf pleaſeth to diſpence, yet always ſo far, as it ſhall be ſaid, that that corruption had not dominion over it, but ſo as ſtill in its higheſt carrying away the ſoul, it never obtained that full power it had when a man was unregenerate.

And 4ly, That God who is the God of this, and of all Grace, and at firſt wrought it, will certainly, effectually in the end, give more Grace: For as he refers unto the Scripture, for the one part, that there is an envious Spirit working in us, ſo to hearten the poor ſoul that conflicts againſt it, he refers him unto other Scriptures that ſpeak as loud, that God will certainly in the end give more Grace to ſuch a ſoul. So Verſ. 6. But he giveth more Grace, wherefore he ſaith, God reſiſteth the Proud, but giveth Grace unto the Humble. As certainly then as the Spirit that is in us, luſteth after Envy. (And truly we are all ſure enough of that, for we find it daily working in our hearts) as certainly and much more may we be aſſured, That the God of all Grace, having by calling begun any Grace, will give yet more Grace to prevail againſt the temptation, whatever it be. And as for this latter, beſides the places of the Old Teſtament, which he refers his Reader unto, two Apoſtles, Peter, and James, have aſſerted the ſame, ſo as we may confidently reſt upon it.

Uſe. You ſee your Calling (Brethren) as the Apoſtle ſpeaks in an other caſe, conſider then in all your diſcouragements, the terms and priviledges of it, as they have been now laid open, to ſtrengthen your hearts, to have a free and bold recourſe unto this God of all Grace; Who ſits on a Throne of Grace in Heaven, and hath Chriſt alſo as our High Prieſt, Officiating by him for us, as Interceſſour, Heb. 4. ult. Doſt thou perceive in thine Heart ſome Rudera, ſome foundations of a true Calling, though appearing but a little above ground, like as the ruins of ſome old Building, that is raced, uſe to be, yet ſome Foundations of a further new begun Building there are.

Firſt know this, that it is the God of all Grace, that hath wrought any of them, and if any, all, and ſo is engaged to be a God of all Grace unto thee, and that for ever; he that is the God of all Grace, will never deny what is true Grace in thee; He never denied his word, but much leſs will he deny his hand, or any part of it. And though thou canſt not ſee all, and each particular that is wrought, nor read every letter of Gods writing, that is written in thine heart, yet God knows his own hand. Yea, ſome Graces perhaps may be written but in ſhort hand, or Cyphers, and not drawn out into Letters at length. They having not as yet been exerciſed; yet they all are, and were written by him at the firſt. Quod ſcripſi, ſcripſi, what I have written, I have written: It will be for ever owned by him; be aſſured that this God, who hath been at ſuch coſt in laying a foundation of all Grace, will be ſure to ſee to it to perfect it; you heard afore in the former Head, and Sermons, that becauſe the Work of Calling, or Regeneration, was a good and perfect Work for kind, that God had therefore an Unchangable reſpect to it; but when from what hath been ſaid, you ſhall add this to it, that it is, though for degree, an imperfect work, that yet is a compleat work for kind, of all ſorts of Graces, bearing the whole Image of God himſelf in that reſpect : And that as himſelf, the God of all Grace, is the Author of it, from hence alſo he is the more engaged to perfect it.

If you ſhall ſee a great and withal a wiſe Maſter-builder, to have laid a compleat and Univerſal Model, or Area, (as Builders call it) though yet but in the Foundations of it, perhaps not a foot high, yet univerſally and entirely compleat, and ſo rich for the matter of it, as to be ſuppoſed of Pearls, and precious Stones, laid in every part of that Foundation, and alſo ſo intire in the parts of it, that it will ſerve for the Foundation-work of all, and the whole of a Glorious Pile, and Fabrick, whereof that is the Model and beginning; ſo as all that is to follow, or ſhall be erected, and ſuperſtructed over it, hath a full Foundation of it: You would in this caſe conclude, that certainly he that had laid ſuch a Plat-form, and beſtowed ſuch a coſt on this Foundation, will not loſe all this, but carry it on, and will build it (though the Builder which he Employs in it, which are our particular ſelves, build with a Trowel in one hand, and a Sword in th'other, as Nehemiah did, leaſt it ſhould be ſaid he was a fooliſh Builder, that was not able to finiſh it.

This is the caſe here upon Called Ones, for not the wiſe God only, but he who is the God of all Grace, hath begun a good work in you, he will not loſe the Glory of his Wiſdom, but be much more aſſured, he will never loſe the glory of his Grace, much leſs the glory of his being the God of all Grace, who as ſuch hath laid this foundation; 'Twas the glory of his Grace carried on to perfection the Fabrick of the Temple (which was one Type of this very Building) of Zerubbabel his building of it with a multitude of difficulties, and interruptions; it is ſaid, Zach. 4. 9. That he having laid the Foundation ſtone of it. (Though it were but one ſtone for all the reſt) (as you know the manner of Maſter Builders is) that he ſhould have the honour to lay the Top-ſtone. So Verſ. 7. And why? That in the end and final finiſhing of all, the people all might ſhout, and cry, Grace, Grace to it. That is, Grace had begun it, and Grace had perfected it, and Grace had carried it all along throughout thoſe difficulties: Now Brethren, ſo 'tis here, you ſhall one day have each of you a building made without hands in the Heavens, 2 Cor. 5. 1, 2. And in the mean time the foundations of it are laid in your hearts, according to what the Prophet foretold, Iſai. 54. 11, 12. O thou afflicted, toſſed with tempeſts, and not conſumed: Behold I will lay thy ſtones with fair Colours, and lay thy Foundations with Saphirs, and I will make thy Windows of Agats, and thy Gates of Carbuncles, and all thy Borders of pleaſant ſtones, ſpeaking of the Church of the New Teſtament: And ſuch every Grace, and the exerciſes and encreaſes of them are, and ſo it is reared and ariſeth up above ground in this World, and the whole work and Fabrick of it is undertaken and carried on by God, the God of all Grace, who laid not one, but every Foundation-ſtone with his own hands immediately, and hath left out no one of ſaving Graces, having done it as a God of all Grace. Oh ye Called Ones, ſhout, and ſhout aloud for joy, and cry not only GRACE, GRACE TO IT, as they at the finiſhing of the Temple, which was but the ſhadow of the Temple of God within you. But cry you this Note, if any, THE GOD OF ALL GRACE, THE GOD OF ALL GRACE; that's the New Teſtament language, ſo far exceeding that of the Old, and therein bleſs him for his All-Juſtifying Grace, bleſs him for his All-Sanctifying Grace, bleſs him for his All-Glorifying Grace which he hath called you into, as the Text hath it thereby, and by all theſe he hath given you the full right and ſecurity of his Eternal Glory already.

Chap. 6.

CHAP. VI.

God's calling us unto his Eternal Glory, is an inveſting us with a right to Heaven. And therefore, though yet we do not actually enjoy it, yet we may be aſſured, that he will preſerve us ſafe and ſecure, until he has brought us to the poſſeſſion of that Glory. Our being called unto an Eternal Glory, imports, That a ſpiritual Life which is eternal, is begun in our Souls; and that by being Called we are put into an eternal right of Glory. The Reaſon of it, becauſe he is The God of all Grace who calls us unto this Glory. What his Glory implies: That it is a certain Engagement on God's part, that he will carry us through all Temptations and Difficulties unto it.

I PET. V. 10.

Who hath called us UNTO HIS ETERNAL GLORY.

THE Scope of theſe words in the tenth Verſe, being to inſure us, That God will carry thoſe whom he hath Called, through all Sufferings and Temptations ſafe unto eternal Life, my profeſſed Deſign hath been to draw Arguments for this out of every word of the former part of this Verſe, But the God of all Grace, &c. I having diſpatch'd what Arguments God's having called us, do contribute; I now come unto theſe other words, Into his eternal Glory. There are three words, which do ſerve as three Heads, to reduce theſe Arguments unto.

1. He hath called us into Glory.
2. Eternal Glory,
3. His Glory.

1. He hath called us into Glory; that is, though not into the poſſeſſion, yet unto as full a right thereunto, which upon Calling we are inſtated in, as ever we ſhall have in Heaven.

He ſaith not barely, He hath called us into Grace, or into the ſtate of Grace; though that is elſewhere ſaid in expreſs terms, Rom. 5. 7. We have acceſs by faith into this grace wherein we ſtand: which is all one as if he had ſaid, into the ſtate of Grace, as we may rightly from thence ſtile it: And for our Apoſtle ſo to have here ſpoken, would ſeem the more ſutable to have followed upon that Title he had given to God the Founder of all, in the words after, The God of all Grace. Yea, and for him to have ſo ſpoken, might alone have ſerved ſufficiently to ſecure us: Becauſe this alone for us to be put into the dominion of that eſtate of Grace, affords abundant Fortifications and Securities unto us againſt the power of Sin, or whatever elſe, according as the Apoſtle in Rom. 6. 14. ſpeaks; Sin ſhall not have dominion over you, for ye are not under the

Book IV.

3. Conſider, that the Graces in thee have to do and to conflict but with particular Temptations ſingly at once, or but with few, though ſometimes with diverſe, yet never with all, as two Apoſtles tell us.

Now to draw a Concluſion from all theſe things: How eaſie is it for God, that is the God of all Grace, and who wrought all Grace, De novo, that is, anew at the firſt, ſtill to ſtrengthen any one grace, or graces that are already wrought, and are extant in being in thy heart, againſt what is, or are but a particular temptation or temptations, when Grace is thus but ſingly ſet upon and aſſaſſinated? And this Inference is moſt ſtrong from the Premiſſes; Namely, That he that created all Graces wholly De novo, or a new at the firſt, ſhould certainly be both able and willing to maintain particular Graces ſtill as they are all along aſſaulted. And his being a God of all Grace, doth make him as willing, as he is able for it. This as for the point of his upholding and maintaining thy Graces.

II. Seeing that in ſuch temptations, thou haſt to do with ſuch or ſuch a corruption in particular; I bid thee take or ſingle forth any one particular corruption, or Corruptions, which thou findeſt, are, or have been moſt prevalent to endanger thee: Conſider that if God, as a God of all Grace, at Calling firſt gave an univerſal wound, a crucifying unto all and every luſt in thee, (as was ſhewn) and that he did this when he found the body of ſin whole, and in its full ſtrength and vigour, and unbroken, hardned, accuſtomed, and habituated unto evil, as the Prophet ſtates the Caſe; And withal that this God continues to be the ſame God of all Grace to thee, (Αὐτὸς) Then certainly he is afterwards able and willing much more to help thee out againſt, and in the end to ſtrengthen thee againſt that corruption, or corruptions, that have been already thruſt through, and go limping with a mortal wound, though they riſe up with a renewed ſtrength at the preſent: For it is both a more eaſie work to him thus to aſſiſt thee, and likewiſe his Grace engageth him more afterwards to this, than it did at firſt to work the whole of all Grace in thee; eſpecially when thou findeſt that he continues to work in thee ſome hatred of that corruption, ſome mourning for it, with a deſire of the contrary Grace, running all along with thy being overcome by it.

Shall I give you one place of Scripture to confirm the moſt of what have been lately ſaid, It is in James, Chapt. 4. Verſ. 5, 6. Do ye think that the Scripture ſaith in vain, the Spirit that dwelleth in us, luſteth to envy? But he giveth more Grace, wherefore he ſaith, God reſiſteth the Proud, but giveth grace unto the humble.

1. It ſuppoſeth that our moſt bloody conflicts are ſtill with ſome particular luſts, and temptations, for ſo his inſtance carries it, mentioning only a luſt of Envy, which Saints had then, and have at this day too much of in them one againſt another, the Spirit that is in [Us] Us Saints (for of thoſe he ſpeaks) luſteth after envy.

A Second Is, that when a ſoul being ſenſible of that corruption, doth humble it ſelf under it, and for it, and bewail it unto God; and hath already a Grace begun actually working in oppoſition to it, that is, to reſiſt that envy and pride, (from whence it is that envy riſeth) that hath an heart to ſeek for humility, which is the contrary Grace, where God, ſays James, hath wrought, and continues theſe oppoſitions thereto; He, the ſame God, will (as a God of all Grace) give more Grace unto that ſoul, and theſe two are moſt expreſs, either in the Words, or their Coherence. For,

1. In Verſ. 6. He ſays, God will give more Grace, whereby in the firſt place is meant, that he will give more of that particular Grace, which is contrary to that luſt of Envy, though together there with a further encreaſe of all Grace alſo: For they do ſtill encreaſe together.

And 2ly, It is as expreſs that the Perſons he promiſeth to give this more Grace unto, are thoſe whom he hath begun to have wrought ſome of this Grace in.

1. For

1. For the word More Grace, imports an addition unto Grace already ſuppoſed to have been received, which this is to be an addition to: And alſo that he will give more Grace in reſpect to the ſubduing that corruption in the end, which is a diſtinct thing from the other, and a ſpecial Grace of it ſelf for God to do it. Chap. 5.

And 2ly. The Promiſe for this out of Scripture, runs thus, Verſ. 6. He giveth Grace to the humble; It ſuppoſeth therefore, Humble already, and that qualification of Humility, is alſo the very radical oppoſite Grace to Envy.

And 3ly, So the Promiſe muſt be underſtood to mean this; That where God hath wrought ſome beginnings of any Grace contrary to corruptions, continued with conflicts againſt thoſe corruptions (as the word Luſteth implies, compared with Gal. 5. 17. 21.) As of Humility, againſt Pride, and Envy, there God will give yet more, or farther ſupplies of Grace, unto that Soul. And though thou canſt not ſee all, and each particular that is wrought, nor read every letter of Gods writing, that is written in thine heart, yet God knows his own hand. Yea, ſome Graces perhaps may be written but in ſhort hand, or Cyphers, and not drawn out into Letters at length. They having not as yet been exerciſed; yet they all are, and were written by him at the firſt. Quod ſcripſi, ſcripſi, what I have written, I have written: It will be for ever owned by him; be aſſured that this God, who hath been at ſuch coſt in laying a foundation of all Grace, will be ſure to ſee to it to perfect it; you heard afore in the former Head, and Sermons, that becauſe the Work of Calling, or Regeneration, was a good and perfect Work for kind, that God had therefore an Unchangable reſpect to it; but when from what hath been ſaid, you ſhall add this to it, that it is, though for degree, an imperfect work, that yet is

Book IV. a compleat work for kind, of all ſorts of Graces, bearing the whole Image of God himſelf in that reſpect : And that as himſelf, the God of all Grace, is the Author of it, from hence alſo he is the more engaged to perfect it.

If you ſhall ſee a great and withal a wiſe Maſter-builder, to have laid a compleat and Univerſal Model, or Area, (as Builders call it) though yet but in the Foundations of it, perhaps not a foot high, yet univerſally and entirely compleat, and ſo rich for the matter of it, as to be ſuppoſed of Pearls, and precious Stones, laid in every part of that Foundation, and alſo ſo intire in the parts of it, that it will ſerve for the Foundation-work of all, and the whole of a Glorious Pile, and Fabrick, whereof that is the Model and beginning; ſo as all that is to follow, or ſhall be erected, and ſuperſtructed over it, hath a full Foundation of it: You would in this caſe conclude, that certainly he that had laid ſuch a Plat-form, and beſtowed ſuch a coſt on this Foundation, will not loſe all this, but carry it on, and will build it (though the Builder which he Employs in it, which are our particular ſelves, build with a Trowel in one hand, and a Sword in th'other, as Nehemiah did, leaſt it ſhould be ſaid he was a fooliſh Builder, that was not able to finiſh it.

This is the caſe here upon Called Ones, for not the wiſe God only, but he who is the God of all Grace, hath begun a good work in you, he will not loſe the Glory of his Wiſdom, but be much more aſſured, he will never loſe the glory of his Grace, much leſs the glory of his being the God of all Grace, who as ſuch hath laid this foundation; 'Twas the glory of his Grace carried on to perfection the Fabrick of the Temple (which was one Type of this very Building) of Zerubbabel his building of it with a multitude of difficulties, and interruptions; it is ſaid, Zach. 4. 9. That he having laid the Foundation ſtone of it. (Though it were but one ſtone for all the reſt) (as you know the manner of Maſter Builders is) that he ſhould have the honour to lay the Top-ſtone. So Verſ. 7. And why? That in the end and final finiſhing of all, the people all might ſhout, and cry, Grace, Grace to it. That is, Grace had begun it, and Grace had perfected it, and Grace had carried it all along throughout thoſe difficulties: Now Brethren, ſo 'tis here, you ſhall one day have each of you a building made without hands in the Heavens, 2 Cor. 5. 1, 2. And in the mean time the foundations of it are laid in your hearts, according to what the Prophet foretold, Iſai. 54. 11, 12. O thou afflicted, toſſed with tempeſts, and not conſumed: Behold I will lay thy ſtones with fair Colours, and lay thy Foundations with Saphirs, and I will make thy Windows of Agats, and thy Gates of Carbuncles, and all thy Borders of pleaſant ſtones, ſpeaking of the Church of the New Teſtament: And ſuch every Grace, and the exerciſes and encreaſes of them are, and ſo it is reared and ariſeth up above ground in this World, and the whole work and Fabrick of it is undertaken and carried on by God, the God of all Grace, who laid not one, but every Foundation-ſtone with his own hands immediately, and hath left out no one of ſaving Graces, having done it as a God of all Grace. Oh ye Called Ones, ſhout, and ſhout aloud for joy, and cry not only GRACE, GRACE TO IT, as they at the finiſhing of the Temple, which was but the ſhadow of the Temple of God within you. But cry you this Note, if any, THE GOD OF ALL GRACE, THE GOD OF ALL GRACE; that's the New Teſtament language, ſo far exceeding that of the Old, and therein bleſs him for his All-Juſtifying Grace, bleſs him for his All-Sanctifying Grace, bleſs him for his All-Glorifying Grace whichhe hath called you into, as the Text hath it thereby, and by all theſe he hath given you the full right and ſecurity of his Eternal Glory already.

Chap. 6.

CHAP. VI.

God's calling us unto his Eternal Glory, is an inveſting us with a right to Heaven. And therefore, though yet we do not actually enjoy it, yet we may be aſſured, that he will preſerve us ſafe and ſecure, until he has brought us to the poſſeſſion of that Glory. Our being called unto an Eternal Glory, imports, That a ſpiritual Life which is eternal, is begun in our Souls; and that by being Called we are put into an eternal right of Glory. The Reaſon of it, becauſe he is The God of all Grace who calls us unto this Glory. What his Glory implies: That it is a certain Engagement on God's part, that he will carry us through all Temptations and Difficulties unto it.

I PET. V. 10.

Who hath called us UNTO HIS ETERNAL GLORY.

THE Scope of theſe words in the tenth Verſe, being to inſure us, That God will carry thoſe whom he hath Called, through all Sufferings and Temptations ſafe unto eternal Life, my profeſſed Deſign hath been to draw Arguments for this out of every word of the former part of this Verſe, But the God of all Grace, &c. I having diſpatch'd what Arguments God's having called us, do contribute; I now come unto theſe other words, Into his eternal Glory. There are three words, which do ſerve as three Heads, to reduce theſe Arguments unto.

1. He hath called us into Glory.
2. Eternal Glory,
3. His Glory.

1. He hath called us into Glory; that is, though not into the poſſeſſion, yet unto as full a right thereunto, which upon Calling we are inſtated in, as ever we ſhall have in Heaven.

He ſaith not barely, He hath called us into Grace, or into the ſtate of Grace; though that is elſewhere ſaid in expreſs terms, Rom. 5. 7. We have acceſs by faith into this grace wherein we ſtand: which is all one as if he had ſaid, into the ſtate of Grace, as we may rightly from thence ſtile it: And for our Apoſtle ſo to have here ſpoken, would ſeem the more ſutable to have followed upon that Title he had given to God the Founder of all, in the words after, The God of all Grace. Yea, and for him to have ſo ſpoken, might alone have ſerved ſufficiently to ſecure us: Becauſe this alone for us to be put into the dominion of that eſtate of Grace, affords abundant Fortifications and Securities unto us againſt the power of Sin, or whatever elſe, according as the Apoſtle in Rom. 6. 14. ſpeaks; Sin ſhall not have dominion over you, for ye are not under the law, but under grace: that is, if you be admitted once into Grace, and under its Dominion, and are become Subjects thereof, ye are thereby taken into the protection of Grace, and the Soveraignty thereof, and it is the greatest Soveragn, (as you have heard) and will be sure to take care of you.

But our Apostle contents not himself to speak thus low, but fetches his main strength wherewith to hearten us against all assaults from a higher Region of Arguments, he flies up to the highest that can be, The God of all grace, who hath called us into glory: No less. The first foot we set upon, after our Calling, is into glory, and not into a state of grace only: He hath setled that upon us irrecoverably, and hath ingaged himself, as he is a God of all grace, to see to it, to guard and bring us to that Glory, as with a Garrison, all along; for the whole of that Glory is become our right; and sure, if you have the God of all Grace as the Estator, and then the Assurer of it to us, to maintain his own act; and then as for Glory it self, the thing estated into, you are sure enough of that in all reason every way, upon the uttermost of Securities that can be given, that is, virtually upon all and above all Security whatsoever. And because this affordeth us the highest Arguments, therefore it was, he chose rather thus to express himself, Who hath called us into glory.

This Glory was the first-born of God's thoughts, and of his intentions towards us, this was the first thing that rose up in the heart of the God of all Grace, in his good will to us, for it was the end and upshot of all his designs, and all other in this life, are but as the means and the way thereto. This was his end, and his supream end, next his own glory, and therefore first in intention, which moved him to call us, Acts 13. 48. As many as were ordained to eternal life, believed. And accordingly, being glorified is placed lastly, as being the ultimate upshot of our being called and justified, which, as the means, are in execution placed first. Rom. 8. 30. The ordaining of us to his glory, was his highest rest and Complacency. Luke 12. 32. It is (and was) the Father's pleasure to give you a Kingdom, and the place where it is to be injoyed was the first of all his works. Matth. 25. 34. Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you, from the foundation of the World. It is that Heaven which was created the first day, Gen. 1. 1. Hence, when Election comes to break forth first in calling, God's heart is so intent upon this glory, as his first and last end, that although he suspend the giving us the possession for some years, yet he will not suspend the giving the full compleat right of the whole, and that from the first, he cannot forbear that, but instantly upon calling, gives forth a Patent of it, which is here expressed by a Calling us into Glory.

And as God then estated us into it, so Christ also as then receives us into it, Rom. 15. 7. Receive ye one another, as Christ also received us to the glory of God. He hath now received us into an indisseizable right thereunto, although that when we come to dye, we all still cry out to him for another receiving of us, as Stephen, Lord Jesus receive my spirit; that is, into the actual possession of what, as to right, he had received us into before. And we find the Scripture elsewhere, at the same, and no lower rate, to speak, than that when we are called we are saved, 2 Tim. 1. 9. Who hath saved us, and called us with a holy Calling. The whole of Salvation is stated upon us then.

And when you consider this, you will readily acknowledge it eligible to follow after his stiling God the God of all Grace, than to say, who hath called us into glory, rather than into grace, as that which was most becoming the great God of all Grace: For he that is the God of all Grace, should give the whole, and all of that Grace he ever intended to bestow in the first moment wherein he began to make a discovery of his Grace unto us. This is to act like the God of all Grace indeed, and therefore its most properly said, The God of all Grace hath called us to Glory.

And here let us stand and wonder at this his dispensation, that after he should have done this so great and so strange an act, once for all, that thereafter his design and ordination should be to set out at once, Temptations, Oppositions, Difficulties to encounter and conflict withal; and for him to overcome for us, and by us, and this for the space of many years to come after, between this his his eſtating us into glory, in reſpect of right, and that other of our poſſeſſion of it. Such Temptations, as in no appearance might, and were likely, yet would put the poſſeſſion of it, ſo long yet to come, into all hazards, diſcouragements, and miſadventures, and yet he deſigns it thus to illuſtrate his grace the more. Chap. 6.

I ſhall give but one Parallel Inſtance of the like dealing, which doth illuſtrate this by way of Similitude, and indeed was intended as the Type of this very thing. God ſent Samuel to David whilſt he was yet young, keeping of ſheep, and anointed him King, 1 Sam. 16. 13. in the open view of all his Brethren; and by that one ſolemn act, inveſted him into a viſible, and yet irrecoverable right of the Kingdom of Judah and Iſrael; and it was the outward part of David's ſure mercies, which was the pawn of all the reſt, and of his right to the Kingdom of Heaven. And thus God did, as then, ſo long after, although he ſuſpected the poſſeſſion of it many years, yet gave it him in the right; and when God had done this, and therewith ingaged himſelf to make it good, and ſware not to repent of it, Then ſaid God, let Saul, and all the Power of his Kingdom, and that whole People that were his Subjects (who were generally wicked, and took part with Saul) let them do their worſt; and thereupon God expoſes this Flea, this Patridge upon the Mountains, that skipt from place to place upon Saul's hunting of him with all the Power of that Nation, and with all the intereſt he had in it; yet ſtill he keeps him and preſerves him in open defiance of him and his Benjamites, and the men of Kilah, and the reſt of that Rabble, and they might all go caſt their Caps after him, but take him and deſtroy him they could not. The Heathen raged, and the People imagined a vain thing, and yet I have ſet my King upon my holy Hill, as the Pſalmiſt hath it. And juſt thus it is that God ſerves the Devil and all our Enemies within us, and worldly enemies without us; he firſt anoints us by his Spirit in that great ſolemn act of Calling us into glory, and then it is that he poures his Spirit richly on us, and creates us heirs of eternal glory, as it follows there, Tit. 3. 7. He gives his Spirit commiſſion to dwell in us, to look to us, but reſerves our poſſeſſion of it unto a further time, and the attaining thereof ſhall be a work of time, and in that interim or ſpace he lets looſe all thoſe Enemies upon us, leaves us to the hardeſt wreſtlings and fightings with them, and thoſe accompanied with innumerable hazards of our being overcome; and yet ſo waking and Omnipotent is the eye and hand of God over us and upon us, that ſtill he either ſtrengthens us at the inſtant, or reſtores us if we be led Captive.

Now let us ſee what Arguments and Powerful Inferences of Security this one Topick will afford us.

Firſt, All grant that if we were in Glory and the poſſeſſion of it, that then ſin and Devils could not diſpoſſeſs us, nor indanger us. Now in truth, it comes all to one, as to point of certainty and ſecurity (although right to, and Poſſeſſion of that Glory, are infinitely diſtant, as to the matter of Joy and Injoyment;) for by giving us the right, God hath ingaged all that is in him, to bring us to the poſſeſſion, and not to ſuffer an act which was done by him, as a God of all Grace, ever to be fruſtrate.

2. Argument. If at firſt he gives the greateſt and utmoſt, (the greateſt that can be given, as right to Glory is) then certainly he gives all that ſerves to the attainment, unto the uttermoſt he can give; ; and the reaſon thereof further is, Becauſe all that which conduceth to bring us thither, is leſs than the right to that Glory. Now as in 2 Theſſ. 2. 13, 14. Beloved of the Lord, becauſe God hath from the beginning choſen you to Salvation, through Sanctification of the Spirit, and belief of the Truth; whereunto he called you by our Goſpel, to the obtaining of the Glory of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Faith and Holineſs they are the Means; Glory and Salvation the end of thoſe Means. God chooſes to carry us through thoſe Means, unto this, as the end of all. Now if God, beſides his choice of us from the beginning unto the end, will be pleaſed to inſtate us into the right of that Glory, by calling us, this being infinitely a greater matter, and a priviledge far beyond the giving us thoſe Means themſelves, then certainly he will beſtow thoſe Means effectually upon us, and carry us through thoſe Means unto that Glory. He will not ſtick, after he hath given the greateſt, to give that which is a little more, and which is to follow in order to the obtaining of it. I Argue this from the Greater to the Leſſer; for ſo the Apoſtle Argues concerning Gods giving Chriſt to dye for us, Rom. 8.32. He that ſpared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all; how ſhall he not with him alſo freely give us all things? A right to Glory given at calling, is more than Calling it ſelf, and Faith and Holineſs that is to follow, to bring us to the obtaining of that Glory, Pſal 84. 11. The Lord will give Grace and Glory, and no good thing will he withold; that is, that doth ſerve effectually to work Grace, and that will bring us to Glory. Add,

Thirdly, how little a ſpace or while there is between thy Calling (eſpecially thee at the preſent) and the Poſſeſſion of that Glory; and how the Scriptures, ſpeaking of this ſpace, how ſmall a matter in Gods account, they make it, for him to keep thee in that mean while, though to us it is a greater while; and therefore it is ſaid, we have need of Patience, Hebr. 10. 36, 37. For ye have need of Patience, that after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the Promiſes: For yet a little while, and he that ſhall come will come, and will not tarry. It is but a little ſpace wherein thou art in danger, and which thou ſhalt be tempted in. Now our great and All-wiſe God relieves himſelf thereby againſt thy preſent ſinfulneſs, that doth fall out in this mean time, and againſt thy falls and thy backſlidings. For thinks he with himſelf, yet a little while and I ſhall have thee perfectly holy with me in Glory, a Spirit made perfect ſhortly, and it is but my own diſpenſation to have thee thus imperfectly holy in the mean time, and thus ſinful: But, if there had been an abſolute danger in it, I would inſtantly rather have taken thee up to my ſelf, as I have done many Children of mine, ſoon after their Converſion. And if God calls upon us for Patience, for that little while we are to live, as in, Hebr. 10. 36, 37. himſelf will have it much more. And for the glory of his Juſtice, God can and doth bear with the Veſſels of wrath, whilſt they are fitting for deſtruction; much more can he, and will he have Patience on a Veſſel of mercy, whom himſelf is fitting and preparing by all thoſe Temptations all that while for glory. As Rom. 9. 22, 23. What if God willing to ſhew his wrath, and to make his power known, endured with much long-ſuffering the Veſſels of wrath fitted to deſtruction: And that he might make known the Riches of his glory on the veſſels of mercy, which he had afore prepared unto glory? Pure grace is of a much more long ſuffering temper and diſpoſition, than mercy mixed with eternal Juſtice in the end: And he hath to relieve him that Idea or Picture of what thou ſhalt be ſhortly to him; and beſides, hath the foreſight of thy returnings back again to him, from all thy back-ſlidings, with a Heart broken, and made more holy 'ere thou dieſt.

Let us pleaſe our ſelves a little with ſo delightful a view, as the Proſpect of that one place, Epheſ. 5. as to theſe purpoſes, Verſ. 25, 26, 27. Huſbands love your Wives, as Chriſt loved his Church, and gave himſelf for it: That he might Sanctifie and cleanſe it with the waſhing of Water, by the word: That he might preſent it to himſelf, a glorious Church, not having ſpot or Wrinkle, or any ſuch thing: But that it ſhould be holy without blemiſh. I ſhall take up the ſeries of theſe words, ſo far as they ſerve to this purpoſe, thus. 1. The Church in this World is ſuppoſed to be full of loathſomeneſs and filthneſs to Chriſt, and therefore Chriſt is fain continually to be cleanſing it, as with Water, by his Word, virtuous, Spirit-full Water, which ſearches into, and fetches out all ſorts of Corruptions, though never ſo inward, of which alſo the Prophet Ezek. 36. 25. ſpeaks, I will ſprinkle clean Water upon you, and you ſhall be clean from all your filthineſs, &c. and Analogouſly to this, in the 26 Verſ. A new Heart alſo will I give you, and a new ſpirit will I put within you; and I will take away the ſtony Heart out of your fleſh, and I will give you an Heart of fleſh. And it is ſpoken of cleanſing us by Sanctification as is there expreſſed, and as by Water with the word. It Imports it alſo, as diſtinct from Juſtification, as elſewhere when it is ſaid he came by Water and Blood; Water is ſpecified as the Cauſe of Sanctifying, and as made diſtinct from from his Blood, as the meritorious Cauſe of Juſtifying us. 2. He in the mean time hath in his eye and thoughts, how glorious a Church he means to make her one day, not having one ſpot or Wrinkle, or any ſuch thing; which is ſpoken, 3ly, to inſinuate how much he relieves himſelf, with what will be the end of his work of cleanſing her, as all Artiſts uſe to do. And 4ly, he hath in his eye the time, and the few years, untill that day, namely, at death, for then it is he means to preſent us to himſelf, and to his Father with great joy, as you have it in Jude's Epiſtle, and Coloſſ. 1. 25. Whereof I am made a miniſter according to the diſpenſation of God, which is given to me for you, to fulfill the word of God. 5ly, The Apoſtle puts in that clauſe, not having any ſuch thing in reference unto our relief alſo, and unto what diſcouragements the Spirits of Believers are apt to have by reaſon of ſome ſuch, or ſuch ſpecial Corruption; in ſaying ſo, he doth as it were, point at ſuch or ſuch a thing, the Eminent unto the Soul, with Chriſts declared intention to cleanſe that eſpecially; and he puts that in, becauſe the Soul is apt to lay its finger, as we ſay, on ſuch or ſuch a ſore, ſuch or ſuch a luſt, that is ſo prevailing, of which the Soul ſighing ſays, O, will this ever be cured! as my Pride, my Uncleanneſs, my Enmity, &c. Well, ſays the Apoſtle appoſitely to thoſe ſayings in our Hearts, the day is a coming, that thou ſhalt have no ſuch nor ſuch, no nor ſuch a thing in thee; no not the leaſt wrinkle in thee, which is leſs than a ſpot, not ſo much as the appearance that ever there was ſuch a thing in thee. For Chriſt will ſcower and cleanſe and fetch out all unevenneſſes perfectly. Chap. 6.

I ſhall further inſiſt and inlarge out of theſe words, as to the purpoſe in hand, theſe things.

Firſt, That Jeſus Chriſt foreſees this glorious Iſſue to come, and hath it in his eye and thoughts, in the midſt of all thy horrid and amazing Corruptions that are ſuffered to break forth, concerning which thou art like one that hath a Sore (unto which the Apoſtle alſo alludes) that ſtill and anon, unto thy thinking, grows worſe and worſe, and according to the courſe yet held, what hopes is there 'twill ever be cured? But Chriſt, thy healer, he knows what he is a doing, foreſees all means to make a perfect cure of it, whatever diſcouragements thou maiſt have now in the mean time, and hath that in his mind and intention all the while. And as it is ſaid of a wicked man, that God ſees his day a coming, and relieves himſelf in his preſent forbearance, that there is a day coming in which he ſhall recover his glory on him by a juſt Deſtruction; ſo on the contrary, he ſees thy day a coming, the day of the Reſtitution of all things. He knows punctually when thou ſhalt dye, as well as he knew Peter's death, and as well as he knows where thou liveſt; and thou maiſt know and be aſſured of this, That Chriſt doth thus know and foreſee that at death thou ſhalt be made perfect; for he takes up into glory, every day, ſome Souls belonging to him, that were in his eyes, as full of Corruption, whilſt they were in this life, as thine is now. I ſay, this very day (for that Gate is always open too for ſome Paſſengers or other) there were ſome that came to Heaven, whoſe hearts were full of Corruption the day before, yea, this very morning before they died, even as well nigh thy heart is now: As how full of Corruption was the heart of that Thief, of whom yet Chriſt ſaith, This day ſhalt thou be with me in Paradiſe? Which Souls, e're they came up to him, were made glorious Souls, having no ſpot or wrinkle in them.

2. It appears from that Scripture alſo, that this is Chriſt's deareſt intereſt, and the moſt pleaſing thing to him, to bring Souls at laſt faultleſs and ſpotleſs into his own Preſence, though now they are full of Corruptions. He longs for that day, as much as a Bride-groom doth, or can do, for his injoyment of a ſpotleſs Bride. And the Reaſon is, for he greatly delights in the Beauty that is, or ſhall be, in the Saints, Pſal. 45. 11. And look what Beauty in a Spouſe is to a Husband, that is full of love and fancy, the ſame is perfect Holineſs to him. And there is one word, yea, two inſerted, which vehemently Argues as much, firſt To himſelf, that ſpeaks this to be the higheſt indearment to himſelf, that the Church ſhall be made perfectly holy, it ſhews that ſhe was given him by God ſo to be made, and that for Chriſt's own pleaſure and delight, delight, as a Mans Wife is for himself, so is the Church and her perfect holiness, which is Christs, for his own self. And the Apostle alludes to that similitude, for he speaks before of his Church being that to him, which a Wife is to a Husband, before and also after. Then that other word, to present to himself a Church without spot, or wrinkle, this Argues it to be his greatest interest; also thy perfect holiness will be the Richest Present to him that can be presented, yea, and to shew it so much, himself will be the presenter of himself to thee, so much doth he delight therein.

3. Knowing and foreseeing this, and delighting in the view of this, of what thou shalt be to him, he must needs certainly relieve himself in the mean time against thy present Corruption, and your selves would do it, if you did believe it as he doth. You commonly use to do it in matters which for a while go contrary, whereof you know not what will be the certain issue. All wise men bear up themselves against any present evil, as a false report or scandal, when they know a few days will clear them, we do it as to our Servants, when they are to go away, we say it is but for a while, and are therefore content to bear many things in them. Thus also Christ in case of his Enemies, and his expecting them to be made his Foot-stool, supports himself in that expectation, that he sees their day a coming, as the Third Psalm hath it. And in the mean time laughs them to scorn upon that account, as the Second Psalm hath it, and if he doth thus relieve himself towards his Enemies, then how much more against the present Corruptions of his Spouse, whilst he sits expecting her coming to him blameless, to sit down as his Queen by him self, having prepared a Place for her?

And then the smallness of time much conduces to lighten and alleviate the trouble of that forbearance in his heart; nay, the fore-thought and fore-delight of what will shortly be, swallows up his trouble for thy infirmities in the mean time. He thinks many years as nothing, If a Thousand years be but as one day, what are a few years of thy life yet to come before this happy presentment of thee to himself? How long did God bear with those Godly Patriarchs after the Flood, who were for certain subject to the same Passions, and prevailed often upon with the same Lusts that thou art prevailed upon with? How did he bear with Methuselah, almost a Thousand years, yet he held in with them, for he saw the day a coming in which they should be taken up to himself, and be perfectly holy. Why shouldst not thou think that he can and will bear with thee for twenty, thirty, or forty years, of thy life (if it be so long) and and with this mixt condition of sin, and grace, conflicting? Jacob accounted his Seven years Service but a few days, because he loved Rachel, Gen. 29 Jesus Christ can Pardon thee all along in the mean time, and ever and anon reduce thee, and now and then come, and not only strengthen thee against temptations, but visit thee, and comfort thee, as one that art a Candidate of Glory, and hast a right to it, and sittest with him in Heavenly Places in that respect, and art to be a Companion with him in that Glory for evermore.

4. This place therewith insinuates, that he hath an Idea of what thou art to be, continually before his eyes, which wonderfully takes up his heart, and pleases him. Thy Walls are ever before him, (as the Prophet speaks) as one day they shall be built according to the Pattern he hath in his heart. Great mens Wives use to wear their Husbands Picture on their Breasts, in that form or freshness they were in, when they were Married to them, from which in time, they alter to the worse, and grow out of that shape, to what at first they were, and were Pictured in. But it's otherways in this of Christ, he Married thee at thy worst, when thou wert altogether deformed, yet he had taken a Picture of thee, as thou wert at first presented to him by the Father from Everlasting; but what thou shouldst be, and the beauty thereof, had such an impression on his heart, and stickt so with him, as he carries that in mind as the perfect Idea of that Holiness, and Glory, thou art to be restored unto, and that by means of himself, which is his Glory, as the Author, and Recoverer of thee unto that beauty, which he bearing accordingly in his eye, as it is yet to come, or as it is yet to be his own work upon thee, so at last therein, to present thee to himself; and he having these two Pictures of thee, both of what his Father

firſt preſented thee to him, when thou wert given to him, from Everlaſting, which made him firſt in love with thee; and then having the hue of what according to that Original, himſelf is a drawing on thee and means to perfect, this we ſee takes his heart, eſpecially the latter, becauſe it is to be his own workmanſhip: As it leſſens, if not altogether ſwallows up the preſent thoughts of thy deformity, eſpecially when that is to continue for ſo ſmall a time. Chap. 6.

If, as ſome Romances have feined a Lover, a King ſuppoſe, had a Beautiful Wife betrothed to him, whoſe Picture (as the manner is) were ſent over aforehand to him, before himſelf did ſee her; but when ſhe is Shipt to come, or otherwiſe in her Journey, ſhe falls ſick of ſome loathſom Diſeaſe, as the Small Pox, ſuppoſe, or Leproſy, and yet ſuppoſe you imagine that he knew before ſhe ſhould come to him, ſhe ſhould be reſtored to her firſt primitive Beauty; though he would be troubled for her preſent diſaſter, and diſtemper, or diſeaſe, yet he would eaſily quiet himſelf, for that little ſpace of time, in which her infirmity, though greatly diſfiguring her, is to continue: Or, if we further ſuppoſe him preſent with her, to be her alone Phiſician that cureth her, and reſtoreth her unto that firſt perfect beauty, which he knew certainly he could, and ſhould do; He would ſhew all love and peace towards her, though her Diſeaſe were loathſome, in hope of her recovery; and this is perfectly the caſe here between Chriſt, and the Church, Verſe 25. Husbands love your Wives, as Chriſt alſo loved the Church; he that loveth his Wife, loveth himſelf. For no man yet hateth his own fleſh, but nouriſheth it, and cheriſheth it, even as the Lord the Church. If a mans own fleſh be diſeaſed with the worſt and fowleſt of Diſeaſes, though he hates the Diſeaſe, yet he loves his own fleſh, and ſeeks out for the Cure of it, he nouriſhes it, and cheriſhes it; now ſo doth Chriſt, much more upon that Ground, that we are his own fleſh, that we are members of his Body, Verſ. 30. Of his fleſh, and of his bone, much more then Man and Wife are, to whom this Exhortation is directed, Verſ. 31, 32, 33. In this caſe therefore Jeſus Chriſt is ſo far from hating us, who are his own fleſh, that he applies all ſorts of Remedies, with a ſtrong patience for the Cure of our Infirmities, and is moved to do it with the greater Patience, becauſe he knows we ſhall be reſtored to perfect health and ſoundneſs indeed, and himſelf ſhall be the healer, and then with an infinite Love, and joy, and Glory to himſelf, he preſents us to himſelf moſt Glorious, without ſpot, or wrinkle, or any ſuch thing.

To conclude, I may ſay of this Argument, what the Apoſtle doth, 1 Joh. 2. 1. Beloved, now we are the Sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we ſhall be; but we know that when he ſhall appear, we ſhall be like him. Doth he not ſpeak this to quiet them under their unlikeneſs to God, and Chriſt, in this World? And do not God and Chriſt ſatisfie themſelves, and ſatisfie their hearts towards you in the midſt of all your Complaints of, and about your ſelves? I may ſay of this, even as they, Beloved, now hath God called you into Glory, and though it doth not appear to us what we ſhall be, nor what we are in reſpect of our Title to this Glory, but we are full of contrary hateful iniquities, yet it appears to Chriſt what you are, and what you ſhall be; and there is that time coming, wherein he ſhall preſent you glorious without fault, and in the mean time bear with him, and if, as John ſays, To them we know, Verſ. 1. then to be ſure GOD and Chriſt knows this much more.

2. Called into [ETERNAL] Glory.

Hereby is implied not ſimply that the Glory is Eternal, as an adjunct of it, but that our Calling and Eſtatement thereby is into the Eternity of that Glory, as well as into the Glory it ſelf. We are Called into Eternal Glory as ſuch.

That imports two things, as other Goſpel Scriptures explain it to us.

1. Firſt,

BOOK IV.

1. First, That he that is Called, hath a Spiritual life begun in him, which is Eternal, or if you will, a Glory begun in his Soul, which is Eternal. (For so the Image of Christ wrought in us in this life, is stiled Glory, 2 Cor. 3. ult. But we all, with open face, beholding as in a Glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same Image, from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord.) And you find it every where by Christ and his Apostles, to be said, He that Believes hath Eternal life. I need name no more Scriptures but that one, John 11. Whosoever believes in me shall never die; that Spiritual life begun, is one degree substantial of the life Eternal, and being begun in us, shall never die, Rom. 6. As Christs life is said to be Eternal, which he hath now, being raised from the dead, so is ours, Vers. 9. Knowing that Christ being raised from the dead, dies no more; but in that he liveth, he liveth unto God. Likewise reckon ye also your selves alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord. Adam's Grace was not a degree of Glory, but according to the best account that hath been given of it, by those that hold, he should have been taken up into Glory in the end; As to that present Grace, that he had before he fell, they reckon him but as one standing for his Degree, that is not yet a Graduate, or as a Messonary in order to his Reward.

2. The Second thing imported hereby is, that when a Man is Called, he is put into an Eternal right of Glory, not into a present right to Glory only, but a perpetual right (at present) or a right that reaches to Eternity; and this the Scriptures strongly and plainly declare, whilst they express it to be our having a Title to it, as to any Inheritance, and that upon Calling, or whilst they make a Conveyance, not a Covenant only, but a Testament by Will, upon the death of the Testator, which shall, nor never will be forfeited, if it be but a Mans Testament, no man Disanulleth it, &c.

Now upon our Calling (which is all one with our New-birth) this Glory is conveyed and setled upon us, as an Inheritance, and it being Eternal, as an Eternal Inheritance. You know that the Tenor of Inheritances is for Ever, as we say to you, and your Heirs for ever, and this Establishment is at our New-birth, or Calling, Tit. 3. 5,7. Not by works of Righteousness which we have wrought, but according to his mercy hath he saved us, by the Washing of Regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost. That being Justified by his Grace, we should be made heirs, according to the hope of Eternal life. At, and by our New-birth, we are made Heirs according to his Mercy which saved us.

There is this difference between an Inheritance conveyed, and a Reward for Works done, which is bestowed as a Reward. That an Inheritance goes by Birth, and not by Works, and yet is for ever, because an Inheritance. A Kings Eldest Son is the Heir the first instant he is born, at the first Moment he hath Right to that Estate and Kingdom, whereof he is the Heir, and this for ever. Who are born again of God, its said we have ἐξουσίαν, a Dignity by Patent, to be the Sons of God by Adoption, Joh. 1. 12. As many as received him, to them gave he Power to become the Sons of God, which were born not of blood, &c. but of God, Vers. 13. If we were made Sons by Patent, then Heirs at the same time, Rom. 8. 17. If Children then Heirs, Heirs of God, and Joynt Heirs with Christ: And therefore we also find our being Born again, and this Inheritance Eternal joyned together, in the 1 Pet. 1. 3, 4, 5. Blessed be God who hath begotten us again to an Inheritance incorruptible, &c. It was not so with Adam, and his Grace, which he had by Creation, not in his most perfect Estate. Even those that hold, that if he had continued in Grace, he should at last have gone to Heaven, (which I confess I do not,) yet they do set out his Pretentions unto Glory but in this manner, That after some set time by God's appointment (a Thousand Years suppose) as many of them say, he should have been taken up into Glory, if he had continued in that Holiness he was made in; Yet this withal they do professedly declare, That he should not have been during that time, an Heir of that Glory, no not till the last moment of that set time: But the State he should have been in, was but of an Hireling, to whom the Reward was due by debt for Working, during which time, he should have been an Expectant for Heaven, but upon his good behaviour, but not an Heir until that time was out, and that he had been admitted into the full poſſeſſion of it. But thoſe that are called, they have a right inſtantly as Heirs thereupon, which right depended not upon Works foregoing, as that Third of Titus ſhews us; but upon birth, and upon their being called; only good Works are ordained as the way thereunto, as that we ſhould walk in to come to that end. And during that whole time of their being in this World, they are as the Son of the Prince under Age, as Gal. 4. 1, 2. who hath a right, though not the poſſeſſion; and we are here as Children under Age, as the Apoſtle in his Similitude, while he ſpeaks of Heaven, ſhews; When I was a child, I ſpake as a child, and underſtood as a Child; when I came to be a man, I put away childiſh things, 1 Cor. 13. 11. It's ſpoken in reference to our Eſtate in this World from that in Heaven, as the words before and after ſhew. Chap. 6.

So then, put theſe three things together: Firſt, That that Glory we are called unto is in it ſelf Eternal: Secondly, That that Perſon that is Called, hath a degree of that Glory begun, that ſhall never dye nor periſh: Thirdly, That withal, he hath a right unto the Eternity of it, and from that time of Calling unto Eternity; and ſo, as that that Eternal right doth not begin, when firſt the full poſſeſſion of it begins, but then when we are firſt eſtated into the right of it, as the manner of Inheritances is. And this put together, will make the Argument compleat. Now if we would be ſatisfied in the bottom reaſon, how it ſhould come to paſs, that at, and upon Calling, we ſhould be thus eſtated into Eternal Glory, we ſhall not need to go far off to ſeek it, for it is in the Text: It is plainly thus.

That it is the God of all Grace that calls us, which ſpeaks it not only to be an act of Grace, and not of Works, and grace is grace, and will be grace, and ſhew it ſelf to be ſuch. In all its Gifts it gives like it ſelf; and therefore when it gives, it gives the whole, and for ever, without Repentance; and it knows in it what it doth when it does ſo, for it hath wherewith to maintain and make good its own act; but beſides that, it is an act of the God of all Grace, he calls us as he is ſuch to us. All Grace, in ſo great a God, born towards us, what will it not effect, maugre all and every thing, that ſhould be ſuppoſed to hinder? All Grace extends to all times; it hath no bounds of time ſet it, wherein it ſhould be gracious and no longer; it were not at all Grace, if ſo: It imports, that when a Man is called out of God's grace, God had ſuch a love he bears to him he calls, as is made up of all love and grace, for intention and extenſion. And if ſo, then the indowment into all benefits of Grace and Priviledges which he hath or had to beſtow, muſt needs be then conferr'd. It imports, that he had a heart repleniſht with all Eternal grace, and the intentions of it towards him, he had a ſtock or riches of Grace to maintain all he ſhould beſtow, to Eternity, and to keep thee together therewith; the conjunction of theſe two, the God of all grace hath called, can produce no other than a perfect and compleat Donation to be a full effect thereof, as of a perfect and compleat Cauſe; this Cauſe could beſtow no leſs, and ſuch an effect could not have followed but upon ſuch a Cauſe: We do and muſt ſuppoſe his heart then to have been at the time of Calling, fraught with, and to contain within it ſelf ſuch and ſo great riches of Grace, if it were all Grace, as would be ſufficient to hold out, and to extend to Eternity, and ſo as to maintain an Eternal right and ſtate of glory all the while.

Now if it were at Calling, can we imagine that his heart ſhould not retain as much love and grace after thy Calling, as to keep and preſerve thee for that little ſpace, unto the poſſeſſion of that glory?

Nay, my Brethren, God had not thus all Grace for every one of us for an Eternity that ſhould but then begin, when our Calling began; but there was another Eternity, à parte ante, before, out of which he did call us, an Eternity of a higher date, than what was the preſent Grace, he bore thee at thy Calling, Jer. 31. 3. Yea, I have loved thee with an everlaſting love, therefore with loving kindneſs have I drawn thee, or, therefore have I extended loving kindneſs unto thee, as in the Margent; and therefore no wonder that he calls us for an Eternity to come. And here let us ſtand agaſt, to think that our Calling is the Center of two Eternities, and how there are two everlaſting

Book IV.

Arms, as Mountains, Deut. 33. 27. which meet to graſp us then, when God's grace by Calling firſt takes hold on us: There was, nor never will be, ſuch an inſtance in all Eternity.

We muſt needs ſuppoſe withal, That ſuch a grace muſt have grace enough in it to continue to all Eternity: As, ſuppoſe we a River had run under ground with continued ſtreams of Water from Eternity; which began to break forth, and to empty it ſtreams into a new Chanel, though through but a ſmall Sluce at firſt, which when once it is broke forth, muſt needs, and will run to Eternity in that new Chanel, for it hath water enough to do it to laſt unto another Eternity to come, one ſtream following another ſtream in omne volubilis ævum. Now Calling is that Sluce, the ſtate of Grace and of Glory, that new Chanel; and if indeed any thing could fall out ſo ſtrong, as to mud up, as to indanger the cutting off that Courſe of Water, then indeed it might ceaſe; but it being a ſtream of Grace from Eternity, and that of all Grace, continued all along, this muſt needs be ſo ſtrong, and ſo full, as to carry all afore it that ſhould reſiſt it, or obſtruct it; yea, it will work out all that doth oppoſe it in its Current, and ſwell over. It's a Spring, as John 4. 14. that ſhall ſpring up unto eternal life; and ſuch is the grace in God's heart, and ſuch the Spirit in Calling hath given us.

I have ſaid it with my ſelf, and to others, and ſhall never recall it, that if we could ſuppoſe ſuch a fulneſs of glory to come had not been God's Ordination, but that his Called ones were to have lived upon Earth in a ſtate of grace only, ſuch as now we are in, mixt with ſinnings, corruptions, and grace working one againſt the other conflicting: That God had love enough in his heart to ſave us thereby in this mixed condition of ſinning and repenting, and to hold us on ſo to Eternity. How much much more then, when he hath provided a Glory to poſſeſs us of, and a preſenting us ſo glorious to himſelf, within ſo little a while, that he ſhall not have cauſe to put himſelf to that trouble of a Patience for ſo long time: How much more, I ſay, according to all that hath been argued taken together, in this may we ſupport our hearts with confidence, that he will continue to hold in with us, and reduce us to himſelf again, out of ſinnings, and give that glory at the laſt?

I conclude with that in Epheſ. 2. 5, 6, 7. Having ſpoken firſt of calling, who hath quickned us together with Chriſt, by Grace ye are ſaved, Verſ. 5. And hath made us ſit together in Heavenly places in Chriſt Jeſus, Verſ. 6. That in the Ages to come, he might ſhew the exceeding riches of his Grace, in his kindneſs towards us, through Jeſus Chriſt. By the Ages to come there, is meant Eternity, which Chap. 3. 21. ſhews, where he uſeth the ſame phraſe, Glory to Chriſt throughout all Ages World without End: This place ſhews us this Iſſue or Concluſion, that God having given us a right to ſit in Heaven after calling and quickning, ſuch and ſo true a right unto Glory, as that we are ſaid already to ſit together with Chriſt in Heaven, the reſult is this, That God having infinite Riches of Grace, out of which he called, he hath ordained an Eternity of time, to ſpend them Riches in upon us, and to make Declaration of the Exceeding great (and as the Text tells us) all Grace, which he hath in his Heart for us; and Ages to come, and Eternities, are not enough for him to do all this in, the Grace is ſo Rich and ſo Abundant.

Now then from hence to Argue and make an inference from the Point in hand: Will he not preſerve us in this Life, and carry us through Temptation having ſo much Grace in his Heart laid up for us? Suppoſe a Father that hath a Great Eſtate to leave his Child, if his Child lives (and truly thoſe that have Riches, deſire Children to leave them unto, as well as Abraham did) and this his Child is weakly and conſumptive, and yet but ſo, as ſome bitter coſt extraordinary, would preſerve, reſtore, and recover him to perfect health in ſome ſhort time, would not that Father ſpend ſome of that Eſtate which lies by him, thus to recover him, that he might poſſeſs all? I think he would. And doſt thou think that this great God of all Grace, and thus rich in Grace, would pinch it for a little while, when he profeſſes that he ſets apart this Inheritance from Eternity to them that are Called. Let me tell you, that as we ſay in Nature, rather than there ſhould be a Vacuum, or Emptineſs in any parts here below, a piece of Heaven would come down to ſupply it, and make it up. So may I ſay, in this Caſe, which is but a ſuppoſition, though thou ſhouldſt have leſs Grace than what is neceſſary to keep thee, (if yould could ſuppoſe he ſhould have ſtinted himſelf, of beſtowing but a meaſure of Grace in this World, in an ordinary way, which yet he hath not,) he would rather ſpend upon the ſtock of Glory to ſupply thee with Grace to keep thee, than that thou ſhould'ſt miſs of all the whole ſubſtance of Glory. Chap. 6.

USES.

Do the Scriptures ſpeak at this rate, that we are Received into Glory, when we are Called into a perfect right unto Glory. Oh that we Could live at any proportionable rate,

1. In the comfort of it and actual expectations thereof; this the holy Apoſtle and Primitive Chriſtians did, after the Holy Ghoſt came on them, as a Comforter breathed, and had their life in this air. Let us but go to the firſt Verſe of this very Chapter, wherein my Text is; you may there overhear our Apoſtle Peter thus ſpeaking of, or rather, entitling himſelf, I, who am Partaker of the Glory that ſhall be revealed. When Perſons of Birth or Quality write Superſcriptions of themſelves, they uſe to add their ſpecial Titles; and our Apoſtle writes himſelf a Partaker of the Glory that is to come, and John doth the like, Rev. 1.9. And in my Text in the 9th Verſe, Peter calls all his Brethren to the Faith and Comfort of that, which was as really true of them all, as of himſelf, The God of all Grace hath called us into Glory; both me and you alike: Are ye Called? ye are all partakers of Eternal Glory, even as I. He hath it up again in Chap. 2. Verſ. 1, 3. In the firſt Verſe he ſpeaks this of all Saints, that they have received like pretious Faith with us Apoſtles; and at the third Verſe, that God hath Called us to Glory.

Oh how infinitely is this beyond the firſt thoughts of our aims, that we in our firſt Converſion had, our Primitive aims, as I may ſo call them; the aims of us poor Souls that live in this laſt Age of the World. As if we were, as Paul ſpeaks of himſelf, born out of due time, in Compariſon unto thoſe firſt Chriſtians. Alas! What do we groan and ſigh after all our days, and cannot ſo much as obtain the ſenſe thereof, even after no higher matter in our Addreſſes to God than we did in our firſt Converſion. Oh! Thinks the Soul, if I could have but my Sins forgiven once; (which therefore John comforts Babes with) 1 John 1. 12. I write unto you Children, becauſe your Sins are forgiven you; He ſpeaks thus unto them, becauſe this is the chiefeſt thing they are uſually intent upon; but whilſt we have theſe low thoughts and purſuits, and at our Calling we have not uſually much higher, Lo, our God, the God of all Grace, hath at the ſame time had in his thoughts an Eſtating us into Eternal Glory, and will in time ſhew thee greater things than theſe, of forgiveneſs, and being made more holy, and the like; he hath Called thee into Glory.

2. If at preſent we be Called into the right of the Glory of God, how ſhould we walk, and be holy in all manner of holy Converſation and Godlineſs; looking for, and haſtning to the Poſſeſſion of this Glory, as our Peter alſo urgeth, 2. Epheſ. 3. 11, 12. And Paul alſo upon this very intendment, 1 Theſſ. 2. 12. That ye would walk worthy of God, who hath called you to his Kingdom of Glory: It is not to walk worthy of the Goſpel only, he is exhorting them unto, but which is higher, that they ſhould walk worthy of God who hath called us into his Glory. They have under tranſlated the word into the Glory of God. When our Saviour Chriſt was entred into a ſtate of Glory upon his Reſurrection, (although, not aſcended, or poſſeſt of it, you read with what a difference he converſed from what himſelf had done before: And ſhould not we, in ſome Conformity, appear to thoſe whom our Peter ſpeaks of in his firſt Epiſtle, Chap. 1. Verſ. 14, 15. As obedient Children, not faſhioning your ſelves according to your former Luſts in your Ignorance; but as he which hath Called you is Holy, ſo be ye Holy in all Manner of Converſation. And ſtill let us think with our ſelves when we Sin, or are tempted thereunto, Should one Called into Glory do this or this?

3. Into [HIS] Glory.

For explanation; 1. Whoſe Glory this is? God's, and God the Fathers, in diſtinction from Chriſt's, as is evident, in that Jeſus Chriſt follows. 2. [His Glory] although we are the perſons who are to be glorified by it, as thoſe words, Called us &c. import.

The Particulars to be treated on from hence are,

1. That there is a glory of God the Father's, which we are called into; and what that is, and will be to us.

2. The glory which will ariſe therefrom to us, will be a glory revealed in us, and ſo ours: Yet that it is His glory, rather than ours, and why it is ſo tearmed, His, rather than our glory.

3. That the beſtowing this glory upon the Creature, is a pure act of Grace in him; and proceeds from him (as in reſpect of the donation of it) as he is a God of Grace, and of all Grace, and could proceed from no other motive or conſideration elſe.

4. Our being called into ſuch a glory of his by grace, is an aſſured engagement on Gods part, and a ſecurity to us, that God will carry us through to the poſſeſſion of it, maugre all Temptations. And this is a corallary from all the three foregoing; and the General Scope of Peter.

I. That it is the glory of the Father, and eminently his Glory, there is this abundant evidence for it, that even the glory, Jeſus Chriſt hath, though it alſo be in a moſt proper ſenſe his own glory, Luke 24. 26. ought not Chriſt to have ſuffered theſe things, and to enter into his glory? yet it is his Father's glory; thus Matth. 16. 27. He ſhall come in his Fathers glory. Whilſt yet all the Angels are ſaid to be his Angels as his proper right, and therefore his glory alſo; yet even he comes in his Father's glory, which yet again, Chap. 25. 31. is ſaid to be his own alſo: And when the Son of Man ſhall come in his Glory, and all his holy Angels with him, then ſhall he ſit upon the Throne of his Glory. But ſo it is never ſpoken of us; the meaning whereof is, that Chriſt's perſonal glory is ſuch a glory, as it ſhall be manifeſt at firſt ſight, that he is the only Son of God, the natural Son of ſo glorious a Father, and that it is his Father's glory that ſhines in him, communicated to him, that he is the ſecond Perſon by Eternal Generation; alſo as Man, God the Father gave a glory to him, as in John 17. 24. Father, I will that they alſo whom thou haſt given me, be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory which thou haſt given me: For thou lovedſt me before the foundation of the World, Chriſt acknowledgeth. Who as he gives him to have Life in himſelf, John 5. 26. For as the Father hath life in himſelf: So hath he given to the Son to have life in himſelf. And ſo hath he given him to have glory in himſelf: And it is therefore that it is ſaid to be his alſo, whilſt it is but the Fathers: For after Union, it then becomes his own, and natural to himſelf, being the natural Son of God. The full effect of all which you have in that ſpeech of John, Chap. 1. 14. We behold his Glory, the Glory as of the only begotten Son of God: That is, as of the Son of ſuch a Father, who is originally the God of Glory, Acts 7. 2. The Father of Glory, Epheſ. 1. 17. His Father, who is the Lord of Glory, James 2. 1. at which very time, when they beheld that his glory in his transfiguration, Peter ſays of it, 2 Epiſt. 16. We were eye-witneſſes of his Majeſty. For, verſ. 17. He received from God the Father honour and Glory, when there came ſuch a voice to him from the excellent glory, &c.

I added, as a Branch, this firſt Particular, what this Glory of the Father's, as it is to be communicated to us, is, and how to be underſtood, as diſtinct from that of Chriſt's to us, and in us. For the opening of which, let us run over theſe Scriptures that follow, from one to the other. In 1 Theſſ. 2. 12. it is ſtiled both the kingdom and glory of God, as in relation to us. Walk worthy of God, who hath called us into his kingdom and glory. From thence go we to Epheſ. 5. 5. where you have the Kingdom of Chriſt, and of God, mentioned tioned apart and distinct; No Idolater hath any inheritance in the Kingdom of Christ and of God. And to shew that the Father hath a Glory and Kingdom, as in relation unto us, and eminently and distinctly [Hus] you find them both set out as such, even two distinct Kingdoms or Glories successively one to the other, that all men might first acknowledge the Son, as eminently shining in his glory, and then the Father in his, and we, the Called ones, partakers of each of them, in 1 Cor. 15. 24, 28. where, as for the glory that Christ shall come in at the Day of Judgment (of which you have heard that he then comes in his Father's glory) it is said of it, that after Christ shall have exercised, or appeared in that his Kingdom and Glory, that then he shall deliver it up unto God, even the Father; that God may be all in all, both in Christ and his Saints for ever, shining in, and to the Saints in a far more excelling glory then that he had shined to them through the Person of Christ, or his dispensations: I do not say then he doth in the Person of Christ himself, but then to us, either afore the Day of Judgment, or in and by, during the Day of Judgment. And this is the ultimate glory and manifestation of God himself unto the Saints, and therefore the highest, surpassing all the foregoing, as God's last works use to do: And though the Saints shall enjoy it by Christ (as the Text here hath it) yet it is, as to the dispensation it self, immediate from the Father, when God shall be all in all both in Christ and Us; and is by Peter, in his second Epist. 1. 17. stiled as I take it) the excellent glory; For he received from God the Father honour and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, &c. For if you observe it, that glory out of which, and from which (he dwelling in it) the voice came, is attributed to the Father; for he it was that uttered, This my well-beloved Son, &c. All Glory imports the goodness of a thing, as rising to an excellency, as the Sun we say is glorious; but this is a glory excelling, that surpasseth all glory; and yet while he uttered it of him, the Man Jesus appeared, as he shall do in his glory: But that which the Father will manifest himself in, is, a Glory far excelling that which appeared in Christ, then glorified, below, to be discovered one day in the highest Heavens to us, beyond what that of Christ's will be to us; I do not say then, is in and to Christ himself communicated, but then is by him unto us. And unto this Kingdom of the Father it is, that Christ in his last words when his Kingdom is given up, at the shutting up of the Day of Judgment, invites us to the possession of, Matth. 25. 34 Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the World. Where, in the very place he mentions, he means to erect and exercise that last Kingdom of his unto Eternity, and wherein he will manifest and display, that his glory ultimately, in that he says of it, that it was prepared from the foundation of the World. That very place (which Isaiah stiles the high and holy place, Isai. 57. 15. which he hath dwelt in since the Creation) was the first work he did create, Gen. 1. 1. and so at the very first foundation of the World: So his bringing the Saints into it, and therein possessing them of his immediate glory, is the last, or τὸ μέγα in execution, and therefore his heart was, and is from first to last, so intent upon this ultimate Act and Scene: But though the place be of his creating, and but a created glory, yet the glory he meaneth to display therein, is his own immediate glory, God shall be all in all. And whereas it had been before communicated to us by other things, as in the Man Jesus, &c. he will, besides that of Christ's, (whose glory shall still shine) now unveil his own glory immediately, which shall therefore be all in all, and in stead of all; Rev. 21. 23. And the City had no need of the Sun, neither of the Moon to shine in it: for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the Light thereof. In comparison unto which glory of the Fathers, that glory, shining in the Man Jesus, shall be but λύχνος, the Lamp, as the word is; but God the Father is the light of it, Rev. 22 5. And there shall be no night there, and they need no Candle, neither light of the Sun; for the Lord God giveth them light, and they shall reign for ever and ever. Yet Christ himself, the Man Jesus, says of himself, when he proclaims his own coming, Rev. 22. 16. I Jesus have sent mine Angel to testifie unto you these things in the Churches. I am the Root, and the

Chap. 6.

Book IV. the Off-ſpring of David, and the bright and morning Star. But the morning Star, although the brighteſt, yet God the Father himſelf is the Sun, and ſo as the morning Star is the Prodromus, or fore-runner of the Sun, thus is Chriſt's Kingdom of God's, though he ſhall ſtill ſhine with the Father in that perſonal glory, which he ever did: But the Father's glory is the glory that excelleth, even whilſt Chriſt himſelf appeared in glory, as Peter ſtiles it, 2 Epiſt. 1,17. For he received from God the Father honour and glory, &c.

And in this Kingdom of the Father's it is, that the Bodies of the Saints ſhall ſhine with ſuch an extraordinary brightneſs, that had yet ſhined wonderfully afore, during the Day of Judgment, and were ſpiritual Bodies, raiſed in power and glory at their Reſurrection; yet this glory of God ſhining through their Souls, breaks forth from their Bodies, and cauſeth them to ſhine as the Sun in the Kingdom of their Father; Mat. 13.43. Then ſhall the righteous ſhine forth as the Sun, in the Kingdom of their Father, &c. [Then] points to a ſpecial time. Obſerve, it is the Kingdom of the Father that is ſpoken of, and that as it takes place after the Judgment, as the Verſe afore ſhews; for it is after the Saints ſee the wicked caſt into Hell, verſe 42. My purpoſe is not to ſet forth the greatneſs of ultimate Glory, which the Angels themſelves know not, nor could their Tongues utter; Chriſt only is as yet poſſeſſed of it, the Lord of Glory, and it is hid with Chriſt in God; nor can this Glory otherwiſe be ſet out than by a comparative made with the glory that preceeds it, afore and at the Day of Judgment. This I muſt forbear, for this is extravaſal to the direct ſcope of the Text.

II. I come therefore unto the ſecond Particular I propoſed, which is more proper to the Text; which hath two Branches.

1. That it is His Glory, not ours, though we are the Perſons glorified thereby.

2. Why, or in what farther reſpects, the glory to come, is ſtiled His glory, rather than expreſſed by our being glorified by it.

For the firſt, It is not barely to denote, that God, the Father of all Glory, is the original of that glory to us, or (as the Apoſtle ſays) that ſhall be revealed in us; but that indeed we are but received and admitted into it, and glorified by our being ſo called into his Glory, as here: And alſo in 1 Theſſ. 2. 12. Received into the glory of God. Rom. 15.7. We are but as Strangers admitted into the enjoyment and uſe of anothers Propriety. The like tenure of Speech is uſed when they come to poſſeſs it, Matth. 25. 32. Enter thou into thy Maſter's joy, not ours; we did but enter upon his Ground and Propriety, as I may ſo ſpeak.

Secondly, Why, or in what reſpect it is His glory, not ours.

1. We are wholly poor empty Creatures, as Veſſels caſt into his Ocean of Glory, which he fills with the riches of his own glory, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Rom. 9. 22.) at the Day of Judgment —— Dum Chriſti regna manebunt, in the height of Chriſt's Kingdom; it is rather ſaid, that he is wonderfully glorified, than the Saints in him; 2 Theſſ. 1.9,10. Who ſhall be puniſhed with everlaſting deſtruction from the preſence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power: when he ſhall come to be glorified in his Saints, and to be admired in all them that believe, &c. It is rather Chriſt's glory in them, than theirs. So the new Jeruſalem is ſaid to have the glory of God, Rev. 21. 11. rather than a glory of its own. As the Stars glory is that of the Sun rather than that of Stars, that have no ſuch light in them, God's glory appears by this, viz. how glorious he can make Creatures.

III. The third general Head was, That the beſtowing of this Ultimate Glory, wherein God is all in all, the Donation of it is from God, as the God of grace, and not at all by Works: And when I ſay Works, I mean not only to exclude the Works of Regenerate Men ſince the fall, but even Adams Works in the ſtate of Holineſs: And the reaſon is undeniable; becauſe the Ultimate Glory we have been ſpeaking of, lieth in an immediate Communication, Participation, and Injoyment of God himſelf: Coheirs with Chriſt, and and heirs of God, he being the Inheritance it ſelf. And certainly God hath abſolute power over the Gift of his own ſelf, where he will to beſtow himſelf thus immediately, when he gives his whole ſelf up unto the Creature. If he may, (as himſelf ſaith,) do what he will with his own, ſpeaking of other things and gifts, that are not himſelf, then ſurely it is his abſolute Soveraignty, and Grace to give and beſtow himſelf. Chap. 6.

IV. That our being called into this tranſcendent Glory of his, is a certain, and not failing Ingagement on God's part, and ſecurity unto of his carrying us thorough unto the poſſeſſion of it: This I have ſtill made the burden of every particular; and ſo of this.

Firſt of all, you ſee your Calling, as the Apoſtle ſaith, He hath called you into his Eternal Glory: That is, there is a right accrew's by calling, unto this ultimate glory; which is therefore termed the hope of our calling: Not the hope that is in our Hearts only, wherewith we hope; but the thing hoped for, ſo often in the Scriptures: And the reaſon of this is, that if God lays at the ſtake all his own Glory, to do the matter of ours, will he not carry you through? Let that waſhy, vaniſhing glory, promiſed Adam for his works, be laid at the ſtake unto Free-will, to play its prize for it, to win and run for it, and let that glory be ſo far undervalued, as to be expoſed to the uncertainty of Free-will, in its own guiding itſelf, with the mutable Principles in it ſelf: But let not this glory, this ultimate glory, that God hath to beſtow, be pawn'd and engag'd unto an uncertainty: If all in God immediately, & his glory, be the thing promiſed, then all in God ſhall be the pawn to bring us to it: Philip. 4. 19. According to his riches in Glory, he ſhall ſupply all your needs: He pawns the whole riches of his own glory to do it: 'Tis a round, and a full Argument of the Apoſtle, If he have delivered his Son up unto death; how ſhall he not with him give us all things, in like manner with him? And if God makes God himſelf over, by the Covenant of grace to us, then take all with him: And he gives all that is neceſſary to the obtaining of it: 'Tis a great inheritance, as well as a free; and, as Chriſt ſaith, a goodly Inheritance; and ſurely 'twill maintain the ſuit: You know how, upon another occaſion, God is called their God: Speaking of Abraham, and interpreting the tenour of the Covenant of grace which in that place is ſpoken as to this ſenſe: The ſenſe of it is, That his being their God in that manner, as under the Covenant of grace he is, was ſo big a word, as he ſhould have been aſhamed if the glory he promiſed them, had not been anſwerable: But I now alledge it for this, that God would be aſhamed to have it ſaid, that he is a God of all grace to any, and that he out of that grace ſhould have called us into that glory, and yet to fail by the way in bringing us to it. This is not a making a glory over from God, but a making over of God himſelf, the glorious God; and therefore all in God, if need ſhould be, would beſtir it ſelf, to make the gift of himſelf good, and as ſure to thee, as to himſelf.

A ſecond conſideration, It is a life hid in God, with Chriſt, Coloſſ. 3. 6. Hid, for the ſecurity of it, as Treaſures uſe to be: And it is not ſaid to be hid in Heaven, as a place, thats no ſuch ſecurity, as to be hid in God himſelf: For the Angels were in that place, and had an injoyment of God, by vertue of the Covenant of Works; but our Life is hid in God with Chriſt: Thou thinkeſt Chriſt ſure enough, in that he is hid in God: your Life is as ſure as Chriſts, with whom it is hid in God.

A third conſideration of ſecurity to us, is, that 'tis that ultimate glory, after the Day of Judgment, when God ſhall be all in all, which yet the Saints are now called into, as to the full right of it; yet ſo ſtill, as if they be called into the right of that ſtate now, which takes place after the Day of Judgment is paſt and over; then certainly nothing can fall out between, which ſhall hinder: For if any thing in this World ſhould fall out to hinder, it muſt be told, and ſo come in againſt thee at the Day of Judgment: But if thou be called into the full right of that glory, which ſuppoſeth that Judgment firſt paſt, and ſuch is this glory here, I before ſhewed, then nothing can be ſuppoſed, that ſhall pre-prevent it: For thou art as called, and eſtated now, into the full right of it, as then any one ſhall be into the full poſſeſſion of it.

2. 'Tis true, a Judgment muſt paſs, and come upon thee; yea, and a Judgment of all, and every work, good, or evil; as Solomon, Eccleſiaſtes 12. 14. aſſures us: Yet that God of all grace, that called thee into this ultimate, and after-Judgment glory, (for till then it doth not take place,) he will order thy ſteps ſo, as poſſeſſion it ſelf ſhall not be fruſtrated: Fear not little Flock, ſaith Chriſt to them, while they were in this Life; for tis your Fathers good pleaſure to give you the Kingdom. Luke 12. 32. The Kingdom, by way of Eminency: That which is properly the Fathers to give, his glory, (as we have opened,) when he ſhall be all in all: And it is not his pleaſure only, but his good pleaſure; which nothing ſhall be able to reſiſt: And he gives you it now, and eſtates you into it, as if you had it: And therefore fear not that you ſhall be ever diſpoſſeſſed of it: That God that keeps it, will keep you for it; as the Apoſtle Peter ſaith: And as for the interim time between now, and that Day, we may expect that Jeſus Chriſt, during his raign, and whilſt his Kingdom is in force. as till then it is, hee'l ſee to it, to keep thee, and raiſe thee up at the Latter Day: So as that at the Judgment ended, thou maiſt aſſuredly expect that bleſſed voice, and invitation from him, amongſt the reſt of Saints; Math. 25. 34. Come ye bleſſed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the World.

Chap. 7.

CHAP. VII.

The ſecurity that Jeſus Chriſt gives us, as well as God the Father, to aſſure our Faith, that we ſhall be ſtrengthened, and Inabled to perſevere. God is a God of all Grace to us by Jeſus Chriſt; all his Acts of Grace towards us, are in and through him. He Elected us at firſt, and then loved us only, as conſidered in him. He loved and choſe him for himſelf, and us for his ſake. God having thus laid Chriſt as the Medium, or rather, as the Foundation of his Grace, it is a ſure Ground of its continuance to us. All his Purpoſes of Grace were made in him. All his Promiſes of Grace are Eſtabliſhed, and performed in and through him.

I PETER V. 10.

[BY JESUS CHRIST.]

THere are two Perſons engaged for Preſervation of us unto Glory; God the Father, and Jeſus Chriſt; which was the General Diviſion I gave at the Entrance. I have diſpatched thoſe Securities, which the Intereſt that God the Father hath in us, doth afford our Faith. I come now to Jeſus Chriſt, and the Intereſt that he hath herein, which added to the former, will afford us compleat Conſolation.

And truly, let me ſay this of him, as the Preface to what follows, That if he be good for any thing (as he is for all things) he is certainly good at this, to make our Salvation ſure, and ſtedfaſt, againſt all oppoſition; it being founded on him, and committed to him. He is a ſure Chriſt——A Rock of Ages to build upon. Iſaiah 28. 16. Behold, I lay in Sion (ſaith the Lord God,) for a Foundation, a Stone, a pretious corner-ſtone, a ſure Foundation: he that believeth on him, ſhall not make haſt; That is, not to be confounded, As Pet. 1. 2. 6. Expounds it to be,

By Chriſt Jeſus.

The aſpect, and extent of theſe words, to the reſt in the Text, is the only thing as for Explanation afore me, which I ſhall diſpatch briefly.

Some Interpreters would ſhut up the extent of it, unto the influence Chriſt hath into Eternal Glory: Becauſe that was the thing had been immediately afore ſpoken of. Others do permit them to ſtretch themſelves farther, unto the words foregoing; [Who hath Called us by Jeſus Chriſt]. And ſo to take in the influence Chriſt hath in Calling us.

BOOK IV. But let the wings of this Son of Righteouſneſs, ſpread themſelves ſo far through the Horizon of this Text, as poſſibly from warrant from other Scriptures, they may be found efficacious to extend; even from the firſt words, The God of all Grace. As alſo unto the latter words, the utmoſt ends of the Text.

1. But, (ſay I) The God of all Grace, and by Jeſus Chriſt together, and underſtand it as Interpreted, that clauſe at the firſt, of Gods Purpoſes, and diſpenſations of Grace, to us-ward: And ſo it will be no derogation to God the Father, to ſay, and ſay aloud, that he is a God of Grace, yea, of all Grace, towards us, in and by Chriſt Jeſus: God his Father, the God of Grace, and Jeſus Chriſt, do run one joynt ſtock, and intereſt, in all, and every Act of Grace.

2. Put together, who hath Called us by Jeſus Chriſt, underſtanding Calling, to be that which Chriſt hath an hand and influence in, as well as his Father. Thus Rom. 1. 6. The called of Jeſus Chriſt.

3. Then further ſay, that the God of Grace, by Calling us, doth eſtate us into the full right to Glory; but withal add, that he doth it by Jeſus Chriſt. The gift of God is Eternal life, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, Rom. 6*th* and laſt.

Then 4. Carry them unto the words that follow after, the ſame God will ſtabliſh, ſtrengthen, ſettle you. And therein take along with you [by Jeſus Chriſt] too, and Chriſt to be as the Authour, and Founder of our Faith in Calling, ſo the finiſher of our Faith, unto the end thereof, even the Salvation of our ſouls; or if you deſire rather to have it confirmed to you, in the very word of the Text, Stabliſh you, take it from 2 Cor. 1. 21. Now he which ſtabliſheth us with you in Chriſt, and hath anointed us, is God. So then God in and by Chriſt, (as here) ſtrengthens, ſtabliſheth.

And therefore it is that, by Chriſt Jeſus is placed in the midſt (as the Sun) to extend its influence unto all; and read but the words thus, The God of all grace, who hath called us unto his eternal glory; (And ſo make a Colon, or ſtop, or part the ſentence there; and [By Jeſus Chriſt,] will without any rub to the Readers thoughts, take in and ſpread it ſelf over, all theſe. The God of grace: The God of all grace, &c.

You know the way, and courſe, I have ran in handling each of the former Words, have been,

1. To Handle the Doctrinal part, that each word in their Coherence affordeth.

2. To ſhew how each of thoſe Doctrinals, do make good this main Inference; viz. a Security to us, that we ſhall be carried on to the end, &c. I muſt in like manner, follow the ſame Method in Handling theſe words, which convene about Chriſt's intereſt; and ſhall make that main Inference, That God will ſtabliſh us; and I ſhall intermix it with the handling of thoſe firſt Three Heads, mentioned at the end, and Application of each, and every of thoſe Doctrinals that follow: For it is as the burthen of every thing in this Diſcourſe.

Now as touching my making out this high engagement of Jeſus Chriſt's in this matter: There are Four Doctrinal Propoſitions, that come round about, and cleave to this Clauſe, as broken pieces of Steel, would do to a Loadſtone.

1. That God is a God of grace, yea, of all Grace, by Jeſus Chriſt.

2. I ſhall conſider Chriſts Perſon, Office, and Relation to us, in this diſtinction which is here ſet out, 1. As Chriſt, 2. As Jeſus: By Chriſt Jeſus, ſaith the Text. And the diſtinct influence that each of theſe have into our Salvation, will contribute ſomething apart unto this ſecurity, or ſtedfaſtneſs of our Faith herein.

3. The engagement, and intereſt of Chriſt, to carry us through, as it ariſeth from this, that he hath Called us. And that God hath Called us, by Jeſus Chriſt.

4. The

4. The Intereſt that Chriſt hath in that Glory, into which the Father hath Called us by him, who hath called us into Eternal glory by Jeſus Chriſt. In which Glory of ours, and our being brought into it, Chriſt having an hand, as well as the Father; from thence doth a great intereſt, and concernment of his lie, to ſee to the preſervation, and ſtrengthening, and perfecting of us, to the end, as well as the Father. Chap. 7.

There are a multitude of other Conſiderations might be drawn from Chriſt, to Infer this main Concluſion: But theſe are natural, and proper to the Text: And I confine my ſelf to them, and them alone.

I. That God is a God of grace, yea, of all grace, to us, By Jeſus Chriſt.

God forbid, I ſhould ſay, or you underſtand, as if God were not a God of all grace, as in himſelf, in his nature, or eſſentially; or that he were ſo only by Jeſus Chriſt. The Man Jeſus, adds nothing unto him at all. My Righteouſneſs extendeth not unto thee, ſays Chriſt unto his Father, Pſal. 16. 2. But this it is I affirm, that it is by Jeſus Chriſt he is ſuch a God to us. When I Handled that part, The God of all Grace; I gave this diſtinction, how he was, the God of all grace.

1. Eſſentially in his Nature.
2. In reſpect of his Purpoſes of Grace.
And 3. In his Diſpenſations unto us.

Now this is that I here affirm, That all his Purpoſes of Grace, and all his Diſpenſations of Grace, they are all in, and by Jeſus Chriſt. He would not have been a God of Grace, much leſs of all Grace to us, but for, and through Jeſus Chriſt. And for a General proof of this, look, as he is here ſaid, to be the God of all Grace, by Jeſus Chriſt; So elſewhere, that all the bleſſings, (which Rom. 5. 15, 16. 17. are ſtiled, the gifts by grace) or, which Grace beſtows, theſe are all ſaid to be in, and by Jeſus Chriſt. Nay, there is no Act of Gods either Immanent, in his own heart, or breaſt, or purpoſes towards Us; or Tranſient, and Emanant, of himſelf, conferred upon us, but he hath founded it, and ſeated it in Jeſus Chriſt. Eph. 1. 3. Bleſſed be the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who hath bleſſed us with all ſpiritual bleſſings in heavenly places, in Chriſt. So in General, he enumerates the particulars, even from that of chooſing us in him; which was an immanent Act in him, Verſ. 4. Unto our obtaining an Inheritance in him, Verſ. 11. And whilſt he ſays, [All] bleſſings in General, and then gives a bill of the chiefeſt, and greateſt particulars of thoſe bleſſings; and that they are all the bleſſings of Grace, as Verſ. the 6th. To the praiſe of the glory of his grace, and ſo on in the reſt of the Verſes. Look how far the Grace of God extends, ſo far doth the influence by Chriſt extend; Chriſt is left out in none. We owe all to God, and we owe all to Chriſt. As God is in his Grace, all in all, ſo Chriſt is all in all, 3 Coloſſ. 11.

I uſe to ſay, Free-grace, Chriſt, and Faith in us, are adequate, that is, 1. There is no bleſſing that Free-grace hath to beſtow, but it hath given, and bequeathed it to the Elect Sons of men. 2. There was nothing Free-grace had deſigned, and given, but Chriſt comes as the Medium, the Inſtrument of it: And is Gods perfect Servant to accompliſh it. 3. There is nothing wherein Gods Free-grace towards us, hath manifeſted it ſelf; or wherein Chriſt hath any way appeared, but that Principle of Faith in us, is fitted to apprehend it, and to take it in, in ſuch a manner, as to give both Free-grace, and Chriſt the right and proper glory; according unto the way of Gods grace, and intention therein, which no Grace in us elſe was fitted to do. Like as no ſenſe but the eye, is fitted to take in all the viſible World at once.

BOOK IV.

I divided this first Head, into Two Propositions.

1. That the very Grace, and love he shews us, was placed upon our Persons, as we were considered in Christ: God did never love us out of him, yea, and all his love is through him. I grant, that Christ considered as Mediator, or God-man, was not the Motive that swayed God, why he chose these, and these Persons, and not others. In that respect it is, that Christ says, thine they were. Yet I say, that God no sooner thought of choosing, and loving any so, but that the love in solido, he resolved to convey upon them, was in Christ. He had Christ not only as Mediator, in his eye, in whom he chose us then; or, that Christ as Mediator, was considered at, and with the Election, and as in whom we were chosen, so as we were not considered out of him, when chosen; which is expres, 1 Ephes. Vers. 4, 5, and 6. According as he hath chosen us in him, before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy, and without blame before him in love: having Predestinated us unto the adoption of children, by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his Will: to the praise of the glory of his grace, wherein he hath made us accepted in the beloved. We were not only Elected, cum Christo, together with Christ, but in Christo, in Christ, when Elected. And not only the benefits which we by Election were Predestinated unto, but Election it self, as a distinct benefit, is made one of the first of blessings, which in Christ, Vers. 3. we are blessed withal. He hath blessed us with all blessings in Christ, according as he hath chosen us, Vers. 4. But I would say farther, that the love, or grace, which in Electing, was the fountain of all those benefits, was in, and with the love, he loved Christ withal: He being the Beloved, in whom God graciously accepts or loves us, Vers. 6. Which I farther make out thus.

Christ being his natural Son, he loves him indeed immediately for himself, and chose him simply for himself: who is therefore stiled by God the Father in a way of Singularity, both mine Elect, and also in whom my Soul delighteth, (Isaiah 42. 1.) That is, Delighteth in him for himself; for though the Man Jesus, by Personal Union became his natural Son, and so beloved for himself, yet that this man should have this Dignity, was from Gods having Elected him, and thereunto that Speech in Isaiah, is Interpreted by God himself from Heaven. Matt. 3. 17. This is my Beloved Son in whom I am well pleased. Which two, both of his Elected, and Beloved, Christ hath a respect unto, in citing that place of Isaiah, Mat. 12. 18. Behold my Servant whom I have chosen, my Beloved, in whom I am well pleased. And then God himself again, Mat. 17. 5. in repeating his former words, adds, hear him, which was, as if he had said, with him my Soul is pleased, as my Son in himself; but in you, only through him, and that he was only Elected for himself, for God to delight in, and who became the immediate receptacle of all the Love of God; and we but Elected in him, because beloved in him; and so he was both Caput electionis, the head of Election, and Caput dilectionis, the head of being beloved. And it is certain, that he that is the one, is, and must be the other; he that is head, or first receptacle of all Gods love for himself, must needs be the head of Electing, or of the Estating the whole of Gods love upon others.

And truly, if we farther consider the infinite distance, that is between God and meer single Creatures, that are but nothing, they were not meet, and fit matches (in themselves) or Objects, for his so immediate Love, as with, and by Election, is bestowed on them, and is as the Original of all the benefits and purposes of God therein. Nor perhaps could the Creature have born the weight of such an one, singly themselves alone, (no not the Angels) immediately, as they cannot bear his wrath; and therefore it was transmitted through his first Beloved, who was able. Hence therefore, God met those that were to be meer Creatures, half the way; and descended, and came down into the Man Jesus, who by Personal Union, was made more than a Creature; and then God could pour out his love in the fulness of it, on us. But the chief of the reason, lies in this, that God, of whom were all things else, and in his Counsels ſels were ordered in a due Number, and weight, and meaſure by him; He did obſerve in this of Electing, a dueneſs or comely proportion: And it became him thus to love meer Creatures, in an other, whom he ſhould have cauſe to love for himſelf, and who, when choſen, was worthy of it; yea, and choſen for his own delight firſt, and by him to eſtate them into that his tranſcendent Love, and to give them a right unto it as to glory. This was a moſt wiſe and orderly ordination, I might ſhew out of John 17. 23. I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one, and that the World may know that thou haſt ſent me, and haſt loved them as thou haſt loved me. Whereas other Creatures he Loves, but becauſe they are his Creatures, and that he made them, and Artifex amat opus; this to ſhew the peculiarity and tranſcendency of it, it is a love born us in Chriſt, and a loving us as he loved him, yet for his ſake. And this for the firſt, that he is a God of Grace to us in Chriſt. Chap. 7.

Now ſecondly, As to the main Concluſion, that therefore we ſhall be invincibly carried on to Glory, you find the fixedneſs of God's love put upon this very thing, Rom. 8. ult. Who ſhall ſeparate us from the love of God? He ſtops not here, but adds, which is in Jeſus Chriſt. And it is there added as the ground of its unchangeableneſs, over and above God's love in predeſtinating of us; of the which he had before abundantly diſcourſed in that Chapter, verſ. 29, 30. & 33. For, whom he did foreknow, he alſo did predeſtinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the firſt-born among many Brethren. Moreover, whom he did predeſtinate, them he alſo called: and whom he called, them he alſo juſtified: and whom he juſtified, them he alſo glorified. The love he bears to Chriſt is ſuch, and ſo unto us as beloved in him, it is ſo ſtrong and prevalent: And it is as if he had ſaid, Although God's love would have been of it ſelf unchangeable, and moſt conſtant unto thoſe it ſhould fix upon, yet God thought meet to take in Chriſt his Son, and to put him as a Medium, or midſt, or if you will uſe Iſaiah's word, (for we cannot have a fitter) laid him as a foundation firſt, and a ſure foundation between his Grace and Us: As for other ends, ſo on purpoſe for this, that his Grace in all the emanation of it, might have a juſt and conſiſtent ground and foundation for the continuance thereof to us, that as there might be a ſureneſs of his good pleaſure in his own heart, ſo of dueneſs and equitableneſs in it, upon which that unchangeableneſs ſhould be grounded in our being loved, not in our ſelves, (which was creation love by works) but in his Beloved, wholly out of us, as even that love of his had no reſpect at all to what was in us, but it was purely in his own heart, and now founded on our relation to his Son.

II. As he is a God of Grace to us in Chriſt, ſo he is a God of all Grace to us in Chriſt.

For, 1. Take all the purpoſes of God's heart towards us, which were the firſt bubblings up of Grace, and of love in his Will, as from the Spring, and which were the Matrix, the Womb, the Mother, in which Calling and Perſeverance, and all lay. Now although in the firſt of the Epheſians he is ſaid to have purpoſed all in himſelf, Verſ. 9. & 11. ex mero motu, yet Chapt. 3. 11. withal telleth us, that his eternal purpoſes (towards his Church and Calling the Gentiles, whereof he had ſpoken, verſ. 8, 9, 10.) were purpoſed in Jeſus Chriſt; nay, the Original hath it, ἣν ἐποίησεν, which he made, contrived, or framed in Jeſus Chriſt; even as well as we are ſaid to be his workmanſhip in Chriſt. They had a foundation, as in God's heart, ſo in his Chriſt's, and they are the whole of his everlaſting purpoſes he ſpeaks of, πρόθεσιν τῶν αἰώνων, the purpoſes of Eternity, the purpoſe or purpoſes of Ages, as from everlaſting and to everlaſting they have their firmitude, their ſubſiſtence from him.

And

BOOK IV.

And that God made all his purpoſes in Chriſt, hence it is that firmneſs and ſureneſs accrued to them. Chriſt ſtrengthened God's heart in them, and his hand (he being God's Arm, Iſai. 53. 1.) to perform them; and ſurely, if he ſerved to fix God's heart in them, then the faith and conſideration of his engagement in them, may well ſerve to ſecure, fix, and ſtabliſh ours. And particularly, Perſeverance was one great deſign of God amongſt the reſt, as hath been ſhewn.

2. Take all the Promiſes which are the adequate, indefinite expreſſions of God's purpoſes, and the Chanels or Ciſterns all his purpoſes run out into, and as God is (as he is ſtiled here) a God of all Grace, ſo the Promiſes, what are they but the Contents of all and every of that Grace, wher of thoſe of keeping us and preſerving us are an eminent part? and theſe alſo have a firmitude, a ſureneſs given them in and by Chriſt. And although God's bare promiſe, and
Heb. 6. 18. his Oath added thereto, are ſaid to be two immutable things, which do ſhew the immutability of his Counſel, to the Heirs of thy Promiſe, that they might have ſtrong conſolation, and have an Anchor of Hope ſure and ſtedfaſt, (that is, of ſtedfaſtneſs againſt all Temptations, Storms, and Tempeſts that threaten caſting us away; as the Alluſion of caſting Anchor doth withal import;) I ſay, although his Promiſe and Oath were alone ſufficient, and indeed either of them, as the Apoſtle there implies; yet his Chriſt comes in alſo as a third, to add a farther immutability to them, yea to each of them.

1. To make all the Promiſes ſure: 2 Cor. 1. 20. All the Promiſes of God in him, are Yea, and in him, Amen He is God's Yea, and he is God's Amen. When God made all or any of his Promiſes, Chriſt ſtood by, and ſaid Amen to them firſt, or they had never been promulged to us: And that to affirm this is no derogation unto God, that which follows, as if to prevent any ſuch an imagination, is added, Unto the God of Glory. For it is God's glory, that he ſhould have a Son, ſo great a Son, as in the very words afore, Verſ. 19. he had on purpoſe ſtiled him, The Son of God, Jeſus Chriſt, who is always the ſame, and whoſe years fail not, Hebr. 1. 12. In him was and is God's Yea founded; you may build on him. For an Inſtance of all other Promiſes, the Yea and Amen particularly gives this for all the reſt, even in the very word this my Text uſeth, Verſ. 21. Now he which ſtabliſheth us in Chriſt is God. God ſtabliſheth, but in his Chriſt. And the God that hath called you by Chriſt, ſhall ſtabliſh you by Chriſt, ſaith the Text here.

Then ſecondly, Chriſt comes in to make his Oath ſure (which was the ſecond) but that will paſs into a third Particular, wherein God is a God of all Grace.

3. In his performances, to aſſure us of which his Oath was added to his Promiſe, and Chriſt comes in to both, as undertaking the performance of all, though his Oath made all ſure, yet even the performance of that Oath depended upon our Chriſt to make good. Now look into Zacharias's Song, Luke 1. which was made upon occaſion of Chriſt's being born a Saviour, Bleſſed be God (ſays he) who hath raiſed up an horn of Salvation for us; that is, Chriſt a ſtrong Saviour; and to what end it is that Chriſt comes in, Verſe 73. tells us, To perform the Oath which he ſware to our Father Abraham, that he would grant unto us. And it is Chriſt, you ſee, that muſt perform all, and the ſending of him was the great matter of God's Oath. And laſt of all, the very Point we alledge all for, and in the Concluſion of all, is made the thing which God ſware, and Chriſt came to perform, Verſ. 74, 75. That he would grant unto us, that we being delivered out of the hands of our enemies, might ſerve him with fear, in holineſs and righteouſneſs before him, all the days of our life. I might here inſert a critical Obſervation upon that very Oath that God ſwore to Abraham, which we heard even now, the Apoſtle alſo ſpeaking of it, Heb. 6. 17. ἐμεσίτευσεν ὅρκῳ, he mediated by an Oath, ſaith Paul there; ſo ſhewing that God in his very taking the Oath had an eye to the Me-

Mediator, as in the intuition and contemplation of whom, God took it and ſwore it, he it was that was to make it good; and to this ſenſe the Greek Scholiaſt hath alſo interpreted it, and it is to be greatly heeded, thoſe words Gen. 22. 16. By my ſelf have I ſworn, ſhould have been rendred by the Chaldee Paraphraſt, By my word, do I ſwear; that is, by my Chriſt, who is the Word, as John after declared him. The Oath of a King runs in the word of a King; Gods Oath runs higher, not barely in a verbal word, but in his word, that is, Chriſt his ſubſtantial word, who is alſo God himſelf, for my name is in him, ſays God to Moſes, and by my Name have I ſworn: So the Syriack Tranſlation. The effect of all which comes to this, that in the virtue and ſtrength of this my Son, and my Chriſt, as a Mediator, and in whom is my Name, it is that I do make this Oath, and he ſhall ſee to perform it. Chap. 7.

Thus much for the firſt General head, That he is a God of Grace, and of all Grace to us by Chriſt Jeſus: And the Inferences from thence to ſtrengthen our Faith in the main Concluſion.

CHAP.

CHAP. VIII.

What Security the consideration of Christ's Person, his Relation to us, and Office for us, affords to our Faith, that we shall be strengthned to persevere unto the End. As he is Christ our Head, we are Elected in him to all those benefits of Grace which were above the Dues of Creation. As those Benefits had no dependence on the Fall, Christ considered as our Head, was a sufficient Ground for God's bestowing them upon us in Election; viewed as we stood in that Relation to him, as he is our Head, God Loves us in him, and with the same Love he does him, and therefore he will love us unchangeably, and never cease so to do. As Christ is Jesus a Saviour, our first Calling into Grace, and our continuance and perseverance in it, is the purchase of his Blood. Supplies of Grace and Strength for him to give us Ability to strengthen us against Temptations and Deliverance out of them, is the price of his Sufferings.

SECTION.

The second Head proposed was the Consideration of Christ's Person, Relation to us, and Office for us, [by Jesus Christ:] And see what they will afford for Consolation and Security herein.

1. CONsider his Person and Relation to us, as he is Christ. In his Person, you know he is the Son of God in our Nature, God's Christ: And as considered such, constituted and made an Head and Husband unto us, who are his Fellows, chosen to be one with him, as God's Christ, or anointed over us, and to us, as an Head, Psal. 40.

2. Consider him as Jesus, and as he undertook to be a Saviour and a Redeemer to us, and who hath by his Merits purchased all for us.

I know that both these two Titles of his are often mentioned, but with an intent only to design forth who it is that is spoken of, when mentioned, namely, that individual Person Jesus Christ. But his mention here being with a [By] Jesus Christ, as a Note of Influence & Accusation unto the things here spoken of. Give me leave therefore to enquire what each of these, and particularly what the consideration of Christ, so far as it may be from Scripture warrant, conceived distinct from Jesus, will afford to secure us the Elect of God, of our perseverance, or being carried through Temptation both.

1. By

1. By his Influence thereinto, and engagement thereupon, as he is Chriſt.
And 2ly, As he is Jeſus: By Chriſt, and by Jeſus each. Chap. 8.

I undertook that every word in the Text would contribute ſomething to our main Point; and truly theſe two will contribute a great deal; and indeed, more then I am able to graſp, or mean to fetch in. I ſhall but give you a ſmall taſte of theſe, and that will perhaps afford ſome light, comfort, and ſtrength unto our Faith in this grand Point.

You will firſt ask me, What my meaning ſhould be to put this difference between his being, 1. Chriſt to us, and 2. Jeſus a Saviour, as you know it ſignifies; He ſhall ſave his people from their ſins. I ſhall open my heart in this particular, as God ſhall vouchſafe to enable me.

1. I find this diſtinct Conſideration of him, as Head or Husband, and then of Saviour, made by the Apoſtle, Epheſ. 5. 23. Even as Chriſt is the Head of the Church, and he is the Saviour of the Body. And by Head, is meant his Relation of Husband unto his Church, as to his Body, as the words afore ſhew, For the Husband is the Head of the Wife; and it is exemplified and proſecuted by the Inſtance of Adam and his Wife, conſidered afore the Fall in their Marriage, as then typifying out Chriſt and his Church, verſ. 31, 32.

And he is firſt ſaid to be the Head, and then the Saviour: And Saviour as an additional unto that Relation of Head, as thoſe words carry it, And he is the Saviour, &c. As if he ſhould have ſaid, Farther, or moreover, he is the Saviour of his Body, beſides that of his being an Head. Adam, his Type, was not the Saviour of his Wife, though her Head. And according unto this double Relation there, I do take the boldneſs here, and warrant to make this Diſtinction and Apartment, 1. By Chriſt, as he is Head to this Body, which is, in a reciprocal Relation to him, again called his Body, and both together Chriſt. 2. By Jeſus, as Saviour, which Title is proper to him alone. In 1 Cor. 12. 12. both he, and his Body, if you obſerve, are called one Chriſt: For as the Body is one, and hath many Members, and all the Members of that one Body, being many, are one Body; ſo alſo is Chriſt: But to be ſtiled Saviour, is proper to him alone; and therefore his relation to us, as Chriſt, is diſtinct from that of Saviour.

There is a Controverſie among thoſe that are Orthodox in point of Election, Under and in what view in Eternity the Elect came up before God, whether in their ſaln or unſaln Eſtate, when they were the Subject of his Election. Thoſe that are called Superlapſarians, they ſay, Man came up into God's mind firſt without the conſideration of the Fall; and that the Creation, and then the Permiſſion of the Fall, were but as means to bring about the deſigns of Election, which were ordained before the Fall. Others, whom you call Sublapſarians, Account the Creation and the Fall but a matter of common Providence, not intended as means to accompliſh Election, but only as Antecedents; and that God began his Election, having firſt foreſeen man would fall. Theſe are two extream Opinions: But there is a third, and that is, That both man unſaln and ſaln, and all things that did, or could fall out concerning man, being in one entire view before God at once, (whoſe infinite Underſtanding graſps and comprehends all in one proſpect, as he doth all time into an inſtant) being all preſent to God, (though of the things themſelves one ſucceed the other in execution) that God had reſpect to both Eſtates in his Election, and that ſome ſort of his Decrees of Election reſpected man as unſaln, and ſome as ſaln. Now it is certain, ſome muſt reſpect man as ſaln: For to appoint man to Faith in Chriſt his Redeemer, to appoint man to Repentance, ſuch Decrees muſt be upon the conſideration of man as ſaln.

Give me leave to be of the latters Opinion, and I explain my ſelf thus in it, That there is an Election to the End, which is to the utmoſt glory which I have ſpoken of: And there is an Election to the Means, as Chriſt's Redemption on his part, Faith and Repentance on ours, which are in the way to that Glory. This Notion I have elſewhere enlarged upon, but as to my preſent purpoſe, as God's Election had theſe two reſpects, ſo ſuitably Chriſt bears a twofold Relation to us through God's Ordination; The one of being Christ and an Head to us, which suits his Decrees of Election, as to the End; and which considered man as unfaln: The other, of Jesus, a Saviour, which wholly respects man faln into sin, and to be restored out of it.

I shall take my first rise from this distinction given you, from what is in the Text, That God is a God of all Grace to us men, in and by Christ, taking the word Grace in the utmost Latitude of it; and so that all kind of Grace is in and by Christ, as hath been handled. This is a sure Maxim, That there is no sort nor kind of Grace that is in the heart of God to any of his Creatures, that he did not bear to the elect Sons of Men. The Reason is, because he is a God of all Grace to us: Now consider this, that Grace doth not (take it in the Latitude of it) only respect Creatures as faln, but had respect to Creatures, as unfaln; for Grace was extended to the Elect Angels.

And an Evidence of it is, That if Grace in God towards us after the Fall, were only said to be Grace in respect of what man is, or can do after the Fall, then Grace in God were only such a Grace, as must have the advantage of mans sin, and became Grace only in a respect to man's unworthiness, by reason of sin first laid, as the foundation for it, and that this Consideration must come in to make it grace, that what he gave, was therefore grace, because man had deserved the contrary: But that were to lower grace, as it is in God, and to make it to need, and to be beholding to mans sin to make it esteemed grace. That which is, and we call grace in a King, a Mortal, scorns to be so lowerd. He is not said to be gracious only to Traitors, and those that have incur'd the Penalties of the Law: No; but he hath Favours to bestow on his best Subjects over and above their Deserts; and he is said to be gracious in that respect also. So then, grace in God is not only to be esteemed as grace in respect towards his Elect, considered as faln, but it is Super-creation grace that is above what is due to the Creature by the Law of Creation. Super-creation grace also, as of a God so great as he, hath power in his hands to bestow gifts of Grace on man considered as not faln; and this appears evidently in the example of the Angels: They were kept by Election, and therefore are stiled The Elect Angels in Timothy; And that they never sinned, what kept them? A Grace above their Creation-grace; for Election is an order of Decrees above Creation. Election prevented their sinning, and that was an Infinite grace bestowed above the due of their Works, or of their Creation: And it was a Grace that flowed from, and accompanied Election; and all Election hath a Grace above the Law of Creation for the foundation of it; Rom. 11. 5, 7. 'tis stiled the Election of Grace; and again there it is opposed to Works, according to which Creation only proceeds, for 'tis a Covenant of Works. Whatsoever is of Grace, goes by Election; and whatsoever goes by Election, is by Grace, and therefore is not to be narrowed unto grace shewn after the Creature hath sinned, but may as well be bestowed and terminated on the Creature afore. And although this Grace broke no way forth upon man afore the Fall, but was a reserve left to be discovered afterwards: For Grace had a second design, an ampliation of it self unto man as sinful, and so God forbore to discover that first design, until the other was accomplisht: Now if God be a God of Grace to man Elect, then we must not think that Man, God's darling, did partake only of that Grace which was discovered upon his having sinned, but had a share and allotment in Super-creation Grace also; and that Man, considered as unfaln, as well as the Angels, and being God's Darling, God's Benjamin, in point of Grace, had a double Mess of Grace designed him, had the lower Springs and upper Springs too, Superlapsarian and Sublapsarian Grace; for all God's Springs are on and towards him; all that the Angels had designed them, was intended to Man afore sinning, except only that of being kept from falling; and all that Grace, that after sinning was requisite to restore him, to the end that God might be a God of all Grace every way unto man, as hath been explained, and that he might come behind hand in no sort of Grace (as the Apostle says of us) that was in his heart.

Now,

Now you will ask me what benefits of Grace are there (for we measure grace by what good God had to design to man considered as unfaln, and whereby to magnifie that sort of grace, to him as well as to Angels) that were not due by Creation or works, nor never should have gone that way? Chap. 7.

I Answer in general all Benefits that answer the design of Election:

1. Immutable Holiness, which is above Creation-dues, was, as you know, bestowed on the Angels by Election.

2. Adoption of Sons, which was above Creation-dues; for it consists in a relation unto Christ. Adam was but a Son by Creation, as having Gods Image; but Adoption is an higher thing and depends upon a Relation to the Natural Son.

3. That Glory (as I shewed) or immediate Communion with God himself.

4. A Gracious acception and loving them simply, their Persons, without a respect to Works, this also was above the due of Creation: For if thou do well shalt not thou be accepted, was the language of Creation due, and of the Covenant of Works; but to have my person it self loved, and irrespectively to works simply and absolutely, this was Supercreation Grace.

Now of all those kinds of Benefits, Man considered as unfaln, was capable of; yea, and grace will be more illustrated and magnified to have had them designed to Man considered as not faln, more than that simply after the Fall, as you may discern and might be shewed.

And that the bestowing of those depended not at all upon the consideration of the Fall, is evident, the thing it self speaks it; and as Bishop Davenant, and others, have acknowledged, Sin was impertinent to the bestowing of those, they no way depended upon it. God could love with an absolute love, and graciously accept our persons out of that love, without the supposition of sin.

Lo, all these four benefits we find to have been designed unto Man by Election of grace, and that as distinct from and antecedaneous to those that necessarily suppose the fall. Ephes. 1. 4, 5, 6. Verses. According as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the World, that we should be holy, and without blame before him in love: Having predestinated us unto the Adoption of Children by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the pleasure of his will: To the praise of the glory of his grace, wherein he hath made us accepted in the Beloved.

1. Here is immutable, unchangable Holiness: He hath chosen us that we should be holy and blameless before him in Love. What doth he mean, the holiness we have in this World, imperfect? No, it is that Holiness that is faultless; and a holiness that is faultless before God. And afterwards (it is) he, speaks of that imperfect holiness in Vers. 8. which in Calling is given us again,

2. He tells us of Adoption: He hath predestinated us to the Adoption of Children. A Son-ship beyond Creation, and such as did not depend upon our having sinned, God could make and therefore decree us thus Sons without our sinning; he could design for us an Adoption in our relation to Christ, which gives us right to utmost glory.

A third benefit that he hath predestinated us to himself, yea, and to Christ, for the words bear both respects; the meaning is, to immediate Communion with himself and Christ. He hath predestinated us to enjoying himself, even God, his being all in all; This depends not on the Fall. God could have taken Creatures immediately unto himself, and communicated himself, as he will do, after the Day of Judgment to them.

Again 4ly, Wherein he hath made us accepted in the beloved: This is still a Supercreation grace, not supposing Man faln, and another thing than to be accepted by Creation Holiness, which was to be accepted by Works.

And secondly, all these are distinct from those Benefits which come upon the consideration of the Fall: In, Vers. 7. he begins as in a new Edition, In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins; according to the Riches of his Grace, Then he comes to calling, Vers. 8, 9. Wherein he hath hath abounded towards us in all wiſdom and prudence: Having made known unto us the miſtery of his Will, according to his good pleaſure which he hath purpoſed in himſelf. Which are beſtowed on us alſo, as by the Decree and the Means, afore the Fall, in bringing us to glory; and for the beſtowing of theſe, the good pleaſure of this Will, which he had purpoſed in himſelf, again comes in, as a farther decree to beſtow them; and then To the praiſe of the glory of his grace, is brought in in the cloſe of his Enumeration of the firſt ſort of Benefits that depend not on the fall; for grace is ſeen in them, as well as in thoſe other of Redemption, unto which alſo apart, the Riches of his Grace are aſcribed, as the fountain of them.

Our Election, &c. unto both ſorts are in Chriſt, ſo expreſly of the firſt Superlapſarian Benefits, Verſ. 4. We are choſen in Chriſt, &c. And indeed, if of Grace, then in Chriſt. Chriſt is as large and extenſive in his Inſtrumentality, as Grace is in ordaining. Now then here I clap in this, that Chriſt, as Head, is conſidered as the Foundation of thoſe firſt ſort of Benefits beſtowed upon Man conſidered as unfaln; and Chriſt, as Jeſus, or Redeemer, is the Author of the Benefits of Redemption.

I ſhall only End in this, That as all thoſe firſt Benefits do not depend upon Mans having ſinned firſt, ſo that this Foundation of Chriſt, conſidered as an Head to us, might be, and was a ſufficient ground to beſtow them upon us in Election, upon our relation to him, as given of God, as he is Chriſt, and as he is an Head and Huſband to us.

For firſt, to make us holy and immutable before God in Love, our relation to Chriſt, as an Head, was a ſufficient, though not the whole ground for it, as I have elſewhere ſhewn. If Chriſt takes the pure Creature to relation to himſelf, he being the holy of holies, anointed of God, we ſhall be made unchangeably holy in and through Chriſt; for by that Relation we are called his, 1 Cor. 15. 23. It was Chriſt fixt the Angels and made them unchangeable.

Secondly, Our being Adopted Sons to God, will in a dueneſs follow upon our being given to Chriſt as Head; for as he is the Natural Son of God, therefore by virtue of our relation to him ſimply, as ſuch we may well become Adopted Children by marriage with him, as a Spouſe becomes the Daughter of the Father to whoſe Son ſhe is married; there needed not the fall nor his redemption.

Likewiſe, thirdly, to ſee God face to face, which by the right of Adoption we have, it is but being made Members of Chriſt, of him as of an Head, to be brought to that utmoſt glory, to have it deſigned for us, it did not depend upon Chriſts being a Redeemer only, becauſe it was natural to Jeſus Chriſt to ſee God face to face, and we having Relation to him, come to the ſac / ntereſt.

Lhat in the 4th Place, That we are graciouſly accepted in the beloved: This depended not upon the ſuppoſal of the Fall, nor upon Chriſt conſidered as Jeſus only, but the very Relation of our perſons to him as an Husband; Thine they were, and thou gaveſt them me, will do all this.

Theſe things to clear my meaning being premiſed, I come to that which is proper to the Point in hand, which is,

What doth this our Relation to Chriſt, as Chriſt and an Head, and God's Love to us in Chriſt as ſuch, contribute unto our ſecurity, that we ſhall invincibly be carried on to glory, maugre all Oppoſitions?

For Anſwer; I lay this for an unqueſtionable Maxim, That that in Chriſt which fixeth Gods Heart moſt firmly unto us, That that muſt needs ſee the ſtrongeſt and firmeſt motive to God to carry us on unto Salvation: For in the Text he profeſſeth himſelf engaged to do it, as he is a God of all Grace or of Love to us, through Chriſt. That thing therefore, which in Chriſt fixeth him moſt firmly, muſt needs be ſuppoſed to move him moſt to perform this. Now conſider when in that 1 Epheſ. 6. he is ſaid to have graciouſly accepted us in this his Beloved; whether of the two, his being a Redeemer unto us, Jeſus, or his being his beloved Son and Chriſt, which of theſe two muſt be the Principal Motive to Love and accept us, and which of them is intended in that place? It being put upon Christ his being his Beloved, and our Relation to him, as such, I would put the question, for which of the two it is that God Loves Christ most, whether as he is his Christ, and our Head? Or whether, as he is our Jesus, undertaking to redeem us? 'Tis true, he Loves him because he died for us at his command; Therefore the Father loves me, because I laid down my Life: But let me tell you, he loves him more, because he is Christ, that he is his Son dwelling in our nature, that it is that makes him the eminently beloved of God. Now if God's Love to us be in through Christ, and our Relation to him, then that in Christ, for which God loves him most, will prove a Foundation upon which he Loves us most. Chap. 8.

We find that this was it which Christ twice useth in the 17*th* of John, to move his Father to Love, and save his Elect, first, in Vers. 23. That they may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them, as thou hast loved me. And Vers. 24. Father I will, that they also whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am, that they may behold my Glory, which thou hast given me, for thou lovest me before the foundation of the World. I ask the Question, What do you think of Gods loving Christ here? Did he love him from the foundation of the World chiefly, because he foresaw he would die for us, and be Jesus, a Saviour? No, it was, because he was his Son in our Nature. Then say I, if he loved us in his Beloved; then he loved us most in, and for that, wherein, and for what he had loved him most, from the foundation of the World, and us with that kind of love, he had loved him withal; and for the relation we had to him, upon that his love to him; and he contents not himself to have said this once, but at the conclusion of his Prayer, he speaks thus, and it is, as if he had said, these are my last words; That the love, wherewith thou hast loved me, may be in them, and I in them. Whereof I take the meaning to be, that, as in the thing it self, Gods love to us, was founded upon his love to him, it was but the overflow of Gods love to the Person of Christ, that flows on to us; so therefore he prays that we might understand so much: And upon what it is, that the love of God towards us, through him, is especially founded, That the love in God, wherewith he had loved him, may be in us; this he prays for, as a matter of the highest moment, and concernment for us to know; and then add we this, that if he loves us, as he loves his Son, who is his beloved; that then he loves us unchangably, Vers. 23. Yea, and this unchangableness, and fixedness, is grounded on a due, and equitable ground; for the relation we have to his Son, is it that makes us Sons; and so God loving him so naturally, so strongly as he doth, it becomes him so to love them that are his, as they are called, 1 Cor. 15. 23. Those that are Christs, and so are in a near and strong relation to him.

That as Christ said of his Fathers love to him, that it is greater than all, that nothing can fall out to remove it, so it is here, his love being fixt in Christ, he may as well cease to love his Christ, as cease to love us. And hence it comes to pass, that sin doth not, nor cannot work his heart off from us, but it provokes him to destroy it in us. And there is this equitable ground for it; it is certain, he hates not sin so much (which yet he only hates) or so intensly, as he doth love his Son for himself, (for then some contrary affection about what is in the Creature, should be as great, and as intense, as his love to his Son is.) And therefore, he can never be brought finally to hate our Persons for sin, (or because that sin is in us, for what is in us distinct from our Persons as sin is) more than to continue to love our Persons, because we are in his Son. Observe but the proportion between the one, and the other, and it will invincibly hold; for else he should value his love to his Son at a lower rate, than he doth the evil of sin, which cannot be. I will not deny, but that to forgive our sins by Christ was necessary; yet this I will say, that sin could never have wrought his heart off from us, but love to his Son, that caused him to work sin out of us: And yet what a valuable consideration there is for all this, even in the thing it self, of loving us in Christ.

BOOK IV. II. BY JESUS, A Saviour of us, as Sinners, through Redemption, and Purchaſe; which falls in with what the moſt Interpreters give the account of, as to what purpoſe [By Jeſus Chriſt] ſhould come in here, aſcribing it to what he meritoriouſly wrought for us, and purchaſed for us at Gods hand. As when we are ſaid to be Called, we are ſaid to be Called by Jeſus Chriſt, becauſe his Merits, bought or purchaſed our Calling; and that God by the virtue, and intuition of his Merits, Called us: So likewiſe, that we are called into Glory, that he intendeth, It is by Jeſus Chriſt, who purchaſed all the Glory which God eſtates us into.

Now as to that main Point, and drift afore us; there are two eminent Particulars I ſhall inſiſt on, as the purchaſe of the Merits of Jeſus; the conſideration whereof, may inſeparably ſecure our hearts for his preſerving, and carrying us through all temptations.

1. That Chriſt hath bought, and purchaſed our firſt Calling into grace; and together therewith, our continuance, and perſeverance in that grace.

2. That he hath Meritorioufly alſo bought off all our Temptations, and purchaſed withall an ability to himſelf, to ſuccour us, and ſtrengthen us through all temptations, and ſtabliſh us in the end. This I add here, not only becauſe our greateſt hazards, and dangers, are from our temptations: But becauſe the ſcope of the Text (as hath been ſhewn) is to relieve us againſt temptations, in a more ſpecial manner.

I. For the firſt, there are Three Particulars, which make up the Concluſion I aim at.

1. That Chriſt's Merits have purchaſed our firſt Calling into Grace.

2. That together therewith, he purchaſed our continuance, and preſervation in Grace.

3. What an Obligation there is lying upon Chriſt, that ariſeth from both, that when once he hath Called us, as that which is the firſt payment, and purchaſe of his Death, he ſhould then be engaged to ſee to it, that we be ſtrengthned and preſerved in Grace to the end; as being the ſecond payment, or latter part of that purchaſe, without which, the firſt of Calling, would be ineffectual. Theſe, all three of them, are proper, and pertinent to the Apoſtles ſcope.

1. He hath purchaſed our Calling, by which we are firſt Eſtated into Grace, and that is, our Converſion, which hath the name of calling given to it: It being a calling of us out of the World; and a dedication of us, as Firſt fruits unGod. Now Gal. 1. 4. this is expreſly attributed to that Merit, of the purchaſe made by Chriſt: Who gave himſelf for our ſins, that he might deliver us from the preſent evil World——Which, Verſe 6. is Interpreted, Our being Called into the grace of Chriſt; or in the Grace of Chriſt, ἐν χάριτι, as being that which coſt Chriſt dear; and wherein he ſhewed his love, and Grace towards us, whom he bought; (his ſoul found an hard Penny-worth of it) for as unto God he gave himſelf for our ſins, to Call us, Verſ. 4. But as unto us indeed that are Called, it was meerly out of his Grace. Thus alſo 1 Pet. 1. Gods Calling of us, Verſ. 15. Is made the price of his blood, in Verſ. 18, 19. For as much as ye know, ye were Redeemed from your vain converſation, with the pretious blood of Chriſt. Their vain Converſation was that courſe of life, and ſtate they had been in all that time afore Calling; the delivering them out of which by Calling them, and making them Holy, was by Redemption, and that Redemption was by the charge, and price of the precious blood of Chriſt.

2. Our Continuance in Grace was caſt into his bargain, together with our Calling, and inſeparably annexed thereunto; for it imports, he bought out the whole of our time in the World. The manner of ſpeech theſe uſed, is ſuch, as if it were ſaid of a Father, he had bought out the remainder of his Sons time, at a valuable conſideration, who is an Apprentice to a vain, ungodly Maſter, and who had a claim, and intereſt in him for ſuch a term of years: For when he ſays, he Redeemed you from a vain converſation; the meaning is, that it had a power over you, and an intereſt in you, ſo as otherwiſe you would have have continued therein to the end of your days; ſuch an hold had it of you. So then Chriſt bought out of Gods hands, with your firſt Converſion, your whole time to come, and thereby your preſervation, and continuation in that Grace, in as ſure a way of bargain, as your firſt Calling (which by experience you are ſure hath been wrought in you) and this againſt all Claims, and Recoveries, your old vain converſation, or your old temptations, ſhould ever be able to make unto you, ſo as never to endanger his loſing of you again. Thus alſo, Tit. 2. 14. Who gave himſelf for us, that he might Redeem us from all Iniquity, and purifie unto himſelf a peculiar people, zealous of good works. He ſpeaks of Redeeming us from the power of ſin (as the oppoſition ſhews) to purchaſe to himſelf, an addicted people to him, zealous of good works. So then all thoſe ſins, which we ſhould have been carried out into, in the whole of our lives after, in the dominion of them over us, which they afore Calling had; from this, and theſe, he Redeemed us; and ſo bought out our whole time at one lump, at one entire, and whole bargain. Chap. 8.

You have all this fully, in that Song, Luk. 1. 68. Bleſſed be God, that hath Redeemed his people, Verſ. 69. And hath raiſed up an horn of Salvation, for us; namely, Chriſt, Verſ. 70. That we ſhould be ſaved from our enemies, (ſpecially Spiritual) and from the hand of all that hate us. To perform and remember the Mercy, Oath, and Covenant, which he ſware, Verſ. 72, 73. He ſent Chriſt to Redeem, and lay a price down, that God might be able to perform his Oath: And what was that Oath, Verſ. 74. That he would grant us, that being, (once) delivered out of the hands of our enemies, we might ſerve him without fear; (of our coming into our Enemies power, and conqueſt of us again) all the days of our lives, in Holineſs, and Righteouſneſs.

I Obſerve there, 1. How he bought our Calling; for Then, and at Calling, it is, that we are delivered from the hand, or power of all our enemies; from all as well as any one: We heard out of, Gal. 1. 4. That our Calling was a deliverance out of this preſent World, as here, from all, &c.

2. That he withal, bought out all the reſt of our time, after our Calling, or firſt deliverance, or enfranchiſement, from our enemies, even all the days of our lives to come.

And 3. He purchaſed not only for us, that we ſhould have power in our ſelves, to to be able to preſerve our ſelves, if we will look to it, as we ſhould do to our ſelves: No, he fixed it more certainly, he bought this of God, that he would grant us it; the very effectual beſtowing the thing upon us.

In ſo much, 4. As God in the foreſight, and contemplation of the invincible efficacy thereof, took an Oath to grant it to every Son of Abraham: And God never breaks an Oath, it is irrevocable.

So as, 5. We may in this Point be perfectly ſecure, as the words, [without fear] aſſure us; and ſo turn all our care, and ſollicitude (which tears, and wears the hearts of many, viz. That few ſhall be able to hold out,) upon this, how to ſerve him the more acceptably.

The Third thing propoſed, was the force, and ſtrength of the Obligation that lieth on Chriſt, and riſeth from hence; that he, having thus bought both our Calling, and preſervation in Grace; that therefore he ſhould be more careful, and heedful to keep us; and accordingly to ſtrengthen, ſettle, ſtabliſh us in Wiſdom: It is his concernment, Chriſt is a wiſe Purchaſer, as well as a wiſe Builder; now for one to make ſure of one part of a Purchaſe, (which is but the firſt payment, as we ſay) and not to make all the reſt as certain; how great a folly, and overſight, would it be accounted in any Bargainer, or Contractor, eſpecially, when the condition of the Bargain is ſuch, as if the latter part faileth, and cometh not in; that then alſo, the firſt is null, and void; and ſo as he muſt loſe all benefits, and uſe of the firſt part, after it is paid in, and ſo loſe the whole? To be ſure in this caſe, a wiſe man will look more narrowly (of the two) to the latter part of his Bargain, than to the firſt. I exemplifie it thus: If in the 8*th Verſ.* of the Second Epiſtle of John, He Exhorts his Chriſtian Converts, wrought upon by his Miniſtry, to look to themſelves, (that we) (Miniſters

BOOK IV.

(Miniſters and Apoſtles) as well as Chriſtians, loſe not thoſe things which we (and you) have wrought, but that we receive a full reward. You find alſo how vehemently Sollicitous to a jealouſie, the Apoſtle Paul was over thoſe he had converted, leſt they ſhould in any degree have faln: Do but read the firſt Epiſtle to the Theſſ. Chap. 2. &c. The like you have in his Epiſtle to the Corinthians and Galathians: Yet his concernment was, but his having been a poor Inſtrument in the hand of Chriſt, to work on them. Without doubt then, Jeſus Chriſt will be ſure to look to this; he will look to this himſelf, for it is his own intereſt and concernment, which is infinitely greater then what was the Apoſtles; he being both the Owner and Maſter-Workman, he will look narrowly to us, and to the thing he hath wrought in us, to ſuccour, ſtabliſh, ſtrengthen, &c. That he have his full bargain out, eſpecially ſeeing he hath obtained one great part belonging to it, hath called us already, and ſo hath received the firſt Payment, and ſo is in poſſeſſion in part, both of what he hath bought, and what he hath wrought in us: Above all, when the Condition or Rate is ſuch, as he muſt forefeit that too, and ſo both his whole work and his whole purchaſe become fruſtrate, as if he had never laid out a penny upon either. 'Tis certain, Chriſt will not loſe one farthing, not an ἰῶτα of what he paid; Heaven and Earth ſhall paſs away rather. God held him hard to it, and would not abate a farthing; and he will hold God as hard to it, and will look to it, not only to have every individual Soul he purchaſed, but to have alſo every degree of Grace which he purchaſed for every Soul.

2. As he bought thy firſt calling and continuance in Grace thy whole time, ſo he hath paid for, and bought off from thee, all thy Temptations that ſhould any way befall thee, or that ſhould any way endanger thy continuance in grace: And hath procured Succour, Strength, Settlement, and Eſtabliſhment for thee.

This is certainly the full ſcope and direct meaning of that paſſage, Heb. 2. 18. In that he himſelf hath ſuffered, being tempted, he is able to ſuccour them that are tempted. He had ſaid he was a merciful High Prieſt, to pity us, in the verſe afore, and ſo hath an heart and willingneſs to pity us; but in this Verſe he adds, that he was able; now mark it, he doth not term him able, in reſpect of his perſonal Abilities, as he is God; but he intends a farther acquired Ability, and acquired by this, That he being made a frail man, ſubjected to temptations, as in Chapt. 4. He was ſubjected to all temptations; yea, and in the 17th Verſe of this 4th Chapter, he gives this Reaſon why he was made a frail man, even to make him the more tenderly merciful to us, It behoved him, &c.

So that beſides his mercies, as he was God (as if that they fitted him not enough) he alſo became a Man, a tempted Man, to engage his heart to faithfulneſs, and to ſoften his heart to pity us with ſuch a kind of pity, with which one man uſeth to pity another, of his Nature, in diſtreſs: This was an additional acquired mercy in his heart unto that which he had, as he was God. Now in a like ſenſe this Speech here is to be underſtood, that he was made able thereby to ſuccour us.

You may ask of me concerning this (as of the others alſo) Was not our Saviour able to ſuccour us, being God-man, though he had never been tempted?

I Anſwer; 'Tis true, he had that radical or fundamental Power, both of that, and of all things elſe, as God: But it was this of his having been himſelf tempted, which gave him the immediate next Power, the potentia proxima, as we ſay.

And then you will next enquire, How came it that his having been tempted, ſhould give him power and ability to help us; ſuch as he elſe had not had?

That Scripture reſolves you clearly, In that himſelf hath ſuffered, being tempted, he is able, &c. So then it lay in that all his Temptations were in him all pure and meer ſufferings to him; (In conformity unto which here in this Text of Peters, even our Temptations are termed Sufferings, After you have ſuffered awhile, &c.) All Chriſt's Temptations were grievous Afflictions and Vex-

Vexations to his Spirit, he ſuffered in them; and not only his hanging on the Croſs, but all his Temptations from Satan in the Wilderneſs, were his Sufferings. All the oppoſitions, reproaches, and contradictions that Sinners and this wicked World made againſt him, they were part of his Sufferings, Heb. 12. 3. Conſider him that endured (mark it) ſuch contradictions of Sinners, (ſuch as never no man elſe) they were part of his endurings. Now this is a certain Rule, that whatever you can reckon and account to have been his Sufferings, they acquired and merited (in every tittle of them) a redeeming power, a purchaſing power of ſomething of like nature for us: And the emphaſis, force, or reaſon of that, lies in thoſe words in Hebr. 12. 3. Againſt himſelf, &c. which is as if he had ſaid, That he, ſo great a Perſon, ſhould ſubmit to bear it, expoſe himſelf, and ſuffer himſelf to ſuffer, to be tempted by Satan, and the World, who could have flung them backward, and deſtroyed them, as in the entrance to his laſt Sufferings he gave Evidence. So then, as elſewhere it is termed, the blood of God, ſo theſe were the Temptations of God, not objectively only, as we are ſaid to tempt God; but ſubjectively, ſo as he ſuffered in them all Perſonally, as we poor men do when we are tempted. So Hebr. 4. 15. Was in all points tempted like as we are. He in his Perſon, as we in ours. Chap. 8.

Now all theſe Sufferings being for us, and as the Scripture ſpeaks, He therein giving up himſelf for us; and a piece of himſelf was concerned and touch't upon in every Temptation; they therefore aim to have a redeeming, purchaſing Power and Ability in them for us; as Titus 3. 14. Who gave himſelf for us to redeem us. And according to that Maxim of his, he uttered, when he came to ſuffer, Here I am, take me, let theſe go free, John 18. 8.

And again, add this, which is as certain a Rule, That whatever Chriſt did particularly ſuffer in, that ſuffering hath a ſpecial virtue and ability of redeeming us from the like particular, wherein we ſuffer, and he thereby did buy help and ſuccour for us therein. So then, his being tempted bought off all our Temptations, either not to befall us, or if they befell us, in the end to leave us. Have we a Temptation of Shame comes upon us, that is, a buſineſs that is matter of Shame, Pſalm 69. 6, 7. Let not them that wait on thee, O Lord God of Hoſts, be aſhamed for my ſake: Let not thoſe that ſeek thee be confounded for my ſake, O God of Iſrael; becauſe for thy ſake I have born reproach, ſhame hath covered my face. 'Tis a Pſalm of Chirſt, if ever any was made for him: For it is quoted four or five times of him in the New Teſtament. Now obſerve from thence, with what intentions Chriſt tranſacted things with his Father: And what was the ſcope and intendment he directed his ſufferings in any kind unto, you may learn it by this one inſtance farther; I ſuffer ſhame, ſays Chriſt, I have born reproach, &c. For what end and fruit was it? Let not them that wait on thee be aſhamed, &c. and he adds twice, for my ſake. The meaning is not as to this ſenſe, Becauſe they cleave to me, and adhere to me, and are of my Party, and ſo that though I were foiled, yet let not them be ſhent or aſhamed for my ſake; no, but the clean contrary: As Epheſ. 4. ult. As God for Chriſt's ſake hath forgiven you. He there pitcheth it thus, becauſe I, for their ſakes, do at thy command bear that ſhame, which they ſhould elſe have done: Lord! take it off from them, becauſe thou haſt laid it upon me: So it expreſly follows, Verſe 7. Becauſe for thy ſake I have born reproach, ſhame hath covered my face. The clear reſolve of it is this: Now what is ſpoken of matter of ſhame there, the ſame holds true of any particular thing which Chriſt ſuffered, or which befalleth us: We may ſay of each of his ſufferings, that it hath procured of his Father, that we, for his ſake, ſhould be relieved in it; and that, becauſe he ſuffered in being tempted, therefore he is able meritoriouſly, and by way of merit and deſert at his Father's hand, he comes to have power to help and ſuccour us in that particular, be it what it will be. I have elſewhere given other Inſtances of like kind, out of 1 Cor. 8. 9. and Matth. 8. 17. and 1 Pet. 2. 24. ſpeaking to Servants beaten and abuſed, By whoſe ſtripes ye are healed. Now ſo it is in the point of Temptations in any kind; he bore our Temptations, he was tempted, that for his ſake we might have, either no ſuch Temptations, or have them moderated, and in the end ſtruck off. He may be termed a man of temptations, as well as a man of ſorrows.

Yea, and thou art but ſo far tempted, as therein to be conformed to him, and meerly for that conformity; ſo as look upon thy Temptations but only as his after Sufferings, Coloſſ 1. 24. Who now rejoyce in my ſufferings for you, and fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Chriſt in my fleſh, for his bodies ſake, which is his Church.

Add to this, That as he bought off all our Temptations at his Death, ſo he is meritoriouſly able, and received ability to ſuccour us when he firſt came to Heaven, and ſo was habitually enabled. This is a certain Rule, That look whatever thing he purchaſed here on Earth, by his ſuffering, the like he had ability to perform in Heaven; and ſo meritoriouſly is enabled thereunto, as one that hath deſerved it: The diſpenſatory power thereof, or power to give that forth, did he receive, when he came to Heaven; yea, it was his firſt entertainment there. God was honeſt to him, and faithful to him, as he had been to God; and gave him not only all power in Heaven and Earth, by way of meer Commiſſion to mannage all, as Matth. 28. 18. as a King hath all Soveraignty by Law; but he ſupplyed him with that, which was compleatly able to effect whatſoever he pleaſed: The Holy Ghoſt is able to comfort thee in all thy Temptations and Tribulations: You know he is called The Comforter, which is ſpoken properly in reſpect of diſcomfort and temptations. Chriſt knew what he did when he promiſed to ſend him to them, as need ſhould require; as afore his Death he did: For no ſooner did Chriſt arrive, or ſet his foot in Heaven, but he for us did receive the whole of the Spirit, and all his Comforts, and whatſoever he was able to do. Thus Acts 2. 33. And with great power gave the Apoſtles witneſs of the Reſurrection of the Lord Jeſus, and great grace was upon them all. He had bought all the Cordial Succours the Holy Ghoſt had by him ready prepared for every Malady; he had the whole at once given him; for Chriſt, the Head, was made at that once compleat: God Anointed him, as in his own Perſon, with the Oyl of gladneſs above his Fellows: So with the whole of that Oyl, which was for ever to be poured forth upon all his Fellows, even upon the whole Church. And what he then received by whole-ſale, he pours out and gives forth to every Member of his Church, as occaſion is, and their need doth require.

Uſe. Had Chriſt an Iſſue out of all his Temptations, then ſhalt thou, becauſe he ſuffered, being tempted, for thee, and in thy ſtead. In the Wilderneſs he was tempted, and the Devil left him, and the good Angels came and miniſtred unto him. In the Garden he was tempted, and in Agony; the iſſue was, an Angel came and comforted him, and God gave him counſel and ſupport, Luke 22. And he was heard in what he feared. Heb. 5. 7. On the Croſs he was put to it; My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me: And he was heard in what he feared, not knowing by what he felt, unto what height the wrath of God would riſe. It is finiſhed (ſays he;) that is, This great Brunt is over, and here is an end of all. God delivered him out of all troubles, and he will deliver thee out of all: God delivers the righteous out of all their troubles, (ſays the Pſalmiſt:) Not leaving one which he is not delivered out of.

Yea, (I ſay) thou ſhalt much more eaſily be heard and delivered than he was. It is a ſad thing, and may affect any ones heart, to hear the great Saviour of the World complain, as in the next words to thoſe juſt now mentioned, My God, my God, &c. Pſal. 22. 1. In the next words, to hear him go on to complain, O my God! I cry in the day time, but thou heareſt not; and in the night ſeaſon I am not ſilent. And then, to aggravate his grief the more, adds, Verſe 4. Our Fathers truſted in thee: they truſted, and thou didſt deliver them; they cried unto thee, and were delivered. Thou art more hard and difficult to me in my Diſtreſſes, than unto them in theirs. But above all to have him then add, But I am a worm, and no man; whom thou having caſt below the condition of other Men and Saints, as a Worm is below a Man, takeſt freedom to trample on me; ſo as never on any: Yea, and that yet it was ſo, that for his very ſake they all had been heard heard and delivered in their Temptations. The truth of it is, we ſhall be ſooner, and more eaſily heard, than he was; for he bore the ſtreſs, the brunt, for all the reſt, to ſuffer being trampled, to procure audience and diſpatch for thee. Therefore be of good courage, for he hath overcome for thee, and thou ſhalt more eaſily get off than he that made way for thy ſuccour. Chap. 8.

And whether thy Temptations be ſmall or great, thou maiſt by viewing what Chriſt ſuffered, comfort thy ſelf againſt either: For in that it is ſaid, He was tempted in all things like as we are, it comprehends all ſorts and varieties: As he was a man of ſorrows, ſo of temptations. Our ſpirits are oftner expoſed to temptations and diſquietments from things that are in themſelves ſmall, though great unto us. Gnats trouble us oftner than Wildbeaſts. A Mote on the Eye frets it: An hair, lying upon the heart, eats into it. And when we look to Chriſt, we conſidering him as we do men of great Spirits, think that ſmall things made no impreſſion upon his great heart: But O! he had withal the ſofteſt and tendereſt heart that ever was, more than of any man: For the ſame temper of ſoftneſs that makes him merciful to us, alſo rendred him moſt ſenſible of all that befell himſelf; and he was left to the infirmity of his Fleſh in ſufferings; he was affected with the meanneſs of his Parents, diſeſteemed in his own Country, *Matth.*13.55,56,57. And at his Death, when they caſt Lots upon his Garments, it was a trouble to him, and he paſſionately complains, and of the mouths they made at him, Pſal. 22. verſ. 13, 18. It is much, that a man dying on the Croſs, in his cruel pains and tortures, forſaken of God, and conflicting with his wrath, and ſo wholly ſwallowed up therewith, ſhould have room in his heart and thoughts to mind parting his Garments, and caſting Lots for his Veſture, after he was deveſted of them; yet he lays to heart ſo ſmall an occurrence; it was his tenderneſs. In tender fleſh, as in that of Children, Fleas make a great knot and mark with the leaſt of their bitings, which on others make no impreſſion.

BOOK IV.

CHAP. IX.

The Engagements of Christ, and his Interest, to preserve us, which arise from his having actually Called us. In our Calling he owned us, and took charge of us, as a Trust committed to him by the Father. The thing for which we are apprehended of Christ in our Calling, is, that he might give forth unto us, our whole design'd Portion of Grace and Glory, which was alloted to us in Election, and purchased by him upon the Cross. Phil. 3. 12, 13, 14. Explained. Christ by Calling us, secures us in safe Custody, and by a strong Guard: From the time of a Mans Calling Christ begins actually to intercede for him, and then takes him into his Prayers, as well as into his Cares.

I PET. V. 10.

Who hath CALLED US BY JESUS CHRIST.

I Shall mention such Interests only as are proper to Christ, from that share and influence which he hath in his actual Calling and Converting us, such (I say) as are proper to him therein. And from thence I shall (as from the former) infer how greatly he is engaged to continue his efficacious influence to strengthen, stablish, and preserve us.

In General, it is one great difference of the first and second Adam, that though God would have used Adam, if he had stood, to have conveyed Holiness, or that Image of God by Generation to us, which himself had by Creation; he who was but a meer Creature (and constituted the Head of all the rest of his kind) could have done that, by the Law of the first Creation: But still, if Adam had stood and thus had begotten Children, never so many, in the Image of God, yet he should not have conveyed a Confirmation of them in that Estate, not a perpetuity or an everlasting certainty of their not falling. That affirmation, by whom ever it is asserted, is without warrant: For such a perpetual establishment is of Grace only, and above the Law of Creation. Those so born in him, should still have been left to the mutability of their own wills for the continuance in that Holiness conveyed: But Jesus Christ, the second Adam, serves not only to beget us in his own Image, then when sinners, which is done by Calling of us; but as invincibly to preserve, and continue, and uphold it in us, even to bring forth dimmest, or but smoaking weik unkindled, unto victory. Called in Christ, and preserved in Christ too, as you heard, are one. But more particularly to speak to this.

There

There are four or five Acts, or Things, which are proper to Christ in his Calling of us, and what he doth then for us, that have a binding force upon Christ to preserve you. Chap. 9.

I. The first is, A Solemn owning of us by Christ then at our calling; John 17. 6. I have manifested thy Name unto the Men which thou gavest me out of the World: Thine they were, and thou gavest them me; and they have kept thy word. Speaking of his Disciples then living, whom he had converted. First he declares to his Father, how he had manifested his Name to them, and the ground of his so doing, Thine they were, and thou gavest them me. He gave them to Christ, both from everlasting, and in a renewed act, at that time when he first began to manifest his Fathers Name to them: Both which were mighty Engagements for him to plead with his Father, his keeping and preserving them, as also that according to the Trust himself had then committed to him, he should be careful to give an account of their perseverance thitherto, as that which was the Obligation of him upon their Calling; which there follows, They have kept thy word: And Vers. 12. Whilst I was with them in the World, I kept them in thy Name; that is, I have hitherto performed my part: And his care in Heaven for all whom he doth manifest the Name of God unto, is the same, yea greater, as his Power also is now, when he is in Heaven. And so, as by what he said on Earth, counting those few, shews what his care will be to us all, now he is in Heaven; the same Obligation is for ever upon him.

II. Together with this owning of them at their Calling, There was also, a taking the charge of them from that time: In the 10*th* of John there are two sorts of Sheep, some uncalled, and as yet going astray, Oves palantes, Vers. 15, 16. I lay my Life down for the Sheep; and other Sheep I have that are not of this fold; that is the uncalled of the Gentiles, who after his Assension, were in all Nations Converted to him: Of whom he says, Them also I must bring in (as well as I have called Disciples out of the Jews) and they shall hear my voice. Now he says two things of those, as yet, uncalled Sheep: 1. That 'tis a Duty of necessity which lay on him to call them, Them also I must bring. And they being his Sheep, he laid his Life down for them; and so, whom he purchased of the Father, They shall (say he) hear my voice; that is, they shall be effectually Called by me; that's the first. 2. Then after they shall be thus Called, observe what he as resolutely and peremptorily says, concerning them so called by him, Vers. 27. My Sheep hear my voice, and I give unto them eternal Life, and they shall never perish; neither shall any (it is translated any Man, but it is, not any Man or Angel) pluck them out of my hand. Now as he was engaged by his Father to turn them, when they had gone astray, so being turned to them, he becomes anew engaged to them, as becomes the Bishop of their Souls, 1 Pet. 3. 35. Ye were as sheep going astray, but now are returned to the Shepherd, and Bishop of your Souls. And look as of these, whilst they went astray, uncalled, he had said, Them I must bring in; so after their being turned, they, having put themselves under his Charge, as their Bishop and Shepherd, he must much more look upon himself engaged to keep them, and preserve them. It lies upon Pastours to take care of their Sheep, much more upon Christ, the great Shepherd, as the same Apostle tells him: And therefore add to this, that solemn Profession of his, John 6. 37, 38, 39. wherein he says this care and charge of such was committed to him by the Father, All that the Father giveth me, shall come to me; and him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out: For I came down from Heaven, not to do my own Will, but the Will of him that sent me. And this is the Fathers Will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me, I should loose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day. And when he says, that it was his Father's will, and his own; his meaning is not, as if it were not his will, but that his Obligation and Indearment lay not chiefly in this, that it was his own will, or first will-beginning in and of himself, so much as that it was a matter of Trust committed to him, and therefore the more engaging him to faithfulness: And the Trust is, to raise them up at the last day; and therefore to be sure he will, to his utmost, look to them unto that day. And matters

Book IV. matters of Truſt to faithful Spirits, are matters of greateſt moment to them. And whether the Parable intend the firſt Calling of a ſinner, or ſome new Converſion, after one that is Called has been going aſtray, Luke 15. it is all one to this my purpoſe, to ſhew the ſpecial care of Chriſt after, more than afore, to turn them. And if the former Expreſſion, None ſhall pluck them out of my hand, be not expreſſive enough of this, you have yet a farther one utter'd by himſelf, which argues ſtill more care on his part, Luke 15. 5. And when he had found it, he laid it on his ſhoulders rejoycing; he unfolds his heart there alſo, under the Metaphor of a Shepherd: And that as I obſerve, is, That when he hath found his loſt Sheep, after his much ſeeking it, he then takes the ſafeſt and moſt ſure way that could any way be thought of, to expreſs a Shepherd's keeping faſt ſuch ſtraying Creature from ever getting looſe again; He lays it on his ſhoulders: And that is the moſt ſecuring way that could be taken, for a Shepherd to have the fore-feet in one hand, and the hinder-feet in the other: He hath it in his hands, ſaith John; On his ſhoulders, ſays Luke. And it is as if he had ſaid, Have I found you? I will make ſure of you from going utterly aſtray again; I will not leave you looſe in my hands, holding you by a foot, or a leg, which leaves the whole Body free to wring or wreſt it ſelf away, but I will lay you on my ſhoulders, and therewith retain your ſtragling feet in my hand, as in tutâ cuſtodiâ, in ſure cuſtody.

III. There was a moſt ſolemn Act paſſed by him, in the preſence of his Father, of Apprehending us; and this done by him at our Calling, with this intention and avowed engagement, to give forth to us the whole, (whatever it be) that is our deſigned Portion in Grace and Glory, and purchaſed by him on the Croſs. This we have in the inſtance of Paul, Phil. 3. 12. I follow after, if that, I may apprehend [that] for which] alſo [I am apprehended of Jeſus Chriſt.]

This is a matter of very great moment, both in the knowledge of the thing it ſelf, as alſo to our preſent purpoſe.

1. That this Chriſt's apprehending him was performed at the time of his Calling, is evident; not only becauſe he had been afore relating the ſtory of his own Converſion, verſ. 7. & 8. which on Chriſts part he terms Chriſt's apprehending him, becauſe it began, and led on all that was to follow, but chiefly becauſe he termeth that thing for which Chriſt apprehended him, to be, as in the 12*th Verſe*, the mark, price, of our Calling of God in Chriſt Jeſus, as in Verſe 14.

2. That this is not an extraordinary act of Chriſt towards him alone, (as converting him himſelf from Heaven was) but it declares what is common to us alſo. Chriſt, in like manner, and for the ſame purpoſes, and with the ſame intendments, apprehendeth us alſo at our Callings. And therefore now he calls that, for which he was apprehended, the mark of our Calling, as well as of his own.

Now 3ly, The thing for which Chriſt had then at Calling apprehended him, was, that which hitherto as yet he had not fully and compleatly received, although he had been Converted long afore he uttereth this: So Verſe 13. I count not my ſelf to have apprehended; namely that for which I was at firſt apprehended of Chriſt; I have indeed received part thereof, but it is ſo little, That I forgetting thoſe things which are paſt, ſtill reaching to thoſe things which are before; I preſs towards the mark, &c. ſo as ſays Paul, I now mind not ſo much, what at the time of his Calling me I received by Grace from him, nor what I have received ſince, as if that had been the whole, or the main intended me by Chriſt then apprehending me: No; but there is yet a farther thing behind, which the intendment of that Act takes in.

4. The thing therefore he was apprehended by Chriſt, for himſelf to apprehend, was All, and the whole, that was his particular Portion for ever to be received from God, which Chriſt on the Croſs had purchaſed for him: And all that God had in and by Jeſus Chriſt intended towards him, and in Chriſt beſtowed upon him by Everlaſting Love, as his particular Allotment. And that the whole, the Total of theſe is meant, is plain, beſides from what hath been been ſaid, that what he had received was but in part, he ſtill preſſing for more, upon that ground that Chriſt had apprehended him for more: I ſay, beſides this, he in the 13*th Verſe* doth farther expreſs the whole of his aim to be —— If by any means I may attain to the Reſurrection of the Dead. Now the ſtate of the Reſurrection of the dead ſuppoſeth and includes the whole of our Salvation, and ſuppoſeth us kept and preſerved all along in Grace until that time; and our being arrived ſafe aſhore in the other World, as that part which the ſtate and perfection of all the Reſurrection from the dead ultimately brings us into. And this comprehends the whole ſtake and portion of a Chriſtian, which is therefore termed the mark and price of the high Calling, as that which was aimed at, and ſet upon, by Chriſt at our Calling, to bring us unto, when he firſt apprehended us. Chap. 9.

5. And this was accordingly the great intention of Jeſus Chriſt himſelf, at the time of Calling, and that which by that act he engaged himſelf to perform, even to give forth the whole of Grace neceſſary to our Salvation until the Reſurrection of the dead: Which well agrees with his own expreſſion, Joh. 6. 39. I will raiſe him up at the laſt day. And it is as if he had ſaid, I mention this of raiſing him, for then I ſhall have diſcharged my Engagement.

And as it is Finis operantis, ſo alſo Operis of the whole of Calling it ſelf: And in relation unto both it is, that it is ſtiled the PRICE of our high Calling, That Epithete is given to our Calling, becauſe it hath this whole and great Portion and Inheritance annexed to it as a Birth-right, as you ſay an high-born Prince; ſo here.

You may further come to underſtand the importance and intendment of this act of Chriſt's apprehending us at Calling, by comparing it with two other acts of his of like importance, which do preceed, and were done by Chriſt for us afore our Calling, and which in their kind were done for the whole of our Salvation.

I. The firſt Act was, That at and by his death Chriſt purchaſed all, and the whole of Grace and Glory, That even the God of all Grace, &c. had deſigned unto us: That is clear by Scripture; Heb. 10. 14. For by one Offering he hath perfected for ever them that are ſanctified. Alas! for us poor Creatures: We, for a long time after we are ſanctified, are imperect, lacking all and every thing in compariſon. How then are we perfected? Becauſe that Jeſus Chriſt, by that one Offering, perfectly purchaſed all that ever ſhall go to make up our perfection. It is finiſhed in that ſenſe. He ſo abundantly thereby procured all, as he needed to offer himſelf but once: And if there could be any thing ſuppoſed to perfect a Saint, which Chriſt had not purchaſed, his Offering had been imperfect.

II. A ſecond Act preceding this of his apprehending us, was, That when he firſt aſcended into Heaven, he as an Head, received every whit, and the whole of all that ſhould be given us by the Spirit from God, even for all the Saints that were as then unborn: All, even all at once, that ſhall be given forth unto us but by parcels unto all Eternity, Acts 2. 33. Therefore, being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promiſe of the Holy Ghoſt, he hath ſhed forth this which ye now ſee and hear.

III. And by what was the intendment of thoſe preceding acts, you eaſily may underſtand what the intendment of Chriſt apprehending us then was, when he beging actually to apply to us that which he, 1. Died for; 2. Received upon his Aſcenſion. At our Calling (which is the firſt beginning of the application of our Salvation) it is, that Chriſt doth begin actually to apprehend us, which he had never done afore, nor is ſaid to have done afore Calling. And this is his Third great Solemn Act, ſubſequent to, and executive of the other, and carries with it the whole of the ſame intendment in its kind, that the other two did in their kind, which lies in this, that he then takes hold of a Soul

Soul which he purchaſed this [All] and received all for, actually to give it forth to that Soul. He begins but as from that time; and what Chriſt doth firſt work in Calling, is not all, or the whole for which he apprehended him; no, Chriſt doth but now begin with him, but will not have done with him ſo ſoon; but continues the work unto all Eternity: So as Paul thus thought and counted with himſelf; Chriſt's having received the whole of my Portion into his Hands, as a Feoffee in Truſt, it lay by him, no part diſpoſed of, untill the time came that I was called: Then it was, that he took faſt hold of me, to the end to beſtow what was mine upon me. And I now knowing this, that he hath my Portion in his hands, and that at my Calling he took upon him the Executorſhip about me, I preſs him to have this whole out of his hands.

And becauſe this is the true and real intendment of God's Calling us, he therefore tearmeth it the price of the high Calling. There is no action of Gods ſo high towards us, as that, for it is the final Iſſue of all.

And it being there added alſo [In Chriſt Jeſus] this ſhews that Chriſt Jeſus being engaged by having Called us, that HE doth perform it accordingly, which the Text falls in with, He having called us by Chriſt Jeſus, by the ſame Chriſt he preſerves and ſtabliſheth us.

IV. A fourth Act, which from the time of our Calling, and his then apprehending us, as alſo from the other two, is, That he inſtantly thereupon, at and upon Calling us, and ever after, puts us into ſafe Cuſtody; he claps a Guard upon us. As all Power is committed to him in Heaven and Earth, ſo he placeth it about a Man, extends it and tends it forth as need requires. The Phraſe that we tranſlate, Jude 1. Preſerved in Chriſt Jeſus, and called, τετηρημένοις, is four ſeveral times in the Book of the Acts, uſed, and tranſlated put in hold, or ſafe cuſtody; as Acts 4. 3. They laid hands on Peter and John, and put them in hold: that is, Secured them with watch and ward. Yea, 1 Peter 1. 5. The Saints are deſcribed to be kept by the power of God unto Salvation; the word uſed is, kept as with a Gariſon: Look 2 Cor. 11. 32. The Governor under Aretas the King, kept the City with a Gariſon: It is the very ſame word that Peter here uſeth. Let the Soul go whether it will, though it ſeem to be at a loſs, yet it always hath a guard about it, to go with it whetherſoever it goes. All the power of God, yea the Spirit, who is its Governour under God and Chriſt, is ſent by them to dwell in their hearts, as a Guardian over them. When Chriſt ſays, John 14. 18. I will not leave you comfortleſs, I will come to you: The word in the Greek, and ſo in the Margents, is Orphans. And when he ſays, He would not leave them ſuch, his meaning is, I will commit you to a good, comfortable, and ſafe Guardian: For to ſuch, Parents dying, are ſaid to leave their Children. And that Guardian he had told them, Verſ. 16. was his Spirit: And I will pray the Father, and he ſhall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever, even the Spirit of Truth, &c. who comes with Commiſſion, never at any time to leave you. Which Verſ. 17. he repeats with additions to confirm it; He dwelleth with you, and ſhall be in you.

In a Treatiſe called, The Heart of Chriſt in Heaven toward Sinners on Earth.

V. A Fifth Act is, That from the time of a mans Calling, Chriſt begins actually to intercede for him from that time forward; he takes you into his Prayers, as well as into his Cares. I ſay from thy Converſion, as I have elſewhere obſerved. Our Calling is in a more eminent manner attributed to his death, (though his Interceſſion procures it alſo, as it did for theſe, whom he prayed for on the Croſs, Father forgive them, who were, according to that Prayer, Converted, three thouſand of them; Acts 2.) yet our preſervation in Grace, is more eminently aſcribed to his Life in Glory after his death; and therein, unto this, which is the end, and eminent fruit of that his life, his Interceſſion, as appears, by comparing thoſe two Scriptures, Rom. 5. 10. For if when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son: much more, being reconciled, we ſhall be ſaved by his life. And Heb. 7. 25. Wherefore he is able alſo to ſave them to the uttermoſt, that come unto God by him, ſeeing he he ever liveth to make Interceſſion for them. In which words, alſo it is inſerted, That the Perſons for whom this his Interceſſion is imployed, are thoſe that came to God by him: Art thou come to God by him ? (that is done by Calling, He then firſt drew Thee :) he will improve his Intereſt to ſave thee to the uttermoſt, that is, to carry on thy Salvation to the uttermoſt of caſes that ſhall fall out, to the uttermoſt of time ; that is, to the end of thy life ; and all along in that place in the Romans, he had in brief coucht it up in thoſe words, We ſhall much more be ſaved by his life. And in both places, he puts the greateſt efficacy upon this his Interceſſion, as to the effectual carrying on of our Salvation, comparatively to what his death effects, much more, (ſays he to the Romans) able thereby to ſave to the uttermoſt (ſays this to the Hebrews.) Chap. 9.

Nay, if he takes thee once into his prayers, he will never leave thee out, but prevail for thee, whatever thy caſe be, or whatever thou falleſt into. A man may be caſt out of Good Mens hearts, and prayers, as Saul was out of Samuel's, and the People out of Jeremy's ; but no man was ever caſt out of Chriſt's Prayers, whom he once took in. If there be a danger in any caſe, it muſt be in thy ſo ſinning, for which God ſhould caſt thee off : But Chriſt's prayers will ſee to that, and prevail to prevent thy falling into ſuch ſinnings, as of which, God hath ſaid, they ſhall never be forgiven ; as well as to pull thee forth out of the fire, in reſpect of ſuch ſins that are capable of being pardoned, if thou falleſt into them ; to which full purpoſe, is that of the Apoſtle, If any man ſin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jeſus Chriſt the Righteous, 1 Joh. 2. 1.

And the Priviledge, and benefit, which a Chriſtian hath by the means, and virtue of Chriſts Interceſſion, is unſpeakable, and not enough conſidered by Chriſtians, to give him the Glory of it, and to comfort their own hearts. He Intercedes upon all occaſions, as the matter doth require ; as Solomon's in that ſo ſolemn prayer of his ſpeaks, 1 King. 8. 53. Nor do I impertinently cite that prayer, or that paſſage of it ; For look as Solomons Conſecration of the Temple, was the Type of the Son of God his dwelling one day Bodily in an Human Nature, Conſecrated to all the Offices of his Mediation ; ſo in that high, and comprehenſive prayer which Solomon made at that Conſecration, he performed the Type, or Repreſentative part of Chriſt in his Interceſſion, which he diſcharges in, and by the Temple of his Humanity, now tranſlated into the Heavens. And as Solomons prayer was, that the prayers of the people ſhould be heard, upon this his general Prayer made afore-hand for them ; So Chriſts Interceſſion precedes ours upon all occaſions, and ours are as the Echo, or the reſound of his.

This conſtant care of Chriſt, thus to intercede upon all ſuch emergent occaſions, that might obſtruct our perſeverance, Chriſt ſhewed when he Perſonally prayed for Peter, in a caſe of the greateſt need, that ever Peter had, and it was done by Chriſt out of foreſight : I have prayed for thee, perſonally, and particularly, upon that occaſion of his being tempted, that thy Faith fail not ; Do we think that Peter alone, had the good hap of this priviledge, becauſe Chriſt was preſent on Earth then with him ? Nay, for all our ſakes it is written, ſtrengthen thy Brethren ſaid Chriſt thereupon, ſo ſpeaking thereof, as of a matter that nearly concerned them all, for their comfort, as well as his own. And in the execution, and performance of this, of interceding for us, as the matter ſhall require, it is, That he continues an High Prieſt for us in Heaven, even to put in for us in and upon all our needs, eſpecially Spiritual ; and thereupon it is, that we are bidden, to come boldly unto the Throne of Grace, to find help in time of every need, Heb. 4. 16. And we may in the Tenth Chapter of that Epiſtle, go into the Holy of Holies, and pull (as it our High Prieſt by the ſleeve to remember it, in ſuch and ſuch a need. And he is a faithful High Prieſt, as Chapter, 2. 17, 18.

And he heartly and to the utmoſt, improveth all the intereſt he hath in his Father, wholly for them, lays it all out this way. I pray not for the world, Joh. 17. 9. And as his Righteouſneſs, ſo his Interceſſion extends to the beneſit and behoof of the excellent ones on Earth, and them alone.

And if whilſt he was on Earth, his Father always heard him, Joh. 8. when he had not yet finiſht his work, then much more, now he is in Heaven, when hath done the work his Father appointed him, and hath done it in all things to the utmoſt required by God of him. You heard how he purchaſed all Grace, and relief, againſt all temptations, and now he is in Heaven, he ſues out that Purchaſe by parcels, as we have need; and when we are in any Diſtreſs, he then vigorouſly urgeth his own having been in the like. Thus Heb. 4. it is ſpoken of him, as of an High Prieſt, whoſe Office was, to intercede for the people, Verſ. 15, 16. We have not an High Prieſt, which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities: but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without ſin: Let us therefore come boldly unto the Throne of Grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find Grace to help in time of need.

And an Interceſſion thus founded upon and ſeconding that Purchaſe of all which we ſpeak of, and which he had ſo dearly bought, can receive no denial.

And that which may yet further confirm us in this matter, is thoſe Prayers of his in Pſalm 69, which was a Pſalm made for him: And it ſhews he pleads the like unto this day, upon all occaſions for us, urging what, and how in particular himſelf had endured of the like kind; and that becauſe I endured it (ſays he) Free this and that ſoul from the like; the words of his you find, Verſ. 6, 7. Let not them that wait on thee, O Lord, the Lord of Hoſts, be aſhamed for my ſake: Let not thoſe that ſeek thee be confounded for my ſake, O God of Iſrael. Becauſe for thy ſake I have been reproached, ſhame hath covered my face.

You Read at the Creation, God ſaid no more, But let there be light, and there was light; Chriſt in Heaven, is able through his Intereſt, to ſpeak the ſame language, and at no leſs rate doth he ſpeak, Father, I will, &c. John 17. 24. And then it is ſo, and is effected. I aſſure you his word in Heaven is taken for a greater matter, than delivering thy ſoul out of temptation. For his [I will] there in that place, was that Heaven Gates ſhould be ſet open, to let in thoſe he interceeds for: So it follows, Father, I will that they alſo whom thou haſt given me, be with me where I am, that they may behold my Glory, which thou haſt given me; for thou lovedſt me before the foundation of the World: And if his [I will] thus eaſily and with a word, breaks open Heaven Gates, then certainly it will avail againſt Hell Gates, that they ſhall never prevail againſt thee.

I might alſo add, and enlarge upon two further Securities, and Engagements of Chriſt to us, at, and by, and from our Calling.

1. That then we begin actually to be united to him by his Spirit, engrafted into him, to the end, that as Root, and Branches, he, and we ſhould live; and (if it ſhould be ſuppoſed) die together, which on his part is impoſſible; but ſuch his undertaking is, Joh. 14. 19. Becauſe I live, you ſhall live alſo: For he adds, Verſ. 20. I am in my Father, and you in me, and I in you; inſeparably, indiſſolubly: For himſelf is in the Father, inſeparably, and indiſſolubly; it is impoſſible to pull him out of his being which he hath in the Father; and it is the ſame of our being in him, and therefore conclude of it, He that believeth on him ſhall never die.

The Second Is, that we are called into fellowſhip with Jeſus Chriſt, 1 Cor. 1. 9. That is to be Partakers of all, and the ſame things in our proportion, that Chriſt hath been and is partaker of himſelf, to have all accompliſhed, and fulfilled in us, (as the Phraſe is in Rom. 8. 4.) That was, or is, or ſhall be done in him from firſt to laſt, for this is a declared Rule of the Apoſtle, that if we have fellowſhip with Chriſt in one thing, then we muſt and ſhall have it in all the reſt. Rom. 6. 5. For if we have been planted together in the likeneſs of his Death; we ſhall be alſo in the likeneſs of his Reſurrection. And this is founded on this foregone tranſaction between God and Chriſt; that what Chriſt was, or did, or hath been done to him, it was all as in, and to, and by a common Perſon Repreſenting us therein; which makes all, and every particular thereof (which we are capable of) as well as any part to be legally ours, and indiſſei-ſibly muſt be beſtowed upon in the end, ſo the ſame Apoſtle Argues, Verſ. 6. Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of ſin might be deſtroyed, that henceforth we ſhould not ſerve ſin. Which he ſpeaks not of that imperfect work of mortification begun only in us, but of all of that, which was reckoned as done by Chriſt in our ſtead, perfectly, and compleatly when he hung upon the Croſs; and from thence he comforts them. That if they had the leaſt fruit of what he had done, and wrought in them, they might aſſure themſelves of the whole, ſo Verſ. 8. Now if we be dead with Chriſt, we believe that we ſhall alſo live with him. And why ſo? But becauſe as the 9*th* and 10*th Verſes*, Knowing that Chriſt being raiſed from the dead, dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him: For in that he died, he died unto ſin once, but in that he liveth, he liveth unto God. And therefore you, in whoſe ſtead he did all this, may reckon upon, and may count with your ſelves, the ſame of your ſelves; So it follows, Verſ. 11. Likewiſe reckon ye alſo your ſelves, to be dead indeed unto ſin; but alive unto God, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord. You may build upon it as done, and all this is Sealed up by Baptiſm, Verſ. 3. and 4*th.* which you know, is the Seal more eminently of Regeneration, or Calling, and accordingly adminiſtred but once; And why? But becauſe at our Regeneration, and Calling, (whereof Baptiſm is the Seal) the whole that is to come, is as certainly Sealed up, as that now we are Called, and Baptized. Chap. 9.

CHAP. X.

The Engagement on Christs part for our preservation, that ariseth from his Interest in that Glory, we are by him called into. That it is his Glory, as he is our Head, and communicated to us only, as we are his Members, and therefore He is the first, and Grand Proprietary of it. This Glory is above the natural dues of Creation, and therefore we must be rais'd up into it by another superiour right. The Glory of the immediate vision of God, was only the natural due, and right of Christ God-man. We have our right to it, and the participation of it, only by virtue of our relation to Christ; as it is his Glory, he is engaged to bring us to it, and maintain us in it. This Glory is his, because he bought it with a price; and he would lose his purchase, if we did not come at last to the enjoyment of it. He hath taken Possession of this Glory for us, and therefore will take effectual care, that we be not defrauded of it. His Glory is enlarged, and greatned by the bringing us to Glory, whom he hath thus called unto it; and therefore since his own Interest is so much concerned, he will sufficiently look to it, to preserve, and bring us safe to Heaven.

I PETER V. 10.

Who hath Called us INTO GLORY BY JESUS CHRIST.

THE Concernment of Christ in this Particular is so great, that we may be sure of him, that he will do the utmost to bring us into, and so to keep us until the Actual Possession of this Glory.

I. It is Christ his Own Glory, which we are to be brought into; and it is especially Glory to him to keep us for it; and upon several accounts, the Text only speaks of his Glory, as being the Fathers, who hath Called us into his Glory; but other Scriptures do as expresly term our Glory, the Glory of Christ, by whom we are Called into it; and therefore it full well concerneth him to bring us into it, for else he should lose so much of his own Glory, as would accrew to him, in us, and by us.

Now

Now that Chriſt is the great Proprietary of this Glory, the Scriptures are expreſs. In the Second of the Theſſalonians, 2. 13, 14. The Glory we are called into, is expreſly termed, the Glory of Jeſus Chriſt himſelf; But we are bound to give thanks always to God for you Brethren, beloved of the Lord; becauſe God hath from the beginning choſen you to Salvation, through Sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth, whereunto he called you by our Goſpel, to the obtaining of the Glory of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Alſo John 17. 22. Chriſt aſſumes unto himſelf, both that the Glory he ſhall have, is his Glory, and that it is his gift alſo, as well his Fathers. And the Glory which thou gaveſt me, I have given them, that they may be one, even as we are one. And it is His upon many accounts. I ſhall content my ſelf in this only, with thoſe two Particulars I purſued in that firſt Head. Namely, Chap. 10.

1. That it his Glory as he is CHRIST our Head, the Natural Son of God, dwelling in our Nature; and ſo is communicated to us, as we are Members of, and a Spouſe unto him; and in that reſpect, he is the firſt, and great, and indeed, only Proprietary.

2. As JESUS, or the Redeemer, as who hath purchaſed it, and bought it for us.

1. As Chriſt, that is. as he is God-man, or Man perſonally united to the Son of God, ſo it is his glory by a proper and ſole right. Underſtand this thing aright; To ſee God as we are ſeen by him, to know God as we are known by him, to love God as we are beloved of him: In a word, to ſee the Face of God immediately: Theſe things are above the natural due, either of Men or Angels, by the Law or Covenant of their firſt Creation; and ſo they muſt come to be elected or raiſed up thereto by another Superiour Right. This is evident by this; That if, ſuppoſe the Angels, the higheſt rank of meer Creatures, and created Inhabitants of the Heavens (as for the place of their Station) had been created under this immediate ſeeing the face of God, it is certain then that they had never, nay they could never have faln: I may ſay, None ever ſaw the face of God and died. And the ſtate which the faln Angels had, was the ſame which the Angels had by their firſt Creation in common together: And that the good Angels ſtood when the other fell, was becauſe they were raiſed up unto a ſtate above the Law of their Creation, or any Promiſes that did belong thereto: And they are immutable, becauſe admitted into ſuch a new ſtate made manifeſt in them, and upon them at their ſtanding, and that was by Grace and Election, and not in their natural Covenant. Election (which glorious Prerogative, with difference from thoſe that fell, is attributed to them, 1 Tim. 5. 21.) broke forth, and was diſcovered then upon them, as it is, and doth at our Calling in and upon us. If therefore God beſtows this Glory in an equitable way upon any meer Creatures, though never ſo pure, it muſt be by ſome other right than that of their Creation (ſuppoſe the beſt ſtate that Creatures could be created under) Now what or whoſe right might this be? What Perſon might there be, or was there found, to whom theſe Priviledges aforeſaid of knowing God, and enjoying of him, as in himſelf might naturally belong unto, and of due belong, and whoſe Intereſt with God might be ſuch, as to obtain and procure, through his own perſonal intereſt in God, any meer Creatures participation with him of thoſe high Priviledges which hold purely of Grace? I Anſwer: Theſe belonged naturally and of due unto Chriſt, and to him, as Chriſt, that is, ſuppoſing him united to the Son of God, and conſidering him as the Man now made God's Fellow, by being made one Perſon with the Son of God: For otherwiſe, that this individual Man was united unto the Son of God, that indeed was as meerly of Grace, as our Election is; but ſuppoſe him united once, and thereby we muſt acknowledge him to have been taken up into the Priviledges and Prerogatives of one that was the Natural Son of God: And thus, though a Creature, yet now in right and dues, he was advanced above the rights of any meer Creature, by the Law of its Creation. And take we him as Chriſt ſingly in his Perſon of God-man, there muſt be this difference in his Priviledges, above what is any way the natural due by Creation to any meer Creature whatever; and that therefore, if any of them be be made Partakers thereof, it must be by means and virtue of him, and their relation to him.

Now his right, as a natural due, rose thus, That the only begotten natural Son of God was in the bosom of the Father, and saw and knew God immediately and in himself essentially, and thereby it came to pass by the Personal Union, that there should be an answerable capacity in Christ's Human Nature, so to know God, as no meer Creature by Creation could: For otherwise, there had not been between meer Creatures, by the Law of their Creation, and him, by the Law of this high Union, any difference as to their Priviledges: Whereas now this high Priviledge and Glory became a natural right of that Man united to this Son of God; and so John 1. 18. we find it, No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him. To have God himself to be our Inheritance, as immediately to be enjoyed by us, is the height of Glory, we are called unto (as I shewed;) Now this ariseth to us but at the second hand, and upon a new relation both to God, and unto the Person of the Son of God, namely, of a relation as Sons to God, by union and marriage with this natural Son of God, as an Head and Husband. And thus it is originally only the right of Christ; and ours (suppose us (if you could) the purest Creatures that ever God did or could make) but by a borrowed participation: That like as the Wife is admitted into a Jointure out of the Husbands original Estate, and into all sorts of rights and comforts with the Husband, which she enjoys in a lower degree, and secundarily; so we at second hand are received into the same Glory with Christ.

Two or three Scriptures confirm this.

The first, Rom. 8. 17. And if Children, then Heirs; Heirs of God, and Joynt-heirs with Christ. Observe it, for God himself as immediately enjoyed, to be the Inheritance of the Creatures, this is originally Christ's right, and becomes ours by virtue of being Coheirs with Christ.

2. Answerably you find in the 16*th Psalm* (A Psalm, saith Peter, Acts 2. 25. made so of Christ, as of no other) this is made Christ's Prerogative originally, Verse 5. The Lord is the portion of mine Inheritance, and of my Cup: thou maintainest my lot. Vers. 11. Thou wilt shew me the path of Life: in thy presence is fulness of joy, in thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore. It was Christ brought up that way of enjoying God, with fulness of pleasures at his right hand. And as it is a new way as to sinners, Heb. 10. 20. so to the Creation of God.

A third Scripture is Rom. 15. 7. Wherefore receive you one another, as Christ also received us, to the glory of God. Where this Glory of God is made originally and naturally his Propriety, which he might have kept and received to himself. And if it 'tis said [He received us] secondarily, namely, as brought in by his right unto it, ours is a derived, his the original natural right.

And upon this account (as His) he is engaged to maintain us in it, and bring us to it, as much as an Husband is concerned to maintain his Wives Estate in all things suitable to his own condition, so far as she is any way capable; either her Jointure made out of his own Estate and natural Inheritance, and setled upon her by himself by Marriage, or her Honour, and honourable Estate, as is seen by the Marriage of a Queen unto a King.

Thus by Christ, as Christ, we are called unto Glory; and thus deeply is he concerned in our Glory, and so in his bringing us into it.

Secondly, Consider him as Jesus a Redeemer, or Purchaser of this Glory, and upon that account also it is his Glory: For, Quod emis possis dicere jure tuum, what a man buys or purchaseth, is by just right the Purchasers, and whose he will please to give it to. As I shewed, Christ bought our Calling, our whole time after, and all our Temptations, &c. and with the same price he purchased this Glory, as the end and issue of all, so as he loseth his purchase, the last ultimate Bargain in and of that purchase, if we should not arrive at the enjoyment of it, even as was urged concerning all the former, Ephes. 1. 14. Which is the earnest of our Inheritance, until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his Glory. Look as he in his Person is termed Jesus and Christ, Chriſt, ſo that Glory anſwerably to each, is ſtiled both an Inheritance, as Chriſt, and a purchaſed Poſſeſſion, as Jeſus. Chap. 10.

And do you conſider how he purchaſed it? even by the laying down of all that Glory naturally due to him as Chriſt, and even as it is ſaid, For our ſakes he that was rich became poor, that we might be made rich, by his laying down thoſe Riches of Glory which were his due.

Though he had it by a natural right, as was declared, yet by purchaſe alſo all his Glory became his, as by a new right; for it is no more abſurdity to ſay, Chriſt hath a double right to his Crown in Heaven, than for a Prince to have a natural right to his Throne, and a Title by Conqueſt alſo. This Phil. 2. 6, 7, 8, 9. confirms, Who being in the form of God, thought it no robbery to be equal with God: But made himſelf of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a ſervant; and was made in the likeneſs of men: And being found in faſhion as a man, he humbled himſelf, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the Croſs. Wherefore God alſo hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name. And as to himſelf, ſo in a more full and proper manner for us, even as Jacob ſpeaks, Gen. 48. 22. to Joſeph; Moreover, I have given to thee one portion above thy Brethren, which I took out of the hand of the Amorite, with my Sword and with my Bow. And what Chriſt hath given away, and feoffed us in, as purchaſed with his Blood, and won by Conqueſt, he will be ſure to maintain, as ſetting a value accordingly upon it, even as Jacob there did upon what he had won and conquered.

Thus much for this, that our Glory is HIS, and he the Proprietary of it.

Secondly add, That as he hath called us into it, ſo he hath entred into the poſſeſſion of it for us, as in our names, in our ſtead, and in our behalf, and is gone to Heaven to take up our places, yea, and to keep them for us, and ſo is engaged to keep us for them. It is certain, That as he himſelf, upon both thoſe rights fore-mentioned, entred into Heaven, and poſſeſſeth it; ſo alſo, under the name and inveſtiture of both, that is, of being an Head to us, and Redeemer for us, he is entred into Heaven, as a Fore-runner; and that for us. Heb. 6. 20. Whether the Fore-runner is for us entred, even Jeſus, made an High Prieſt for ever, after the order of Melchiſedec. Mark it, [A Fore-runner for us] to take up Lodgings and Rooms for us againſt we come thither, to keep places for us. Poſſeſſion is (you ſay) eleven Points of the Law, whether taken by your ſelves, or your Fore-runner and Repreſenter; yea, and upon theſe Conſiderations of his being an Head, a Redeemer, it is that 'tis ſaid, Epheſ. 2. 6. That we are made to ſit together in heavenly places in Chriſt Jeſus. It is a point of Honour to him to keep our places for us, and not ſuffer us to be juſtled out; a point of faithfulneſs to make good our Eſtates for us, which he was betruſted with, as it is in any that is ſo truſted, to ſee to it, that thoſe the eſtate intended for, be not fruſtrated of it. And it is certainly Chriſt's Honour to make our places good to us, and ſee us perfectly ſettled in them; we ſit as ſure as he; if he be able to keep his Station, he will be ſure to keep ours.

Thirdly, Add to all theſe, That as he is the great Proprietary Founder and Purchaſer of our Glory, ſo that his glory is encreaſed and enlarged by the bringing us to glory, whom he hath thus called into it. That is, not the Glory, which Chriſt reckons on ſo much, that he ſhould be able to ſay, I did my part in dying for them, though many of them are now in Hell; but that himſelf, being made perfect, through ſufferings, God had many Sons actually brought to glory by him, as the Captain of their Salvation; as in, Heb. 2. 10. As it would be the higheſt glory of a General to bring off and carry his Soldiers through Armies without the loſs of a Man, through great Conflicts and Hazards unto a glory and Victory, and to make them more than Conquerours in the end. And this of Chriſt is ſaid; and this is the very Scope of the Apoſtle there, for Chriſt glories in it, as it follows, Heb. 2. 13. Behold, I and the Children thou haſt given me: When at the day of Judgment he ſhall preſent them to his Father with great Joy, as the Apoſtle Jude ſpeaks: And at that time, when this Book IV. this ſhall be eminently ſpoken by him, he will have all gathered about him: Therefore of that day it is ſaid, in 1 Theſſ. 1. 10. He ſhall come to be glorified in his Saints, and to be admired in all them that believe, in that day. The glory of the day is his, and our glory at that day is His, being glorified in us. 'Twill not be our own glory, as it is ours, that will be counted of by us, as the glory of that day; It will be His glory, as in us, and that will lie in this, that he hath brought unto that glory all which believe; for indeed all our glory makes up a Crown of Glory to him; upon which very ground it is, that Holy Paul, that was zealouſly inflamed for the glory of Chriſt, is emboldned ſo vehemently to pray for their preſervation, whom he wrote thus unto in the next 11*th Verſe.* [Wherefore] we pray always that our God would count you worthy of this Calling, and would fulfill the work of Faith, that is, to keep and preſerve you untill then,) that the Name of our Lord Jeſus may be glorified in you, and you in him. So that the Apoſtle, by what his own intereſt was in the perſeverance of his converted ones, ſhews how infinitely more Chriſts intereſt was in their glory there farther declared to be the end and price of our Calling and ultimate and furtheſt product, and aim of the Grace of God, and of our Lord Jeſus, which are there brought in as the great Effects of all this: So he concludes it, According to the Glory of our God, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, even as here, the God of all Grace which hath called us into his Glory by Jeſus Chriſt.

You ſee clearly from that Scripture, that as our Glory is deſigned but for the greatning of his, ſo alſo our continuing in Grace, to the end that he may be then glorified in us, (having been ſo kept by him) is made a great additional unto his honor: Therefore our preſervation in Grace, and being carried ſafe through Temptations, is of an abſolute concernment to that his being glorified then in us, as without which he ſhould be fruſtrated, and loſe of his deſigned Glory, and as by which on the contrary he will be ſo infinitely exalted.

I obſerve alſo, as to this ſame iſſue and purpoſe, that elſewhere our being kept and preſerved in Grace, runs in our Deeds for the tearm of years of our Lives, after Calling: And the Period thereof to run in the ſtile of keeping us to that day. And to THAT DAY is ſtill expreſt upon that occaſion, either by the day of the Lord Jeſus, or the Coming of the Lord Jeſus, and theſe words of preſerving us, and unto that day, are ſtill joyned, as having ſome ſpecial inference and aim, and influence upon each other. You may obſerve it in all thoſe places where thoſe famous Promiſes to confirm us, preſerve us, keep us, are recorded; and how neither of theſe two were left out in any one of thoſe places: As for Inſtance, 1 Cor. 1. 8. Who ſhall alſo confirm you unto the end, that you may be blameleſs in the day of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. The like, Phil. 1. 6. Being confident of this very thing, that he which hath begun a good work in you, will perform it untill the day of Jeſus Chriſt. And Theſſ. 5. 23. And the very God of peace ſanctifie you wholly: And I pray God your whole Spirit, and Soul and Body be preſerved blameleſs unto the coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

And amongſt other reaſons, why the Period of our being kept, is ſaid to be that latter day rather than the day of death (of which I have elſewhere ſpoken;) And why that latter day alſo (when theſe two are mentioned) is ſtill ſtiled the Day of Chriſt, and the coming of Chriſt, the reaſon thereof is manifeſtly this, becauſe the keeping us unto that day, doth in ſo eminent a manner, and above all things, ſo infinitely tend, and make for the Glory of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt at that day, even this, that we have been carried through all, and preſerved. The diſcovery and laying open of this will make a DAY OUT indeed, as we uſe to ſpeak, a day of Chriſt, His day, a day of Glory unto him, who upon this conſideration of having called us, and preſerved us, will above all other be glorified in all our Glory, and we in him: How ſtrongly then muſt we all conceive Chriſt to be obliged to perform this for us, upon the account in hand, that we are called into Glory by Jeſus Chriſt? If in the ſecond Chapter of the ſame 1 Theſſ. Verſ. 19, 20. Paul, a poor Miniſter, (whoſe care and ſollicitude you may read to have been ſo great in the forgone parts of that Chapter, to keep them in that holy calling they had been brought into by his Miniſtry) thought with himſelf, and ſo deeply conſidered his Converts wrought upon by his Miniſtry, that they would perſevere to that day, and that upon this account, as appears by thoſe words, For what is our hope, or joy, or crown of Rejoycing? Are not even ye in the preſence of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt at his coming? for ye are our glory and joy. How much more may we think that Jeſus Chriſt is concerned (take in all the Intereſts forementioned, that he hath in us and in our glory) to look to it, that we be thus kept? For we may through his Grace towards us, ſay it; that we are his Crown, and his Glory, at that day, and he will then with glorying ſay, Lo here am I, and the Children which thou haſt given me. Lo, I have brought all, and every one of them, ſafe to this other ſide of Glory, and not one of them is periſhed in the way and conduct hitherto. And as a Poor Miniſter ſhall have a Perſonal glory for his perſonal Holineſs, as a Chriſtian, and a ſuperadded glory as a Miniſter, ſo hath Chriſt at that day: One Perſonal, as he is the Son of God dwelling in our Nature, of which John ſpeaks, John 1. 14. We ſaw his glory, as the glory of the only begotten Son of God: And another Additional, as he is Head and Saviour of his Church, which is his body, who are the Glory of Chriſt; as 2 Cor. 8 23. The fulneſs of him that filleth all in all, Epheſ. 1. 23. So as although his Perſonal fulneſs is ſuch, as out from it he filleth all as an Head, yet conſidered as to his Body the Church, that Church is ſaid to be his fulneß: And ſo if he ſhould want but a Member at that day, or any of his Members want a degree of Grace or Glory deſigned unto him, Chriſt ſhould, as in that reſpect, as an Head, be rendred imperfect: For as we are compleat in him; ſo in this he is reciprocally compleat in us; which intereſt of his, is his own ſo highly, that it ſufficiently cauſeth him to ſee unto the Perfecting, ſtrengthning, ſtabliſhing of us. Chap. 10.

And to conclude; If this that follows be found ſo effectual a motive to him, as by what himſelf, John 17. 24. utters, doth appears, Father, I will that they alſo whom thou haſt given me be with me where I am (he loves to ſee them afore him) that they may behold my glory, which thou haſt given me. If this moved him thus to pray for them, that God would keep them from the evil of the World, Verſ. 15. If this moved him to have them kept, and be brought to Glory, that they might (as it were) be but ſpectators and beholders of his Glory; and becauſe he would not be in Heaven alone, but be ſeen and beheld by others; how much more may the intereſts and Conſiderations we have mentioned (eſpecially all of them put together) be judged to have power and efficacy upon his Heart, to preſerve and bring us unto the participation of that Glory himſelf hath called us into?

Make you ſure of Chriſt, and he will be ſure to make you ſure, and your Intereſt in GLORY to you.

CHAP. XI.

The Engagement of God and Chriſt by Promiſe for the carrying on his truly Called Ones through all Temptations, unto Eternal Glory. Theſe Promiſes of perfecting, ſtabliſhing, ſtrengthening, ſettling, as to the time of their Accompliſhment, have not only reſpect to their gradual performance in us here in this Life, but alſo to our being conſummated in the Life Eternal to come.

I PET. V. 10.

The God of all Grace make you [or will make you] PERFECT, STABLISH, STRENGTHEN, SETTLE YOU.

E'Re I enter upon this other Part, I judg'd it meet to give a brief Summary Account of what hath paſſed in the firſt.

The Occaſion of this Paragraph from verſe 8. to verſ. 11.

Our Apoſtle Peter, having himſelf been a great Inſtance of Temptation from Satan, and of falling through that Temptation, and ſo of the danger, that all truly called Saints are in, to fall away, if God and Chriſt come not in to preſerve, and if faln, to recover them: And Jeſus Chriſt having thereupon ſet him up as a common and publick Example, of both the Danger and Preſervation, did purpoſely, and as it were prophetically forewarn him thereupon; 1. How that Satan had a deſire to winnow him: And, 2ly, that He had prayed that his faith fail not: And, 3ly, Commanding him, that when he ſhould be converted and reſtored again, he ſhould take opportunity to forewarn, ſtrengthen, and confirm the reſt of his Brethren.

This Command of his God (and ours) he faithfully performs in the cloſe of this Epiſtle, unto all the Saints in the World, and that in words conformable unto that which was uſed in that Command of Chriſt, that we might diſcern this to have been in the Apoſtles eye, and his very intent.

1. In giving warning to all the Brotherhood, of Satan's going up and down, ſeeking to devour, verſe 8. Even as he had deſired of God to winnow him.

2. As Chriſt had ſaid, Thy Brethren, ſo he here admoniſheth All the Brotherhood, that they muſt be for ſome while tempted, as in verſe 9. ſome way or other, as he had been.

3. In the very ſame word, wherein Chriſt had expreſt what he ſhould do, to and for his Brethren; [ſtrengthen thy Brethren;] The very ſame word doth Peter uſe here; adding withal, The God of all Grace ſhall ſtrengthen you, after awhile, even as I was.

So as the words, in the ſcope of them, are Peter's Conſolatory to all Saints, or the Publick Faith of Heaven, namely of God and Chriſt, given to conduct us through all Temptations and Sufferings ſafely to Heaven.

The mannagement and carriage of my handling in the foregon firſt Part, hath been reduced to theſe two Heads: The firſt, The Ingagements of God and Chriſt to perfect, ſtrengthen, ſtabliſh us, unto a bringing us to glory, maugre all Temptations: The Second thing hath been the Arguments that that forepart

part of the Verſe affords, to work in us a ſtedfaſtneſs of Faith, (as the next words have it) or a Security, that God by Chriſt will carry us on: This hath been the way and courſe of my handling theſe words; and that ſo, as all thoſe Arguments have iſſued in comfortable Supports and Incouragements, that God will carry us effectually on unto Eternal Glory. Chap. 11.

Which Arguments, drawn out of thoſe words, have been, 1. From God's Intereſt herein: 2. Jeſus Chriſts.

I. Gods.
1. That God is the God of Grace.
2. That he is a God of all Grace.
3. That he hath called us: And therein I ſhewed that the true and perfect work in Calling, is ſuch a work, as he will certainly carry it on.
4. That he hath called [U S] Us, whom he called according to his purpoſe, with difference from others, whom he leaves to fall away; having wrought but an Imperfect work of Calling in them.
5. That he calls us into Glory.
6. Into Eternal Glory.
7. Into his Eternal Glory.

And how all theſe afford Arguments to confirm our Faith, and aſſure us that God will certainly carry us through: This I have ſtill ſhewn all along; and it hath been the burden (as we ſay) or Concluſion of each of them all.

II. The Second is from Jeſus Chriſt; The God of all Grace, who hath called us by Jeſus Chriſt, &c.

I come to the Second Part, The Promiſe of Performance in all this, which is contained in the latter part of the Verſe.

Αὐτὸς, He, (or the ſame God whom he had thus deſcribed;) after that ye have ſuffered a little, (or) a little while, (make you perfect, or) will make you perfect; will ſtabliſh, ſtrengthen, ſettle you.

There are two things to be attended herein.

1. The neceſſary Pre-requiſite, by God's Ordination, to precede the performance of the Promiſe, After ye have ſuffered a while, which is ſpoke by way of Limitation to the full performance of the Promiſe.

2. The Promiſe it ſelf, ſet forth in four words: He will Perfect, Stabliſh, Strengthen, Settle you.

I. I ſpeak firſt to the Promiſe: For though in the current of the words, it comes in laſt; yet that is the ultimate thing intended: That other of Suffering a while, is but a Circumſtantial requiſite thereunto.

I ſhall unfold it by Queſtions and Anſwers; and then by particular Expoſitions of thoſe four words, which contain the Materials of the Promiſe, and do expreſs the things promiſed.

Queſtion 1. Whether theſe words be a Prayer of the Apoſtles unto God, or a direct promiſe from God? And whether to be read, God ſhall, and that he will perfect, &c. or that it be a deſire or wiſh of his, that God would perfect, &c. Thoſe that are for making it a Prayer of the Apoſtle for them, ſay, that here he begins the Concluſion of his Epiſtle, which in other Epiſtles is uſual with a Prayer, ſhutting up the whole: But that is a miſtake; for, 1. As Gerard well obſerves, He brings in theſe words, as a new Particular Argument of Encouragement, ſpecially directed unto and againſt Satans Temptations, ſpoken of verſe 9. And ſo refers not to the matter of the whole Epiſtle, but ſingly to this. And Secondly, He begins the Concluſion of the whole Epiſtle afterwards, in verſe 14. But eſpecially in that, 3ly, That Particle, But God, &c. (with which he begins this Clauſe) ſhews it to be a Promiſe of Whether the words be in the Indicative Future Tenſe, καταρτίσει, God ſhall perfect, and ſo of the reſt or in the Optative, καταρτίσαι: there are Copies for either reading; and Interpreters for either: The like Query hath befaln other places in the New Teſtament, as Phil. 4. 9. See Calvin on thoſe word; but particularly for this reading it here in the Future. Beza mentions three of his Copies for it Robert Stephens the like: The two Spaniſh Copies have it ſo: Likewiſe the ancient Manuſcript ſent by Cyril into England, ſo reads it: The Vulgar Latin Tranſlation, and Prosper de vocat. Gentium, cap. 4. reads it, as doth the Vulgar; and urgeth perſeverance from the word, as being promiſes. As for Interpreters there are many ſo underſtand it, that it is a Promiſe; and divers take in both to be a Prayer, and a Promiſe too, as Gerard, Lorinus, &c.

Book IV.

Relief, againſt the Temptations ſpoken of afore; for thereby he poſitively declares how God would oppoſitely ſtrike in, and prevent Satan our Adverſary in his malice, and all his attempts againſt us; he promiſing ſeaſonably to ſuccour and ſtrengthen us againſt him: And it is as if he had ſaid, But God hath took order and care about us, and faithfully promiſed to help us, &c. whereas if only it had been intended as a Prayer of his, This [But] God had not come in ſo properly; yea, it had been ſuperfluous; he might only and barely have ſaid, The God of all Grace ſtrengthen you, &c. and left out his [But:] And 4ly, That Deſcription of God that follows that [But;] The God of all Grace that hath called, &c. ſo largely premiſed, though indeed it be a juſt ground of Prayer for theſe things, yet deſerved, ſhall I ſay required, to make Promiſes of theſe that follow; and what was premiſed of God's being the God of all Grace, &c. was to ſtamp a Sanction upon them, they being ſo full, ſo compleat an Head of Topicks to make Arguments of, to confirm and aſſert the certainty that God will and ſhall perform theſe; ſpecially when I conſider and compare this with other places, where the ſame words that are here uſed, are uttered Promiſe-wiſe, and that upon leſs grounds premiſed, than what we find here in the very point of Perſeverance, which is the ſcope of the words, as in 2 Theſſ. 3. 3. But the Lord is faithful, who ſhall ſtabliſh you, and keep you from evil: Here is the ſame word, that is here the ſecond, and it is rendred in the Future, and is a Promiſe; as alſo that there adjoyned, ſhall keep you, with theſe here, and both Promiſes concerning the ſame thing, Perſeverance; and the ſame in ſenſe and effect that theſe here; and they are both Promiſes that concern Perſeverance as theſe do: The like, Phil. 1. 6. Being confident of this very thing, that he which hath begun a good work in you, will perform it until the day of Jeſus Chriſt. Which is uttered in the future, as a Promiſe, he was confident, was certain of the performance of; why therefore ſhould not thoſe Copies that made it ſo here, be eſteemed Genuine? Upon this further Argument it is, that the Deſcription that precedes, forementioned, The God of all Grace, who hath called, &c. and the reſt that follow, ſpeak higher, fuller, and ſtronger engagements of God, that He will do thus, than what in theſe places now mentioned, did precede unto thoſe Promiſes there; where but one Attribute ſingly in each, is made the Gage, viz. Faithful: And therefore will in the one, who hath begun a good work, is ſhall in the other: But here All the Grace that is in God, (that is, the Original of that faithfulneſs) who hath called, (anſwerable to that, who hath begun a good work, in the other,) and then ſuperadding, hath Called us into his Eternal Glory: And laſtly, The emphaſis of which hath been opened, He calling in the Engagement of his Son, as his Surety too, BY Jeſus Chriſt, (which hath been opened; theſe thus accumulated, and heaped up in this place, ſuitably, and juſtly required, (as I ſaid at firſt, if in thoſe other, or any other place) no leſs than that he ſhould make a promiſe of them, rather than meerly a prayer of his own for them: And thus underſtood, there is an even line runs through the whole, and connects thoſe firſt words, God of all Grace, unto the latter, will ſtrengthen: And to that purpoſe, inſerts αὐτος, (which you find in like manner, Phil. 1. 6.) that he the ſame God, that is, a God of all Grace, promiſeth he will perform all theſe, argues it not to be Precatory only, but Aſſertory, and a moſt emphatical Binding, Sealing up of the Promiſe of it; and to be a ſpeaking of God to them, rather than a ſpeaking to God for them.

Σπείξει.

Ἐπιτελέσει, He will finiſh: It is in ſubſtance of ſignification, the ſame. Beza on Matt. 21. 16.

Ubi Θ hic magnam habet emphaſin Gerard, in Locum.

Gerard farther obſerves out of the following Verſe, that hereupon He concludes with a Doxology, Verſ. 11. To him be Glory, and Dominion, for ever, and ever Amen: Becauſe that theſe benefits (here mentioned Verſ. 10.) in theſe four words, were ſo certain to be performed, that he gives thanks to God aforehand: And thoſe that would have the words a prayer, (ſays he) yet would have him give this Glory thereupon; becauſe God had heard his prayer, and had aſſured him that he would perform it: Moreover the ſame Author ſays, That becauſe the words might be taken, either for a prayer, or for a promiſe; that therefore it is indifferent whether to put in [ei ſit] To whom Glory is, as aſſuring us, and confirming the forgoing Promiſes, or [eſto] To whom be Glory: Wiſhing it, as it is a prayer: And further, the ſcope being, (ſays he) to aſſure them them of the performance of them, the Apoſtle mentions his power, above any other Attribute; So ſignifying, that as he had begun with Gods being the God of all Grace, Verſ. 10. So in the cloſe, that his power being by Grace engaged for the performance; all Glory be to God of ſo infinite a Grace, and Omnipotent a power. He thought meet not to let ſo great a matter paſs by unveil'd unto. He ſtrikes Sail to that, to whom be Glory for ever; and to do this upon this eminent occaſion, is uſual with him in his Epiſtle; ſo great a matter is the carrying on his Called Saints effectually unto Salvation: Thus likewiſe in Heb. 13. 21. Make you perfect, by working in you, the good pleaſure of his will, to whom be Glory, &c. So he Crowns it at the concluſion: The like in Rom. 16. 26. Epheſ. 3. 17. Jude 24. But that which comes fully home to a correſpondence with this my Text, is, his aſcribing the like Glory to God, upon the occaſion of Gods effectual carrying on his own Salvation: Which he firſt utters in the future, [The Lord ſhall] in the ſame manner as here, The Lord ſhall deliver me from every evil work, and will preſerve me to his Heavenly Kingdom, 2 Tim. 3. 18. And then ſhuts and binds the promiſe of it up, with this Doxology, To whom be Glory, for ever, and ever; Amen: Juſt as here, the God of Grace, will make you perfect, &c. To whom be Glory, and power (for his ſo doing) for ever. Laſtly, this His for ever, and ever, ſtretcheth it ſelf beyond all Times, and Ages: Even to the length of Eternity; conſidering that his Grace, and Love, out of which he doth all theſe, will be continued to his own, during that length of Evers: And will be in Heaven for ever acknowledged by the Saints, for his having ſo preſerved them, and brought them thither, to be Glorified with him, by his Eternal Glory: Which he therefore do's mention, as that he had called them into. Chap. 11.

But this ſmall difference, (if it ſhould prove any,) may be eaſily reconciled: For if it be a prayer, it tacitely implies a promiſe; there is never a prayer, but it includes, and ſuppoſeth a Promiſe, as the ground, and foundation of it.

If any Quere, but how can the conſtruction of the words, bear both a prayer, and a promiſe? I Anſwer; That if that Reading it in the Indicative future, be received as Genuine; it may well bear the one, and th'other: Nam ſicut Hebræi futura pro præceptivis uſurpant; ſic & interdum pro optativis: As Eſtius, upon the words, hath reſolved it.

Only I muſt ſtill adhere to this, that the words ſhould rather be intended for a direct promiſe from God, this is more his aim; ſeeing it is to work confidence in them, and to aſſure them of the performance: And it is certain, that a direct, and poſitive promiſe, doth conduce more to comfort, and ſtrengthen, (as Chriſt Commanded him,) His Brethren, than a prayer of the Apoſtles own, a ſingle Perſon, though an Apoſtle, and never ſo Holy a man: And was far more aſſuring of the performance, eſpecially when fortified with ſuch Superexcelling Elogies, and decipherings of God, The God of all Grace, who hath called us into Eternal Glory. From the firſt of his Calling Us; This ſame God will perfect, &c. on purpoſe, 1. To confirm us, ſo as we ſhould no way doubt of it.

The Second Queſtion, may be about the time of perfecting, when theſe Promiſes are intended to be fulfilled: Whether during this Life only; and ſo to carry us through all ſufferings whatever; or after this life wholly ended?

Some Interpreters, would have the fulfilling of them, to be in Heaven, after all the ſufferings of this life perfectly ended: And the Syriac, ſtretcheth them in æternum, to Eternity: Others are for the performance of them during this life, with ſome ſufferings paſt through: I take in All, and do ſtate, and compound the whole matter thus comprehenſively. Firſt, that as for this life, during the term of it, theſe promiſes are begun to be fulfilled in us, upon, and with ſufferings ſtill all along accompanying them: And ordered ſo, as ſtill after ſufferings running along, God will and doth interpoſe ſtrengthnings, ſtabliſhments, according as our ſufferings, and needs are: Yet as a ſpecial favour often vouchſafed, after we have been exerciſed with ſufferings, inward, or outward, for I take them both: For ſome times paſt in our lives, he doth give us, though not a freedom, yet a more ſetled, eſtabliſhed frame of Spirit, in reſpect to, and in compariſon of what we were moſt ſufferers in: This, for this life: And Secondly, for the other; that having carried us through them, to the end of our days; He then to be ſure, promiſeth to Crown us, with the performance of all theſe in a more Tranſcending manner in Heaven.

I. As to Gods performing theſe in this life, as hath been ſtated. The opening each particular of the four, will abundantly clear, that the more frequent uſe of all theſe words do intend it: Beza runs ſo far into this ſenſe, as he ſeems to limit the words thereunto; however that is certain, which he ſays, that the Apoſtle here treats of what is during our race in this preſent life: I might for the preſent Inſtance in each of the words; καταρτίσει, The firſt word which we Tranſlate, will make perfect: It is uſed of advancing the Saints to further degrees of Faith, and Holineſs, after a while, in this life, 1 Theſ. 3. 10. To perfect that which is lacking in your Faith, Heb. 13. 21. Make you perfect in every good work; (as the Apoſtle prays there for them:) to do his will, and it is added, working in you, what is well pleaſing in his ſight: All which are a doing, whilſt we are in this life. 2. The next word, στηρίξει, Tranſlated ſtabliſh, its the ſame word which Chriſt uſed to Peter, in that his command to confirm the Brethren: And that in relation to Temptation, and after falls; for it was upon occaſion of Peters own fall, as hath been opened: God having eſtabliſhed him after his Fall, he bids him to eſtabliſh, ſtrengthen his Brethren: And the like in 1 Theſſ. 3. 2. To ſtabliſh you, and to comfort you, concerning your faith: And this in relation to Temptation, Verſ. 5. leſt by ſome means the Tempter have tempted you: Likewiſe the Third word, σθενώσει, which imports ſtrength againſt weakneſſes, which we are incident to in this life: And anſwers unto giving ſtrength in the inner man, Epheſ. 3. 17. Then the laſt word, θεμελιώσει; He will found us, as the word ſignifies, namely, in faith in Chriſt, and Gods love; theſe are ſpoken of as in this life, apparently, as Coloſ. 1. 23. and in the ſame, Epheſ. 3. 17.

This for the import of the words, that they relate unto this life: But for the manner how, and in what caſes they are fulfilled in this life; (which I put into my ſtating the Aſſertion,) of that hereafter.

II. As for the other life, which was the Second thing propoſed, I do not wholly limit the extent of the words to this life, ſo as to exclude their reach to Heaven.

1. 'Tis certain, that the like promiſes, that are in effect the ſame which there do reach us, and accompany us till they have ſet us in Heaven, 1 Cor. 1. 8. Who ſhall confirm you to the end: That is, of your lives, yea, perform or fulfil it until the day of Jeſus Chriſt, Phil. 1. 6. The day of Judgement.

2. Some of theſe words, if not all of them, ſerve to expreſs our fixed condition after death, in Heaven: The firſt word, καταρτίσει, is uſed to expreſs the compleat finiſhing, perfect conſummation of Gods works; ſo of the firſt Creation, Heb. 11. 3. The Worlds were framed by the word of God: (framed is the ſame word,) and you may read it perfected, if you will: That is, He compleated both Worlds, in this perfect ſetled frame they now exiſt in; which although they were by peace-meal framed in ſix days, yet we ſee them they are brought unto this perfection; and by faith believe they were thus made compleat by the word of God, which Gen. 2. 1. at the concluſion of the work, tells us, Thus the Heavens, and the Earth were finiſhed, and all the Hoſt of them, and ſo finiſhed, as nothing can be added to the perfection of them: And as this word is thus uſed of the firſt Creation, Heb. 11. ſo it is, and may be moſt aptly applied to the Second Creation, or workmanſhip in Chriſt Jeſus: Which in this life is a framing, (as the World was in ſix days), by degrees, but ſhall be finiſhed, and made compleat in Heaven: And it is evident that the word, καταρτισιν, doth ſignifie both a gradual framing of a piece of work, and then afterwards terwards ſully to make it entire, and conſummate every way, ſo as nothing can be added to the perfection of it, as Criticks have obſerved: and we may take Heb. 12. 23. to confirm that of our full perfecting in Heaven, The Spirits of juſt men made perfect, or Spirits conſummated, finiſhed, as to Holineſs, and Righteouſneſs: And the word, καταρτίσει here, doth in the ultimate ſenſe of it comply with that in Heb. 12. 23. ſuch a perfecting as brings to a conſummation.

Τετελειωμένων: The word καταρτίσειν there, doth in the ultimate ſignification of it accord with that τελειόω uſed there: So Beza on Matth. 21. 16. καταρτίσω, idem quod ἐτέλεσας: τὸ ἄρτιον, idem hic valet, quod Τέλειον: Ita ut nihil deſit, neque ſuperſit: In Matth. 21. 16. Perfeciſti laudem: i. e. Summam eſſe inſigniter declaraſti: See Capel, alſo on Heb. 13. 21.

The Second word, στηρίξει, Tranſlated Eſtabliſh, is applied, 1 Theſ. 3. ult. That your hearts may be [eſtabliſhed] in Holineſs, before God even our Father, at the coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, with all his Saints: For indeed notwithſtanding all the Glory our ſeparate Souls ſhall have had before; yet when we ſhall have every thought, word, &c. of our whole lives laid open, and made known before all the World, (as at that day they ſhall be,) our Hearts will need a moſt ſpecial ſtrong ſulchrum, ſupport, and ſuſteiner (as the word imports,) to eſtabliſh, or bear up their Hearts, before the Great God, and all the Saints: And yet withal take this in, that it is that exerciſe of Holineſs only, which we ſhall attain in this life; by which Chriſt will ſtabliſh our hearts in the Day of that great Account: And it is not that Holineſs our ſouls ſhall have had whilſt they were ſeparate, though that only will be perfect: That Holineſs between Death and Judgment, the Apoſtle there intends not, nor ſpeaks of to be that which ſhould be the matter of ſupport, and eſtabliſher of our ſouls, at that Day: No, he ſingles forth that Holineſs we had here, though imperfect, conſiſting in ſincerity, and truth: As appears by the Coherence with the Verſe afore, Verſ. 12. The Lord make you to encreaſe, and abound in love: Then follows, [To the End] He may eſtabliſh your hearts in holineſs at that Day: So as we ſee it is a work which God doth for us after this life, as well as here; even as in like manner, to forgive ſins, and to ſhew mercy, is ſaid to be at that Day: Yet ſtill ſeeing the matter, whereby we ſhall then be ſtabliſht, is that Holineſs we obtain here; hence therefore we may ſee God can as well, and doth by the ſame Holineſs, made evident, to our hearts by his Spirit, ſtabliſh our hearts in this life: And ſo the Promiſe fitly ſerves to both, that God will ſtabliſh us in this World, as in the World to come, though more imperfectly here.

3. The laſt word here, which ſignifies to found, or ſettle, as in, and upon a foundation; (of which afore,) it falls out that this very word, in Heb. 12. 23. lately cited, is in one Copy, and that an eminent Original Copy found, and uſed to expreſs the Conſummation, and Perfection of Juſt men in Heaven; and ſignifying fundatorum, the Spirits of Juſt men founded: Which Reading, Beza thought worthy to put this Gloſs upon, [of Spirits founded,] ſays He, that is, of them who are out of all danger of vacillation, (or change by frailty,) beeing now actually received into that City, which in the foregoing Chapter, Verſ. 10. Is ſaid to have foundations; (which is Anſwerable to that word, founded:) By which it appears, that the word it ſelf may, and will fitly refer to that Heavenly unalterable Eſtate, without any poſſibility of turning in Heaven: So as although it ſhould not have been the very Original Word, there written by the Apoſtle himſelf; yet we ſee the word it ſelf, may fitly ſerve to that ſenſe, and therefore may be well ſo underſtood in my Text.

As for that other word in the Text, placed before this, viz. δυνάμει; which ſignifies to give ſtrength, power, vigour; though I find it not directly uſed to ſet out our Heavenly ſtate; yet it being oppoſed unto all ſort of weakneſs, impotency and want of ſtrength, and vigour, ἀδύνατα, without ſtrength, Rom 5. And ſo imports the cure of weakneſs, or a reſtauration from a weakly condition or a ſtate of impotency unto perfect ſtrength and vigour: And therefore the one may be judged of by the other; for the poſitive is known always by its privative, and è Contrà: And I finding not only the Spiritual weakneſs, and impotency in the ſoul, to be ſtiled ἀσθένεια; (as that, when we were without ſtrength, Chriſt died for us, Rom. 5.) but the ſtate of the body by death (that laſt laſt enemy of ours to be yet deſtroyed,) to be likewiſe expreſſed by that very word, 1 Cor. 15. 43. It is ſown in weakneſs, that is, it is ſown a dead Body: viribus caſſum; utterly void of all ſtrength; and oppoſitely [But it is raiſed in power] endued, filled, and furniſhed with all abilities of power, even ſuch as the Angels have, who excel in ſtrength: And ours ſhall be made a Spiritual Body, (as 'tis there,) finding alſo Chriſt (our pattern) in his death on the Croſs, and his oppoſite Life in Heaven; and his Reſurrection, to be ſet out by the ſame words, 2 Cor. 13. 4. Though he was Crucified in weakneſs, yet he lives by the power of God: And we (ſays the Apoſtle there, as in conformity to him) though we are weak, yet being in him, we ſhall one day live with him; namely, in Glory, by the power of God: And finding, as all grant, and 'tis certain, that the word here in our Text imports a renewal of ſtrength Spiritual in our ſouls in ſome degree in this life, in oppoſition to Spiritual weakneſſes of the ſoul, which are our ſufferings; therefore I thought, why might not, or ſhould not this word of the Promiſe here, reach unto that Perfection in power, and Glory, which are in ſubſtance all one, with the import of this word here?

And when further conſidered, how this is moſt proper, and pertinent unto the Apoſtles Scope in the whole Paragraph; his direct purpoſe, being to hearten them againſt all ſorts of Sufferings, whether from Temptations, and Infirmities in their Souls; or from Perſecutions upon their outward man; againſt which, there is not a ſtronger Cordial, than theſe Promiſes of that Glorious Eſtate, which both Body, and Soul ſhall have in the other World: And ſeeing the body, and outward man hath a great ſhare in ſufferings for Chriſt's ſake; we may well think, that amongſt ſo many words heaped up for their comfort, one of them at leaſt, ſhould be found to glance at that State; yea, more directly to aim at the Reward, and reparations made to the Body at the Reſurrection: And ſeeing that other Apoſtle doth give this very Title of ἀσθένειαι, Infirmities; unto that large Catalogue, and Inventory of ſufferings in his Body, in the Second of Corinthians, the Eleventh, and Twelfth Chapters, again, and again; and at laſt ſums up the ſorts of them, in Chap. 12. 10. under that denomination; Therfore I take pleaſure in infirmities, in reproaches, in neceſſities, in perſecutions, in diſtreſſes for Chriſt's ſake: for when I am weak, then am I ſtrong: And that this word here Tranſlated ſtrengthen, is the direct oppoſite unto all ſuch Infirmities, we may I ſay, very readily conclude, that it extends to the qualifications of power, and glory; which the body ſhall have at the Reſurrection, in lieu of thoſe Infirmities, as a recompence of thoſe Sufferings; conſidering withal, how the Reſurrection of the Body from death, is expreſſed in the ſame words, 1 Cor. 15. 43. as hath been ſhewn.

Beza mentions this Objection: That if the Glory of Heaven were aimed at, that one firſt word had been ſufficient, [will make you perfect:] He needed not have heaped up ſo many more.

1. Anſw. If indeed that Glory in the perfection of it, had altogether, and alone been intended, this might have had ſome force in it: But the Apoſtles ſcope is, to comprehend what is in this life, gradually a performing in us; and then at laſt to be conſummated in the other: And there being many ſeveral ſorts of Sufferings, Temptations, and infirmities of ſoul in this life, there needed a multiplication of comfortable words, more than one, for our more abundant Conſolation: Which comes in the next Queſtion, to be ſpoken to.

2. Anſw. Our Miſeries, and Sufferings in this life, being many and various; the bleſſedneſs of Heaven it ſelf, is ſet out to us by ſeveral words, oppoſite to thoſe miſeries; and expreſſed to be a freedom from them, ſo to comfort us particularly againſt each: As when 'tis ſaid, All tears ſhall be wiped from our eyes: They ſhall hunger and thirſt no more: The Inhabitant ſhall not ſay he is ſick, and the like: and we uſe to comfort our ſelves with the privation of, and deliverance from ſuch miſeries, and therefore it is termed Redemption, and Salvation, Glory and Immortality, fulneſs of pleaſures, and the like: And ſo here, Amaking us perfect; in oppoſition unto our imperfection in this Life: A Stabliſhing, in ſtead of unſettlement, and aptneſs to change; (as in this Life:) A ſtrengthning us with a Glorious power; In reſpect of thoſe weakneſſes we are here obnoxious unto. Chap. 11.

Thus much for clearing the ſecond Particular; That theſe words do concern our State after this World: Which I have been the larger in, becauſe, if on the contrary hand, we ſhould limit theſe Promiſes only to what God doth in this Life, there would be this objection, which I have not known otherwiſe how to ſolve, than by what hath been now aſſerted: For it might be ſaid, if theſe Promiſes be to relieve us againſt ſufferings, &c. and as to be performed only in this Life, and performed after we have ſuffered a while; How is it that Perſecutions, and outward Sufferings continue, and abide upon the Righteous, even unto death? And encreaſe perhaps more, and more: Yea, and ſufferings from Satan, and Temptations to ſin, continue ſo long, and ſharp, unto ſome, even throughout their lives? And if ſo, how doth God perform theſe his Promiſes? If (as the Apoſtle ſays) they have hope only, for relief in this Life? Hence therefore I was enforced, out of tenderneſs to any that are in ſuch a caſe, to the end of their lives to entertain, and take in, that other Opinion mentioned, That they ſhall be accompliſh't in the other World to the utmoſt; though in this World the performance of them is ſo ſlender; yet with a ſure, and ſafe carrying on the Soul through them all, to an Overcoming at leaſt, by continuing ſo as their faith fail not, which Chriſt in his Speech to Peter prayed for: And to continue Faith and Obedience, though with ſome conflicts and prevailings at times of Temptations, is yet by Chriſt himſelf interpreted to be an Overcoming when it continues to the End.

But, my ſpecial deſign upon theſe four words, Is to open, and apply them, as reliefs againſt the Temptations of our Souls, whilſt we are in this Life; without any further inſiſting on their Accompliſhment in Heaven: Which is an univerſal and general reſerve for all Souls; but particularly of thoſe, upon whom a continuance of their Temptations in this Life, with any extremity, ſhall happen, to abide to the laſt of their days; that however then, amends and repairs will be made for all: I therefore have limited this next proſecution, unto Soul Temptations whilſt we are in this World.

And indeed, even thoſe Interpreters who reſtrain the Sufferings Intended by Peter, in the former verſes, unto Perſecutions; yet are fain to take in the Temptations, and ſpiritual Infirmities of Mens Souls, which they are incident to in their undergoing Perſecutions; and often in ſeeking to eſcape them: And to underſtand theſe to be Promiſes, for ſupplies, and ſupports againſt ſuch failures, and incidencies: And theſe are of far greater danger and dammage, than barely the outward Perſecutions themſelves, ſimply conſidered: So as the comfort in theſe Promiſes, muſt be underſtood chiefly to reſpect the Evils which Mens Souls are obnoxious unto, other Interpreters, reading with the Vulgar Latin, but three words, in ſtead of four; (the Vulgar Latin putting the two middle words into one word, as all one:) Would have them intended directly for our overcoming our Three Enemies in this Life, The World; the Fleſh, and the Devil; in reſpect of their tempting us to ſin: Others, to be three ſeveral Salves, or Remedies; for the three Eminent powers of our Souls; as they are vitiated, and corrupted: As namely; The Underſtanding, Will, and Paſſions: Others to diſtinguiſh them, apply them ſeverally; one to the Luſts of the Eye, the other to the Luſts of the Fleſh, the other, to the pride of Life: As John, hath ſummed them up: I confeſs I like not theſe their diſcriminations of them; yet this I make uſe of, that they agree with me in this; that they reſpect our Souls, and the corruption, and evil of them and Temptations incident to them: And I would not confine them unto the miſchiefs incident to Mens Souls, by reaſon of, or from outward perſecutions only: But I would extend them unto all ſorts of Soul Temptations whatſoever; one as well as another, ſuitably unto the Interpretations I have, and ſhall give: That by ſufferings, Temptations of all ſorts are to be intended by the Apoſtle

See Lorinus, who hath ſum'd up the ſeveral Interpretations the moſt briefly, and fully of any.

Cornelius à Lapide in his Interpretations of the firſt word χαταρτίσει, ut ſi quid in patientia, vitio impatientiæ, & puſillanimitatis ſit læſum, inſtauret, &c.

CHAP. XII.

Whether these four words, PERFECT, STABLISH, STRENGTHEN, SETTLE YOU, intend one and the same in a various manner of Expression, or whether they have severally a peculiar import answering particularly to Temptations of a differing sort to which we are obnoxious. The meaning of the word Perfect explained: Sometimes it is understood of the compleat accomplishment of a work, when applyed to the work of Grace, as here it denotes the supplying or making up of Imperfections and Wants: And that it imports either the adding further degrees of Perfection unto the imperfect work of Grace first begun in us; or it reaches the Case of lapsed Christians, and signifies their being recovered and restored again. That there are such Cases of Backsliding, which is not a total Apostacy. To make such faln Souls, is to repair what was torn and broken in them by their Sin. Those who fall into grosser sins are made perfect again by a new Conversion.

A Third Question will be, Whether for our support against all such Temptations, the accumulation, or heaping up of so many words, (four) should be intended by the Holy Ghost, as signifying only one and the same thing, and so to be made up, so many Ingredients, into one Dose, as a Catholicon, or general Medicine and Antidote, which may altogether be applyed, and taken for relief against any, or all Temptations, as they befall us? Or whether there may not be some specifick, particular, distinct sort of Cordial in one more than another, in reference unto some special sorts of Temptations, as they shall occur to us.

Some Interpreters do make them up into one Bolus, or Lump, and to import but one and the same thing; and yet to be thus multiplyed into four, for an exaggeration, (as their word is) or more vehement and deep asserting the same; to shew, quam magnæ difficultatis sit, nos perseverare, of how great difficulty the matter of our Perseverance is: I would further say, that this is done to the end, to give all Believers full assurance of Faith, that God will infallibly perform it, he would never have made so many words about it else: And truly, if there were found no other, or further end and use herein, this favourable Construction might content us, That God should give four words for one, when one might have been enough; it argues he would have us have abundant Consolation from it: That as Lawyers multiply words, though to one and the same purpose, thereby to make all sure, and to bind, and fetch in, and comprehend all, that there might be no exception, nor any doubt left; so here

Quatuor illa verba pene Synonima. Affins. Hæc omnia idem vel quasi idem sunt. A Lapide. And whoever will read Gerard's Allegation of the use of these several words in the Septuagint, will find their significations much do run into one another, and prove in sense much one and the same. See his Comment. in loc. p. 794, 795. And A Lapide, and Lorinus do cite Gagnæus on the word; Non tantum verbis multis idem significantibus exaggerari.

here the Apoſtle: which, if there were no peculiar diſtinct meaning to each word, had been a great ſecurity unto us: A fourfold ſecurity and obligation, by four words: And the rather, becauſe whereas Jeſus Chriſt our Lord had, in his Command to Peter, mentioned but one of theſe words, στήριξον τοὺς ἀδελφούς σου, ſtabliſh, or confirm thy Brethren; and no other. And the Apoſtle enlarges to four, when he comes to perform the Command. By one word of God was Heaven and Earth on the firſt day made, and founded upon nothing: And ſure, ſo many words as theſe may well ſerve to found, ſtabliſh, and ſettle our unbelieving, unſtable hearts, in this ſo great a matter of concernment to us. Chap. 12.

Yet over and beſides this general Uſe to be made hereof, I deſire it may be throughly ſearched into, what peculiar Confortatives and Cordials, in reference unto particular Caſes in our Lives, from Sins and ſpecial ſorts of Temptations, the ſingular and proper import of each, in their uſe, in the New Teſtament will afford us.

I dare not undertake to demonſtrate the Particulars of this; How the proper and diſtinct ſignifications of them, of one from another, do reſpectively promiſe, and ſpeak an anſwerable proper relief to any and every Temptation in their particular variety; although I am apt to think with Gerard, That not only whatever belongs to our Salvation, (namely, after Calling) is ſummarily comprehended in theſe four words: But further, That all ſorts of Temptations whatever, are reducible, and might be referred under ſome one of theſe Heads of Succours and Remedies: For, it is apparent that each of theſe words do not ſimply expreſs a poſitive Promiſe, as of ſtrengthning, making perfect, &c. but do connotate the privative, or want in us, of the thing promiſed, for the uſe of which the Promiſe is intended; as that he will ſtrengthen us againſt weakneſs; he will perfect us out of Imperfection, and againſt former Imperfection: (As in the Prophet Iſaiah, Chap. 61. 3. He will appoint beauty for aſhes: And verſe 7. For ſhame you ſhall have double, &c.) The Remedies here do intimate the Maladies they are the Cures of, and out of which he promiſeth deliverance.

Summatim, quicquid ad ſalutis noſtræ principium, medium, & finem pertinet; illud omne Petrus quatuor hiſce verbis comprehendit.

And for the genuine meaning of each, I take this Rule which Gerard pitcht on, That Omnium optima explicatio ſumitur ex emphaſi Græcorum verborum: The beſt Explication of them all, (or of all others, given by others) is to be taken from the Emphaſis which the Greek words have, as in the Sacred Language of the New Teſtament they are uſed.

Will make you Perfect, Stabliſh, Strengthen, Settle you.

This word καταρτίσει, is ſometimes uſed for the perfecting and compleating a work, ſimply, abſolutely, and at once, and without having any reſpect to a former imperfection, it being once had. And thus it is ſpoken of the Human Nature of Chriſt; Hebr. 10. 5. A body haſt thou perfected me: (It is the word that's here:) And that body was formed, or articulated, (as the word alſo ſignifies) by the Holy Ghoſt, with the Human Soul, in all the parts of it, in one Inſtance of its Union with the Son of God, for it ſubſiſted not alone a moment. And Hebr. 11. 3. when 'tis ſaid, God framed, or perfected the worlds; 'tis the ſame word: And the ſupream World, the higheſt Heavens, were in one inſtant created abſolutely perfect the firſt day: But when in the New Teſtament it is applyed to the works of Grace, as it is in the Text, it takes into it a connotation of, and a relation to, an imperfect degree of being, which is further to be perfected, and out of which God makes perfect.

And unto ſuch a ſenſe, the word in general expreſſeth a Supplement, or making up of wants; as 1 Theſſal. 3. 10. Might perfect that which is lacking, or deficient, in your faith. And the word ὑστέρημα (there uſed) is in its proper ſignification, want; and elſewhere is uſed to ſignifie needs in outward things, 2 Cor. 8. 14. and Chapt. 9. 12. which we uſually term want: But is there in the firſt to the Theſſalonians, applyed to ſpiritual wants, and fallings ſhort therein. Now ſpiritual Sufferings being included in the Sufferings here in the Text, as well as outward; and ſpiritual Imperfections occaſioned by outward, being intended; this word therefore imports a meet ſupply, and making up of ſpiritual wants; even as there, in 1 Theſſal. 3. 10. it is meant of the perfecting of Faith, and what is wanting in it.

Now, this perfecting of what is wanting in Graces to us, may receive a double intendment: 1. Simply; viz. That the work of Grace begun in any of us, being at firſt ſhort and imperfect, in its degrees, which are requiſite to make it fully perfect; in reſpect thereunto God's Promiſe here is, That he will go on to perfect that work begun; as Phil. 1. 6. Being confident of this very thing, that he which hath begun a good work in you, will perform it until the day of Jeſus Chriſt. 'Tis ſaid of the Perſon, who walking up to the Grace received, is without any wilful failure or neglect in his courſe, and is not guilty of groſs or perverſe Imperfections: Which was Paul's caſe after his Calling; who yet ſays, he was not already Perfect, after a long ſtage in Chriſtianity: Phil. 3. 12. Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect: but I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which alſo I am apprehended of Chriſt Jeſus.

And this is the Caſe which the Text reſpects: For it may, yea and doth befall ſeveral Chriſtians, who have had the ſpecial priviledge ſo to have walked from the firſt, who yet need further additions to make them perfect; and to whom God will, above all other Chriſtians, perform this promiſe, of making them perfect more and more on Earth, unto a Conſummation of them in Holineſs in Heaven; yet ſo, as the common law of Sufferings firſt muſt take hold of them: A Law common to them, with all others of their Brethren, as in the Text: and thoſe Sufferings, either outward, wherein the Apoſtle Paul abounded; or perhaps inward Aſſaults from Satan, though ſtill reſiſted, ſo as not to be overcome by them: After which Conflicts, God comes anew, wonderfully to perfect and eſtabliſh ſuch in Faith and Holineſs. And this ſeems to have been the Caſe and preſent ſtate of thoſe Theſſalonians, when the Apoſtle wrote that Epiſtle to them: (For we we read of no Church he wrote to, whom he ſo commends, for having kept their firſt Converſion work ſo pure, and without the leaſt defection, as by his rejoycing in them, in that Epiſtle appears:) And yet he tells them in the words fore-cited, that there were things wanting in their Faith, the ſupply of which he expreſſeth by this word, (which is the end I cite it for) That we might perfect that which is lacking in your faith. Let men Called have had never ſo great and eminent Converſions, (as theſe had, as in Chapt. 1.) yet God hath in ſtore reſerved, and in deſign laid up for them, great and glorious Acceſſes of Grace to perfect them, which they all afterwards attain, in their reſiſtance and overcomings of Temptations, and ſtrickt walkings with him: Whereof there is an inſtance likewiſe in that decaying Church of Sardis, (of which by and by;) A few Elect, choice Chriſtians in God's account, were found even there; who are mentioned in Rev. 3. 4. Thou haſt a few Names even in Sardis, which have not defiled their Garments; and they ſhall walk with me in white, for they are worthy.

The word, ὑστερήμασι, in that to the Theſſalonians, tranſlated lacking in your faith, is the ſame that is uſed by the Apoſtle, Coloſſ. 1. 24. of our Sufferings for Chriſt; which, as it is Tranſlated, runs thus, To fill up that which is behind of the Afflictions of Chriſt: And the filling up of theſe, is the matter of the Promiſe here in Peter; as if he had ſaid, The God of all Grace that hath called us, will fill up what is behind in his Ordination; and lacking to what we received at firſt Calling, unto an higher Perfection: Beſides, what is wanting in the Doctrinals of Faith, there are Additionals to the ſpecial Faith of Chriſtians: God hath an all riches of full Aſſurance, to be added unto our Faith of Recumbency received at firſt: And to that rich aſſurance of underſtanding, he hath joy unſpeakable, and full of glory, to be ſuperadded; and unto making our Election ſure, he hath an abundant entrance into Heaven, begun in this life: For which compare 1 Pet. 1. 10, 11. Wherefore the rather, Brethren, give diligence to make your Calling and Election ſure: for if you do theſe things, ye ſhall never fall. For ſo an entrance ſhall be miniſtred unto you abundantly, into the everlaſting Kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt.

Chriſt. And as thus, in point of Faith, ſo in Holineſs: As we receive at firſt the Spirit to regenerate us, ſo there is the Promiſe of pouring out the Spirit after: As we read in Chriſt's Speeches, and the ſtory of the Apoſtles times, there is an adding of one grace to another, as our Apoſtle in his ſecond Epiſtle exhorts, 2 Pet. 1. 5, 6. And beſides this, giving all diligence, add to our faith, vertue; and to vertue, knowledge; And to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godlineſs. And they are degrees of the ſame Grace, as each is to have its perfect work, thereby to make us entire, wanting nothing, James 1. 3, 4. Knowing this, that the trial of your faith worketh patience. But let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing. And theſe Acceſſes are not always wrought anew inſenſibly, as Plants that grow we know not how; but ſometimes ſenſibly, diſcernably in the Addition, with a notoriety to themſelves, and others: There ariſeth up a new Autum Spring in ſome, which is as a firſt Converſion, and is by Chriſt ſtiled a ſecond Converſion, Except ye be converted, &c. Matth. 18. 3. ſays Chriſt to his Diſciples, that were converted already. There are great windfalls of the Spirit, who blows when and where he liſts, after Regeneration, that do befall ſome Chriſtians, and eſpecially ſuch as have kept their Garments pure from the firſt; For to him that hath, ſhall be given. And Diſciples growing up in ſuch Additaments as theſe, are termed a Perfection, Luke 6. 40. The Diſciple is not above his Maſter: but every one that is perfect ſhall be as his Maſter. And therefore let ſuch Chriſtians expect eminent fulfillings of theſe Promiſes, in this manner as hath been ſpoken, after they have ſuffered a while. Chap. 12.

But yet, leſt we ſhould reſtrain the Promiſe here, ſolely, and only to ſuch Chriſtians, as have continued to walk up to their Converſion Principles; and ſo exclude all thoſe that after Calling have foully faln into groſſer Evils againſt light; or declined, and ſwerved greatly from the firſt zeal; I ſhall therefore ſhew you out of the Scriptures, That,

2. This ſame word, make Perfect, under the import of which the Promiſe here runs; doth in the ſignificancy of it, yea, and the application of it alſo, reach and extend unto ſuch caſes, unto this of lapſed Chriſtians alſo: And if to ſuch, then certainly to all, or any other ſort, that may be ſuppoſed to fall out, in Gods true Called Ones. The God of all Grace hath in ſtore for ſuch, Riches laid up, to reſtore and perfect them again; although it uſually coſts them very full dear in Soul ſufferings, and ſad Trials, for and from ſuch extravagancies e're they attain it. For of ſuch ſinnings of his People, God hath ſaid, it is bitter, and reacheth to the Heart, Jer. 4. 18. And every one doth, and will feel them ſuch, ſooner, or later, whom God hath called, e're they arrive at the performance of this Promiſe, of being made perfect, ſtabliſht: But after they have ſo ſuffered a while, his Grace will perfect, and ſtabliſh them: And yet perhaps, when they are reſtored to that perfection God intends to them afterward, it is but in reſpect of ſome greater meaſure of ſubſtantial Spiritual Faith and Holineſs, than ever they had afore, without thoſe ſuperadditions, and overpluſſes of Glorious Toyes, &c. that themſelves once had; or others that have kept their garments pure, have the priviledge of.

I need not ſtand long in ſhewing that there fall out ſuch caſes of backſliding, that yet are not ſinking into a total falling away, or extinction of Grace: As, 1. The caſe of Leaving ones firſt Love, and declining from that Spiritual fervent Zeal of good works, which a Chriſtian had once at his firſt calling, or afterwards: And therewith a cooling, and deferveſcency in holy actings, inward, and outward. This was Chriſt's charge againſt the Angel and Church of Epheſus, Rev. 2. 4. I have ſomewhat againſt thee, becauſe thou haſt left thy firſt Love: Verſ. 5. Remember from whence Thou art faln, and do thy firſt works. and that this is ſaid to them that had true Grace ſtill, in an eminent meaſure abiding in them, and who continued ſtill to Act holily, though in a lower degree, I need not ſtand to prove: Read the Verſes afore and after. Again, 2. You read of a far deeper defection in the Angel of the Church of Sardis, even to the loweſt degree; next to a total loſs of Grace, and the State of it;

Rev.

Book IV.

Rev. 3. 2. I have not found (ſays Chriſt) thy works Perfect afore God: This alſo is ſpoken unto them that were true Believers, that had ſome Spiritual Life remaining in them: Verſ. 2. Be watchful, ſtrengthen the things that remain, that are ready to dye: And they were not thoſe Principles you are wont to call, the remainders of pure nature in Adam, as natural conſcience, &c. But of that Life they had received by Regeneration from Chriſt. For we may not think that all conſcience was a dying in theſe Profeſſors; for Chriſt writes to them as a Church that had many good works, which they ſtill exerciſed, though comparatively dead to what they had been. But their condition was faln to this, that their Spiritual Life was ready to dye: And like a Snuff or Week, ſunk into the Socket; (which Chriſt's Compariſon reaches) was ready utterly to go out, and expire its laſt with the next attempt, which it made to ſhine. And this befell them, through a drowſineſs which their Wills had entertained, by degrees come on them: So as they were greatly declined through that negligence, which a willing, and indulged ſleepineſs brought upon them: Although the ſecond Verſe, Be watchful, and ſtrengthen the things which remain, that are ready to dye: For I have not found thy works perfect before God: This inſinuates that they had Life, but were next degree to death: In a dead-hearted frame as to Spiritual Actings; eſpecially Inward; ſo the words Be watchful, and ſtrengthen, do import. Now when 'tis ſaid of them, That their works were not found perfect afore God, or not full; it notes that they omitted ſome Duties which they had afore practiſed; or were declined ſo far, as not to perform them: Or if they did 'twas formally; cuſtomarily, deadly; without much agitation of ſpiritual Life in the exerciſe of Them: Not from out of renewed, inward Principles ſtirred up, and exerted, and put forth in them, (though habitually they remained in them) of Love to God, zeal for God, faith unfeigned; continually exerciſing it ſelf upon Chriſt afreſh every day, both for Juſtification, and for deriving new ſtrength for the Acting of them, (without whom we can do nothing) accompanied with holy aims at the Glory of God, and that proceeding out of a pure Conſcience, without the predominancy of By-ends, prevailingly influencing the good works they did, and carrying them on to thoſe Duties more than the Energy and provocation of Gods Glory in their Hearts thereto. And this Liveleſs dead frame of heart, had not been for a ſpirt or a ſhort paroxyſm, or fit, but by the reproof Chriſt gives, it appears it had been for ſome long ſpace, and continuance of time.

Yea, 3. We further find, that not only ſuch a privative Ceſſation, and depraved Omiſſion, and Obſtructiveneſs in the motion, and circulation of Good Works, but Convulſion fits of falling into the Commiſſion of groſſer acts of Sinning, do ſome times befall true Believers, that have been called, whereof there are many Inſtances in Scripture; But we need no further than the caſe of our Apoſtle Peter, and which was the occaſion of Chriſt's Command to him; in Obedience whereunto he wrote this confortatory or conſolatory of our Text. You know, how he did with Oaths, and Curſes, thrice deny our Lord, after he had true Faith; and yet that principle of Faith was not utterly extinct by his ſo grievous a tranſgreſſion. His Heart poor Man throb'd within him; and beat ſome inward, though faint reſiſtances to the contrary; even when his Will gave conſent to perpetrate that high wickedneſs. And both theſe things of him our Saviours words inſinuate, Luke 22.32. But I have prayed that thy Faith fail not: therefore he had Faith afore, and that Faith not extinct, but ſmothered as in a ſmoke; which a Look of Chriſt's blew up into a flame of the deepeſt, and moſt vehement Repentance; And Chriſt fully recovered, and reſtored him again, and made him perfect, and ſtrengthned him more than ever; and it was a new converſion to him, as Chriſt there terms it.

But my buſineſs is to enquire for the ſupport and comfort of ſuch Chriſtians; whither none of theſe four words in the Text, be not in their ſignification applicable to theſe caſes, and ſo the Promiſes thereof to reach them: And although many other promiſing Scriptures, may be intended to that purpoſe, yet my deſign is, and undertaking hath been all along my handling this Text, to keep my ſelf to the words thereof; and take only ſuch ſupports, as they give a Ground for: And I look upon this Scripture as an Abundary, and Magazine, as to perſeverance-comforts, to make a Chriſtian compleat therein: And I ſhall therefore invite them but to drink and taſte the waters out of this one ciſtern; and draw them forth out of this well of Conſolation; And if this Promiſe of perfecting, reaches the Caſes of theſe Chriſtians, then any other, the worſt ſuppoſable, that of total Apoſtacy excepted, which God never ſuffers his Called Ones to fall into; but ſetting that aſide, theſe forementioned caſes are the worſt, that do befall any of the true Saints, after Calling, in the Courſe of their Lives, between their Calling, and their Deaths. Chap. 12.

Now for the whole, or total of theſe caſes, and as touching them all at once; It is certain that the word καταρτίζω, imports a making whole, or perfect again of what is any way rent, torn, tattered, maimed, broken, diſjoynted, or the like; and ſignifies an Inſtauration, a Reſtitution, or Reſtauration of any thing diſpoyled: And in the proper, and original uſe of it, ſignifies the making whole of any thing that is endamaged, or ſpoyled: And from hence this its proper ſignification, fitly in a way of Metaphor, comes to be tranſlated here to Mens Souls, and the ſinful empairments thereof; that ſenſe being uſed in the Text; and ſo it doth moſt aptly include the foreſaid caſes, and imports the ſetting up again, and reſtoring of a Soul or Perſon once truly called (for of one after Calling he only ſpeaks) that yet after Calling hath been both greatly wanting, decayed, and deficient in good works, and alſo faln into great, and Enormous Crimes, or both, (for both theſe do oft times accompany one the other;) as well as of the carrying of the Soul on in an unblameable courſe of uninterrupted ſtrictneſs: And for this the proper ſignification of it, Interpreters (and it is a famous inſtance among them,) do for expounding of this word in the Text, alledge and apply out of two Evangeliſts, what is more properly ſpoken of the Apoſtles mending their nets, whilſt Fiſhermen, when broken: From which they take occaſion by way of Metaphor, or ſimilitude (which is the form of Language uſed in all theſe four words) to explain this particular word; it being one and the ſame word that is uſed by the Evangeliſts, that is here. And the Subjects of this Promiſe of making perfect by God, being our Souls, in reſpect of ſins, the ſenſe of it comes to this, That in ſome likeneſs and analogy, God's Promiſe is to mend and make our broken Souls whole again, after they have been rent and tatter'd in the empairment of their Graces, begun in them either by decay, or more grievous ſinnings, ſo far as to be fitted again for their wonted uſe and ſervice, (as we ſay) or meet for the Maſter's uſe, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 2 Tim. 2. 21. and to that end to make them as tight and as ſtrong as ever: That firſt of their mending Nets, being the proper ſignification of the word; and this, in our Apoſtle, the Metaphorical: And it is the Law of the uſe of Metaphors, or borrowed Speeches, by way of likeneſs thus to apply them, according to their ſeveral kinds, and therefore muſt be admitted in this. And here I need not tell you, how much more obnoxious our ſinful Souls are to miſcarriages in their kind, than Fiſhermens Nets are to Ruptures and Breaches in their kind; (which yet is as great, as of any other thing a man makes uſe of) as from falling upon Anchors, or through Wrecks in the Sea; yea, by multitudes and bigneſs of Fiſhes when drawn up. It is uſe enough to make of this Similitude, and to my preſent purpoſe, That whatſoever the Breaches be on our parts, God's Promiſe here is to them that are Called, to make them perfect again; and not to ſuffer them to run into ſuch, as ſhall utterly deſtroy them.

Luke 5. 6.

I ſhall further but caſt in this, agreeable to my general Scope I have all along proſecuted, that if Art and Nature in empty Man, (as in Job 11. 12. man is ſtyled) have skill, and are able to repair the works of their hands; ſurely the God of all Power, and the God of all Grace, knows how, and is able much more; yea, and by Grace, and the Engagements thereof, moſt willing to reſtore the workmanſhip of his own hands, (which he cannot but love) which he hath on purpoſe created unto good works, Epheſ. 2. 10. And this then, when his and our Adverſary Satan, (whoſe work and endeavour it is to ſpoil

ſpoil that new Workmanſhip, which God by regenerating of us, hath begun in us) attempts to ruin us, by ſtirring up our Luſts in us; and with whoſe Temptations thoſe Corruptions being irritated, do joyn: Whereupon yet, God is ſo far from being provoked to deſtroy us, or forſake us, (which is Satan's aim) that he is provoked through his Grace that he bears in his heart towards us, to repair what Satan in malice, through our weakneſs, had attempted to undo. And accordingly, in full oppoſition to Satan, and the ſtrength of Luſts in us, he ſets himſelf [with a [But God, &c. as here] to undo this ruining work of the Devil, notwithſtanding all our ſinfulneſs: And further, hath been moſt graciouſly pleaſed thus aforehand to relieve us by ſuch a Promiſe, made under the ſignificancy of this moſt Elegant Metaphor, to mend us, and reſtore us, and make us perfect again; and our Souls as ſtrong, and fit for his ſervice, as ever. O! how often doth the Devil in our lives break in upon us, and upon what we have wrought, and in a manner undoes what we have done; yea, when for a long while together we have walk't more ſtrictly, and our hearts have been kept up in a holy frame, and cloſe communion with God, and gone on in a conſtancy, performing Spiritual Duties with much Spiritual Life; How doth a wretched Luſt riſe in us, ſtirred up by ſome occaſion, and then ſtrongly withal enforced and impregnated by Satans Temptations and Inſuſions; (as in David, Satan is ſaid to have done, when he numbred the People;) and ſo in a great meaſure mars what we have been ſo long a working, inſomuch that we are apt to think our ſelves utterly undone; and in reality, are wonderfully caſt behind hand thereby? Ay, but this God of all Grace here in the Text, ſends them his Holy Spirit into our Hearts, who provokes us to, and renews unfeigned Repentance in us, (as there he did in David) lifts us up when we are faln, and reſtores us to our former, yea, and often to a much far better and holier conſtitution and diſpoſure of Spirit than ever. And oh, how often is it that God viſits us, and renews ſuch gracious Diſpenſations upon our ſinnings! Verifying that bleſſed Manifeſto of his gracious heart in the Prophet, Thy deſtruction is of thy ſelf; but in me is thy help.

Significat ergo Apoſtolus, Telam bonorum operum & juſtitiæ quam teximus; cito, & facile in hac vitâ rumpi; niſi accedet Dei καταρτισμὸς: ſays Gerard in applying that of mending their Nets, unto this word here. See 1 Chron. 21. 1.

This from the proper uſe of the word, as it is appliable, by way of Metaphor, unto Gods perfecting our Souls in the caſes afore ſpecified; but as yet only in the General.

† The Alluſion which this word hath to the ſetting right a member diſlocated, is further confirmed, in that it is uſed in the caſe of a Church faln into diviſions, whereby the members are diſjoynted one from another, and by conſequence from Chriſt their Head. Thus 1 Cor. 1. 10, 11. Now I beſeech you, Brethren, that there be no diviſions among you; but that ye be [perfectly joyned together:] for it hath been declared to me, that there are contentions among you. It is the ſame, both word and metaphor there, that is uſed in this Gal. 6. 1. taken from the members of a body that are out of joynt among themſelves, and their reducement to their right order again, it is termed a being perfectly joyned together, or compacted together again: Now what is there ſpoken of the members of Chriſt's body, conſidered as a body, is in the Galatian Text applied to the Soul of a particular Chriſtian, a member of that body, that ſets looſe unto Chriſt the Head. And diviſions in a Church as a Church, the body of Chriſt, among themſelves, are in their kind as great disjunctions as groſs ſins in a particular ſoul, as a ſoul, in its ſetting looſe unto Chriſt. The ſame uſe of this word to this ſenſe and purpoſe alſo, you have 2 Cor. 13 9 in v. 11. be perfect; in v. 9. I wiſh your perfection: καταρτιν ὑμῶν, ſpoken in relation to their diſunions; as alſo other ſins which particular members were faln into, chap. 12. as appears by the words following.

But let us further ſee, if that the word be not in its Metaphorical uſe, in particular applyed by the Holy Ghoſt himſelf; unto a reſtoring us in and out of thoſe very particular caſes, concerning groſſer ſins, and neglect of known duties.

I begin firſt with that of falling into groſſer ſins, which are the worſt: According to that Rule, That ſins of Commiſſion are greater evils, and have more of peccancy in them, than ſins of Omiſſion in good works: Of which ſort the two firſt caſes aforementioned were.

In Galat. 6. 1, If a Man, (or although a Man; who is ſuppoſed by the Apoſtle to be a Brother, and true Chriſtian) be overtaken in a fault; ye which are Spiritual, reſtore ſuch an one in the Spirit of meekneſs; conſidering thy ſelf, leſt thou alſo be tempted. Which laſt words ſhew, he ſuppoſeth the moſt Spiritual may fall into the like: The word, reſtore ſuch an one, is our very word in the Text here; and in a way of Metaphor, applied to the caſe afore us, although under another Metaphor than the former; (yet having the like general import of making perfect what is empaired, &c.) Applyed, I ſay, to the making whole again a faln ſinner into a groß ſin: And it is expreſly ſo applyed to this very Caſe, by the Holy Ghoſt himſelf.

The Metaphor there (as generally Interpreters agree, and needs no diſtinct proof, for the Scriptures I ſhall alledge in the proſecution of this, and in the † Margin, will clear it ſo to be) is a Metaphor taken from Surgeons that ſet a

Bone,

Bone, a Limb or Limbs, which by ſome grievous dangerous fall is become looſened from its joynt, or perhaps (which is worſe) broken, or bruiſed; and the word παράπτωμα there alſo ſuits to, and complies alſo with this other Metaphor of a broken joint. It is tranſlated indeed a fault, but ſignifies properly a fall, and but metaphorically a ſin: yea, and ſometimes is ἐναμφασικῶς, and by way of eminency put to ſignifie ſome ſingular great ſin: As when we ſay Adam's fall, as it was to the ruin of himſelf, and us all; and accordingly his ſin and diſobedience is in that ſingular ſenſe termed by the Apoſtle παράπτωμα, Rom. 5. 14. which is the word here, and ſounds ſome noticed ſin faln into. And this is a worſe matter than the Caſe of that ſpiritual drowſineſs to good works we ſpake of, out of Rev. 3. Now his Exhortation is to ſuch as were more grown, & able Chriſtians, whom he terms you that are ſpiritual; that is, comparatively to others; and theſe he exhorts with meekneſs and all tenderneſs of Spirit (ſuch as we uſe to ſay Surgeons hands ought to be) to ſet him into joint again; or if it were broken by the fall, to ſet it again. A Member thus diſlocated, and out of joint, or a Limb and Bone broken, are not yet thereby quite ſevered, or cut off from the Body it is in, or the Head it joyned to; but its Union ſtill with the Body continued; but it is looſned or miſplaced, or not in its right Socket: So it is with ſuch a man in reſpect of his Union with Chriſt, and with his Myſtical Body: And it cannot be that he ſhould mean ſins of ordinary Infirmity, (of which the Apoſtle James ſays, In many things we offend all;) theſe have not ſo dangerous an effect, as to bring a diſlocation upon a Member; no, nor do ordinary ſtreins and wrinches, though violent, produce ſuch an effect, as this Fall here ſpoken of his ſaid to do. And from which Falls alſo, the Apoſtle ſuppoſeth theſe that are ſpiritual, to be free in their ordinary Chriſtian courſe; for he ſays, Leſt ye alſo be tempted. 'Tis therefore an heinous ſinning he means, (however ſome Interpreters would leſſen it). And from hence I infer, That, Chap. 12.

If the word of my Text be thus there applied, unto ſuch a caſe of falling into ſin, (as it is) in the way of a command from God, given unto Men, who have but a little mercy in them, that yet with meekneſs and tenderneſs they ſhould reſtore ſuch an one; then ſurely the God of all Grace, who hath pickt and choſen out this ſame word, and put it into a Promiſe here, againſt all Temptations of them whom he hath called; (as the current of the Text runs) ſurely he himſelf will perform it, through Jeſus Chriſt their Head, to whom they remain united ſtill, though out of joynt, and unto whom God hath engaged himſelf to do this, as well as promiſed it to us; to whoſe Heart (namely Chriſt's) it goes, even the falls of every Member of his, more than their Perſecutions; who is ſenſible to the quick of theſe Infirmities of ours, as well as of other Miſeries, and pities us under them: As Heb. 4. 15. 16. For we have not an high Prieſt which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities: But was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without ſin. Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of Grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find Grace to help in time of need. And if to that purpoſe the Holy Ghoſt hath in that place, Gal. 6. 1. made uſe of this word, to ſignifie a reſtoring one from ſuch groſs Lapſes; when it is ſpoken by way of Exhortation to what Men ſhould do one to another; ſhall we not take, and receive it in the ſame ſenſe from God and apply it unto ſuch Caſes wherein it is ſpoken of him, by way of promiſe from himſelf? Of God, I ſay, who hath all Grace, and power, and faithfulneſs within himſelf, to effect, and perform what he promiſeth? Certainly, yes.

There cannot be a greater caſe of ſinning that befalls a regenerate Man, than what God himſelf ſays he did, de facto, find in an obſtinate ſinner againſt himſelf, who yet was his Child; Iſai. 57. 17. For the Iniquity of his Covetouſneſs I was wroth. And thereupon, God expreſſing his diſpleaſure by ſome Eminent Correction; (And by the Context in the verſes immediately afore, it ſeems (as I have elſewhere opened the words in a diſcourſe long ſince printed) it was an impreſſing his wrath immediately upon his Spirit,) I was wroth, and ſmote him; But he went on (notwithſtanding) frowardly, in the way of his Heart; that is, he added a perverſe obſtinacy after that, and againſt that ſevere Correction: His firſt courſe of ſinning, which occaſioned that Chaſtiſement, and was committed afore it, the Lord tearms An Iniquity: That is, a ſin of an high kind in it ſelf alone conſidered. And further, this his ſinning was not a tranſient Act, that paſſed from him, out of which he preſently was recovered; but a way of his Heart, ſays that Text; which notes that it had been continued in, yea, and ſtill continued after that great rebuke; and therefore for ſome long time: Yet, in this caſe God doth upon a moſt deliberate full notice, view, and cogniſance taken thereof, utter himſelf thus, Verſ. 18. of Eſai. 57. I have ſeen his ways, and will heal him; I will reſtore Comforts to him: And this, God, the God of all Grace, promiſeth, and peremptorily declares he will do: He is reſolved to do: I ſay he peremptorily reſolves it: For it is ſet in oppoſition againſt the obſtinacy of this ſinner: As if Pſal. 51. God had ſaid, I am as reſolute in Grace, and Mercy for him, as he is in ſinning againſt me: And God will overcome, when he will be merciful, as well as when he Judgeth. And do we find God thus reſolute in the Old Teſtament? Certainly he is not become Leſs gracious in the New, unto thoſe he hath out of Grace Called now, when his Chriſt, our Saviour Jeſus is come, and God hath called them through him. Therefore even in ſuch caſes, (and theſe are the worſt,) when through his permiſſion Mans wilfulneſs throws him into ſuch direful miſcarriages as theſe; he proclaims it, I will be merciful, unto thoſe I will be merciſull; Unto thoſe whom firſt Grace by calling hath took hold of, and maintained a principle of life not extinguiſht, though ready to dye: We may warrantably conclude with applying this as a promiſe here, that God will make perfect, reſtore, (inſtaurare, as the Text) ſuch a Soul unto that perfection again, as ſhall fit him, or make him meet for the Actual poſſeſſion of his Inheritance in light, into which he had called him.

And the Reaſon which the Text gives, is powerfully convincing of this: For having ſaid that his Calling us at firſt was from out of the whole Graciouſneſs of God, it was of ſuch who before calling were wholly dead in ſins, and treſpaſſes; Epheſ. 2. 1,5. compared. And you hath he quickned, who were dead in treſpaſſes and ſins. Even when we were dead in ſins, hath quickened us together with Chriſt, (by grace ye are ſaved.) And then that αὐτὸς, this ſame God, (which word I put a mighty weight upon, though not taken notice of by our Tranſlators, as bringing down the full of that foregone deſcription of God, The God of all Grace, &c. upon theſe following words of Promiſe) This ſame God will reſtore and perfect from under theſe dangerous falls, that would prove mortal indeed, if Grace undertook not this reſtauration of them; and yet they bring not the Perſon into a dead condition, utterly dead as before; but as that Rev. 3. 2. repreſents it, ready to dye; a ſpirit of ſome life yet remaining in them (as there): And the force of the Reaſon lies in theſe two Things; 1. That he being not faln into ſo deſperate a ſtate by ſinning, as he was in afore Calling, the Principle of Life yet remains unexcuſſed by his Fall. 2. And that yet all the Grace, out of which God at firſt call'd him, is avowedly declared engaged to reſtore and perfect him again: Inſomuch, as if it could be ſuppoſed (as our Apoſtle ſpeaks in any other caſe) ſo, that if need were of as much Grace to renew him again, as he had laid out upon him in calling and converting him at firſt, God doth engage himſelf to ſpend it upon him again. Yea, further, If all the Grace that is in the Heart of God, were requiſite to be drawn out, he would ſet the whole ſtock thereof upon it to effect, no leſs than the whole work of Calling entirely anew, and rear it from the very foundations afreſh, rather than fail (as we ſay;) and the whole of that Grace which firſt called us, would move him to make perfect again ſuch an one.

And in ſuch Caſes of foul Lapſes, God often is wont to make ſuch perfect again, by a new converſion; for by that name they are in that caſe termed, and really are; as to the ſubſtance of the work, they are ſuch; although indeed they be but the revivals of freſh acts of Faith and Repentance, ſuch as at the firſt. And ſo in our Apoſtle's Caſe of denying his Maſter, (which I alone afore have inſtanced in) his reſtauration is termed by Chriſt, his converſion, when thou art converted, &c. And that the ſame things are acted over again in us, that were at firſt, David's repentance for his ſo heinous Tranſgreſſions, in Pſal. 51. ſhews. And you that know what it is to be converted, may trace the prints of a new converſion in all the parts of Converſion, to have been ſupplicated for by him, to be wrought in him, as humiliation for ſin, verſ. 3,5,14. a ſeeking out for pardon of ſin, and righteouſneſs of juſtification, verſ. 2,7,9,14. and as vehement petitions for holineſs and ſanctification to be renewed, and that in the very terms which are uſed of its being wrought at firſt; verſe 10. Create in me a clean heart, O God! and renew a right ſpirit within me. And he imploreth Grace in the ſame manner and terms alſo, as any new Converts uſe to ſeek the favour of God in, and to expreſs themſelves by; yea, and that therewith God would [reſtore] to him the former joy of his ſalvation, verſ. 12. and [ſtabliſh] him with his free Spirit; (which laſt word ſtabliſh, is the ſame with the ſecond word here in the Text, and ſo Tranſlated by the Septuagint, and uſed by Chriſt to our Apoſtle:) yea, and laſtly, (if you will admit it) he utters himſelf in the very Alluſion, which in the way of Metaphor, this firſt word in my Text did prompt us to, towards the expoſition of the word it ſelf, namely, of ſetting right a broken or disjoynted Bone or Member. And truly, David's language runs thus, That the bones which thou haſt broken may rejoyce; only David, by his broken bones, in that verſe, means thoſe dolors (and therefore oppoſed to joy in the Text) and heart-breakings for ſin, ſet upon his Conſcience, together with Impreſſions of the finger of God, which were to his Soul as affective, as the breaking of the bones to the body, and which God himſelf had done, and brought upon him, which thou haſt broken; whereas the Metaphor in the Galatian Text, connotates our having broken our own bones, or put our ſouls out of joynt, by willing falling into ſins, wherein God hath no hand; and ſo we bring upon our ſelves another manner of breaking, God's breaking our bones, by way of Correction, in taking away our former peace, and following us with the ſaddeſt Tortures. But this word in my Text, takes in and comprehends all, and imports a making all whole again; whether in reſpect of reſtoring former peace and joy again, inſtead of pain; or of making all ſound again, of thoſe bruiſes, disjunctures, or brokenneſs of bones, made by ſinnings in our ſouls, unto a new perfection of Peace and Holineſs, that is, which is comparatively ſuch. Chap. 12.

This for the import and application of this word καταρτίζω, unto God's reſtorings after great lapſes into ſin, which is one of the Caſes forementioned, CHAP. XIII.

That this Promiſe of perfecting, extends to another caſe of decayed Chriſtians, who decline from their firſt love, and good works: That even in them God will reſtore and revive the Principles of Spiritual Life, which languiſhes and is dying, This proved by comparing Heb. 13. 20, 21. with Pet. 5. 10.

I proceed now to the other two Caſes of Chriſtians, concerning declinings in good works, ſuch as a falling from their firſt love and ſlacking to do their firſt works: And further, for ſome time to omit, and ceaſe the doing of ſome good duties, which they once had ſtrictly been frequent in, through a drowſineſs, and negligence of Spirit, that was come upon them, (Awake thou that ſleepeſt; Epheſ. 5. 14. which is ſpoken, as I conceive, to a decayed Chriſtian,) from out of which if they be not recovered, their Salvation is in hazard, as thoſe exhortations to the Church of Sardis, imply, Rev. 3. 2, 3. Be watchful, and ſtrengthen the things, which remain, that are ready to dye: For I have not found thy works perfect before God. Remember therefore how thou haſt received, and heard, and hold faſt, and repent, i.e. or they will dye.

Now this ſame firſt word here in my Text, is made uſe of to that caſe alſo, as appears by what the Apoſtle prays for the Hebrews, and in them for all other Chriſtians, Heb. 13. Verſ. 20, 21. The God of peace make you perfect in every good work, to do his Will: working in you that which is well-pleaſing in his ſight; through Jeſus Chriſt, to whom be Glory for ever, Amen. Hence I conclude, That for God to make his Called Ones perfect, is to make them perfect in every good work, to do his Will: And a ſupply of theſe words ſhould therefore in this Text be underſtood, as if our Apoſtle Peter had in like manner, and in ſo many words, alſo ſaid, The God of all Grace, (as there of Peace) will make you perfect in every good work, to do his will: And it is certain, that it is good works, and the doing of Gods Will; thereby is that wherein that perfection, (ſo far as in this Life) doth in one principal manner conſiſt: And therefore although this be not here expreſſed, yet it is juſtly to be ſuppoſed: as if our Apoſtle had explicitly uttered it in words at length, ſo that Paul is but explicative of Peter: And the Holy Ghoſt who guided the Pens of both theſe Holy Apoſtles, doth but inſtruct us out of that to the Hebrews, how, and of what to underſtand his mind in making us perfect to be here; for though he ſays no more, but God will perfect; yet he leaves it to us to ſearch other Scriptures to ſeek what that ſhould be in the full latitude of it, and to extend it unto all thoſe things whatever, wherein God is ſaid, and uſeth to make his Children perfect, as to his workings of Grace in us after calling; for of that kind of Perfection it is that Peter ſpeaks. And for evidence of this, to be his intent in this Particular word, look as he leaves this firſt word, without ſaying wherein, ſo he hath done the other three words, indefinitely referring us to ſuch Scriptures, to find out the particulars, wherein it is he is ſaid to ſtabliſh, ſtrengthen, and ſettle us: And this is a received juſt law of interpreting ſuch like paſſages of Scriptures, and therefore alſo this, and will hold in every one of theſe four words.

And certainly if you would attempt to make a Supplement of any other particular matter, or thing, wherein it must be supposed God should make us perfect; (And it must be some particular thing or other, that is intended God should make us perfect in, and by; and it must be such things also as are Spiritual too, and belonging to Salvation after calling) Then if you will joyn any such thing, to explain it by, it must be such as is in some other Scripture instanced in, and is adjoyned to this same word of perfecting us by God, as a thing wherein God is said so to make us Perfect: And what occurs more plain and suitably, than what this unto the Hebrews is so expres, and punctual in? And that which is also so main a matter wherein our perfection lies: And therefore was so precisely mentioned in that prayer by the Apostle for the Hebrews and for all Christians. And it being a perfecting in point of Grace, and the working thereof in us, which is evidently intended in Peter, and an evangelical perfection in Good works, with that allowance of imperfections cleaving to the best, being that which throughout the Scriptures is reckoned our perfection; and without which we are not accounted perfect in Gods sight: Therefore surely when God says he will make us perfect, as by Peter he doth, he intends the very same. 13.

But it may be said, That there is not the least mention of any of these cases in either of the passages of these two Apostles: And on what Ground then will you apply these Scriptures to them? The Apostle to the Hebrews prays indeed for perfecting them he wrote to, in every good work; but speaks not of this, that after a remissness, or discontinuance of good works, he would again perfect them.

My Answer is; 1. Who shall limit the intention of the words, to say, that in the Hebrews he prays only for those that had continued in all and every Good work, without faltering, or making halts in their progress; or that in my Text, the promise should only be unto such, and so to exclude those who have not in that constancy walked in such strictness? These Scriptures, each of them, are a comprehension, or a General, appliable unto all persons that are truly called, and involving all cases they shall by Gods permission fall into.

And as for my Text, if you observe the Ground of the Promise there, it is not founded upon Mens having continued in an exact walking all along after Calling, in every good work, all along from their Calling, without any falterings or incorruption, (which yet was their duty to have done;) to be sure there is no mention of that; But it is founded upon this, that the God of all Grace having effectually called them, he will see to it to perfect that work in them, in the end, and to the end; and so to bring them back from their wanderings, and strayings aside, if they fall out; and to take care not to suffer them so far to stray, as not to be reducible: So as prove the case, what it may fall out to be in some of these Called (and there is not a greater variation, and deviation from the North-point in the compass, in the several Latitudes those that sail, run through, than there falls out in variety of cases to these, that yet are a carrying on to Heaven, and will certainly be brought thither,) over and besides their driving up and down through several winds of Temptations, that like Gusts come upon them; whilst yet, take the general Steerage of their Course, and it is to their desired Haven. And the Ground of that foundation, namely that they have been called, lyes yet deeper; even in the Heart of God that calleth (as Rom. 9. the Apostle states it) even in this, The God of all Grace who hath called; And the strength of that lies in this, that the same Grace that God put forth in Calling them, when they were utterly void of all good works at first, and destitute of the Principles thereof, Dead in sins, and Trespasses; hath engaged it self to perfect it, (and will do it, as the promise is, 1 Thes. 5. 24. Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it.) he retaining the same Grace in his Heart towards them: And withal, can more easily do it, although there fall out such casual remissnesses in good works, &c. seeing the principle of Life, the Seed of God still remaineth in them, though ready to dye; as in that Rev. 3. 2. which principle shews it self more or less, in the worst of Cases that God suffers to befall them, by still exerting some

Acts,

Book IV.

Acts, or other, inward or outward: In inward; As in Luſtings againſt that ſin that outwardly prevails; and ſo a ſerving in the mind the Law of God is kept up, whilſt in the mean time, with the Fleſh, they ſerve the Law of ſin: And outwardly; though he do withal fall into an outward neglect of ſome good works, and duties alſo, and to an inward remiſſneſs in all, yet he continues ſtill in the outward exerciſe of other good duties, and that not wholly in Hypocriſie; that is, ſuch as in unregeneracy and not wholly for ſelf ends, but out of a principle of Life remaining, though ſo faint, and low in activity, as that he hath not ſtrength enough to perform all and every good work: Which is the caſe of a Man become weak in bodily Life; he can, and doth exert ſome Acts of Life, when yet he is not enabled to do ſome other; much leſs every Act of Life with vigour. And thoſe, which ſuch a Chriſtian doth, may be called Actions of Life, though that Life is not vigorous enough to exerciſe all; and therefore muſt not be accounted wholly, or altogether Hypocriſie: For though that Life in him prevails not to do all, through decay of ſtrength, or lameneſs, or weakneſs in ones Members; as that word in Revel. 3. 2. imports, ſtrengthen that which remains: And it inſinuates withal, the want of ſtirring up that ſtrength was the cauſe why their works were not full; (as the word in the Greek there is;) not full in the ſight of God; And ſhews that they ceaſe not to do any good works: But as there was a principle of Life remaining, though ready to dye, ſo there were ſome Actions of Life exerciſed by them; but they were not full, or extenſive enough: And what ſuch a Chriſtian doth, hath ſome Life ſhewn in it; and ſo far alſo it is acceptable to God, though with a blame-worthineſs that he neglects any. This was Solomon's caſe, during the time of his declination, and variation of the Compaſs, he continued in the worſhip and Ordinances of God notwithſtanding, and he grew not into an utter prophaneſs of Spirit, to caſt off all. Nor did David, his Father, whilſt yet his Mouth was ſhut up to holy diſcourſe, and his wonted fervent deſires to turn others to God, grew flaccid, and were cooled in him; which cauſed him to pray, Pſal. 51. 15. O Lord, open Thou my lips, and my mouth ſhall ſhew forth thy praiſe: And again, Verſ. 12, 13. Reſtore unto me the joy of thy Salvation, and uphold me with thy free Spirit: Then will I teach tranſgreſſors thy ways, and ſinners ſhall be converted unto Thee: And Gods promiſe here is to revive, and reſtore ſuch unto every good work again; and unto a Life, and wonted Spiritual vigour, unto, and in the practice of them.

2. As for that other Scripture, to the Hebrews, 13. 21. Make you perfect in every good work, to do his will, working in you that which is well-pleaſing in his ſight, through Jeſus Chriſt, to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

1. This is certain, that the matter of that Prayer, or thing prayed for, and the Materials of the caſes in Rev. 3. do fully Anſwer one the other: The matter prayed for Anſwers by way of ſupply unto that defect ſpecified in the caſes: The matter of thoſe caſes is, a blame-worthy Imperfection, or falling ſhort in Good works, of what they ought, and formerly had done: And the matter or thing prayed for, the Hebrews, is to perfect thoſe that had been called, in every good work: I have not found thy works perfect, ſays Chriſt; ſpeaking it even to many of them, that had been truly called in that Church: And the words of the prayer here oppoſitely are, that God would perfect them in every good work: That is, in what thoſe in the Revelation were wanting: that is, fill up in all ſorts of good works, and known duties that which any of them were wanting in: Moreover in that caſe, Rev. 3. 2. there is this clauſe added by Chriſt, that he had not found their works perfect [afore God] which aggravation [afore God] imports not only that God ſaw, and took notice of their failures, neglects, and wilful omiſſions in the ſtrict Holineſs of Good works; but therewith had conceived a high diſpleaſure againſt them for it, untill they ſhould repent; as tis there, that is, untill they ſhould fill up again, (as the word implies) and make the circle of their former exact walking, according to their knowledge, compleat, orbicular, and entirely round, and perfect again; without ſuch gaps and vacancies: And oppoſitely anſwering hereunto in Heb. 13. 21. there is this addition, that God would work in them them [what is pleasing in his sight :] which two opposites set one against the other, shew, that in those Saints which walk exactly, there is such a full gracious acceptation of their holy walking, in their whole course, even when they are worst, as hath an acceptation, and a well-pleasedness in the eyes of God, although accompanied with the ordinary defects of sinful infirmities, imperfections, though common, cleaving thereunto: Which God testified of Job, and others: Whereas in others that are more loose, and wilfully, or at least indulgently negligent in good works; there is a blame-worthy guilt lies on them, that provokes God to a partial sore displeasure against them, for so walking: Only let me add this, that so far as such negligent ones, that are called, do perform during that while, any good works, and holy duties, and that so far as there is any good in what they do in sincerity; that so far they are accepted of God: Whilst yet a partial temporary displeasure from God lies against them, in that their whole course is not filled up with every kind of good work, incumbent on them; which was the case of Jehoshapat, as appears by the Prophet Jehu, in his message to him from God, 2 Chron. 19. 2, 3. And Jehu the Son of Hanani the Seer, went out to meet him; and said to King Jehoshaphat, Shouldest thou help the ungodly, and love them that hate the Lord? Therefore is wrath upon thee from before the Lord: Nevertheless there are good things found in Thee; in that thou hast taken away the Groves out of the Land; and hast prepared thine Heart to seek God. Chap. 13.

Thus oppositely Parallel is the matter of these two Texts that are afore us; and in the very words in either, a corresponding one with the other: There never was a plaister so perfectly suited to a sore, and extensively adequate in compass, and breadth to overspread it; and in vertue, and efficacy to heal it; as the matter of this prayer is unto that lapsed case: As if it had been made, and penned for this very case in a more especial manner: So as if God in, and at his good pleasure, will but apply it, and lay it on, the malady will be healed.

Thus in the matter of them, they being one and the same; and therefore this Prayer fitly appliable to those cases. So

2. There were such Persons truly called, among those very Hebrews the Apostle wrote to, who were in such a condition, whom therefore the Apostle prayed thus for, and who must have been in an especial manner in his eye: And that if he prayed for any, then surely for them: For (as by and by) they had most need so to be prayed for: We read of such in that Epistle, who after their effectual calling, had made little, or no proficiency in many years profession; either in knowledge, or good works: (And if not knowledge, when they might, as he tells them they might, then not in good works:) This appears by his complaint of them, Heb. 5. 12, 13, 14. For when for the time ye ought to be Teachers, ye have need that one teach you again, which be the first principles of the Oracles of God: And are become such as have need of milk, and not of strong meat: For every one that useth milk, is unskilful in the word of righteousness; for he is a Babe: But strong meat belongeth to them that are of full Age; even those, who by reason of use, have their Senses exercised to discern both good, and evil: And yet he verily judged of these, he speaks thus of, that they were truly called, and continued still in the main, true Christians: As Chap. 6. 9, 10, 11. But, beloved, we are perswaded better things of you, and things that accompany Salvation, though we thus speak: For God is not unrighteous, to forget your labour of love, which ye have shewed towards his name; in that ye have ministred to the Saints, and do minister: And we desire that every one of you, do shew the same deligence; to the full assurance of hope, unto the end: And to the like purpose it is, he revives in them the remembrance, of what a glorious work of Grace, and zeal they had in them at the first; Chap. 10. 32. But call to remembrance the former days, in which after ye were illuminated; ye endured a great fight of Afflictions: Moreover you find another mention of a sort of sunk, declined Professors, (or perhaps the same) amongst these Hebrews, so far gone in a spiritual Consumption, that they were almost a turning out of that good way of a Christian Profession, and even a giving up Christ: (one great scope of that Epiſtle, both in the Doctrinals, but eſpecially in the Exhortatory part, all along interweaved with thoſe Doctrines, was to keep them to hold faſt that Profeſſion:) his words in Heb. 12. 12, 13, 14. concerning ſuch, are theſe: Wherefore lift up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees: And make ſtraight paths for your feet; leſt that which is lame be turned out of the way; but let it rather be healed: Follow peace with all Men, and holineſs; without which no Man ſhall ſee the Lord: And it is certain, that if his Exhortation were directed in ſo ſpecial a manner unto ſuch, that this his Prayer muſt be ſuppoſed to comprehend the caſes of ſuch, in like proportionable manner.

And further there is one word inſerted in that Prayer, which doth prompt no leſs; 'tis in the forepart, among what he makes the ground or argument of his Prayer, which always hath the force, and influence upon the matter prayed for, as upon conſideration of which God grants it: As the Preface to a Statute law, hath upon the Body and matter of the Act commanded: The paſſage is, The God that brought back again Jeſus Chriſt from the Dead,] He make you perfect, in every good work: Which is in the effect, as in the Text, that God, who at firſt called you out of an Eſtate of death, and dead works, the ſame God perfect you, if at any time after you wander and are gone aſtray, dead-hearted in good works, he will bring you back again to the Biſhop of your Souls; by virtue of Chriſts Reſurrection from the dead, till he hath fully Perfected you in every good work, the virtue of which bringing back of his, extending not only unto his firſt begetting of Life in you, but in a lower and leſſer comparative, it takes in all the after Revivals of Spiritual Life in us: For all ſuch remiſſneſſes, (which are thoſe we are ſpeaking of) are but as fits of Convulſions, Falling-Sickneſſes, Apoplexies, Leſſer deaths, and wider ſteps of reeling towards death, as of that Angel, and Church of Sardis it is ſaid, both that they were dead, Rev. 3. 1. and yet that there was life in them, as thoſe words, but ready to dye, ſhew: Which two Speeches compared, can have no other meaning, than that they were not utterly dead, as they had been in their Unregenerate Eſtate; but retained ſtill in them a true Principle of Life, continued from their regeneration; only in reſpect of energy, and operation, it was but as a dying Life; and ſuch are all ſwouning, fainting fits, that befall Chriſtians: Such is ſpiritual ſleepineſs, (Siſter to death) which was the caſe of that Church: Therefore 'tis ſaid there, be watchful; that is, awake thou that ſleepeſt: And it was not a meer drowſineſs out of weakneſs of Spirits, but a Lethargical Diſeaſe contracted, which, if not cured, would prove a ſleeping in death; (as the Pſalmiſts phraſe is, Pſal 13. 3.) and in which theſe were even ready to expire: And anſwerably, every recovery from forth of theſe, is a fetching us again: And much ado God hath to keep many Saints Souls in Life, as the Pſalmiſts word is: And further, the word it ſelf, make perfect, ſignifying withal a Reſtauration, which reſpects decays; &c. It muſt needs be ſuppoſed to comprehend, and reach to a making perfect in every good work, after a decay, as well as a keeping from declining: That our firſt Calling is a bringing us back from death to Life, bearing the Image of Chriſt's Reſurrection, and wrought in us by the virtue thereof, none may deny: The Apoſtle Peter doth expreſs both, in his firſt Epiſtle: The former Chap. 1. 3. Bleſſed be the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again, unto a lively hope, by the Reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt from the dead: The Latter, Chap. 2. 25. For ye were as Sheep going aſtray, but are now returned unto the Shepherd, and Biſhop of your Souls. And the Apoſtle to the Hebrews had in that Clauſe inſerted in his Prayer, a reſpect to ſignifie that their Calling: As if he had pleaded thus; Oh God! Thou that haſt brought theſe Sheep of Chriſt back again from the dead, in calling them by vertue of him that is their Shepherd, and in him, of his being brought back again, ſo at the firſt; And now that Chriſt hath taken the charge of them, and that the virtue of his being brought back, continues after their being called, in the ſame vigour, and with the ſame efficacy, to all like purpoſes, as well as this; and that theſe his Sheep, thy Children, are after calling, ſubject to ſuch diſaſters, and decays, as are ſpi-

ces of Spiritual deaths, Oh Lord, perfect therefore thoſe whom thou haſt called, in every good work; the work that thou haſt begun, perfect to the end all along; If thou ſeeſt them depart, and go aſtray, reſtore them, (as the word ſignifies;) bring them back again into the right way; by virtue of that bringing back thy Son Jeſus from the dead; the ſame virtue continuing in it, for all events after Calling, as well as for afore: Yea, and the aim of his Prayer being directed for them that were called already; (as hath been ſhewn, and the word Perfecting argues, which is an adding to what is begun;) he muſt be ſuppoſed to have an eye in his urging Chriſts being brought back; that in reſemblance thereof there will be need of bringing back again ſome of thoſe, yea, many of thoſe that after Calling will have need thereof, and therefore in a ſpecial manner to have aimed at the caſe of ſuch as are backſliding, or turn'd out of the way, to reduce them again: And thus the Apoſtles Argument unto God in his Prayer, looks both forward and backward: Forward, unto their firſt Calling, making an Argument of it, that God, who had already called thoſe whom he prays for, that he, as he had done, ſo would continue much more to work the like after, even becauſe he at firſt began it, through the virtue, and according to the Example of Chriſt, his being brought back from the dead; which yet continues for them, in as much force as ever: And therefore if any ſuch occaſion, or need, falls out amongſt them that are called; (as there doth too often;) yet the ſame virtue, and the ſame Pattern, Similitude, Example of Chriſts being perpetually in Gods eye, would move him much more to fetch ſuch languiſhing, and almoſt dying Souls, back again to Life: So as this his Argument is moſt pertinent, and proper unto this caſe of all other; although it reacheth unto all other alſo, whoſe lot it may fall out never to be, but to be kept, and preſerved by the ſame vertue, in every good work unto the end. Chap. 13.

This Conſideration of ſuch a decayed, ſunk Soul, that hath been called, hath the moſt need of any other after Calling, to have this Reſtauration made good to it, and wrought by God, (who works all our works in us and for us) in him and for him: Now we have in the Text God that is to work it, the God of all Grace to his Called. And in the ſame Epiſtle to the Hebrews, Chap. 4. verſ. ult. 'tis ſaid, his grace, and mercy, is to help in time of need, and that againſt ſinful Infirmities as well as other; and to be ſure, that Caſe of Profeſſors we have recited, had moſt need to be prayed for.

This to ſhew the warrantable applying theſe Texts to the forementioned Caſes of lapſes into ſin, and remiſs neglects in good works.

But it may perhaps be ſtill queried, That this in the Hebrews is but meerly a Prayer, that God would be pleaſed to perfect them; not a Promiſe that he will.

To anſwer this, and confirm what I aſſert.

Anſwer 1. If both, or either, ſhould only be a Prayer, yet that muſt be founded on a Promiſe, as was afore obſerved: And there are to be found Promiſes of the Covenant of Grace that do expreſly utter what here the Apoſtle to the Hebrews prays for.

2. That this of Peter ſhould be intended as a direct Promiſe, that God will perform it, rather than ſimply a Prayer that he would, I have at large before given an account of. The matter of the Prayer in the one, is the ſame with the matter of the Promiſe in the other; only put into a ſeveral mode. The one prays God would perfect, by working what was pleaſing to him; the other promiſeth from God that he will work it. Peter in his Promiſe ſays, but in one general word, God will perfect, but names not wherein: But Paul to the Hebrews tells us wherein it is God will perfect us, whilſt he prays for his Hebrews that God would perfect them. And ſo it is but ſupplying thoſe words of Paul's Prayer, In every good work, &c. unto this Promiſe of Peter's, That God will make perfect, and we have what I aſſert, namely, that he will bring back again, and reſtore, and perfect every decayed, lapſed, truly called Chriſtian, after they have ſuffered a while, in every good work, and to do his will, &c.

Book IV. 3. But further, in the third place, conſider, That if there be a Promiſe at the bottom of either, (as none may deny but there muſt be) this Promiſe muſt be a Promiſe of the Covenant of Grace; a Branch growing out of the main Body of that Covenant: And the Reaſon general to both thoſe Scriptures, is, becauſe the matter promiſed or ſpoken of in either, is wholly a matter of eternal Salvation: And for the carrying us on thereunto, therefore it muſt neceſſarily be referred to that Head of Free-grace, and the Covenant thereof, as well as Calling at firſt is; which ſprings from the ſame. But particularly, 1. In my Text in Peter, the matter of it is clearly reſolved into Grace, &c. for it flows from God, as a God of Grace, yea, and as a God of all Grace. If therefore there be a Promiſe included in it, it muſt be a Promiſe of Grace; and a promiſe of the ſame kind and tenour with any of the reſt of thoſe Promiſes we uſe to call Promiſes of Grace, and of the Covenant of it: Yea, I ſay further, That take we the Covenant of Grace in the whole thereof, or any other ſingle part or branch of it whatever; as that, to write the Law in our hearts, to teach us to know him, &c. And this one here may not only take upon it the high born Title of a Promiſe of Grace, as any of them do; but may lay as full a claim of Intereſt in the heart of God for a performance of it ſelf by him, as not only any other part or branch may, but as the whole Covenant it ſelf may any way put in a Plea for the ſame: And the Reaſon is as clear; for the whole Covenant it ſelf, or any part of it, can have but all and the whole of God's Grace by promiſe bound over to make it good: And this, this one Promiſe hath to plead, even all; The God of all Grace who hath called us. Which God having once done, the Promiſe is, that αὐτὸς, the ſame God of all Grace will perfect us: For that whole Covenant of Grace can but have all the Grace that is in the heart of God to put it in execution; and ſurely, that is a ſufficient engagement; and look what there is for the whole, this here hath for its part alone; and though the performance of it hath our Calling to precede it, yet God having called us out of that Grace, it is as ſure for the future that he will perfect us, as that he hath called us.

And, 2. As for that Text in the Hebrews, though formally it be only a Prayer, yet materially it contains and refers to a Promiſe of the Covenant: There is mention made of the everlaſting Covenant which Chriſt ſhed his blood to ratifie the Promiſe of; it is a ſuperaddition unto that other Clauſe even now inſiſted on; which was, That God, who brought again from the dead, would perfect them; and then there is this added, through the blood of the everlaſting Covenant: The great Covenant, which we call of Grace, you ſee is mentioned. But you may demand, Unto what purpoſe it is it comes in here in a Prayer? There are two parts of this Prayer, (as generally almoſt in other of the Apoſtles) 1. The Prefatory part, which contains the Arguments or Motives to move God to grant what is petitioned. 2. Then follows the petitionary part, the thing petitioned; and theſe two are always ſuitable to one another. The firſt expreſſing the proper grounds of granting the thing ſupplicated for; and ſo it muſt be found, and applyed here; every Sentence in the Argumentative part, verſe 20. Now the God of peace that brought again from the dead our Lord Jeſus, that great Shepherd of the Sheep, through the blood of the everlaſting Covenant; is in a ſpecial manner influential unto the following petitionary part, in verſe 21. Make you perfect in every good work to do his will; working in you that which is well-pleaſing in his ſight, through Jeſus Chriſt; to whom be glory for ever and ever, Amen. The main Petition is, That God would perfect them in every good work: Now upon what proper and pertinent account this Clauſe in the firſt, The blood of the everlaſting Covenant, ſhould be an Argument to move God to perfect them that are called, &c. That is our Enquiry.

How proper unto this very thing, all the foregone Sentences are, is or may be obvious unto any: As, 1. How God's being the God of peace, ſhould move him to do this for us, (who are the perſons for whom this Petition is framed;) That God being at peace with us, through Chriſt our Peace, ſhould move him to go on to perfect his work begun in us; we may readily conceive and find it particularly ſo applyed unto the like Petition, in 1 Theſſal. 5. 23. being compared pared with 2 Epheſ. 13, 14, 16. Then the ſecond, Who brought back again Jeſus Chriſt from the dead; that this is a moſt proper ground why God ſhould bring us back from the dead, by Converſion at firſt; and then reducing us back from wandring after, and ſecuring us to Perfection; the account of that hath been even now given: And I may add this to what was then ſaid, That although Chriſt in his Perſon is alone made mention of, yet it is Chriſt as relative to, and repreſentative of us: For in his Reſurrection he is ſaid to be the firſt born from the dead, Coloſſ. 1. 18. Importing unto us, that were dead, to be born, or brought back from the dead after him, and by virtue of him. As alſo in 1 Cor. 15. 45, 46, 47. the Apoſtle argues; and that third Clauſe in the Text t ſelf, argues it; The great Shepherd of the Sheep; What doth that mean? but that Chriſt in his bringing back, was viewed by God in his relation to us, as the Shepherd, and we in him as his Sheep, who muſt be brought into the Fold to him, and none loſt; from this Argument, Becauſe he as the Shepherd was brought back firſt, and ſo we included in him therein; and not as conſidered ſingly in his own Perſon, or perſonal reſpects alone: And then he, after his Reſurrection, was perfected in the other world, Luke 13. 32. And he ſaid unto them, Go ye and tell the Fox, Behold, I caſt out Devils, and I do Cures to day and to morrow, and the third day I ſhall be perfected. So muſt we his Sheep be carried on to our deſigned perfection in this Life, and then perfected compleat in the other. Now if we, and this our Concern, be thus ſtill involved in all theſe former paſſages, then certainly the latter Clauſe, Through the blood of the eternal Covenant, doth take in us, and our Concerns likewiſe: And that as to this Senſe, that Chriſt's bringing back after his Bloodſhed, being by that Covenant made with him by God, that if he could dye, he would raiſe him again, &c. ſo that according to the ſame Covenant ſtruck with him for us, God's promiſe to him alſo was that he would bring us back, and eſpecially bring us to perfection alſo: And therefore he prays, Perfect them; according to that Covenant made for them, through the merit of his Blood, and in the virtue of his Reſurrection. And the Reaſon of this is, becauſe God's Covenant with Chriſt was not ſingly, or only for himſelf, and as to his Perſon only; for if ſo, ſingly conſidered, he ſhould not have needed to have died, or ſhed his blood; and ſo not to have needed a being brought back again, for he needed never have died: But it was of him as of a Shepherd, (as the Text in Hebr. 13. 20. ſhews) and to the end to bring back again by the merit of his Death, &c. his Sheep that were gone aſtray. And therefore the Covenant here with him, muſt neceſſarily include the Covenant made with him for us; that is, that God covenanted with him, at the ſame time, to do the ſame for us: Wherefore this of perfecting us in every good work, is here ſpecified in the main Branch, and requiſite to our Salvation; and therefore it is a part of that Covenant made with Chriſt for us, and ſo a main Promiſe of that Covenant. And indeed, the Scriptures do elſwhere repreſent the whole Covenant for us, and the Promiſes thereof to be a Covenant with Chriſt as our Head, and the whole of it, both with him and us, to be but as one entire Covenant: And even that part of it, for us; his Covenant rather than ours; and all the mercies of it Chriſt's mercies; Iſai. 55. 1, 2, 3, 4. Ho, every one that thirſteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money: come ye buy and eat, yea; come, buy wine and milk without money, and without price. Wherefore do ye ſpend money for that which is not bread? and your labour for that which ſatisfieth not? hearken diligently unto me, and eat ye that which is good, and let your ſoul delight it ſelf in fatneſs. Encline your ear, and come unto me: hear, and your ſoul ſhall live, and I will make an everlaſting Covenant with you, even the ſure mercies of David. Behold, I have given him for a witneſs to the people, a leader and commander to the people. And mercy to him, whilſt yet ours is ſpoken of; Pſal. 89. 28. &c. My mercy will I keep for him for evermore: and my Covenant ſhall ſtand faſt with him, &c. So then, the Reſolution of all this iſſues in this, That God ſhould perfect Chriſt's Sheep, whom he hath called into his Fold, is one direct and expreſs Promiſe of that Covenant which God made with Chriſt when he undertook to dye for us, and one Article of that great Treaty, and one Condition thereof with him, That if he would ſhed his blood, and ſave them, God would do this for his Sheep: And is as if he had in plain words ſaid, Lord here's one Branch, and Promiſe of thy Covenant made with Chriſt for us, which Chriſt ſealed and ratified with his blood; and thou haſt performed the other part; thou haſt brought Chriſt himſelf back from death, and raiſed him as our Shepherd to the height of glory; and thou haſt alſo performed already, as to theſe his Sheep; I pray for one main, and the firſt part of thy Covenant with them too: Thou haſt called them, O Lord; perform the reſt by virtue of the ſame Covenant, and the Blood thereof, and ceaſe not until thou haſt perfected them in every good work to do thy will, working in them what is pleaſing in thy ſight; and for which Chriſt hath ſhed his blood, as well as he hath done for his own, being raiſed up and perfected, and as effectually for this Branch, and part of it, that yet remains to be accompliſhed: So that the Apoſtle urgeth this, That God would perfect them, &c. as a Promiſe of the Covenant of Grace made with Chriſt, ratified with his blood. And to this purpoſe further obſerve, That it is that Covenant here he means; that is, The eternal Covenant, (ſo in the words) made with Chriſt from Eternity: And thoſe Promiſes, and that Covenant which were made and given to Chriſt, and in Chriſt to us, afore the world was; as Titus 1. 2. In hope of eternal Life, which God, that cannot lye, promiſed before the world began. And 2 Tim. 1. 4. and in that ſenſe here ſtyled, The blood of the everlaſting Covenant, as well as a Covenant to everlaſting: And accordingly this, which is a part of that Covenant, of God's perfecting us, was from everlaſting promiſed with the reſt, and is a Promiſe to everlaſting; and hath this Seal annexed to it, which God promiſed, who cannot lye, or fail in the performance of it: And thus underſtand the true and genuine end and reaſon of the Apoſtles bringing in, in this place, the mention of the eternal Covenant; nor can any other be ſuppoſed a more prevalent Argument unto God, as thus ſtated and interpreted.

Chap. 14.

Book IV.

CHAP. XIV.

What Sufferings we muſt neceſſarily undergo, before that God ſettles and ſtrengthens us in any eminent manner. The Reaſons why we muſt paſs through ſuch Sufferings before we are perfected. The Example of our Saviour. The wiſe appointment of God, who has ſo determined it to be for the trial of our Grace, and to glorifie his own Grace the more in ſtrengthning, recovering, and delivering us. What Encouragements we may draw even from this, neceſſity of our Suffering.

I PET. V. 10.

[After you have ſuffered a while]

I Come now to the limitation annexed, or the neceſſary prerequiſite for us to undergo, before that God ſtrengthens, ſettles us, in any eminent manner in this Life.

And therein,

1. That God hath ſet down with himſelf a neceſſity of our ſuffering, and undergoing outward ſufferings, and alſo inward Temptations to ſin, and from ſin, I ſhall after treat. 'Tis ſtrange that the Apoſtle ſhould not make an Abſolute promiſe of it, and roundly to have ſaid, he will ſtrengthen, &c. but he muſt clog the Promiſe with a Proviſo, (for ſuch it is,) After ye have ſuffered a while: Nor that Peter (if it be a Prayer) ſhould not have the Heart to pray for any one of his Brethren, the Saints, abſolutely and directly; that God would perfect them, ſettle them, &c. but his Prayer in the courſe of it, muſt be interrupted, and check't, as it were, with this Interpoſition, which his wiſh could not ſtep over; not as for any one Saint; but that he muſt firſt put in, after ye have ſuffered: It muſt be becauſe he knew it was the will of God, (which he had told us was the ſole Arbiter of our ſufferings,) And that not as to ſome few, but to the Brotherhood, or Fraternity of Saints in the World, That live any while after calling: (for that reſtriction alſo the words do ſuppoſe, who hath called you; and then ſuffered, a while after.)

The neceſſity of this muſt be wholly reſolved into the will, and determination of God: He will have it ſo.

There needs no other proof for it, than the inſtance of our Lord himſelf, Chriſt, that was ſet up, as our Pattern in all things elſe; and ſo in this neceſſity of ſuffering, Heb. 2. 10. It became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many Sons unto Glory, to make the Captain of their Salvation perfect, through ſufferings: That God, who ordained Chriſt, the Chieftain, the General, the Leader of all his Children, whom he bringeth unto Glory, was himſelf led this way: Both they, and he are, and was to paſs the Pikes: The Captain, Chriſt himſelf, broke through, and then carries us through an oppoſite posite Army of sufferings; under which Temptations are included: (as Vers. 18. of that Chapter shews:) For in that he himself hath suffered being Tempted, he is able to succour them that are Tempted. Yea and Christ himself is made Perfect by it; Consummate in Glory.

When one would train up a Person of worth, and fit him for great affairs, he gives him all sorts of breeding, to make him compleat every way; and (as you use to speak) a Compleat Man, a Perfect Man, as the Apostle speaks: But when the Great God would give his own Son an Education, worthy of such, and so great a Person, and fit him to rule, and be over all things, he chooseth to Train him up through sufferings, so to make him Perfect, through sufferings. A strange Education, and way of bringing up the King of all the World; as in that Chapter the Apostle had afore proclaimed him to be. But look, as there 'tis said, he was made perfect through sufferings; so we here, after ye have suffered a while, he will perfect you.

And truly the grounds and bottom reason why God so ordained for his Son, is resolved by the Apostle into two things.

1. Gods Soveraignty and Will: He would have obedience from him, in the way of suffering at his command:

2. And secondly, though he might have saved us by him another way, yet he would have our Salvation carried on, and accomplished that way; even through Sufferings and Temptations.

For the first; God's Will was to teach even him, his so great a Son, Obedience, Submission. And to know he was a Son unto so great a God, you have it expres, Hebr. 5. 8. Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered. Though he were a Son; that is, though he were so great a Son; (And how great a Son he was, and is, you may see in verse 5. Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee: Which Chap. 1. verse 5. he says, was never said to any meer Creature:) And his Father had a will to this, that he should shew this Obedience in Suffering; which therefore was in him the highest obedience and submission.

And truly, in that very place cited, Chap. 2. 18. You see how that God resolves his Will in this matter into his own Greatness, as the reason why he did so will and order it; it became him for whom are all things, and by whom are all things; that is, he being so Great a God that was his Father, he would be thus regarded, and respected, reverenced, and in this way obeyed, by his Son: And it became God to enjoyn this on him.

For the second: That however God would have our Salvation so carried on, is evident; so as if Christ would undertake to be the leader of us to Glory, he must do it by sufferings, and be himself our leader and Chieftain therein: I will not say this was absolutely necessary for God to order it so; (though the word here comes near to this elsewhere; as Heb. 7. 29. Such an high Priest became us; that is, was necessarily requisite for us:) But 'tis certain it was comly, and above all things else a Glory to God, to have it so: Says God, I that am the End of all things, and the Author of all things, I have one design my Heart is in above all, concerns me more than all, and that is, the bringing of many Sons to Glory, and I will have it done by sufferings; and though I might accomplish it otherwise, yet I think it meet to have it so: And both he that is to undertake to be their Captain, to bring them to Glory, (termed the Captain of their Salvation) he in conducting, and leading them on to that Glory, must and shall suffer; and they also that are conducted, must march and go the same way, and that of Suffering.

To confirm this, we find a must is put upon Christ's Sufferings: So Christ says of himself, The Son of Man must suffer, Matth. 16. 21. And Luke 17. 25. He must suffer many things: And John 3. 14. The Son of Man must be lift up: And an ought is put upon it, Luke 24. 26. Ought not Christ to have suffered these things; and to enter into his Glory? And wherein lay the necessity, the strength of that must, or ought? meerly in Gods so ordaining it: Acts 4. 28. To do whatsoever thy hand, and thy counsel determined before to be done.

You would think with your ſelves, ſure if Chriſt were ever tempted by the Devil, it would meerly and only ariſe from the Devils malice: But the Evangeliſt expreſly tells us, Matth. 4. 1. Jeſus was led of the Spirit, to be tempted, &c. Chriſt was our Leader, and ſo ſuffered being tempted: So the Spirit of God was his Leader, the Leader of him into Temptation. Chap. 14.

Now look as there was this neceſſity laid on him, to be made this way perfect; ſo alſo the like neceſſity laid upon us, by the ſame will and hand; Rom. 8. 29. For whom he did foreknow, he alſo did predeſtinate, to be conformed to the Image of his Son, that he might be the firſt born amongſt many Brethren: And this is particularly ſpoken in relation to ſufferings: And as Chriſt had his [ought, and muſt] ſo have we; Acts 14. 22. Confirming the Souls of the Diſciples, and exhorting them to continue in the Faith; and that we muſt, through much tribulation, enter into the Kingdom of God: A ſtrange way of comforting, ſtrengthning, and confirming the Brethren: But it was the common Principle the Primitive Chriſtians were trained up unto.

The reaſons for this, which in the Scriptures are more uſually rendred, are drawn à conſequenti, or à parte poſt; that is, from the good conſequence and fruit of them; as from the uſefulneſs, and profitableneſs: Heb. 12. 10. And that he delights to try our Graces; Prov. 3. 12. For whom the Lord loveth, he correcteth; even as a Father the Son, in whom he delighteth: And he trieth the righteous; Pſal. 11. 5. And 1 Pet. 1. 7. That the trial of your Faith may be found unto praiſe, and Honour, and Glory, at the appearing of Jeſus Chriſt: Which Job alſo hath, Chap. 23. 10. God therefore boaſted of his ſervant Job, Chap. 1. 8. as a General uſeth to boaſt of a great, and noble Champion: There are theſe, and many the like, which the Scriptures hold forth.

But theſe are not thoſe I am in the inqueſt after at this time: But the great Query is, à parte antè: That is, what ſhould move God, who might have brought us to Salvation another way; yet ſo, as no way would, or did pleaſe him, but this: They muſt be very great Ends: I ſhall take thoſe that hold correſpondency with the Text.

1. He is ſet forth in this, as a God of all Grace, (you will wonder perhaps at this reaſon, of all other,) and therefore ordained it to chooſe to bring us, and Chriſt, through ſufferings, and Temptations to Glory: Grace had the firſt choice of us; and therewith of the way of bringing us to Salvation: And where Grace ſets it ſelf moſt to love, there it ordains the moſt of Afflictions, and Temptations: So of Paul, (the next Man in Heaven to Chriſt;) Acts 19. 15, 16. He is a choſen veſſel to me: ſome ſtrange preferment ſure befell this Man, whom Chriſt doth ſo ſet out: But in verſ. 16. For I will ſhew him how great things he muſt ſuffer for my names ſake: You have in this, Gods everlaſting deſign upon him, in bringing him to Glory; as contrived in his firſt Choice of him: And you ſee a muſt falls upon him too; and 'tis Free Grace's paſſing it upon him, when it choſe him to Salvation.

But ſtill you will ſay, why is it that Grace ſhould do this? to expoſe thoſe, whom it loves thus, to Sufferings and Temptations? Truly,

1. Becauſe Grace is ſeen, and diſcovered moſt, in helping us, and relieving us: Heb. 4. 16. You read of a Throne erected, and it is a Throne of Grace: But what is it that doth eſtabliſh, and exalt that Throne? Truly, Helping us in time of need: In the execution thereof is exerciſed much of the Dominion and Soveraignty of Grace: Seen even in ſending ſeaſonable ſuccour, and relief, unto Men ſuffering, and diſtreſſed; in giving forth Grace and Mercy ſuitable to their Needs in ſufferings.

And together herewith God affected to confound his enemies, that would be oppoſite to us: This of Grace is a Monarchy, as you ſee in that Text: And Great Monarchies uſe to ſhew their Greatneſs, by victories over, and ſubduing Rebels, and Enemies that are incurable: Says God, I have ſet up Pharaoh, to ſhew whether he or I be the greater King: And leaves him to do his worſt: And ſo in the Text, you have the Devil your Enemy; And God lets him range up and down, as if he were looſe: And he is at one end of every Temptation or other: Our Luſts are the Sea that trouble, and toſs within us; but the Devil is the wind that ſtirs up thoſe waves: Chriſt by curbing, reſtraining, ing, rebuking him, defeating him by us weak Creatures, shews his Power: And God to shew his Grace towards us, affects not barely to save us, and that effectually; to shew himself a God of Grace to us; But in the doing of it to still, and foil the Enemies, and Avengers: He put this very thing into that first Gospel which he preach't; He shall bruise thy Heel: But thou shalt break his Head.

A second reason the Text holds a correspondency with, is, That we are called into Eternal Glory: So Great a Glory, as that God thought it meet we should know evil first, e're we arrived at that height of Happiness. I have often considered concerning the Man Jesus, That whereas the Prophet David, propheçying of his Exaltation, had only expresst what was matter of Glory, Psal. 68. 18. Thou hast ascended on high, &c. what it should be from which the Apostle should infer; as Ephes. 4. 9. Now in that he ascended, what is it but that he also descended first into the lower parts of the Earth; And my best resolve of it was chiefly from this, That Gods ordination was, that e're he would have the Man Jesus, (whose right yet it was upon his Personal union, to have been in Heaven, the first moment of his being Man,) to ascend to that height of Glory, not only in the Heavens, but far above all Heavens; as the Apostle there; That e're he did it, he would have him descend first into the lowest parts of the Earth; the lowest condition: And this was so strange, and wonderful a dealing of God with him, that in the next verse he proclaimed it as a spectacle for God, Angels, and Men, to view, and behold: That He, one and the same Person, so abased and lower'd first, should be after, so exalted: Thus Vers. 10. He that descended is the same also that ascended: And he seems to point to him; that [He] the same individual Man should be the subject of both: And as if he had said, was ever the like seen? The Apostle doth the like, 1 Tim. 3. ult. First, God manifest in the Flesh, in an humble, frail condition; so he begins: Then received up into Glory; so he ends: And seen of Angels, placed in the middle; as Spectators, and Admirers of this so vastly differing a contrariety of condition.

As for us Men, It is the Law of Sons, Heb. 12. 6. 2. Sam. 7. 14. 'Tis the Law for an Heir to the Crown of Life; the Common Law for obtainment of Glory; James 1. 12. Blessed is the Man that endureth Temptations; for when he is tried, he shall receive the Crown of Life; which the Lord hath promised to them that love him: And this notwithstanding, Gods love to them, which is the Fundamental Law of that Law; yea, and this because of Gods Love to them; so it followws, Which the Lord hath promised to them that love him.

And the further reason of this is, That Heaven is not simply joy and Happiness, but a Glory; a Glory won by conquest; to him that overcometh: As in every one of the seven Epistles of the Revelation: It is a Crown won by Mastery; 2 Tim. 2. 5. And so by striving, according to certain Laws set to be observed by those that win: as it follows, And if a Man also strive for masteries, yet is he not Crowned, except he strive lawfully: Whereof this is the most eminent, and chief, Vers. 11, 12. It is a faithful saying; for if we be dead with him, we shall live with him: If we suffer with him, we shall also raign with him: This is a true, and as faithful a saying, as the Gospel of Salvation it self is: Even the same he had spoken in his first Epistle, 1. Chap. 1. 15. And look what Glory it is that by conquest and masteries is won, is more valuable, as Jacob said, The portion I won with my sword, and my Bow; This he gave to Joseph, above his Brethren; Genes. 48. ult. which he therefore esteemed above any other: And thus saith Christ of us, and that Glory he hath purchased for us: And so shall we of that Glory to be revealed; we are more than conquerors, through him that loved us, Rom. 8.

You have seen the necessity of the Apostles putting in this Clause, After you have suffered, which our Flesh would perhaps have had left out; but he could not pass over and omit it, because God had not: Let us now, notwithstanding, see what Comforts and Encouragements this very addition will afford us.

As

As I fetcht Arguments of Support and Encouragement from each word in the Text, ſo I ſhall add ſome from theſe words (as they have now been opened) of this Limitation, After ye have ſuffered a while. You will find, that out of the ſtrong and ſowr Carkaſs of this dreadful Lion, (and to a Lion, the chief Inſtrument of our Sufferings is compared, verſe 9.) will come ſweetneſs. Chap. 14.

To which purpoſe, my

Firſt Obſervation is, That God, the God of all Grace, looks at Believer's Temptations of all ſorts; not Perſecutions only from without, but Temptations from ſin, or unto ſin, by Satan, and Conflicts with Satan our Adverſary: And they are conſidered by him, under the notion of our Sufferings; which is a great matter unto us, and a part of deep Conſolation.

Our Apoſtle, to put an Obſervancy upon this, chooſeth to give that very name and denomination of Sufferings unto our Temptations: He hath put it up twice; firſt in verſe 9. Knowing that the ſame affliction: and again, in verſe 10. After ye have ſuffered a while; namely, under Satan's Temptations; (It is all one and the ſame word in both verſes:) So then, if your Souls have been brought to look at the Temptations you have to ſins, as your greateſt Afflictions; The God of all Grace is pleaſed to reckon them ſuch alſo. Many Interpreters, becauſe the word Sufferings and Afflictions is uſed of outward miſeries, would limit it unto outward Perſecutions for the Profeſſion of the Faith, which the Devil ſtirreth up againſt all the Saints throughout the world. But Gerard, with Calvin and others, are full in it, That all ſorts of Temptations, even unto ſins, as well as Perſecutions for the Faith, are intended, and that principally.

Now unto the Reaſons, at the firſt entrance of that firſt part of my Diſcourſe, on this Text, which ſhewed that it was a common Engagement againſt Satan in point of ſin, I ſhall add, as further ſtrengthning to thoſe then given, ſome other out of the Text, by drawing a Line, or kind of Coherence through the whole Paragraph, from verſe 8. to verſe 12. And the Series of a Text affords the ſtrongeſt Arguments: Here is, 1. An Exhortation, 2. A Danger, 3. The Encouragement againſt this: And theſe three are all commenſurable.

1. An Exhortation, Be ſober and watchful: And,

2. A Danger propoſed, Becauſe the Devil goes up and down ſeeking whom he may devour; namely, if this watchfulneſs be neglected: And the danger muſt be underſtood in reſpect of that which we are to watch againſt, and as largely: Neither indeed can Satan indeed truly devour us any other way, than by drawing us unto ſatisfying thoſe Luſts, which we are to watch againſt; to be ſure not by Perſecutions; and then only by our yielding unto ſin.

Then, 3. Look how far ſobriety and watchfulneſs do reach, and the danger ſet before them to back that, extendeth; ſo far muſt alſo that other Exhortation that follows thereupon; namely, that reſiſt ſtedfaſt in the Faith, alſo reach. And what is that reſiſtance, but to oppoſe him in all Aſſaults, which ſhall be contrary unto that former ſobriety: And indeed, wherein is the Devil reſiſted by us, but in reſiſting his Temptations to ſin: Yea, ſays Calvin, be ſober and watch; attenti ad reſiſtendum; heedful to reſiſt: So as he brings down that former Exhortation unto this of reſiſting. And interpreteth alſo, 1. Theſe words, ſtedfaſt in the faith, not of the Doctrine of Faith, but of the Grace and Exerciſe of Faith, by which it is that Temptations to ſin are moſt reſiſted, called therefore the Shield of Faith; and this the Parallel of James and Peter do further manifeſtly confirm; God reſiſteth the proud, ſaith Peter, 1 Pet. 5. 5. and giveth grace to the humble; that humble themſelves therefore under the mighty, or ſoveraign, ſupream Hand, or Government of God; verſe 6 Be ſober and watch; becauſe of your Adverſary; verſe 8. whom reſiſt ſtedfaſt in the faith, verſe 9. Thus Peter. To confirm this by parallel Scripture,

Compare we James, Chap. 4. 6, 7. God reſiſts the proud, (ſays he) but gives grace to the humble: Submit your ſelves therefore to God: Reſiſt the Devil, &c. Now it is evident, that the Scope of James his Exhortation, is to reſiſt the Devil in his Aſſaults, in point of Luſts; read verſ. 1, 2, 3, 4. and particularly that Luſt of Envy and Pride, verſ. 5, 6. which were the ſpecial

Book IV.

Luſts of thoſe he wrote unto: Now Peter's Exhortation is the ſame in this Particular.

Add to this, that we find that Sobriety, which is in the Head of the Exhortation, reſpecteth Abſtinence from Luſts, every where; yea, in our Apoſtle Peter alſo, 1 Pet. 1. 13. Wherefore gird up the loins of your minds; (that is, your looſe Affections;) Be ſober, &c. Sober, in reſpect unto what? It follows, Not faſhioning your ſelves, according [to the former luſts] verſe 4. Watchfulneſs alſo, which is the next, is to be underſtood as chiefly intended againſt all ſorts of Luſts; ſo Luke 21. 34, 36. And take heed to your ſelves, leſt at any time your hearts be overcharged with ſurfetting and drunkenneſs, and cares of this life, and ſo that day come upon you unawares. Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to eſcape all theſe things that ſhall come to paſs, and to ſtand before the Son of Man. 1 Theſſ. 5. 6, 7. Therefore let us not ſleep as do others: but let us watch and be ſober. For they that ſleep, ſleep in the night, and they that be drunken, are drunken in the night. Hence therefore this Exhortation that follows, whom reſiſt: reacheth unto his ſtirring up of luſts, and tempting us to ſin thereby.

4. Here follows this Encouragement unto all theſe, Knowing, that is, conſidering, that the ſame afflictions are accompliſhed in your Brethren that are in the world; that is, to be tempted by him, as you are, is the common lot of all the Saints. Now if the Incouragement were limited only to Perſecutions, (as thoſe Interpreters would have us underſtand it,) and that yet the Exhortations foregoing, which occaſioned this, ſhould be meant of reſiſting Satan in all his Temptations unto ſin and luſts, (as hath been ſhewn) then this Encouragement were too ſhort, if not altogether clean beſides, and no way affording any ſuch matter, that ſhould hearten them to reſiſt Satan in point of ſinning, and about luſts; it had been utterly forraign; it afforded, to be ſure, not a correſpondent and adequate ground thereunto.

Laſtly, Here is a Promiſe, (as I ſhall ſhew) or Prayer, (call it which you will for the preſent) ſuperadded, to back the whole, and every whit of theſe things foregone; But the God of all grace, after ye have ſuffered a while, ſhall make you perfect, ſtabliſh, ſtrengthen, ſettle you. And the extent of this Promiſe coming in to back them, ſhews the extent of theſe Exhortations: And mutually the extent of thoſe Exhortations, do likewiſe argue the extent of this Promiſe, ſpecially of that latter Exhortation afore it, which this Promiſe doth immediately follow and ſucceed, and hath reſpect to it.

And from this laſt, (the Promiſe) it being added to the former, and making the Series of the whole Paragraph compleat; I ſhall argue, 1. In the General, from the compleatneſs of that Series: 2. In Particular.

1. In General: Here are three things found in the whole; 1. The Exhortation, 2. The Encouragement, 3. This Promiſe: And theſe evidently are all commenſurable, of one length and breadth in their extent: And ſo large as the matter and drift of the Exhortations do enlarge, is the ſcope and matter of the Encouragement; and ſo large as both, or each of theſe are, ſo large is the ſcope and drift of the Promiſe: For the ſcope of the Promiſe is, to hearten unto ſobriety, watchfulneſs, reſiſtance to Satan: And theſe are ſpecially to be underſtood, as in point of Luſts and Temptations from Satan unto Sin.

But this will further appear, if we conſider the Particulars in the Promiſe, and how the words of it do ſuit, and anſwer to the matter of the Exhortation.

1. In his ſtiling God, The God of all Grace, which is the foundation of the Promiſe; and that, as he had ſaid, verſe 5. He giveth grace to the humble: And what is the Grace there meant? but Grace contrary to the luſt of Pride, (which is there alſo mentioned.) and by like reaſon every Luſt elſe: And the oppoſite Grace is intended therein; ſo as the God of all Grace is that God, who is ready, and will give, all ſorts of Grace and Aſſiſtance againſt all ſorts of Luſts and Temptations thereunto; God having a variety of all Grace, ſuited as a remedy to every Luſt and Aſſault; as I have at large expounded: And there-therefore Temptations to all ſorts of ſins muſt be meant, commenſurably to all Grace.

Chap. 14.

Now obſerve how theſe are ſtiled ſufferings; After ye have ſuffered a while; namely, by and through theſe Temptations, of what kind ſoever; and ſpecially in ſins: For thoſe are the Temptations his Grace is the ſuccour unto: And what, ſhall we after all this, limit this Clauſe, after ye have ſuffered, which is in the very midſt of all, unto ſufferings by Perſecutions only? Nay ſurely, in all aſſaults from Satan; wherein it is God ſhews himſelf, to be a God of Grace moſt, and of all Grace; and promiſeth ſo to be; yea, and in our being foiled by him: Therein we are reckoned by this God of Grace, to ſuffer moſt; and we our ſelves look on them ſo to be; (as alſo hath been ſaid).

Finally, to conclude this, the things promiſed, or the Particulars of the matter of the Promiſe, in the next words, (which are ſo many heap'd up, to include all) do evidently argue the ſame; which are, that after you have ſuffered a while, he will make you perfect, ſtrengthen, ſtabliſh, ſettle you: You may diſcern one contrary from, and by another: Theſe all ſpeak ſupplies of Grace, from the God of Grace; oppoſite to what thoſe ſufferings were, or to what was in thoſe ſufferings; for they contain the remedies againſt them. To make us perfect, is certainly by giving us more Grace; as in many places of the New Teſtament; Heb. 13.21. Make you perfect in every good work, to do his will; working in you that which is well-pleaſing in his ſight, through Jeſus Chriſt; to whom be Glory for ever, and ever: Amen. To name no more: It is moſtly ſeen in working oppoſite Graces unto our ſins; cauſing us to grow up to perfect holineſs; (as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 2 Cor. 7. 1.) which in Scripture ſenſe is brought to paſs, by further advances thereunto: And ſuch are ſtiled perfect; that is, comparatively to what they were, or others are: And ſo by helping us to overcome thoſe Luſts, which did formerly ſo mutiny and war in our Members: The other of ſtrengthning, is ſpoken in relation to our weak hands, and feeble knees, that make us apt to turn out of the way, and to be prevail'd upon by Satan: Alſo ſettling, ſtabliſhing our Hearts, in confidence and aſſurance of his love againſt doubts, and fears of our acceptation in Grace; as alſo, waverings of Spirit, and toſſing with winds of Doctrines and Opinions: All theſe are Temptations to ſinning, and prevailings of ſin, which the Saints are incident unto: And as reliefs, againſt all which, theſe words of the promiſe are directed and intended.

So then, we have gained this high and great point of Conſolation, out of the Text: That our God, The God of all Grace, who is the looker on in all our conflicts; that as he doth look upon Satan as our adverſary, ſo upon us his poor Children, (who are the Brotherhood, that are ſaid to have that one Father, Matth. 23.8,9.) as ſufferers under all his Temptations; yea, and as ſuch, and under all our weakneſſes, to reſiſt him; (or being expoſed, and apt to be prevail'd againſt by Satan, it is, that God thus conſiders, I ſay, our weakneſſes; for thereunto ſettle, ſtrengthen, ſtabliſh, muſt needs refer; even ſo it pleaſeth him to do; than which nothing can be of greater Conſolation or Encouragement.

See but elſewhere how the Scripture ſpeaks as concerning this matter.

Is Peter tempted, and prevailed upon, as to deny his Maſter? Chriſt in his love terms it a winnowing, as by Satan; (ſo out of infinite tenderneſs to him he expreſſeth it, he might have given it a fouler word;) a being toſt and tumbled by Satan as a Sufferer; rather than of a foul and ſcandalous diſhonouring of himſelf: Hath Paul a meſſenger to deal with him, whither with horrid, and blaſphemous injections, or puffings up of ſpiritual pride, or both? ſee how the Holy Ghoſt calls it a buffeting, and that of Satan; makes him a Sufferer, a Patient in it: 2 Cor. 12. 7. And leſt I ſhould be exalted above meaſure, through the abundance of the Revelations, there was given to me a thorn in the fleſh, the meſſenger of Satan, to buffet me, leſt I ſhould be exalted above meaſure: He being as truly a ſufferer therein, as a Father reckons his Child to be, when he is beaten in the Streets, by his Child's Adverſary, and his Book VI. his own; and ſo is provoked to pity and relieve him. The like you have, 1 Cor. 10. 13. no Temptation hath taken you: They had faln into Groſs ſins; yet he calls them by the name of Temptations.

1. And the reaſon is, as becauſe he is the God of all Grace, and loves our Perſons; which makes him to account ſin, (which is our greateſt real miſery) ſo it cauſeth him to look upon it as 'tis a miſery to us, whom he loves. Shall I ſay more than he hates ſin? I may ſay rather than as it is a ſin againſt himſelf; eſpecially when he conſiders how much, and how it is occaſioned by Satan, that hurries on to it.

2. As alſo becauſe his Grace, that is wrought in our Hearts, (which is but a drop to what is in him,) cauſeth our ſelves to look upon our ſins, and Corruptions, and Temptations, as our greateſt miſeries: Do you know the Heart of him that cried out, and ſaid, O miſerable Man that I am! who ſhall deliver me? And why, and whereupon ſaid he it? Even for having been held captive Why ſhould I enlarge upon a Point, which all the Saints with one conſent will give their verdict in upon experience; who uſe to look upon every Temptation, the next which they fear to fall into, or be caſt into, with as dreadful an eye, as a Man that is apt to Fevers, and Agues, doth upon the next Fit that is like to come upon him.

And this affords to us great, and high conſolation: For then it follows that our ſins and infirmities under Temptations, and Satan's hand, do move God to pity us, and help, in point of proneneſs to, or falling into ſin, more than under any other miſery that can befal us: Why? For they are the greateſt miſeries (which his Children have) even in his eye, who is their Father. Well might Paul ſay, who ſhall be againſt us, if God be for us? For if ſins, as they are Temptations and Miſeries, do move God for us, what is it elſe can be againſt us?

Of Envy, it is ſaid, that it is more fierce than wrath or anger; Prov. 27. 4. Wrath is cruel, and Anger is outragious; but who is able to ſtand afore envy? Wrath hath Crimes, and Injuries uſually for its Object to incenſe it; which yet the conſideration of ſome goodneſs, or worth in the Perſon, may allay, and turn away the fierceneſs of: But Envy, having for its Object, other Mens worth and excellencies, the greater they are, and the higher their plea is for a Man, the more doth envy ſwell. But the contrary is in God, by reaſon of his love and Grace to us: If his love is pleaſed to account our ſins through Temptations, our greateſt miſery, ſo as he is afflicted in all much more than we, a poor battered, humbled, bruiſed ſinner, a Child of God's, whom he hath ſo loved, and ſo long, coming and crying out to God againſt his ſins, and ſhewing him his wounds, and ſores that feſter; this moves all that is in God, who is a God of all Grace, to this kind reſolution, I have ſeen his ways, and I will heal him. I ask, how ſhall any thing be able to ſtand up, againſt ſuch a Soul? What will become of Satan's Accuſations againſt ſuch an one? Or his renewed aſſaults, though again, and again, they prevail? The Grace of God towards him will break his Heart again, and bring him in again: And Chriſt, he will ſtrike in, and intercede for his reſtoring, when faln; And then for his Pardon, when reſtored: And in the end, God will give more Grace to overcome, as is promiſed in the Text. After you have ſuffered a while, the God of all Grace by Jeſus Chriſt, ſhall ſtrengthen, make you perfect: And where is Satan then; And what is become of all his Temptations?

Another Encouragement concerning theſe ſufferings is, that they are ſaid to be accompliſhed, or perfected, in all the Brotherhood in the World: There muſt be ſome great thing in this, importing this to be a matter wherein God drives on a glorious, and mighty deſign, which he hath to accompliſh and perfect: And that 'tis a General, and an univerſal one, wherein every Saint in the World hath a ſhare and lot.

Ἐπιτελεῖσθαι.

There

There are no paſſages fall out in the World, that have more confuſion in them, than Satan's Temptations, in the varieties of them, exerciſed on the Spirits of Holy Men, Believers. A poor Believers Heart in Temptation, hath the Face of the Chaos; and darkneſs and deformity covers and overſpreads it: The Devil ſits a brooding upon the Surface of it; And yet there are no paſſages out of which God brings forth a greater Light and Glory, in the iſſue; even as he then did Light, yea, this whole World out of that darkneſs. Chap. 14.

To break open this ſmall Box of Ointment, I have afore opened the ſignificany of this word, here uſed, but Doctrinally then: What I ſhall now add, is in Application, by way of Comfort; 1. The word here uſed hath reſpect to God's eternal decree and appointment, as laying forth and ſetting out all and every one of them, Sufferings in particular, which each ſhall ſuffer; as likewiſe, as having ordered them all in a glorious wiſdom, to the greateſt good. Thus Gerard on the place, quoting Rom. 8. 28, 29. And we know that all things work together for good, to them that love God; to them who are the Called, according to his purpoſe: For whom he did foreknow, he alſo did predeſtinate, to be conformed to the image of his Son; that he might be the firſt born amongſt many Brethren. The coherence whereof with the former, ſpeaks this, That therefore all things, and ſo Temptations, work, and work together for good, 'tis the common task and work of all, and that becauſe they are ſo aforehand appointed and deſigned by God ſo to do; by that God that choſe us, and foreknew us, as there; The God of all Grace, as here: So that the Apoſtles ſcope herein is, Quiet your ſelves by Faith as concerning them; let Temptations, or rather let God have the perfect work of them upon you, by them in you, and the end will be glorious: Satan is in all your Trials, but working out God's great ends, to his own greater confuſion, and your good. Know (ſays he) that it is God's work which is a carrying on in all theſe; and his work is always perfect, Deut. 32. 4. and if ever he ſhewed his skill, his artifice, in any work, it is in this; for there is nothing he ever aimed at more, than the Devil's Confuſion, and your Salvation; and that as they are both carried on together in and by every Temptation of yours.

And there is not one of them, no not the leaſt, but tend to make perfect the whole of God's deſign, upon the whole Body of his Elect, and no one can be wanting to the compleating of them: And at the latter Day, thy ſelf wouldſt not have wanted one of them, how grievous ſoever they are at preſent, when thou ſhalt ſee how each of thine conduce to the finiſhing an whole, perfect, and exact ſtory of the Body and Spouſe of Chriſt, to be joyned as a Supplement to that great Hiſtory of Chriſt's: And bleſſed therefore is the man that endureth Temptation. 'Tis ſtrange, that the ſending of Satan ſhould be termed a Gift, yet ſo it is; There was given me the Meſſenger of Satan, or, the Angel and Meſſenger Satan: The words bear both. 2 Cor. 12. 7.

2. For thy comfort in thy Sufferings, this wore ἐπιτελεῖσθαι, (as I have ſhewed before) hath a reſpect unto the perfecting and finiſhing Chriſt's Sufferings. 'Tis Calvin's obſervation on the words; Perfici in fidelibus quotidiè, quæ deſunt paſſionibus Chriſti: that is, That hereby are perfected in the Saints (I rather ſay with the Apoſtle) which are behind of the Sufferings of Chriſt; and do rather underſtand them to be a new addition to Chriſt's Sufferings, in a conformity unto him, which yet he is pleaſed to reckon his: And here, of our Temptations, there is an ἐπὶ added, ſo making it a compouud, which may, and here doth import, a making perfect a thing that had gone afore; and ſo an adding a new perfection unto another former finiſhing, thereby to render the former yet more perfect. See Calvin in locum.

The only difficulty in this point is, That whereas I include Satan's Temptations to ſin, and the fallings of the Saints into ſin, upon his Temptations, to be a part, (and if a part, the greateſt part) of the Sufferings here intended; How theſe can be accounted the perfecting, or an addition to the Sufferings of Chriſt, as our Head.

My

BOOK IV.

My Solution is,

1. That look what is ſimply matter of Temptation in it, as from Satan, on his part, that alſo was Chriſt's lot to bear, as well as ours, and in like manner to be tempted by him. The place is expreſs, Hebr. 4. 15. Who was in all points tempted as we are; yet without ſin: His Exception [without ſin] is to be underſtood, that the Temptations, (whatever they were) were without ſinning on his part, as to the Iſſue of the Temptation in himſelf. But as for the Temptation it ſelf, as on Satan's part, He was tempted in all things; (that is, all ſorts of ways) like as we: And therefore for us to be followed with the ſame Temptations, by the ſame Devil, (that apart and alone conſidered) is but a conformity unto Chriſt as our Head; and ſo to accompliſh, or make perfect the after Temptations of Chriſt.

2. But ſecondly, Conſider them as ſins which do accompany them in us; yet ſuch is the Grace of our God, that although, as now we are Creatures, and Perſons in our ſelves conſidered, he looks upon all our ſins as great guiles and defilements in us, and abominations loathſome to himſelf, yet he, conſidering us as Members of his Son, (though not as Members of him in our ſinning; God forbid: For that is the Devil's work) he looks upon us who do ſo ſin, and whilſt we ſin, as Members appertaining unto Chriſt; and in this reſpect he accounts our ſinnings, our ſufferings, (ſuch is his goodneſs) yea, and the Divine Nature in the Saints too, (which in its kind, though with imperfection, is affected in things as God is) doth cauſe them to look upon their own ſinnings, as their ſufferings; and of all the greateſt: And each cries out, O miſerable man that I am! And they do caſt them into that account and head of Sufferings endured in their lives: And thou that reckoneſt them not among thy Pleaſures, but thy greateſt Afflictions, thou ſhalt have in the end a Victory, from the God of all Grace, and he will ſupport, and in the end perfect thee: And Chriſt, that was himſelf tempted, and who overcame Satan for thee, will overcome Satan in thee; he will cauſe thee to triumph in the end, and to be more than a Conqueror.

Unto both which I may add further, for our comfort and relief, as touching this Particular; that not Chriſt, whilſt on Earth only, hath ſuffered from Satan, as well as we, in the manner ſpecified; but to accompliſh this his Fathers great deſign in us, and upon us, it is, that he ſuffers himſelf now in Heaven to be, though not tempted, yet I may ſay troubled with this Devil, (Pardon the word, till you hear how I mean it:) But it is wholly for us, and on our behalf, and for our ſakes, for whom he there appears an advocate; that is, that although Chriſt hath already, de jure, deſpoiled Satan of all his Power, againſt us; further then as God gives new, freſh, and occaſional leave; and himſelf, now in Heaven, is no way expoſed to be tempted by him, as whilſt he was on Earth, nor in any ſuch reſpect may be ſaid ſo to be in his own Perſon; yet he hath left ſo much power to him againſt us, as doth occaſion much work to himſelf; which after the day of Judgment he ſhall be eaſed of: Himſelf is ſtill greatly exerciſed upon occaſions from him, in behalf of us: That very office of Advocateſhip of his, which he hath undertaken for us, was in a great meaſure ſet up, and on purpoſe occaſioned by God to oppoſe Satan; and to take our Parts; and maintain our lot againſt him at the Throne of God: He obtains leave of God to tempt, and winnow us; and then goes and accuſeth us unto God: And upon all ſuch Accuſations, Chriſt is put to pray full hard for us now, as well as whilſt he was on Earth, for Peter. And in John 17. for all the Apoſtles, that our Faith fail not: Becauſe Satan thus both winnows, and then accuſeth us to God; I may ſay as Paul of himſelf to the Galatians, Gal. 6. 17. in another caſe, Chriſt is put to buſineſs: Yea, unto much buſineſs, by reaſon of Satan and that by means of our ſinnings, and corruptions: And he hath alſo greatly to do with Satan about the ruling of this World: A great deal of work to overthrow Satan's designs therein: And both in that too, and which is for our ſakes, in this other of his Aſſaults upon us, &c. Chriſt expoſeth himſelf to a kind of Tryal with him, upon multitudes of occaſions; that is, tries it out with him: Becauſe Satan will ſtill be medling, and oppoſeing him, and putting it to the vye, who ſhall carry it and prevail; Satan, the Prince of the Air, the God of this World; or he the King of Saints, and Lord of Lords: Chriſt diſputes every inch of Ground he wins from him, in our Hearts, and in the World. I have ſpoken this to the end, that if Chriſt, not only when he was on Earth, but now he is in Heaven, hath, and hath had ſo much to do with him, then may you comfort, and quiet your ſelves, though you continue to be exerciſed with him, in ſore vexations whilſt on Earth: For now it is that your turn is come of ſufferings, to bear your part on Earth, (after Chriſt had firſt gone through his upon Earth;) as a fulfilling the after ſufferings of Chriſt, and ſince now, whilſt in Heaven, he is ſtill exerciſed thus; and is fain to wait till this his enemy be actually, and de facto, perfectly ſubdued, and made his footſtool: We ſhould then be heartned under them, and againſt them, expecting that happy Iſſue, which Chriſt himſelf doth.

CHAP. XV.

The actual performance of those Promises of perfecting, ſtabliſhing, ſtrengthning, ſettling us. The manner and means whereby God preſerves us, and carries us on to perſevere unto the end. His particular care over us, how expreſſed in Scripture, by the vigilancy of his Eye in all our ways; by accompanying us continually with his Preſence; by his guarding us in Safety; by his having us always in remembrance. What it is concerning us, that his Care is moſt exerciſed about. His principal Care is of our Souls: How it is that he preſerves them in Life.

I PET. V. Verſes 7. and 10. compared.

Caſting all your care upon him, for he careth for you. But the God of all Grace, who hath called us into his eternal Glory by Chriſt Jeſus, after that ye have ſuffered a while, make you perfect, ſtabliſh, ſtrengthen, ſettle you.

WHEN I handled thoſe words, The God of all Grace, I ſhewed how the purpoſing Grace of God, (which takes up the principal part of the meaning of that Clauſe) had before all worlds, ordered and contrived all things about us, both Temptations and Sins that ſhould befall us after Calling, and the Iſſues out of them by Repentances and Returnings back again unto God: And that all theſe were ſo fore-laid and diſpoſed, as all was thereby made ſure, as David expreſſeth it in his own Perſon for us all, A Covenant ordered in all things and ſure, 2 Sam. 23. 5. Now then (as the Counterpane unto this) I am to ſhew how after Calling, executive Grace, (the other was the Legiſlative or Diſpoſitive Grace) or as the ſeventh Verſe, God's caring Grace doth according to his former purpoſes laid, perform this all along. And unto the fuller carrying on of this, I ſhall call in the Suffrage of the ſeventh Verſe, Caſting all your care upon him, for he careth for you; as being in the General moſt fitly expreſſive of this Point in hand: For to a ſteady eye that exactly obſerveth the Series of one Speech after the other, the words of the ſeventh Verſe do pour forth their ſtream into the Chanel of the tenth Verſe, and both ſtreams there meet in this one Scope, namely, to comfort Believers againſt all Temptations of ſin, or from Satan, &c. The Apoſtle firſt ſending out that Promiſe there in the ſeventh Verſe, as in the fore-front; and then follows this other in the tenth Verſe, as in the Rear and Concluſion.

Caſt

Caſt all your Care upon him, that is, your Cares of all ſorts, your Burthen, ſays the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 53. 22. (whence the words are taken:) For he that is the mighty God, (ſays Peter, verſe 6.) careth for you, verſe 7. Which words are at no hand to be limited unto outward Afflictions only, but do more ſpecially concern our cares and burthens about Temptations: For what doth immediately follow, namely, Be ſober: For your Adverſary the Devil walks up and down, &c. It is his temptations, and the inſobriety of our own hearts, and inordinacy of our own luſts, that afford the ſoareſt burthens, and moſt heart-eating cares of any other Sufferings: But our hearts being ſupported by theſe two ſtrong Pillars of Conſolation, may have full ſtedfaſtneſs of Faith, to which he exhorts them, verſe 9. Chap. 15.

And whilſt thus you view the words in this Coherence, you may behold Satan, and all your Spiritual Adverſaries, as in a Toil, ſurrounded, and every way encompaſſed with a God that careth for you in all your Cares, that on the one part he is before Satan; and, A God of all Grace, that will perfect you on the other part, behind him. What then ſhould we fear?

The general Obſervation I ſingle out of all, is,

> That as you have a God of all Grace that called you, and engaged to preſerve you; ſo you have, after your Calling, the ſame God of all Grace, a mighty God, that careth for you, to perform it, and to make it good.

God's care in the Execution is the Point in hand.

In proſecuting of which, my chief deſign ſhall be to draw forth into view the Particulars of God's care herein; and therein not barely relating to Experiences, but as we find Scriptures withal confirming them. All which Particulars put together, will ariſe to as effectual and comfortable a Satisfaction in the Point of the Perſeverance of the Saints, as any other way of arguing it that is uſed.

Firſt, Let us conſider how the Scriptures repreſent the ſtrictneſs of his care over us: As,

1. By the Vigilancy of his Eye in all our ways. Our Peter, out of many places in the Old Teſtament, where that ſaying is found, hath inſerted it once for all in the New, in this Epiſtle, Chap. 3. verſe 12. The eyes of the Lord are over the righteous: It is ſpoken in reſpect of an eminent Care had to them: For otherwiſe we find elſewhere, That the eyes of the Lord are in every place, beholding the evil and the good; ſo Prov. 25. 3. But yet ſo, and in ſo ſpecial a manner over the Righteous, as if he minded none elſe; Iſai. 66. 2. All theſe things have my hands made: But to him will I look, who is of a contrite Spirit. He profeſſeth (as it were) to overlook all the other works of his hands; fixing the Acies of his Eye on ſuch a Man; that is, ſo to look on him, as to look to him; and as if he had none elſe to look to in the world. In Jeremiah, Chap. 24. 6, 7. you have it thus, I will ſet mine eyes upon them for good, to take care of them, and bring them back again: to build them, and to give them an heart to know me, and to return to me with their whole heart. Yea, whereas we here in the Text, verſe 8. are exhorted to watch, who, poor Creatures, fall aſleep often: The very ſame is ſaid of God, always to watch over us. (So in the ſame Jeremiah, Chap. 31. 28. And it ſhall come to paſs, that like as I have watched over them, to pluck up, and to break down, and to throw down, and to deſtroy, and to afflict: ſo will I watch over them, to build, and to plant, ſaith the Lord. As a Nurſe-keeper, whoſe eye and wakeful attention is upon a Child. There is a whole Pſalm on purpoſe made to expreſs this, Pſal. 121. The Lord is thy Keeper, verſe 5. that is, the burthen of it. It is three times repeated, to infix the ſecurity of it on our Souls; and with a Behold the ſecond time to awaken our drowſineſs to the obſervation of it, Verſe 3. He that keepeth thee will not ſlumber, Verſe 4. Behold, he that keepeth Iſrael, ſhall neither ſlumber nor ſleep. Verſe 5 The Lord is thy Keeper. Poor wandring Soul, thou haſt a Keeper takes care of thee, and that Keeper of thine is the Lord.

Who alſo takes this as a peculiar ſtile and office to himſelf in a ſpecial manner, to be The Keeper of all the Iſrael of God. And if that be too indefinite, he particularly brings it home unto every Saint for their comfort twice, The Lord is thy Keeper; that is, of the whole Iſrael of God in general, and of every Soul of that number, and ſo their Keeper, as of none elſe in the World: A Keeper ſo vigilant continually, that he never ſo much as ſlumbers, or ſhuts an eye, much leſs ſleepeth. The ſtrength of which attention is ſpent on this, To keep thy Soul from evil. So Verſe 7. The Lord ſhall preſerve them from all evil, he ſhall preſerve thy Soul; that is, from ſuch evils as would be deſtructive thereof, and of that ſtate of grace thou art in, that is his chiefeſt Charge. And with this attention thus to preſerve thee, he hath an eye upon thy goings out, and thy comings in. So Verſe ult. Go whither thou wilt: Yea, and he adds, From this time forth for ever more; that is, either from the firſt of that time, when he took charge of thee, and thou didſt begin to give thy ſelf up to his care, ever after, even for ever. Or rather, do thou begin to reckon at any time ſince thy Calling, Even from this now, this preſent time; and ſo for ever. Now when thou art ſo old, and he hath kept thee ſo long; and thou haſt (as to thy thoughts) ſo often forfeited his protection of thee; yet he renews the Guard over thee; his Care ſets his watch continually as ſtrict as ever, even from this time, &c. and that for ever. If indeed, as it is ſaid in the Goſpel, Whilſt the Husbandman ſlept, &c. ſo that there were but one moment, the twinkling of an eye, in which his eye might be off from thee, or careleſs of thee, there might be Suppoſition, That this our Adverſary the Devil might have an Advantage to devour thee, to chop thy Soul up in a moment; but God never ſlumbers: I the Lord keep it day and night, Iſai. 27. 3. And if that be not enough, he adds, every moment.

Nor, 2. Is it his Eye only that is intent upon them, as at a diſtance; but his Preſence continually accompanies them. Yea, it is further expreſſed, as by a continual attendance on us, Pſal. 23. 4. Though I walk through the Valley of the ſhadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me. Sheep wandring in dark places, (to which that whole Pſalm alludes) are obnoxious to be preys unto wild Beaſts: But if the Shepherd be with them, there is no danger to be ſure. If God (my Shepherd, verſe 1.) that is greater than all, be with us, none need be feared.

Yea, ſo watchful is he, as wherever we go, he is ſaid to follow us; even as one whoſe place (or duty) it is to attend a perſon committed to him. Thus verſe the laſt of that Pſalm, Surely mercy and goodneſs ſhall follow me all the days of my life, to ſee to me, and look after me.

And if Mercy and Goodneſs it ſelf undertake this task and charge, we ſhall be as ſurely kept. Thus Paul alſo; Not I, but the grace of God that is with me. He ſo ſpeaks of it, as his Guardian Aſſiſtant that accompanied him. The Phraſe is firſt uſed of the Patriarchs: And indeed next, to that Fundamental of the Covenant, I will be your God. The uſual Promiſe to the Patriarchs was, That God was and would be with them. An Heathen obſerved it of Abraham, Gen. 21. 22. And it came to paſs at that time, that Abimelech, and Phichol the chief Captain of his Hoſt, ſpake unto Abraham, ſaying, God is with thee in all that thou doſt. After that, he was the ſame to Iſaac; I will be with thee, and bleſs thee, Gen. 26. 3, 24. After that, to Jacob, Gen. 28. 15. Behold, I am with thee, and will keep thee, in all places whither thou goeſt. And I will not leave thee. To mention no more.

3. Not by his Preſence only, but taking us into ſure and ſafe cuſtody, which Peter mentions here alſo; ſpeaking of the mighty hand, Verſ. 6. of that God that cares for us, Verſ. 7.

1. Holding us by the hand, and that continually; ſee Pſal. 73. 23. I am continually with thee; thou haſt holden me by my right hand. Nay, and it is his right hand too, that holds thee by thy right hand: So Pſal. 139. 10. Pſal. 18. 35. and that to ſave thee, Pſal. 138. 7.

And

And to be yet more ſure; he is ſaid to take us into his hand, graſping us therewith, Deut. 23. 4. He loved the People, (or, is the lover of the Peoples, the great lover;) all his Saints are in thy hand; as Chriſt alſo, Joh. 10. 28. Chap. 15. Ainſworth.

And not in one, but in both. This Speech in Deuteronomy is not of a Shepherd holding his Sheep, but of a loving Husband embracing his Spouſe, holding her not in one arm only, but in both: So twice in the Canticles, Cant. 2. 6. and Chap. 8. 3. His left hand under my head, his right hand doth embrace me.

4. The Scripture expreſſeth this his care by the attentiveneſs of his memory; Pſal. 111. 5. Therefore is ever mindful of his Covenant: His Covenant, that is, that of Grace, which he had from everlaſting ordered in all things concerning us, that whereas it might be thought or feared, though he took ſure order for all things aforehand, yet in proceſs of time, may he not forget ſomething or other of neceſſary concernment to us? No; he hath all thoſe things continually afore him punctually; forgets not one tittle; but performs all in that manner as he did forelay them: He is ever mindful of his Covenant. The Lord will perfect (ſays David) or make compleat, that concerning me, Pſal. 138. ult. which he ſpeaks in relation to that Covenant ordered in all things as to his peculiar, which he now believed would be all punctually performed as hitherto it had been: As when he had finiſhed his Courſe, and was to dye, he profeſſeth.

If it be Objected, do not the Saints run into Evils, and go aſtray; How then is God's eye and care, &c. ſo continually over them, every moment as you have ſpoken of?

The Anſwer is; 1. During all ſuch times even of going aſtray, his eye and care is over them; yea, and over them moſt then: To moderate the Temptations and to take care that they themſelves exceed not the bounds of the State of Grace in ſinning, and be ſwallowed up and devoured of them. Our Peter himſelf, Chriſts care was moſt about him then, when he was to be foiled by Satan: I have prayed for thee, that thy Faith fail not, Luke 22. 32. So aforehand; And in the Temptation his heart aked for him; and at laſt his eye was upon him to purpoſe: He looked back, and you know what followed. In Iſai. 57. 17. When he went on forwardly, (ſays God) in the way of his heart: I have ſeen his ways, Verſ. 18. He ſaw him all the time of it, and took care not to let things go on ſo long as they ſhould be paſt cure and remedy according to his Rules. I have ſeen his ways, and I will heal him.

There is another clear Scripture for this, Pſal. 73. 2. But as for me, (ſays he, and you may wonder at me for it, who might be judged to have been better inſtructed?) My feet were almoſt gone, and my ſteps had well night ſlipped. Verſ. 3. For I was envious at the fooliſh; that is, at the proſperity of the wicked: I even wiſht my ſelf one of them. Yea, and was greatly tempted to throw off all Religion upon it, and turn Atheiſt. Yea, and the Temptation therein roſe up to a Verily, to a Concluſion in his own heart. verſ. 13. Verily I have cleanſed my heart in vain. And again, he fretted and had boiling thoughts, and angry litigations with God himſelf, as Calvin comments on the words, Verſ. 21. Thus my heart was leavened (as the Original) totus in fermento, filled with an angry ſourneſs: And I was pricked in my reins. Such motions and Affections of heart impetuouſly roſe up and enflamed me. Verſ. 22. So fooliſh was I and ignorant, and as a Beaſt, with thee, or afore thee, in my carriage towards thee.

But where was God in reſpect of the eye and preſence you ſpeak of, all this while? In view, he ſeemed to have as little eye to or care of this good Man this while; even as in governing the World, whilſt he ſuffered the wicked to proſper, which was his Temptation.

Well, but when the Prophet was come to himſelf and the Enchantment was diſſolved, he now clearly ſaw, that God had had as ſtrict and waking an eye over him all along as ever: Yea, and the care which God ſhewed him, even during this Temptation, as in the Iſſue appeared, became the greateſt pawn and pledge to him; assuring him, that God would preserve him for ever. Read from the 23th verse (where the Stream begins to turn into another Chanel) unto the end of the Psalm, Vers. 23. Nevertheless, thou art continually with me, thou hast holden me by my right hand. That nevertheless comes in upon the Narration of, and in Relation unto all that Miscarriage of his mentioned; so foolish was I, &c. nevertheless (which is the wonder of it, says he) or notwithstanding this, yet I am continually with thee. What! As to his own sense and apprehension, as if that he had held and kept up entire Communion with God all that while? No: For what he had said afore of the Evil frame of his heart is a contradiction thereunto. It is spoken then in respect of the eye and presence on Gods part, that God had towards him, which is evident by what follows, Thou hast holden me by my right hand: And so thereby had puld him forth of that horrible Temptation. And the experience he had learned of Gods care and preservation out of these passages towards him, assured him that God would preserve him for ever. Vers. 24 Thou shalt guide me with thy Counsel all my life long; and afterwards receive me to Glory. This is an inference as to the future, from that Experiment.

Yea, farther this place shews that at such times and Seasons wherein our hearts seem most loose, and left to themselves, God hath then the more stedfast eye; as the Mother of the Child, when sick, or as a Mariner hath most care and sollicitude of his Ship in a Storm; a Father the most wary regard to a little Child, he hath let go, to see what way of it self it will take. And therefore this acknowledgment is brought in by way of thankfulness and blessing God; as Calvin observes, for his presence with him and support of him then: That he was not wholly overturned or faln headlong, as off from a Precipice, as those words, Vers. 2. My steps well nigh were poured out, import.

The second Branch I make of handling this his care in the general, is, What is the principal Subject of his care? What it is taken up about?

First, His principal care is over our Souls, Psal. 121.7. The Lord shall preserve thee from all evil; The Lord shall preserve thy Soul. The latter is by way of Emphasis and Notoriety added. So that he that keeps thy Bones, thy Body the sheath, will be sure to look to thy Soul. And therefore God regards not so much to what he gives thy Name, thy Body, thy Estate up unto; what detriments and diminutions in thy outward Man befall thee therein, if they subserve to renew thy inward Man. Our Peter here, 1 Pet. 2.25. telleth us for our comfort, that when we are converted to God, we are returned to the Shepherd and Bishop, (or Overseeer) of our Souls. His eye is specially upon them, they are his Charge and Flock.

2. His care is principally exercised about preserving you, that no sin have Dominion over you. When Grace first takes hold of us, and calls us, it sets up a Dominion over us. Grace reigns to eternal life, Rom. 5. ult. even till then: And then we begin first to give up our selves to the Government of it. Which Peter here exhorts them to renew and continue to do; Humbling our selves under his Soveraign Hand or Power. Which we no sooner begin to do, but from thence forward the Soveraignty of Grace takes us into its Protection and Conduct. And the Fundamental Principle by which that Dominion of Grace stands and is continued over us, is, that sin never come again to have that Dominion which once it had. So Rom. 6. 14. Sin shall not have Dominion over you, for ye are under Grace. And the Reason of it is clear and plain, for Sin and Grace have and seek two opposite Dominions, and the Dominions of each are destructive of the Dominion of the other (and what an interest Dominion is, we all have seen and know) so as if ever sin should come to have its ancient Dominion and rule, as once the Grace of God, that now hath taken the Dominion, were Dethroned; or to use Paul's word, Gal. 2. 21. frustrated. But this the Interest of Grace it self, as it is contrary to sin, but specially in that it is an interest of Dominion, will never suffer or endure. And in this sense are the Promises of Keeping us from all evil, and Preserving us blameless, and the like, to be understood, (that is, blameless according to the Rules and Principles of the State of Grace) and so as in the end, to bring forth Judgment unto victory. Chap. 15.

And to that end 3. He takes special care of our feet, our steps, and goings, 1 Sam. 2. 9. He will keep the feet of his Saints. And whoever will undertake to keep himself (as it follows) by his own strength he shall not prevail.

Our Saviour Christ when he was to go out of this World, John 13. 1. (and then at death we shew what our cares towards those we love, are most upon) he shewed his greatest care to be of this. He would needs make that one of his last deeds, to wash his Disciples feet, Vers. 5. The mistery whereof he gives, Vers. 10. He that is washed needeth not save to wash his feet, for being justified by the blood of Christ (which is termed a washing, 1 Cor. 6. 11. and is total and at once) all the need and care that now remains is to preserve and keep a Man's steps and walkings, to keep him holy.

And again, Christ in his last prayer, John 17. 15. shews this was his care; It is one of his great requests, to keep them from the evil of the World, namely (as the words afore shew) from sinning as they of the World do sin.

Likewise Psal. 37. 23. it is said (which shews Gods eminent care herein) That the steps of a good Man are ordered by the Lord: And the Lord delighteth in his way: The latter is a reason of the former, that because God loves their persons and so desires to please himself in their ways, (and one we love, we desire should please us,) therefore, God doth studiously and with avisement, order all his steps.

Which ordering of our steps is in a special manner so to be understood, as to see to us and our steps so, as at least sin may not have Dominion over us: For which you may observe that joyning together of these two, Psal. 119. 133. Order my steps in thy word: And let not sin have Dominion over me.

Or if you will take another Expression of David; (which since I met with it hath much pleased me as to the point in Hand.) And therefore I will somewhat enlarge upon it. Psal. 66. 9. 10. 16. Which holdeth our Soul in Life, and suffereth not our feet to be moved. For thou, O God, hast proved us: Thou hast tried us, as silver is tried. Come and hear all ye that fear God, and I will declare what he hath done for my Soul.

There are two eminent benefits, or blessings Spiritual; and but two, that comprehend all other that take, and fill up the whole space of a Christians Life, from his first conversion to his death: 1. The work of Conversion, or estating him into Life, at first: 2. The preservation of that Life, and conduct of him unto Glory, through all the passages of his pilgrimage: And each of these in their kinds, wonderfull, and great: And if a controversie, and debate were admitted, which of them should be the greatest; it would be found that no jury of Mankind, could determine on either side; but must return, and leave it to Gods free Grace it self, which is the Author, and finisher of our Faith, to decide: And perhaps both will be found alike redounding unto the Glory of that Grace: For look as the works of Creation at first, and upholding all by his power, and providence, are yoked together as works of a like wonder, vouchsafed the Creation in common, Heb. 1. 2, 3. So just in the like manner we find Regeneration, and perseverance joyned, as the sum of all other works in this Life: Thus, Begotten again; And kept by the power of God to Salvation; are joyned by the Apostle, 1 Pet. 1. 3, and 5. called, and preserved in Christ Jesus: So in Jude Vers. 1. And Paul the same, 1 Thess. 5. 23, 24. And the very God of Peace sanctifie you wholly, and I pray God your whole Spirit, and Soul, and Body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it. And in the Old Testament; I have made or formed you; and I will bear, and support you: Isai. 46. 4. And I have made, and stablisht you, Deut. 32. 6. by both of which he shews himself a Father, as in the words afore: And accordingly the Saints are called upon to bless God more eminently for these two Grand and comprehensive Benefits: Blessed be God, says Peter, 1 Pet. 1. 3.

1. 3. who according to his abundant mercy, hath begotten us again, unto Life: And Oh! Bleſs our God ye people, which holdeth our Souls in Life: So the Pſalmiſt here: Yea, if we do narrowly eye the words in either, both Peter, and the Pſalmiſt do bleſs God for both at once: Bleſſed be God for begetting us: Who are alſo kept by the power of God: So it follows in Peter: In the Pſalmiſt, both are comprehended in this one word: 1. Which [putteth] our Souls in Life: [So the margents, out of the Hebrew:] that is, who puts Life into your Souls at the firſt, as he did into Adam, when he made him a living Soul: 2. And then, which holdeth, that, is continueth our Souls in that Life: So the Tranſlators render it alſo, according to the Pſalmiſts Scope: And Oh! Bleſs the Lord, ſaith the Pſalmiſt there; for theſe, and both theſe.

This Pſalm is ſuppoſed to have been penned by ſome holy Prophet, upon occaſion of God's preſervation of his People under the great Trials they underwent from the Babylonians, and under that Captivity.

And this holding their Souls in life, may be underſtood in two reſpects:

1. As reſpecting bodily Life, and the concernments of it, continued all along from great dangers that might have come upon them from ſo cruel an Enemy.

2. In relation unto the ſpiritual life of Grace in their Souls, (which is and was to them the infinitely far greater Mercy of the two;) And this life, as preſerved in the want of Ordinances, and living in the midſt of an Heathen Idolatrous Nation, and a wicked Generation ruling over them.

And the hazard of the extinction of either, and their Trials and Temptations in both reſpects, is repreſented here to have been very great: For, 1. He compares them unto the trial whereby Silver is tried; which Phraſe is uſed to expreſs the ſoareſt of Trials: Ezek. 22. 22. As ſilver is melted in the midſt of the Furnace, ſo ſhall ye be melted in the midſt thereof; and ye ſhall know that I the Lord have poured out my fury upon you. Yea, when our trials are of a leſſer ſort and degree, and more tolerable, they are ſaid to be, not as ſilver, or with ſilver, Iſai. 48. 10.—— 2. They are further ſet out in Verſe 11. Thou haſt brought us into the Net, thou haſt laid affliction upon our loins: that is, the affliction God laid on their loins, was as a Net, that encompaſſed them round, wherein they had lain toſſing and tumbling, like Bulls in a Net, (as the Prophets phraſe is, Iſai. 51. 20.) and found no way out whereby to eſcape. 3. He cauſed men to ride over their heads, verſe 12. that is, they were in a manner perfect ſlaves, at the will and pleaſure of wicked and cruel men, their Enemies; for by that very Phraſe is ſlavery expreſſed: For the manner was to uſe Slaves thus, to carry them on their necks and backs, as riders on them, reſting themſelves mean while over their heads; Iſai. 51. 23. But I will put it into the hand of them that afflict thee: which have ſaid to thy Soul, Bow down, that we may go over: and thou haſt laid thy body as the ground, and as the ſtreet to them that went over. 4. There was a great variety of ſuch perils, and not only of ſeveral, but of contrary ſorts; verſe 12. we went through fire and water; either of which ſingle and alone, when but one of theſe befall men, note out extremity of evils. Thus through water, Pſal. 69. 1, 2. Save me, O God, for the waters are come upon my ſoul. I ſink in deep mire, where there is no ſtanding; I am come into the deep waters, where the floods overflow me. Or through fire; Ezek. 15. 7. And I will ſet my face againſt them, that they ſhall go out from one fire, and another fire ſhall devour them, and ye ſhall know that I am the Lord, when I ſet my face againſt them. But when through both ſucceſſively, one after the other, this notes out an Accumulation of miſeries or trials indeed; as we read Iſai. 43. 2. with God's Promiſe to his People in ſuch Conditions: When thou paſſeſt through the water, I will be with thee; and through the rivers, they ſhall not overflow thee; when thou walkeſt through the fire, thou ſhalt not be burnt, neither ſhall the flame kindle upon thee. Which Promiſe is here, you ſee, acknowledged by the Pſalmiſt, to have been performed. God was with the three Children when they walked through the fire, in the very letter of

Iſaiah's

Iſaiah's Speech: And with the Children of Iſrael, when they went thorough the water of the Red-Sea: And now that they were delivered, and were returned into their own Land, they were, as it is expreſſed, brought into a wealthy place, out of thoſe ſtreights and preſſures; that is, into a roomthy, open, and enlarged condition, in outward reſpects. And in the view, and ſenſe of all theſe various dealings of God with them, he bleſſeth God, that God had as yet kept them alive; (which was the Promiſe made the Church, as in it ſelf alone mercy ſufficient in ſuch a ſenſe,) and reſtored to them the Comforts of Life. Chap. 15.

But the ſecond mercy I mentioned is, of holding the Souls of his Saints in Spiritual Life: This as it was the mercy of mercies, ſo I take it, is the mercy chiefly, and above all intended, for which he thus bleſſeth God: And my Reaſons are,

1. The dangers they had run through, are not here ſimply conſidered as perils to the outward Man alone; but further as Tryals, and Probations of their Faith: This the words ſhew; For thou Lord haſt proved us, and tried us as ſilver is tried, Pſal. 66. 10. Now take them as trials from God, and ſo they muſt be underſtood to relate to the inner Man, as Temptations, and Probations thereof; even as when they are called Chaſtnings of the Lord, they likewiſe do: Now look what life it was, which theſe dangers, conſidered as trials, did reſpect and endanger; that Life, and the preſervation of it, was it which he chiefly aims at, to bleſs God for: And it is our ſpiritual Life, the Life of our Souls, which Trials, and ſuch Probations (conſidered as ſuch) do wholly reſpect: and the enduring of which it is, makes the mercy ſo Great; to have that Life which God and the Saints do moſt reſpect, maintained in the midſt of them: (For in themſelves they do endanger that Life) The rich Carnal Profeſſor fadeth and withereth, when the Sun is up: Bleſſed (therefore) is the Man that endureth Temptation, James 1. 12. And it is our Faith which is the principle of ſpiritual Life; which is ſaid to be the Subject of ſuch Trials and Temptations, conſidered as ſuch: So Peter 1 Epiſt. Chap. 1. 7. The Trial of your Faith is much more precious than of Gold, (ſays he there;) even as here, the trial of ſilver: And again, in the Old Teſtament, the ſpiritual profit that accrueth thereby in ſpiritual refinings, is that which the Trial of the Soul as Silver, is compared unto, Zach. 13. ult. I will bring the third part through the fire; and I will refine them as ſilver is refined; and will try them as Gold is tried: They ſhall call on my Name, and I will hear them: I will ſay it is my people, and they ſhall ſay the Lord is my God: The Iſſue of their trial is made not a refinement only, in reſpect of Corruptions purged out, (which Peter alſo ſpeaks of, Verſ. 21.) but a riſing up to an Aſſurance, (through experience in thoſe trials) That God was their God; even as here he calls upon them as they were Saints, and tried Saints, Bleſs our God, ſays he, ye people, Pſal. 66. 8. The like you have in Malachi. 3. 3. And he ſhall ſit as a refiner and purifier of Silver: And he ſhall purifie the Sons of Levi, and purge them as Gold and Silver, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in Righteouſneſs. So that this Scripture of the Pſalmiſt is for ſubſtance Parallel, (though under other Alluſions,) unto that you read the Profeſſion of thoſe Saints to be, in their acknowledgments of God therein, in the like caſe; Pſal. 44. 17, 18. All this is come upon us, yet have we not forgotten thee, neither have we dealt falſely in thy Covenant: Our Heart is not turned back, neither have our ſteps declined from thy way: Which is in effect, and ſubſtance the ſame, with the preſerving of their Souls in Life, and of their feet kept from being moved, from out of the ways of God; as you find here in the Text.

2. The like here intended, is eminently the life of the Soul; in his ſaying, O bleſs our God, that holdeth our Soul in Life: Which Peter alſo, in the ſame Chap. 1. verſ. 9. in like manner expreſſeth: And although I know the word Soul, is taken for the Perſon ſometimes; yet comparing this with the uſe of the word, Verſ. 16. of this Pſalm, (of which in the next following reaſon,) and obſerving the parallel, and correſpondency, theſe words of bleſſing God, have with the ſpecial care of God, as it is ſet out in keeping our Souls, Book IV. Souls, in Pſal. 121. The Lord is thy keeper; Verſ. 5. and verſ. 7. The Lord ſhall preſerve thy Soul, as the Subject of his care: And then taking in Verſ. 3. He will not ſuffer thy foot to be moved; And all this there being ſpoken in relation to their Souls; and how withal the very ſame individual Phraſes are here uſed; Holds our Souls in life; and ſuffereth not our feet to be moved; This induceth me to judge, that the aim, as to the ſpiritual Life of the Soul, is in this paſſage intended, as well as in that Pſalm. 12.

3. He that penned this Pſalm, having bleſſed God thus in the behalf of all other Saints, and invited them thereby to do the ſame, at laſt offers to caſt in the experiments of Gods dealings with his own Soul, as a provocation, and a pattern unto other Saints, to recollect with themſelves the like dealings of God with them; to the ſame end, and purpoſe: Thus Verſ. 16. Come and hear, all ye that fear God, and I will declare what he hath done for my Soul: Where the words [for my Soul] do certainly reſpect the ſpiritual dealings of God with his Soul, in diſtinction from ſuch outward mercies, as concerned his Bodily Life: And ſo doth clearly expound what he had meant, by keeping our Souls in Life, in this 8. verſe: Now this paſſage of his, being the concluſion of the Pſalm, and as it were the ſummary of it, I therefore take to look backward to theſe foregone paſſages; and to be as his ſetting his Seal to the truth of them, in his own Experience; Having this coherence with the former: As if he had ſaid, come and hear, I will declare what God hath done for my Soul; namely in keeping, and holding my Soul in Life; during all this long Tract of Tryals, I have paſſed over, and gone through, together with you, all the reſt of my fellow ſufferers: For which I in my particular do bleſs God; and for which you, in your particulars have cauſe to praiſe God alſo: And thus, that which follows to the end of the Pſalm, I underſtand to reſpect what exerciſes, and gracious Iſſues of Spirit, by prayer, and ſelf examination of Spirit, had befaln him, under thoſe common Trials forementioned, that he had found: The chief whereof, were, I cried to him with my mouth, and he was extolled with my tongue: And ſo to the end of the Pſalm: And ſo his Scope in Verſ. 16. iſſues in this; as if he had ſaid, Lo here I, who am but one among you all that fear God in the World, (and perhaps in his own eye he was the leaſt;) come, and behold the courſe I have run through, from the time of God his firſt putting Life into my Soul, unto this day: And if I did but tell you, or could rehearſe all the Experiments which my life ſince affords; and give ſo large, and ample a declaration, (as his own word is) as I could from experience make; enterwoven with ſo many varieties of rich diſpenſations, of Gods having preſerved me ſtill in Grace, and kept Life in ure in me, eſpecially by prayer, Verſ. 17. and not having regarded Iniquity in my Heart; Verſ. 18. from time to time, in the midſt of all the Temptations, and changes that have paſt; you would ſtand agaſt at them, as I my ſelf do: And I would do this, to the end that you would all be provoked thereby, to view and remind the ſeveral courſes of dealings which God hath taken with each of you, to the upholding and carrying each of your Souls through, with Spritual Life ſtill continued in them: And that you would ſet down, and tell the like ſtories too, at which we ſhall all be aſtoniſhed one at another; and fall down afore God in all, and ever and anon adore him, and cry out; O Bleſs our God, all ye the people of God, which hath thus wonderfully, and miraculouſly held our Souls in Life, for theſe ten, twenty, thirty, forty, fifty years: And if my own ſingle Experience would, yea and doth afford ſo much, (and Oh! how little of Gods Grace to me, am I able to declare,) what would all, and each of yours, when all ſhall be fully told, riſe up unto, as at the Day of Judgment it will?

This I take it, is the Prophets intimate Scope; who ever he was that wrote it, from the Experience of what himſelf had found, and obſervation of others Saints, his companions, all along that captivity out of Babilon: Which when come forth of it, he writes.

CHAP. XVI.

That the Decrees of God in Election are of such sure Efficacy, that we may be ascertain'd of their Infallible performance. That nothing can hinder or frustrate their success in working, because God works all things according to the Counsel of his own Will. What Assurances we have, that his good purposes concerning us, shall be invincibly accomplished; both from the nature of Election Decrees, and the Interest which the Attributes of God have in the performance of them.

AS the Decree of Election, or Predestination, is the efficacious Will of God, which for his own good pleasure intends our Salvation, and has prepared such means, by which, and through which he brings his Elect unto that end, efficaciously and infallibly.

1. This efficacious Will of God, in this matter, is to be distinguished from other Decrees. We call this the efficacious Will of God, because it does not leave a man in the hands of his own free will, as Adam was left; and because it also respects and decrees the very event; for it is such a Will of God, as is joyned with his Power to effect it. As for instance, Eph. 1. 11. In whom, in Christ namely, we have obtained an inheritance, being predestinated according to the purpose of him, who worketh all things after the counsel of his own Will. And this is backed with two other Scriptures out of the Old Testament, Isai. 14. 27. For the Lord of Hosts hath purposed, and who shall disanul it. Psal. 115. 3. But our God is in the Heavens, he hath done whatsoever he pleased. And this distinction might be cleared by many Instances; as by Saul's being chosen King, whom he did cast out; and that of Jeroboam, to whom God made the same promise of establishing his Kingdom, as he had done to David, but left it in the hands of his own will, 1 Kings 11. 37, 38. as the event shew'd how it succeeded. And thus before he had done as to Adam's state, which is perfectly the state the Arminians put God's Election and Promises into, which the event also shewed how fatal it proved. And this was the case of the Israelites present in the Wilderness, whom God promised Canaan to, but left the Issue to the counsel of their own Wills, and thereupon God destroyed them in the Wilderness, and then twits them with it, Numb. 14. 34. After the number of the days in which ye searched the Land, even forty days, (each day for a year) shall ye bear your iniquities, even forty years, and ye shall know my breach of promise.

But God's Decrees of Election and Predestination, as expressed in that place of Eph. 1. 11. are not such, they are absolute and infallible, and all along so described to be, they have their effect, which if it be proved to be the genuine Scope of the place, there is no more to be said, there is an end of the Controversie for our side.

I shall prosecute for the present first, but this one Argument, the spirit of which lies in this, out of that eleventh Verse, That the Decree concerning God's Election, is the Decree of God, as he is an effecting God, of what he does determine in the counsel of his own Will; which words, and the sense thereof is plain, that it is of God; not a contemplating only what he desires to be done, but of a God that actually works and effects, according to what his his counsel was to do, not leaving it to the counsel of our will, but working according to the counsel of his own will, and therefore considered as infallibly working what he had decreed. Working and effecting his counsels of Election according to the measure of his working all things else, which he hath peremptorily resolved to do: And as such a God, a working God, and effecting what he will, he is described here to be, and therefore is to be look'd upon as a God so effectually working. I shall take up a more comprehensive Discourse, infer'd from the general Scope, and argued from divers particulars of the words, which will evince almost from every word, That God's Decrees of Election and Predestination are efficacious Decrees that do attain infallibly their event. Chap. 16.

First for the general Scope, the Fabrick of the Arminian Doctrine, with its Enlargements since, does not so much as necessarily suppose the Foundations the Apostle goes upon; yea, lies cross, and thwart unto the main design the Apostle has in his Discourse.

As first, The Doctrine of Election it self, which the Apostle makes to be but one grand Fundamental Act at once passed in the Counsels of God and Christ themselves, between them; upon which the particular blessings that follow, spring, and have their course, and that Act to have been before the world was; this grand Act they nullifie, and make nothing of: Whereas the Apostle says, That he has chosen and predestinated us before the foundation of the world; They place instead thereof their Foundation to be, that which is no Election, no Predestination: For Election, as Nature teaches us, is a choice of some persons segregated from others passed by. Instead of this fundamental and total Act of God, compleated and finished at first, and determinately pitched upon particular persons, They substitute in the room of this Act another, upon Condition, which they make their Foundation, which is so far from being an Election, that it is a general choosing of all, which is a manifest Contradiction: And it is but upon Condition neither of what may never fall out in any one person, the whole depending upon man's will, which they say, God doth not, cannot rule; and so at best, is but an incompleat Act held in suspence, and left utterly uncertain, and intermitted with its contrary, that in one and the same day a man is elected, if his Freewill has consented, and then becomes Non-Elect, if his Freewill falls off; and this happens a thousand times in the course of a man's life.

Secondly, The Apostle supposes, in asserting an Election, a Church unto Christ under the New Testament, at least, a Church design'd out by Election, and formed out to Christ by the following blessings, with which he blesses them. He necessarily supposes such a Church to be elected under the New Testament, against which the Gates of Hell shall not prevail, as Christ has promised. But this their Doctrine supposes may not be, and so not only the Scripture, which were on purpose writ for their sake, that they might have comfort and hope, may not only be frustrated, but that Christ himself may be said to have died in vain, and so to frustrate the whole of the Grace of God toward his Church, and of Glory to Christ, whose glory it is to have at latter day his full Church about him; The Children which thou hast given me, says he in John 17. who are said to be the glory of Christ, 2 Cor. 8. 23. Whether any do enquire of Titus, he is my partner and fellow-helper concerning you: or our brethren be enquired of, they are the messengers of the Churches, and the glory of Christ: and Christ to be glorified in his Saints. And if we find Paul triumphing so much in the thoughts of them he had converted, that they should be his joy and his crown in the latter day; then how much more will Christ's joy and crown depend upon the same event; how much will Christ's joy be augmented or lessened according to the success?

This in general, as to what is their whole Doctrine: But this Paragraph in Eph. 1. from verse 3. to the 15th, may easily be discerned to be divided into two parts; the one a Discourse of Election and Predestination, and the Effects of it, as it is common to all Saints: And secondly, The execution it self, which we have asserted infallibly to follow the said Act of Election in the Doctrine describing it. And the Reader may as readily observe, with a cast of his eye, that he handles the Point of Election twice; first, in the Doctrine of it, as was ſaid; ſecondly, in the Execution and Application of it unto the two ſorts of perſons that are elected. 1. The performance of it upon the Jews, verſe 11, 12. In whom alſo we have obtained an inheritance, being predeſtinated according to the purpoſe of him, who worketh all things after the counſel of his own will: That we ſhould be to the praiſe of his glory, who firſt truſted in Chriſt. In whom alſo the Epheſians and the Gentiles, unto whom he ſpeaks, truſted, verſe 13. In whom ye alſo truſted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the goſpel of your ſalvation: in whom alſo after that ye believed, ye were ſealed with that holy ſpirit of promiſe. He contents not himſelf to have delivered Election in the Doctrine only, and to apply it there in particular, but he goes over the two ſorts that were elected, like two great Arms of the great Body of a Tree; yea, and which is moſt to be obſerved home to my purpoſe, this ſecond applying of it is to ſhew the accompliſhment, the effect upon either; So as you have the Performance infallibly following the general Doctrine, and that both upon Jew and Gentile, which divide the whole breadth of the ſorts of Mankind between them. So as nothing can be plainer, than that the Apoſtle ſhould conjoyn theſe two together, as Cauſe and Effect, and that the Apoſtle would have the Saints to take notice of this Univerſal Conjunction.

In the forepart, the Doctrinal part, he puts in the word us, and he has it up again, we who firſt truſted in Chriſt, we Jews, and ſo carries it all along, as including himſelf, his own perſon, as the eminent inſtance, purpoſely to include himſelf, as one that in common was elected with the reſt, and a chief pattern of the Election of the reſt, to them that ſhould after believe. The grace of Paul's Election was the ſame ſubſtantially with the grace vouchſafed in Elelection to every ordinary Saint; they may differ in degrees of favour, and extraordinary Circumſtances accompanying their Election: As the Election of the firſt Fathers in Rom. 11. Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, though for the ſpecial honour of their perſons, they are called the Fathers, and Patriarchs, yet the grace of their Election for ſubſtance is the ſame, one uniform Grace. So the Election of Paul, and of all the Saints, is one common grace and uniform thing for the ſubſtance of it. The ſame Power works, and the ſame Graces wrought, let the Adverſaries plead what circumſtances they may; or can, out of Paul's example, it will prove but circumſtantial; as that Chriſt himſelf ſhould call him from Heaven, and he ſhould hear him by the way, and hear himſelf ſpeak: But yet Paul's Election, and Converſion, and the Effects thereof, were but one and the ſame with ours; for the example of his Converſion is made a pattern to them that ſhould after believe. And Chriſt himſelf giving an account of it, tells Ananias, he was a choſen veſſel to bear his name, and in him the Event, and the Doctrine of Election, were infallibly and inſeparably conjoyned.

Beſides this General, there are ſundry Particulars almoſt in every word of this Paragraph, in Eph. 1. from verſe 3. to the 15th, that are found to confirm that God's Decrees of Election, and of the whole Fabrick of our Salvation, are efficacious in the ſenſe that has been given, and ſhall infallibly have their event.

Firſt, Take the word Election; God is not at Ifs and Ands with us in it, but if it be according to Election, it ſtands firm, fixed. This the Apoſtle aſſerts, Rom. 9. 11. That the purpoſe of God according to Election might ſtand. Whatever ſtands, that does, and has its effect in due time, by Calling, which is the neceſſary conſequent of it. That the purpoſe of God according to Election might ſtand, not of works, but of him that calleth.

Secondly, As in this place of the Romans, it is ſaid, That the purpoſe of God according to Election might ſtand, you have it varied elſewhere, Predeſtinated according to his purpoſe, Eph. 1. 11. and it is made a ſufficient diſtinction of Elect from Reprobates, that they are called according to his purpoſe; Rom. 8. 29. All things work together for good to them that love God, the called according to his purpoſe. And ſo Auſtin makes uſe of the word vocati ſecundum propoſitum, as a note of diſtinction. His purpoſe is ſaid to have its effect in an efficacious Calling.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, Especially when the purpose of Grace is said to have been before the World; 2 Tim. 1. 9. Who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus, before the World began. Divines have observed, That the Works of Creation that were made at first out of Nothing, are never resolved into Nothing again: As the third Heavens, created the first day from the Foundation of the World, as Christ says, were not, nor ever shall be annihilated. And the same we may say of God's first thoughts and purposes, such, as those of Election were, for the perfection of them, and are therefore termed Counsels, they shall never suffer an alteration. Chap. 16.

And therefore, Fourthly, They are called the immutability of his Counsel, confirmed by an Oath; Hebr. 6. 17. Wherein God willing more abundantly to shew unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an Oath.

And Fifthly, add to this, They are the counsel of his own Will. It would be a dishonour to God's wisdom to alter what he professes to have done by counsel. And it is of his own Will, and which he purposed in himself; he did not look out of himself for the reasons of that his counsel; Eph. 1. 9. Having made known unto us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure, which he hath purposed in himself. God did not look out of himself upon any thing in the Creature, as the motives, why he chose; but his own innate thoughts were his sole measure.

And then, Sixthly, Their Election, and all the Benefits that succeed and flow from it, are said to be in Christ; he has chosen us in Christ, predestinated us by Christ, to the adoption of Sons, graciously accepted us in Christ, and all to the glory of his Grace. Now I lay this for a sure Foundation, as Christ himself, That there is nothing God hath promised, or spoken of, that he will do in Christ, but he efficaciously performs it. If he makes Promises, as all his Promises concerning our Salvation, are in Christ: They are Yea and Amen. 2 Cor. 1. 19, 20. For the Son of God, Jesus Christ, was not Yea and Nay, but in him was Yea. For all the Promises of God in him are Yea, and in him Amen, unto the glory of God by us.

If they all be Yea, then they must be effectual: Paul's Scope there is to shew the faithfulness of God in his performances; That though Paul himself, being but a Creature, he might and did fail, they were Yea, and they were Nay, speaking of his coming to them: But God's Promises in Christ are Yea, and not Nay; and you may set Amen in every one of them infallibly to be performed.

You have the same thing asserted of the Covenant of Grace, which God made to Abraham, which was but a bundle of absolute Promises; and yet the Apostle says further of it, Gal. 3. 16, 17. And this I say, that the Covenant, that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the Law which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disanul, that it should make the Promise of none effect. For if the Inheritance be of the Law, it is no more of Promise; but God gave it to Abraham by promise. The Covenant of the Gospel is but a Collection of a many Promises simply and freely given as an Inheritance, and Election is the Donor, and Declarer, and confirmer of them: And doth God say in Christ, I do this for that end, you may set Amen to it; it shall certainly be performed.

Lastly, Extract we but the many Attributes which are engaged by God for the effectual performance: The three Persons in the Godhead, they are the joint Efficients and Contrivers of God's Decrees; but the Attributes in God, it is they that afford the matter of the performance of God's Promises, or God's Declarations, when they are set together with God's Decrees to back them. They are the Springs in God of whatever he doth efficaciously decreed to do, The Synodists of Great Britain, they therefore say, They are effectual Decrees, because they are Decrees conjuncta cum potentiâ, because he, though a mean Man, who came with a Commission efficacious enough to effect the business sineſs for which he came, being commanded to ſhew where his Commiſſion was, he pointed to a Regiment of Horſe, there is my Commiſſion, ſays he: It was decretum cum potentiâ conjunctum. But you ſhall ſee not one Attribute only, but that many of the Attributes of God, which are moſt proper to effect the thing, are diſcovered, and made to appear to back and command, and not demand only, as for example; The Divine love, and Wiſdom, and counſel, and will that is in God, do all ſtand out, and appear to accompany, and maintain theſe decrees, and that muſt needs be judged effectual which is ſo armed, and compleatly furniſhed.

The Attributes are theſe, to reherſe them more largely.

First, an inexhauſtible Fund of Divine Love in the bottom of God's Heart laid up, and provided to maintain all the expence, and heartily, and willingly to perform it all along, in the doing of it. This he ſpeaks firſt of Election, According as he has choſen us in him, that we ſhould be holy, and without blame before him in Love, Eph. 1. 4. This paſſage, before him in Love, Dickſon Glaſcon, Profeſſour, interprets of the Love of God born to us, when he choſe us to make us every way perfect in Holineſs all along, to the higheſt degree of perfection we are capable of: Ut gradatim verè ſanctificaremur, et tandem plenè, perfectéque ſancti in cœlo ſiſteremur: As by that Love which by degrees truly ſanctifies us, and at laſt fully, and perfectly preſents us holy in Heaven, without blame. And ſo Interprets thoſe words by thoſe that follow in the fifth Chapter, where ſpeaking of the ſame Love in the Heart of God, and Chriſt, Huſbands Love your Wives, as Chriſt alſo loved the Church, and gave himſelf for it; that he might ſanctifie and cleanſe it, with the waſhing of water, by the word: That he might preſent it to himſelf a glorious Church, not having ſpot or wrinkle, or any ſuch thing: But that it ſhould be holy, and without blemiſh, Which words in the fifth Chapter, are apparently ſpoken of the love, that is in the Heart of Chriſt; for it is, love your Wives, as Chriſt his Church, with a ſpecial love; whereas the Arminians would have God's love equal, and alike to all; and likewiſe he ſpeak's of the love in the Heart of God the Father, and ſo of Chriſt in his other Text, verſ. 4. of the firſt of the Epheſian's: For the Apoſtle ſpeaks of it, as the worker of all that Holineſs, which is not only in us at the firſt, but which is perfected to the laſt and utmoſt degree, which we are ordained to have in Heaven. To be unblameable, ſays that firſt Chapter, before him, whom God can find no fault with, not having ſpot, nor wrinkle, or any ſuch thing, ſays the fifth Chapter; that is, that we ſhould appear before him, not only without all ſin, but without any imperfection or miſery, or any ſuch thing, that has the appearance of imperfection, but be rendred bleſſed, and glorious at laſt before him, and this out of pure love, which the Apoſtle makes the cauſe of our Election, and of all that happineſs, and holineſs, which follows upon it. And love being here preſented as the cauſe of all, this muſt therefore neceſſarily be taken of what we ſhall be, when perfect in Heaven: Thus he. And it is not barely ſaid out of love, or with love or by love, but in the following Chapter to the Epheſians, 'Tis ſaid to be with his great love, wherewith he loved us; which love is there mentioned as the foundation of all, as of God's Rich mercy to us; to which is added, for the great love wherewith he loved us, as the bottom of all that great mercy: The latter being ſpoken of, as reſpecting mans Election, in his pure condition of Holineſs as it was in Adam; but the Riches of mercy, which is the firſt mentioned, reſpects Man as faln into ſin, and miſery, whereof he treats in that Chapter. But that great love, which was in the Heart of God, as the foundation, that continued in Man, though faln, and wrought in mercy, was that, which had begun toward his Elect, I do not ſay to all Men in Adam's, nor to them in that Holineſs, which was in Adam, but to bring them to that perfect Holineſs of another kind, which he meant to give us in Heaven whereunto he had Elected us.

2. And ſeeing we are upon it, if the next be mercy, which properly reſpects the miſery we were faln into; and that doth not paſs the Apoſtle without an

an exaggeration of it in the 7th verse of the second Chapter to the Ephesians, The exceeding Riches of his Grace in his kindness towards us. Chap. 16.

Here is love, and mercy, and all the interest that they have to move the Heart of God with, that conduce to make our Salvation effectual.

3. The Will of God it set upon it in the fifth verse, Having predestinated us according to the good pleasure of his will. There it is once mentioned, and it is not purely Will, which were enough; for where Love's power and Will meet, as you shall see here they do, what is there will not be done, that God can do? it is his own Will, it is emphatically said so, who works all these things, (as was interpreted) that go to make the work perfect; according to the Counsel of his own will, Vers. 11. Regeneration is the first product of Election: And the same Expression is used of it, of his own will he begat us, by the word of Truth; Isai. 1, 18. Observe it, how diametrically opposite it is to the Language and Estate the Arminians would put it into. Is it Mans Will? no: It is Gods own Will, which is the State of the Question: John 1. 13. who were born not of blood, nor of flesh nor of the will of Man, but of God. It is the good pleasure of his Will. Jer. 32. 41. yea, I will rejoyce over them to do them good, with my whole Heart, and with my whole Soul. When God intends to do his people good, he rejoyces to do it; yea, to think of doing it with his whole Heart, and with his whole Soul. Now, Election is omne bonum, as God said to Moses, is the intention of the highest good, and to effect it, his joy must be answerable: And what a Man does with his whole Heart, and with his whole Soul, the whole of him is in it. It is not so in his other works of throwing Men to Hell, Jer. 9. 24. Let him that Glorieth, Glory in this, that he understandeth me, and knowledgeth me, that I am the Lord which exercises loving Kindness, Judgment, and Righteousness in the Earth; For in these things I delight, saith the Lord. Which words the Apostle Applies to the benefits we have by Christ in our Salvation, which are the fruits of Election: 1 Cor. 1. 30, 31. But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us Wisdom, and Righteousness, and Sanctification, and Redemption: That according as it is written, he that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord.

But there is no act of Will, but an Understanding Goes before it, and leads on to it. And so it is with Man; and thus far it is with God: The depth of his Wisdom and Knowledge preceeds, and concurs with this Act of his Will: Rom. 11. 33. Oh the depth of the Riches, both of the Wisdom and Knowledge of God; spoken of Election. And observe the Counsel of God expresses his deepest wisdom: And although in Man, it is upon deliberation for time, which perfects a Man's thoughts, and the after second thoughts are best, yet these first thoughts of God, (who must not be said to deliberate, that notes Imperfection,) His first thoughts, that he fell upon before the World was, are said to have the solidity of Counsel in them, and to be as perfect, as to Eternity they could have been made; and so perfect, that they are not capable of alteration unto any other: Hence in Heb. 6, 7. Wherein God willing more abundantly to shew unto the heir of Promise, the Immutability of his Counsel, confirmed it by an Oath. He deliberately ventures to swear, as being privy he had considered all things, that concerned their Salvation; pauca respiciens cito pronunciat, but he that considers all, as he that deliberates, is supposed to do, is bold to swear.

Observe only this at last, that it is said, the Counsel of his will; as if his Will had been of the two, the most forward, and had set his Understanding a work about all those Counsels.

OF

OF ELECTION.

BOOK V.

Election, in the ordinary Course of it, runs in a Line of Succession from Believing Parents to their Posterity. The Covenant of Grace is entailed on the Children of Believers. God most usually makes such his Choice. What Judgment we are thereupon to have of them.

CHAP. I.

The Children of Godly Parents called the Inheritance of the Lord because he is the owner of them, as his Elect and Chosen, among whom his Possessions and his peculiar People lie. The Derivation of the Covenant of Grace from their Fathers unto them, proved by the Covenant made to Abraham, as it was a Family Covenant. The difference between his Priviledge herein, and ours under the Gospel.

LO, Children are an Heritage of the Lord; and the Fruit of the Womb is a Reward, says the Psalmist. Psal. 127. 3. He speaks of what Children are unto godly and holy Parents; for unto such only is any Blessing given by God as a Reward; namely, of their Holiness and Righteousness; (therefore Merces bonorum operum, A reward of their good works, says the Chaldee Paraphrast) and the Psalmist expreſly ſpeaks of Bleſſings which God gives his beloved ones, as the words immediately foregoing do tell us, of which this bleſſing of Children he makes the laſt and greateſt: And it is alſo as certain, that he ſpeaks of Children, as ſuppoſed holy and godly; (Filij recti, ſays the ſame Paraphraſt) for otherwiſe they are not a Reward; but as Solomon full often ſpeaks of a fooliſh or ungodly Child, He is a curſe, a ſhame, and ſorrow to him that begat him, and to her that brought him forth: The Pſalm was made (as appears by the Title of it,) Of or For Solomon, and therefore (as it is more than probable) was penned (as that other Pſalm, the 72. which bears the ſame Title) by David the Father, Of and For Solomon his Son; who was for his Father's ſake, the beloved of God, 2 Sam. 12. 24, 25. and upon whom the ſure Covenant and Mercies of David were entailed, together with his Kingdom; and what is ſaid in this Pſalm, in the verſes before fitly agrees to him, for he it was who was to build God's Houſe, to keep and preſerve Jeruſalem the City, and the Kingdom, in Peace, and to have reſt, or as the Pſalmiſt calls it, verſe 3. quiet ſleep given him by God) from all his enemies round about him: And for this, compare the Propheſie of him, 1 Chron. 22. 9, 10. with the Inſtructions here given him in the three firſt verſes of this Pſalm, and you will ſee how fitly this Pſalm concerns him. Now, this Solomon thus owned and beloved of God, David himſelf lookt at as a Child given for a Reward of all his Piety and Uprightneſs; and therefore upon his rejoycing in ſo great a Bleſſing, he takes occaſion indefinitely to pronounce of other holy men's Children, beloved of God alſo; (ſo to raiſe up their hearts,) that which to his comfort he had found true of his beloved Solomon: And this upon a juſt ground; for as the Covenant made with David, is ſet forth unto us, as the Exemplar or Draught of God's like Covenant with his Elect; ſo Solomon, David's Son, is here by David conſidered, as the Pattern or Proto-type of all the like Children of godly Parents, on them beſtowed by vertue of that ſame Covenant by which Solomon was on him. So as indeed this is the true ſcope of the Royal Prophet here; Lo, ſuch Children as Solomon was (holy and beloved of God) they are an heritage of the Lord, a rich and great reward; and bleſſed is the man that hath his quiver full of them. Now ſuch Children may be underſtood to be an inheritance, &c. in a double reſpect. 1. Unto their Parents, an inheritance and a great reward to them from the Lord; or, 2. The inheritance of the Lord himſelf, through and for their Parents ſake: The words here will bear that latter Reading alſo, and ſo by both, the Senſe will be made more full; and then the meaning is, That as they are a choice and peculiar gift given by God unto their Parents, (as his Rewards uſe to be) ſo withal, a choice and peculiar People unto God himſelf, (as his Inheritance is ſaid to be;) and ſo not only an Heritage (as our Tranſlation carries it) From the Lord as the Donor, (as Iſai. 54. 17. and in ſome other places, the word Heritage is taken;) but further, They are the inheritance of the Lord, as the owner and poſſeſſor of them; that is, ſuch Children, they are his Elect, his Beloved, his Choſen, among whom his Poſſeſſions and his peculiar People lye. Thus every where in Scripture, to be the choſen People of God, and to be his Inheritance are all one; for inſtance, Pſal. 28. 12. Save thy people and thine inheritance. And Pſal. 33. 12. Bleſſed is the Nation whoſe God is the Lord, and the People whom he hath choſen for his Inheritance. Thus in the New Teſtament likewiſe, as well as in the Old; 1 Pet. 5. 3. the Apoſtle calls the Church the Lords heritage; and though they being thus God's choſen for his Propriety and choice Inheritance, it is, that they become (what follows) the higheſt Reward unto their Fathers of their uprightneſs; and ſo by being firſt the Inheritance of the Lord, they become an inheritance from the Lord unto their Parents, even the richeſt they can poſſeſs. And thus this Reading of the words is ſo far from excluding the other, (namely of their being their Fathers inheritance,) that it is improved and raiſed thereby, and the due value put upon this Bleſſing given; for what greater favour can there be than this, that God ſhould firſt take their Children to be an Inheritance to himſelf, and ſo make them Heir of all things, and when they are thus ennobled, and enriched, then to put them into their Parents arms as a rich Inheritance to them! And then as Chriſt ſaid (John 17. 6.) Of the Children which God had given him, ſo may they, They were thine, and thou gaveſt them me; and as it is in Pſal. 16. 6. Lo, I have a goodly heritage.

Chap. 1.

There is nothing that is or can ſo truly be accounted our own, as our Children; other things are but external Appurtenances, but theſe are as Branches to the Root, yea, they are our ſelves multiplyed: Therefore God who is in Covenant with us, doth (as our Children do inherit our goods) become Heir of them himſelf, and owns them for his Inheritance, to protect and dwell upon, and with, for ever.

And ſurely the Elect Children of godly Parents in covenant with him, may in this reſpect more peculiarly be called God's Inheritance, than others of his Children choſen by him: For their Parents being Servants to him, and he their God; their Children therefore do by a natural right of Inheritance fall unto him, as the Children of Servants born in the Houſe, did unto their Maſters by the Law, Exod. 21. 4.

But however, whether this were the meaning of theſe words or no, this we may reſt confident to have been the Pſalmiſt's drift; That Children when they are holy, and ſo God's Elect and Choſen Inheritance, are to be lookt upon by their Parents, as the choiceſt and freeſt gift (as Inheritances uſe to be) the richeſt reward and bleſſing, that on Earth can be beſtowed upon them: And this we ſee confirmed to us, from what eſteem both Abraham our Father (then when his heart had been newly enlarged from the higheſt communion with God) did put upon ſuch a Bleſſing; as alſo from what eſteem God did put upon it to him, by promiſing of this bleſſing then, when his heart was drawn out to the largeſt expreſſions of his Love. Gen. 15. 1. God came to Abraham in a Viſion, and ſaid unto him, [I am thy exceeding great reward] here was the deepeſt and moſt comprehenſive expreſſion of love, that God ever made unto any man; and Abraham takes the advantage of this, and improves it, (for how could he now out-ask what God had promiſed?) and ſays to God; [What wilt thou give me, ſeeing I am Childleſs?] So that, a Child (next to his own Salvation) was the gift and bleſſing in Abraham's deſires and thoughts; upon this hint of Abraham, God promiſeth him a Son (even Iſaac) and that his Seed ſhould be as the Stars of Heaven, and this Son to be an Heir, not of his Goods only, as verſe 4. but of his God alſo; and indeed, when God renews the Covenant, he ſo expreſly enlargeth it, Chap. 17. Verſe 7. and ſo God promiſeth to take his Seed to be his own Inheritance, as well as to be Heirs of Abraham: Lo from this inſtance alſo ſuch Children (as the Pſalmiſt hear ſpeaks) are at once, both the inheritance of the Lord, and a very great Reward; even the greateſt of all Rewards, next to God himſelf becoming a Reward to us.

Now this great Bleſſing and Inheritance, in which God hath thus mutually eſtated both theſe Parents and their Children, is to be the main Subject of the enſuing Diſcourſe, even to confirm and eſtabliſh the Faith both of Children and Parents on both ſides; to the end that godly Parents hearts may be raiſed up to the expectation of the higheſt comfort and reward in their Children; that they, next aſſurance of their own Salvation, can be filled with: (which notwithſtanding they too much neglect and undervalue;) and that their Children alſo (who are the moſt of God's Elect,) may be provoked to make ſearch, and diligently to look out for that Inheritance (here, of the Lord himſelf) which by a gracious Entail, God hath ſetled on many of them long ere they were born, and of which they are often ignorant.

That my Scope may by all be fully underſtood, I have ſhut up the full Sum and Argument of the whole, into this one Propoſition: That

The Children of Believing Parents (at leaſt, their next and immediate Seed) even of us Gentiles now under the Goſpel, are included by God within the Covenant of Grace; as well as Abraham's, or David's Seed within that Covenant of theirs. Both the proof and explication of which great Point will run along together.

I will begin firſt to ſearch out this Right by that Magna Charta, that great and grand Charter which was made to Abraham the Father of the Faithful, in the Name of all his Seed; for that is made the primary and fundamental ground of this great Priviledge by our Divines; That we being Abrahams ſeed; (as Galat. 3. 29.) as well as the Jews, and having the ſame Covenant, are therefore Heirs of the Promiſe, and ſo of that Promiſe which was made to Abraham and the Jews: [I will be the God of thee and of thy Seed] But againſt this ground, as thus barely alledged, this Exception hath often come thwart my Mind; that this was Abrahams peculiar Priviledge and an honour to him vouchſafed; as likewiſe was that, to be ſtiled the Father of all the Faithful, which (as we all know) is to us incommunicable; And that therefore, although we may for our own Perſons indeed come into his Promiſe, as his Seed, and ſo into that part of the Promiſe, [I will be the God of thy Seed] and ſo have the Promiſe of Gods being our God, and of the Bleſſing by Chriſt for our ſelves, as we are Abrahams ſeed; yet take the whole Promiſe as collectively made to him and Us, [I will be the God of thee and of thy Seed] and it ſhould ſeem to be peculiar to him alone, as to be the Father of the Faithful alſo is; by which Title we are no way called, but only the Sons of Abraham, and Abrahams Seed. It might have well ſufficed us for our own perſons to have come into his Promiſe ſingly, and to be Heirs according to the Promiſe, as the phraſe is, Galat. 3. 26. although we were not Fathers alſo to convey the promiſe, as Abraham was; nor although the Promiſe as collectively taken had belonged to us, as to Abraham it did, nor that part of the Promiſe [I will be the God of thy Seed] had been extended to us. And although the Jews (who were Abrahams Seed after the Fleſh, as well as after the Spirit) had that Priviledge alſo, that God in their Generations promiſed to be the God of them and their Seed; yet that alſo may ſeem to be a ſpecial Priviledge proper to them, which we Gentiles cannot plead; for as in Rom. 3. 1. What advantage or prerogative had the Jews but this, Rom. 9. 4. That to them pertaineth the Adoption, and the Covenant, and the Promiſes? as being thoſe whoſe are the Fathers after the fleſh, verſ. 5. and ſo they had this Priviledge, that the Covenant was propagated by the fleſh.

Now in ſatisfaction to theſe two Exceptions, although there muſt neceſſarily be granted a tranſcendent ſpecial honour and Priviledge vouchſafed to Abraham, and to the Jewiſh Nation his Seed, which we have not: Yet withal a further enquiry would be made, whether notwithſtanding we Gentiles have not ſome correſpondent ſprinkling of this Priviledge of his and theirs, though of a leſſer extent, and how far ours extendeth, in difference to that of theirs; and what further warrants there are, for any ſuch Priviledge to us Gentiles, who muſt have a Charter and Grant to ſhew for it, if we would prove our Seeds to be born Heirs within the Covenant; even as Nobles and Gentlemen have in a Civil way for theirs: Otherwiſe it will be the higheſt preſumption in us to claim it, or to expect it at the hands of God.

Firſt, then to Abraham we grant this tranſcendent Priviledge, that he had the peculiar honour to be the Father of all the Faithful, as Eve had the honour to be the Mother of all living, Gen. 3. 20. which being ſpoken by Adam after the Promiſe to her Seed made, verſ. 15. may be interpreted in the ſame ſenſe that Abrahams was; ſhe was the Mother of all living, that is, that live ſpiritually, and by faith as Abraham was Father of all the Faithful: The Covenant running in her Name at the firſt, as in Abrahams afterward; and ſo Adam in that his ſpeech to Eve uttered his Faith in the Promiſe made to her of her Seed, and ſo in that reſpect Adam himſelf came in under her covenant.

Secondly, it was both Abrahams and the Jews Priviledge alſo, that they ſhould have this Promiſe to all Generations, as Geneſ. 17. For two thouſand years, the Covenant to belong thus unto them, and to be entailed on them, and alſo that after the fleſh Chriſt ſhould come of them, as Rom. 9. 5. and that they ſhould be the Root of our Covenant, and we but engraffed on them as the natural branches, Rom. 11. And further, that after their eminent breaking off by unbelief, for well-nigh two thousand years since, their Covenant should be remembred, and for their Fathers sakes all Israel should yet be saved, as in the same Chapter: And as the place which he there quotes out of Esay, also promiseth, that their seeds seed should be converted in a successive way from their second call to the Worlds end: And perhaps of every one, at least the most of that Nation. And indeed it hath seemed to me to be one reason why all that Nation were outwardly holy (which no Nation ever was) before Christs time, that this might be a Prophetique Type that all should one day be inwardly and really holy. How transcendent a Priviledge is this then, that they should have something peculiarly promised to them, which is evident even by this also, that Abraham and his Seed had the peculiar promise of Canaan, which we Gentiles have not. Chap. 11

But yet let us search into the Records of Holy Writ, if out of this their great Charter, there be not a Seal-Grant of a lesser, though like Priviledge; and this by vertue of Christ; in that we have the honour to be accounted Abrahams Seed as truly as they; and likewise in that, to have the Covenant entailed unto Children is so great and a Spiritual Priviledge as would tend infinitely to the comfort of godly Parents now, as then it did to theirs, to have our Seed within the Covenant, as theirs were. Wherefore though this was peculiar unto Abraham and them, to have an Entail to them and to their Seed for ever, yet that we should have our eyes and hearts blest with the hopes of our next Seed, (how far further I will not now dispute) as involved in this Covenant, was a meet mercy for Gods free Grace to vouchsafe to us Gentiles also: And seeing Abraham and they did partake of so great a Priviledge otherwise, it may well be hoped and expected, that so small an one correspondent to theirs, God should vouchsafe to us Gentiles, upon whom the Blessing of Abraham through Christ is come, in a conformity unto his blessing upon him and his.

And searching this; First, I find that this very Priviledge is given unto a Gentile Convert by Christ himself, and founded upon this very ground, that he was a Son of Abraham, being become a Believer. This we have Luke 19. declared by Christ of Zacheus when he was converted, who by all circumstances was a Gentile; and so the Ancients carry it; for he was a Publican: And though some, yet but few Jews were such, because of the hatred of their own Nation; yet he being a chief Publican was surely therefore a Gentile: It being an office of trust, to be chief Custom-gatherer for the Emperours; they would be sure to put none into that office but a Gentile. And so I find out of Antiquity, Cyprian and others quoted for it, that in those chief places of Custom, none but Equites Romani, Roman Knights were placed. * And whereas some object, that if Zacheus had been a Gentile, that then the Jews would have clamoured against Christ, for going in unto a Gentile, and that so professedly as under that notion, because a Gentile; The Answer is not far off, for vers. 7. we read that they did quarrel him for it, they all murmured, saying, that he was gone to be a guest to a Sinner; that is a Gentile: for the Jews usually called the Gentiles by the name of Sinners, as Pauls phrase is, Gal. 2. 15. Sinners of the Gentiles. But then further, That Answer which Christ there gives unto their murmuring doth strengthen this, for he says of him [In as much as He also is the son of Abraham,] ver. 9. The meaning of which words evidently is this, That he who is not by birth a Son of Abraham, but a sinner, a Gentile, yet is made one now by grace. And when Zacheus was thus converted, Christ enlargeth his Covenant to Zacheus his family also, [this day is Salvation come to this House, in as much as he also is the Son of Abraham] vers. 9. This was spoken of him as now believing in Christ. Now if Christs intent had been in this his Answer given, to shew that he was a Jew, and so though a great sinner, yet was converted as being a Son of Abraham (as some expound it) he would have made it the reason but of this only, why Zacheus was saved himself personally: But he makes it the reason why his house should be saved also, and so the Covenant stuck with them of his family likewise, because he the Father of the Family was now a Believer: Whereas had his Children and BOOK V. Family being Jews by birth, and himself likewise, then Salvation had come unto him and them all, because they all were Sons of Abraham by birth (if Jews) as well as he. So as it is evident, that as he was a Gentile by birth, so now being converted, is therefore called a Son of Abraham, and withal had this priviledge of Abraham, as being his Son, (which is the point I alledg this for) to have his house brought into the Covenant, even of that of Salvation, in conformity to his Father Abraham, whose house at the first giving of that Covenant (even Children and all) were circumcised and saved upon that ground, Christ intending now he should go in to eat with him to convert his houshold also. And let me add this, that as Christ once before in the Conversion of the Centurion, the first fruits of the Gentiles, Mat. 8. did first break open the Treasury of the Gentiles conversion: So upon occasion of this Mans conversion afterwards, he shews the priviledge of the Gentiles when converted: And their covenant to be the same with Abrahams in a conformity therewith, and so here first broacheth the Doctrine of it, this Man being the next first fruits of the Gentiles: shewing how their covenant was to run by houshelds, in a conformity to Abrahams family at first.

Family

And 2. Thus in like manner, when the Apostles came to Preach the Gospel to a Gentile Housholder, Master or Father of a Family, they carried the offer of it in this tenour, and in the way of this priviledge, as a motive to conversion. So when Paul preached to the Jaylour, Acts 16. He asking What shall I do to be saved? verse 30. Paul answers, Believe on the Lord Jesus and thou shalt be saved; and then addeth, thou and thine house. As Christ published the Covenant with these Promises annexed to a Gentile converted already, to comfort him; so the Apostles promulge the offer of it to one to be converted; and being a Master of a Family, do declare his priviledge by this, that he should be a means to convey it to his House: and accordingly it fell out there, verse 34. That he believed in God with all his House, as Zacheus and his houshold did here.

And 3. In the New Testament, we find in the event (which still answers to Promises) that the Gospel spread it self through whole houtholds, this being the tenure of our Covenant. So it is said of the Centurion a Gentile, Acts 10. 2. That he was a devout man, fearing God, he and all his House. So Lydia was converted, and all her House, Acts 16, 15, 16. So 1 Cor. 1. 16. The houshold of Stephanus, and perhaps intimated, at least sometimes, in that usual Phrase [the Church in thy House.]

Now then, when the Covenant thus runs with the Heads of Houses for the Families themselves, I argue thus from thence for their Children, That they must needs be included and intended in a more special manner; for they are the Natural Branches, and Servants but engrafted, as was said of the Jews and Gentiles in the like case. And the Servant abides not always in the House, but the Son ever abides in it, John 8. 35. The House of Aaron and his Children, are put for one and the same, Psal. 115. 12, 15. In like phrase of speech Leah and Rachel in bringing forth Children, are said to build up the House of Israel, Ruth 4. 11. And so the word House is used for Posterity in all Languages.

And for the further confirmation of this, namely, that this tenure of the Gentiles Covenant in a conformity to Abrahams, should run thus by Families from the Heads thereof, this doth fully suit with the original Promise made to Abraham himself, when the Scripture foresaw (as Paul's phrase is) that the Gentiles should be justified, and so conveyed a blessing through Abraham unto them, as his Seed. The Promise (Genes. 12. 3.) runs in these terms, In thee shall all the Families of the Earth be blessed; as elsewhere, Genes. 18. 18. and 22. 18. it runs in these terms, All the Nations of the Earth shall be blessed. These Expressions are both used; the one to shew, the Seed should be of all Nations and People, yet so, as withal, the Covenant was to run by Families in those Nations. Therefore the New Testament quotes it in both senses. Galat. 3. 8. says, πάντα τὰ ἔθνη, all Nations, or Heathens, because some of all Nations shall be converted: But Peter, when he makes mention of the Covenant; Acts 3, 25. though chiefly for the end to shew the Jews were the first Children Children of the Covenant, yet he expounds theſe words ſpoken to Abraham [In thy Seed ſhall the Families of the Earth be bleſſed] thus: In thy Seed, namely Chriſt, (as verſe 26. he interprets it) All the Fatherhoods or Kinreds of the Earth ſhall be bleſſed: The word in the original is αι πατριαι, Fatherhoods of the Earth. So he ſtileth Families becauſe of the Fathers Covenant, through which Chriſt, the Seed of Abraham, conveys his bleſſing. And the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 22. 27. ſpeaking of the Calling of the Gentiles by Chriſt, as the fruit of his death, when he ſays, All the ends of the Earth ſhall turn unto him; and all the Kinreds, &c. The Septuagint alſo renders it, as Peter here, πατριαι, Fatherhoods, and becauſe it ſhall be derived ſometimes by ſucceſſion of birth, as a means of conveying the bleſſing, therefore in the following 30. verſ. he ſaith, a Seed ſhall ſerve him: that is, the Poſterity of thoſe Godly, who (as verſ. laſt) ſhall be born of them. Chap. 1.

Further, we ſee that in the calling of the Jews to come, God reſpects their Fathers and their Covenant though it be under the Goſpel: ſo Rom. 11. Yea and the Apoſtle quoteth for it, that place of the Prophet, Iſai. 59. 20. The Redeemer ſhall come to Zion. Now if we look into the words of the Prophet, propheſying of their call, how doth the promiſe of the new Covenant made to them in that their call to come, run? More infallibly upon their ſeed than that former to Abrahams did. This is my covenant, my ſpirit ſhall not depart out of the mouth of thy Seed, and of thy Seeds Seed, from henceforth and for ever. There will be in the new Jeruſalem a continued ſucceſſion of ſanctified ones: a Seeds Seed for ever: And not only of Men converted, when of ripe years, but when Infants. Therefore in Deut 30. (where God gives the Covenant of the Goſpel, as appears by Rom. 10. and that in oppoſition to the law given before: and expreſſeth it by way of Propheeying what ſhould fall out after their diſperſion, as verſe 1.) he ſays, I will circumciſe thy heart, and the heart of thy ſeed, verſe. 6. You know whither the phraſe Circumciſe leads, namely to the ſign and ſeal of it: which under the New Teſtament is Baptiſm anſwering unto it; Their Childrens hearts he will circumciſe, which is the fruit of Baptiſm, as Coloſſ. 2. 12.

And further, That our Covenant as Abrahams ſeed ſhould run thus with us and our Families, was moſt correſpondent to that firſt example of the Covenant then given to Abraham: for then the Church was only in a Family: and ſo the firſt giving of this Covenant and the Seal to confirm it, was eſtabliſhed with a Family, through Abraham the Father of it. And this was (as all knew) the Primitive and natural Church way, under the Law of Nature afore Moſes; unto which therefore for ever God hath ſuited this Family Covenant, and in Abraham ratified and ſanctified it to the end of the World, he being conſtituted the Father of all the faithful, both Jews and Gentiles: And accordingly he and his Family were made the Proto-type of this Covenant: God then bleſſing all Families of Believers, and the Fathers thereof, in bleſſing that of his through him the Father of it: Even as God bleſſed all mankind in Adam and Eve (Geneſ. 1.) for encreaſe and multiplying, as being the Root, and firſt Sampler.

And the reaſon why God choſe this of a family to convey the Covenant by, was, that this ſociety was the only natural Society of all others, and therefore God did always chooſe it throughout all States of the Church; Thus when the Church was national among the Jews, then was this way in force. I and my houſe will ſerve the Lord, ſaid Joſuah. So David, Pſal. 101. And when under the New, the inſtitution was to conſiſt of many Believers meeting in one place for publique worſhip, yet this ſtill remains a Church in the houſe alſo. God herein engrafting (as he uſes to do) grace on nature, in our Spirits, when he converts us, ſo his Covenant of Grace upon this Covenant of Nature to run in the Channel of it.

And let me add this further obſervation, that in Abrahams Family his Servants that were Gentiles, if they had Children, thoſe Children were circumciſed as fore-running pledges and Types that both we and our Children, who are Gentiles and ſtrangers, were engrafted into this covenant, it held forth this our priviledge to come, that in Abraham the Gentiles ſeed (as well as Abrahams own) ſhould be bleſſed in him.

CHAP.

CHAP. II.

That this Covenant is derived unto the Churches of the Gentiles, in a conformity to the Jews priviledge as they were a Church.

AND as thus we have ſeen the derivation of the Covenant to the Children of Believing Parents, founded on a conformity to Abrahams priviledge, and ſo propagated in a Family way, in a correſpondency unto him and his Family; So you ſhall alſo ſee it founded on a conformity to the Jews priviledge, as they were a Church; and ſo derived in a Church way, as a priviledge made to Believers as members of Churches. This (I take it) will ariſe out of the Scope of that admonition given the Gentiles, Rom. 11. from the example of the Jews being broken off, and our being engrafted in their ſtead. The caveat or warning which the Apoſtle there gives is this, that the Gentiles being engrafted on the Jews root, they would look well to their ſtanding in the Grace, verſ. 20. and continue in Gods goodneſs vouchſafed, verſe 22. and not boaſt againſt the Jews who were broke off, verſe 18.

Now that you may clearly ſee, that which I ſeek to prove to ariſe out of it, I give theſe obſervations upon that diſcourſe of the Apoſtle in that Chapter, which put together will riſe up to a demonſtration of it.

The firſt is (That which Calvin alſo and Beza have obſerved, though to another purpoſe) that although the Apoſtle gives this Admonition in the ſingular number, [Thou, and Thee] almoſt in every verſe: Yet he ſpeaks not ſo much to particular perſons ſingly conſidered, but to the Gentiles collectively, in a bulk or Body, as diſtinct here from the Body of the Jews. Which is evident, 1. Becauſe he oppoſeth theſe unto whom he gives the admonition, unto the Jews as ſo conſidered. 2. Becauſe that Boaſting (which he forewarns them of, verſe 18, 19.) that the Jews were broken off that theſe Gentiles might be engraſted in, cannot be ſuppoſed it ſhould be ſo groſs a way of boaſting, as that each particular Roman or Gentile ſhould for themſelves apart, perſonally and ſingly conſidered, glory againſt the whole Nation of the Jews. And therefore thirdly, Though verſe 17. he ſpeaks in the ſingular number, [Thou] yet he expreſſeth it thus, thou having been a wild Olive Tree; which evidently implies that he ſpeaks of the bulk and Body of the Gentiles, not to particular perſons: For then he would have ſaid, Thou being a branch of the wild Olive.

2. Obſerve, that though it be to be extended to the whole Body of the Gentiles, in oppoſition to the whole Nation of the Jews; yet it is in the admonition more particularly intended, directed and brought home to theſe Romans, to whom this Epiſtle was written: And theſe conſidered as caſt into a Body of a Church, or Churches; in oppoſition to the Jews as they were conſidered, as once a Church unto God, and therefore this admonition being given thus to them, is withal directed under them, to all Chriſtian Churches of the Gentiles. And therefore, 1. He ſpeaks to them as to one Man [thou and thee] becauſe he ſpeaks to them as to a collective Body. And 2. He ſpeaks of their engraſting, not into the Jews Church (as Proſelites were of old) that they ſhould be members of that Church as if it ſtill ſtood; but in ſtead of the Jews Church (conſidered as broken off, and theſe growing up of themſelves on the Jews ſtock) to be a Church of themſelves unto God, entire, and diſtinct from that of the Jews, in the room thereof. 3. Therefore from occaſion of theſe mercies of God in engrafting them into this Body or tree, ſpoken of in this Chapter, he exhorts them Chap. 12. by the mercies of God vouchſafed them herein (with the admiration of which mercies both to Jew and Gentile, he had concluded this discourse, vers. 30, 31. of this 11. Chap.) to behave themselves answerably, as they were a Church to God: And so indeed all that first use and application he makes unto them of that his fore-going Doctrine, Chap. 11. is, how to walk as a Church, both officers and members. Thus Chap. 12. an Use answering to this his former Doctrine, Chap. 11. and as that special mercy vouchsafed them, even to be planted as a Church to Christ, distinct from the Jewish Church and in their stead. Now therefore as his Application and Use of the Doctrine is spoken to them as to a Church, Chap. 12. so the Doctrine it self, which is the thing in hand, Chap. 11. that speaks of their engrafting in, is to be understood. And 4. I may add this, that all epistles written by Apostles, are written to the Gentile Saints considered as Churches. So to the Corinths and to the Galathians; and so this, with all the rest. Chap. 2.

Wherefore 3. Observe this his exhortation or covenant, to stand and continue in Gods goodness: that as it was not spoken so much to the particular persons of these Romans, singly considered; so answerably it is not intended of their falling personally away, and in that respect to be cut off singly and apart (through that I exclude not) but it is spoken in relation to succession, and so, of their continuance as a Church before God in after ages, and in their posterity. As if he had said, Let every one look to it, (and upon that consideration look to it,) to continue in the stock into which they were ingrafted, and to propagate this priviledge to posterity. For;

1. This continuing thus, and taking heed of being cut off, must answer to the example of the Jews, whom he sets before them as broke off, for them to take heed lest they came so to be broken off as they were. Now the Jews breaking off, and the severity of it, mentioned verse 22. is to be understood principally to consist in this: that not only the persons of the present Jews were broken off, but likewise a stop put to the nation to be a Church in respect to succession of posterity, and so their Children broken off with them, from being any longer a Church unto Christ; God had cast off them, and their posterity after them. And if the goodness, or priviledge vouchsafed the Gentiles had not been like to that of the Jews even in this respect, what ground or appearance had there been of their boasting, or equalling themselves to the Jews (who for 2000. years had enjoyed this priviledge of continuance) if the promise to these Romans were to have it but in their own persons, and reached but to an age, if they might not by standing in the Faith, have continued to it others after them; There had neither been such cause to compare this goodness or favour vouchsafed them, with that to the Jews: Nor had it been any way answerable to the severity towards the Jews, with which he threatneth them, vers. 22. if this goodness were not meant of a continuance of this grace to them and theirs, as the severity was a breaking off of the Jews and theirs also.

And 2. Herein how proper was this Admonition to this Church of Rome? which the Apostle knew would in after Ages become the greatest Apostate Church in the World, and the Mother of all Apostatizing Churches (as John hath it) which yet makes this very boast (not against Jews only, but against other Churches of the Gentiles also) of her standing more firm and sure then the Jews ever did, whom God rejected; that against Her the gates of Hell shall not prevail. Yea, and in distinct terms she boasts of this very thing, namely, her continuance and succession in all Ages. And so the Caveat about boasting here is thus peculiarly directed to these Romans, and that as a Church in Rome, for as so considered she boasteth of her self.

And whereas it may be objected, That though a continuance of Succession is here to be understood, yet that it follows not, it should be meant of their Children in a way of Propagation, seeing there is another way of continuing this priviledge of Grace among the Gentiles, and may be understood to be intended in this Roman Church, namely, by a new addition of Converts daily added to the Church, who should stand up after them. This I exclude not.

Book V. Yet further, in the fourth place, obſerve, That a Promiſe of Succeſſion to their Children as the continuers of this Church is here meant.

For firſt, It is this way of Succeſſion by Children which he maketh expreſs mention of here in this Diſcourſe; neither doth he mention any other. So verſe 16. [If the root be holy, ſo are the branches] ſpeaking of the Fathers and Children of the Jewiſh Nation, verſe 27.

And ſecondly, The Law of Oppoſition argues it, for the breaking off the Jews mentioned, is to be underſtood of a putting a ſtop unto, and the not continuing it to them and to their Children; for otherwiſe their Children are not more broken off to this day, then the Children of us Gentiles are. And then the cutting off, with which he threatens the Romans, in the ſame 22th verſe, Thou alſo (or, in like manner) ſhalt be cut off, muſt anſwerably be ſo meant. And then accordingly their engrafting alſo muſt be ſo intended; for none are capable of being cut off, but thoſe who are engrafted on the ſtock.

And Thirdly, The engrafting in again of the Jews (which he promiſeth under the Goſpel as to come) is promiſed to be not in reſpect of a Succeſſion in others, as ſuccedanean Proſelytes to them, but of their own Children. For the place which he quotes, verſe 26. out of Iſai. 59. 20. hath it thus: This is my Covenant, that my ſpirit and word ſhall not depart out of the mouth of thy Seed, and of thy Seeds Seed henceforth for ever. Which words of Iſaiah, Paul here briefly ſhuts up in this Interpretation, All Iſrael ſhall be ſaved; that is, they and their Poſterity after them. So as, this kind of ſucceſſion and continuing a Church, is the goodneſs or favour, which he hath in his eye throughout this Diſcourſe.

And then withal, 5. obſerve, That he attributes to the Gentile Churches, the very ſame priviledge by their grafting in, which the Jews once had, and which ſhall one day take hold again upon them. Which Covenant, verſe 16. he declares to conſiſt in this, If the root be holy, then ſo are the branches, and thereupon immediately in the next verſes ſubjoyns concerning the Gentiles.

1. That they were grafted in among them, that is, the Jews, (or for them) verſe 17. ἐν αὐτοῖς, for ἀντὶ αὐτῶν, which (as the Syriack alſo expounds it) is in loco eorum; in the Jews ſtead and room; that is, to continue a Church unto God, by vertue of the ſame Covenant in this reſpect which as the Jews before had done: And as he had before planted the Jews to continue, ſo now that he had planted the Gentile Churches, and particularly, that of the Romans. And ſo in our Margent you have it varied, for them, that is, in their ſtead.

2. He ſays, that they are made partakers with them, namely with the Jews, συγκοινωνοὶ, communicating of a like intereſt both of the root, and of the fatneſs of the Olive Tree. By the root it is plain, he means their Fathers, Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob: for ſo he had called them, verſe 16. And to be partaker of the Root, muſt neceſſarily be interpreted, by what went afore, namely to partake of this Covenant made with the Jews for their Father's ſakes; That if the root be holy, ſo are the branches: For that ſpeech is ſpoken of the Fathers deriving of this Covenant to their Children, hence therefore this is argued to be the priviledge of this Roman Church, to have the ſame Covenant that the Jews had in theſe their Roots; the ſame that theſe the Natural Branches once had. And therefore as the Covenant of the Jews was for them and their Children, becauſe Abraham's Covenant deſcended to them (he being their root) ſo Abraham becoming the Root of us Gentiles alſo, the ſame Covenant deſcends to us. And ſo Thou partakeſt, ſaith he, from this root the ſame Fatneſs, that is, the ſame ſpiritual priviledges and promiſes made to the Jews, whereof this is the main which the ſimilitude of fatneſs imports, that branch ſhould ſpread out of branch, as the Jewiſh root and branches had done, ſo conveying juice or fatneſs to others, Age after Age; for of a fatneſs, to this very end, to ſpread it ſelf into branches, he chiefly and evidently ſpeaks, for this was that fatneſs which when he ſpeaks of the Jewiſh Church he intended; this therefore muſt needs be meant of the Fatneſs the Church of the Gentiles did partake in, if they continued to believe.

Then

Then 3. Our engrafting in, and the Jews their cutting off, are made answerable one to the othe: And the goodneſs ſhewn to the Gentile Churches muſt be ſuitable to the ſeverity ſhewn againſt the Jewiſh. Now then, if God's ſeverity to them (for their unbelief) lay in this chiefly to cut them off, from continuing a Church in their Poſterity; then God's goodneſs in our engrafting in, muſt accordingly lie in this, to derive the Covenant down to our Children and Poſterity; or elſe the Apoſtle had not ſpoke ad idem, which verſe 17. he profeſſeth to do: Yea, if it be but granted, that our cutting off, threatned verſe 22. ſhould be (if executed) ſuch a cutting off as was theirs, (as it is plain it is; for he ſays Thou alſo ſhalt be cut off) then it muſt neceſſarily include the cutting off our Children: And then if the threatning be to cut off our Children, as he had done theirs, then our Children muſt be ſuppoſed to be by God's Promiſe engrafted in; for none are capable of being cut off, but ſuch as are engrafted in. Chap. 2.

And 4. The Metaphor he expreſſeth this Priviledge to the Gentile Churches by, implies it to be by Propagation, and ſo of their Children chiefly, as Members to continue it. This Church Priviledge is compared to an Olive Tree, ſpreading into branches, verſe 17. only with this difference from that of the Jews, (which difference is found in the growing up of other Trees) that ſome Trees grow up of branches but engrafted upon a root, (ſuch are the Gentile Churches) others conſiſt of branches naturally growing out of a root: (ſuch were the Jews) but when they that are engrafted on the ſtock or root do once take, they then partake of the ſame natural priviledge, to ſpread into new branches, branch after branch, in the ſame natural way, that the branches of thoſe Trees do, which grow naturally out of their root. So as, though indeed the firſt engrafting or implanting of a wild Olive branch (as he calls the Gentiles, verſe 24.) be not by natural ſucceſſion; yet after it is emplanted, it is continued (as a Tree) by as natural ſpreading, as was at firſt in the natural Tree, the branches whereof are cut off. For otherwiſe, if the priviledge of the Gentiles Church to continue, were but only by the addition of wild branches (ſuch as at the firſt, the new converted Gentiles themſelves were) newly converted to the Faith; and ſo not by their Children chiefly in a natural ſucceſſion; then the continuance of all Gentile Churches in the next ſucceſſion were ſtill by a new engrafting only ſuch as at firſt, whereas when once grafted in, the Apoſtle makes it to be continued in a natural way, from the root, which Abraham is become to be to us as well as to them, to ſhew that if Believers continue in Faith, that God will continue his name on their Children, who are (according to the Pſalmiſts compariſon alſo) the Olive branches about their Table.

Neither 5. Had the Arguments or Motives which he uſeth to the Romans, to ſtand in the Faith, and thereby to continue a Church, had that force in them, to prevail with them, if not meant of their Children ſucceeding them, but only of other Gentiles vagè, and at large that ſhould riſe up as Converts of the ſame Nation. Or how would this threatning of cutting them off have ſo much concerned them, or have been ſo pungent to move them, as if ſuppoſed to be meant of their own Children ſo dear to them? This muſt needs have a far ſtronger efficacy in it, to engage them to ſtand, ſeeing their Childrens hopes depended ſo much upon their Fathers faith; which ſurely is his meaning, becauſe he ſharpens this admonition with the example of the cutting off the Jews and their Children.

Yea, 6. How would this have provoked the Jews to emulation, (as verſe 14. he ſays he intended to do) if the ſame favour had not been vouchſafed to the Gentiles now, that had been formerly unto the Jews in this reſpect? for emulation is always about the ſame kind of excellency, which we properly affect, or once had, and are now Competitours for.

And whereas the Objection may be, That the Jews only are called the natural branches, verſe 24. as if that way were only proper to them. The Anſwer is, That that Title is given them in reſpect that they were the firſt Primitive branche; and that Abraham, the firſt root out of which they had their ſpiritual Covenant derived, was alſo their natural Father, which to us, he was

Book V. not; But we are engrafted after their cutting off: yet ſo, as it hinders not, that when we are once engrafted in, that then branches ſhould grow out of us in the ſame way (even by a propagated ſucceſſion) that they did among them: for ſo (as was afore obſerved) engrafted branches uſe to do: For we partake of the root, and of the ſame fatneſs; Only ſtill with this difference, (as I ſaid at firſt, which the Apoſtle here acknowledgeth) which maketh this their priviledge, to be more eminent than ours, in theſe particulars

1. In that Abraham our common Root was their Root originally: verſe 24. it is called their own: They were Natural Branches, we after many hundred years engrafted.

2. That we being but engrafted branches, and having once been wild branches; both we and our poſterity are in a greater danger (intimated verſe 21.) more ſpeedily to be cut off, not continuing in faith: A few Generations may make a ſtop, a breaking off in our Poſterity; whereas they had continued many hundreds of years. Theirs was a Covenant ſure, (as David ſays) though his Houſe was not ſo, that is, not ſuch to God, as God's Covenant required of them, but had many unbelievers in his Line; yet God revived it in the Virgin Mary, and others, to the laſt.

And 3. That our danger is, never to be engrafted in again, if once our ſucceſſion fail to continue in his goodneſs, and ſo to be broken off for ever, or at leaſt not to continue in that ſtrength and firmneſs as theirs; as that after ſixteen hundred years interruption, they ſhould be engrafted in again, verſ. 25, 26, 27. and this for their fathers ſake, verſe 28. and all Iſrael ſhall be ſaved, verſe 26. All which agrees with that limitation which I gave at firſt.

And thus out of this place you ſee, that this Covenant to our Children is not only derived to us Gentiles as a Family priviledge only, in a conformity to Abraham's Family, (as I ſhewed before) but alſo by vertue of a Church Priviledge, in a conformity to the Jews as grown a Church, as grown up into a Tree, which conſiſts of many arms, having leſſer branches or families thereon: God promiſing to the Gentiles, till they cut themſelves off by unbelief, to continue and keep up the ſucceſſion of Churches out of their loins. Therefore further, Epheſ. 2. 12. &c. we are ſaid to partake of their Commonwealth or City Priviledge, we are of the Commonwealth of Iſrael, and have the Covenant of the Promiſe, the 12, 13, 14, and 19th verſes compared, and are of the ſame body with them, Chap. 3. 6. which are ſpoken becauſe God hath eſtated us into theſe their Priviledges, as all thoſe expreſſions carry it; for if we have their Commonwealth or City Eſtate, or Priviledge, then thoſe Societies or Churches, under the Goſpel (which therefore inherit the Name and Title of the City of God, &c.) are admitted to the ſame ſpiritual rights that belonged to their Nation, City, or Commonwealth: And a Church is now called a City, becauſe as a City conſiſts of many Families, ſo a Church. Now this in all Nations is one Priviledge of a City, and the common Priviledge to all Citizens; that their Children are free Burgers, I was born a Roman, ſays Paul.

Yea, he further adds, that we have the Teſtaments of Promiſe: Mark how he uſeth the ſame expreſſion which he had uſed of the Jews, when he yet ſet out the eminent Priviledge of their Nation, in reſpect of their birth, Rom. 9. 4. That to them pertained the Teſtaments or Covenants, and the Promiſes: He uſeth the word Teſtaments in the plural number; becauſe all the ſorts of bleſſings in things ſpiritual, belong unto them; and of Promiſes that are, or may be eſteemed Priviledges; whereof we are made partakers as well as they, though they more eminently, as Rom. 9. 4. he ſhews; yet we in a conformity to them. Now was not this one Covenant with them, and one great promiſe that God would be a God of them and of their Seed? And are we debarred of it? If ſo, then are we ſtill ſtrangers from this particular Covenant, and from this Promiſe: Yea further, yet to ſtrengthen this, as we are the Sons of Abraham, ſo Children of the Jews alſo. 1 Cor. 10. 1. They are called Our Fathers. The Apoſtle ſpeaks to the Corinthian Gentiles, and yet calls the Jews their Fathers; and we come in as their Children, as truly as thoſe of their Nation did. I now urge not much that more noticed place in Peter's Sermon to the Jews (becauſe I ſhall do it in a ſubſequent Treatiſe of Baptiſm, if God enable me) Acts 2. 38, 39. Where exhorting the Jews to come in to the embracement of the New Covenant of the Goſpel, then firſt delivered, and to receive Baptiſm the Seal of it, for the forgiveneſs of ſins; he ſpeaks thus: [For the Promiſe is to you and your Children] and then extends the ſame Promiſe to the Gentiles alſo: [And to all that are afar off; and to as many as God ſhall call] namely of the Gentiles; who in that Epheſ. 2. 17. are ſaid to have been afar off. Now if the Jews Covenant ſtill under the Goſpel, continues to be to them and their Seed; and the ſame Promiſe belongeth to the Gentiles when called; then to their Children alſo: And the Reaſon is ſtrong; for elſe the Jews ſhould once have had Promiſes, yea and this under the Goſpel too, which we have not: Whereas you have heard it proved, that we are of their Commonwealth; yea, we are their Children, They our Fathers; and the ſame Promiſes and Teſtaments given to us, that were given to them. So as this Priviledge comes by a double Right to us; by God's Covenant a Chriſtian Family in conformity unto Abraham; and by his Covenant alſo a Church in conformity to the Jews. Chap. 2.

This Paul ſhews to have been the Ancient Promiſe to the Church of Rome, and they poſſeſſed this Priviledge more eminently then any other Churches for four hundred years; till ſhe began to ſpread her ſelf too far into unnatural Branches, to enlarge her ſelf, and to over-ſhadow other Trees, and uſurping over other Churches, like to Nebuchadonezzar's Tree, not keeping within thoſe bounds of extent wherein God had planted her.

Book V.

CHAP. III.

A comparing the 1. Cor. 7. 14. with the forecited Rom. 11. 16.

NOw for a more full confirmation of this point: I ſhall proceed to compare this place, Rom. 11. with that other, 1 Cor. 7. 14. and by both ſet together we ſhall find this point in hand yet more clear, namely, That our Seed now is included in the Covenant of Grace, as the Jews Seed was in that of their Fathers. For look what we have heard ſaid of the Jews, Rom. 11. 16, in reſpect of their Fathers, and their Covenant: The very ſame we find ſpoken of our Children (in that place of the Corinths) in their relation unto us their Parents being Believers. The Apoſtle in that place to the Romans, arguing for the Jews converſion in future times, ſays, If the firſt fruits be Holy, the lump is alſo Holy: If the Root be Holy, ſo are the Branches. And in like manner, in that 14. verſe of the 7. to the Corin. ſpeaking of the Children of Believing Gentiles, he ſays, They are Holy, and that in reſpect of their relation to their parents, as Believers, as will anon appear. And ſo theſe two places ſerve moſt fitly to interpret one th'other; and I alledge this latter, not only as a new confirmation of the point it ſelf, but further alſo of that interpretation of Rom. 11. which in the former Chapter I have given. Now in that Speech of his, Rom. 11. he ſpeaks not of outward, but of true, inward, real holineſs; not of their ancient, Jewiſh, Legal, and Typical holineſs which was in all the Nation, but of their Evangelical holineſs: For it is given as a reaſon of their future converſion, as verſe 15. which we one day look for: Which will be an Evangelical holineſs, not Typical. Neither ſpeaks he this in a promiſcuous ſenſe, of the whole Nation, that they were holy from the better part, as namely, becauſe ſome elect ſhould be found among them; but the Speech properly refers to thoſe very elect, and to them only who ſhall then be called: For if compared with verſe 15. immediately fore-going, it appears his Scope to be, to ſhew, what manner of perſons at their receiving and engrafting in again (as verſe 15. and 24.) they ſhall then be: And that by reaſon of their Fathers covenant: For if the firſt fruits be holy, ſays he, ſo is the lump: And verſe 27. he explains it out of Iſai. 59. This is my covevant when I ſhall take away their ſins, both by a real juſtifying and ſanctifying of them, as by comparing Heb. 10. is evident. And he ſpeaking this of that great and true converſion and ſanctification of the elect of that Nation to come (as that particle [When I ſhall, &c.] imports) no other then real and Goſpel-holineſs can be meant or intended. For then, if ever any in any age were holy, they ſhall eminently be ſuch. Yea and therefore he muſt needs propheſie this with an aim to thoſe individual perſons in that Nation, who ſhall then be holy and converted, that are elect and beloved for their Fathers ſakes. And yet becauſe the generality, or the moſt of that Nation ſhall be then converted: (For verſe 26. he ſays, All Iſrael ſhall be ſaved,) therefore he uſeth the word Lump. And I have thought, that that outward Typical holineſs of the whole Nation before, under the Law, might be intended as a Type of the great and large extent of real holineſs of that whole Nation under the Goſpel (in compariſon of all Nations elſe) which is one day yet to come. And with this ſuits alſo the Apoſtles phraſe of Speech, When [it] ſhall turn unto the Lord, 2 Cor. 3. ſpeaking there alſo of the converſion of this Nation, as in this Rom. 11.

Now

Now then, if true real holineſs be promiſed and intended in that Rom. 11. 16. to Abrahams Seed to come almoſt four thouſand years after Abraham, by reaſon of their Fathers Covenant, and we be there ſaid in the mean time to ſucceed them in their Covenant, or rather come in as ſurrogates; why ſhould we not think that the Promiſe and Declaration of God about our next Children (which in this other place of the New Teſtament we meet with, 2 Cor. 7. where it is as expreſly ſaid, that they are holy) ſhould there alſo be meant in the very ſame ſenſe, eſpecially ſeeing the ſame ground or reaſon is given in both; namely, the Parents their being Believers, is given as the reaſon why the Children are holy, ſo 2 Cor. 7. even as here in Rom. 11. This is the reaſon given why Abrahams Seed ſhall be converted, for If the root be holy, ſo are the branches, eſpecially ſeeing that we Gentiles are here ſaid to partake of the ſame Covenant and priviledge of that Root of Roots (as I may call him) Abraham, (as verſe 17.) which certainly is this, that as his, ſo Our Children ſhould be holy; which is the ſame thing that in this other place in the Corinths the holy Ghoſt is pleaſed to ſpeak of them. And although the catalogue and number of Abrahams Children to be converted may exceed ours, yet the holineſs of the one and the other is the ſame; and therein theſe two Speeches do ſweetly agree and accord. CHAP. IV.

A larger Explication of 1 Cor. 7. 14. For the unbelieving Husband is ſanctified by the Wife, and the unbelieving Wife is ſanctified by the Husband; elſe were your Children unclean, but now are they holy.

BUT becauſe this place is ſo much controverted, and ſome may not reſt ſatisfied with the comparing theſe two places together, I will therefore more largely inſiſt on this place of 1 Cor. 7. to prove this to be the true meaning of it, and intention of the Holy Ghoſt in it; and that it accords with that other, Rom. 11. in reſpect of the holineſs ſpoken of in both; which if it be the more inſiſted upon, let it be conſidered that Poſteritatis cauſam ago, as he ſaid in a far differing ſenſe, I plead the cauſe of our poor Children and Poſterity; then which, next pleading of your own ſalvation, nothing can be more comfortable unto you.

Other Senſes are, and have been put upon the Place by Anabaptiſts to make void this Priviledge of Believers Children; as alſo by Papiſts, who to make Baptiſm to work Holineſs, ex opere operato, in every one baptized, they therefore deny any of the Children of Believers to be holy until Baptiſm: and ſo, all others, even Infidels Children may be made holy by being baptized, if that Opinion of theirs were true. It is alſo otherwiſe expounded by ſome of our Divines, though not to ſerve theſe Opinions. But I will firſt give what I conceive to be the true meaning of it; and then you ſhall ſee all falſe ones vaniſh before the genuine ſenſe of it.

My Method in diſcourſing upon theſe words, ſhall be firſt to open and explain the words and phraſes in it. And 2. To frame Reaſons out of thoſe Explications of the Phraſes, for the confirmation of the Point in hand; namely, that this is true Holineſs here intended: And then, thirdly, to remove ſuch falſe Interpretations as are affixed by others. And for the firſt, What may be ſaid for the explication of the words, I reduce to theſe few Heads and Conſiderations.

Firſt, Let us conſider the Occaſion, upon which theſe words do come in. Now in this Chapter the Apoſtles Scope is to reſolve ſome caſes of Conſcience about Marriage, which the Corinthians had written to him about, verſe 1. As,

1. Whether it were beſt to Marry at all; from verſe 1. to 10.
2. In what caſes Divorces after Marriage were lawful. As,

Firſt, Whether ſo arbitrary, as that upon any occaſion of offence they might leave their Wives or Husbands, as the Jews were wont to do. To this he anſwers, verſ. 10, 11. and ſays, he gives but the ſame Rule that Chriſt did once, who pronounced the Marriage-knot inſeparable. But then, 2. Whether yet in caſe that one party were an Unbeliever, the Believing party were not then bound to put away or leave the other? This was a caſe did frequently fall out in thoſe times, and doth to this day; that two Perſons being married together in their Unregenerate eſtate, one of them is converted, the other ſtill remaining in unbelief. Now in this caſe (two in ſhew) exceeding great Scruples did ariſe then in Believers minds, and are apt to ariſe ſtill, and we ſee do ordinarily ariſe in believing Parties minds: As firſt, concerning Marriage-Communion with ſuch an Husband or Wife: whether though the Marriage be legal by Man's Law, yet in ſuch Communion one ſhould not contract a defilement before God, in that one becomes one fleſh with an Unbeliever and Member of Satan; conſidering that before Moſes's time, ſuch unequal Marriages were forbidden; bidden; and under Moſes's Law, they were to put away ſtrange Wives, as defiled by them. Chap. 4.

The ſecond Scruple in it (and which ariſeth to this day,) was about the ſtate and condition of the Children begotten by ſuch a Communion, leſt they ſhould be accurſed by reaſon of the unbelieving Parent; ſeeing the Threatnings ſo much run againſt the Children for their Parents, as in the ſecond Commandement: And leſt ſuch Children might not loſe the priviledge of thoſe Promiſes made to the Seed of the Godly, through the one Parents unbelief; yea, and leſt they ſhould in the Churches account, and that warrant from God, be accounted unclean; as the Children of ſtrange Wives were accounted of old, although the Father was a Jew, and ſo to be ſeparated from the other, Nehemiah 9. 2.

Now to this caſe the Apoſtle anſwers roundly and fully, and as punctually to both theſe Scruples as could be deſired, by affirming the clean contrary; namely, that for the act of communion with ſuch a Husband; [The Husband is ſanctified in the believing Wife] that is, 1. Both in conjugal acts, quoad uſum, to her, ſo as ſhe may as holily have communion with him, as if her Husband were a Believer as well as as ſhe: And 2. alſo, He is ſanctified in her, or through her, to all the ends of Marriage, that ſo by her the bleſſing of the Covenant ſhould be derived to Children begotten by him, as fully as if he were a Believer: And that they need not fear that their Children were unclean, as when both Parents are Unbelievers, the Apoſtle intimates that they are to be ſo eſteemed; which I take to be the meaning of thoſe words, Elſe they were unclean: that is, if that God had not thus ſanctified an unbelieving Husband in the Wife, ſhe being a Believer, they would indeed have been ſuch; [But now] that is, in this caſe, one of them being a Believer, [their Children are holy] as well as if both Parents were Believers; They receive no prejudice from the unbelieving Parent; God's Covenant with the believing Parent and his Ordinance, prevailing more to ſanctifie both that Act to the Believer, and alſo to convey the bleſſing of the Promiſe, (Holineſs to their Children) than the unbelief of the Husband is able, either to defile the act, or to convey the curſe threatned to Unbelievers Children. This is the ſum of his Anſwer in General.

The ſecond Particular to be conſidered for the explication of theſe words, is the Preface which he makes to his reſolution of the Caſe: or that which he premiſeth for the warrant or authority by which he is to ſolve it: And therein he tells us, 1. That there is this difference between this latter caſe and that former, about arbitrary Divorces; that that caſe the Lord Chriſt himſelf had decided already (as Matth. 19. 3.) and ſo, therein he ſhould but command what Chriſt had ſaid in that point already; That Divorces at pleaſure ought not to be (as among the Jews and Gentiles they were frequent) ſo verſe 10. To the married I command, yet not I, but the Lord, &c. But to this latter caſe, and thoſe that follow, he Prefaceth thus; To the reſt ſpeak I, not the Lord, verſe 12. that is, I find not an expreſs word already, either uttered by Chriſt himſelf when on Earth, nor in the New Teſtament to ſolve it by; neither doth the Rule about this Caſe given in the Old Teſtament to the Jews, hold now, to bind the Gentiles under the Goſpel, this being a new Caſe of a clean different nature from theirs: And there being under the Goſpel an alteration made of the Jews Ceremonial and Typical Laws, and the Judicials that were founded thereon. So as this remained entirely to be decided by his Apoſtolical Spirit: Therefore he ſays, To this ſpeak I: that is, I as an Apoſtle, guided by the Spirit of Chriſt, do give this following ſolution of it. For that he reſolved this, and the reſt that follow, as infallibly guided by the Spirit, he tells us in the cloſure of them, verſe 40. In my judgment, and I think I have the Spirit of God: ſo that your Conſciences may reſt in theſe Reſolutions as from God. 2. In ſolving this Caſe he gives a caution and limitation to what he ſaith about it, that he intended only to ſpeak this for the comfort of ſuch perſons, who are already married, (perhaps when Unbelievers, but ſince called) and not at all to thoſe who are as yet to marry; leſt theſe words of his ſhould be any encouragement, or be underſtood to give liberty to any, to marry an Un-believer,

Book V. believer, becauſe an Unbeliever is ſanctified in the Believer, &c. No, he would have them know, that though it be true, Factum valet, the Marriage being made (which was the Caſe as they had put it) holds good and valid, and that they need not to ſcruple either a defiling themſelves in conjugal Acts, or a defilement traduced to their Children: Yet Fieri non debuit; it ought not to have been made: And ſo this he ſays, would not warrant thoſe who were to Marry, to take liberty ſo to Marry, by reaſon thereof. That this is his meaning thus to caution and ſtate it appears by his words, verſe 12. [if a brother hath a wife] that is, already hath, which he puts in, as it were on purpoſe to prevent and exclude this corollary or concluſion that any might make out of it, that if he were to Marry a wife, he might Marry one that Believeth not. It appears alſo to have been his meaning by that in verſe 17. where the ground upon which he reſolves it thus (concerning perſons already Married) is this, that God by converting and calling Men to the Faith, would have no Civil, Natural bonds broken, or diſſolved: He intends not to make ſuch alterations in the World, as to break the bonds of wedlock, or of Subjection already entred into; but lets all things ſtand as they did, and ordains the courſes of things to run on their own wheels. Thus in theſe words, As the Lord hath called every one, ſo let him walk; that is, look in what ſtation God hath ſet any, whether of a Servant, or wife, let them continue ſtill therein: And this he doth for peace ſake, verſe 15. for what a diſturbance and confuſion would this make in the World, if Converſion ſhould diſſolve ſuch bonds? Only, God ſanctifies all theſe ſtations and conditions unto Believers when converted, which before converſion they are not, unto them; And hence his Scope is to ſhew that a Believer being already indeed Married to an Unbeliever, and that knot knit, and he or ſhe converted after ſuch Marriage, or elſe repenting afterwards of ſuch a Marriage, then God ſanctifies the unbelieving husband or wife, in, and to that Believer, to all the holy ends of Marriage, as truly, as if both parties were Believers. God takes all ſuch like conditions and ſtations, and ſanctifies the courſe of things in this World, even as he takes our ſpirits, and the ſeveral conſtitutions natural in them, and ſanctifies them without altering the courſe thereof. And further, that this is his meaning, appears by the concluſion of all, verſe 39. where ſpeaking of one that is at liberty to Marry where ſhe pleaſe, he yet limits her thus only in the Lord; if there be choice of ſuch. And when it falls out that a Believer is Married to an Unbeliever, it is by a gracious diſpenſation that the Unbeliever is ſanctified, for it is not for their ſakes, or from them at all, ſimply conſidered as husbands (though lawful ones) but in, and to, and for the ſake of the Believer. And ſo alſo for the Believers ſake it is, that their Children are holy, which elſe were unclean.

Theſe things being premiſed concerning the occaſion, and the Apoſtles ſtating of the caſe; let us ſecondly conſider the ſolution it ſelf he here gives. For the clearing of which, and the Apoſtles meaning herein, let us take notice of two things.

1. That his intention is to declare ſome priviledge properly and peculiarly belonging to a Believers Marriage, and which is not common to all other Marriages, nor belonging to unbelievers of themſelves. This is evident,

1. By thoſe words in the firſt part of the verſe, the unbelieving husband is ſanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife is ſanctified by the husband: In which it is manifeſt he attributes this ſanctification ſpoken of (let it be underſtood how it will) of the unbelieving Perſon in Marriage to be in and for the ſake of the Believing Party: Now if it had been but ſome common Priviledge of Marriage, common to all ſorts, both unbelievers, as well as to Believers, in their marriages, which he had intended; then the unbelieving husband had been as much ſanctified in his Marriage of himſelf, as in and by his wife that was a Believer. Or 2. If his meaning had been that both had been ſanctified in one another mutually, and each equally in and from each other without the ſpecial priviledge of the one Party; then he would have ſaid in the ſecond ſentence, that the Believing wife, had been ſanctified by the hus-

husband; as in the former it was ſaid, the unbelieving husband was ſanctified by the wife: But in both ſentences though he turns and alters the Speech from husband to wife; and wife to husband, affirming it firſt of the wife, then of the husband, yet ſtill he keeps to this in both, that the Unbelieving Party is ſanctified in the other; whether wife or husband. It muſt needs therefore be, that he means to attribute this Priviledge of the unbeliever unto the Believer, vouchſafed only for his or her ſake. And 3. the particle [ἐν] which we tranſlate [by] implies this: for it is all one with [propter] in, or for their ſakes; or (as our Tranſlation hath rendred the force of it) by the wife; that is, for and through her, or by reaſon of her. Chap. 4.

And if it be ſaid, that yet he adds not the word believing; and ſays not is ſanctified in the believing wife. I anſwer, that this muſt neceſſarily be underſtood: For,

1. According to the law of Oppoſition, and the manner of the Scriptures expreſſion, (ſuch as in the Proverbs and elſewhere you ſhall often meet with) but one of two contraries are expreſſed, and the other underſtood thereby; and in that here, in both the ſentences, the Unbeliever is mentioned, the other part; Believer is neceſſarily implied.

Yea 2. Therein lies the emphaſis, that even an unbeliever is ſanctified, (which elſe is a ſeeming contradiction; for to them all things are impure) yet though an unbeliever, yet he is notwithſtanding ſanctified in the wife, as Believing.

And yet 3. It is further noted out as emphatically in the greek Article ἐν [τῇ] γυναικὶ, and ἐν [τῷ] ἀνδρὶ: He is ſanctified in that wife, namely, in that Brother or Siſter Believing; as in putting the caſe, He had called Him, verſ. 12. and calleth her, verſe 15.

And therefore 4. In ſome Greek Copies, as Beza ſays he found it, unto ἐν τῇ γυναικὶ, the word [πιστῇ] is expreſly added, that is, in the believing wife: and to ἐν τῷ ἀνδρὶ, the word πιστῷ is added; in the believing husband.

The like is ſaid of their Children, that they have a differing priviledge (which the word ἐπεὶ [Elſe] notes out, as I ſhall ſhew anon) from that which thoſe of unbelievers have.

So much for the firſt, that ſome ſpecial priviledge to a Believer is intended.

Let us therefore conſider 2. what this priviledge it ſelf of a Believer in marriage is, which is double, as here: 1. Of the Husband, or partie married, that he is ſanctified in the wife: 2. Of the Children, that they are not unclean, but holy. Let us conſider firſt, how the unbelieving Husband is ſaid to be ſanctified.

1. You ſee, it is not meant of inherent ſanctification in his perſon; for he is ſaid to be ſanctified, not as in himſelf, but ἐν τῇ γυναικὶ, in the wife: That is, in another; therefore it is not meant, that he is holy, perſonally.

But 2. It is a ſanctification inſtrumenti reſpectu finis aut uſus, of an inſtrument in reſpect to an end, or for a holy uſe or purpoſe: As things which we uſe holily, or which do ſerve Gods providence to an holy uſe, are ſaid to be ſanctified. Thus in Scripture we find things are called holy, or vain, as that uſe or end is, to which the uſers put them. The Creatures uſed by Men to luſt, are ſaid to be ſubjected to vanity, Rom. 8. The bells and bridles of horſes are ſaid to be holineſs to the Lord, being uſed holily by Believers under the Goſpel, Zach. 13. Yea thus the Armies of the Babylonians ſerving to Gods holy ends of vengeance on Hieruſalem, and of goodneſs to his elect, are called ſanctified ones, Jer. 13. 13. And thus here the husband is ſanctified in the wife. Now this is to be underſtood in a double ſenſe or reſpect:

1. As to her uſe: That is, ſo as ſhe may have a ſanctified and holy communion with him: In the ſame ſenſe that to Believers the creatures are ſaid not only to be good in themſelves, but to be ſanctified, 1 Tim. 4, 5. that is, in their uſe; So as Believers may have, not only a lawful, but a holy uſe of them, according to the Word. Which fully anſwers the ſcruple that the Believing party might have of defilement in that communion, his reſolution is, that this Marriage ſtands not only good, but ſanctified alſo. But 2. That is not all, that he is ſanctified to her, and her uſe, ſo as that communion of her with him, is holy before God, and in Gods account. But further; look what holy end and ſanctified purpoſe there is of Marriage, either of the Act it ſelf, or that which God hath ordained it for unto other Believers; as namely, when both parties are Believers, that ſame holy end ſhall be accompliſht and brought about as fully, as if her husband were a Believer. He is holy to her, not only quoad uſum operantis, but ad omnes fines operis, to all ends and purpoſes. Now the main and principal end of Believers Marriage, and of generation thereby, was in Gods ordination and inſtitution, to bring forth an holy Seed. As at the firſt Creation, one of the ends for which God made Man and wife, was to beget an holy Seed. So this was the end of the Marriages of the Jews too, that they might have a holy Seed, as they are called, Ezra. 9. 2. And it is likewiſe the end ordained by God of the Marriages of Believers. Which (I take it) you have clearly expreſſed, Mal. 2. 15. where whatever the reading of the words may be, yet by the connexion, thus much is evident, that he goes about to convince the Jews of their ſin of Marrying ſtrange wives, and putting away their own, verſe 11. and he uſeth one kind of general argument to convince them of both: Firſt, from the Primitive Inſtitution, ſhewing them from thence how herein they perverted the ends of Marriages as at firſt they were ordained by God, whoſe end in Marriage was to ſeek an holy Seed, a Seed of God: And he at firſt made but one woman, and made the Man and her one fleſh. Whence it is evident, that the Prophet ſhews Gods inſtitution of Marriage to the Jews in covenant with him as his people, was to the ſame holy end, that at firſt to Adam in Paradiſe; and ſo to us upon the ſame ground: For that Primitive Inſtitution is moral, which was, that a holy Seed might be brought forth to God; for he alledgeth Gods end at firſt, So as, ſince the Fall, as God hath ordained Marriage to Man-kind, to bring forth Men, ſo to holy Men, to ſeek a Seed of God. Now (ſays the Apoſtle here) the Marriage communion of a Believer with an unbelieving husband or wife, is thus ſanctified, to attain this end as fully as if they were both Believers. And this ſenſe he aims at, in the word Sanctified, as here he uſeth it: For if you mark the latitude of the phraſe, he doth not only ſay, that he is ſanctified to her, but in her; ſo in the Original, [ἐν] τῇ γυναικὶ, as not only to her uſe that her Act with him ſhould be holy, but by her, and in her, to a further holy end beſides, even that which God hath ordained the Marriage of Believers unto: Or that the Marriage of two that are both Believers uſeth to be ſanctified unto, and what that end is, follows in the next words; even (the ſame you heard out of Malachi) that the Children begotten on her ſhould be holy and not unclean and ſo partake of the priviledges that Children begotten by Parents being both Believers, can be ſuppoſed to have.

And therefore 2. I paſs to that other Priviledge (which is couched in this) which deſcendeth to their Children as peculiar to them; namely, that they are holy: to the conveying of which unto their Children, that other former priviledge tends, for his meaning is, that the Husband is ſanctified in her, to this end, that the Children begotten by him or her ſhould be holy.

And for the clearing of this, let us conſider:

1. In general, that he in thoſe words, Your Children are holy, doth intend ſome perſonal priviledge which the Children inherit from the Parent, by virtue of ſome like priviledge vouchſafed the Parents, which is to be reckoned as a badge of honour, or cognizance, that perſonally they enjoy and inherit: Such as Children uſe to have from Noble Parents, as a cognizance of Nobleneſs or Gentry; and ſo here of holineſs, mentioned as a perſonal Royalty which they inherit; by which they are truly in themſelves denominated holy, as the Child of a Noble Man is termed Noble.

And

And then, ſecondly, more particularly, for the further enquiring into what this holineſs is, you may, 1. Obſerve, the Apoſtle varying the phraſe when he comes to ſpeak of the Children, from what he had uſed when he ſpake of the Unbelieving Parent himſelf: He is ſaid but to be ſanctified in his Wife, but the children are ſaid to be holy: The former notes out a paſſive kind of ſubſerving to the holy uſe of another, or to a holy end; but this latter notes out an holineſs in themſelves; that but an inſtrumental holineſs, this a perſonal: He is ſanctified but as an inſtrument is to an holy end, yea even to this very end, to help to bring forth holy Children; but they are ſimply and abſolutely termed holy: He cannot be ſaid to be perſonally holy, for he is ſuppoſed to be an Unbeliever, in the ſtile the Apoſtle ſpeaks of him; and ſo to ſay he were holy, were a contradiction, yet is he ſanctified as the Creatures are, to an holy end. But the Children here are ſaid to be holy as perſonally and in themſelves, not in the Parent only; although by means of their believing Mother as a Believer; even as they are Men of themſelves, though by means of their Parents; and this he did on purpoſe to ſhew that theirs is a further holineſs than the Fathers: His uſe is holy, but their ſtate is holy. Chap. 4.

In the ſecond place, Let us obſerve the expreſſions themſelves, whereby he ſets out the holineſs of their ſtate; and likewiſe his doubling of expreſſions to ſet this forth. He contents not himſelf to have ſaid poſitively, they are holy; but he uſeth a Negative expreſſion alſo, Not unclean; which he doth, 1. To ſettle and fix their Faith the more fully in it; that his meaning was real and full, and expreſs; and that it was a true holineſs which he meant, and therefore doubled his expreſſion of it. And 2. thereby to expreſs it with a difference from the Children of others that are both Unbelievers: And thus to magnifie the priviledge of a Believer the more, and to put an Emphaſis upon it, he thinks it not ſufficient ſingly to ſay, that they are holy, but adds, not unclean, namely, as others Children are, and to do it thus with difference from others, ſets it forth the more.

And 3. (Which is that moſt of all I would have you to obſerve) he chooſeth to expreſs the holineſs of their ſtate, thus with difference, in the ſame terms that the Old Teſtament uſeth of the Children of the Jews, in difference from the Heathen. Yea, and whereas in propriety of Speech, according to the Greek, [καθαρὰ] pure, or clean, anſwers to [ἀκάθαρτα] unclean, and ſo in a right way of oppoſition to unclean, he ſhould rather have ſaid [but now they are pure or undefiled] we ſee that he varies it, and goes out of the road (as it were) of the Greek Idiome and Analogy, and ſays, [But now they are holy] on purpoſe becauſe ἅγια and ἀκάθαρτα are uſed by the Septuagint, for things or perſons that were holy, and unclean among the Jews: And the Apoſtle here on purpoſe uſeth theſe very ſame expreſſions of difference of their Children from others, by which the Jews expreſſed the difference between their Children and the Children of the Nations; and all to ſhew, that our priviledge for our Children holds, and continues now as then; yea, that theirs was but the Type of what is real now. The old Law in a typical ſenſe called things that were unholy, unclean; and perſons prohibited to come into the Temple, and to partake of holy things, were called unclean. But the Seed of the Jews then admitted into the Church, were called the Holy Seed, and that in diſtinction from the Gentiles: yea, the Children of Jews, when one Parent was a Jew, the other a Heathen, (which is the very caſe here) were counted unclean, Ezra 9. 2. It is ſaid, the holy Seed mingled themſelves with the people of the Land: which words are ſpoken not of the mingling of Jews and Heathens in marriage, ſo much as of the ill fruit, and conſequent of their Marriages with them (of which the Prophet had ſpoke in the fore-going Sentence) namely, that the Children begot by, or upon the people of the Land by the Jews in thoſe Marriages, were mingled and accounted as the Children begot by or upon Jews only: For (ſays he) they have taken of their daughters to themſelves, ſo that the holy Seed mingled themſelves, &c. he ſpeaks it therefore as the ill effect thereof, that the Children begotten of ſuch Marriages were by reaſon thereof promiſcuouſly mingled with, and accounted of as purely Jewiſh Children were without any diſtinction, which that Law utterly forbad. And the Heathen, Isai. 52. 1. are likewise called uncircumcised and unclean. Now then in this place under this common language of the Jews concerning their Children, and those of others, he expresseth the like different state of Believers Children and others now under the Gospel; and so then the meaning is this, That whereas Unbelievers Children, are in the account of the Gospel, and of God himself under the Gospel, pronounced unclean, (that is, as remaining in the state in which they were born, namely, of sin and uncleanness, (so Original sin is called Zach. 13. 1.) and so was typified out by the uncleanness of Infants for seven days) and therefore are to be kept out of the Church, (as unclean persons were then among the Jews) and to be made partakers of no Sacramental Ordinances (as uncircumcised persons were not, Isai. 52. 1.) and so not to be baptized, as being to be judged and pronounced unclean: On the contrary (says he) your Children (although born in sin, as others) are yet, by God's true sentence of them in his Word and revealed Will proclaimed holy; and so are to be judged of by us, as truly regenerate and born again: And how to reconcile this with God's secret Will, and the Event, I shall after shew in a whole subsequent Chapter in this Discourse.

And these terms he useth of holy and unclean, not as if that our Children were now typically, or only outwardly to be esteemed holy. The reality is now expressed (as in the New Testament it useth to be) by the Name of the Type thereof in the Old: For that general Holiness of the Jews and their Seed, in a distinction from Heathen and their Children, was then a Type of that real holiness, which true Believers Children now have under the Gospel; and therefore he expresseth this here, by the same phrases used there. And the reason hereof, namely, that he intends an Evangelical, and not an outward Legal holiness, such as was under the Old in the Type is evident: For if it were Legal holiness, it must be either Ceremonial or that Moral holiness which was in Adam, which was a vacuity of Original-sin. Now it is neither of these; it is not Ceremonial, though he useth the terms of it, for the Ceremonies being abolished, concerned them not. And Moral holiness, in opposition to having Original sin in them, he cannot mean: For the Children of the Godly are conceived in sin, as well as others, though afterwards sanctified in the womb; (which was typified out by the uncleanness of all Children among the Jews for seven days.) He means therefore Evangelical Holiness; that though they be born in sin, as others are, yet they are in part sanctified, or regenerate and made holy in state, and so are not in a state of sin, but of Evangelical holiness in God's sight. I will not say that that Particle [Now] they are holy, the [νῦν ἅ] to have relation to the times of the Gospel, because it may have another sense, yet I do not exclude that.

Thus you have seen the solution of the Case. In the third place, by his determining the case thus, in the terms of the Old Law; you may easily see what the Scruple was (which he had in his eye) which troubled these Corinthians, together with the true bottom ground of their scruple or doubt, to the removal of which, he intended this solution, as purposing to speak directly unto it. For the truth is, that these two Cases, both about putting away unbelieving Wives and Husbands, as also concerning the Children of Parents, whereof one was an Unbeliever, were such, and so in view stated, as the Letter of the Old Testament would seem to warrant, yea command the leaving or putting away the unbelieving Party, and also the pronouncing their Children so begotten, unclean, although one Party were a Believer: For thus, indeed it was among the Jews; for when in, and after the Captivity they had married strange Heathen Wives, and begotten Children on them, you shall find Ezra 10. 3. that after a solemn Fast they did covenant to put away all the Wives, and the Children begotten of them. The like you have also, Nehem. 9. And so the place in Malac. 2. where the Prophet says, that God sought a holy seed; it is spoken upon this very occasion of marrying strange Wives, verse 11. and so it was that they profaned the holiness of that People by that mixture, as verse 11. both defiling themselves thereby, and their Seed also. And it is no wonder to imagine that by occasion of, and from those instances in the Old Testament, it was, that these Corinthians should take up these their scruples and fears, which occasioned this resolution of the Apostle; for they had read the Old Law, and received and embraced the Canon of it as Scripture. Therefore in this Epistle he often referreth them to the rules and instances of it, as 1 Cor. 10. 1. so 1 Cor. 9. 9, 13. and Chap. 10. 18. he argues from something that was moral in the Rules of the Ceremonial Law, as still binding. And therefore the cases being in view the same, and they making these questions about them, (which occasioned his writing about them) it seems clear to me, that they were thereby stumbled, as knowing this to have been the law and manner among the Jews. And this is strengthned further by this, that in that case of Divorces in the words before this, their scruple about that did arise from the practise of the Jews, and what they usually did under the Old Testament; who ordinarily put away their Wives; and so the Corinthians might think, that they therefore in like manner might: And therefore he refers to what the Lord Christ had said unto the Jews themselves in that case, when he interpreted the Law to them, that it was not so, ab initio, from the beginning. And indeed no other ground can be imagined to have occasioned this scruple: Some would have the Scruple arise from the Chap. afore; in that the Apostle had there said, that in Fornication one becomes one flesh with an Harlot; and so that they might from thence imagine, that in their Marriage communion, they being one flesh with an Idolater were defiled therein. But it is plain that these cases here about Marriage, were propounded to him by them, before this Epistle was written to them, as the first Verse of this Chapter tells us, and therefore could not be any thing which should arise from what he had said, Chap. 6. of this Epistle, which he was now a writing of. And further, That these Jewish cases were the ground of their scruple, appears also by this, that he professeth his resolution was such as he had no former ruled case, instance, or warrant for, from the word; that is, It was a case to which neither Christ had spoken, nor the Old Law; yea, the instances therein were rather against it. And therefore whereas for the determination of that other case about Divorces, he refers them to what Christ had said to the Jews: On the contrary for this (whereof Christ had not spoken, nor had occasion to speak,) the Apostle by his Apostolick Spirit declares to these Gentiles, (whom the Ceremonial Jewish Law did not concern) that this Jewish Law about unbelieving Wives, was not in force to them, that no believing Husbands, should, or might put away their unbelieving Wives, as the Jews were commanded to do; nor account the Children unclean: And to put the more observation upon it, he useth the Jewish phrases to express himself by, even then when he speaks point blank against the determination of their Law. Yea, affirms that the Gospel afforded a priviledge to a Believer, which that Ceremonial strictness allowed not; even this, that by the Believer, and for his sake, the Unbeliever is sanctified to all ends of Marriage; and that the Covenant with the Believer is so strong and full of grace, that it prevails to convey the Covenant of Grace to the Children, even in this case wherein the Law pronounced them unclean. Now the reason of this difference is evident, and lies in this, that Marriages among the Jews came under a peculiar Law, both Judicial and Ceremonial, proper to that state. Their Church and Commonwealth being of one and the same extent: The Laws of their Commonwealth were accommodated to the Rules of Church state; and so the Laws of Marriage, and the Children begotten by them were accordingly suited thereunto; so as Children and Persons, who according to the Church Law, were in a Type, or otherwise unclean, and unholy, even the Marriages with them were also made unlawful Marriages by the Law of the State, and the Children illegitimate, as being unclean in their Church State, wherein they were to be pure, or not Members: But this Polity of the Jews reached not to the Gentiles, to bind them at all, as the Ceremonial Law likewise did not: And therefore the Rules about their Marriage state, and their Children, must run upon other grounds, than did those of the Jews; and so the Apostle intimates they did.

Chap. 4.

And

Book V.

And to this purpoſe, in the 4. place, let us conſider what might be the Apoſtles grounds, and the reaſon that he goes upon in the determination of this caſe: And how conſonant this his deciſion is unto right reaſon, he took in all the ſeveral conſiderations about it; and ſo gave to Marriage the things that are due unto Marriage eſſentially; and yet to a Believer the priviledges due to a believer, in a Married eſtate.

1. He conſiders what is eſſential unto all Marriage by the law of nature, and Gods inſtitution at firſt, according to Chriſts own interpretation, Mat. 10. 3. that they are joyned by an inviolable knot, two becoming one fleſh, ſo verſe 10, 11. and therefore a Marriage once made between two, whereof the one is a Believer, the other not, muſt needs hold, and oblige from this general ground, which is common to all Marriages; for they Marry not as Believers, or Unbelievers, but as Men, and women. So as, the conſideration of being a Believer, is not of the eſſence of Marriage, but ſuper-induced; and ſo is not of force to cauſe a departure from an Unbeliever. For as this Apoſtle argues in another caſe. The law of Moſes, which came after Abrahams Goſpel Covenant, could not diſanul that Covenant which was eſtabliſhed 400. years before: So converſion, and the entring into Covenant with God for a Mans own Souls Salvation, hath nothing to do to diſſolve the bonds and covenants of nature. Grace diſſolves not the bonds of nature, but ſtrengthens, and ſanctifies them, and the duties of them. Which further ſtood with all the reaſon in the World, eſpecially conſidering the ſtate and condition of theſe Gentiles, which ſtood thus. The goſpel came among the Gentiles as already ſetled in Common-wealths, and did call Men aforehand ſet in ſeveral Stations according to the laws, and orders of Common-wealths, by which, Marriages, (as other conditions) were ratified, and eſtabliſhed, and ſo Mens outward conditions were accordingly caſt and ſetled. Now coming thus upon Men, and here and there ſingling out but a few by calling them and converting them; It was ſuitable to the glorious wiſdom of God, not at all to make alterations in States, or Common-wealths, by this their embracing of the Goſpel: But to let all obligations, Civil and Natural, ſtand in full force as before. And indeed, verſe 17. he ſhews this to be the ground of this his Reſolution of this Caſe; As God hath called any, ſo let him walk; and ſo ordain I in all Churches: and verſe 20. Let every Man abide in the ſame calling (Civil or Natural) to which he was called by Grace: If a ſervant, ſo abide, care not for it: If a Wife to an Unbeliever, ſo abide; Chriſt may be thy husband notwithſtanding; even as he ſays of ſervants, they are the Lords free-men: And among other Reaſons he ſuggeſteth this, God hath called us to peace, verſe 15. and therefore his calling us by the Goſpel it was to breed no diſturbance in Societies, and Common-wealths; nor ſuch a confuſion as the caſting off ſuch Relations would have produced, and ſuch as indeed would have turned the World upſide down.

Theſe Rules you ſee the Goſpel propoſeth concerning Marriages; which how differing were they from thoſe Rules of Marriage that God gave the Jews upon peculiar reſpects, and ſuch as in their ſtate could not meet with theſe inconveniences / For God found a people in Bondage, kept diſtinct from thoſe they lived with, and called them forth to make a diſtinct Common-wealth of themſelves; to the end they might live apart from all Nations, and dwell alone, as the Expreſſion concerning them is in Deuteron. and to that end gave this as a fundamental Law, which neceſſarily tended to keep them ſtill diſtinct, namely, not to Marry with ſtrangers, for fear of a mingled Seed: And this, not only upon National conſiderations; but in a Type Religious: Becauſe they were to be a holy People, a holy Nation, ſingled out and ſeparated from all Nations; and their Seed to be holy alſo in a Type. And this Typical holineſs was to be held forth in a ſeparation from all ſtrange Wives as unclean, and in keeping their Seed immixt; And therefore Mal. 2. 11. they are ſaid to prophane the holineſs of the Lord, by Marrying of ſtrange Wives. If any therefore amongſt them had Married a ſtrange Wife, this had bred an irreparable confuſion in his poſterity to all Ages, by mingling a holy Seed with an Unclean. And therefore even as for the Peace ſake of that their State and Commonwealth, theſe Jews were bidden to put away ſuch Wives, and the Children ſo begotten on them as unclean: Even upon the ſame ground were theſe Corinthians and other Gentile Chriſtians, for the preſervation of the Peace of Gentile States and Commonwealths, to keep them, and not to put them away. Chap. 4.

Then ſecondly, The Apoſtle withal takes into conſideration the priviledge of Believers Marriages; and therein we may conſider three things.

1. The Royal Priviledge God had endowed Believers Marriages with, having ſanctified them, and ſanctified them to this end, to convey the Covenant to their Children; that ſo he might continue to himſelf a holy Seed out of them; which Priviledges continue to them under the Goſpel, as founded not only upon a correſpondency to the Jews Covenant, but even to the ſame Primitive Law concerning Marriage from the beginning, even under the Law of Nature; when God, as he ordained Marriage to Men, to propagate Men, ſo to holy Men, to propagate a holy Seed: Therefore Malachi argues it from the Inſtitution of Marriage at firſt, only with this difference, that in Innocency it was by Nature, or by a Natural Covenant, but now by a Free Covenant of Grace, drawing his Elect through their loins; yet with a like Covenant thereunto: God reſolved to keep to the Law given at firſt; only now, out of Grace. That as holy Adam ſhould have a holy Seed; ſo holy Men ſhould propagate a Seed to God. And this I take it is the Reaſon why Malachi urgeth the ſin of it upon the Jews, (verſe 11.) from the example of the firſt Marriage. Thus immediately after the Fall, God calls out Seth to propagate a holy Seed, Geneſ. 5. 1. And therefore Seth his Seed are called Sons of God, as the Seed of Cain were called Sons of Men. For Marriage to them was ordained to propagate Sons to God, as to the other to propagate Mankind, or Sons to Men: But how this is to be underſtood I ſhall ſhew anon.

And ſecondly he declares withal, That this Priviledge is ſo prevailing in the behalf of the Elect, and for the believing Parents ſake, that it takes place againſt the curſe and defilement, which elſe would come upon the Marriage and the Children, from the unbelieving Party. The goodneſs of God herein he declareth to be ſuch, and his grace and love ſo prevailing, that this his Covenant towards Believers, holds not only when both Parties are ſuch; but prevails againſt, and countervails the Unbelievers unſanctifiedneſs and curſe (in this Caſe propoſed) and carries it from him, ſo as, he is ſanctified in her, and ſhe not defiled by him; and the Children are holy through her Covenant, rather than unclean by his defilement; Partus ſequitur meliorem partem: The Iſſue takes after the better part; through Grace, which prevails in this againſt ſin, even as in other things it doth, in and towards the Elect. So in the works or actions that come from us which are the fruit of our Souls, it prevails to make the action accounted holy, notwithſtanding the defilement of the unregenerate part. And thus in like manner in theſe, the fruit of our Bodies it prevails to convey the Covenant, and to make the Child accepted, notwithſtanding the Fathers Curſe. And ſuch is the Law of Priviledges among Men, Favores ſunt ampliandi, Favours granted are always to be interpreted as extended to the utmoſt, eſpecially God's Priviledges of Grace, which then ſhew themſelves to be moſt of Grace, when they hold and prevail againſt ſin and the Curſe moſt, for then Grace abounds moſt.

Eſpecially, 3. In ſuch a Caſe as this was, for when one being Married before, is afterward converted (for that was the Caſe of theſe Corinthians) if then God by the Law of Nature holds them ſtill to the Marriage, which through their Ignorance they entred into, and by his Providence were found in when Called, then by the Law of Grace (and yet of free Grace) he will not withold the Priviledge of Believers Marriages, but will ſanctifie it unto them as if both were Believers; for none ſhall ever loſe by any inconvenient neceſſity they are caſt into, in obedience to his command. And thus to bind and hold Believers, to continue in ſuch unequal yoaks, and not to take the liberty of Divorce, which the Roman Laws did give them, muſt needs be to them full of manifold inconveniencies. God therefore graciouſly reſolves to recompence this; and ſeeing that primitive Law of Marriage ſhould bind them to abide with their Husbands, the primitive Priviledge of Marriage ſhall by a new Covenant of Grace be continued to them. And therefore, though this will no way warrant entring into ſuch Marriages (for when out of choice the Sons of God did ſo, God curſed their Marriages (Gen. 6.) in their Iſſue, and all fleſh became corrupt) yet when ſo married before converſion, or repenting after ſuch a marriage, they may notwithſtanding expect this priviledge ſtill to continue unto them and theirs: And unto this caſe only he ſpeaks here, namely, when one already hath an unbelieving Wife, not that is to have, or is as yet to chooſe and marry one, verſe 11, 12. and determines verſe laſt of this Chapter, that when they are fully free, they ſhould marry in the Lord.

One thing yet remains to be ſpoken unto, and will make up a fifth Head: And that is, What is the force, ſcope, or purport of theſe two Particles, 1. [ἐπεὶ Elſe] as it ſtands in the firſt Sentence concerning Children, Elſe were your Children unclean; and how it knits this Sentence with the former, or what reference it hath to thoſe words, The unbelieving Husband is ſanctified in the Wife. And 2. of that other, [νυνὶ δὲ, But now] in that latter clauſe about them, But now they are holy: And what connexion or aſpect theſe two Particles have one with or towards each other, or the foregoing words.

For the firſt. There are two ſcopes or meanings which that particle Elſe will bear, whereof each may rationally ſtand and ſerve either of them for the point in hand.

Firſt, Some do take the word ἐπεὶ, Elſe, (as here it comes in) Logically, that is, as a Particle or Note of an evident Reaſon, Argument, or a cauſal Conjunction importing an evident proof, or Logical demonſtration, brought to confirm and convince them of the truth of that foregoing aſſertion, That the Husband is ſanctified by the Wife; For elſe (ſays he) your Children were unclean, but now they are holy: As if the Apoſtle meant to argue ab abſurdo, from an apparent abſurdity that would follow upon the contrary, and which would croſs and contradict a common received Principle among them, and in all the Churches, which he knew that therefore they would not deny, namely, [That their Children were holy.] And thus his Argument ſtands from the greater to the leſs, even from that which was a greater fruit and priviledge of their marriage, that their Children ſhould be accounted perſonally holy, (which truth was already known and acknowledged by them.) And therefore much more the Communion with an Unbeliever's perſon in marriage muſt needs be ſanctified to them, and undefiled to their uſe: It being more that their Children through the ordination of Grace ſhould be truly ſanctified, than that an Unbeliever ſhould be ſanctified to their uſe only; yea, if thoſe very Children, begotten by ſuch a Communion, be holy, notwithſtanding their natural defilement and curſe they inherit by birth as Sons of Adam, then the marriage communion it ſelf muſt needs be holy unto them. For if the iſſue and the fruit be ſuch, then the Act of Generation, the means of deriving this, muſt needs be thought to be lawful and ſanctified. And thus the Particle ἐπεὶ, or Elſe, is uſed and taken in this Epiſtle, Chap. 5. where our Apoſtle ſhewing the lawfulneſs of converſing with Idolaters in civil ways, as here with Unbelievers in Marriage, he in like manner argues, ab abſurdo, Elſe (ſays he) you muſt go out of the world. He mentions it as that which to reaſon and common principles was an apparent abſurdity. And this ſenſe and connexion of this Particle doth make a ſtrong convincing demonſtration of the point we have in hand: For it imports, that it was a commonly received Maxim in thoſe times, and which theſe Corinthians had not at all queſtioned, but took for granted, namely, that their Children were holy: And that therefore the Apoſtle argues from it, as a thing taken for granted; in that according to the ſettled practice of thoſe times they had ſeen, and had been themſelves eye-witneſſes of their receiving into communion with the Church by Baptiſm, in their own and all other Churches, and that by warrant from the Apoſtles, And we find by experience, that ſuch Principles in Religion are as commonly received, and generally acknowledged and practiſed, that we believe them without heſitation, and do uſually take for granted. And ſo it might fall out, that theſe Corinthians thians might have a peculiar ſcruple about their communion with their Huſbands, when not of their Childrens uncleanneſs who had hitherto been begotten by them. And it is alſo very likely, that the Apoſtle might thus argue from the common received practice and opinion of that and other Churches about their Children; and ſo make uſe of it, as a reaſon to ſettle their Conſciences in that other part of communion with idolatrous Husbands. For ſo in like manner he argueth, Chap. 11. We have no ſuch cuſtom, nor the Churches of God, verſe 16. For the Churches receiving all their cuſtoms or practiſes from the Apoſtles, what was a general cuſtom of Churches in thoſe times, might ſafely be taken for a rule and warrant; for elſe the Apoſtles would not generally and univerſally have eſtabliſht it. We find the Apoſtle in like manner taking advantage of the like received principles and practices, to argue for the Reſurrection, 1 Cor. 15. 14. If there be no Reſurrection, then is your faith in vain: he argues from what he knew they would not call in queſtion, and from the experience and evidence of their own former faith and believing. And further (ſaith he) verſe 29. Elſe what ſhall they do that are baptized for the dead, if the dead riſe not, why are they then baptized for the dead? You ſee he therein argues from a known Principle about Baptiſm, (whatever the meaning of the place be) received among them. I therefore will not exclude this ſcope of the connexion here, in the word Elſe. And indeed, if it hath this connexion and meaning, it were the more expreſs for the point in hand. Chap. 4.

Notwithſtanding I have thought that if their conſciences fell into doubts about the defilement of their communion with ſuch husbands, they then were like to ſcruple as much the ſtate of thoſe Children begotten by them. It being alſo (as we ſee a ſcruple apt to riſe in Believers hearts unto this day; whether the curſe of their Unbelieving husbands or wives ſhould not rather come upon their Children, than a bleſſing from themſelves. And this of the two, is uſually the greater Scruple. And it is very likely that among thoſe queries they ſent to the Apoſtle, they had mentioned this of their Childrens unclearneſs, as an Argument againſt their abiding with ſuch husbands; in that this inconvenience would alſo follow, that all their Children would be unclean. But that which eſpecially moves me, is, that there was the ſame ground for the ſcruple about their Childrens unclean ſtate, that was for their husbands defilement to them: Seeing in that caſe of the Jews, (which theſe ſcruples were founded upon) both wives and Children were alike accounted unclean; and ſo to be put away. Hence therefore I incline to take theſe words, Elſe your Chrildren were unclean, but now are they holy, to be intended as thoſe former words are in the firſt part of the verſe, even both together and alike to be a direct and immediate anſwer unto two ſeveral ſcruples, both about their Childrens eſtate, as likewiſe about their communion with their husbands, about both which the Corinthians had written alike unto him: And ſo to be rather a diſtinct part of the reſolution of the caſe, than only a reaſon of that former ſentence, The unbelieving husband is ſanctified, &c. and to be as poſitive, and as plain and direct an explication, and declaration of his judgment concerning the ſtate of their Children, upon occaſion of their ſcruple therein, as in that other part in the words afore there is a declaration of his judgment about the ſanctified uſe of the husband; even that the Children are holy, as well as that the husband is ſanctified: thereby alike to take away the ſcruple about both, and the more to ſet forth the priviledge of Believers, which his ſcope was to advance and illuſtrate. Only theſe particles, [Elſe] your Children were unclean, and [But now] they are holy, are put in farther, to ſhew, that it was a ſingular priviledge; and that it was an exception to ſome other rules which generally indeed hold true, and which otherwiſe would have held true, as they imagined. And unto ſuch a ſenſe or purpoſe as this will theſe two particles [elſe] and [but now] as fitly ſerve in the common uſe and acception of them, as to any other. For in ſpecial caſes that fall out, and are as exceptions to general rules, and wherein there is but ſome one peculiar ſpecial conſideration that cauſeth the varying from thoſe rules; we uſe ſuch particles as theſe are to expreſs thoſe exceptions by. And ſo we clear thoſe caſes the better, when we thereby grant what otherwiſe uſeth to fall out; and by expreſſing their ſwerving from ſuch Rules, do ſhew the ſpecial ground upon which the exception is founded: And then we uſe to ſay (as the Apoſtle here) [elſe it would be thus: [But now] upon this ſpecial conſideration it is otherwiſe. So that; the particle [elſe] notes out, and implies tacitly, that it is indeed generally true of all other Children, that they are unclean, by reaſon of their parents ſtate, being heathens, and thus much he implicitly granteth to them. And ſo this other particle [but now] refers unto ſome ſpecial conſiderations upon which their Children, (contrary unto the ordinary rule) became holy.

I ſay, 1. He ſecretly grants, that all Children of two parents who are unbelievers are unclean: And it is as if he ſhould have ſaid; That if the caſe had not been ſuch, that one of the parents were a Believer, then indeed, the Children had certainly been unclean (as others;) But one of them being a Believer (which is the caſe propoſed) [Now] they are holy: [elſe] that is, if one parent were not a Believer, and God had not ſanctified the Unbeliever to them, they had been unclean: [but now] (this caſe is thus ſtated) they are holy. He ſhews that generally indeed it is true, that Children are unclean; but yet notwithſtanding in this caſe their Children are holy. And thus he not only clears the caſe the more diſtinctly, while he thus grants ſomething; but further illuſtrates their priviledge by way of diſtinction from the Children of others, Idolaters and Unbelievers, when both parents are ſuch: In that it is not ſimply related, that their Children were holy; but with a note of difference and ſeparation, comparatively to others Children. And this is the reaſon he uſeth two words and expreſſions, one negative, [not unclean] and poſitive [they are holy] whereas otherwiſe one of theſe expreſſions would have been ſufficient.

And 2. [ἐπεὶ] [elſe] pointeth unto ſome conſideration, which in that caſe maketh the exception, and which makes the difference, that Their Children ſhould be holy, which elſe they ſhould not be. And is as if he had ſaid, It is not of, and for your ſelves that a Believer comes to have this priviledge, but from hence, that God hath ſanctified the unbelieving parent (through grace) to this end. So as this ſame [elſe] implies a hazard which they narrowly eſcaped; and that if God had conſidered the Unbeliever only in it, their Children would have been unclean: But God looks at his own ordination and purpoſe of free Grace unto Believers; having out of that his grace ordained to convey the Covenant to their Children: Whereas otherwiſe had God looked at the Unbelievers in it, or their own deſert, and had not graciouſly ordained this favour and priviledge to Believing parents, they then would have been unclean, becauſe according to the tenour of the legal curſe by nature, the curſe would have faln upon them. But now they are holy; the husband being a Believer ſanctified even to this end. And ſo the word [elſe] notes not out ſo much a Logical conſequence, by ſhewing what abſurdity in reaſon would follow upon it: But rather what otherwiſe would be the real conſequent following upon the thing it ſelf: That the curſe of the Unbeliever would indeed otherwiſe have prevailed to make the Children unclean, did not God in ſpecial favour ſanctifie him to this end, by reaſon of the Believing party. And ſo I judge the former ſentence, The husband is ſanctified, &c. to be the reaſon of this latter, Your Children are holy, rather then this latter of that. And I take this to be the ſenſe rather then the former, becauſe the word [νῦν] is added to [ἐπεὶ] the force of which word is not rendred in our Engliſh Tranſlation. But Beza hath done it thus, Elſe Certainly or Indeed, Your Children were unclean: He adds certainly or indeed unto Elſe, ſo that theſe words were a tacit conceſſion or grant of Childrens uncleanneſs in other caſes; and ſo came in as a further amplification or enlargement of a Believers priviledge; not only ſhewing what priviledge they have in oppoſition to Unbelievers, whoſe Children are unclean, but Believers holy; but further, even in ſuch a caſe as this, wherein an Unbeliever being joyned in marriage with a Believer, (and ſo would according to the curſe of the law bring bring a curſe on the Children) yet even therein God hath vouchſafed a further favour, and ſanctified the husband, and pronounced the Children holy, who elſe for the Unbelievers ſake would be unclean. Then which nothing could be ſaid more to enhaunce this favour, and the priviledge of a Believer in this reſpect. His ſcope being to put the caſting of the ballance for their Childrens eſtate (which the Unbelievers curſe would render unclean) upon the favour of God, to a Believer even to ſanctifie an Unbeliever, their priviledge ſwaieth it and prevaileth. And ſo Elſe Indeed comes in here, juſt as it would in this following inſtance parallel to it; As if, one ſpeaking of the actions of a regenerate Man (in all which the fleſh bears the half ſhare, as having an influence into all he doth; and in reſpect of whoſe concurrency (according to the law and covenant of works) the better part, and the good that is in them would be ſo polluted, that God would reckon them as a Menſtruous Cloth, filthy and defiled) ſhould yet notwithſtanding ſay of them, that by the grace of the Goſpel, the regenerate Man hath this priviledge, that the ſin ſhall be pardoned, and the good accepted in, and through Chriſt; Now (I ſay) as one in declaring this caſe might ſay, The regenerate Man is ſo far accepted in Chriſt, that notwithſtanding the influence of the unregenerate part, his actions are ſanctified in Chriſt, which Elſe would be unclean, but Now they are holy; In ſuch a ſenſe doth it in like manner come in here, concerning their Children [elſe] were they unclean, [but now] they are holy. Chap. 4.

CHAP. V.

Reaſons drawn out of that foregoing Expoſition of 1 Cor. 7. 14. That the Holineſs there attributed to Believers Children, is true, and real, Evangelical holineſs. Other Interpretations refuted.

NOW out of theſe Explanations of the words laid altogether, I come in the next place to form up ſome Reaſons, (which was the ſecond Head I propounded for the diſcuſſing this Point) out of this place, ſuch as this place affords, namely, to prove that a true holineſs of theſe Children of Believers is here intended. The reaſons have been couched, I confeſs, in the former conſiderations, yet for the help of the weak, I will draw them out more plainly, and lay them together.

1. You heard before that this holineſs is in a further ſenſe attributed to theſe Children, than the being ſanctified, (which is here ſpoken of the Unbelieving Parent) is attributed to them. And that the one is but an Inſtrumental holineſs, for an uſe paſſively ſubſerving; but that this attributed to the Children, is a perſonal priviledge belonging to them, in that they are called holy in themſelves. Now then let this attribute of Holineſs, which is given to the perſons of the Children, be allowed them, but in as true and genuine a ſenſe, as that Sanctification of the Uubelievers uſe to the Believer is taken in, and then this I contend for will neceſſarily follow. Let, I ſay, both holineſſes be but weighed in the ſame Ballance of the Sanctuary, and eſtimated but by the ſame Rule of Proportion, in their ſeveral kinds; and let this holineſs of the Children be acknowledged to be but as true, and as good a holineſs for perſonal holineſs, (and ſuch as the word uſually accounteth unto perſons) as that being Sanctified which is ſpoken of the Unbelieving party. is ſaid to be, in reſpect of ſome uſe or end; that is, let the one, in its kind be anſwering to that which the other is in its kind; and ſo to be of as true a kind of perſonal holineſs, as that other is a true inſtrumental holineſs: and then it will neceſſarily follow, that it is the holineſs we ſeek. For when the Unbeliever is ſaid to be ſanctified in the Wife, the true meaning is, that the uſe of ſuch an Husband, in and to the Wife, the Word doth account to be Holy, and God looks at it accordingly, as holy, and accepts it, that is, with ſuch an holineſs as is proper to actions, or ſuch an acceptation as is of things uſed holily, or tending to an holy end; Why then when the Children are ſaid to be holy, perſonally, ſhould not the meaning be, that their perſons are accounted holy by God with ſuch an holineſs, as is proper to perſons, and ſo that they are accepted by him as perſonally holy, even as truly as the others uſe was ſo accounted by him? Why ſhould not both be meaſured by the ſame met-wand?

Add to this, ſecondly, That this holineſs is a perſonal priviledge, attributed with a difference from an Unbeliever's Child (as you have heard) by virtue of their Parents Priviledge. Now, let all the world find me out any other ſenſe of reſpect wherein the Goſpel ſhould call their Children holy, as a priviledge vouchſafed them, and in oppoſition to which, the Children of Unbelievers, though lawfully begotten, are called unclean, than this of true and Evangelical holineſs. Surely the difference between two Unbelieves married, and this Believer married to an Unbeliever here, muſt neceſſarily run thus: That 1. In the uſe of her Husband ſhe hath a priviledge which Unbelievers have not, that He is ſanctified to her: but two Unbelievers, though lawfully married,

are not thus ſanctified each to other: Their communion is lawful indeed, in it ſelf, and ſo is their Marriage, as being approved by the word; but yet their Marriage communion is defiled with ſin, as other their lawful actions are, and ſo they are unſanctified each to other: But it is not thus with the communion of a Believer married to an Unbeliever, which is not only lawful in it ſelf, but ſanctified, and on her part accounted a holy communion by the Word, and ſo reckoned to her by God, and by her ſubſerving an holy end God hath ordained it for. Chap. 5.

Now then, ſecondly, Let but the like Parallel difference proportionably run in the Children of the one, and the other, (which is the Apoſtle's ſcope) namely, That Unbeliever's Children, though not Baſtards or unlawfully begotten, are yet unclean in a further reſpect (which the Goſpel counts an uncleanneſs) but the Children of a Believer are not only legitimate, or lawfully begotten, but further alſo they are holy, and that in the language of the Holy Ghoſt. Now ſearch the Scriptures, and find me out a holineſs that ſhould perſonally be attributed thus to Believer's Children, as their peculiar honour, and as a perſonal Priviledge different from Unbelievers Children (who yet are not Baſtards, and yet unclean) I ſay, find out any other holineſs that can be given beſides this which I aim to eſtabliſh, that their perſons are ſanctified, and ſo to be reckoned by us, and I have done. True it is, That the Ceremonial Law did in a Type call all the Seed of the Jews holy; and the whole Seed of the Heathen unclean, and in the Type did put the very ſame difference in terms uſed here by the Apoſtle.

But that will afford a third Reaſon, that the Apoſtle intends to ſhew, That our Children are to be accounted really holy, and Unbelievers Children really unclean; for that outward Ceremonial Holineſs and Uncleanneſs of the Law, did typifie out true Evangelical Holineſs and Uncleanneſs under the Goſpel; elſe he would never have expreſſed himſelf in thoſe very terms: Yea, the Apoſtle doth here call Believers Children holy, and the Children of others unclean, in flat oppoſition to a Jewiſh Caſe, and contradicts their Law in it, in terminis. Neither can we find, That the Apoſtle under the Goſpel, did uſe or apply the terms of the Types, except to the very things typified by them: As when Chriſt was called our Paſſover, the meaning was, that Chriſt was that true Paſſover, which that of theirs ſignified. So when our Evangelical Worſhip was called Sacrifice, the meaning was, that that was the true Sacrifice. So in like manner, when the Goſpel ſpeaks of our Children in the ſame terms, that the Law uſed of the difference of their Children then from others, and with the ſame difference that the Law in the Type puts between Children of the Jews and others; it muſt neceſſarily intend the reality of what was thereby typified; and ſo, that our Children are to be eſteemed truly holy, and Unbelievers truly unclean. For he could not uſe the ſame very terms of the ſame kind of perſons (in the ſame caſe then and now) and intend them in the ſame typical ſenſe and meaning that the Lettes of the Ceremonial Law intended; for that in reſpect of the Letter of it, was aboliſhed under the Goſpel, eſpecially to the Gentiles; and therefore he would not have uſed them to the ſame kind of perſons in any other ſenſe, than was intended as the thing typified in that Law; which can be no other than this, That our Children are really holy, and others unclean, as theirs once were Ceremonially.

Add to this, Fourthly, The help of that other Scripture, Rom. 11. 16. where the Apoſtle ſpeaking of the Fathers conveying the Covenant to the Children, ſays, If the Root be holy, ſo are the Branches: And this is ſpoken of Children to be converted under the Goſpel. When therefore we find the very ſame thing ſaid of the Jews Seed to come, under the Goſpel, That for the Believing Parents ſake (who is the Root) the Children (the Branches) are holy; why then ſhould any other ſenſe be put upon the like, that is ſaid of the Believing Corinthians here?

Book V. I add but this as the Concluſion of all. Obſerve how for the declaring and publiſhing this eminent Priviledge of Believers, and their Children, the Holy Ghoſt watcheth the moſt full, fit, and advantageous occaſion, to make the moſt of it, and ſet it off, that could be taken: that not only when two Believers are joyned, but even then when an Unbeliever with a Believer, does this Priviledge hold good; ſo abounding is the Grace of God, and ſo prevailing againſt his Curſe.

This meaning will yet further be eſtabliſhed, by the taking away and confuting thoſe falſe Interpretations that have been put upon theſe words; which is the third Head to be ſpoken to.

1. Many of our own Orthodox Divines have thought the Apoſtles Scope in this his Reſolution of the Caſe, to be, to ſhew, That the marriage of two ſuch continues lawful by the Word, and ſo that their Conjugal communion is ſanctified, that is, lawful too, and their Children legitimate, not a Spurious Baſtardy, or Unclean Iſſue: And that this is all that is meant by thoſe Expreſſions, The Husband is ſanctified in the Wife, that it is a lawful Marriage; and the Children are holy, that is, Legitimate, not Baſtards or Unclean: And ſo theſe Expreſſions to be but an Alluſion to that which in the Ceremonial Law was ſaid of ſuch, viz. to expreſs the like, yea this very difference to be holden now under the Goſpel between Baſtards and Children to be eſteemed legitimate, that was then put between Baſe-begotten, and the reſt of the Jews Children. Deut. 23. 2. A Baſtard was then forbidden to enter into the Congregation, even unto the tenth Generation; and to be prohibited their Temple-communion, and to be reckoned unclean, were both for the thing itſelf, and alſo in phraſe of Speech with them, all one. And theſe Divines would have the holineſs of Children here, to be put to expreſs their legitimation; and the oppoſite unto it here, namely, Uncleanneſs, to be put for Baſtardy.

Now as touching this Interpretation, I ſhall endeavour,

1. To confute it, and ſhew that this was not the main Scope of the Apoſtle.

2. Remove that Appearance which ſeems to make for it.

3. Yield how far the ſenſe may be taken in.

For the firſt; That the Apoſtle's Scope ſhould be by Holineſs to mean more than Legitimation, and more than Baſtardy by Uncleanneſs.

1. He had otherwiſe attributed no more Priviledge to a Believer here, in his Marriage and Children, than to an Unbeliever; whereas, (as hath been abundantly ſhewn) a different Priviledge of Believers is here for their comfort held forth, and not only a bare lawfulneſs granted them in their Marriage, which is common to others. A different Priviledge they have in the uſe of Marriage, and in their Iſſue by Marriage. In the uſe of Marriage; it is ſanctified in, and by them: which of Unbelievers (though their Marriage be lawful) cannot be ſaid, their Perſons being defiled. In ſpeaking likewiſe of the Iſſue of Marriage, Children, he muſt needs mean more than ſimply their being lawfully begotten, (which Unbelievers Children are) and not Baſtards: And this as a peculiar Priviledge of their Children, is expreſſed (as ſome have obſerved) in this word [your] yours who are Believers.

And ſecondly, By attributing this as a Priviledge to a Believer, he improves the Caſe; not to ſettle their Conſciences only, that both that Act and Children begotten were legitimate; but further to comfort them, They are ſanctified, and holy. Yea, and to anſwer the uttermoſt Ground of their Scruple, which was about their Childrens Uncleanneſs, in reſpect to their Eſtates and the Ordinances; ſince the ground of it was from that of the ſtrange Children among the Jews, who were put forth from the Congregation as an unclean Seed.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, Otherwiſe he had in this ſaid no more, than the Civil Laws then in force did; For they pronounced the Marriage Lawful, and the Children no Baſtards: Now his Anſwer ſurely is more than Law; it is Goſpel; and this Priviledge here of holineſs, more than the Civil Law afforded Children; for it is a Goſpel Priviledge, as the very Terms imply. Chap. 5.

Fourthly, The Terms he uſeth are to Criticks very obſervable to this purpoſe, that to [ἀκάθαρτα, Unclean,] he oppoſeth not [καθαρὰ, pure or clean] as in propriety of Speech they are oppoſed; but according to the Language of the Jews he oppoſeth [Holineſs] to it. Fornication and Adultery are called Uncleanneſs [ἀκαθαρσία] Eph. 5. 3. Now if an unclean Iſſue by Fornication, or Adultery, had been meant, he would have oppoſed Purity, or Cleanneſs, or ſome ſuch word unto it; but in that he oppoſeth [holy] to it, which was a word out of the Road as it were; becauſe ſo the Jews oppoſed in their Ceremonial Law [ἅγια] and [ἀκάθαρτα] it evidently implies, that he meant ſomething more than Legitimation: as by the Holineſs of Children the Jews alſo did.

And Secondly, For the inſtance of Baſtards, Uncleanneſs in the Ceremonial Law, which ſeems to countenance this Interpretation; That can no way be brought to expound the Uncleanneſs, or Holineſs here; nor in any fit ſenſe be applied to expreſs this difference between Children, meerly, as lawfully, or unlawfully begotten.

1. Not in the Litteral ſenſe of the Ceremonial Law; for that Uncleanneſs of Baſtards therein mentioned imported more than an Uncleanneſs of Childrens Legitimation; it was a Ceremonial, Religious, and Typical Uncleanneſs: And on the Contrary, the holineſs of the Jews legitimate Children was alſo Religious and Typical; and ſo imported more than a meer Legitimation of Children, in that they were called Holy as they were to be admitted to Ordinances as an holy Seed: Therefore, for the Apoſtle to take up theſe Terms to expreſs the meer legitimation or illegitimation of Children under the Goſpel, had been ſhort of the ſenſe of that Law; [which ſhould then ſpeak it in one ſenſe, and he in another.] The holineſs of the Jews Children which was oppoſed to the Uncleanneſs of Baſtards, was more than a meer legitimateneſs, or a being lawfully begotten, as is evident: For they had it as they were Abraham's Seed, and ſo within the Covenant. Had it not been thus, then likewiſe the Heathens Children, if lawfully begotten, had been holy; whereas, An Ammonite, or Moabite ſhall not enter into the congregation of the Lord, even to their tenth generation ſhall they not enter into the congregation of the Lord for ever; they were to be kept out, as well as Baſtards: So that a being lawfully begotten, was not all that went to make Children accounted holy; for then all Legitimate Children had been holy; and therefore it muſt needs be too much to call all Children holy, ſimply in that reſpect, or with any Eye unto that Law. Beſides, by that Law, a Baſtards Seed, though he himſelf were married, ſhould be unclean to the tenth Generation.

It Secondly, cannot be ſpoken according to the Myſtical meaning, that they ſhould be thus called; or in reſpect to what under thoſe Types are intended: That were to ſay, that all Baſtards only are now to be counted Unclean, and Unregenerated; and on the contrary all Children lawfully begotten, to be Holy, and Regenerate: For the Uncleanneſs and Holineſs then, did Typifie Real Holineſs and uncleanneſs now: Neither of which any of any Side either for Baptiſm, or againſt it, durſt ever affirm.

But to retort this; it is not therefore more likely his meaning ſhould be, that as all Heathen Children, as well as Baſtards, were to be reckoned Unclean, with a Religious Uncleanneſs, in reſpect to partaking of Ordinances, which they were debarred from; and on the contrary, the lawfully begotten Children of Jews were alone counted holy; yet not ſimply, in reſpect of being lawfully begotten, but becauſe they were withal the Legitimate Iſſue of Jews, who were the Sons of Abraham, and were therefore to be then admitted unto Ordinances (and all this in a Typical reſpect) ſo now that under the Goſpel ſhould be Typified out that all Unbelievers Children, and perhaps Unlawful

Book V.

Iſſues of Believers, ſhould be accounted Unregenerate, and ſo, not admitted to Ordinances: But the Children of Believers Lawfully begotten, ſhould be counted not only Legitimate before God and Men, but alſo Holy, with Real Holineſs, and ſo admitted to the Ordinances of Regeneration. Sure I am, that Holineſs then, imported a Priviledge which Jews Children had above all other Children, though the Iſſue of lawful Marriage. And therefore to me it ſeems as certain, that the Holineſs here, muſt alſo as neceſſarily import a Priviledge which Believers Children have (beſides that of Legitimation) which others the Children of Unbelievers have not, though lawfully begotten: And what this ſhould be, other than this, to be eſteemed truly Holy indeed, through their Parents Covenant, let all the World ſhew me.

In the third Place, I willingly grant, Both,

1. That when he calls the Children of a Believing Parent Holy, here, he intends to ſhew, that they were lawful Children: But how! Not as the ſole adequate meaning of that expreſſion, but as included under it, as the leſſer uſeth to be under the greater; or as the Foundation of an houſe is included in the Tearm Houſe. And as if we ſhould ſay [an Heir] [the Prince] it imports a Child lawfully begotten, and includes and ſuppoſes the Son of a King. So when he here ſays they are holy; his meaning is not only, that they are Legitimate Children, as any others born in wedlock are: But further for their comfort, they are to be eſteemed holy Children; and therefore he would have them think much more that they were lawful: For Legitimation of Children by an Eſtate of wedlock, is under the Goſpel as neceſſary a requiſite to this Dignity of being accounted Holy, as the Ground-colour is to varniſh; And is ſuch a Prærequiſitum in ſubjecto; Even as to be lawfully begotten is a neceſſary ſuppoſition in Law before a Child can inherit; and in a Princes Son is the fundamental requiſite of his Dignity: So by the ordinance of God alſo, for to be lawfully begotten, is the foundation of this Priviledge of being accounted Holy, and ſo muſt neceſſarily be ſuppoſed.

And ſecondly I grant, that Baſtards are Unclean in the ſenſe here meant, though not mainly intended to be ſpoken of. For I conceive that Marriage is Gods Ordinance, ſanctified by him to Believers alone, for to derive this bleſſing: As was ſaid out of Malachi. 2. 15. He appointed it for a holy Seed: And therefore I grant, that Baſe Children though of Believers, come not to be partakers of this Priviledge, but are to be reckoned as Unbelievers are, namely, Unclean, and that that was the meaning of the Type. Not but that God may turn them, and make them holy, as he often does Unbelievers Seed, as having his Elect among them: Which when he doth, they are to be received, and accounted holy: As Deodatus Auguſtinus Baſe begotten was converted, and Baptiſed. But yet they inherit not this Priviledge by Birth; neither becauſe they are Children of ſuch Parents are they ſo to be accounted: But we are to reckon them Unclean, untill actually converted, which they may be, as Jeptha was: which may turn to this Uſe to us, to be a motive againſt Fornication. Therefore, ſecondly, Some late Anabaptiſts do ſay, that his meaning is, that as the Husband is ſanctified to the Believing wife (that is, to her uſe) though he be in his Perſon ſinful: So theſe Children are in like manner ſanctified to their Parents, for their uſe and ſervice. But how fond is this Opinion alſo? For what a wide difference is there between theſe two Phraſes: To ſay, one is ſanctified in, and to another (that is, for ſuch an uſe, which is the thing ſpoken of the Unbelieving Husband; Even as 1 Tim. 4, 5. every Creature is ſaid to be ſanctified to a Believer; that is, to his uſe; ſo as, his uſing them is holy in him, and to him) and to ſay of the Children afterwards, not that they are ſanctified in, or to their Parents, as being ſo only in their relation; but that they are holy, who elſe would be Unclean? Which being ſaid ſimply of them, they are holy, and being ſpoken of Perſons, and that in a way of variation of the Phraſe from the former, cannot but implie, that they are in their own Perſons to be accounted holy, not in, or to their Parents ſanctified, but in themſelves ſimply holy, through the conveyance of Gods Covenant from the Parent to the Child.

2. If we compare this with the Parallel Case in Nehemiah and Ezra which the Apostle had in his eyes, (as hath been shewn) this cannot be all the meaning of it. For when he would have them put away the Seed of strange Wives, as unclean, the meaning could not only be, They were unclean or unsanctified in their use to them; but further, as persons in their own state unclean, in respect of God's Ordinance and Law, and in a religious respect in themselves. Chap. 5.

3. We must never put a sense upon the Holy Ghost's meaning, which falls short of what may be supposed was aimed at. Now in what rational sense can it be supposed, That these Parents, or any Christians, should conceive these Children unclean in their use and service, and obedience performed to them? How an unbelieving Husband might be unsanctified to them in Marriage communion, and they defiled thereby, might easily be conceived, in that they became one flesh with them, and so a Member of Christ is made one with a Limb of Satan: But the use of, and converse with the Children, being but in a way of outward service and obedience, such as these Corinthians had with all their then Servants, Neighbours, &c. The Children could not upon any ground be supposed unclean in their use as to them, the Parents of them, or in the performance of mutual duty each to other, no more than their Neighbours and Servants were in all civil offices that passed between them. Their scruple therefore must needs be understood of the state and condition of the Children begotten upon such Parents in a religious respect, whether they were not to be esteemed unclean, and in that state to God ward in respect of the Covenants that the Children of strange Wives were among the Jews.

Therefore thirdly, The Papists have invented another Interpretation! The Husband is sanctified, that is, say they, in hope of his Conversion; and therefore the Apostle exhorts her to abide with him; and so the Children also may, by her staying with her Husband, and so educating them, become holy; and so are holy in hope, who else would be unclean; and are in danger to prove Idolaters, if the Wife depart from their Father, and leave them to him.

But, first, To say they are holy; that is, by the stay of their Parents together they may be such; otherwise they are unclean, that is, there is danger that they may be unclean? How wide is this?

And, secondly, To say they may be converted, and so in that sense to be holy, is true of Unbelievers Children, as well as of these.

Yea, thirdly, So by being unclean, should be meant by the Rule of Opposition, that otherwise there were no hope of their Conversion, if he depart; which is false.

Fourthly, The Case must be altered if this be the meaning; for it must then always be withal supposed, That the Children are left to be educated by the unbelieving Party: For simply by her leaving an Unbeliever, if she have the Children with her, there were no danger of their Un-conversion, but the more hope. So as, this sense will not hold, unless withal the Case be put, that the Children are left with the unbelieving Party; which that a believing Husband should do, and not take his Children with him, is not always likely. But the Apostle supposeth not, nor mentions any such case, but simply, the marriage Act; that they need not fear defilement to themselves in it from an Unbeliever, or to their Children begotten by it.

Fifthly, Of the hopes of the Unbelievers Conversion he speaks afterwards, and makes a new and further Argument for it, verse 16. and propounds it but uncertainly, What knowest thou! &c. but here he says, They are holy.

Book V.

CHAP. VI.

That two things are intended in that Text of 1 Cor. 7. 14. What God's Thoughts are of Believers Children, and the Rule by which he would have us to judge of them. What is the Judgment we are to have of the Children of Godly Parents upon this Declaration of God concerning them, that they are holy. To what Extent this Proposition is to be amplyfied: That it is not meant universally of all, but indefinitely of some only, though the greater number. What Agreement and Harmony there is between our Judgment of the holiness of Believers Children, and what in reality of the Event proves true concerning them.

THIS being thus gained, that Evangelical Holiness of Election and Regeneration is here meant and intended. Now it may be further considered as a ground for a further Enquiry, that these words [Their Children are holy] may fall under a double distinct Notion or Consideration. Either,

1. They may be taken as looking upwards, as wherein God expresseth to us his own thoughts about such Children, who are, or shall be really made holy by him, and whom the Holy Ghost, when he speaks it, hath only in his eye and intent, though he points to the whole lump. And so taken, the words respect wholly, and only the reality of the thing in the event, that is, only the true holiness of those Children who are so indeed; or those Children only of such Parents, who shall surely be made holy.

Or else, 2. The words may look downwards, as importing a Duty on our parts, and declaring what God's Will is that we should think of such Children; both in our Judgments to account them holy, as a thing meet for us so to think of them; and upon that esteem to carry our selves towards them as towards Saints, and to perform such duties to them, as they are capable of, and as are due to such Saints. In a word; In the one sense they may be supposed to declare God's mind and thoughts concerning these Children themselves, and their estates; in the other, they declare his mind about us, and what our duty is to think of them. In the one they are a meer simple Expression of God's unto us; in the other, they become a Rule to guide our thoughts concerning them.

Now these are two distinct things, and will much vary the Case: For whilst God speaks the one, he hath in his eye only those very Children whom he makes holy; if the words be taken as a declaration of his thoughts: But in the other, as he lays this duty on us, he hath every Child of a Believer in his eye, so far as to enjoyn us this duty, to think any one in particular, though not all in general, to be holy; even therefore, because that God expresseth his own thoughts so indefinitely and reservedly, as that we know not whom he means, our duty is, to think so of any of them. Now that both these are here intened, is evident:

1. That the Apoſtle ſhould ſpeak theſe words in relation to our Judgment, and intend them as a Rule for it: This ſeems very manifeſt; for unto the Judgment, or Sentence which the word pronounceth of things, are we to conform our Judgments. For revealed things belong to us, and to our Children, Deut. 29. 29. The ſecret things belong unto the Lord our God: but thoſe things which are revealed belong unto us, and to our Children for ever, that we may do all the words of this Law. Wherefore, ſeeing God in his revealed Will hath declared thus concerning them; the leaſt that can be judged to be the meaning of it, muſt needs be, what God would have us to think and judge, as the Apoſtle ſays of the Philippians, when he had called them Saints, Phil. 1. ver. 1. Even as it is meet (ſays he) for me to think of you all, verſe 7. I may allude to what was ſaid to Peter, Acts 10. 15. What God calls holy, call not thou common or unclean. God often ſpeaks of things in Scripture, as we do, or as we are to judge of them. Deſtroy not him for whom Chriſt died, Rom. 14. 15. It is not meant of a deſtruction really, (for none of thoſe can be deſtroyed) but we are to judge it ſuch, and look on it as ſuch, according to what our Action tends to, and to forbear ſuch and ſuch Actions which look as if they would deſtroy him. Chap. 6.

It is evident alſo in this, That the Apoſtle's Scope is to give ſuch a like Title or Badge of difference between Believers and Unbelievers Children, according to the different ſtate of the Parents, in ſpiritual reſpects; as uſeth to be given to all ſorts of Children, according to the different ranks of their Parents in worldly reſpects: Which Badges, we know, lye in eſteem, and it is the intent of them, though withal they carry a reality of Honour and Poſſeſſions with them. And therefore as Men, (or as we, when he ſpeak of Men by the World's Book, or Rule) do call, and account the Children of Noble-men Noble, (for they are to be reckoned ſuch in their Sphere) as Paul calls Feſtus, moſt Noble, Acts 25. 26. So Spiritual Men, and a Church are here ſpoken to by Paul, to call and eſteem the Children of Believers holy, and to account of them in their Sphere according unto God's Book. He writes here to the Corinthians as a Church, thus to think of them, and ſo to own them.

And then, ſecondly, That theſe words do withal carry in them, an Expreſſion of God's real thoughts and purpoſes about the ſtate of Believers Children, ſo as it is not a meer reputation holineſs, which we are to attribute to them, but a real holineſs which God ſcatters among them, and that the Apoſtle hath in his Eye. This is evident; for God would not otherwiſe have declared or pronounced thus indefinitely of them, that they are holy; nor given us ſuch a Rule to regulate our Judgments of them by; nor called on us to believe and think ſo of them, if there were not ſomething really peculiar in it: If true and real holineſs were not found more commonly and ordinarily amongſt them by virtue of their Parents Covenant, than among any other ſort of People in the World.

For, firſt, God uſeth to call things as they are.

Secondly, His revealed Will is not wholly wide from his ſecret Will, nor from the truth of things in the Event. In his Revealed he always declares only that which is: He never gave Promiſe but it had a reality anſwering it. Never any ſpecial Promiſe (as is this) but ſomething more ſpecial was in it. His ſecret Will, and his revealed Will, do one come near the other: There is a ground of Truth in the one, for the Revelation made in the other.

Thirdly, For us to give the Title of Holy unto any, is to give the Name of the Lord to them, which he would not have his Church led into the Errour of taking in vain.

Fourthly, Nor would God give a Title wholly without the real thing: He would not have given a peculiar Title of Holineſs to theſe Children, if he had not beſtowed the thing it ſelf more ordinarily upon them, than upon any, or upon all ſorts of People elſe in the World. He would not ſpeak of them, and in Title ſet them up as great Princes, if they had not amongſt them an Inheritance and Poſſeſſion anſwerable: This were to expoſe his Name to ſcorn.

Fifthly,

Book V.

Fifthly, Much leſs would he carry it as a ſpecial favour done, and Priviledge vouchſafed, peculiar to the Parents, becauſe Believers, if it holds not really true of their Children in ſome eminent manner; it were otherwiſe a diſpriviledge rather, for it would expoſe them to a greater mockery and miſery.

Now this double Conſideration and Aſpect of theſe words does afford a juſt Ground for theſe Enquiries yet to be anſwered, both for the full clearing this Place, and alſo of the Point in Hand.

The firſt Query is concerning the Judgment which we are to give.

The ſecond, is concerning the extent of the reality it ſelf, how farr this Propoſition reacheth, that Children are holy: Whither it be indefinite or Univerſal.

The third is about the reconciling of theſe two together, and making an harmony between them: And this, for that the Judgment that we are called to give, namely that they are holy, will be found larger in extent than the reality.

For the firſt Namely [Our Judgment;] Three things are to be enquired into about it.

1. The Terminus or object of our Thoughts, or thing that we are to think of them, and attribute unto them; whither we are to think every Infant really holy, or outwardly only.

2. The Subject that this our Judgment is to be termined upon; why Infant Children ſhould be intended rather than thoſe of riper years.

3. The manner of it; what kind of Judgment or eſteem it is, for the Act it ſelf; whether in charity only to be exerciſed, or in aſſurance.

1. For the Terminus or object of our thoughts, it is real holineſs; that is, which we are to think real and true. Some Divines have ſaid, that becauſe the Church was to judge any ſuch Child Holy, though all were not ſo; that therefore it is but a reputative holineſs, and an outward Sacramental holineſs, that we in our Judgments are to give them. But they are miſtaken; for though in the event indeed it proves in many of them, but a reputative holineſs and only in eſteem: Yet ſtill ſo, as the Terminus of the Churches Judgment, or that Holineſs which they are in their Judgments to attribute to them, is true, real Holineſs: But it is called Reputative only in reſpect to the event, in that we ſhould attribute true holineſs to thoſe who prove not ſo: Yet ſtill the Holineſs we are to think in them is no other than real to our thoughts; even as it is in our judging thoſe of riper years to be Saints, when admitted into Churches, it follows not that it is a meer outward Holineſs, that is to be the Terminus of our thoughts, or that which we are to content our ſelves to find in them, or think of them: But that they are truly and really holy: Though in the event it proves no other in many than an outward Titular Holineſs, yet the Holineſs we pitch upon, and aim at, and judge of, and embrace Men for, is a Holineſs to our Judgments Real. Outward Ceremonial Holineſs, ſuch as was among the Jews, and by them profeſſed only nomine tenus, was a Type, and is now vaniſhed: But the Holineſs here (whither you take it as it is the Terminus of Gods thoughts declared, or of our thoughts enjoyned us) is ſtill Real, namely to our thinking, though we be often miſtaken.

Secondly, For the Perſons whom we judge thus;

That Infant Children of Believing Parents are rather here meant, than thoſe of riper years promiſcuouſly, as the Subject of our Judgment, is evident.

1. Becauſe the only Ground of pronouncing them holy is, that they are their Children. It is (you ſee) not put upon any qualifications, or ſigns, or effects of Grace manifeſted. And though they be their Children, we cannot ſay they are holy, if come to riper years, unleſs they hold forth a work of Grace, as Timothy did, concerning whom the remembrance of his Faith was the Ground of Pauls Perſwaſion; though the ſame in his Mother and Grandmother added a confirmation thereunto 2 Tim. 1. 5. If he had ſaid upon this Ground, they they are Elect, then thoſe of riper years, though uncalled, might have been included; but he ſays, They are holy, for their preſent State; which is more. Chap. 6.

And ſecondly, This is conſonant to Reaſon; for there is, nor could be any other Rule to judge of Infants holineſs, than this of their Parents covenant: But for thoſe of riper years, there is another Rule: So as, either they are altogether excluded from this Judgment, or elſe Principally meant. Others ſtand upon their own Bottom, and Teſtimonial for our approbation of them; but theſe poor Lambs have nothing to ſhew for it, but that they are their Children: Neither could there any other Rule have been given about them.

And thirdly, Add this moreover to it, that it was as meet there ſhould be ſome Ground, or Rule, or warrant for us to judge and eſteem them to be holy, (ſo far as to perform all ſuch dues to them, as belong to Saints of their Age) as well as a Rule for thoſe of riper years.

For firſt, Seeing God hath ſuch a Number of Elect among them, who make (it may be) the greateſt Part of his Church (I mean thoſe of them that dye, who are as many as thoſe who Live) it was meet that they ſhould be ſo judged, that ſo God might have the Glory of his Election among them acknowledged.

Secondly, ſeeing he on purpoſe drew them through their Parents Loins, as a reſpect unto their Parents; it was meet, that they ſhould have a ground of Faith for them, that ſo they might not loſe the comfort of it, nor God the thanks from them.

Thirdly, In reſpect to the Children themſelves that are Elect; that they that are ſo, might not want their due honour and eſteem, but be owned among their Brethren for ſuch, neither want a viſible means of bleſſing, and Teſtimony of Gods Favour to them.

Thirdly, If the Queſtion be made, what manner of Judgment this ought to be; I anſwer.

1. It is not a meer Judgment of Charity, in that Senſe that ſuch a Judgment is vulargly taken in, which is,

1. When we cannot abſolutely ſay the contrary, but that ſuch an one is holy: And therefore Men uſually think themſelves bound to call and account ſuch an one to be a Saint, though they know nothing out of which to make up ſuch a Judgment. But that is not Ground enough to judge one a Saint, nor to account Children holy; for in calling one a Saint, or Holy, we give a Teſtimony, we do ſtatuere, and affirm; and that muſt alwaies have a Poſitive Ground, not a meer Negative. Yea, of all Men, and of Children, we do know enough to the contrary, namely that by Nature they are Unholy, and conceived in Sin: There is a prejudice laid in, and therefore ſomething muſt come between, that is Poſitive, to take it off, and to give ſome evidence perſwading us that one is holy and ſanctified; our Charity otherwiſe is not to think ſo. 'Tis true, Charity believeth all things; but then firſt it muſt have had a Ground to believe well of a Man; the thing muſt be credible, it muſt be an object of Faith that may draw forth an aſſent, and then Charity is to help Faith, and not to be ſuſpicious: But upon a meer knowing nothing to the contrary, for to begin to believe a thing, is not Faith, but Folly.

Secondly, Men take the Judgment of Charity for a meer [it may be;] what may prove ſo or ſo, in the event, they think in Charity they are bound to believe ſuch. But when the Apoſtle here calls us to judge Believing Parents Children holy, it is a further thing than an [it may be,] and ſo, than ſuch a kind of Judgment of Charity. The Apoſtle (you ſee) ſays of ſuch Children they are holy; which is more than an [it may be;] and of other Children he ſays they are unclean: And yet with ſuch a Judgment of Charity we are to think of all Children, that [it may be] they may be holy. In the 16. verſe ſpeaking of the Converſion of the Husband, he ſaith, what knoweſt thou but that thou ſhalt ſave thy Husband? but here of the Children he ſays more, he ſays, they are holy: And not only, what knoweſt thou but that they may prove holy? A [what knoweſt thou] is the ordinary Judgment of Charity; but [now know I] [it is meet for me thus to think] is the Judgment that we are called to: Phil. 1.7.

Book V.

Therefore, ſecondly, It is a Judgment of Faith joyned with Charity, which believeth all things, where a ground is given ſo to believe and judge; as here the word doth ſuggeſt a ground ſo to believe of Believers Infant Children; it is (I ſay) a Judgment of Faith, which conforms it ſelf to the Word, which judgeth, and giveth, and terminateth its thoughts on what the Word ſays, not once daring to think the contrary. I call it a Judgment of Faith in difference not only from that other, but from a Judgment of Senſe, or Experience; for ſuch is the Judgment we have of Men grown up unto riper years; for which the Word gives abſtract Rules to judge of Saints by, and we uſe Spiritual Judgment or Diſcerning to apply them: So that in the Application unto the Perſons, it is a Judgment of Experience. Men ſhew us their Faith by their Works, and ſo we out of Experience judge them holy, according to ſuch Rules as the Word gives to judge of mens works by; within the compaſs of which Rules, many who are not Saints may come, and ſo paſs with us. Thus Paul's perſwaſion of Timothy's Grace was a Judgment of Experience, 2 Tim. 1.5. [And I am perſwaded (ſpeaking of his Grace) dwells in thee alſo;] calling to remembrance thy faith and tears, verſ. 4,5. it was upon reviving the Experience he had had of him. Now this Judgment we cannot have of Infants, though this be the more ſatisfactory Judgment, I grant, when as men grown up, do ſhew themſelves to be Saints; for Experience added to Faith in our own ſelves, helps and confirms it: Yet the Judgment here called for, is in this a Judgment of Faith, that therein we give up our Judgments to what God promiſeth of them, and declares about them, although we ſee nothing whereby we ſhould be induced to believe ſo of them: And ſo it is of meer Faith of a thing not ſeen, reſting on the Word, confining our Thoughts, and terminating them to what God hath declared, till we ſee the contrary; and not a meer Judgment of Charity; for ſuch we ought to have of others Children, of whom we as yet do ſee nothing to the contrary (and who may be holy for ought we know) But here God hath put a difference, and pronounced the one holy, and the other unclean. God's Word comes in to terminate and confine our Judgments concerning Them, to Holineſs; not ſo of the Other.

And yet, thirdly, When I ſay of Faith, I mean not a Faith of Aſſurance; that is, not ſuch as whereby we believe it ſo certainly and infallibly of every Child in general, or any in particular, ſo as to ſay, we know the thing cannot be otherwiſe: But ſuch a Faith as maks us ſuſpend all thoughts to the contrary, reſting in what is revealed for us to think, and waiting till God reveal the contrary; and ſo far in the mean time to judge them Saints, as that it ſhould bind our Conſciences to perform all Duties to them, as unto Saints. For it is even ſo concerning our own Eſtates, when we want Faith of Aſſurance, yet God calls us to have a Faith of waiting and expectation, that our Eſtate may be holy, when yet infallibly we cannot affirm it: and accordingly we are to Pray, and to give thanks even as Perſons holy; and to come to the Sacrament of the Lords Supper upon ſuch a Faith: And anſwerably hereunto we are to bring theſe Children unto the Sacrament of Baptiſm, upon ſuch a Faith alſo.

So that, as it is leſs than a certainty, or an infallibility, ſo it is more than an [it may be] and than a meer hopefulneſs: It is a Faith of waiting and expecting that it will be ſo, not only that it may fall out ſo: yet ſo; as it is meet for us to think ſo: For we have a Rule and Ground for our ſo judging, though not infallibly, for the thing it ſelf in the event.

Thus we have diſpatcht the enquiries about that Judgment which is to be taken up by us.

Now then ſecondly, Let us enquire into the extent of the reality of this Holineſs, and of the Propoſition here as it reſpects the truth of Holineſs wrought in ſuch Children. This Propoſition here [that their Children are holy] if ſo underſtood, is but an indefinite Propoſition, not Univerſal, yet coming neer to an Univerſal; and ſo more diſtinct and expreſs than any other Promiſes given to any ſort of Men: that is, it is not to be underſtood that God does certainly certainly and infallibly ſanctifie all, and every one of their Children, but that he ſanctifies ſome of them, yea more of them than of any other ſort; but how many we know not. An Indefinite Propoſition is leſs than an Univerſal, for it intends but ſome, not all, yet not naming or defining thoſe Some in Particular, we cannot diſcern them from the reſt: But it confuſedly, and in the lump, ſays it of them All; as when it is ſaid, Chriſt came into the world to ſave ſinners: It is not an Univerſal Propoſition; for he died not for All; nor a Particular Propoſition, for he names not, nor defineth whom, but indefinitely ſpeaks it of ſinners, in a middle unlimited ſenſe, between both. Chap. 6.

I will explain this Aſſertion by theſe three things;

1. You muſt know, That all God's Promiſes given unto Men in his Revealed Will, are but indefinite Expreſſions of his Decrees and Purpoſes. God having in his Decree cull'd out of Mankind certain Perſons whom his Love was pitched upon, hath therefore given an Indefinite Promiſe or Expreſſion to Mankind, That he will ſave ſinners; and again [Peace on Earth, good will towards Men] Luke 2.13,14. And the difference between thoſe his Decrees, and theſe his Indefinite Promiſes is but Modalis: For whereas in his ſecret Will, and in the Book thereof, he hath named the Perſons, who, and who not; He in his Revealed Will, and the Book thereof, hath concealed the Names of the Perſons, and declared his purpoſe indefinitely only; Good will to men; not to All, but to Some of Mankind, confuſedly and in the lump, not diſtinctly. So as, God's ſecret and revealed Will do ſtill coincidere, they come all to one: There is plain dealing in it; in his Indefinite Promiſes, he means thoſe, and thoſe only, whom he hath choſen; only he conceals their Names, that All may conſider it.

Now further, for a more ſpecial direction to find out where God's Election runs; look what ſort of Men it hath pitched upon moſt, thoſe theſe indefinite Expreſſions and Promiſes do ſingle out, and point at as the lump wherein Election lies: So that ſome Promiſes are like the Star that led the Wiſe men to the very Town where Chriſt was, ſo they do direct us to the lump or mines of Election; they are the directory Stars of Election. As when it is ſaid [God hath choſen the poor of the World]. So alſo, God having elected out of Seth's Poſterity, and rejected Cains, his Promiſes were given to Seth, not to Cain. When the Jews were the Golden Mine of Election, Theirs were the Promiſes and the Adoption; yet indefinitely made to them, Rom. 9.4. Who are Iſraelites: to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the ſervice of God, and the promiſes: But when the Gentiles came in, and of them All Nations, then God broke up the Mines of Election, and declared, That he had Elect among All Nations the whole World over. And when the time came, that the Shoals of Election was to be made up out of All Nations, then was that Commiſſion given, Go teach all Nations, &c. Matth. 28, 19. and not till then. This James gives as the reaſon of that Promiſe in the Prophets about the Calling of the Gentiles, Acts 15. 16. Known unto God are his works from the beginning: It comes in to this Senſe, (his Scope being to expound a Promiſe in the Prophets to be meant Prophetically of the Gentiles in thoſe Times) God knowing what he had to do, and whom he had choſen, and knowing that in theſe times his Elect were all the World over, hath accordingly ſhaped the Promiſe to his Decrees; and given the Promiſe of Calling the Gentiles unto theſe times; whereas before, whilſt Election was only among the Jews, the Promiſes were confined to them. So that God's Promiſes, like that Star, do ſtill point out to Election, and do remove as Election doth. And ſo here is a Promiſe, you ſee, ſtands over the lump or maſs of Believers Children; yea, a ſpecial Star on purpoſe, like a hand in a Margent, points at them above all Mankind beſide, becauſe among them Election is moſt and chiefly to be found.

BOOK V.

Secondly, To this Purpose consider, that these indefinite Promises, or expressions of Gods Decrees, unto Men, and to several sorts of Men, though they be all indefinite, and not distinctly and particularly naming the Persons; yet in respect of this their designation, some of them are more express and particular, than others: There are several degrees and latitudes of them, some do more confusedly and widely point out these Elect, some more neerly and distinctly; some take a greater compass, some a narrower; some speak more remotely, others with a more special and neerer designation. I may express it under that distinction you read in Eph. 2.17. and Isai. 57.19. some are afar off, and some are nigh. The Promises given the Gentiles were more remote, and far off; for there were such multitudes in all Nations, as to make Promises to some of that multitude was very remote: It being as if one should speak of Gold-mines in the West-Indies, not defining where; which how wide an expression were it, and how far off should such an one speak? But if he should say, there are abundance of great Mines in the Land of Jewry, even within that little compass of People, how nigh should he speak, and how nigh would every Man of them that had Fields and Possessions, think himself of the Possession of a Mine? This were a near defining of them, though with some indefiniteness, a contracting them within a narrower Circle: But if a Family were designed, as the House of David, like the naming of a Particular Field where these Treasures were hid, this were yet more near, yet not perfectly and distinctly defining, yet within a little. Now in such several degrees of indefinites more or less, hath God been pleased to reveal himself and his Decrees according to his good pleasure. See it in the first Promise given, the Promise of the Messiah; how vastly indefinite was it? [the Seed of the Woman] it took in all Mankind, and pointed out one Man amongst all: How far off was this from directing how to find who this was? The next Promise was more definite, and contracted to a narrower compass, even to Abrahams Seed, cutting off all Nations and Families besides; and yet further contracted to Isaack: Isaack had Jacob and Esau; Esau was cut off, and God limited it to Jacob: But he had Twelve Sons. Now how indefinite is the Promise again become? Then it was confined to Judah; but Judah had many Families. Then it was contracted to Davids, and to Bethlehem the City of David; and then yet nearer, to a Virgin of the House of David, [a Virgin shall conceive a Son] and there the Star stands even over that Field and Womb where the Messiah was laid. So in the Choice of David to be King; first he makes an indefinite Promise of the Scepter to Judah; which naming of the Tribe was remote, even one amongst Thousands; then he names the Family, 1 Sam. 16. 1. I will send thee to Jesse the Bethlemite, for I have provided me a King among his Sons: This was still indefinite, but very neer, for it was one among seven, and yet Samuel bids sanctifie them all, and that they come to the Sacrifice, verse 5. for he knew not whom it would fall upon. Thus it is in the Case in hand in the Promises of Salvation, in which Election is more or less indefinitely propounded. That Promise, [Peace on Earth, good will towards Men] Luke 2. 14. was very remote, and yet was a true expression of Gods Decree, that he had chosen Millions of Men, not Angels: But then it came to the Jews, I am not sent but to the lost Sheep of Israel, says Christ Matth. 10. 6. and ye are the Children of the Prophet and of the Covenant, unto you first God sent his Son to bless you; Acts 3. 25, 26. this was near; but when it came to such as were converted (Salvation is come to this House, Luke 9.9. Thou shalt be saved, and thy Houshold, Acts 16. 31. yea, your Children are holy) it comes so near, that he indefinitely pronounceth them truly holy upon it. In that heap or lump of Believers Children, there is so much Wheat of Election, and so little Chaff comparatively to it, as he ventures to call the heap holy.

For, Thirdly, If you examine it, you shall find, that there is no Promise of Salvation to any sort of Mankind, so neer an Universal Promise as this is: And therefore it is justly the peculiar Priviledge to this sort of Mankind, Believers Children, to be accounted holy, it is so near, so distinct a designation. For,

1. That

1. That to Mankind, and to All Nations, reaches One of an hundred thouſand; and where there is an hundred thouſand to One, there is no reaſon that All ſhould be accounted holy, for the ſake of thoſe Elect Ones. Chap. 6.

2. That the Promiſe to the Poor [God hath choſen the poor of this world] James 2. 5. is nearer, but not ſo near as to pronounce them holy upon it; for the Poor are the greateſt part of Mankind, and the Elect but as an handful among them, it may be one among a thouſand; and though there are not many rich or noble called, 1 Cor. 1. 26. and ſo more of the poorer ſort than of the rich, yet this was ſtill too large, or indefinite to deſign Election forth, for the poor are an hundred times the greateſt part of Mankind: And ſo, though there be fewer Elect among the rich, yet it is becauſe indeed there are fewer of Mankind that are rich; wherefore the account may come near unto one in this reſpect: As many of the rich, comparing Number to Number, may be Elect, as of the poor; only the poor being ſo much the greater number, there are the more of them Elect. But none of the deſignments are near enough to be Cogniſances of Election, nor to know Love or Hatred by.

But this of being Children of Believers is ſo near, this Lump contains ſo much of Election in it, as that whereas All others are ten thouſand to One, this is but as Two to One, yea, it may be the Moſt, it may be All in ſome Families. So that God thought good to make this an outward Badge of Holineſs, for the Church to account them holy upon it. It is not here, as among Jeſſe's Sons, One of Seven; but it may be, (and ſometimes falls out) Seven to One of them prove godly: (Notwithſtanding Samuel bad All Jeſſe's Sons ſanctifie themſelves upon it, and come to the Sacrifice, 1 Sam. 16. 5.) and God to whom his Decrees, and Works, and where his Elect lay, were known from the beginning, hath pronounced them to us in an indefinite Propoſition, to be holy, and bidden us to ſanctifie them All, and bring them to the Sacrament of Baptiſm.

Thus, you ſee, how far the reality of the thing it ſelf, it is an Indefinite Propoſition, that their Children are holy and Elect; and yet not of that vaſt Indefiniteneſs that other Promiſes are of, but exceeding near to a particular deſignment, and of all Promiſes the moſt expreſs.

Now for the Third and laſt Head propounded for the making up an harmony between theſe Two, namely, the Reality of ſuch Childrens holineſs in the event; and ſecondly, the extent of our Judgments about ſuch Childrens holineſs; as alſo between God's Revealed Will and his Secret, theſe things may be ſaid,

1. That if theſe Two, the extent of the Reality it ſelf, and our Judgments, be ſingly and alone compared together, they will never be commenſurable, as made up even and adequate each to other. At the latter Day, when our Catalogue of Saints, whom we judged ſuch, ſhall be brought in, it will be found much larger than God's, and that we did ſet down Cyphers for Figures; and ſo our Account numerically taken will fall ſhort of God's. This muſt be acknowledged, that an Arithmetical Harmony can never be made between theſe Two.

Yet, Secondly, We muſt withal conſider, That between theſe Two even now mentioned, there comes a middle put by God between both, namely, that ſame indefinite Revelation of God's mind to us, both about theſe Childrens holineſs, and about what is our Duty to think of them: And take that in with the other Two, and between all theſe Three compared one with another, there will be found ſome kind of Harmony: For you ſhall ſee, that this indefinite Expreſſion of God's Mind differs not on God's part from the Reality of what in the Event falls out; and alſo that this his Revealed Will about them, and his Secret Will towards them come all to one, and ſo, that they Two agree: And you ſhall ſee withal, that This our Judgment of each Childrens holineſs, is but rightly conformable to that Indefinite Expreſſion. And therefore, ſeeing they agree in this Third, they muſt in the end meet together, for, Quæ conveniunt in aliquo tertio, inter ſe conveniunt.

Book V. To demonstrate this of each severally: In God's Relation there are two Parts distinctly to be considered (as hath been said):

1. A Declaration what his own thoughts are of such Children indefinitely delivered.

2. A Rule thereupon given us, what our thoughts should be of each Child: We are to think any of them holy.

Now for the first, Consider it as a Declaration to us of God's Mind about them, and there is no dissonancy at all between this his Declaration and his Secret Will.

For, First, God speaks but the Truth of what he hath purposed, and that Truth is adequate to his Decree, his Speech is no larger than his Meaning: Because, according to his Secret Will, all such Children are not holy, therefore he says not, that All are holy; but he speaks indefinitely, they are holy: Yea, himself hath in his eye, those very Children only whom he really intends to make holy. He can truly say at the latter Day, when he shall have All about him, I meant these, and no other. Only indeed, for the present, he does not distinctly declare his whole mind to us, by telling us particularly who they were.

Yea, and Secondly, It became him so to do: It is meet and fit that the great God should thus reveal his mind unto us; for he speaks but like himself, even as the only wise and great God, in his Distances to us, who are not (nor was it fit that we should be) of his Privy Council. It is his Distance and his Glory to conceal a matter, as Solomon says, (Prov. 25. 2.) Even as it is of a wise, great King; who will reveal so much of his Mind as shall serve to set his Instruments on work, to bring about the Design which he hath in his thoughts, but reserves the rest to himself: just so does God here, not telling us how many, or who these holy Ones are, but points to that Lump as holy; so to set us a work to bring them All to the Ordinances, that he may bless those unto whom he intends a Blessing. So as, this indefinite Declaration disagreeth not from his Secret Will; but withal, hath a fitness, and a Decorum in it, becoming the great and wise God.

And for the second, That upon this his indefinite Declaration, there should be a Command given us, to think any One of them holy, with such a Judgment as is before (and shall be afterwards) declared; there is no dissonancy at all in this neither.

For, 1. This ariseth but from a necessary conformity of our Judgment to the Indefiniteness of God's Declaration of his Mind: For when God speaks indefinitely, it becomes us to judge indefinitely, and to do that Duty which upon such a Judgment is due to them from us. If God think it meet thus to speak of that Lump, it is meet for us, without prying into his Secrets, so to judge of any One in particular, though not of All in general. It is but righteous for God to require it, and a Due from us to be given them. So that, as I said of the former part of this Revelation, that God spake Truth, and nothing but the Truth, though not the whole Truth, in that his indefinite Declaration of his Mind about them: So I say of this second part, that respects our Duty, That God commands in righteousness, when he requires us to think so of any One of them. For this to be our Duty, ariseth naturally from the Indefiniteness of God's Expression about them: Even as it is God's Will, that we on our part should pray for any Man that he may be saved, because God hath indefinitely declared his Mind, that he will save some of All sorts, as 1 Tim. 2. 1, 2, 4. I exhort therefore, that first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks be made for all men: For Kings, and for all that are in Authority, that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty. Who will have all men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth.

And thus, whilst our thoughts conform themselves to that Rule, there is no dissonancy neither, from God's Mind, as it respecteth our Duty, although we in our thoughts should judge some holy, who are not so in his intention. For the immediate Rule unto which our thoughts are to be conformed, is not God's own Secret Purpose, so as we should think just as God thinks of every one, or else else our thoughts would be unrighteous: But God's Revelation of his thoughts being only indefinite, does rather call for this at our hands as a Duty, and it becomes meet on our part to think any one of those Children holy, that are presented to us. Now the Truth, or Righteousness of things, lies in a conformity to their immediate Rule; as the Rule of Speech is not immediately the truth of things themselves, but the truth of the Apprehension of him that speaks it, that he speaks but as he thinks, and ought to think: So is it here. Chap. 6.

So that, for the reconciling of All, consider but Three things drawn out of what was last spoken; unto which I shall add a fourth.

First, where the variation of our Judgments herein from Gods thoughts does first come in; from whence it is, that they prove uneven: That it ariseth meerly on our parts, and as it were upon a second remove; and indeed, from the unmeetness that God should tell us all his mind, and the uncapableness of us to know it,

And so, Secondly, That the Rules whereby we are left to judge of their Estates must necessarily be larger than the reality: So as, if God would require us at all to judge any of them holy, and upon that judgment to perform such and such duties to them as to Saints, then the Rules given us by God therein must of necessity be larger than the reality in the event will prove to be; seeing we could not know Mens hearts; nor was it fit that God should design the Persons by Name. Thus it is in judging them of riper years: The Rules by which God hath commanded us to judge Men holy, are larger than what in the event proves true: Foolish Virgins are judged Wise by us, as well as those who really are so. And yet on Our parts it is the will of God that we should judge them holy. And though at the Latter Day, there will be found greater odds between our thoughts and Gods own thoughts concerning Men, yet still our thoughts will be found to have had a true conformity unto what Gods mind was, we should think. And why might not as large a Rule be given, to judge Infants by, as to judge those of riper years; that so we might be sure to take in all Elect Infants, and bring them to God; though we bring many others besides? Even as by the Rules whereby we judge Saints of riper years, we take in all Elect, though many other with them; which is necessary if God will have it pass our Judgment; especially seeing that concerning Infants no other Rule can be given.

And so, Thirdly, Consider that therefore there is yet a Moral Harmony between our thoughts herein and Gods mind about what is our dutie, though not an Arithmetical Harmony between Gods thoughts and ours concerning the Children themselves: Which is sufficient, seeing Revealed things only, belong to us and our Children, and secret things to God alone, whose Glory it it to conceal a matter.

And let me add, Fourthly, That there will fall yet a neerer Harmony than that simply Moral one (which notwithstanding were enough to justifie this our judgment) For let our Judgment be truly and rightly conformed to Gods Revelation, and it will not in some respect fall much wide of Gods own secret Judgment herein, nor from the reality of the thing it self in the event. For though it be true that the application of this Revelation of Gods by us, will be to many more Persons, than God intended, yet still if we do but conform our Judgment unto Gods Revelation, there will arise such considerations from the manner of it, as will rectifie this calculation, and make all even again.

For first, If our Judgment of such Infants be truly conformed to Gods indefinite Revelation as its Rule, then though when we come to Particulars, and count these Infants one by one, we do judge of any one, and so (by Induction) of every one of them, because God hath spoken it indefinitely: Yet when we take them again into a general consideration in the Lump, we withal judge, that not every one of them are holy, but on the contrary, that many of them are unholy. And this because God hath not Universally spoken it of all, but only indefinitely of some. So as, when our minds form up a Logical proposition of these Infants, binding them up in one bundle, and laying them on one heap, we then judge as God doth, that not all and every one are are holy, but ſome only. But when we come to an Arithmetical Enumeration of them, by judging as occaſions is of this, or that Infant Individually preſented to us; then indeed we apply this to them: This Infant we think Holy, and ſo that other, and the next no leſs. And ſo indeed though in our Judgment given of them by Retail it riſes to a larger Sum than God intends; yet by that other Judgment made by the great, there is an abatement given, of an indefinite number out of them; in the whole maſs of them we think many Unholy. And ſo, in the Total Sum, Gods account and ours fall near, yea they jump one with the other, in that this Judgment of ours being given of them in the groſs and in the bulk; ſo as how many, or how few are ſuch, we ſuſpend, and leave a Blank to ſet them down in as Gods Account at the Latter Day ſhall come in. So that indeed, that Sum which by Parcels comes to exceed, is by the great ſubſtracted from, and in the end all made even; and we come to be miſtaken but about this, or that Perſon; not in the Total Sum or upon the whole. In a word the variation is but our ſeveral ways of Account: Caſt them up one way, by induction, or Particular enumeration, and the Number exceeds; but count an other way, and it falls even.

And Secondly, For that miſtake in our Judgments in having applied it to others more than are holy, there is yet an allowance given in the manner of our judging them, and ſo an abatement for this, from the Judgment it ſelf; which alſo truly ariſeth from its very conformity to the indefiniteneſs of Gods Revelation. For when it is ſo conformed, the Judgment we paſs upon any one Infant is not of certain and abſolute Perſwaſion or aſſurance, ſuch as we have about our own Eſtates when ſealed by the Spirit, or ſuch as we have of this Truth, that every Believer ſhall be ſaved: But it is an indefinite Judgment only, of ſtrong inclination, and expectation to ſee how God will perform his word to this, or that Infant: Such as we have of our ſelves in caſe of our want of Aſſurance. It is more than a ſimple [it may be] or [what knowſt thou] as verſe 1 Cor. 7. 16. for that may be ſaid of any Unbelievers Child: But it is with a hopefulneſs; much weight being put into the Ballance to ſway it that way, though not to down-weight, to Aſſurance; yet ſo far to ſway, as to become a juſt ground for us, to carry our ſelves unto them, as unto Actual Saints; and ſo, to put a difference between them and other Children, as is proper to Saints, even to honour them, eſteem them, and bring them to the ordinances of Baptiſm as due to Saints. For ſo we are to do to others of ripe years, when yet we have not a perſwaſion of Aſſurance that they are holy; and ſo alſo to our ſelves. Now for us to give them ſuch a Judgment as this, ſee how conformable, and ſuitable it is to Gods Revelation, and what an Harmony it holds with its indefiniteneſs; which is the thing in Hand.

For firſt, Becauſe God ſays not, That all are holy, therefore conformably our Judgments do not certainly think of any one Infant, that it is holy. If God had ſaid All, we would have with aſſurance and a perſwaſion of certainty, ſaid it of any one. But Gods Speech not ſtretching it ſelf to an Univerſality, our Judgment riſeth not to an aſſurance.

Secondly, Becauſe God hath ſaid it but indefinitely, of ſome, therefore our Judgment is alſo but indefinite.

And yet Thirdly, Becauſe this indefiniteneſs is nearer to an Univerſal, than limited to a few of them, therefore our opinion and expectations are raiſed to a greater hopefulneſs for any one, that he is holy, than that he is not. It is more than an [it may be] for that anſwers to thoſe large indefinites ſpoken of ſinners in reſpect of the reſt of Mankind, which becauſe they are a thouſand to one, therefore we have an [it may be] anſwerable. But becauſe Election here contracts it ſelf ſo narrowly (as ſuppoſe it may take Two of Three) therefore our hopes are correſpondent, and do riſe ſo high as to expreſs a judgment ſuch as inclines rather to their holineſs, than otherwiſe: It caſts the Ballance ſo far that way, as to bind us to to deal with them as with Saints. Yea, as (I ſaid, that) Gods Revelation came a middle way between our thoughts and his own, ſo this is a middle kind of Faith between Aſſurance and a meer [it may be] and that ſufficient enough to quiet the heart againſt all fears to the contrary, and to raiſe it up to a ſpecial expectation concerning them, to ſee how God performs his word; There being likewiſe enough to warrant Our applying the Ordinance to them, as due to Saints. So then this Allowance being given to the Judgment it ſelf, it comes to paſs, that though Arithmetically we give it unto more Children for Number, than the Reality proves; yet it is a Judgment ſpread ſo thin, that for the weight of it, it will be (ad pondus) no more than a Judgment of certain Perſwaſion towards a few. And ſo there is a Geometrical proportion ſtill kept, though not an Arithmetical. Chap. 6.

CHAP.

Book V.

CHAP. VII.

That God orders his Election so, as to run in a Successive Line from Godly Parents to their Children, does not infringe the freedom of Election Grace. That this his way of Acting is consonant to all the Principles of Right Reason, and agreeable with his other proceedings. The admirable Harmony which appears in all his dispensations towards Men. How comly a proportion there is in this truth, that God should draw his Election and Series of visible Saints out of the Loins of those, who are such themselves, rather than others of Mankind; made apparent by a comparison of it with other dispensations of Free Grace.

NOw because all Gods gracious dealings and dispensations, though most free and arbitrary, are yet in wisdom so ordered, that they are consonant to right Reason; and though not founded upon it, do yet agree with it; we therefore shall further clear these two things, (and then, we shall have finisht this great Point.)

1. That God should choose the Seed of his Elect, and order Election to run in a right Line, is no prejudice at all to Free Grace shewn forth in Electing, neither contraries any other Principles of his own which he goes by.

2. It is most consonant unto, and falls in with all other Principles of right Reason, and conformable to other of his Proceedings.

First, It infringes not the Freedom of his Grace, and the Principles he goes by, in Election:

For, First, Election is not founded on it at all, but ex mero Dei bene placito; God in Election not first considering those Persons as Children of such Parents, as being the motive thereunto; seeing in Election Men came up before him as Creabiles, as yet to be Created to such a Glory as in Heaven they shall have; That was the notion which they appeared to him in; God lookt to the end of his works at the beginning, in which he was wholly and absolutely Free, only ordaining they should go through this World as a Passage to Glory, he moulded their condition here to many holy ends and respects, wherein his Love should appear: As that they should be ordinarily Poor; not many wise nor noble; that they should live in such Places, and come of such Parents. These respects were not before Election to draw it on, but subserving it as means to manifest that his love the more. And such is This, that his Elect should come out of the Loins of his Elect by his own ordering, which is a respect, that manifests his love in Electing the more, both unto the Fathers, and to the Children, for which end he ordains it: So as, in the execution and drawing forth his Love, these respects come in, but not as grounds and foundations of it. And thus in a true sense, Rom. 11. 28. the Jews are said to be beloved for their Fathers sakes; but not for their sakes Elected.

Second-

Secondly, As Election was Free in chooſing the Jews, and is free in the choice of thoſe Jews who are to come, and yet God took in this reſpect too their Fathers in it notwithſtanding; ſo it is in ours: And ſo it goes not by Birth as the moving cauſe, but as the ſubſerving Inſtrument or means to manifeſt that his Love the more, both to the Father, and the Child. Chap. 7.

And therefore thirdly, God often times (if not uſually) to ſhew his Grace takes not all the Seed. Do you ſay wherein have I loved you, was not Eſau Jacobs Brother, yet I loved Jacob, and hated Eſau? Mal. 1, 2.

Now Secondly, Let us conſider what Harmony in Reaſon there is for this, that God ſhould ordain the Children of Holy Parents to be holy. Something to which Purpoſe I have before hinted ſparſim in this Diſcourſe; as,

1. That God hath implanted even in affection, yea the gracious affections of parents, the ſtrongeſt deſire of their Childrens Salvation next to their own: And God knows the heart of a Father, as having a Son himſelf whom he loves, and whom alſo out of love he choſe and ordained Heir of all things, Heb. 1. 2. Therefore to comply with their deſire of his own implanting, he hath ordered the coming forth of his Elect in this World ſo, as they ſhall rather iſſue out of the Loins of his Elect, than of others, who would not have hearts to deſire any ſuch Priviledge for their Children, nor would ever acknowledge it a mercy. It was indifferent in it ſelf, through whoſe Loins his Elect ſhould come, for that ſerved but to bring forth Men whom he would love. And ſeeing it would be a gratification from God unto ſuch Parents, and but caſt away upon others, he rather choſe to beſtow it upon his own, rather than others.

And Secondly, This is a Bleſſing and Priviledge more than meerly outwards, or which extends but unto this Life; it is a Spiritual bleſſing, and reacheth to Eternity, and of its comfort the inward Man is only capable. All ſpiritual Affections of love to others, though drawn forth in, and by fleſhly Relations, will continue for ever: So what ſpiritual love hath been drawn out between Man and Wife will continue in Heaven, as it is an honour to Chriſt for ever: So I, and the Children whom thou haſt given me: And to Miniſters their Converts are their Crown in the Day of Chriſt, and ſo likewiſe are ſuch Children to ſuch Fathers. It had been a ſmall thing to Abraham to have been counted the Father of the Faithful, if his comfort from it had been but what he had when he was here, and ſaw none but Iſaac and Iſhmael of his Seed: No, it is yet to come, when at the Day of Judgment, he ſhall ſee ſo many of Gods Beloved ones to have been taken out of his Loins.

3. On Gods part, it became him to do this favour for his Children; for it agrees with the exacteſt Rules of Friendſhip (which towards his Elect God profeſſeth to walk by, and keep unto) that can be found upon Earth, to be a Friend unto the Family of a Friend, a Friend unto his Houſe after him: Than this, there is no higher commendation of Friendſhip. David and Jonathan (you know) were the nobleſt Pair of Friends and higheſt Patterns of Friendſhip, we read of in ſtory; and ſee what a Covenant they make each with other, 1 Sam. 20. 14, 15. Thou ſhalt not only while yet I live, ſhew me the kindneſs of the Lord ——but alſo thou ſhalt not cut off thy kindneſs from my Houſe for ever; and verſe 42. their Oath was between each others Seed for ever [between thy Seed, and my Seed:] Now God profeſſeth himſelf the trueſt, the compleateſt Friend, and therefore no ſtrain of Friendſhip ſhall Men take up, which he will be wanting in, yea, wherein he will not exceed. What! 4000. years after to remember his Covenant with Abraham and Iſaac! as in the future converſion of the Jews their Seed he will: Rom. 11. 28. The Apoſtle gives this as a reaſon of that their converſion, they are Beloved for their Fathers ſake: What an unheard of Friendſhip is this? Can Men boaſt of the like? You know God profeſſeth of Abraham, that he was his Friend, James 2. 23. [and he was called the Friend of God] and in this very reſpect God choſe his Seed; and the Covenant with them takes in this very Conſideration, (and unto that of his is ours conformed) thus expreſly, Iſai. 41. 8. Thou Iſrael art my ſervant, Jacob whom I have choſen, the Seed of Abraham my Friend, you

Book V. may see how his choice runs; Israel whom I have chosen, the Seed of my Friend: you have it also pleaded by them, 2 Chron. 20. 7. Art not thou our God, who didst drive out the inhabitants of this Land before thy people Israel, and gavest it to the Seed of Abraham thy friend for ever?

But the Reasons which I most aim at, may be fetcht from that comly and like answerable proportion that this his Dispensation holds, with his other ways of Grace. It is just like the course he holds in other his Proceedings of Grace toward his Elect; which I have long observed conformed to these Rules following, which all are found to hold in this also, and so may serve as so many Reasons of the Point.

1. I have long observed it by many Instances, that God in his ways of Grace since the fall, useth (as much as possibly may stand with Grace) his old Institutions given to Man in Innocency, and takes them all in for to subserve Grace, and keeps unto them: And it is his honour so to do; for thereby he much upholds the Glory of his Wisdom, and constancy to himself; that he will not be put out of his way by Mans sin. Therefore look what end he appointed any thing for in Innocency, he under Grace takes it, and so far as it will any way serve to that end, he useth it and retains it, varying from it as little as may be. The old Statutes of the first Foundation he takes, and translates them into this New Foundation. And thus he having ordained Marriage in Innocency to derive his Covenant of works together with his Image unto Mankind; therefore he useth it still to that very end to convey his Covenant of Grace so far as may be. But to clear this Rule to you, upon which this Reason is founded, namely that God doth indeed observe some such like Rule as this in his way of Grace,

1. First see it in the Law, which (if any thing) was like to fall most cross to any use under the Covenant of Grace; and you shall see that all the ends God intended it for, he brings about under the Gospel, in a subserving way unto Grace: God gave Man a Law to give him life [do this] with promise to reward him for his works, and that with life, [and thou shalt live] even as wages are given to a Labourer who is worthy of his hire. This was the Primitive ordinance of the Law at first; but Mans sin perverted and put the Law clean by from attaining this its end. The commandment which was ordained to life, I found to be unto death; Rom. 7. 10. which gave a full demonstration of Sins being so above measure Sinful, that it should so utterly pervert Gods ordinance, as the Apostle speaks, verse 13. But will God now be utterly put by from using at all the Law under Grace to this end? No; he will shew that the Sin of Man cannot wholly make void the ordinance of God: He will not cast it away, because Sin hath spoiled it; but will find out a new way how under Grace to make use of it to this end. And although to make that direct use of it, that it had before (namely to save and justifie Man by the Tenure of its Covenant, Do this and live,) is as incompatible with Grace as Sin it self is; (as the Apostle shews, Rom. 3. 27, 28. and Chap. 4. 14. and Chap. 11. 6.) so that indeed, if a Man should be justified by the Law, it were not of Grace, (seeing they are ἀντίθετα) yet God loves his own Institution so well, that all the indirect use it can serve to, it shall, so far as it may stand with Grace. So Rom. 3. ult. Do we make void the Law through Faith? No, we establish it all that may be; for though the Law cannot bring to life, it self being weakned through Sin, Rom. 8. 3. yet it shall bring unto Christ, Galat. 3. 24. and he shall give Life, and Justification: And how shall Christ give Life, by the Righteousness of the Law still? For though the Righteousness of the Law performed by us, doth not justifie us; yet that Righteousness by which we are justified, shall not be any other than the Righteousness of that Law performed by any other, even by Christ; God resolved still to make use of it, as far as will stand with Grace. So though it be not the Righteousness ἐκ τοῦ νόμου, (as the Phrase is Phil. 3. 9.) yet it is δικαίωμα τοῦ νόμου: The Righteousness of the Law, materially taken, which is fulfilled in our Justification, Rom. 8. 4. though not the Righteousness of the Law formally taken, that is, which justifies by the Tenure of it, and by the force it hath from the Law, and the Covenant of it: As the Act of a Man put out of Office, is not formally the same same Act that it was, when he did it ex officio; yet it is Materially the Act of the same Man: So it is not of the law in officio, as before, but yet it is the righteousness of the Law by which Christ Justifies us still; that is, it is the very same Righteousness for the matter of it which the Law enjoyns, and which if Christ had not performed, he had not justified us. Then likewise when he sanctifies us, he makes all the use of the Law that may be: He writes it in the heart as at first; though with new Ink indeed, yet with the same Letters, and holy dispositions; so as, it is not a New, but an Old Commandment, 1 John 2. 7. Brethren, I write no new Commandment unto you, but an old Commandment which ye had from the beginning: the old Commandment is the word which ye have heard from the beginning. Look how it guided Man before, so it guides him still, God would make what use he could of it, in that work also. Yea, and let me add this, That though he hath utterly excluded Works, and Dispositions of Grace conformable to the Law, from being the ground of Justification, or of Faith justifying us, or which Faith should so look into; yet he hath ordained them to be Evidences of Justification, and so a support to Faith; and hath made what use might be that way, without prejudice to Grace: So Rom. 7. vers. 13. to vers. 23. Was that then which is good, made death unto me? God forbid. But sin, that it might appear sin, working death in me by that which is good: that sin by the commandment might become exceeding sinful. For we know that the Law is spiritual: but I am carnal, sold under sin. For that which I do, I allow not: for what I would, that do I not; but what I hate, that do I. If then I do that which I would not, I consent unto the Law, that it is good. Now then, it is no more I that do it: but sin that dwelleth in me. For I know, that in me, (that is, in my flesh) dwelleth no good thing. For to will is present with me: but how to perform that which is good, I find not. For the good that I would, I do not: but the evil which I would not, that I do. Now if I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me. I find then a law, that when I would do good, evil is present with me. For I delight in the Law of God, after the inward man. But I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity of the law of sin which is in my members. The Apostle shews that the use of the Law is, as to discover the Law of sin in inward dispositions of Corruption, so to shew the Law of the Inward Man and his Grace; and to what end, but to help Assurance, whereof he treats, Chap. 8. and that he might see, that there is no condemnation to him who walks after the Spirit, Rom. 8. 1. So when God comes to glorifie us, he therein makes what use is possibly to be made of the Law by Free Grace. At first in Innocency, the works of it were ordained to be, not the measure only, but the Rule, by which, and ground for which, ex debito, by a due Debt, the Reward was to be given: So Rom. 4. 4. but so it cannot be now; for then, Grace were no more Grace, Rom. 11. 6. But yet God will retain and make use of it to serve as a Rule of Proportion, not of Debt, even for Grace to dispense its Reward by. Though it shall not be propter opera, for our works, as then; yet secundum opera, according to works. Though it shall not serve as the Rule of Obligation to tye God to us by Debt; yet of Proportion according to which God will proceed; though it be not the Ethical Rule of Justice, yet it is the Arithmetical: As if a Father freely promise to give a Son a Reward according to his Service, he may use the same Rates of Proportion that to a Hireling. Thus you see how Grace hath recovered that Primitive Institution which Sin had spoiled. And just so hath God ordained and ordered it in the Case in hand. In Innocency, Marriage and begetting of Children was an holy Institution appointed by God to propagate, as Mankind, so his own Image of Holiness, and the Covenant of Works wherein God promised to be their God, from Father to Son, in a natural way; as other Creatures begat in their kind, so Man in his kind: And therefore, God makes the first Covenant of Works with the Father of Mankind, for all the rest of Mankind his Children, to be propagated to them by Generation; and blessed Male and Female to that end, Genes. 1. 1. that holy Adam should beget holy Children. Now sin had perverted and made void this Institution, as it had done that of the Law (as you have heard) and that which was ordained to convey the Image of God, was now by ſin found to convey the Image of Sin, Geneſ. 5. 3. Adam begets in his own (namely ſinful) Image, yet ſo far as this Inſtitution may be reſcued out of the hands of ſin, and be uſed by Grace, God will reſtore it, and eſtabliſh it again under Grace. What was God's primitive Inſtitution Grace will keep to, and make it ſubſerve it ſelf for the propagating of its own Covenant, ſo far as it is not derogatory unto Grace it ſelf. And therefore God ſanctifieth Marriage ſtill, and maketh an improvement of it in holy Men and Women to the ſame end that it was at firſt ordained to. So as, the ſame Inſtitution of God's, which was that of Nature, does ſtill hold; That if the Root be holy, ſo are the Branches, Rom. 11. 16. and, I will be the God of thee, and of thy Seed, Geneſ. 17. 7. Now this continuing of the Inſtitution of Marriage to ſuch a holy end in People who are holy, was evidently held forth in the Nation of the Jews, who were Abraham's Seed, (It is an Inſtance which I urged before, and therefore will now only mention it) in that 2. Mal. 16. The Prophet to convince the Jews (made an holy People, or holineſs to the Lord, as he tells them, ver. 11.) of thoſe two ſins, the putting away the lawful Wives of their own Nation, verſ. 13, 14. and their marrying ſtrange Wives, the daughters of ſtrange Gods, verſe 11. he reduceth them to the primitive Inſtitution of Marriage in Innocency (whereunto God would have his Peoples Marriages conformed) when firſt, he made Adam and Eve one fleſh, and ſo to cleave to each other, as not to part. And ſecondly, ordained their Marriage, and their being thus made One, to ſeek a godly Seed; which end he ſtill aimed at, and intended in the Marriages of his People: And this end had they perverted by their Mixtures with the Heathens, whoſe Marriages God had ſaid he would not bleſs to that end, but curſe them in an ungodly Iſſue. So that it appears, that God inſtituted Marriage to the Jews then, for the ſame end that at firſt: So as, God ordained it then, and now doth ordain it to the ſame end, only with ſuch a difference, as that Grace may appear Grace: Which difference is apparent by theſe Particulars.

Chap. 7.

Book V.

For, 1. Then Holineſs was thus by Generation conveyed, by virtue of a Natural neceſſary Covenant: But now, though out of a Covenant too, [I will be the God of thee, and thy Seed] yet out of a free Covenant with his Elect: Not as a due to the Father, as then, by the Law of Nature; by which it was a due, that if he begat, he ſhould beget in his kind; but as a meer grant of Grace now; yet ſo, as that whereas God might have marſhal'd his Elect to come out of other Mens Loins, he freely chooſeth rather to draw them out of their Loins who are his Elect. And to ſhew, that it is not as a due, but of Grace, he therefore takes not all his Elect thence, or all their Children, but only for the moſt part out of that rank; ſo at once to ſhew, that he keeps to his old Inſtitution, and that Grace is ſtill Grace notwithſtanding, and not Nature. So as that remains ſtill true that was ſaid by John [They are born not of fleſh (or blood) but of God] John 1. 13. yea, and of his own meer will does God beget us, James 8. 18. He begets thoſe Children of his Elect as freely as any other; only his will was to take out of that Lump and Maſs of the Children of Elect, (as Rom. 11. 16. the Phraſe is) rather than of any other.

And, 2. Holineſs was then conveyed with, and by Generation it ſelf, as Natural Endowments are: It was ſtampt in, and with the very Conception; the ſame Mould that ſhaped them Men, ſtamped God's Image alſo; but not ſo now: In ſin (ſays David) my mother conceived me, Pſal. 51. 5. (whoſe Mother yet was a godly Woman, and he a godly Man, and this by virtue of her Covenant alſo; for in Pſal. 116. 16, he pleads it, [Truly I am thy Servant, I am thy Servant, Son of thy Handmaid] and ſo in reſpect of his Propagation from her, who had devoted her ſelf to be God's Servant, he acknowledgeth himſelf to be ſuch in a double Obligation.) So as, ſtill by virtue of their Fathers and Mothers Generation, they are conceived in ſin, and that which that Act conveys is nothing but ſin; for neceſſarily thoſe Children that are ſanctified in the Womb, muſt firſt be fleſh, and wholly fleſh, e're they be ſanctified: Elſe Elſe this their Sanctification were not a Regeneration, or a ſecond Birth, as John 3. 6. And ſo it is true, that they are not born of the Fleſh, or of Blood, John 1. 13. for when they are thus wholly conceived in ſin, through the influence Generation hath on them, then after God comes, and ſanctifies many of them ſometimes in the Womb, ſometimes afterward; yet ſo, as though Generation ſerves not herein as the immediate Inſtrument or Means to ſtamp Grace, as then it did; yet ſtill it ſerves as the Chanel to direct the Courſe, in which Grace ſhould run, and is diſpenſed. And obſerve it, This is carried with the very ſame (or like) terms of difference, that we obſerved in Gods making uſe of the Law in the Covenant of Grace to ſubſerve it; for look as it was not (as was ſaid) the Righteouſneſs, ἐκ τῦ νόμυ, that is, by the force, power, and tenor of the Law formally taken, that now juſtifies us, yet the ſame Righteouſneſs of the Law materially taken, which before ſhould, ſtill doth: So is it here; The Seed of godly Parents (whoſe God he is by Covenant) and ſo, the ſame Subjects materially ſince the Fall, as before) are ordained to be ſanctified; but not the ſame way; not from, or through their Generation, or being begotten of them, formally conſidered (as was ſaid of the Righteouſneſs of the Law) So that, it may ſtill be ſaid, that the primitive Law of Generation is ſtill fulfilled. Chap. 7.

And again, in like ſenſe to that (which was alſo obſerved of the Law) that God is ſaid to reward, not propter, yet ſecundum opera, not for works, as then; yet according to our works: So here, though the Covenant goes not per, or propter, for, or thorough their Births; yet it is conveyed ſecundum, according to Birth, even as before.

Now to ſtrengthen this Rule further (which is made the foundation of this Reaſon;) take an other Inſtance to confirm it: Gods end and Inſtitution in making the World and all the Creatures, was, that they ſhould be uſed by Man, to holy and glorious ends, as holy utenſils imployed for Gods Glory, and together with it make for Mans good, and contribute to him, (whilſt he ſerves God) every one their help and comfort, as Tenants do Proviſions to their Lords: And this was their Primitive liberty, and Perfection; but Man being faln, Satan enters upon this World as a Poſſeſſion faln unto him: The Creatures are delivered up and betrayed into the Hands of Satan, and Sin, and ſo are loſt unto God and to themſelves; they loſing that Liberty to which they were Created, and being themſelves ſubjected to Satans Tyranny; and accordingly they are often muſtered up in Rebellion againſt Men by God, and conſpire by croſs accidents and events to work his ruine, and miſery, as once his happineſs: As we ſee in all the Croſſes and Afflictions with which this World is fitted. All this you have Rom. 8. verſe 20, 21. the Creatures (ſays the Apoſtle) were made ſubject to vanity, not willingly: Their Will is that Natural inſtinct which God hath put into them at the firſt, to arrive at the end for which he made them; againſt which they are forced to Mens Luſts, and raviſhed, and oppreſſed by them; which is called a Vanity, becauſe it is a fruſtration of that end for which God at firſt ordained them. But God reſolves, not to have his Primitive end and purpoſe in Creation, to be thus fruſtrated: Therefore to his Elect at preſent, he ſets all theſe Creatures this task, to work together for their good, verſe 28. though not in ſo direct a way as at firſt, yet in a more oblique (but certain) courſe: To this as to their common mark they all tend and take their flight, though about; by the Bow (as we ſay) not by the String; Grace will work and wheel them about to their Primitive End and Inſtitution. And further, God as yet not ſo fully pleaſed with ſo indirect a courſe, hath appointed a time fully to reſtore them to this their priſtine perfection. He will reſcue the poor oppreſſed Creatures out of the Hands of Sin and Satan: a Day is coming, wherein there ſhall be Holineſs to the Lord written upon the Bells of Horſes going to Plough and Cart, which ſhall be as holy in their uſe to God, as Aaron's Bells once were, with which he went into the Congregation: And their Pots they drink, or ſeeth their meat in, ſhall be holineſs to the Lord, as were the Bowls before the Altar; Zach. 14. 20. In the day ſhall there there be upon the Bells of the Horſes Holineſs unto the Lord, and the pots in the Lords Houſe ſhall be like the bowls before the Altar. The Prophet ſpeaks of the New Hieruſalem, when the Saints ſhall Reign. And this you may further ſee to be Gods very aim and end in appointing a time for that New Heaven and New Earth wherein Righteouſneſs dwells, even that he might attain his firſt Inſtitution concerning them. Thus more expreſly in Rom. 8. the Apoſtle ſpeaking of the Time of Chriſt, the Second Adams Kingdom, after the Reſurrection; ſays that by Adam they were thus indeed ſubjected, but in hope: For that Gods inſtitutions muſt take Place and be reſtored, although Mans Sin hath put them out of courſe; and ſo, they ſhall be delivered from that bondage of corruption into a glorious liberty. Juſt thus had Sin ſpoiled Gods firſt Inſtitution of Marriage, which was to propagate holineſs, and his Image: Sin clean perverting it to convey Satans Image to all Mankind: But Grace towards his Elect vindicates it, and ſets it a running in its Natural courſe again. So preſently after the Flood God ſet Grace on work in a Line of ſucceſſion in Seths Poſterity; ſo afterward in the Jews, and ſo ſtill in the Gentiles. And when the Reign of Grace ſhall be fully reſtored (as in the New Hieruſalem it ſhall) then their Seed, and their Seeds Seed generally and without interruption ſhall be for ever holy, as was obſerved out of Iſai. 59. and laſt: For the Priviledges will be reſtored which they had in Innocency, even as this Liberty of the Creatures will.

A ſecond Rule which I give, that God hath ſquared and chalked out his ways and proceedings of Grace by, which alſo falls in with this of his towards the Children of Elect, and ſo may further ſhew the wiſdom of God in ordering it thus, is this, That God hath ſo plotted and contrived his goings forth of Grace, that look by what ways or means ſin comes upon Mankind for his ruin and deſtruction, God takes up thoſe very ways to chooſe, as means to ſave his Elect of Mankind by, and effects ſo to do it. Which holds forth a further thing than the former; for this ſhews, that as he makes good his Inſtitutions in Innocency under Grace, ſo he makes uſe of the ſame Weapons with which ſin was wont to fight againſt him; and this he chooſes to do, as we may obſerve in many Particulars, which we will firſt view, to make good the Rule, and then make uſe of it, in the Point in hand.

1. Becauſe by a Man Sin and Death came upon Man, therefore by a Man ſhall Grace come, and the Reſurrection from the Dead. You ſhall find it given as the Reaſon, 1 Cor. 15. 21. Since [by Man] came death, [by Man] comes alſo the Reſurrection from the dead: God did it on purpoſe to anſwer ſin in its kind: It is there brought as the Reaſon of that great Council of God, of ſaving us by that Man Chriſt Jeſus. [Ἐπειδὴ γὰρ] a Reaſon it was, not as the ground of that his Council, but as concurring with, and fitly falling in with that his Council.

2. Furthermore, as by One Man ſin came upon all, ſo the gift of Grace by One Man hath abounded unto many, Rom. 5. 12, 15.

3. Yet further, As Satan uſed the Woman as an Inſtrument to work that one Man Adam unto that ſin, which by Him, not Her, is propagated: So God uſed the Woman to bring forth that ſame one Man Chriſt, who ſhould reſtore, and ſave us. This God had in his Eye, as appears plainly, in that to confound the Devil, he tells him (for if you obſerve it, unto the Serpent is that Speech directed) That the Seed of the Woman ſhould break the Serpents head: As if he had ſaid, I will ſpoil your Plot in uſing the Woman, you had better never have gone that way to work; the Seed of her ſhall break thy Head. And the Apoſtle himſelf hints it, for the honour of Women, 1 Tim. 2. ult. for having ſaid, verſe 14. that the Woman was firſt deceived, and firſt in the Tranſgreſſion, (there ſpeaking of that ſin of Eve as a reaſon of all Womens being excluded from all honourable Offices in the Church, and ſo laying low, and debaſing all Womankind) he adds notwithſtanding, that ſhe ſhall be ſaved: (that is, Womankind as well as Men) by, or for that bearing a Child [διὰ τῆς τεκνογονίας] namely Chriſt, in that One of their Sex did bring forth Chriſt to ſave us, even as One of their Sex overthrew us: Thus ſome of the Ancients, and Modern Divines alſo have taken it, that his Scope ſhould be, to compare the hand that Woman had, and the Service ſhe did, in ſaving Man, with that ill turn which ſhe did Man in tempting him to that ſin, which brought death upon all. And ſo indeed the Analogie or Proportion between theſe and the former words is more full and direct, and ad idem: For, Chap. 7.

1. So he compares the eminent Act of one Woman in Sinning, with the moſt eminent Act of a Woman in doing good.

2. It is ſo made the reaſon why Women ſhould be ſaved notwitſtanding: The Greek hath it, διὰ τῆς, &c. for that Child-bearing; there is an Article added, and [διὰ] is a Note of cauſation, as rendring a reaſon why Woman kind (though one of them damned Man) ſhould be ſaved, ſeeing they made a recompence; as he had alledged the other as a reaſon of their debaſement.

And Thirdly, Thus alſo it is more general, as reaching to the honour of all Women, as the other doth unto the diſhonour of all, whereas otherwiſe, that ordinary Child-bearing is but of Mothers only. I do not exclude that other Interpretation, that he ſpeaks of the proper Calling of Women, in which (as ſome read it) God hath ordained to ſave them, as in oppoſition to what he had ſaid of excluding them from ſpeaking and bearing Offices in the Church (thoſe high Callings) yet ſo, as I think, being taken in this ſenſe, rendreth it more for their honour, as more generally reaching all Women, even as Eves fall reacheth univerſally to their diſhonour: Whereas the Calling of Child-bearing reacheth but ſome of Women only, namely Mothers.

Fourthly, The way by which Adams Sin was derived, was by imputation, he repreſenting us all; and God to make us amends takes the ſame courſe to Juſtifie us by imputing, or reckoning Chriſts Righteouſneſs Ours, who repreſented us alſo in his Obedience.

Fifthly, Satan inſinuating a Temptation by Diſcourſe to the outward ear, deceived Eve, and ſhe through Unbelief liſting to his Temptation, fell, and ruined us: And God hath ordained in Recompenſe, the Preaching of the Goſpel, and hearing of it, to beget Faith, and Faith all Graces elſe, and ſo, to be the Inſtrument of ſaving us. The like correſpondent recompence (to inſtance in no more) hath God made in the thing in hand; by ordaining a ſucceſſion of his Elect in a Line, and an engrafting the Children into the Fathers Covenant; thereby ordering, that Generation ſhould in ſome reſpect be the Chanel and ſtream for his Free Grace to run into the Veſſels of Mercy: becauſe that Generation is, and was, the Inſtrument that conveyed Sin and the Curſe to us and ours: That ſo the Bleſſing might come in at the ſame door upon us, through which the Curſe entred: Only, as the Apoſtle ſays in that like Caſe which we inſtanced in, Rom. 5. That as by one Man ſin entred, ſo by one Man Grace; yet with a glorious difference on Graces part; ſo as, verſ. 15, 16. he gives a different glory to Grace: Not as the Offence, ſo is the Free Gift; the one entred upon all men, verſe 12. naturally and neceſſarily; but Grace comes upon them, and is received as a free gift, verſ. 16, 17, 18. So here, Propagation is uſed as the Chanel of Grace, and as the Chanel of Sin; but ſo to be underſtood, as with a [Servatis ſemper prærogativis gratiæ] with a [not as] by any Natural influence Generation hath, as it conveys ſin, naturally and neceſſarily: But this other is freely conveyed, and therefore often times is not derived until the Children be come to ripe years, and not at all to ſome of their Children; to ſhew, that Grace will be Grace in it; yet ſo, as God hath in a great meaſure freely entailed it to their Seed. And the reaſon why God delights to uſe the ſame ways to convey Grace which conveyed ſin, is,

1. By way of Compenſation, to make them amends, that they might be able to ſay, That all things are wrought about for their good.

And,

BOOK V.

And, Secondly, That the ſame things that tended moſt unto their hurt, ſhould be means of conveying the greateſt good.

Yea, Thirdly, Hereby he juſtifies his Courſe in conveying ſin; and takes off much of the ſeeming harſhneſs and inequality that wicked men lay to his charge therein, in that he uſeth the ſame way to derive a Bleſſing of Grace. If they quarrel the Imputation of anothers ſin, the Anſwer is ready, That God hath provided that we may be ſaved by the Imputation of anothers Righteouſneſs: If that ſeem harſh, that Men ſhould convey unto their Children Sin and Death together with their Being; and that Mens very iſſuing out of the Loins of Adam ſhould render them ſinful, and corrupt; how doth this lenifie it, that if they will turn to God, they may be made Inſtruments of conveying a Bleſſing to their Children greater than that Curſe, a Grace ſurpaſſing that ſin; (for ſo the Promiſe runs:) Why then, O Man, ſhouldſt thou quarrel againſt God!

Secondly, God therein ſhews forth the glory of his Wiſdom, that in thoſe very things wherein Satan dealt proudly, God ſhould go beyond him. Satan knowing the Curſe denounced by God, that if Adam fell, all his Children ſhould fall in him, and ſhould by a juſt Law have in their very Generation from him that ſin derived; thought he, Man's Fall will be ſuch a check and blemiſh unto God's proceedings, that it will quite ſpoil the Game, that it can never be played out; but will hold all Mankind, young and old, under an inevitable Law of being Damned, and that by a Law which God hath ſet; which Satan had put this Abſurdity now upon, that through that very thing by which they are made Men, they ſhould at once be made ſinful Men, at once nati, and damnati. But how does God circumvent and go beyond him herein, and not only removes out of Check, but gives him a Mate! He lets that Law ſtand in full force, and ſuffers all Mankind by Generation to be corrupted, and cares not, he having an Elect under hand among them (whom only he means to ſave, and who above all his Works, are known unto God from the beginning, Acts 15. 16.) whom he hath ſo ranked and muſtered in their Succeſſion and Genealogie written in his Book, that ſtill it may fall out, that by Generation this Bleſſing may be conveyed, and that in that Line Election may run. Thus did God's Wiſdom lye in ambuſhment to retort this Abſurdity back again on Sin and Satan, to their greater Confuſion, which is the moſt pure revenge and glorious victory that could be.

And this third and laſt Reaſon of the former Rule hints me to another Rule, by which I have obſerved God to have regulated his proceedings of Grace; which alſo holds in the matter in hand, and may be a further reaſon for it; and it is, That God hath made his proceedings of Grace ſuitable to, and juſtifiable by the like common proceedings and principles of Men one towards another; ſo as he will be able to juſtifie them according to the Principles taken up by, and current among Men themſelves, and to take in all ſorts of Reaſons to make good his ways. As for inſtance; That God ſhould love one Man, and ordain him a Veſſel of Honour, and not another; do not Kings the like? (Dan. 5. 19. And for the majeſty that he gave him, all people, nations, and languages trembled, and feared before him: whom he would, he ſlew, and whom he would, he kept alive, and whom he would, he ſet up, and whom he would, he put down.) And you quarrel not them. Does not the Potter take the ſame Lump, and make Veſſels of honour, and of diſhonour? Who art thou, O Man, that diſputeſt againſt God? Rom. 9. 21. Again, that for the Sin of Man the Creature ſhould be Curſed, and his Children fall from their Dignity with him: Do not Men ordain the like by a Law of Nations? namely, that Traytors Houſes be made Jakes, their Children accounted Tainted, and often times their whole Families ruined, and rooted out. So among the Perſians, and Grecians, and others. Yet again, That the Death and Satisfaction of another (namely Chriſt) ſhould be accepted to acquit us (which the Socinians can by no means ſwallow) is juſt by the conſent and ſuffrage of all Nations, when as the Party that ſatisfies for that other, ſhall be willing to it, it, and freely undertake it, (as Christ did) This we see in the Law of Hostages, whis is in force and use among all Nations; and when the Covenants are broken by those for whom they remain Hostages, they are justly slain, though in themselves Innocent: Now Christ became our Surety and an Hostage for us. Thus likewise, that we should be justified by the Righteousness of another, and have our sins imputed to him, and his obedience to us (which the Papist stomack at) is justifiable by all Laws of Men: which enact that the Wives Debts should be laid to the Husband. Now to bring this down to the Point in hand; that the Children of Godly Parents should be holy in our esteem; and that Gods Elect should have their Fathers Priviledge, it agrees but with the common Dictate of Nature in all Common-wealths, Cities, and Kingdoms, wherein the Children are born Free, when the Parents are so. The Children of Noble-Men are accounted Noble, of Gentlemen, Gentlemen, of Basely begotten, Base. The State of the Child follows the state and condition of the Parent in Civil things; and why might not God ordain, that in Spiritual Priviledges they should follow their state also, and the Children of Holy Men be, and be reckoned to be holy? Shall not God be as large in his favours, as Men in theirs? Yea, shall he not rather exceed them? Chap. 7.

CHAP. VIII.

The Uſes of the preceding Doctrine. What in General we all may be Inſtructed from it, to underſtand how largely God extends his Acts of Grace and Favour. The Uſes which the Children of Godly Parents are to make of this Doctrine. What Obligation is upon them to be holy indeed. What Encouragement they have to believe. The Uſes which belong to the Parents of ſuch Children. What their Duty is to God, and what their Carriage ought to be toward ſueh their Children.

THE USES of this great Doctrine, that hath ſo largely been inſiſted on, might be many, and diverſe, if I ſhould go about to draw Conſequences from the ſeveral Particulars that have been handled therein. I will only take ſuch as are proper to the General Doctrine it ſelf, from the Explication of it. The firſt Uſe ſhall be more General, to All ſorts of Chriſtians; the other more Particular, to godly Parents and their Children.

I. General Head of Uſes.

Uſe I. See how the Priviledges of Grace are ſtretched to the utmoſt extent that can ſtand with its honour: God loves ſo to do. In the Civil Law it is a Rule among Men, That Favores ſunt ampliandi; All Grants of Favour are to be the moſt candidly, largely, and favourably interpreted that may be. The Priviledge to Inherit was granted the Female as well as the Male; Numb. 27. from 1. to 8. This above all holds in the Law of Grace, wherein Priviledges are extended to the utmoſt: Yea, though many Caſes of Exception intervene, which haply may cauſe a Demur for a while, yet Grace in the end is prevalent, and will not be made void, but triumphs over all. The Experiment of this as manifeſtly appears by this Doctrine, as it hath been opened out of this 1 Cor. 7. as in any other Priviledge whatſoever. Let me preſent it to you by theſe ſteps, beginning at the loweſt and fundamental ſtep of Grace whereon God rears his other Priviledges of Grace.

It is much, that through Grace, a Sinner, and Enemy to God, ſhould be pardoned, and graciouſly accepted, and himſelf be juſtified, and live: Yea, Who is a God like our God, who pardoneth iniquity and ſin? But, that ever the Prayers, and Praiſes, and vows of a Sinner flowing from ſo defiled a heart, ſhould be accepted, and the fruits of his Soul well-pleaſing to God, is yet more wonderful; namely, that the evil of them ſhould not outweigh the little good that is in them, when as one ſin would forfeit all the Obedience of the moſt holy Angel performed from his firſt Creation: That God ſhould not ſet off the good in thoſe Actions we have done, to clear the back-reckonings of their evil; but that he ſhould thus reſolve with himſelf, If I vouchſafe to accept your Perſons, I will extend my Grace yet further, and accept your Actions alſo, and all that is good in them; yea, I will not only pardon the Sin of them, but Reward them too, and cut off none of the good that you have done for the evils ſake.

Yea

Yea further, God will take a Deſire, or Thought of ours, and amidſt the great heap of Evil, he will ſearch out the leaſt ſcrap of Good; as we ſearch for every Line of a dead Author of worth, among Scriblings, that nothing of his might periſh. Well, but this is not all that God will do for you; I will accept (ſays God) the Iſſues of your Bodies, (and this though you be Fathers of no more but the Body, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Hebr. 12. 9.) and thoſe Souls (which I joyned and put into thoſe Bodies) though born in ſin, ſhall notwithſtanding, for their Fathers ſake (who yet communicates the Body only, which is but the ſheath of the Soul, as Daniel calls it, Dan. 7. 15.) be converted, and made holy. Seeing I have begun to ſhew Grace to their Perſons, I will extend it yet further, even to all that belongs to them: Yea, though the Caſe be further ſuch, that theſe Children be begotten by Unbelievers, whoſe Seed I hate, and that my Children have but an half part in them; yet I will ſhew Mercy to them, and my Grace ſhall further prevail, not againſt the Child's own Sin only, but the other Parents Curſe alſo; that ſo Grace may every way be Grace. God will ſhew Grace in Caſes wherein Men will not; See Jer. 3. 1, 2. They ſay, If a man put away his Wife, and ſhe go from him, and become another mans, ſhall he return unto her again? ſhall not that Land be greatly polluted? but thou haſt played the harlot with many lovers: yet return again to me, ſaith the Lord. Lift up thine eyes unto the high places, and ſee where thou haſt not been lien with: in the ways haſt thou ſat for them as the Arabian in the wilderneſs, and thou haſt polluted the Land with thy whoredoms, and with thy wickedneſs. As there is an out-ſtretched Arm of Power, ſo of Grace alſo, that extends it ſelf to the utmoſt reach of kindneſs beyond all Oppoſitions, and carries out a Mercy to the full extenſion of it. When we firſt turn to God, all that we then think of, is to have our ſins pardoned, and we wonder that God ſhould vouchſafe ſo great a Mercy to us. But doſt thou wonder at this? Do but give thy ſelf up to Free Grace, and thou ſhalt ſee greater works than theſe: Thou ſhalt ſee even ſins turned to thy good, thy Perſon in favour with the great God, and advanced to the height of glory to ſit upon Chriſt's Throne. If a Beggar were to be married to a Prince, ſhe would think it a great matter to have good Lodging, and Meat enough; but if he take her to be his Wife, ſhe muſt be a Queen, and have all a Queens Royalties and Attendance. The Prodigal thought it a great matter to get but meat enough in his Fathers Houſe, and to be but as an hired Servant: but doth his Father mean to entertain him again, it ſhall be, as a Son, and if ſo, he will then run to meet him, and make a Feaſt, and ſet him at the upper end of the Table, and manifeſt expreſſions of Joy: If he ſhews love, he will ſhew it indeed. And as it falls out here in this Caſe in hand, that Grace carries it, and proves a Bleſſing to a Believers Child againſt the other Parents Curſe, when he is an Unbeliever: So doth Free Grace many times procure many a Bleſſing for us againſt the many ſtops, and bars, and exceptions which our ſins do put in againſt the Promiſes of God: Grace, like a mighty River, will break, and bear down all before it (that interpoſeth it ſelf to interrupt the current of it) and will in the end work it ſelf out. The Sin of Man ſhall not make the Promiſe of God of none effect, Rom. 3. 3. Jacob was bleſt by Iſaac, but he got it by a lye, which (one would think) ſhould have forfeited the Bleſſing; and had it not been the Bleſſing of the Covenant of Grace, it had: 'Tis true (ſays Iſaac trembling) he hath deceived me; but he is bleſt, and he ſhall be bleſt, Geneſ. 27. 33. Though Men will be Men, yet God will be God, and his Gifts and Grants without Repentance. He will not recall them. If the Promiſe be given out of Grace, then Grace will ſhew it ſelf Grace, and remove Sin, the obſtacle of its receiving. The very Salvation of the Elect is often through their Sins put to a great venture: And the Apoſtle Peter ſays, The Righteous are ſcarcely ſaved, (though certainly) there do ſuch ſtrong Oppoſitions fall out, and ſuch Diverſions of the Stream; and yet Grace works it out, and bears all down: It ſeems indeed oft times to carry it hardly and narrowly, but ſtill it carries it. There is an [elſe] put upon it, as here upon their Childrens holineſs. The Children of but one Parent, who is a Believer, are ſurely holy; indeed they ſcape narrowly a being unclean, yet Grace helps them out: and the Reaſon is, becauſe 'tis Grace, and will ſhew it ſelf to be ſo. And therefore when God, out of Grace, hath begun to ſhew favour to a Man, and to accept him, he is drawn on by Grace to pardon thus far, and then, further, and in the end ſo far, that it is to wonderment. No Man can ſay where Grace will end; as they ſay of ſome rich Man, There is no end of his Wealth known; ſo I may ſay of Grace, You know no end of it. The Grants of Grace run without Ifs, and Ands, and Buts; there are no Exceptions in them: See Nehem. 9. how many Yets of Mercies, and Buts of Sinnings there are, and yet Grace carries it through All, from verſe 17. to ult. And as Solomon ſays, That None can ſtand before Envy, Prov. 27. 4. Wrath, though it be cruel, yet may be mitigated; Soft words pacifie wrath: Though it be an Inundation (as the word is) yet the ſwelling of it may be ſtopped; But who can ſtand before Envy? ſeeing no Conſideration can ſlake, or aſſwage it: For even that good which is in the Party envied, (that doth aſſwage wrath) doth but provoke Envy the more; What then can there be to allay it? So now may I ſay of Grace; No Prejudice, no Conſideration to the contrary can ſtand before it: But it takes advantages the more to ſhew it ſelf to be Grace, even from Sin, which ſhould provoke it to turn and avert it ſelf from us: When therefore what ſhould provoke, is turned into a Motive to draw it forth in the more pity to us, to ſave us, in that Caſe the rather, even to ſhew, that Grace conquers; then, who, or what can ſtand before it?

II. General Head of Uſes.

The Second ſort of Uſes, concerns the Children of Parents who are Godly:

1. This Doctrine lays a great and binding obligation and weighty provocation upon them to be godly indeed: For otherwiſe (like Reuben) what a Dignity do they fall from? Even from the eſtimation once had of them that they were holy (which is the higheſt excellency in the world) to be accounted ſinful and unclean: which is more than for one who hath been eſteemed and honoured as a Prince, and in hopes was ſuch, to be now caſt out as vile, and abject, and as the Son of the Bondwoman, who ſhall not inherit with the Free. They run alſo into the greateſt unnaturalneſs and unworthineſs of carriage towards God that may be; I call it ſo, for it is the expreſſion uſed Acts 13. 46. They caſt off God the God of their Fathers, which no People ever did. It is the Argument of an whole Chapter, wherein God pleads it with the Jews, Jerem. 2. 9. [I will yet plead with you,] he enters into a Law-ſuit with them, and complains that they (the Children) ſhould forſake the God of their Fathers, whom he had entred into Covenant with; verſe 2. He firſt expoſtulates it with them; what iniquity have you and your Fathers found in me, (verſe 5.) that you ſhould forſake me thus? For which of all my kindneſs to you, and to your Fore-fathers, do you leave me? And he empannels a Jury againſt them, out of all Nations? [Paſs over all the Iſle of Chittim] that is, Greece, Cyprus, and the other Ilands in the Mediterranian Sea, which were then the moſt ſuperſtitious Nations and the moſt firmly addicted to the worſhip of their Gods, of any other, [and ſend to Kedar] which was of all Nations the moſt barbarous; and yet [they have not changed the Gods of their Fathers] but my People have changed me their glory; be aſtoniſht O ye Heavens at this &c. It is ſo unnatural a thing, that he calls upon the Frame of Nature to expreſs its ſenſe of it; he bids the Sun look pale at it, as a Man in aſtoniſhment doth; and the Sphears to let fall their Stars, and become deſolate at ſuch an horrid ſight as this. And that their Practice was degenerating from their Fore-fathers, appears, verſe 21. where God ſays, he planted their Fathers a Noble Vine, wholly a right Seed; (for all the Patriarks were Godly) now then how art thou turned into the degenerate plant of a ſtrange Vine unto me, the Children (though of ſo noble a root) becoming wild Branches. The Root was holy, the Branches ſinful, and poiſonous. As nothing adds a greater embelliſhment to vertue than the continuance of it in a Race and ſucceſſion from Father to Son (for Nobility is but the continuance of Vertue, Riches, and Honour in a Family) ſo nothing more aggravates the Vices of Children more than their degeneration from their Parents. And the ſins of the Fathers will be recompenced upon the Children, if they walk in their Fathers ſteps: So will the Holineſs of the Fathers encreaſe the Childrens Sins and Puniſhments, if they Prove not anſwerably holy. How often comes it in to make up the meaſure of the ſinfulneſs of each of thoſe wicked Kings, [He walkt not in the ways of David his Father!] as well as [he walkt in the ways of Jeroboam his Father] as it was ſaid concerning the Kings of Iſrael) what? Prove a Rebell, a Traitour, to thy Father's God? So you have it in Moſes Song, Exod. 15.2. and therefore ſay, as they there, The Lord is my ſtrength and ſong, and he is become my Salvation: he is my God, and I will prepare him an habitation, my Fathers God, and I will exalt him. You ſee he riſeth higher upon that double relation, He is my Fathers God, and I will exalt him: What wilt thou prove a Traitor to to thy Fathers Friend? This is the higheſt ingratitude that can be. See what Solomon ſays in Prov. 27. 10. Thy own Friend, and thy Fathers Friend forſake not: For ſuch a Friendſhip is the higheſt commendation of Friendſhip, and ſuch a Friend hardly to be found; and therefore it is the part of a ſordid and ingrateful Spirit to leave ſuch a Friend. God was a Friend to thy Father, made a Covenant with him to be the God of him, and his Seed, and offers himſelf to be thy Friend; and wilt thou forſake him? Solomon we ſee, renewed the League of amity with Hiram, 1 Kings 5.1. 12. meerly becauſe Friendſhip had been between him and his Father David; and ſo do thou with God, who then will love thee for thy own ſake, and double his love upon thee for thy Fathers ſake; (ſo thou ſhalt be beloved for both) as the Phraſe is, Rom. 11. 28. So Solomon is called beloved of God, becauſe of his Father David, 2 Sam. 2. 25. and ſo thou ſhalt have a Double Portion of Love from him, and be his Benjamin, in compariſon of other Saints. Chap. 8.

A Second Uſe to ſuch Children, is when they are Converted, to provoke them unto more holineſs. Where there are more Encouragements and more helps, there lies a greater Obligation unto Obedience. God hath provided for your Eaſe in the Point of Believing: He hath prevented Doubts, and Temptations, and the turmoil of your Spirits that way, that ſo you might lay it out the more an other way. He hath eaſed you in the work of Believing, that you might ſpend the more Strength in works of Obedience. Again, as your Obedience ſhall be firſt accepted before others; ſo you ſhould be the firſt and moſt forward of all others in matters of Obedience. Being Worthies, you ſhould fight in the Fore-front; and though others of your rank do worthily, you ſhould exceed them all. How does the continuation of Ancient Nobility in a Family raiſe the Spirit to more Noble Actions than others of an inferiour Birth aſpire to? Their Fathers Blood boils in their veins, their vertues in their Hearts: So let your Fathers, or Mother Graces: And the longer the ſucceſſion hath held in a right Line, the more forcible ſhould your provocation be, not to degenerate. There is no Diſpoſition in Nature, but it is found in, and heightned by Grace; God takes in all Natural Diſpoſitions, and conforms Gracious Diſpoſitions ſuitable and like unto them, as the Rules and Diſpoſitions of Friendſhip between Man and Man he takes in to the ways of Grace, and expects that we ſhould obſerve them toward himſelf, and be as Friendly unto him, as ever we would be to Men. And ſo he takes in Book V. in this Diſpoſition of Nature alſo: There ſhould therefore be a correſpondent proportion found in Grace: And look what Nobility would work in Men ſprung from Noble Parents, to do beyond others in a Natural way, that let this Royal Priviledge draw from your Spirits in a Spiritual way. Be you unto God above others, a Royal Generation, or Kinred, as Peter ſpeaks, 1 Pet. 2. 9. and like Davids worthies, excelling all his other Soldiers. Reckon your ſelves to be the Patricij, the Nobles of this Kingdom, and behave your ſelves accordingly. And conſider, that your Engagements are double, to thoſe of other Men: Even as Courtiers reckon themſelves to be doubly the Servants of the King; not as his Subjects only, but as belonging to his Family, in a more proper way: So are you doubly become the Servants of God; and therefore ſhould do him double Service. Thus David having a Godly Mother reckoned that as a ſpecial Obligation binding him to ſerve God. So Pſal. 116. 16. Truly Lord I am thy Servant, I am thy Servant: he ſpeaks it twice, as acknowledging a double Obligation: And what thoſe Tyes were, follows; the one Perſonal, Thou haſt looſed my Bonds; (given me my Life) the other relating to his Parents, I am the Son of thy Handmaid. It was the Law, that the Sons of Bondwomen ſhould be Servants by Birth, ſo Iſhmael being begotten on a Handmaid, a Bond-woman, was a Bond-Man by Birth; Geneſ. 21. 10. So Exod. 21. 4. The Law is, that the Children which a Bondwoman bears be her Maſters: So now doth God challenge a ſpecial propriety in you. You are doubly his Servants: Servants in that he hath ſaved you, looſed your Bands; and Servants in that you are born to him in his Houſe, and are the Children of his Servants. You have therefore a double Tie to do double work to what others do: And you ſhall have double Wages, and be Benjamins.

Uſe 3. This Doctrine may ſerve as an Encouragement and Direction alſo, to the Children of Godly Parents, and be exceeding helpful to them in their Believing, and coming to Chriſt; both at their firſt converſion, and afterwards in Temptations. It may ſerve to eaſe them of much of the difficulty of the work of Believing; and may make that hard labour and travail more gentle, and prevent many of thoſe Throwes which others groan under. To clear which, I will firſt ſhew, what ingrediency it ought not to have, and what furtherance you are to deny to receive from it; which a carnal, preſumptuous heart may be apt to do: And Secondly, what right and lawful uſe you may make of this Priviledge, and in what ſtead it may ſtand you in Believing.

1. You are not to make it a Founnation of your Faith, either of coming to Chriſt, or believing Chriſt is yours, as the carnal Jews did: [we have Abraham to our Father] Joh. 8. 39. and therefore have God to our Father, as verſ. 31. For whilſt you have not the Faith and works of Abraham, you have the Devil to your Father; ver. 44. That was the anſwer to them then, and will be Chriſts Anſwer unto them at the Latter Day. And if there be any Priviledge, it will be this; that thou remaining Unregenerate, ſhalt even be damned firſt; So Rom. 2. 9. Tribulation and anguiſh to every Soul that doth evil, to the Jew firſt, and alſo to the Gentile: To the Children of godly Parents firſt, and then unto others of Mankind. Do you ſtand with me upon your Birth? ſays God to the Carnal Jews, Ezek. 16. 3. Thy birth is of the Land of Canaan: that is, 'tis all one to me, as if thou hadſt been of the Inhabitants of the Land, that were accurſed, The Seed of Canaan, and as if thy Father were an Amorite, and thy Mother an Hittite. Your Spirits therefore muſt be emptied of all ſuch Carnal props, as grounds of Believing to build your Faith upon; and you muſt be brought nakedly to cloſe with Gods Free Grace alone; and ſee God to put forth as free an Act of his Grace, and to be as much at liberty in ſaving you, or refuſing you, as in ſaving any one that is an Alien from God, never ſo much a Stran- ger to this Commonwealth of Iſrael: In this reſpect there is no difference. So the Apoſtle tells us; but All (both Jew and Gentile) of whom he had before ſpoken) have ſinned: And there is no difference, when it comes to the matter of being juſtified; they are juſtified freely by his Grace: So Rom. 3. 23, 24. Thou muſt ſee thy dependance upon Free Grace to be as great as any Mans, and lay thy ſelf before the Throne and Soveraignty of it, and ſubmit to the Sentence of it; and thy ſelf to be as much beholding to it, to ſave Thee, as the Turks and Heathens. And the ground of this may be fetched from what was before delivered. For, That you are the Children of godly Parents, is not the ground of your Election, but the conſequent of it. God choſe you out of the Lump of Men, not reſpecting any thing in you, only he ſo ordered it, that his Elect ſhould come of Parents godly, rather than others. Now it is certain, that That only which had influence into God's heart as the Motive of Election, That only is to have influence into our Faith at our firſt Believing, as the ground of it. What God lookt not at to ſway his choice by, That Faith is not to look at as the foundation of our confidence. God choſe Thee, for nothing in thy ſelf, or in thy Parents; and thou muſt look at nothing in thy ſelf, or in thy Parents, for which thou Believeſt, and reſteſt on Him. Chap. 8.

Nor, 2. Is it to be lookt at as an Infallible Sign or Evidence, that is the proper Conſequent of Election; (ſuch as Graces of the Spirit are) ſo as thou ſhouldſt be able to argue thy Election from it, as from the qualifications or diſpoſitions of Grace which are wrought by Converſion; which are as Proprium quarto modo, infallible Characters of it. Was not Eſau Jacob's Brother? ſays God, Malach. 1. 2. yea, a Twin of the ſame Womb; yea, the elder Brother, and yet hated, and Jacob loved! God hath a Reprobation among them, as well as an Election. All are not Iſrael, who are of Iſrael: neither becauſe they are the Seed of Abraham, are they all Children, Rom. 9. 6, 7. The Apoſtle utters together both theſe things which I have now ſpoken. It is therefore neither a Sign, as verſe 6. implies; nor the reaſon of Election, as verſe 7. But although it cannot, neither ought to be the ground of your Faith either of theſe ways; yet it may ſtill ſerve you as a great furtherance to your Faith other ways, and in other reſpects, both when you come firſt to Believe, and likewiſe in Temptations. The Mother of Faith it is not; but it may be a Midwife to it, and ſo facilitate that hard Labour. Many things ſerve to the furthering, and eaſing of the work of Faith, which yet are not in the leaſt way made the ground of it: As for inſtance, The very Example of others being ſaved, who were as great Sinners, gives great relief and encouragement to the heart of a Sinner; and yet it is no way a ground of Confidence for our ſelves. So Paul ſays, He was made a Pattern, and hung out as a Flag of Mercy to them who ſhould believe hereafter, 1 Tim. 1. 16. to toll others in. And therefore thoſe who firſt believed, had an harder pull of it; as Eve at firſt, and Abraham afterward, becauſe they had no Examples before them to lead the way; and therefore, for the eminency of their Faith, they deſerved the Name, the One, Of the Mother of all who live by Faith, and the Other, Of Father of them. And as thoſe who made the firſt Voyages to the Eaſt and Weſt-Indies, found their Adventures fuller of hazards and difficulties, than thoſe ſince have, whoſe Voyages, through their Directions who went afore them, are made more eaſie: So it is in the work of Faith, through the Examples of others. In this your Paſſage from Death to Life, though you are all to go through the ſame Straits, (through a Work of Humiliation, and an apprehenſion of your ſelves as loſt, &c.) yet you may have, both the help of ſome Directions, which may keep you from many Shelves and Sands, wherein others have been grounded, and ſtuck faſt; and whereby your Souls may be ſo ſteadily guided, as to be kept from being Stranded, where many others have been before you; you may alſo have the advantage of a Wind more fair, a more direct Gale; whereas others have but a ſmall Side-wind, a little Breath to further them; which makes their Voyage more long and tedious. In Faith there are two things to be brought about, and both of them with much difficulty.

Firſt, To convince the Underſtanding of the Truth of the Promiſes; that God is in earneſt, and ſo ſerious in them as he is, and that is indeed to ſave Sinners; and that Chriſt Dyed to that end and purpoſe, and is moſt hearty and real in it: And to bring the Underſtanding to a full Perſwaſion of this, is a great work, and of a trying difficulty; and therefore the more Arguments can be brought to confirm this, the better.

The Second, is to bring the Will off, to caſt it ſelf upon Chriſt, and Perſonally to come in unto him. And for that, the more hopes and Perſonal Encouragements you can give the Party, that God may intend him, the more you further this Act of Faith, (as by the more Arguments that other) the more you quicken his Endeavours, and the more chearfully and ſtrongly, and with the fuller Sail will that Soul come in, and caſt it ſelf upon Chriſt, and wholly reſign up it ſelf unto him. Now it is this latter which moſt ſtick ſo much at through diſcouragements, by reaſon of the Uncertainties, and improbabilities, and utter unlikelihoods that God may intend them. Wherefore the nearer the Promiſes can be brought unto any, by perſwading them that God may mean them rather than any other in the World, that Act of Faith muſt needs come off the more eaſily, and roundly. You know, that that which at firſt draws in any ones Soul, to caſt it ſelf upon Chriſt, is the indefiniteneſs of the Promiſe, that they are not excluded: God means ſome Body, and what know I, but that he may intend me, as well as another? As in that 4. of Hebrews, verſe 6. and 11. compared; Seeing ſome muſt enter in——let us therefore labour to enter into that reſt. And look how much more or leſs indefinite the Promiſe is, and how much more or leſs expreſs and particular; the more or leſs hope and encouragements are given: And the more or leſs hopes are given, the more or leſs eaſy, or difficult is the work of Faith made in this reſpect. Now the Promiſes upon which others of the Elect come in, of how vaſt an indefiniteneſs and compaſs are they, how wide doth God ſpeak in them? As in thoſe [good will to Men; Chriſt came to ſerve Sinners, &c.] when as he whom God means, is (it may be) one of an hundred thouſand. And therefore they yield but far off hopes, and a remote [it may be] yet are they ſuch as carry a juſt ground with them to put any one upon the venture. In a Race (ſays the Apoſtle) though but one obtains, yet all run; 1 Cor. 9. 24. They for a corruptible Crown venture thus: how much more ſhould we for an incorruptible? Though it be 10000. to one, yet it is worth it, and a juſt ground to move, and draw on the Soul to it: Even to put his mouth in the duſt if ſo be there may be hope; as Lament. 3. 29. If there be never ſo remote an [it may be] if there be but a [what knoweſt thou] or never ſo dubious a conjecture; you ſee it is made a juſt ground of endeavouring to ſave an other; as 1 Cor. 7. verſe 16. therefore how much more of venturing, and caſting ones ſelf upon Chriſt for a mans own Salvation? But what a ſlender ſtill Gale, what a ſmall and poor Breath of Hope doth thus afford to help the Soul forward? Such are helped but with a little help, as David ſays in another Caſe. But the Promiſes which are made to you are who are the Children of godly Parents, although they be but indefinite ſtill; yet they are ſo expreſs, and limited to ſo narrow a Compaſs, that they bring the hopes of Salvation a thouſand times more near to you: It being ſo near an Univerſal (as you have heard) it is not One of a Thouſand, but Two to One. I may as Chriſt ſaid, The Kindom of God is come near you; very near you; when God takes the moſt of his Elect out of you, and ſometimes a whole Family of you. When a King was to be choſen out of all the Tribes, it was held ground enough for every Tribe, and every Man of them, to preſent themſelves before the Lord; though in the end the Lot was to fall but upon one Man: and ſo Samuel bad them do; 1 Sam. 10. 19. Now therefore preſent your ſelves before the Lord, by your Tribes, and by your Thouſands: For why? it gave a hope (though but a ſlender and remote one) unto every Man, that he might be King; yet it was All Iſrael, the Thouſands of Iſrael to One. But then when the Tribe of Benjamin was taken, this gave a nearer hope to every Family and Man of that Tribe: This was but a few to One unto what the other had had before, eſpecially ſeeing there were ſeweſt of them: This was a Contraction to a narrower Compaſs: But when it came to the Family of Maari, how much nearer came it then, to every one of that Family? though it was to fall but upon one Man, yet how great hopes muſt it needs give, as being thought every Mans then: Every one then had a fair Caſt for a Kingdom (none of them then knowing that Saul was the Man, though Samuel did;) Why? Such hopes, and far larger, do theſe Promiſes give to your Tribe, to your Family, comparatively to other Men: Fore here is a greater Kingdom, and your Tribe (as I may call it) conſiſts of the feweſt of any other Tribe, or ſort of Mankind, compared with it. And this Crown is not to be ſet upon the Head of One only, but ſometimes upon All of a Family: O conſider, what a fair pull here is for Heaven; what would other humbled Souls give for your Lot? (as Heaven is called, Coloſſ. 1. 12.) What a fair Gale of Hope have you to fill your Sales with? How many Points of the Compaſs hath it on your ſide? There are but Two ſorts of Promiſes that I know of, that are indefinite, and do yet bring down Salvation ſo near, and to ſo narrow a Compaſs. Chap. 8.

The Firſt ſort thoſe make which are of ſpecial Invitation, as that in Matth. 11. ult. [Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden, &c.] and that [Ho, every one that thirſteth, &c.] Theſe bring it near: for whereas others are invited but in the Crowd, as All were unto the Wedding; Theſe have a more ſpecial, ſolemn, and particular Imitation by Name: As in Funerals, common People and Neighbours have but an Indefinite and General Invitation; but Thoſe of better Rank are ſpecially invited, and called forth by Name. Theſe Promiſes therefore give a ſpecial encouragement to One that is weary and heavy laden: But ſtill ſo, as you are to underſtand, that even ſuch Promiſes, and ſuch Qualifications in you are not to give a ground to your Faith, nor to ſerve as infallible Evidences that Chriſt is yours; that you ſhould ſo take a comfort of eaſe from them, as many have done, to their ruin. It is but the comfort of a ſpecial Invitation to come. The Promiſe of Eaſe it ſelf is made to Coming [come unto me] only in the mean time it may much eaſe the weary and heavy laden, in that they are in an eſpecial manner invited to come; for it brings the Promiſe of Salvation very near to them.

But, Secondly, There are Promiſes (as of a ſpecial Invitation, ſo) of ſpecial Deſignation; which deſign and point out a ſort of Mankind, out of whom God hath his Elect; and ſuch are theſe, made to the Children of godly Parents. And it is as if God had pointed, and ſaid, In that Maſs or Lump do the greateſt part of my Elect lye. There is not any ſort of Mankind ſingled out with ſo ſpecial a deſignation. It is like the Star over the Houſe where Chriſt was, which deſigned the Place of the Meſſias abode. So theſe Promiſes ſet over the Houſes and Families of godly Men, do help us to find out where Election lies. And as that Star helpt the Wiſe Men to find out the Meſſiah; ſo may theſe Promiſes help ſuch Children to come to the Meſſiah the ſooner, and with the leſs difficulty.

BOOK V.

More Particularly, If you would know what ſingular help it may afford you in that Act of Faith, of Coming to Chriſt, and of caſting, and adventuring your ſelves upon Chriſt.

1. The Conſideration of it may alone ſtand you in ſtead againſt all Carnal Reaſonings, and objections againſt your ſelves what ever; which do exceedingly puzzle, and hinder others. This Conſideration will quite cut off the Heads of them all at once; and is a great help, though there were no other in our way to Chriſt; in which there are a great many ſtumbling-blocks laid by Carnal Reaſon, that keep Men off, and become the greateſt hinderance to Believing, Iſai. 57. 14. caſt ye up, caſt ye up, take the ſtumbling-blocks out of the way of my People: He ſpeaks Literally of the great obſtacles that were in view againſt their return from Babilon; even a great Monarchy lying in their way, which was firſt to be removed. But he aims under the Type thereof, at the hinderances in the way of broken hearts to Chriſt; as appeareth by the 16, 17. and 19. verſes. For he ſpeaks of giving Comfort to broken hearts, and Creating the fruit of the lips, peace, &c. Now in the way of ſuch, (you know) there lie a thouſand Objections and carnal reaſonings againſt themſelves, which their fleſhly Reaſon (ignorant of Gods way, and of his freeneſs in Pardoning) ſuggeſts, as things ſeeming to make it utterly improbable, that God will ſave them: And thoſe are the ſtumbling-blocks he there means. What, me? (will ſuch a Soul ſay) ſo great a Sinner as I? whom God hath ſuffered to live ſo long in Sin? That have ſo often refuſed to come in, after ſo many enlightnings? that have had ſo many falſe works upon my heart already? That have layn ſo long under Temptations? That have had no enlargements theſe many years? What me? A likely matter! No, no, If God had a mind to ſave me, he would never have dealt ſo with me; his Carriage towards me looks not as if he ever meant me any good. Thus the ſtranger objected, Iſai. 56. 3. [The Lord hath utterly ſeparated me from his People] I am a Gentile, a Dog, and God means not to ſave me. Thus the Eunuch, I am a dry Tree, &c. Iſai. 56. 3. There are Millions of ſuch Carnal Reaſonings as theſe, which do mightily hinder the work of Faith; being as ſo many Shelves of Sand, on which the Soul ſticks faſt aground; and off from which we have much a do to help Men. Well, but if thou beeſt the Child of a Godly Believing Parent, this Conſideration alone may be put into the Ballance againſt a thouſand ſuch: For why! that alone is a greater probability that thou art Elected, than all thoſe put together are able to make improbabilities to the contrary: It may weigh them all down. It brings the Promiſe ſo neer thee, within ſo little of thee, that I may ſay, as in that 57, Iſai. 19. the Phraſe is, whereas others are afar off, and have many ſtumbling-blocks in their way, Thou art near: The Prophet ſpeaks in the Language of the State of the Jews then, in the Babyloniſh Captivity, which was the Type of the times under the Goſpel (as appears by the Apoſtles uſing of that Phraſe; Epheſ. 2. 17.) ſome of the Jews were diſperſed far off among the Ammonites, and Moabites; and they had greater obſtacles, and diſcouragements to Return: But ſome of them were ſtill in the Land; the Poorer ſort were to Till it, yet had not a Peaceable Conditions; and they were neer now; God would ſettle Both in the Land, with Peace. And ſo Epheſ. 2. 17. (in the Anti-Type) ſome are ſaid to be afar off, and ſome near: Such were the Jews; and the Children of Godly Parents are ſuch: For I reckon them in reſpect to others, to be as the Jews then were to the Gentiles; And theſe have fewer obſtacles in their way: They are in the Land (the Church) already, and ſo are nearer to Faith, and Peace, having their hinderances removed to their hand, and their way made clear, and ſmooth. This Conſideration may ſo lighten thy Veſſel, as that thou mayſt Sail over all ſuch Shelves, which others being heavy laden with many ſad and weighty improbabilities, are often Stranded upon. Chap. 8.

But, Secondly, It moreover gives a ſpecial Encouragement alſo, in that there is a ſpecial Deſignation of Election, (as was ſaid) and that in Two reſpects:

For, 1. Where there is a ſpecial Deſignation of Election, there is a ſpecial Invitation included, and more alſo; it hath the form of both: There may be ſuppoſed an Invitation without a Deſignation; but this ſpecial Deſignation includes an Invitation under it. So as, Thou art more ſolemnly and particularly invited than any other: Even as (you heard) Thoſe that are weary and heavy laden are. And if thou beeſt heavy laden alſo, then both in that Thou art heavy laden, and an Elects Child alſo, Thou art doubly invited. Now that to the Children of Believers, as ſuch, belongs a ſpecial Invitation, appears, in that they come under the ſame Covenant and Priviledge that the Jews did by virtue of their being Sons of Abraham, (till they broke themſelves off) to whom therefore, (though not holy when Infants, nor yet when grown up to riper years, as yet Converted) the Goſpel was firſt to be preached. So Chriſt bad his Diſciples, and calls the Word the Childrens Bread. And ſo after Chriſt's Aſcenſion they practiſed; encouraging them to Repent and Believe, being prickt in their hearts, by a ſpecial Deſignation, Acts 2. 38, 39. For the Promiſe is to you and your Children. And Chap. 3. 25. Ye are the Children of the Prophets, and of the Covenant, and unto you firſt (mark the word) God having raiſed up his Son Jeſus, ſent him to bleſs you, in turning away every one of you from his iniquities. Yea, though there was the greateſt ground for the greateſt Objection againſt them; and carnal Reaſon might ſuggeſt the ſtrongeſt Arguments againſt them, that ever againſt any: For it might ariſe in their hearts to think, This Chriſt have we Crucified; a bar that of all others might make them exclude themſelves. And ſo Peter tells them, verſ. 23. This Chriſt have you crucified and ſlain: and ſo verſe 36. They likewiſe were the very Men who had a hand in it; and yet for all this, he puts this into the Ballance againſt all, and invites them firſt. Now I parallel the Condition of theſe Jews in the new moulding up of Chriſtian Churches, with that of the Children of godly Parents under the Goſpel, though unconverted. Now they are not to be reckoned holy, and ſo Members of a Church, ſimply becauſe they are Children of ſuch; even as thoſe Jews were not admitted into thoſe new Chriſtian Churches till actually Converted. Therefore, verſe 47. [God added of them to the Church ſuch as ſhould be ſaved] (though they were Members of the Jewiſh Typical Church which then ſtood, yet not of the Chriſtians.) Notwithſtanding, whilſt they remained in their Natural Condition, this was due to them, above any other, as a Priviledge, namely, a ſpecial Invitation: So Acts 13. 46. Paul ſays, It was neceſſary that the Word of God ſhould firſt be ſpoken to you, till you break your ſelves off (as they) by envious oppoſition, verſe 45. and putting it from you, judged your ſelves unworthy of everlaſting life. Which (I take it) is the Unbelief meant, Rom. 11. 20. that breaks you off; which is not ſimply Unbelief, but an envious Oppoſition againſt it, when yet the Promiſe may belong to you.

You therefore who are young, the Breaſts of whoſe Virginity the World has not yet preſt, who yet may be preſented to Chriſt ſpotleſs, and undefiled, do you come in to Chriſt; He invites and entreats you in a ſpecial manner; He likewiſe reſerves the firſt of his Love for you; you ſhall have the flower of it. In Marriage it is held a great matter to be the firſt Love: Such ſhall you be to Chriſt, if you come in betimes, and ſo ſhall you have a choice reward; as Rom. 2. 10. He will give glory, honour, and peace to every man who worketh good (yet) to the Jew firſt, and alſo to the Gentile: So to you firſt (who have the Jews Priviledge) thoſe of you Book V. who are under a work of Bondage, and weary of your Natural Condition, come to Christ: I may say to you, as the Disciple said to that blind Man, Mark 10.49. Be of good comfort, He calleth you: you are doubly invited, both as you are weary and heavy laden, and as the Children of Believers also: and therefore you may promise your selves a double welcome.

2. A second Encouragement that this affords is, That where there is such a special Designation of Election, there is a greater certainty that many (yea haply the most) of such shall obtain. Whereby such a special Designation hath also thus much more in it, than a bare Invitation: That an Invitation does not imply a certainty of obtaining [many are called (or invited) when few are chosen] but a Designation doth. Now this must needs be a great encouragement; even as it would be to all the Children of a Noble Family, that a People, or Common-wealth should so oblige themselves to it in particular, as certainly to choose their Kings and Princes out of it (as in Sweden they have done out of the Gustavian Family,) not being tyed to the Eldest, to choose him, but unto the Family, to choose some one out of it: So as, there were a certainty of some of them their being Kings, and Princes. The Hopes that every one would have in such a Case, how would they raise their spirits, and make them observant of their carriage towards all, and to enoble their Education, by striving to excel each other in glorious Atchievements, insinuating themselves into the hearts of the People, and in all plausible respects complying with them, as Absalon did? Now just so it is here; God hath entailed Heaven on your Families, though in an indefinite, yet certain way; so as, not one, but many of you shall certainly be Kings; you are now Heirs of Life: How therefore should this quicken you, above all other ranks of Mankind, and raise your spirits, and set an edge on your Endeavours? The more certain that your hopes are, the more strong let your endeavours be; like Merchants, who, where there is certain hopes of Gain, will make the greater Adventures: We find the like in Colledges, where there useth (by the Statutes of the House) to be such a special Designation as this is, singling out some Counties and Shires, out of which their Fellows and Scholars shall be chosen, and that most certainly: And when there are Places vacant, how doth this whet the industry and endeavours of all those Students who are of such Shires, making them to Study harder than others, and (as Paul says of himself) to profit more than many of their Equals of their own Nation; and outstripping others to be so approved for their Learning, as to obtain the Place? So should this Encouragement provoke, and stimulate you above all other Men, and also to exceed one an other, in striving who should first get into Christ: For know, that the endeavours of some of you shall certainly not be in vain: For God assuredly hath an Elect among you: Some of you will most infallibly get to Heaven.

The Third way whereby it may help your Faith, is; that when you come to plead for your Lives and Souls before God (as when you are humbled you will, as much as condemned Men ever did for their Lives) then this puts into your Mouths a Plea to use to God before the Throne of his Grace. I say not, that thou mayst plead it as a qualification for which God should respect thee, or shew the favour; For his Election is not swayed by it, or founded on it: Thou must leave the casting thy condition to the arbitrary, soveraign Freedom of his Grace, as much as any Sinner else upon Earth: But yet, (state it rightly) thou mayst plead it, and make a strong Plea of it too: as

First, Thou mayst make it a good and full occasion emboldning thee the more, to come into Gods presence, and the rather to do it, because of this.

Secondly,

Secondly, thou mayſt further make a very fair Tale for thy ſelf, out of it, and ſay to him, Thou Lord haſt given me this Light into, and inckling about thy Decrees; Thy Word tells me, that this Inheritance of Heaven is eſtated, and bequeathed by thee to the Children of thy Children; and that thou haſt delighted to draw thine Elect through the Loins of thine Elect; and ſo, thy Promiſes run much to them: Lo therefore, O Lord, thy Servant preſents himſelf before thee, as one of thoſe, and extracted out of ſuch, and ſo not knowing but that this Eſtate may belong to me; and do come to thee who keepeſt theſe Records, ſo to find out whither ſuch an Eſtate be befaln me. I pray thee therefore that thou wouldſt look and ſearch thy Book, and the Series of thy Decrees; look into thine own Heart, and call to mind the unfaigned Faith that dwelt in my Parents, and which I hope thou haſt ordained to be in me alſo, And do thou conſider, that thou haſt further ſet my Heart a work to ſeek thee, and more ſpecially invited me; and haſt certified me, that I ſhall be doubly welcome: Being therefore hereby emboldned, lo I am come to ask a bold Queſtion of thee: Do thou reſolve me Lord, am not I one whom thou haſt ſet thy heart upon? Is not my Name in the Liſt of thy beloved ones? Am not I one of thy Elect too? ſpeak Lord, anſwer me plainly, and ſpeedily. And whilſt thou art urging God thus, and putting him to it with what he knows is true, and ſpeakeſt his very Heart, he (as one that cannot deny it) plainly grants it, and will tell thee ſo. My Brethren, there is an art of getting out Gods Secrets thus. Chap. 8.

And thus, though to be Child to ſuch a Parent is not to be conſidered as the attractive that draws Gods Heart to thee; it was not as the Burning Glaſs to draw and unite the Beams of his love in thee; yet it may be as the Cranny through which thoſe Beams may Shine into thee, without prejudice to his Free Grace: And ſo, the Eye of thy Faith may have recourſe to it, as unto a Chink through which his Love may ſpie and meet thee. And do thou lay thy Eye to ſuch a Promiſe, and through it look unto God; and ere thou art aware the Light of his Countenance, his Free Love will ſhine in upon thee this way. Thus did the Jews plead the Covenant of their Fathers, Iſai. 63. 15. (whilſt they did not bolſter themſelves up by it, and think, that therefore God would ſave them) and it prevailed. So Jacob pleads it, Geneſ. 32. 9. O God of my Father Abraham, and my Father Iſaac.

III. General Head of Uſes.

The third ſort of Uſes ſhall be unto Godly Parents.

Uſe 1. That Godly Parents ſhould value this Bleſſing (eſpecially when they live to ſee this promiſe take hold upon their Children before their Eyes) as the greateſt Bleſſing that can befall them and for their comfort, next unto their own Salvation. It is more than to have thy Child a Monarch of the whole World, thou wouldſt think that an infinite priviledge, as David did when his houſe was raiſed up to be as one of the great ones of the Earth: This is much more, for it is to ſuch Parents, not an outward, but a ſpiritual Bleſſing, and in ſome reſpects an eternal Bleſſing, and the comfort of it may upon ſome good ground be ſuppoſed to laſt unto eternity. For this is certain, that look what ſpiritual affections there are in perſons between whom there are carnal relations by reaſon of thoſe bonds and relations, they will laſt and continue; whatſoever is ſpiritual will be eternal. If a Man do good to his Wife, ſhe ſhall love him eternally by reaſon of it; indeed the fleſhly relation between them was the occaſion whereby he came to do her good. At the latter day thoſe that Miniſters do convert unto God, they are their Crowns (as Paul ſaith, 1 Theſ. 2. 19.) it is a ſpiritual mercy that laſteth and holdeth them. When God made this promiſe unto Abraham, that he ſhould be the Father of the Faithful, was the comfort of it only for the preſent? (For Abraham ſaw no more but Isaac and Ishmael, and perhaps both were ungodly, though the promise of Christ was set upon Isaac) No, the comfot was to come, when at latter day he shall say these are the Children God hath given me. We are herein partakers of part of Christs priviledge, it was his Speech, Isai. 8. 18. Lo I, and the Children thou hast given me.

Use 2. When you have Children born unto you, then renew your Covenants with God, and walk more obediently. Hannah dedicated her Child to God: That is not in your power: But dedicate you your selves more to God. God is to extend his Covenant anew to your Children for your sakes: Do you therefore renew your Covenant with him. And the more they encrease, and the more Children thou art in dependance upon God to extend his Covenant unto; the larger do thou extend thy Covenant Obedience, and to more Duties. Search further into the Commandments, to find out new ways of Obedience to lay thy self forth in, as God gives thee more Lives, give thou more Lives to him. Methuselah being born to Enoch, provoked him to walk the more exactly: So Genes. 5. 22. you who have many Children, should be much in Obedienee; and ever for your Childrens sakes walk so as to keep up the repute of being holy. Walk not doubtfully and unstably, so as that there should arise any question of your Godliness by the Saints, you live with. Do this even for your Childrens sakes; for you have seen what a help, what an encouragement it may be to their Faith, that you are accounted and known to be Godly; when you shall walk so, as to leave that doubtful, (as Solomon did, who so lived, that it is a Question in the Church whither he be saved, or no) you then waken all these Encouragements of their Faith, and all the Arguments that should provoke them to a holy Life.

A Third Use to Parents is, that if you have Children that are Godly, and already converted; they should then get their hearts exceedingly affected towards God, in love again. There is no outward mercy like this; it is more than if he had raised up one of thy Children to be Monarch of the whole World. See how it took Davids heart, 1 Chron. 17. 25,26. that he had raised himself up to be one of the great ones of the Earth; which is not spoken of himself alone, but of his House also. They say, that Man and Wife love each other the better, when they come to have Children by each other: It is a sign of an everlasting love on Gods Part, for him to have Children by thee: And it should be an encrease of love on thy Part to have Children by him.

Use 4. Are you to think your Children Elect? then dye in that Faith concerning them, and leave them to God. This comforted David when he was to dye, that though his House was not tanta; so great (as some read it) nor ita erga Deum, so exact towards God, (as Junius) yet God had made a Covenant with him for his own, and many others Salvations, though outwardly it should not prosper. God is thy Friend, and thy Childrens Friend, he will remember thy Seed when thou art dead and rotten, even as he oft times remembred Davids. It is a comfort that thou canst leave them to a Church, a Mother, but a greater comfort, that to God as to a Father. If thou hadst a Grandfather to leave thy Children to, who thou wert sure would live, thou then wouldst not dye sollicitously in respect of thy Children. Luther being to make his last Will, and having nothing to bequeath to his Children, he bequeathed them to God: So do thou, and say as Christ did when he made his last Testament, as being about to leave the World; thine O Father they were, and thou gavest them me: and tell them as he did, I go to my Father and your Father. Those that are godly are provided for, there is one who hath taken them off thy Hand and care already: in the confidence therefore of that thou mayst dye hopefully, and quietly.

A Fifth Use may be, to take heed of an unequal partiality in your love or care towards any of your Children: Wherein many Parents are oft times blameworthy, as disaffecting and neglecting some one, out of an inordinate leaning to, and ſetting up an other: For that Child whom thou neglecteſt, or uſeſt hardly, may be he, or ſhe, whom God pitcheth on as his; and that Child which thou cockereſt, may be one by God refuſed. While God reveals himſelf thus indefinitely, thou art to look upon any one as Elect; and art to bear thoſe affections and bowels towards it, that a Parent would have to an Elect Child, though thou canſt not abſolutely ſay it is holy. And as whiles it was an Infant, we were to perform all Duties unto it, as to a Saint; ſo afterwards, though yet it appears not to be holy, we are to do the like, as to one Elect. And wilt thou hate, or miſuſe, where God may love, and love for thy ſake too? How unworthy of you will ſuch Carriages be, and will likewiſe grieve you, when God ſhall once manifeſt his love to be ſet upon that Child, which thou haſt ſet thy ſelf againſt? God is no reſpecter of Perſons, neither be thou of thy Children, ſo as to dote on one, and neglect the other. God has often in the event, exceedingly checkt the Sins of Parents this way, and choſen croſs to what their choice was: They have been for Eſau, and God hath been for Jacob: They have been for a beautiful Abſalom, and God hath been for Solomon: They have lookt with Fleſhly Eyes (as Samuel did) and thought Eliab the Child of Election; and for him have all their Prayers run, becauſe of his Countenance and Stature; but God hath taught them not to look on the outward appearance: He hath been for David, whom they have ſet to keep their Sheep. Eve had a Promiſe of the Meſſiah, and ſhe thought Cain the Man in whom it ſhould be fulfilled: So ſome interpret that Speech, Geneſ. 4. 1. [I have gotten a Man, or [the Man] the promiſed Seed, from the Lord] however it implies ſome ſingular hopes ſhe had of him; who yet proved the Eldeſt Son of Reprobation, and the Murderer of his Brother: But Abel, he was Godly, and after him, Seth. which ſhews, that God judgeth not as Man judgeth, I may ſay as God ſaid by Malachi, Mal. 2. 16. about hating their Wives; take heed therefore to your Spirits, deal not treacherouſly or unequally with any of your Children, for they are yours, and may be Gods. He carries it thus indefinitely and covertly on purpoſe that you ſhould perform your Duties alike to all; Not but that outward appearances may draw out the heart, and have in a proportion their due of love, ſuch love as Beauty, Wit, good Nature, &c. I yield that there is an allowance given to Parents to affect Children for ſuch reſpects, as being Objects more pleaſing, and love attracting: Yet ſo, as not to ſway the Heart to a partial carriage towards them; only they may be allowed as a few Grains to incline the Ballance a little more. But that ſame other Child who pleaſeth not thy Fancy and Nature ſo well, is thy Child too, and ſo may be Gods Child, and that becauſe he is thine, and in reſpect to thee: And that gives the Subſtantial weight that ſhould keep the Scale of the Ballance even towards him. God peradventure loves him for thy ſake, and wilt not thou love him for Gods ſake? What croſſneſs, and unthankfulneſs would this prove towards God? Chap. 8.

Sixth Uſe, to ſuch Parents as come not of Godly Parents and yet are Godly themſelves; they may here ſee their Priviledge; they may be the Foundation of a Noble Family: And what an Honour is that? 'Tis a great Promiſe, that in Iſai. 58. 12. they that ſhall be of thee ſhall build the old waſt places, thou ſhalt be the Foundation of many Generations. And it is a great honour to thee to be the Firſt of thy Houſe, as it was to Abraham, and to David; and as it is mentioned as an honour to Lois, by Paul, 2 Tim. 1. 5. the Faith which dwelt [firſt] in thy Grandmother Lois: Who likewiſe maketh the like honourable mention of ſome that were the firſt fruits of Achaia, and of being the Root to Branches, &c. Amonſt Men what an honour is it to be the Foundation of a Houſe? They affect, and aſpire to nothing more: The firſt, being always made famous by his Succeſſors, as Ottoman by his Houſe, Coſmo di Medices by his, &c. So did that Roman eſteem of it, who being upbraided with his mean Extraction by a Debauch't bauch't Patrician, made this his glory, I am (ſays he) the Foundation of my Houſe, and thou the Ruine of thine. So may this be thy glory, that thou art the Baſis, the firſt ſtone of a Building to God

The laſt Uſe is to Churches, that they would receive with a ſpecial love and rejoycing, ſuch of Members Children as prove Godly. They are doubly welcome to God; let them be ſo to Saints in Church-fellowſhip. They are not as ſtrangers, but as thoſe born in the Houſe; which renders them doubly amiable, and acceptable. As Paul exhorts Philemon to receive Oneſimus, not as a Servant, but above a Servant, verſe 16. So are theſe to be received as Brethren and Siſters, and not only ſo, but above the ordinary Relation of Brethren and Siſters. It is an honour to a Colledge to have Students of its own nurturing fit for Fellowſhips; and ſuch eſpecially they are to take.

The Families of Church-members are our Nurſery, and what a comfort is it to have the Orchard and Garden of a Church repleniſhed with Siens fetcht from thence? To build our Houſes with Stones out of our own Quarries? I may ſpeak to every Church in the words of God to the Church of the Jews, Iſai. 49. 18. Thou ſhalt cloath thee with them, as with an ornament, and bind them on thee as a Bride doth a Tyre of her own weaving.

Glorifie. The glory wherewith Chriſt glorifies his Redeemed, is no taken [τελικῶς] but [ἐνδικῶς] how? B. p. 148. The glory wherewith we ſhall be glorified, is call'd Chriſt's glory, and not ours, D. p. 294. Adam's glory wherewith he was glorified in the firſt ſtate and Covenant, was laid at the ſtake unto Free-will, &c. but the glory promiſed in the new Covenant is in ſurer Hands, D. p. 295. Effectual Calling gives a right and title to glory, though not a preſent poſſeſſion of it, D. p. 282. Jeruſalem. There is the old and the new: Europe hath been the Seat of Chriſtian Religion, as Jeruſalem was of the Jewiſh Worſhip for above a Thouſand years, and this Typical Jeruſalem the old ſhall laſt, until the new Jeruſalem come, A.p. 118,119. See Europe, Jews, Kingdom.

Jeſuit. How Laws are made in many Lands againſt the Jeſuits, and when? A. p. 98. They are by Law puniſh'd with Death, as they have puniſhed Proteſtants, A.p.99.

Jews. They are not allowed their Worſhip, though the Chriſtians be theirs by the Turk in Jeruſalem, A. p.147. Infants. How Infants of Believers are call'd [*Mal.*2.15,&c.] an holy Seed. The Apostle [1 Cor. 7.14.] opposeth not Κάθαρα, clean, to Ἀκάθαρτα, unclean, but useth Ἅγια, which signifies holy, D.p.417. So it must mean more than a mere legitimation, D.p.417,418. To be sanctified relateth to use, but to be holy relateth to persons, D. p. 418, 419. To say, that Election runs in a Successive Line of Believers usually, doth not infringe the Freedom of Electing Grace, D. p.432. This is consonant to common Rules of Friendship, D. p.433. It also corresponds with Gods other proceedings in ways of Grace, D. p. 434 to 441. This holds forth both the Dignity and the Duty of both godly Parents, and of their Children, D. p. 442 to 456. Believers Children are therefore call'd Gods Heritage, because among them usually doth Election lay, D. p. 386, 387. This is according to God's Covenant with Abraham, which was first a Family-Covenant, D. p. 388, 389, 390. The grace of Abraham's Covenant is derived both to Gentile Families and to Gentile Churches, D. p. 392. They being grafted in the Room of the Jew-branches broken off, D. p. 393, &c. as the Jew branches are called holy, Rom. 11.16. so are the Gentile-grafts, 1 Cor. 7. 14. His fitness, fulness, and sufficiency for the Office of such a Lord, B. p. 158. When Christ is called Lord either in the old or in the new Testament, it is meant the Lordship of his Office, and not the second Person in the Trinity. The Reasons for this, B. p. 159. The Lord Christ must be more than a meer Creature to fit him with Alsufficiency for his Lordship Office, B. p. 161, 162, yet must this Lord be a Creature too. Why? ibid. Why this Lord must not be either the first or the third person in the Trinity, B. p. 162, 163. All things have their natural Being from this Lord Christ, and the Saints have from him their supernatural Being and well-being, B. p. 165.
